(q) In Barlow v. Bateman (1735), 2 Bro. Parl. Cas. 272, it was held that a condition requiring the donee to marry a person of the name of Barlow was not satisfied by her marrying a man who took that name. In Leigh v. Leigh (1808), 15 Ves. 92, where the gift was "to the first and nearest of my kindred of my name and blood," it was held that the qualification as to name was not satisfied by a person having taken the name under a Royal Licence; see Doe d. Wright v. Plumpton (1820), 3 B. & Ald. 474. On the other hand, in Pyot v. Pyot (1749), 1 Ves. Sen. 335; and Carpenter v. Bott (1847), 15 Sim. 606, the other view was taken on the construction of the instrument. As to wills generally, see title WILLS.

(r) D'Eyncourt v. Gregory (1876), 1 Ch. D. 441; Re Eversley, Mildmay v. Mildmay, [1900] 1 Ch. 96. In order to comply with a clause requiring the taking and using of a surname it is not necessary to use the surname on occasions of signing when a surname is not commonly used (Re Drax, Dunsany (Baroness) v. Sawbridge (1906), 75 L. J. (CH.) 317); and it has been held in the Court of Session that the surname need not necessarily be taken as the last name unless the clause says so (Spencer v. Spencer (1912), Times, 21st March). As to such a forfeiture clause being void for uncertainty, see Re Gassiot, Brougham v. Rose-Gassiot (1907), 51 Sol. Jo. 570; and as to "name and arms" clauses, see, further, title SETTLEMENTS.

(s) See, 3 Davidson's Precedents in Conveyancing, 2nd ed., Part I., p. 283. Such an Act is not imperative in its terms; it merely permits the assumption of a new name. For a recent instance, see the private Act entitled "Clifton's Name," 22 Vict. c. 1 (1859). As to name Bills, see title PARLIAMENT, p. 761, post.

(t) The first instance of a Royal Licence is said to have occurred in 1679, when the Earl of Ogle, son of the Duke of Newcastle, was allowed to take the name of Percie. A Royal Licence has, like a private Act of Parliament, the advantage of giving a formal sanction to the change, and of securing, as far as is possible, the recognition of the new name by the world in general. It has this further advantage, that it secures a record of the reasons for the change and of all other matters relevant to the granting of the licence, inasmuch as Royal Licences are recorded in the College of Arms pursuant to the terms of the licence; see p. 353, post.

In order to comply with a "name and arms" clause the proper and usual method is to apply for a Royal Licence. Without a Royal grant a man cannot properly assume armorial bearings, for the granting of arms is part of the prerogative of the Sovereign (u).

In order to obtain a Royal Licence authorising a change of surname and assumption of arms, an application has to be made to an officer of arms at the College of Arms (a) that a petition in proper form, stating the reasons for the application and other necessary matters, may be drawn up by one of the officers of the college, to be signed by the applicant, and submitted through the Home Secretary to the Sovereign. The granting of a Licence for change of surname is a matter of discretion, as to which the Sovereign is advised by the Home Secretary, who obtains a report thereon from the Kings of Arms as representing the Earl Marshal (b).

When the prayer of a petition is granted, a warrant addressed to the Earl Marshal, following in its terms the allegations of the petition, is issued under the Royal sign manual, and is duly recorded in the College of Arms by warrant of the Earl Marshal (c). In its terms the Licence is permissive; it does not purport to confer a new name.

626. As regards armorial bearings, the Royal Licence contains a proviso that the arms shall be exemplified according to the law of arms and recorded in the College of Arms, and that otherwise the licence and permission shall be null and of no effect (d). It is the function of the Kings of Arms to deal with all matters connected with the grant of arms. It is their duty, on an application being made in compliance with a "name and arms" clause, to decide whether the testator or settlor had a valid claim to the arms used by him, and, according as that question may be decided, to grant

SECT. 3.
Formalities
as to Change of Name or of Arms.

Procedure to obtain Royal Licence.

Exemplification and record of arms.

(u) Re Croxon, Croxon v. Ferrers, [1904] 1 Ch. 252, in which case the decision turned on the particular terms of the will which required the person taking under it lawfully to assume the testator's arms. To use arms, other than the Royal Arms (as to which see title CONSTITUTIONAL LAW, Vol. VI., p. 361), without a grant or other title is not unlawful in the sense that any penalty is attached. The Earl Marshal's Court, which had jurisdiction in such matters, has not sat for the last two centuries; see titles COURTS, Vol. IX., p. 116; PEERAGES AND DIGNITIES. The question as to the necessity for a Royal grant was raised but not decided in Austen v. Collins (1886), 54 L. T. 903; also in Bevan v. Mahon-Hagan (1891), 27 L. R. Ir. 399; (1893), 31 L. R. Ir. 342, C. A.

(a) As to the Herald's College and Kings at Arms, see title PEERAGES AND DIGNITIES.

(b) The Home Secretary refers such petitions to the Kings of Arms for report on the genealogical and heraldic aspects of the case. No precise rules are laid down as to the exercise of the discretion, and probably no such rules could well be formulated; but it may be broadly stated that a voluntary application made in compliance with a request contained in a will or in consideration of some pecuniary or other benefit, or based on representation in blood traced to some maternal ancestor, will be favourably considered; while an application made in pursuance of a direction which is coupled with a forfeiture clause is invariably granted. On the other hand an application for which no reasonable ground is alleged, or which is made from mere caprice, is likely to be rejected.

(c) The Royal Warrant is usually notified in the London Gazette.

(d) Austen v. Collins (1886), 54 L. T. 903.

SECT. 3.
Formalities
as to Change of Name or of Arms.

Deed poll.

those arms, or arms as little different from them as the law of arms will admit, to the applicant (e).

In respect of every Licence issued a stamp duty is payable (f).

627. Thirdly, the declaration of a person's intention to change his surname may be evidenced by a deed poll. He may declare his determination to assume a new name in addition to or in substitution for his original name.

The deed poll, when duly executed and attested, may be enrolled in the Central Office of the Supreme Court (g).

Public notice is usually given by advertisement in the London Gazette and one or more newspapers of the assumption of the new name and of the execution and enrolment of the deed poll (h).

(e) For the form of grant, see Stubs v. Stubs (1862), 1 H. & C. 257. Since it is not within the competency of the College of Arms to grant the proper arms of A. to B., the practice is to make the grant with a difference, i.e., to make some addition to or alteration in the arms; see Austen v. Collins (1886), 54 L. T. 903.

(f) If the application is voluntary, a duty amounting to £10 is charged by the Stamp Act, 1891 (54 & 55 Vict. c. 39), s. 74, and in the case of a compulsory application made under a clause in a will or settlement the duty amounts to £50 (ibid.). As to stamp duties generally, see title REVENUE. In addition there are various fees payable to the Officers of Arms for preparing and presenting the petition, for reporting to the Home Secretary and recording the Royal Licence, and for granting or exemplifying the arms. There are also fees due to the Home Office. These amount in all to £44 13s., exclusive of the costs of preparation of petition and advertising.

(g) See R. S. C., Ord. 61, r. 12. The fee payable on enrolment is 1s. per folio of 72 words.

(h) For forms of deed poll, statutory declaration and notice of change, see Encyclopædia of Forms and Precedents, Vol. IX., pp. 2—5.

NATIONAL DEBT.

See CONSTITUTIONAL LAW; REVENUE.

NATIONAL GALLERY.

See LITERARY AND SCIENTIFIC INSTITUTIONS.

NATIONAL INSURANCE.

See WORK AND LABOUR.

NATIONAL MONUMENTS.

See OPEN SPACES AND RECREATION GROUNDS.

NATIONALITY.

See ALIENS; CONFLICT OF LAWS; CONSTITUTIONAL LAW.

NATURAL ALLEGIANCE.

See CONSTITUTIONAL LAW.

NATURALISATION AND DENISATION.

See ALIENS.

NAVAL COURTS-MARTIAL.

See COURTS; ROYAL FORCES.

NAVIGABLE WATERS.

See SHIPPING AND NAVIGATION; WATERS AND WATERCOURSES.

NAVIGATION.

See SHIPPING AND NAVIGATION.

NAVY.

See ROYAL FORCES.

NECESSARIES.

See ADMIRALTY; HUSBAND AND WIFE; INFANTS AND CHILDREN; LUNATICS AND PERSONS OF UNSOUND MIND; SHIPPING AND NAVIGATION.

NE EXEAT REGNO.

See CONSTITUTIONAL LAW; EQUITY; PRACTICE AND PROCEDURE.

NEGLIGENCE.

	PAGE
PART I. GENERAL PRINCIPLES OF LIABILITY FOR NEGLIGENCE - - - - -	360
SECT. 1. WHAT CONSTITUTES NEGLIGENCE - - - - -	360
Sub-sect. 1. Meaning and Application of the Term "Negligence" - - - - -	360
Sub-sect. 2. How the Duty to Take Care Arises - - - - -	362
SECT. 2. STANDARD AND DEGREE OF CARE ORDINARILY REQUIRED - - - - -	362
Sub-sect. 1. In General - - - - -	362
Sub-sect. 2. Gravity of Risk - - - - -	365
Sub-sect. 3. Imminence of Risk - - - - -	366
Sub-sect. 4. Profession of Special Skill - - - - -	367
Sub-sect. 5. Notice of Fact Demanding Special Care - - - - -	370
Sub-sect. 6. Gratuitous Services - - - - -	374
SECT. 3. MALFEASANCE, MISFEASANCE, AND NONFEASANCE - - - - -	375
Sub-sect. 1. Malfeasance - - - - -	375
Sub-sect. 2. Misfeasance and Nonfeasance - - - - -	375
SECT. 4. EFFECTIVE CAUSE - - - - -	378
PART II. NEGLIGENCE IN REGARD TO PROPERTY - - - - -	382
SECT. 1. IN REGARD TO PARTICULAR PARTIES - - - - -	382
Sub-sect. 1. General Observations - - - - -	382
Sub-sect. 2. Duty to Invitees - - - - -	385
Sub-sect. 3. Duty to Bare Licensees and Visitors - - - - -	391
Sub-sect. 4. Duty to Trespassers - - - - -	394
Sub-sect. 5. Duty to Neighbours - - - - -	395
Sub-sect. 6. Duty to the Public - - - - -	397
SECT. 2. IN REGARD TO WATER - - - - -	401
SECT. 3. IN REGARD TO FIRE - - - - -	403
SECT. 4. IN REGARD TO ANIMALS - - - - -	405
SECT. 5. DANGEROUS OR INJURIOUS GOODS OR MATTER - - - - -	407
SECT. 6. IN REGARD TO FENCES - - - - -	409
SECT. 7. IN REGARD TO HIGHWAYS - - - - -	410
Sub-sect. 1. In General - - - - -	410
Sub-sect. 2. Vehicles on Highways - - - - -	411
Sub-sect. 3. Pedestrians on Highways - - - - -	416
SECT. 8. IN REGARD TO WHARVES AND DOCKS - - - - -	416
Sub-sect. 1. Duties in Respect of Wharves and Docks - - - - -	416
Sub-sect. 2. Duty in Respect of Plant and Tackle Supplied - - - - -	419
Sub-sect. 3. Duty in Respect of Goods Landed - - - - -	419

	PAGE
PART III. CRIMINAL NEGLIGENCE AND NEGLECT OF STATUTORY DUTY - - - - -	420
SECT. 1. RELATION BETWEEN CIVIL AND CRIMINAL REMEDIES FOR NEGLIGENCE - - - - -	420
SECT. 2. NEGLECT OF OR NEGLIGENCE IN PERFORMING STATUTORY DUTY - - - - -	422
SECT. 3. NEGLIGENCE IN THE PERFORMANCE OF OTHER THAN STATUTORY DUTIES WHERE SUCH NEGLIGENCE AMOUNTS TO CRIME - - - - -	425
PART IV. NEGLIGENCE ARISING OUT OF SPECIAL RELATIONS	426
SECT. 1. CARRIERS BY ROAD, BY RAILWAY, AND BY SEA - -	426
Sub-sect. 1. Damage to Passengers or their Luggage - -	426
Sub-sect. 2. Damage to Goods - - - - -	429
SECT. 2. BAILEES - - - - -	430
SECT. 3. INNKEEPERS - - - - -	431
SECT. 4. BANKERS - - - - -	432
PART V. LIABILITY OF PARTICULAR PARTIES - - - - -	433
SECT. 1. PRIVATE PERSONS - - - - -	433
SECT. 2. PERSONS ACTING IN PARTICULAR CAPACITIES - -	435
SECT. 3. PERSONS STANDING IN PARTICULAR RELATION TO THE PERSON INJURED - - - - -	435
PART VI. PROOF OF NEGLIGENCE - - - - -	435
SECT. 1. BURDEN OF PROOF - - - - -	435
SECT. 2. PRESUMPTION OF NEGLIGENCE: RES IPSA LOQUITUR -	439
SECT. 3. FUNCTIONS OF JUDGE AND JURY - - - - -	441
PART VII. CONTRIBUTORY NEGLIGENCE - - - - -	445
PART VIII. NEGLIGENCE CAUSING DEATH - - - - -	454
SECT. 1. CIVIL LIABILITY - - - - -	454
SECT. 2. CIVIL RESPONSIBILITY UNDER THE FATAL ACCIDENTS ACTS	455
PART IX. OTHER DEFENCES TO ACTIONS FOR NEGLIGENCE	463
SECT. 1. INFANCY - - - - -	463
SECT. 2. DEFECTIVE INTELLIGENCE - - - - -	463
SECT. 3. PERFORMANCE OF STATUTORY DUTIES OR EXERCISE OF STATUTORY POWERS - - - - -	464
SECT. 4. INEVITABLE ACCIDENT: ACT OF GOD - - - - -	467
Sub-sect. 1. Definitions, Nature and Characteristics of the Terms - - - - -	467
Sub-sect. 2. Application of the Defence to Duties Created by Common Law - - - - -	468
Sub-sect. 3. Application of the Defence to Duties Imposed by Statute - - - - -	471
SECT. 5. INDEPENDENT CONTRACTOR - - - - -	471
SECT. 6. CONSENT: VOLENTI NON FIT INJURIA - - - - -	476
SECT. 7. IMMINENT PERSONAL RISK - - - - -	479
SECT. 8. RELIANCE ON OTHERS - - - - -	479
PART X. DAMAGES - - - - -	481
SECT. 1. IN GENERAL - - - - -	481
SECT. 2. REMOTENESS OF DAMAGE - - - - -	486

For Architects	-	-	-	-	See title	BUILDING CONTRACTS, ENGINEERS AND ARCHITECTS.
Bankers	-	-	-	-	"	BANKERS AND BANKING.
Barristers	-	-	-	-	"	BARRISTERS.
Boundaries	-	-	-	-	"	BOUNDARIES, FENCES, AND PARTY WALLS.
Carriers	-	-	-	-	"	CARRIERS.
Companies	-	-	-	-	"	COMPANIES; CORPORATIONS.
Corporations	-	-	-	-	"	CORPORATIONS.
Damages Generally	-	-	-	-	"	DAMAGES.
Engineers	-	-	-	-	"	BUILDING CONTRACTS, ENGINEERS, AND ARCHITECTS.
Executors	-	-	-	-	"	EXECUTORS AND ADMINISTRATORS.
Fences	-	-	-	-	"	BOUNDARIES, FENCES, AND PARTY WALLS.
Joint Tortfeasors	-	-	-	-	"	TORT.
Limitation of Actions	-	-	-	-	"	LIMITATION OF ACTIONS.
Limitation of Liability	-	-	-	-	"	ADMIRALTY; CARRIERS; SHIPPING AND NAVIGATION; TORT.
Local Authorities	-	-	-	-	"	LOCAL GOVERNMENT; PUBLIC HEALTH AND LOCAL ADMINISTRATION.
Master and Servant	-	-	-	-	"	MASTER AND SERVANT.
Navigation	-	-	-	-	"	SHIPPING AND NAVIGATION.
Negligence in Particular Cases	-	-	-	-	"	ANIMALS; AUCTION AND AUCTIONEERS; BAILMENT; BANKERS AND BANKING; CARRIERS; ELECTRIC LIGHTING AND POWER; EXPLOSIVES; GAS; HIGHWAYS, STREETS, AND BRIDGES; INNS AND INNKEEPERS; INSURANCE; LANDLORD AND TENANT; MASTER AND SERVANT; MEDICINE AND PHARMACY; MINES, MINERALS, AND QUARRIES; NOTARIES; PAWNS AND PLEDGES; POST OFFICE; PUBLIC AUTHORITIES AND PUBLIC OFFICERS; RAILWAYS AND CANALS; RECEIVERS; SEWERS AND DRAINS; SHERIFFS AND BAILIFFS; SHIPPING AND NAVIGATION; SOLICITORS; STOCK EXCHANGE; STREET AND AERIAL TRAFFIC; TELEGRAPHS AND TELEPHONES; THEATRES AND OTHER PLACES OF ENTERTAINMENT; TRAMWAYS AND LIGHT RAILWAYS; VALUERS AND APPRAISERS; WATERS AND WATERCOURSES; WORK AND LABOUR.
Nuisance	-	-	-	-	"	NUISANCE.
Physicians	-	-	-	-	"	MEDICINE AND PHARMACY.
Principal and Agent	-	-	-	-	"	AGENCY.
Public Authorities Protection	-	-	-	-	"	PUBLIC AUTHORITIES AND PUBLIC OFFICERS.
Shipping	-	-	-	-	"	SHIPPING AND NAVIGATION.
Solicitors	-	-	-	-	"	SOLICITORS.
Stockbrokers	-	-	-	-	"	STOCK EXCHANGE.
Surgeons	-	-	-	-	"	MEDICINE AND PHARMACY.
Tort, Principles of	-	-	-	-	"	TORT.
Trespass	-	-	-	-	"	TRESPASS.
Trover	-	-	-	-	"	TROVER AND DETINUE.
Trustees	-	-	-	-	"	TRUSTS AND TRUSTEES.
Workmen's Compensation	-	-	-	-	"	MASTER AND SERVANT.

Part I.—General Principles of Liability for Negligence.

SECT. 1.

What Constitutes Negligence.

Failure to exercise care required by the circumstances.

SECT. 1.—What Constitutes Negligence.

SUB-SECT. 1.—Meaning and Application of the Term “Negligence.”

628. Negligence in a legal sense is a negative rather than a positive term (a), and in any given circumstances is the failure to exercise that care which the circumstances demand (b). It is, therefore, not susceptible of any precise definition which will be of universal application (c). It may consist in doing something which ought either to be done in a different manner or not at all, or in omitting to do something which ought to be done (d). Where there is no duty to exercise care at all, negligence in the popular sense has no legal consequences (e). Where there is a duty to take care, the degree of care required in the particular case depends on the accompanying circumstances (f), and may vary according to the amount of risk to be encountered and to the magnitude of the prospective injury (g). The same act or omission may accordingly involve liability as being negligent in some circumstances (h), although in other circumstances it will not do so.

(a) Grill v. General Iron Screw Collier Co. (1866), L. R. 1 C. P. 600, per WILLES, J., at p. 612; compare Giblin v. McMullen (1868), L. R. 2 P. C. 317, 337.

(b) Thomas v. Quartermaine (1887), 18 Q. B. D. 685, C. A., per BOWEN, L.J., at p. 694: “The ideas of negligence and duty are strictly correlative, and there is no such thing as negligence in the abstract, negligence is simply neglect of some care which we are bound by law to exercise towards somebody”; see also Vaughan v. Taff Vale Rail. Co. (1860), 5 H. & N. 679, Ex. Ch., where WILLES, J., at p. 688, defined it as “the absence of care according to the circumstances”; Blyth v. Birmingham Waterworks Co. (1856), 11 Exch. 781, per ALDERSON, B., at p. 784; Grill v. General Iron Screw Collier Co., supra; Heaven v. Pender (1883), 11 Q. B. D. 503, 507, C. A.; Kettlewell v. Watson (1882), 21 Ch. D. 685; Snook v. Grand Junction Waterworks Co. (1886), 2 T. L. R. 308; Wakelin v. London and South Western Rail. Co., [1896] 1 Q. B. 189, n., 191, C. A.

(c) Ford v. London and South Western Rail. Co. (1862), 2 F. & F. 730, per ERLE, C.J., at p. 732.

(d) Blyth v. Birmingham Waterworks Co., supra, per ALDERSON, B., at p. 784.

(e) Le Lievre v. Gould, [1893] 1 Q. B. 491, C. A., per Lord ESHER, M.R., at p. 497; Caledonian Rail. Co. v. Mulholland, [1898] A. C. 216; Scholfield v. Londesborough (Earl), [1895] 1 Q. B. 536, C. A.; affirmed, [1896] A. C. 514; Gray v. North Eastern Railway and the Washington Colliery Co. (1883), 48 L. T. 904; Box v. Jubb (1879), 4 Ex. D. 76; Dickson v. Reuter's Telegram Co. (1877), 3 C. P. D. 1, C. A.; Cox v. Burbridge (1863), 13 C. B. (N. S.) 430; compare Caledonian Rail. Co. v. Warwick (1897), 35 Sc. L. R. 54, H. L.; see p. 363, post.

(f) Grill v. General Iron Screw Collier Co., supra; see ibid., per MONTAGUE SMITH, J., at p. 614, and cases cited in note (h), infra.

(g) Chadkintosh v. Mackintosh (1864), 2 Macph. (Ct. of Sess.) 1357; compare Chadwick v. Trower (1839), 6 Bing. (N. C.) 1, Ex. Ch.; and see pp. 365, 366, post.

(h) Degg v. Midland Rail. Co. (1857), 1 H. & N. 773; and see ibid., at p. 781, where it was said by BRAMWELL, B., that negligence is always

Where an act or omission is negligent, it may involve a greater or less degree of moral culpability, but, so far as any legal result is concerned, a classification on this basis will at most afford a ground for awarding greater or smaller damages (i). The material considerations are the absence of the care due in the circumstances of the case on the part of the defendant and injury suffered by the plaintiff, and a demonstrable relation of cause and effect between the two (j).

Knowledge, or the opportunity of knowledge, that a particular course is fraught with danger does not necessarily render its adoption negligent, but such knowledge or opportunity of knowledge is frequently an ingredient of negligence (k), because a man may reasonably be expected to take extra precaution on account of better knowledge of the facts (l). In every case

SECT. 1.

What Constitutes Negligence.Material considerations.Knowledge, or opportunity of knowledge, as an ingredient.

relative to some circumstance of time and place or person; compare Thomas v. Quartermaine (1887), 18 Q. B. D. 685, 694, C. A. Thus, to keep premises in a defective and unsafe condition is negligent, if they are situated in a public street (Tarry v. Ashton (1876), 1 Q. B. D. 314; Silverton v. Marriott (1888), 59 L. T. 61; see pp. 397 et seq., post); but it will not be so if they are ruins in a private park to which no stranger has any right or leave to go; compare Degg v. Midland Rail. Co. (1857), 1 H. & N. 773; Forbes v. Aberdeen Harbour Commissioners (1888), 25 Sc. L. R. 239; and see p. 392, post. For an excellent illustration of different degrees of care required with regard to the same subject-matter, see Nelson v. Macintosh (1816), 1 Stark. 237.

(i) The degrees of care are sometimes sought to be denoted by the terms "ordinary," "slight," or "gross" negligence. These terms are not adopted in this title, as they have been the subject of much unfavourable judicial comment; see Wilson v. Brett (1843), 11 M. & W. 113, per ROFFE, B.; Grill v. General Iron Screw Collier Co. (1866), L. R. 1 C. P. 600, per WILLES, J.; compare Hinton v. Dibbin (1842), 2 Q. B. 646; Austin v. Manchester, Sheffield and Lincolnshire Rail. Co. (1850), 10 C. B. 454; Mackintosh v. Mackintosh (1864), 2 Macph. (Ct. of Sess.) 1357; and see Campbell and Cowan & Co. v. Train (1910), 47 Sc. L. R. 475, per Lord Low.

(j) Wright v. Midland Rail. Co. (1884), 51 L. T. 539, per MANISTY, J.; and see p. 378, post. As to the essential element of injury in a claim for negligence, see pp. 481 et seq., post. As to effective or proximate cause, see pp. 378 et seq., post. Negligence must be distinguished from trespass (see Stanley v. Powell, [1891] 1 Q. B. 86; and title TRESPASS), from fraud (Kettlewell v. Watson (1882), 21 Ch. D. 685; and see title MISREPRESENTATION AND FRAUD, Vol. XX., pp. 692, 693), and from nuisance, although in many cases the two subjects overlap (see, generally, p. 332, post; and title NUISANCE, p. 507, post).

(k) Davis v. England and Curtis (1864), 33 L. J. (Q. B.) 321. Where there is a duty to know of the safety of a particular place or thing, the neglect to avail oneself of an existing means of knowledge renders one equally liable if damage results, as the failure, if the danger were known, to take the precautions necessary to guard against it (Mersey Docks Trustees v. Gibbs (1866), L. R. 1 H. L. 93, approving the judgment in Mersey Docks and Harbour Board v. Penhallow (1861), 7 H. & N. 329, Ex. Ch.; followed and applied in Campbell v. Hornsby (1873), 7 I. R. C. L. 540, Ex. Ch.; R. v. Williams (1884), 9 App. Cas. 418).

(l) Clarke v. Holmes (1862), 7 H. & N. 937, Ex. Ch.; compare Chadwick v. Trower (1839), 6 Bing. (N. C.) 1, Ex. Ch. In Brooks v. London and North Western Rail. Co. (1884), 33 W. R. 167, knowledge by the defendants that one of three fastenings to a gate was defective—and, by the Railway Clauses Consolidation Act, 1845 (8 & 9 Vict. c. 20), ss. 68, 75, the defendants had to maintain these—was said to be evidence of negligence.

SECT. 1.
What Constitutes
Negligence.

it is a question of fact whether conduct which disregards such knowledge or opportunity of knowledge, amounts to negligence or not (m). Knowledge that a particular risk will be incurred may render a defendant liable for negligence if he persists in incurring the risk, even though it is incurred in doing what he contracted to do (n).

SUB-SECT. 2.—How the Duty to Take Care Arises.

Cases in which the duty to take care arises.

629. A duty to take care may arise:—

- (1) from ownership, possession, or control of real property (o);
- (2) from ownership, possession, or control of goods, animals, or other things (p);
- (3) from proximity to, or coming into contact with, other persons or their property (q);
- (4) from special, contractual, or quasi-contractual relationships (r);
- (5) from the application of statutes imposing special duties involving care in their performance (s).

SECT. 2.—Standard and Degree of Care Ordinarily Required.

SUB-SECT. 1.—In General.

Basis upon which standard of care is ascertained.

630. It is necessary to distinguish between the standard of care ordinarily required in a particular case and the degree of care actually exercised. It is the duty of the court, if necessary, to define what the standard is, and the duty of the jury to decide, when the facts are in dispute, whether such standard has been attained (t). This standard is founded upon a consideration of the care which would be observed by a prudent and reasonable man (a). It is the

(m) Clarke v. Holmes (1862), 7 H. & N. 937, Ex. Ch.; compare Silverton v. Marriott (1888), 59 L. T. 61.

(n) Combe v. Simmonds (1853), 1 W. R. 289; thus, where the plaintiff sends wire to be galvanised, and it is in such a state that it cannot be galvanised without spoiling it, if the defendant, knowing this, tries to galvanise it, he is guilty of negligence.

(o) See pp. 382 et seq., post.

(p) See pp. 393, 405 et seq., 419, post.

(q) See pp. 410 et seq., post.

(r) See pp. 426 et seq., post. Sometimes the relationship may impose a duty the breach of which will found an action ex delicto as well as ex contractu (see Foulkes v. Metropolitan District Rail. Co. (1880), 5 C. P. D. 157, C. A.; Austin v. Great Western Rail. Co. (1867), L. R. 2 Q. B. 442; and sometimes ex delicto alone, as in Gladwell v. Steggall (1839), 5 Bing. (N. C.) 733; see note (b), p. 367, post; and see Turner v. Stallibrass, [1898] 1 Q. B. 56, C. A.; Hall v. Lees, [1904] 2 K. B. 602, C. A.; title TORT.

(s) See p. 429, post.

(t) See pp. 441, 442, post.

(a) Metropolitan Rail. Co. v. Jackson (1877), 3 App. Cas. 193; compare Blyth v. Birmingham Waterworks Co. (1856), 11 Exch. 781, per ALDERSON, B., at p. 784, "negligence is the omission to do something which a reasonable man guided upon the considerations which ordinarily regulate the conduct of human affairs would do, or doing something which a prudent and reasonable man would not do"; see also Ford v. London and South Western Rail. Co. (1862), 2 F. & F. 730; Vaughan v. Menlove (1837), 3 Bing. (N. C.) 468; Dean v. Keate (1811), 3 Camp. 4; compare London General Omnibus same for everyone of full age who is in possession of all his faculties and is of sound mind (b), and it does not vary with the intelligence of the individual upon whom the particular duty to take care rests (c).

The standard of care required having been ascertained on this basis, it is not enough that some care has been taken (d) if it falls short of this standard (e). On the other hand, if the care taken attains to this standard, no liability for negligence will result. Thus, no liability for negligence attaches to a party when in the prosecution of a lawful act injury to another is caused by a pure accident (f), nor can anyone be said to be negligent merely because he fails to make provision against an accident which he could not be reasonably expected to foresee (g).

SECT. 2.
Standard
and Degree
of Care
Ordinarily
Required.

Effect of act if care taken attains to standard
required.

Co., Ltd. v. Tilbury Contracting and Dredging Co. (1906), Ltd. (1907), 71 J. P. 534; Clothier v. Webster (1882), 12 C. B. (N. S.) 790; Smith v. Browne (1891), 28 L. R. Ir. 1; Simkin v. London and North Western Rail. Co. (1888), 21 Q. B. D. 453, C. A.; Hyman v. Nye (1881), 6 Q. B. D. 685; Stoomvaart Maatschappij Nederland v. Peninsular and Oriental Steam Navigation Co. (1880), 5 App. Cas. 876; Pearson v. Cox (1877), 2 C. P. D. 369, C. A.; Cornman v. Eastern Counties Rail. Co. (1859), 4 H. & N. 781; compare Hayman v. Hewitt (1798), Peake, Add. Cas. 170 (but compare with this case Illidge v. Goodwin (1831), 5 C. & P. 190); Tolhausen v. Davies (1888), 58 L. J. (Q. B.) 98, C. A.; and other cases cited at pp. 367, 379, 381, 393, post. See also the following Scottish cases: Mackie v. Macmillan (1898), 36 Sc. L. R. 137; Wisely v. Aberdeen Harbour Commissioners (1887), 24 Sc. L. R. 315; Shaw v. Croall & Sons (1885), 22 Sc. L. R. 792; compare Weems v. Mathieson (1861), 4 Macq. 221, 227, H. L.

(b) See p. 463, post. With regard to persons of physical incapacity it is submitted that, in the absence of any special duty, only such care as they can take under the circumstances can be expected of them. Holmes, The Common Law, p. 109, says: "A blind man is not required to see at his peril, and, although he is no doubt bound to consider his infirmity in regulating his actions, yet, if he properly finds himself in a certain situation, the neglect of precautions requiring eyesight would not prevent his recovering for an injury to himself, and, it may be presumed, would not make him liable for injuring another"; but this is only true so long as there is no positive duty devolving on the blind man to avoid such injury. Such a positive duty may arise, for example, if the person, with knowledge of his incapacity, voluntarily does that which brings about the risk and results in the injury.

(c) Vaughan v. Menlove (1837), 3 Bing. (N. C.) 468; compare Jones v. Bird (1822), 5 B. & Ald. 837, 846.

(d) Anderson v. Blackwood (1885), 23 Sc. L. R. 227.

(e) The plaintiff, as a rule, must prove his case, and the mere fact that the defendant cannot explain the cause of an accident does not of itself render him liable (Macfarlane v. Thomson (1884), 22 Sc. L. R. 179; Manzoni v. Douglas (1880), 6 Q. B. D. 145), unless the circumstances are such as to call upon him for an explanation, e.g., Walton (Isaac) & Co. v. Vanguard Motorbus Co., Ltd. (1908), 25 T. L. R. 13 (motor omnibus running off the roadway on to the footway); Hyman v. Nye (1881), 6 Q. B. D. 685, and Sharp v. Grey (1833), 9 Bing. 457 (cases of defective vehicles used as public conveyances); compare Simson v. London General Omnibus Co. (1873), L. R. 8 C. P. 390; Hammack v. White (1862), 11 C. B. (N. S.) 588; and see, generally, pp. 435 et seq., 439 et seq., post.

(f) Davis v. Saunders (1770), 2 Chit. 639; Wakeman v. Robinson (1823), 1 Bing. 213; Great Western Rail. Co. v. Davies (1878), 39 L. T. 475; Douglas v. Gray (1890), 27 Sc. L. R. 687; and see p. 467, post.

(g) Blyth v. Birmingham Waterworks Co. (1856), 11 Exch. 781; Ross v. Fedden (1872), L. R. 7 Q. B. 661; Lay v. Midland Rail. Co. (1874), 30 L. T.

SECT. 2.

Standard
and Degree
of Care
Ordinarily Required.Degree of care in ordinary circumstances.Test of reasonable care.

631. In ordinary circumstances, or where simple operations are being performed, persons are not as a rule required to guard against every conceivable result of their actions (h), nor are they bound to exercise scientific care (i) or to take extravagant precautions (j). They are generally entitled to assume (k) that others will to a reasonable extent take care to look out for themselves and take proper steps to avoid known risks (l).

A fair test of what is reasonable care is often the consideration of what is habitually done in the same or similar circumstances (m); for the omission to take precautions which are usually taken is some evidence of negligence (a).

529; Lay v. Midland Rail. Co. (1875), 34 L. T. 30; Keeble v. East and West India Dock Co. (1888), 5 T. L. R. 312, C. A.; Sharp v. Powell (1872), L. R. 7 C. P. 253; Pearson v. Cox (1877), 2 C. P. D. 369, C. A.; Robinson v. Reid's Trustees (1900), 37 Sc. L. R. 718.

(h) Keeble v. East and West India Dock Co., supra; Lay v. Midland Rail. Co. (1874), 30 L. T. 529; Lay v. Midland Rail. Co. (1875), 34 L. T. 30; Ross v. Fedden (1872), L. R. 7 Q. B. 661; see Horsburgh v. Sheach (1900), 38 Sc. L. R. 197; Royan v. M'Lellans (1889), 27 Sc. L. R. 79; compare Ross v. Keith (1888), 16 R. (Ct. of Sess.) 86.

(i) Fawkes v. Poulson & Son (1892), 8 T. L. R. 725, C. A.; Shaftesbury (Earl) v. London and South Western Rail. Co. (1895), 11 T. L. R. 269, C. A.; Port-Glasgow and Newark Sail Cloth Co., Ltd. v. Caledonian Rail. Co., Ltd. (1892), 29 Sc. L. R. 577; M'Gill v. Bowman & Co. (1890), 28 Sc. L. R. 144.

(j) Wright v. Midland Rail. Co. (1884), 51 L. T. 539; the law there laid down being approved in the Court of Appeal, which reversed the decision of the court below on the application of the law to the facts, see Brown v. Great Western Rail. Co. (1885), 1 T. L. R. 406, note; compare Kepitigalla Rubber Estates, Ltd. v. National Bank of India, Ltd., [1909] 2 K. B. 1010; Ford v. London and South Western Rail. Co. (1862), 2 F. & F. 730; Free-mantle v. London and North Western Rail. Co. (1861), 10 C. B. (N. S.) 89; M'Inulty v. Primrose (1897), 34 Sc. L. R. 334; Wisely v. Aberdeen Harbour Commissioners (1887), 24 Sc. L. R. 315.

(k) Unless the particular act, or course of conduct, is such as to increase the ordinary risks to others (Cliff v. Midland Rail. Co. (1870), L. R. 5 Q. B. 258, commenting on Bilbee v. London, Brighton and South Coast Rail. Co. (1865), 18 C. B. (N. S.) 584, and approved of in Ellis v. Great Western Rail. Co. (1874), L. R. 9 C. P. 551, Ex. Ch.); compare Thompson v. North Eastern Rail. Co. (1860), 2 B. & S. 106; Mitchell v. Caledonian Rail. Co. (1909), 46 Sc. L. R. 517; but see Daniel v. Metropolitan Rail. Co. (Directors etc.) (1871), L. R. 5 H. L. 45.

(l) Wright v. Midland Rail. Co., supra; see Brown v. Great Western Rail. Co., supra; Walker v. Midland Rail. Co. (1886), 2 T. L. R. 450, H. L.; Mackie v. Macmillan (1898), 36 Sc. L. R. 137; compare Falkiner v. Great Southern and Western Rail. Co. of Ireland (1871), 5 I. R. C. L. 213; Curtin v. Great Southern and Western Rail. Co. of Ireland (1887), 22 L. R. Ir. 219, C. A.; Stubley v. London and North Western Rail. Co. (1865), L. R. 1 Exch. 13; Clayards v. Dethick (1848), 12 Q. B. 439.

(m) Bryant v. North Metropolitan Tramways Co. (1890), 6 T. L. R. 396; Snook v. Grand Junction Waterworks Co. (1886), 2 T. L. R. 308, 310; Great Western Rail. Co. v. Davies (1878), 39 L. T. 475; Powell v. Thorndike (1910), 102 L. T. 600.

(a) Blamires v. Lancashire and Yorkshire Rail. Co. (1873), L. R. 8 Exch. 283, Ex. Ch.; Snook v. Grand Junction Waterworks Co., supra; compare Dimmock v. North Staffordshire Rail. Co. (1866), 4 F. & F. 1058; Blenkiron v. Great Central Gas Consumers Co. (1860), 2 F. & F. 437.

SUB-SECT. 2.—Gravity of Risk.

SECT. 2.

Standard
and Degree
of Care
Ordinarily Required.Degree of care increased by unusual risk.Examples of cases where special precautions
required.

632. Where there are special circumstances which increase the risk attendant on some act or operation not usually dangerous (b), or where the act or operation is, from its nature, likely to cause injury to others unless special precautions are taken (c), the degree of care required is proportionately high (d). From the failure to use those precautions, which skill, foresight, and experience suggest as being necessary in such circumstances, negligence will be inferred (e).

Thus where a duty exists, such as that imposed on harbour commissioners having control of a harbour of refuge, which if neglected will probably endanger the lives of others, the adoption of expensive and even somewhat unusual precautions may be required (f).

Consummate caution, too, is required from those handling dangerous weapons, such as loaded guns (g), or from those dealing with dangerous articles, such as gas (h) or explosives (i).

(b) E.g., such as driving at night (McKechnie v. Couper (1887), 24 Sc. L. R. 252), or in a crowd (The Europa (1885), 10 P. D. 99; compare The Europa (1850), 14 Jur. 627); see James v. Great Western Rail. Co. (1866), cited L. R. 2 C. P. 634; Shepherd v. Midland Rail. Co. (1872), 25 L. T. 879 (frost rendering platform slippery); compare Rigg v. Manchester, Sheffield and Lincolnshire Rail. Co. (1866), 14 W. R. 834. For the principles applicable where there are no such special circumstances, see The Western Belle (1906), 95 L. T. 364 (barge moored in a river and left unattended); and see p. 364, ante.

(c) Williams v. Birmingham Battery and Metal Co., [1899] 2 Q. B. 338, 345, C. A.; Edwards v. Hutcheon (1889), 26 Sc. L. R. 550 (cases of dangerous machinery); Grizzle v. Frost (1863), 3 F. & F. 622 (employment of a young person at a dangerous machine); Robinson v. Smith (W. H.) & Son (1901), 17 T. L. R. 423, C. A. (boy employed at a railway book-stall); Grant v. Great Western Rail. Co. (1898), 14 T. L. R. 174, C. A. (complicated shunting operations); compare Smith v. Highland Rail. Co. (1888), 26 Sc. L. R. 33 (where plaintiff, a trespasser, was injured by shunting operations); see Thrussell v. Handyside (1888), 20 Q. B. D. 359 (dangerous work carried on over a place where others were working); compare Daniel v. Metropolitan Rail. Co. (Directors etc.) (1871), L. R. 5 H. L. 45; see Vaughan v. Menlove (1837), 3 Bing. (N. C.) 468; Stapley v. London, Brighton and South Coast Rail. Co. (1865), L. R. 1 Exch. 21.

(d) See cases cited in notes (b) and (c), supra.

(e) Blenkiron v. Great Central Gas Consumers Co. (1860), 2 F. & F. 437; Mose v. Hastings and St. Leonards Gas Co. (1864) 4 F. & F. 324; Parry v. Smith (1879), 4 C. P. D. 325; Dimmock v. North Staffordshire Rail. Co. (1866), 4 F. & F. 1058; Burrell v. Tuohy, [1898] 2 I. R. 271; and see, generally, pp. 403, 407, post.

(f) Burrell v. Tuohy, supra (hammer test of ring attached to mooring buoy was not sufficient; a straining test ought to have been applied). As to harbour commissioners and their duties generally, see titles SHIPPING AND NAVIGATION; WATERS AND WATERCOURSES.

(g) Dixon v. Bell (1816), 5 M. & S. 198; Potter v. Faulkner (1861), 1 B. & S. 800, Ex. Ch., see ibid., per ERLE, C.J., at p. 805; Sullivan v. Creed, [1904] 2 I. R. 317, C. A.

(h) Dominion Natural Gas Co., Ltd. v. Collins and Perkins, [1909] A. C. 640, P. C.; Parry v. Smith (1879), 4 C. P. D. 325; Mose v. Hastings and St. Leonards Gas Co., supra; Blenkiron v. Great Central Gas Consumers Co., supra (where, however, the jury negatived negligence in bringing lights in close proximity to escaping gas); compare Jackson v. Carshalton Gas Co. (1888), 6 T. L. R. 69; and see title GAS, Vol. XV. p. 359.

(i) Brabant & Co. v. King, [1895] A. C. 632, P. C.; Williams v. Eady

SECT. 2.

Standard
and Degree
of Care
Ordinarily Required.Dangerous employment.
Young servants.

It is the duty of a master to provide safe tackle and appliances for his servants, and in ordinary cases to take reasonable care to keep them so (k). Where, however, the employment is of a dangerous character, such as that of a steeple-jack (l), such special precautions as are appropriate to the employment must be taken to see that the tackle and appliances are as safe as is possible (m). So, too, a master's duty towards young servants may differ from that owed to adults (n). Thus he must not only protect them, so far as is reasonably possible, from the dangers of their employment, but must take proper steps to ensure that they appreciate the risks (o).

Carriers.

The duty of a carrier of passengers for hire is to use the best precautions in known practical use for securing safety, and the fact that a vehicle breaks down is prima facie evidence of negligence, but he is not responsible for disaster occasioned from latent defects which no human skill could have prevented or detected (p).

SUB-SECT. 3.—*Imminence of Risk.*Imminent risk amounting to emergency.

633. If risk is so imminent as to amount to an emergency the act to which liability for a resulting injury would otherwise attach may be excusable (q). The test in such a case is not whether (1893), 10 T. L. R. 41, C. A.; compare Clarke v. Army and Navy Co-operative Society, [1903] 1 K. B. 155, C. A.; and see p. 409, post. For regulations as to the carriage of explosives, see titles CARRIERS, Vol. IV., p. 27; EXPLOSIVES, Vol. XIV., pp. 385 et seq.

(k) Weems v. Mathieson (1861), 4 Macq. 221, 227, H. L.; Wood & Co. v. Mackay (1906), 43 Sc. L. R. 458; compare Heaven v. Pender (1883), 11 Q. B. D. 503, C. A.; Murphy v. Phillips (1876), 35 L. T. 477; and see title MASTER AND SERVANT, Vol. XX., pp. 130, 131.

(l) Fraser v. Fraser (1882), 19 Sc. L. R. 646.

(m) Ibid.; Williams v. Birmingham Battery and Metal Co., [1899] 2 Q. B. 338, C. A.; see title MASTER AND SERVANT, Vol. XX., p. 131.

(n) Robinson v. Smith (W. H.) & Son (1901), 17 T. L. R. 423, C. A.; Crocker v. Banks (1888), 4 T. L. R. 324, C. A. As to the duty of the employer to inquire as to the age of the infant employee, see Gibb v. Crombie (1875), 2 R. (Ct. of Sess.) 886; compare Cribb v. Kynoch, Ltd., [1907] 2 K. B. 548; and see title MASTER AND SERVANT, Vol. XX., pp. 130, 131.

(o) Crocker v. Banks, supra; Grizzle v. Frost (1863), 3 F. & F. 622. Thus it was held that a master ought not to have put a child under fourteen to work at a carding machine contrary to the Factory and Workshop Act, 1878 (41 & 42 Vict. c. 16) (now repealed), where absence of the caution that an older person would be expected to show might render her occupation dangerous (Sharp v. Pathhead Spinning Co. (1885), 22 Sc. L. R. 368); compare, however, Morris v. Boase Spinning Co. (1895), 32 Sc. L. R. 243 (where no liability was attached to the employers where a girl under fourteen was killed by a machine whose guards she had improperly removed); see also Bass v. Hendon Urban District Council (1912), 28 T. L. R. 317, C. A.; and for cases where the failure to instruct as to the danger was a failure of a fellow-servant, compare Cribb v. Kynoch, Ltd., supra; Young v. Hoffmann Manufacturing Co., Ltd., [1907] 2 K. B. 646, C. A.; and see p. 407, post.

(p) See title CARRIERS, Vol. IV., p. 45.

(q) Jones v. Boyce (1816), 1 Stark. 493; compare Wakeman v. Robinson (1823), 1 Bing. 213; see Scott v. Shepherd (1773), 3 Wils. 403; compare R. v. Pitts (1842), Car. & M. 284; Adams v. Lancashire and Yorkshire Rail. Co. (1869), L. R. 4 C. P. 739; compare Gee v. Metropolitan Rail. Co.

a better course was in fact open, but whether what was done was what an ordinarily prudent man might reasonably have been expected to do in such an emergency (r). Where the emergency is so great that no amount of foresight, care or skill, would have prevented the accident which caused the injury, the accident may be held to have been inevitable, in which case there is no cause of action (s).

SECT. 2.
Standard
and Degree
of Care
Ordinarily Required.

Inevitable
accident.

SUB-SECT. 4.—Profession of Special Skill.

634. The practice of a profession, art, or calling which, from its nature, demands some special skill, ability and experience (t), carries with it a representation that the person practising or exercising it possesses, to a reasonable extent, the amount of skill, ability, and experience which it demands (a). Such a person is liable for injury caused to another to whom he owes a duty to take care (b), if he fails to possess that amount of skill and experience which is representation of ability.

Implied

(1873), L. R. 8 Q. B. 161, Ex. Ch.; see Holmes v. Mather (1875), L. R. 10 Exch. 261; The City of Lincoln (1889), 15 P. D. 15, C. A.; and see p. 479, post.

(r) Stoomvaart Maatschappij Nederland v. Peninsular and Oriental Steam Navigation Co. (1880), 5 App. Cas. 876, per Lord BLACKBURN, at p. 891; Wilkinson v. Kinneil Cannel and Coking Coal Co., Ltd. (1897), 34 Sc. L. R. 533; compare Woods v. Caledonian Rail. Co. (1886), 23 Sc. L. R. 798; Jenouire v. Delmege, [1891] A. C. 73, P. C., per Lord MACNAGHTEN, at p. 77.

(s) See title TORT; and see p. 467, post.

(t) The following may be included in addition to the professions or callings usually practised: carriers; see Christie v. Griggs (1809), 2 Camp. 79; Sharp v. Grey (1833), 9 Bing. 457; Winterbottom v. Wright (1842), 10 M. & W. 109; Burns v. Cork and Bandon Rail. Co. (1863), 13 I. C. L. R. 543; Simson v. London and General Omnibus Co. (1873), L. R. 8 C. P. 390; and see title CARRIERS, Vol. IV., pp. 44, 45; and for the duties of drivers of public vehicles, and the standard of care required, see Crofts v. Waterhouse (1825), 3 Bing. 319; Simon v. London General Omnibus Co., Ltd. (1907), 23 T. L. R. 463; Hase v. London General Omnibus Co., Ltd. (1907), 23 T. L. R. 616; and see titles CARRIERS, Vol. IV., p. 44; STREET AND AERIAL TRAFFIC: trade protection societies; see Woods v. Woods (1862), 3 F. & F. 244; barbers; see Hales v. Kerr, [1908] 2 K. B. 601; patent and other agents; see Lee v. Walker (1872), L. R. 7 C. P. 121; and see note (c), p. 368, post.

(a) In Fitz. Nat. Brev., Writ de Trespass sur le Case, 94d, cited in Marshall v. York, Newcastle and Berwick Rail. Co. (1851), 11 C. B. 655, per WILLIAMS, J., the following passage appears: "If a smith prick my horse with a nail etc., I shall have my action upon the case against him without any warranty by the smith to do it well; for it is the duty of every artificer to exercise his art rightly and truly as he ought"; and see Harmer v. Cornelius (1858), 5 C. B. (N. S.) 236; compare Seare v. Prentice (1807), 8 East, 348; Duncan v. Blundell (1820), 3 Stark. 6; Lanphier v. Phipos (1838), 8 C. & P. 475; Farquhar v. Murray (1901), 38 Sc. L. R. 642.

(b) This will usually arise from the fact of his employment, but the right arises both ex contractu and ex delicto (Turner v. Stallibrass, [1898] 1 Q. B. 56, C. A.; Hayn v. Culliford (1879), 4 C. P. D. 182, C. A., per BRAMWELL, L. J., at p. 185; Kelly v. Metropolitan Rail. Co., [1895] 1 Q. B. 944, C. A.; Taylor v. Manchester, Sheffield and Lincolnshire Rail. Co., [1895] 1 Q. B. 134, C. A.; and see note (r), p. 362, ante. Privity of contract, however, is not necessary to enable a person injured by want of skill on the part of a medical man to recover damages; thus a doctor is liable for negligent treatment although he may be employed by another person to look after that patient (Pippin v. Sheppard (1822), 11 Price, 400; Gladwell v. Steggall (1839), 5 Bing. (N. C.) 733; compare Austin v. Great Western Rail. Co. (1867), L. R. 2 Q. B. 442; and see title MEDICINE AND PHARMACY, Vol. XX., p. 331, note (f)).

SECT. 2.
Standard
and Degree
of Care
Ordinarily
Required.

Effect of want of skill or neglect to use it.

usual in his profession or calling (c), or if he neglects to use the skill and experience which he possesses (d) or the necessary degree of care demanded or professed (e). His duty is honestly and diligently to use that care which would be used by others in the

(c) Seare v. Prentice (1807), 8 East, 348; Blair v. Assets Co., [1896] A. C. 409. It has been said that, where no extraordinary degree of skill is contracted for, the fact that five out of ten skilled and experienced members of a particular profession would have done the same act, or have come to the same conclusion, that is complained of as negligent on the part of the defendant, entitles the latter to a verdict (Chapman v. Walton (1833), 10 Bing. 57; see title BUILDING CONTRACTS, ENGINEERS, AND ARCHITECTS, Vol. III., p. 295, note (n)). As to negligence on the part of accountants, see Re Kingslon Cotton Mill Co., Ltd. (No. 2), [1896] 2 Ch. 279, C. A.; Henry Squire, Cash Chemist, Ltd. v. Ball, Baker & Co., Mead v. Ball, Baker & Co. (1911), 106 L. T. 197, C. A.; see title COMPANIES, Vol. V., p. 269; agents, see title AGENCY, Vol. I. pp. 185, 196, 230; auctioneers, see title AUCTION AND AUCTIONEERS, Vol. I., pp. 514, 516; bailees, see title BAILMENT, Vol. I., pp. 531, 537, 538, 544, 552, 560, 564; barbers, see note (t), p. 367, ante; barristers, see title BARRISTERS, Vol. II., pp. 394, 401, 402; building contractors, see title BUILDING CONTRACTS, ENGINEERS, AND ARCHITECTS, Vol. III., pp. 189, 315, 316; and as to architects, see ibid., pp. 293, 295 et seq., 306; engineers, see ibid., pp. 295 et seq.; and quantity surveyors, see ibid., p. 311; carriers, see title CARRIERS, Vol. IV., pp. 4 et seq., 25 et seq.; company directors, see title COMPANIES, Vol. V., pp. 231 et seq.; corporations, see title CORPORATIONS, Vol. VIII., pp. 386, 387; executors and administrators, see title EXECUTORS AND ADMINISTRATORS, Vol. XIV., p. 316; innkeepers, see title INNS AND INNKEEPERS, Vol. XVII., pp. 313 et seq.; insurance agents and brokers, see title INSURANCE, Vol. XVII., pp. 356, 357; masters and employers, see title MASTER AND SERVANT, Vol. XX., pp. 119 et seq., 128 et seq., 248 et seq.; medical practitioners, see title MEDICINE AND PHARMACY, Vol. XX., pp. 330 et seq.; patent agents, see title PATENTS AND INVENTIONS; pawnbrokers, see title PAWNS AND PLEDGES; postal officials, see title POST OFFICE; railway companies and their officials, see title RAILWAYS AND CANALS; servants and workmen, see titles BAILMENT, Vol. I., p. 557; MASTER AND SERVANT, Vol. XX., pp. 125 et seq., 276 et seq.; WORK AND LABOUR; receivers, see title RECEIVERS; sheriffs and bailiffs, see title SHERIFFS AND BAILIFFS; shipowners, see title SHIPPING AND NAVIGATION; solicitors, see titles BARRISTERS, Vol. II., pp. 401, 402; SOLICITORS; stock-brokers, see title STOCK EXCHANGE; trustees, see title TRUSTS AND TRUSTEES; valuers and appraisers, see Love v. Mack (1905), 92 L. T. 345; title VALUERS AND APPRAISERS.

(d) Price v. Metropolitan House Investment and Agency Co., Ltd. (1907), 23 T. L. R. 630, C. A., per COZENS-HARDY, M.R., at p. 631 (quoting LAWRENCE, J., in the court below): "A man who is employed to act for another as his agent is bound to exercise all the skill and all the knowledge he has of a particular business, all the diligence, all the zeal, and all the energy that he is capable of, and any interests he may have himself he is bound to exercise to the fullest extent for the sole and exclusive benefit of the person for whom he is acting": compare Beven, Negligence in Law, 3rd ed., pp. 1129, 1131, n. The passage from Story, Law of Agency, s. 183, there referred to does not appear to conflict with the judgment above cited, and on general principles it would appear that he who, having special knowledge of that which he is employed to do, negligently omits to use it, and thereby causes injury, is liable, notwithstanding that a person of ordinary skill could not have avoided causing such injury; see, however, note (f), p. 369, post.

(e) Seare v. Prentice, supra; Blair v. Assets Co., supra; Dickson v. Hygienic Institute (1910), 47 Sc. L. R. 286; and cases cited in note (f), p. 369, post. As to what degree of negligence would be an answer to an action by the skilled person for his fees, see Moneyppenny v. Hartland (1824), 1 C. & P. 352; and see title BUILDING CONTRACTS, ENGINEERS, AND ARCHITECTS, Vol. III., p. 395.

same profession or calling (f). He will not, however, generally be held liable for loss resulting either from a mere error of judgment on a difficult point (g) or from want of skill in performance of some act which is not appropriate to be performed by the members of his particular profession (h). A man should not, however, undertake to do a work of skill unless he is fitted for it, and it is his duty to know whether he is so fitted or not (i).

635. A professional man is not liable for failure to use the skill expected from his profession when he is acting not in his professional capacity, but as an arbitrator or quasi-arbitrator (k), as, for instance, when an architect settles a dispute between a builder and a building owner, or gives a certificate which under the building contract is conclusive evidence of work done (l).

636. Where skilled persons are employed together, but each one is separately engaged by the employer, each is only liable for his own lack of skill, but where it is part of the skilled employment to engage subordinates there may be a liability for failure to take proper care in engaging them; thus a broker is liable to his principal for negligence in failing to employ a good broker where another one has to be employed (m); he may also be liable to his principal for failing to act in accordance with the custom of the particular market he deals in, or for neglecting to make an enforceable contract (n),

SECT. 2.
Standard
and Degree
of Care
Ordinarily Required.

Error of judgment.

Liability
where act not done in professional capacity.

Negligence arising out of failure to perform incidental
matters.

(f) Chapman v. Walton (1833), 10 Bing. 57; Hunter v. Caldwell (1847), 10 Q. B. 69; Jenkins v. Betham (1854), 15 C. B. 168; Rich v. Pierpoint (1862), 3 F. & F. 35. Those responsible for a hospital are not, however, liable for any want of care on the part of surgeons on their staff (Hillyer v. St. Bartholomew's Hospital (Governors), [1909] 2 K. B. 820, C. A.; compare Perionowsky v. Freeman (1866), 4 F. & F. 977). The statement in Price v. Metropolitan House Investment and Agency Co., Ltd. (1907), 23 T. L. R. 630, C. A., that the duty of a skilled person was to exercise all the skill and knowledge he has of a particular business, all the diligence, zeal, and energy he is capable of (see note (d), p. 368, ante), seems rather an extension of the usual rule as laid down in the above cases.

(g) Godefroy v. Dalton (1830), 6 Bing. 460; Hart v. Frame (1839), 6 Cl. & Fin. 193, H. L.; Faithfull v. Kesteven (1910), 103 L. T. 56, C. A.; Purves v. Landell (1845), 12 Cl. & Fin. 91, H. L.; compare Blair v. Assets Co., [1896] A. C. 409. For the consideration of criminal responsibility for negligence on the part of professional men, see R. v. Spencer (1867), 10 Cox, C. C. 525; Pharmaceutical Society v. Wheeldon (1890), 24 Q. B. D. 683; and see title CRIMINAL LAW AND PROCEDURE, Vol. IX., p. 585.

(h) Pappa v. Rose (1872), L. R. 7 C. P. 32, 525, Ex. Ch.; compare Jenkins v. Betham (1854), 15 C. B. 168.

(i) Duncan v. Blundell (1820), 3 Stark. 6; Ruddock v. Lowe (1865), 4 F. & F. 519; Jones v. Fay (1865), 4 F. & F. 525; Dickson v. Hygienic Institute (1910), 47 Sc. L. R. 286.

(k) See title ARBITRATION, Vol. I., p. 459; Tharsis Sulphur Co. v. Loftus (1872), L. R. 8 C. P. 1 (average adjuster).

(l) Stevenson v. Watson (1879), 4 C. P. D. 148; Chambers v. Goldthorpe, Restell v. Nye, [1901] 1 K. B. 624, C. A.; but such a certificate is not necessarily conclusive as between the architect and the building owner (Rogers v. James (1891), 8 T. L. R. 67, C. A.; see title BUILDING CONTRACTS, ENGINEERS, AND ARCHITECTS, Vol. III., p. 210).

(m) Ecosaise Steamship Co. v. Lloyd, Low & Co. (1890), 7 T. L. R. 76, C. A.

(n) Neilson v. James (1882), 9 Q. B. D. 546, C. A.; compare Lamert v. Heath (1846), 15 M. & W. 486.

SECT. 2.
Standard
and Degree
of Care
Ordinarily
Required.

Reliance on advice of third party.

Article supplied in a condition likely to cause danger.

or for omitting any usual term from the contract (o); and a patent agent, though not bound to be accurately acquainted with patent law, is expected to be familiar with the practice of obtaining patents; so that ignorance of decisions which have an important bearing on that practice would as a rule render him liable to a client injured in consequence (p).

637. In some cases a skilled person may be protected if he has relied on the advice of another upon whom he is justified in relying (q). Thus a solicitor is not liable if he acts upon the clear opinion and direction of an experienced counsel given upon a properly and carefully drawn case (r), but it is otherwise where he ought himself to have knowledge of the particular matter (s) or the question is one of practical procedure (a), unless indeed questions of doubt are involved (b).

SUB-SECT. 5.—Notice of Fact Demanding Special Care.

638. The fact that a certain state of circumstances exists may in some cases create a duty to take special care even where no such duty would otherwise exist, and may involve the employment of special precautions (c). Thus, while no liability ordinarily attaches for injury resulting from a defect in an article supplied if the article is not dangerous in itself, yet, if it is in a condition likely to cause danger (d), knowledge of this fact imposes on the person supplying it a duty to take precautions to prevent it causing injury and a

(o) Mallough v. Barber (1815), 4 Camp. 150; compare Glaser v. Cowie (1813), 1 M. & S. 52. In Smith v. Price (1862), 2 F. & F. 748, a firm of brokers, before completion, abandoned business which they had undertaken and were held liable; and see, generally, titles AGENCY, Vol. I., pp. 185 et seq.; STOCK EXCHANGE.

(p) Lee v. Walker (1872), L. R. 7 C. P. 121; and see title PATENTS AND INVENTIONS.

(q) He must take care to obtain advice from, or to rely upon, an experienced person (Ecossaise Steamship Co. v. Lloyd, Low & Co. (1890), 7 T. L. R. 76, C. A.; and see Scholes v. Brook (1891), 63 L. T. 837; Lowry v. Guilford (1832), 5 C. & P. 234; compare Russell v. Palmer (1767), 2 Wils. 325; see Godefroy v. Dalton (1830), 6 Bing. 460; Baikie v. Chandless (1811), 3 Camp. 17.

(r) Kemp v. Burt (1833), 4 B. & Ad. 424; compare Lowry v. Guilford, supra; and see, generally, titles BARRISTERS, Vol. II., pp. 401 et seq.; SOLICITORS.

(s) Godefroy v. Dalton, supra, per TINDAL, C.J.

(a) Russell v. Palmer, supra; Baikie v. Chandless, supra; compare Compton v. Chandless (1802), cited 3 Camp. 19.

(b) Laidler v. Elliott (1825), 3 B. & C. 738.

(c) The European (1885), 10 P. D. 99; compare Daniel v. Metropolitan Rail. Co. (Directors etc.) (1871), L. R. 5 H. L. 45, per Lord HATHERLEY, L.C., at pp. 56, 57; Richardson v. Great Eastern Rail. Co. (1876), 1 C. P. D. 342, C. A.; Cliff v. Midland Rail. Co. (1870), L. R. 5 Q. B. 258. The question whether there is such a duty must be determined by the light of the circumstances at the time when it is alleged to be broken (Cunnington v. Great Northern Rail. Co. (1883), 49 L. T. 392, per BRETT, M.R., at p. 393 (carrier delivering wrong empty casks).

(d) Winterbottom v. Wright (1842), 10 M. & W. 109; Longmeid v. Holliday (1851), 6 Exch. 761; Heaven v. Pender (1883), 11 Q. B. D. 503, C. A. It must, however, be remembered that the rule is different where articles are liability for any injury which may result to the person to whom the article is supplied (e).

Similarly, persons consigning goods of a dangerous character are bound to communicate to the carrier the facts within their knowledge which indicate the dangerous character of the goods (f), and in cases where the carrier has neither knowledge nor means of knowledge of such dangerous character and is under a duty to accept the goods for carriage, a warranty that no special danger is involved in the carriage of them may be implied from the request and the consequent obligation to carry (g).

639. Where a duty to take care already exists, the fact that there are special circumstances brought to the notice of the person under that duty, which call for special precautions, may increase the degree of care required to be taken (h). Thus, while an occupier of premises abutting on or adjoining the highway is under a general obligation to keep the premises in a safe condition as regards members of the public on the highway (i), the cognisance by him of some

SECT. 2.

Standard
and Degree
of Care
Ordinarily
Required.

Consignment of dangerous
goods.

Increase of degree of care in special circumstances known to the person liable to use care.

supplied for a particular purpose under circumstances which throw on the persons supplying them a duty of seeing that the articles are reasonably fit for that purpose (Elliott v. Hall (1885), 15 Q. B. D. 315 (defective railway truck); Mowbray v. Merryweather, [1895] 2 Q. B. 640, C. A. (defective chain supplied by shipowner for unloading a ship); Hawkins v. Smith (1896), 12 T. L. R. 532 (rotten sack supplied for unloading grain)); see p. 407, post; and see also title SALE OF GOODS.

(e) Earl v. Lubbock, [1905] 1 K. B. 253, 258, C. A., approving dictum of BOWEN, L.J., in Heaven v. Pender (1883), 11 Q. B. D. 503, C. A. So, too, in the case of a contract of sale, a duty is imposed on the vendor, if there is some dangerous quality in the goods sold of which he knows, but of which the purchaser cannot be expected to be aware, of taking reasonable precautions in the way of warning the purchaser that special care will be requisite (Clarke v. Army and Navy Co-operative Society, [1903] 1 K. B. 155, C. A.); see Preist v. Last, [1903] 2 K. B. 148, C. A.; Frost v. Aylesbury Dairy Co., [1905] 1 K. B. 608, C. A.; Jackson v. Watson & Sons, [1909] 2 K. B. 193, C. A.; and generally, p. 407, post; and see title SALE OF GOODS.

(f) Brass v. Maitland (1856), 6 E. & B. 470; Farrant v. Barnes (1862), 11 C. B. (N. S.) 553; compare Williams v. East India Co. (1802), 3 East, 192.

(g) Acatos v. Burns (1878), 3 Ex. D. 282, C. A., as discussed and commented on in Bamfield v. Goole and Sheffield Transport Co., Ltd., [1910] 2 K. B. 94, C. A., by FLETCHER MOULTON, L.J., at p. 111. In the latter case it was held that where a consignor does not give notice to a carrier that the goods are dangerous he must, unless the carrier knows or ought to know the dangerous character of the goods, be taken impliedly to warrant that the goods are not dangerous, though the consignor himself may not be aware of their dangerous nature; compare Sheffield Corporation v. Barclay, [1905] A. C. 392. The responsibility and liability of a carrier in respect of dangerous goods which he has accepted for carriage is usually determined by special contract; see title CARRIERS, Vol. IV., p. 85.

(h) Shepherd v. Midland Rail. Co. (1872), 25 L. T. 879; Daniel v. Metropolitan Rail. Co. (Directors etc.) (1871), L. R. 5 H. L. 45; Cooke v. Midland Great Western Railway of Ireland, [1909] A. C. 229; Campbell and Cowan & Co. v. Train (1910), 47 Sc. L. R. 475; compare Pickering v. Belfast Corporation (1911), 45 I. L. T. 34, C. A.; Lowery v. Walker, [1911] A. C. 10.

(i) See Tarry v. Ashton (1876), 1 Q. B. D. 314; and cases cited in notes (a), (c), p. 399, post; compare Broggi v. Robbins (1899), 15 T. L. R. 224, C. A.; Tredway v. Machin (1904), 91 L. T. 310, C. A.; Cavalier v. Pope, [1906] A. C. 428; Malone v. Laskey, [1907] 2 K. B. 141, C. A., as to the liability of a landlord to persons other than the actual tenant as

SECT. 2.
Standard
and Degree
of Care
Ordinarily
Required.

The degree of care required.

condition of those premises which is a source of risk or danger (k), even though it be brought about by the act of a stranger (l), imposes on the occupier in addition the special duty of guarding against that danger (m). Persons using a highway are required, when they have notice of special circumstances which enhance the danger involved in such use, to take such special care as a reasonably prudent man would take to obviate it (n). The fact that persons are known to be in a position which may be rendered dangerous by the carrying out of certain operations makes it the duty of those carrying out those operations to safeguard those endangered (o).

The degree of care incumbent upon a person who has notice of facts demanding special care naturally varies with the extent of the knowledge he has of the relevant circumstances (p). No liability, however, attaches where the knowledge of the circumstances leads to the taking of such precautions as leave no reasonably probable event unforeseen and unprovided for (q).

affected by notice of the defective state of the premises which he has let; and see p. 382, post; and titles HIGHWAYS, STREETS, AND BRIDGES, Vol. XVI., p. 153, note (h); LANDLORD AND TENANT, Vol. XVIII., pp. 504, 505.

(k) In Shepherd v. Midland Rail. Co. (1872), 25 L. T. 879, it was held that in very frosty weather the defendants' servants ought to have been on the alert to see that water did not collect and freeze upon the station platform; compare O'Keefe v. Edinburgh Corporation (1910), 48 Sc. L. R. 50.

(l) Silverton v. Marriott (1888), 59 L. T. 61, following Tarry v. Ashton (1876), 1 Q. B. D. 314, and Barnes v. Ward (1850), 9 C. B. 392; compare Barker v. Herbert, [1911] 2 K. B. 633, C. A.

(m) Shepherd v. Midland Rail. Co., supra; O'Keefe v. Edinburgh Corporation, supra; see title HIGHWAYS, STREETS, AND BRIDGES, Vol. XVI., p. 134; and compare Anthony v. Midland Rail. Co. (1908), 25 T. L. R. 98 (where a train overshot the platform in a fog the duty of warning passengers not to alight was cast on the defendants, but was held not to have been neglected).

(n) Cruden v. Fentham (1799), 2 Esp. 685 (extra care in obeying rule of the road in fog or darkness); see title STREET AND AERIAL TRAFFIC; Gray v. North Eastern Rail. Co. and Washington Colliery Co. (1883), 48 L. T. 904; M'Kechnie v. Couper (1887), 24 Sc. L. R. 252; compare Springett v. Ball (1865), 4 F. & F. 472; see The European (1885), 10 P. D. 99; compare The Europa (1850), 14 Jur. 627; James v. Great Western Rail. Co. (1866), cited L. R. 2 C. P. 634 (duty to whistle at level crossing in fog); Anderson v. Blackwood (1885), 23 Sc. L. R. 227; R. v. Walker (1824), 1 C. & P. 320; R. v. Longbottom (1849), 3 Cox, C. C. 439. In Smith v. Browne (1891), 28 L. R. Ir. 1, and M'Kechnie v. Couper, supra, the persons injured were deaf; unless, however, the other person had notice of their infirmity no extra precaution would be required.

(o) Thrussell v. Handyside (1888), 20 Q. B. D. 359; The Andalusian (1877), 2 P. D. 231 (launch of a vessel in a crowded river); and as to persons injured on a level crossing, see Rogers v. Rhymney Rail. Co. (1872), 26 L. T. 879; and see pp. 377, 424, note (d), post.

(p) Chadwick v. Trower (1839), 6 Bing. (N. C.) 1; Daniel v. Metropolitan Rail. Co. (Directors etc.) (1871), L. R. 5 H. L. 45. Where there is a statutory duty to maintain premises in a certain condition, neglect to ascertain whether they were in that condition, when the means of knowing it existed, is equivalent to actual knowledge that they were not in that condition (Mersey Docks Trustees v. Gibbs (1866), L. R. 1 H. L. 93); and see title NUISANCE, p. 518, post. As to extra care required in relation to animals known to be dangerous, see title ANIMALS, Vol. I., pp. 372 et seq.; and see p. 405, post.

(q) McDowall v. Great Western Railway, [1903] 2 K. B. 331, C. A.; Ross v. Fedden (1872), L. R. 7 Q. B. 661; Cornman v. Eastern Counties Rail. Co.

640. Every person must be taken to know that children are likely to meddle with what comes within their reach, and this knowledge may impose a relatively higher degree of duty to take care on anyone who leaves that which may be dangerous (r), if meddled with, in a place where it is probable that children will reach it, than if there was no such probability (s). In determining whether a higher degree of care is so imposed it is material to consider whether the place is one which children do frequent or are entitled and likely to frequent (t), the purpose for which they frequent it, the age of, and means of control over, the children who do or may be expected to frequent it, and the extent to which that which is left is calculated to attract children to meddle with it (u). Where a child is injured owing to the neglect to take the higher degree of care so required it is no answer to say that the injured child himself or some other child caused the injury by his own act in meddling with the dangerous thing, since such meddling is the very thing which should have been guarded against (a). Similarly, where a person of full age does that which will probably afford an inducement or an opportunity for children to run into danger, he is bound to take reasonable precautions to prevent such inducement or opportunity resulting in danger, or to guard against the consequences (b).

SECT. 2.
Standard
and Degree
of Care
Ordinarily
Required.

Increase of degree of care in relation to acts by children.

Injury contributed to by act of child.

(1859), 4 H. & N. 781, per BRAMWELL, B., at p. 786; Bailey v. Neal (1888), 5 T. L. R. 20 (roller left securely tied); M'Gregor v. Ross and Marshall (1883), 10 R. (Ct. of Sess.) 725. As to the statutory duties imposed in respect of the employment of children generally, see title INFANTS AND CHILDREN, Vol. XVII., pp. 150 et seq.

(r) As to what is to be considered capable of being "dangerous" for this purpose, see Duff v. National Telephone Co., Ltd. (1889), 26 Sc. L. R. 512 (barrow left chained to wall in lane; held to be not within the rule).

(s) Cormack v. Wick and Pulteneytown School Board (1889), 16 R. (Ct. of Sess.) 812; Cooke v. Midland Great Western Railway of Ireland, [1909] A. C. 229; compare Lowery v. Walker, [1911] A. C. 10, reversing S. C., [1910] 1 K. B. 173, C. A., on the facts as found by the county court judge; see Lay v. Midland Rail. Co. (1875), 34 L. T. 30. Compare with these cases the following cases in which it was considered that there was no obligation on the owner of property to keep his property free from peril to young children by taking elaborate precautions:—Holland v. Lanarkshire Middle Ward District Committee, [1909] S. C. 1142; Royan v. M'Lellans (1889), 27 Sc. L. R. 79; Duff v. National Telephone Co., Ltd. (1889), 26 Sc. L. R. 512; Jenkins v. Great Western Railway, [1912] 1 K. B. 525, C. A.

(t) Angus v. Findlay (1887), 24 Sc. L. R. 237 (waste ground); Cummings v. Darnagill Coal Co. (1903), 40 Sc. L. R. 389 (owner of waste ground, open through failure of road authority to fence; held not liable); Morris v. Carnarvon County Council, [1910] 1 K. B. 159, 164 (school); Jackson v. London County Council (1911), 28 T. L. R. 66 (school), affirmed (1912), 56 Sol. Jo. 428, C. A.; and as to schools, see title EDUCATION, Vol. XII., pp. 33 et seq.

(u) Jewson v. Gatti (1886), 2 T. L. R. 441 (cellar flap left open while painting going on inside); Harrold v. Watney, [1898] 2 Q. B. 320, C. A. (rotten fence near highway), and see note (s), supra; but where the place is rendered dangerous by the act of a trespasser the occupier is not as a rule liable (Barker v. Herbert, [1911] 2 K. B. 633, C. A.).

(a) King v. Ford (1816), 1 Stark. 421; compare Williams v. Eady (1893), 10 T. L. R. 41; see Lynch v. Nurdin (1841), 1 Q. B. 29; Martin v. Wards (1887), 24 Sc. L. R. 557; Smith v. Martin and Kingston-upon-Hull Corporation, [1911] 2 K. B. 775, C. A. As to children trespassing, see p. 394, post.

(b) Robinson v. Smith (W. H.) & Son (1901), 17 T. L. R. 423, C. A.;

SECT. 2.

Standard
and Degree
of Care
Ordinarily Required.Gratuitous agent, not professing skill.Act involving skill.SUB-SECT. 6.—Gratuitous Services.

641. Where a person, not professing to be skilled in the particular matter (c), undertakes to do an act for another, without reward, he is only bound to exercise honestly that care which he, as an ordinarily prudent man, would exercise if acting for himself (d). He is not to be held liable for a mistake, or for an error of judgment, which a reasonably prudent man might commit (e), or for mere non-success (f).

Where a person skilled in a particular matter gratuitously undertakes to do something involving the exercise of skill, he must do it to the best of his skill, which must be such as a person skilled in such matters may reasonably be expected to possess (g).

642. No one, whether skilled or not, who undertakes to render services or to do certain acts gratuitously, is bound to render those services or to do those acts (h); but if he does render or do them, he is under a liability, should he be guilty of negligence in rendering them or in doing that which he has undertaken to do (i).

Such a person, too, must abide by the terms of his undertaking (k);

When liability attaches.

Shrimpton v. Hertfordshire County Council (1911), 104 L. T. 145, H. L. As to cases between master and servant, see title MASTER AND SERVANT, Vol. XX., p. 131; and, as to the employment of children in dangerous performances, see title INFANTS AND CHILDREN, Vol. XVII., pp. 153, 154.

(c) See p. 367, ante.

(d) Shiells v. Blackburne (1789), 1 Hy. Bl. 158; see title MEDICINE AND PHARMACY, Vol. XX., p. 331, note (f); Wilkinson v. Coverdale (1793), 1 Esp. 75 (negligence in obtaining a fire policy; see title INSURANCE, Vol. XVII., p. 356); Rae v. Meek (1889), 14 App. Cas. 558; Knox v. Mackinnon (1888), 13 App. Cas. 753; Learoyd v. Whiteley (1887), 12 App. Cas. 727 (trustees gratuitously undertaking trusts; see title TRUSTS AND TRUSTEES); compare Speight v. Gaunt (1883), 9 App. Cas. 1, per Lord BLACKBURN, at p. 17; Moffatt v. Bateman (1869), L. R. 3 P. C. 115 (master driving a servant for the latter's convenience); Giblin v. McMullen (1868), L. R. 2 P. C. 317 (bank gratuitous bailee of plaintiff's debentures); Bullen v. Swan Electric Engraving Co. (1907), 23 T. L. R. 258, C. A. (gratuitous bailees); and see titles AGENCY, Vol. I., p. 185; BAILMENT, Vol. I., pp. 531—534, 540—543.

(e) Shiells v. Blackburne, supra; Coggs v. Bernard (1703), 1 Salk. 26; 1 Smith, L. C., 11th ed. 173; compare Beal v. South Devon Rail. Co. (1864), 3 H. & C. 337, Ex. Ch., per CROMPTON, J., at pp. 341, 342; Doorman v. Jenkins (1854), 2 Ad. & El. 256; Scholes v. Brook (1891), 63 L. T. 837.

(f) Dartnall v. Howard (1825), 4 B. & C. 345 (failure to obtain a sufficient security for money).

(g) Wilson v. Brett (1843), 11 M. & W. 113 (a person skilled in horse management undertook, gratuitously, to ride a horse in order to exhibit him at a sale; owing to some want of care the horse slipped, fell and was injured); Shiells v. Blackburne, supra. A person may be held to be skilled if he either expressly or impliedly so represents himself (Whitehead v. Greetham (1825), 2 Bing. 464, Ex. Ch.; Donaldson v. Haldane (1840), 7 Cl. & Fin. 762, H. L.; compare The Rhosina (1884), 10 P. D. 24, 29 (harbour master directing, gratuitously, where a vessel was to be beached)).

(h) Coggs v. Bernard, supra; Elsee v. Gatward (1793), 5 Term Rep. 143; Wilkinson v. Coverdale, supra; Balfe v. West (1853), 13 C. B. 466.

(i) Speight v. Gaunt, supra, at p. 17; see Harris v. Perry & Co., [1903] 2 K. B. 219, C. A.; and cases cited in note (h), supra.

(k) Bringloe v. Morrice (1676), 1 Mod. Rep. 210 (where a gratuitous but if services have been gratuitously rendered on some occasions, negligence will not necessarily be inferred from a discontinuance of them on other and distinct occasions (l).

643. A person who gratuitously lends a chattel to another for a particular use, such as a crane for lifting heavy goods (m), is bound to communicate any defects existing in that chattel which are known to him (n) and are relevant to the use to which it is to be put.

644. There is the same duty to take care owed to a person who gives his services gratuitously as would in the like circumstances be owed to an ordinary employee (o).•

SECT. 2.
Standard
and Degree
of Care
Ordinarily Required.

Duty in respect of loan of chattel.

Duty to gratuitous
agent.

SECT. 3.—Malfeasance, Misfeasance, and Nonfeasance.

SUB-SECT. 1.—Malfeasance.

645. The term “malfeasance” indicates the commission of some unlawful act (p), and is usually applied to those unlawful acts, such as trespass, which are actionable per se and do not require express proof of negligence or malice to make them so (q). As a general rule, such an act carries with it a responsibility for all the consequences of doing it (r).

Act unlawful per se.

SUB-SECT. 2.—Misfeasance and Nonfeasance.

646. The term “misfeasance” is used to describe the improper performance of some lawful act (s): “nonfeasance” indicates the distinction.

Definition and

bailee of a horse having the personal use of it only, was held liable for injury caused to it by being ridden by his servants); compare Camoy's (Lord) v. Scurr (1840), 9 C. & P. 383; and see title BAILMENT, Vol. I., p. 540.

(l) Loader v. London and India Docks Joint Committee (1891), 8 T. L. R. 5, C. A. (dock owners voluntarily altering mooring ropes of vessels).

(m) Blakemore v. Bristol and Exeter Rail. Co. (1858), 8 E. & B. 1035; and see title BAILMENT, Vol. I., pp. 550—552.

(n) Coughlin v. Gillison, [1899] 1 Q. B. 145, C. A., approving Blakemore v. Bristol and Exeter Rail. Co., supra; and see note (h), p. 393, post.

(o) See Degg v. Midland Rail. Co. (1857), 1 H. & N. 773, approved in Ruck v. Williams (1858), 3 H. & N. 308; and see note (i), p. 386, post.

(p) Wharton's Law Lexicon, 10th ed.

(q) See title TORT.

(r) Clark v. Chambers (1878), 3 Q. B. D. 327, and the cases there cited by COCKBURN, C.J. In Ellis v. Sheffield Gas Consumers Co. (1853), 2 E. & B. 767, persons who employed an independent contractor to do an unlawful act were held liable for damage resulting from it; compare Hole v. Sittingbourne and Sheerness Rail. Co. (1861), 6 H. & N. 488. In Paterson v. Lindsay (1885), 23 Sc. L. R. 180, blasting operations carried on near to the premises of another were said to be illegal, and a person injured on that other's property recovered damages.

(s) Wharton's Law Lexicon, 10th ed.; compare Newton v. Ellis (1855), 5 E. & B. 115. For instances of misfeasance, see Victoria Corporation v. Patterson, Same v. Lang, [1899] A. C. 615, P. C. (bridge rendered unsafe by the act of defendant's servant); E. v. Great North of England Rail. Co. (1848), 9 Q. B. 315 (cutting through a highway); Henley v. Lyme Regis Corporation (1831), 5 Bing. 91; in error (1832), 3 B. & Ad. 77; Dawson & Co. v. Bingley Urban Council, [1911] 2 K. B. 149, C. A., per VAUGHAN WILLIAMS, L.J., at p. 154. “a public body will be liable if by its acts it

SECT. 3.
Malfeasance, Misfeasance, and Nonfeasance.

Application of the distinction between misfeasance and nonfeasance.

failure or omission to perform some act which there is an obligation to perform (t). Thus it is a misfeasance for a highway authority which has a duty to repair roads to remake a road and open it to the public with a hole in it (a), and a nonfeasance to permit a road to become worn into a hole (b). The distinction has no application to the question of liability when the duty to do or not to do the particular act omitted or improperly performed has been established (c), but the distinction between an injury arising from misfeasance or from mere nonfeasance has a material bearing on the question whether a duty does or does not exist towards the individual injured (d).

Its bearing on negligence is limited to the cases of injury resulting from (1) the omission to do something in the course of gratuitous services, and (2) the non-performance by public bodies of acts authorised by their statutory powers.

alters the normal condition of something which it has a statutory duty to provide or maintain and in consequence some person of a class for whose benefit the statutory duty is imposed is injured." In Shoreditch Borough Council v. Bull (1904), 2 L. G. R. 756, H. L., Lord HALSBURY, L.C., was of opinion that in several cases what had been described as an act of nonfeasance might on consideration by the House of Lords be held to be acts of misfeasance. See, further, title HIGHWAYS, STREETS, AND BRIDGES, Vol. XVI., p. 133.

(t) Boorman v. Brown (1842), 3 Q. B. 511, 525, 526; compare Elsee v. Gatward (1793), 5 Term Rep. 143. In Wharton's Law Lexicon, 10th ed., it is defined as an offence of omission. For instances of nonfeasance in addition to those noted in title HIGHWAYS, STREETS, AND BRIDGES, Vol. XVI., pp. 133 et seq., see R. v. Birmingham and Gloucester Rail. Co. (1843), 3 Q. B. 223 (failing to provide arches in accordance with statutory duties to connect lands severed by the railway line: held, that the company could be indicted); Chapman v. Fylde Waterworks Co., [1894] 2 Q. B. 599, C. A. (defendants having a duty to repair a stop-cock box in a street, held liable to a person injured by its being out of repair); Atkinson v. Newcastle Waterworks Co. (1877), 2 Ex. D. 441, C. A. (failure to supply water at a certain pressure); compare Dawson & Co. v. Bingley Urban Council, [1911] 2 K. B. 149, C. A.; Glossop v. Heston and Isleworth Local Board (1879), 12 Ch. D. 102, C. A. (failure to remedy defective system of drainage); Coe v. Wise (1866), L. R. 1 Q. B. 711, Ex. Ch. (failure to maintain a sluice and a cut in accordance with the duties imposed by a drainage Act).

(a) Smith & Co. v. West Derby Local Board (1878), 3 C. P. D. 423; Newton v. Ellis (1855), 5 E. & B. 115; Pictou Municipality v. Geldert, [1893] A. C. 524, P. C.; Torrance v. Ilford Urban District Council (1909), 25 T. L. R. 355, C. A.

(b) Thompson v. Brighton Corporation, Oliver v. Horsham Local Board, [1894] 1 Q. B. 332, C. A.; Gibson v. Preston Corporation (1870), L. R. 5 Q. B. 218; compare Winslowe v. Bushey Urban District Council (1908), 72 J. P. 259, C. A.

(c) Boorman v. Brown, supra; Brabant & Co. v. King, [1895] A. C. 632, P. C.; McClelland v. Manchester Corporation, [1912] 1 K. B. 118; Queen v. Tyler and International Commercial Co., [1891] 2 Q. B. 588, C. A. (where it was said that if the breach of duty—whether a misfeasance or a nonfeasance—is punishable on indictment in the case of a private person, a corporation guilty of that breach cannot escape); compare R. v. Birmingham and Gloucester Rail. Co. (1843), 3 Q. B. 223; R. v. Great North of England Rail. Co. (1846), 9 Q. B. 315; and see title TORT.

(d) See cases cited in note (b), supra.

Nonfeasance of a gratuitous undertaking does not impose liability, misfeasance, on the contrary, does (e).

The failure to exercise statutory powers or to perform statutory duties only renders the body having such powers or duties liable to a civil action if the statute intended to give a right of action to a person injured by such failure (f). Thus it is not given in the case of a sanitary authority for failing to remedy a defective system of drainage which it was under a statutory duty to do (g); nor, in the case of a water company, does the fact that penalties are imposed for the breach of a duty directed by statute, for example, that of furnishing a sufficient supply of water for public purposes at a particular pressure, enable a person injured by the failure to supply water to recover damages (h). On the other hand, where a duty, imposed, but not sanctioned by a penalty, to indicate the position of fire-plugs in the street by marks on buildings near, was carried out by placing such a mark so as to indicate incorrectly the position of a fire-plug, the defendant was held liable (i). Similarly, a waterworks company, placed under a statutory duty to repair stop-cock boxes put by it in the street, which failed to perform that duty, was held liable for injury caused in consequence (k); so, too, a drainage Act directing the maintenance of certain works (l) and a statute directing the safe maintenance of lighthouses and buoys in a harbour (m), and the Railways Clauses Consolidation Act, 1845 (n), by which the duty to maintain a proper gate at a level

SECT. 3.

Malfeasance, Misfeasance, and Nonfeasance.

In relation to
(i.) gratuitous undertakings;
(ii.) failure to exercise statutory powers or to perform statutory duties.

(e) Else v. Gatward (1793), 5 Term Rep. 143; and see pp. 374, 375, ante.

(f) Maguire v. Liverpool Corporation, [1905] 1 K. B. 767, C. A.; see Saunders v. Holborn District Board of Works, [1895] 1 Q. B. 64; Cowley v. Newmarket Local Board, [1892] A. C. 345; Pictou Municipality v. Geldert, [1893] A. C. 524, P. C.; compare Gibraltar Sanitary Commissioners v. Orfila (1890), 15 App. Cas. 400, P. C.; and see p. 422, post, and title TORT.

(g) Glossop v. Heston and Isleworth Local Board (1879), 12 Ch. D. 102, C. A.; compare Yorkshire West Riding Council v. Holmfirth Urban Sanitary Authority, [1894] 2 Q. B. 842, C. A.

(h) Atkinson v. Newcastle Waterworks Co. (1877), 2 Ex. D. 441, C. A.; and see p. 423, post.

(i) Dawson & Co. v. Bingley Urban Council, [1911] 2 K. B. 149, C. A., reversing S. C. (1910), 27 T. L. R. 46.

(k) Chapman v. Fylde Waterworks Co., [1894] 2 Q. B. 599, C. A.; Osborn v. Metropolitan Water Board (1910), 102 L. T. 217; compare Rosenbaum v. Metropolitan Water Board (1910), 103 L. T. 284, 739, C. A. (where doubt was thrown on the decision in the last-named case), and Batt v. Metropolitan Water Board, [1911] 2 K. B. 965, C. A. (where it was held that the liability in that case was on the consumer and not on the Board, and that Chapman v. Fylde Waterworks Co., supra, no longer applied to the Metropolitan, since the consumer there had been given a power to repair communication pipes in the street).

(l) Coe v. Wise (1866), L. R. 1 Q. B. 711, Ex. Ch. In Henley v. Lyme Corporation (1828), 5 Bing. 91, and Lyme Regis Corporation v. Henley (1832), 3 B. & Ad. 77, the defendants' charter imposed the duty of maintaining sea-walls, and an action lay at the suit of a person injured by nonfeasance of this duty.

(m) Gilbert v. Trinity House Corporation (1886), 17 Q. B. D. 795; compare Mersey Docks Trustees v. Gibbs (1866), L. R. 1 H. L. 93; and see p. 416, post, and title WATERS AND WATERCOURSES.

(n) 8 & 9 Vict. c. 20, s. 61; see titles BOUNDARIES, FENCES, AND PARTY WALLS, Vol. III., p. 131; RAILWAYS AND CANALS.

SECT. 3.
Malfeasance, Misfeasance, and Nonfeasance.

Wrongful exercise of statutory powers.

Liability only attaches to negligence as an effective cause.

When negligence is the effective cause.

crossing is imposed (o), have been held to contemplate a right of action to persons injured by the failure to carry out those duties.

The wrongful exercise of statutory powers or the negligent performance of statutory duties carries with it liability if injury results (p).

SECT. 4.—Effective Cause.

647. Although a plaintiff may be able to trace even a consequential connection between an injury he has suffered and the negligent act or omission of another, the law does not necessarily attach liability to the person who has been negligent (q). Liability only attaches to negligence which is either the sole effective cause of the injury complained of (r), or is so connected with it as to be a cause materially contributing thereto (s).

648. Negligence is the effective cause of an injury when it has in fact brought about that injury as a direct (t) and natural (a) consequence. When negligence has been established, liability follows

(o) Parkinson v. Garstang and Knott End Railway, [1910] 1 K. B. 615.

(p) Hammond v. St. Pancras Vestry (1874), L. R. 9 C. P. 316; Victoria Corporation v. Patterson, Same v. Lang, [1899] A. C. 615, P. C.; Lambert v. Lowestoft Corporation, [1901] 1 K. B. 590; and see p. 422, post.

(q) Walker v. Goe (1859), 4 H. & N. 350; The Douglas (1882), 7 P. D. 151, C. A.; Cobb v. Great Western Rail. Co., [1894] A. C. 419; compare Glover v. London and South Western Rail. Co. (1867), L. R. 3 Q. B. 25.

(r) E.g., Romney Marsh (Lords Bailiff-Jurats) v. Trinity House Corporation (1872), L. R. 7 Exch. 247, Ex. Ch.; Carlisle and Cumberland Banking Co. v. Bragg, [1911] 1 K. B. 489, C. A. In Metropolitan Rail. Co. v. Jackson (1877), 3 App. Cas. 193, at p. 210, Lord BLACKBURN quotes Lord BACON's maxim: "It were infinite for the law to consider the causes of causes and their impulsion one of another."

(s) Jackson v. Metropolitan Rail. Co. (1877), 2 C. P. D. 125, 145, C. A.; reversed on the question of evidence, sub nom. Metropolitan Rail. Co. v. Jackson (1877), 3 App. Cas. 193, 198, 212.

(t) Thus while the driver's leaving a van has been held to be the direct cause of an accident due to the attempt by the van boy to drive the van (Engelhart v. Farrant & Co., [1897] 1 Q. B. 240, C. A.), negligence in the custody of a seal has been held not to be the direct cause of a secretary securing money by forged deeds (Bank of Ireland (Governor & Co.) v. Evans' Charities in Ireland (Trustees) (1855), 5 H. L. Cas. 389); see also Gee v. Metropolitan Rail. Co. (1873), L. R. 8 Q. B. 161, Ex. Ch. (improper fastening of railway carriage doors); Adams v. Lancashire and Yorkshire Rail. Co. (1869), L. R. 4 C. P. 739; Metropolitan Rail. Co. v. Jackson, supra; Cobb v. Great Western Rail. Co., supra (overcrowding of railway carriages), commenting upon Merchants of the Staple of England (Mayor etc.) v. Bank of England (Governor and Co.) (1887), 21 Q. B. D. 160, C. A.; Pounder v. North Eastern Rail. Co., [1892] 1 Q. B. 385; Re United Service Co., Johnston's Claim (1871), 6 Ch. App. 212 (no connection between bank's negligence and costs of litigation between client and other parties).

(a) Thus it is a natural consequence of frightening cattle that they should wildly rush to their own destruction (Sneesby v. Lancashire and Yorkshire Rail. Co. (1875), 1 Q. B. D. 42, C. A.), while it is not a natural consequence of negligently washing a van in the street that the water should freeze and become dangerous owing to a defective drain (Sharp v. Powell (1872), L. R. 7 C. P. 253); see Pearson v. Cox (1877), 2 C. P. D. 369, C. A.; Walworth v. Barton (1859), 8 W. R. 190; Scott's Trustees v. Moss (1889), 27 Sc. L. R. 30; Robinson v. Reid's Trustees (1900), 37 Sc. L. R. 718;

for all the consequences which are in fact the direct and natural outcome of it (b), whether the injury is a consequence that was foreseen or not (c).

A negligent act may be the effective cause of an injury though it be not proximate in time (d), if it is the particular incident in a chain of events which has in fact led to the injury (e), that is, if it is the real cause of a subsequent accident (f); and where an original negligent act has placed another in such a position that, while conducting himself as a reasonable and prudent man would under the difficulties so brought upon him, he in fact makes a mistake, the original negligent act still is the cause of the consequent injury (g). But the mere fact that a careless act is in the same chain of events as an accident does not entail liability unless

SECT. 4.
Effective Cause.

Act not necessarily proximate in time.
Negligent act followed by plaintiff's mistake.

compare examples in Lord HALSBURY's judgment in Brintons, Ltd. v. Turvey, [1905] A. C. 230, 233 (a case under the Workmen's Compensation Act, 1897 (60 & 61 Vict. c. 37); see title MASTER AND SERVANT, Vol. XX., p. 162).

(b) Other examples of the general proposition than those cited in notes (t) and (a), p. 378, ante, are Holbach v. Warner (1623), Cro. Jac. 665; Rooth v. Wilson (1817), 1 B. & Ald. 59; Powell v. Salisbury (1828), 2 Y. & J. 391; Lee v. Riley (1865), 18 C. B. (N. S.) 722 (all of which cases deal with injuries to horses, in which the proximate cause was the neglect of proper fencing); see title BOUNDARIES, FENCES, AND PARTY WALLS, Vol. III., p. 131.

(c) Smith v. London and South Western Rail. Co. (1870), L. R. 6 C. P. 14, Ex. Ch. (where the leaving of dried grass near the railway line was the proximate cause of the burning of a cottage a considerable distance away), in which case a dictum in Blyth v. Birmingham Waterworks Co. (1856), 11 Exch. 781, of BRAMWELL, B., at p. 785, is explained in the sense of the text, supra; O'Gorman v. O'Gorman, [1903] 2 I. R. 573 (plaintiff thrown from his horse which had been stung by defendant's bees).

(d) Romney Marsh (Lords Bailiff-Jurats) v. Trinity House Corporation (1872), L. R. 7 Exch. 247, Ex. Ch. (a grounded vessel eventually driven against and damaging a sea-wall); Davis v. Garrett (1830), 6 Bing. 716 (where a vessel while deviating from its course was run ashore to loss and damage of cargo); Sneesby v. Lancashire and Yorkshire Rail. Co. (1875), 1 Q. B. D. 42, C. A.; compare M'Intyre v. Gallagher (1883), 21 Sc. L. R. 58. Particular importance attaches to the statement in the text, supra, that an effective cause need not be proximate in point of time, owing to the fact that the distinction between that which is and that which is not to be considered a cause is often stated as a distinction between that which is proximate and that which is remote: Causa proxima non remota spectatur. The word "proxima" here, or the words "immediate" or "direct," which are sometimes used, must be taken as equivalent to the contrary of remota, and as meaning without the intervention of some other fact which breaks the sequence from the alleged cause to the effect. See, further, titles SHIPPING AND NAVIGATION; TORT.

(e) See cases cited in note (d), supra; Smith v. London and South Western Rail. Co., supra; Gilbertson v. Richardson (1848), 5 C. B. 502 (a carriage collision); Hill v. New River Co. (1868), 9 B. & S. 303 (horses, frightened by wrongful act, falling into an excavation); Harris v. Mobbs (1878), 3 Ex. D. 268 (horse frightened by an obstruction); Halestrap v. Gregory, [1895] 1 Q. B. 561 (where a mare which strayed on to a cricket field was driven back by the players and having tried to jump the fence was injured: the effective cause of the injury was the negligence in leaving open the gate through which she strayed).

(f) Peterson v. Blackburn Corporation (1892), 9 T. L. R. 55, C. A.

(g) The George and Richard (1871), L. R. 3 A. & E. 466; The City of Lincoln (1889), 15 P. D. 15, C. A.; compare Scott v. Shepherd (1773), 3 Wils. 403;

SECT. 4.
Effective
Cause.

the act has in fact brought about the accident (h): it may be the plaintiff's own negligence which is the real cause of his injury (i). Although in fact negligence has caused an accident, there may possibly be a good defence if it can be established that the plaintiff's injury must necessarily have happened with or without the defendant's negligence (k), but it will not avail to prove that the injury might have happened without the defendant's negligence (l). Provided the defendant's default is actively continuing, it may, and if the accident would otherwise not have happened, it will, still be the effective cause of injury (m).

Act or intervention
of third party.

649. So long as there is a direct chain of causation between a negligent act and an injury, primâ facie he who is guilty of the negligent act is responsible (n), and he cannot shelter himself behind the negligence of a third party (o); but such an intervention may in some circumstances remove from an act of negligence its responsibility for a consequent injury. What has been called the conscious act of another volition (p) may remove liability from one who has

1. Smith, L. C., 11th ed., 454; Romney Marsh (Lords Bailiff-Jurats) v. Trinity House Corporation (1872), L. R. 7 Exch. 247, Ex. Ch.

(h) Bartlett v. Baker (1864), 3 H. & C. 153 (obstruction left in navigable river had, at the time of the accident, been so altered by a new owner that it was not the defendant's negligence that was the effective or proximate cause); The Douglas (1882), 7 P. D. 151, C. A. (where an abandoned wreck did the damage, but quite apart from the defendant's negligence); compare Milne v. Smith (1814), 2 Dow, 390, H. L. In Walker v. Goë (1859), 4 H. & N. 350, Ex. Ch., the defendant's negligence (namely, not giving notice of necessary repairs to property) was a continuing default, but was not the effective cause of the injury. See also Holmes v. Mather (1875), L. R. 10 Exch. 261; Spaight v. Tedcastle (1881), 6 App. Cas. 217; Jones v. Lee (1911), 28 T. L. R. 92 (horse straying on highway); Ellis v. Banyard (1912), 28 T. L. R. 122, C. A.

(i) Flower v. Adam (1810), 2 Taunt. 314; The George and Richard (1871), L. R. 3 A. & E. 466; Walker v. Midland Rail. Co. (1886), 2 T. L. R. 450, H. L.; compare Barker v. Herbert, [1911] 2 K. B. 633, C. A.; and see pp. 445 et seq., post.

(k) Davis v. Garrett (1830), 6 Bing. 716.

(l) Ibid., per TINDAL, C.J., at p. 724.

(m) Ibid.; Sneesby v. Lancashire and Yorkshire Rail. Co. (1875), 1 Q. B. D. 42, C. A.; compare Marshall v. Caledonian Rail. Co. (1899), 36 Sc. L. R. 845; Hill v. New River Co. (1868), 9 B. & S. 303.

(n) Shoreditch Borough Council v. Bull (1904), 2 L. G. R. 756, H. L.; see especially the judgment of COLLINS, M.R., in S. C., 19 T. L. R. 64, C. A., the reasoning of which was approved by Lord HALSBURY, L.C., in the House of Lords, in 2 L. G. R., at p. 759; compare Dawson & Co. v. Bingley Urban Council, [1911] 2 K. B. 149, C. A.

(o) Rigby v. Hewitt (1850), 5 Exch. 240; Clark v. Chambers (1878), 3 Q. B. D. 327 (where responsibility for having placed a dangerous obstruction in a road was not removed from defendant although the danger had been increased by a stranger). Where the evidence points only to negligence by a third party, the defendant is not liable (Latch v. Rumner Rail. Co. (1858), 27 L. J. (EX.) 155).

(p) McDowall v. Great Western Railway, [1903] 2 K. B. 331, C. A.; compare dictum of WILLES, J., in R. v. Marquess (1864), 4 F. & F. 356, at p. 359; Dominion Natural Gas Co., Ltd. v. Collins and Perkins, [1909] A. C. 640, 647, P. C.; "for against such conscious act of volition no precaution can really avail." The difference between such a conscious act and a negligent act is illustrated in the judgment of the court in

SECT. 4.
Effective
Cause.

been previously negligent if it is proved that in fact that conscious act was the real cause which brought the injury about (q), but not if it is left in doubt whether such conscious act was the real cause or not, nor if such a conscious act was one of the possible events which there was a duty on the part of the negligent person to guard against (r). The intervention of another does not avoid the liability for a negligent act when the negligent act has placed that other in such a position that he could only reasonably have acted in the way in which he did act (s); and, so long as the consequence complained of is the natural and direct outcome of the original negligence, the interference of another, however wrongfully (t), or even criminally (u), the latter may have acted, does not affect the liability (a).

Sullivan v. Creed, [1904] 2 I. R. 317, 356, C. A., in which a loaded gun having been negligently left about, the man who so left it was held liable for an accident caused by the trigger being pulled even by another's carelessness, but would not have been held liable if the trigger had been deliberately pulled by another.

(q) Compare R. v. Ledger (1862), 2 F. & F. 857, 858, n.

(r) Lynch v. Nurdin (1841), 1 Q. B. 29; Illidge v. Goodwin (1831), 5 C. & P. 190; Hughes v. Macfie, Abbott v. Macfie (1863), 2 H. & C. 744; Harrison v. Great Northern Rail. Co. (1864), 3 H. & C. 231; Hill v. New River Co. (1868), 9 B. & S. 303; Burrows v. March Gas and Coke Co. (1872), L. R. 7 Exch. 96, Ex. Ch.; Collins v. Middle Level Commissioners (1869), L. R. 4 C. P. 279; Daniel v. Metropolitan Rail. Co. (Directors etc.) (1871), L. R. 5 H. L. 45; Clark v. Chambers (1878), 3 Q. B. D. 327; Engelhart v. Farrant & Co., [1897] 1 Q. B. 240, C. A.; Bull v. Shoreditch Corporation (1902), 19 T. L. R. 64, C. A.; De la Bere v. Pearson, Ltd., [1907] 1 K. B. 483; affirmed, [1908] 1 K. B. 280, C. A.; Baker v. Snell, [1908] 2 K. B. 352; compare Daniels v. Potter (1830), 4 C. & P. 262; Sharp v. Powell (1872), L. R. 7 C. P. 253; McDowall v. Great Western Railway, [1903] 2 K. B. 331, C. A.

(s) Scott v. Shepherd (1773), 3 Wils. 403; Clark v. Chambers, supra.

(t) Harrison v. Great Northern Rail. Co., supra (the defective banking of a cut still the proximate cause, although the wrongful act of a third party caused a wholly unexpected rush of water); compare Engelhart v. Farrant & Co., supra; and distinguish Ely Brewery Co. v. Pontypridd Urban District Council (1903), 68 J. P. 3, C. A.; Box v. Jubb (1879), 4 Ex. D. 76 (cases in which the wrongful acts of third parties, and their acts only, were to blame for plaintiff's injuries); see also Murphy v. Great Northern Rail. Co., [1897] 2 I. R. 301; Barker v. Herbert, [1911] 2 K. B. 633, 646, 647, C. A. (a case of nuisance).

(u) De la Bere v. Pearson, Ltd., supra (where negligence in recommending a stockbroker resulted in the plaintiff being swindled), distinguishing Baxendale v. Bennett (1878), 3 Q. B. D. 525, C. A. (in which case defendant's negligence was not the proximate cause); Marshall v. Caledonian Rail. Co. (1899), 36 Sc. L. R. 845 (where defendants' negligence led to a robbery).

(a) Collins v. Middle Level Commissioners, supra (damage caused by defective banking of a cut which remained the effective cause, although a third party had interfered with precautions that the plaintiff had taken to protect himself); Paterson v. Blackburn Corporation (1892), 9 T. L. R. 55, C. A. (defendants in removing a gas-meter left a projecting pipe which a third party broke, making defendants responsible for the explosion that occurred); Illidge v. Goodwin, supra (unattended horse and cart interfered with by a third person); Byrne v. Wilson (1862), 15 I. C. L. R. 332 (a person upset out of a vehicle into a lock and drowned by the action of the lock-keeper); compare Ellerman Lines, Ltd. v. Clyde Navigation Trustees (1910), 48 Sc. L. R. 44.

SECT. 4.

Effective Cause.

Act of two or more parties.

An accident may have been brought about by the negligence of two or more parties. In such case, if all are equally to blame, they are all equally liable, and, except in Admiralty cases (b), any of them can be made wholly to compensate the plaintiff (c). The negligence of each party is equally an effective cause, and without each one's negligence the accident would not have happened (d).

Part II.—Negligence in Regard to Property.

SECT. 1.—In Regard to Particular Parties.

SUB-SECT. 1.—General Observations.

General right and duty of owner and occupier.

650. The owner or occupier of land or buildings (e) has a right to use it or them in the natural and ordinary course unless in so doing he interferes with some right recognised by law or arising from contract (f). Such interference may be a nuisance (g), a trespass (h), an interference with an easement (i), a breach of contract (k), or it may be a negligent user of the property resulting in injury to a person to whom a duty to take care is owed.

Liability of owner to tenant.

651. As between the owner of premises and his tenant, apart from some special agreement, an owner who lets premises in a dangerous condition and who is under no obligation to repair, is not liable for injuries, sustained either by the tenant, his family, his servants, guests, or customers, which are due to the defective condition of the premises (l). Even where he has contracted to do the

(b) In these cases there may be a contribution between the guilty parties; see title SHIPPING AND NAVIGATION; and, for the rule as to division of loss, see Maritime Conventions Act, 1911 (1 & 2 Geo. 5, c. 57), s. 1; The Rosalia, [1912] P. 109. But the common law rule applies except in a case of collision between two ships which are both at fault (The Seacombe, The Devonshire, [1912] P. 21, C. A.).

(c) Rigby v. Hewitt (1850), 5 Exch. 240; Greenland v. Chaplin (1850), 5 Exch. 243; Burrows v. March Gas Co. (1870), L. R. 5 Exch. 67; Devlin v. Belfast Corporation, [1907] 2 L. R. 437, C. A.; compare Smith v. Dobson (1841), 3 Man. & G. 59.

(d) Devlin v. Belfast Corporation, supra.

(e) In Reedie v. London and North Western Rail. Co., Hobbit v. Same (1849), 4 Exch. 244, it was said that there was no distinction between injuries from the careless management of an animal or other personal chattel and those resulting from the negligent management of fixed real property. It is, however, more convenient to deal with them separately. As to liability for injuries of the former nature, see p. 405, post.

(f) Wilson v. Waddell (1877), 2 App. Cas. 95; Quarman v. Burnett (1840), 6 M. & W. 499, 510; Rylands v. Fletcher (1868), L. R. 3 H. L. 330; compare Nichols v. Marstrand (1876), 2 Ex. D. 1, C. A.; Thomas v. Birmingham Canal Co. (1879), 49 L. J. (Q. B.) 851.

(g) See Robbins v. Jones (1863), 15 C. B. (N. S.) 221; St. Helens Smelting Co. v. Tipping (1865), 11 H. L. Cas. 642; title NUISANCE, pp. 524 et seq., post.

(h) See title TRESPASS.

(i) See title EASEMENTS AND PROFITS À PRENDRE, Vol. XI., p. 330.

(k) See title LANDLORD AND TENANT, Vol. XVIII., pp. 501 et seq.

(l) Cavalier v. Pope, [1906] A. C. 428, approving Robbins v. Jones, supra; Norris v. Calmur (1885), Cab. & El. 576; Hart v. Windsor (1843), 12 M. & W. 68; Keates v. Cadogan (Earl) (1851), 10 C. B. 591; see Malone repairs he is not liable to any person other than the tenant for any injury (m) unless he has retained control over that part of the premises where the accident occurred (n). Where there is a contract to repair and the tenant is injured because of the landlord's neglect to perform it, the tenant's remedy is upon the contract (o), and even then the landlord is not liable if he was ignorant of the defect complained of (p), or if the tenant knew of the danger and elected to run the risk (q).

SECT. 1.
In Regard to Particular
Parties.

Contractual
liability.

v. Laskey, [1907] 2 K. B. 141, C. A.; compare Kennedy v. Bruce, [1907] S. C. 845, where Cavalier v. Pope, [1906] A. C. 428, was distinguished, apparently because of the difference between English and Scottish law. Under the Housing of the Working Classes Act, 1890 (53 & 54 Vict. c. 70), s. 75, the Housing of the Working Classes Act, 1903 (3 Edw. 7, c. 39), s. 12, and the Housing, Town Planning, etc. Act, 1909 (9 Edw. 7, c. 44), s. 14, a landlord of premises who lets a house or part of a house for habitation by persons of the working class is subject to the implied condition that, at the commencement of the holding, the house is in all respects reasonably fit for human habitation; see title LANDLORD AND TENANT, Vol. XVIII., pp. 503, 504. A similar provision in the now repealed Housing of the Working Classes Act, 1885 (48 & 49 Vict. c. 72), s. 12, was held to entitle a tenant to recover from the landlord in respect of injuries sustained by his wife in consequence of the defective state of repair of the premises (Walker v. Hobbs & Co. (1889), 23 Q. B. D. 458; see title PUBLIC HEALTH AND LOCAL ADMINISTRATION). Where a landlord lets premises furnished, or partly furnished, a term is implied that the house or furniture is fit for the purpose for which it was to be used (Smith v. Marrable (1843), 11 M. & W. 5; Wilson v. Finch Hatton (1877), 2 Ex. D. 336; but see Hart v. Windsor (1843), 12 M. & W. 68, 86, 87; and see title LANDLORD AND TENANT, Vol. XVIII., p. 569; see also title BAILMENT, Vol. I., p. 550), but not that it remains so during the term (Sarson v. Roberts, [1895] 2 Q. B. 395, C. A.), and no such term is implied in ordinary leases of houses, lands or warehouses (Manchester Bonded Warehouse Co. v. Carr (1880), 5 C. P. D. 507; see title LANDLORD AND TENANT, Vol. XVIII., p. 481); where land is let for pasturing cattle there is no implied condition that it shall be reasonably fit for that purpose (Sutton v. Temple (1843), 12 M. & W. 52; Hart v. Windsor, supra; see title LANDLORD AND TENANT, Vol. XVIII., pp. 481, 501). As to liability for a nuisance begun before and continued during a tenancy, see Rosewell v. Prior (1702), 2 Salk. 460; Thomson v. Gibson (1841), 7 M. & W. 456; and see title NUISANCE, pp. 531, 533, 555, 556, 560, post.

(m) Thus in Cavalier v. Pope, supra, and Cameron v. Young, [1908] A. C. 176, the plaintiffs were held to be not entitled to recover on the ground that they were strangers to the contract. In Malone v. Laskey, [1907] 2 K. B. 141, C. A., there was a similar decision in the case of a licensee of the tenant where the landlord, not being under any covenant to repair, voluntarily did repairs, the execution of which was found to be negligent. As to the duty to licensees, see, further, p. 391, post.

(n) Miller v. Hancock, [1893] 2 Q. B. 177, C. A.; M'Manus v. Armour (1901), 38 Sc. L. R. 791; compare Mills v. Temple-West (1885), 1 T. L. R. 503; Huggett v. Miers, [1908] 2 K. B. 278, C. A.; Powell v. Thorndike (1910), 102 L. T. 600; see Hargroves, Aronson & Co. v. Hartopp, [1905] 1 K. B. 472; Grant v. M'Clafferty (1906), 44 Sc. L. R. 179; M'Martin v. Hannay (1872), 10 Macph. (Ct. of Sess.) 411. Such control is prima facie in the tenant or occupier (Russell v. Shenton (1842), 3 Q. B. 449; Hadley v. Taylor (1865), L. R. 1 C. P. 53); and see title LANDLORD AND TENANT, Vol. XVIII., p. 505.

(o) Robbins v. Jones (1863), 15 C. B. (N. S.) 221, per ERLE, C.J., at p. 240; Hart v. Windsor (1843), 12 M. & W. 68.

(p) Tredway v. Machin (1904), 20 T. L. R. 726, C. A.; compare Broggi

(q) For note (q) see next page.

SECT. 1.
In Regard to Particular
Parties.

Liability of owner to stranger.

652. Where a stranger is injured by reason of the defective condition of premises which are let to a tenant, primâ facie the occupier, and not the owner, of the premises is liable (r). The latter, however, may become liable to the stranger in the following ways:—

(1) Where he has undertaken to do the repairs at the premises in question, and for this purpose has a partial control of those premises, and an injury is caused to a passer-by (s).

(2) Where he is guilty of misfeasance (t), and, in consequence of that misfeasance, injury is caused to some person to whom, under the circumstances, a duty to take care is owed by the owner (a). Such a

v. Robins (1899), 15 T. L. R. 224, C. A.; Mathieson's Tutor v. Aikman's Trustees (1909), 47 Sc. L. R. 36; and see title LANDLORD AND TENANT, Vol. XVIII., pp. 505, 512.

(q) Cavalier v. Pope, [1906] A. C. 428; compare Driscoll v. Partick Burgh Commissioners (1900), 37 Sc. L. R. 274.

(r) Cheetham v. Hampson (1791), 4 Term Rep. 318, followed in Russell v. Shenton (1842), 3 Q. B. 449; R. v. Watts (1703), 1 Salk. 357; Payne v. Rogers (1794), 2 Hy. Bl. 349; compare Sly v. Edgley (1806), 6 Esp. 6; Coupland v. Hardingham (1813), 3 Camp. 398; De Boos v. Collard (1892), 8 T. L. R. 338; and see title LANDLORD AND TENANT, Vol. XVIII., p. 504. It is sometimes a doubtful question whether the landlord has resumed possession of the premises; see Jarvis v. Dean (1826), 3 Bing. 447; Page v. Hatchett (1846), 8 Q. B. 187, 593. In Bishop v. Bedford Charity Trustees (1859), 1 E. & E. 697, a child was injured by falling through a grating over an area. The building had been leased by the defendants, and the lessee had sublet the premises in separate holdings, but had retained possession of the area. The lessee became bankrupt, and the defendants called on the sub-tenants to pay rents direct to them, but it was held that the defendants had not by so doing exercised their power of re-entry, and until they did so they were not in occupation of the area, and consequently were not liable. The question of liability where the tenancy is by the week is discussed in Bowen v. Anderson, [1894] 1 Q. B. 164; and see title LANDLORD AND TENANT, Vol. XVIII., pp. 439, note (o), 505, note (c); and see note (l), p. 382, ante.

(s) Cavalier v. Pope, [1905] 2 K. B. 757, C. A., per COLLINS, M.R., at p. 762; Mathieson's Tutor v. Aikman's Trustees, supra; compare Payne v. Rogers, supra; Nelson v. Liverpool Brewery Co. (1877), 2 C. P. D. 311; but see remarks on this case in note (t), infra; and see title LANDLORD AND TENANT, Vol. XVIII., p. 504.

(t) Lane v. Cox, [1897] 1 Q. B. 415, C. A., per Lord ESHER, M.R., at p. 417. In Nelson v. Liverpool Brewery Co., supra, it was stated that liability can be created "in the case of misfeasance by the landlord, as for instance where he lets premises in a ruinous condition." This dictum was unnecessary for the decision of the case and, unqualified, is not in accordance with the earlier authorities, such as Pretty v. Bickmore (1873), L. R. 8 C. P. 401, approved in Gwinnell v. Eamer (1875), L. R. 10 C. P. 658; and with the later cases of Lane v. Cox, supra, and Copp v. Aldridge & Co. (1895), 11 T. L. R. 411; although it is supported to some extent by Todd v. Flight (1860), 9 C. B. (N. S.) 377; Sandford v. Clarke (1888), 21 Q. B. D. 398; Bowen v. Anderson, [1894] 1 Q. B. 164; M'Manus v. Armour (1901), 38 Sc. L. R. 791; and as to cases where misfeasance was alleged to have caused a nuisance, see, further, title NUISANCE, pp. 515, 530, post. As to cases where the injury arises after a change of ownership, from acts done before the change, see Granville v. Low Beechburn Coal Co., [1897] 2 Q. B. 165; Hall v. Norfolk (Duke), [1900] 2 Ch. 493.

(a) Lane v. Cox, supra, per Lord ESHER, M.R., at p. 417.

duty is owed to a neighbouring owner (b) or to a person on the highway adjoining such premises (c).

653. A landlord who lets land for purposes which may involve danger to persons coming on to it will not necessarily escape liability, unless the letting is a bonâ fide contract of tenancy which results in the tenant and not the landlord being in occupation of the premises where the danger is encountered (d).

SECT. 1.
In Regard to Particular
Parties.

Change of occupation.

SUB-SECT. 2.—Duty to Invitees.

654. The term "invitee" (e) is applied to persons (other than mere volunteers (f) or bare licensees (g), guests (h), servants (i), or persons Invitees.

(b) Todd v. Flight (1860), 9 C. B. (N. S.) 377; and see p. 395, post.

(c) Gandy v. Jubber (1864), 5 B. & S. 78 (reversed on another point (1865), 9 B. & S. 15, Ex. Ch.); Bowen v. Anderson, [1894] 1 Q. B. 164; Mills v. Temple-West (1885), 1 T. L. R. 503; and see titles HIGHWAYS, STREETS, AND BRIDGES, Vol. XVI., p. 153; LANDLORD AND TENANT, Vol. XVIII., pp. 504, 505.

(d) Glass v. Paisley Race Committee (1902), 40 Sc. L. R. 17; compare Philips v. Humber (1904), 41 Sc. L. R. 626 (where the duty upon a person letting premises for a shooting gallery was held to be to see that persons resorting to it were not exposed to unusual risks, and that the premises were reasonably safe for use as a shooting gallery). For the consideration of the case in which a landlord or occupier may escape liability by employing an independent contractor, see p. 471, post. As to cases where the landlord lets land for a purpose which in the ordinary course results in a nuisance, see Harris v. James (1876), 45 L. J. (Q. B.) 545; title NUISANCE, pp. 525 et seq., 531, 556, 557, post.

(e) This definition is substantially that given in Indermaur v. Dames (1866), L. R. 1 C. P. 274, by WILLES, J., at p. 288; affirmed (1867), L. R. 2 C. P. 311, Ex. Ch.; compare White v. France (1877), 2 C. P. D. 308. The term is sometimes used as synonymous with "licensee" as distinguished from a "bare" or "mere" licensee; see Holmes v. North Eastern Rail. Co. (1869), L. R. 4 Exch. 254, 258, per CHANNELL, B.; and see note (g), p. 386, post.

(f) A volunteer is a person who, without being under a paid contract of service, associates himself with the servant of another in the performance of that servant's work (Potter v. Faulkner (1861), 1 B. & S. 800, Ex. Ch.), or who puts himself under the control of an employer to act in the capacity of servant (Johnson v. Lindsay & Co., [1891] A. C. 371, 377, disapproving Woodhead v. Gartness Mineral Co. (1877), 4 R. (Ct. of Sess.) 469). He does not cease to be a volunteer by reason of having given assistance at the request of a workman of the employer whose work he has helped at (Potter v. Faulkner, supra; approved in Lunnie v. Glasgow and South Western Rail. Co. (1906), 43 Sc. L. R. 372, following M'Ewan v. Edinburgh and District Tramways Co. (1899), 6 Scots Law Times, 400). A volunteer must, however, be distinguished from a person who, although assisting to do work which is properly the work of the defendants, is at the same time doing so in his own interests, or from one who is on the premises of another, with the latter's consent, engaged in a transaction of common interest to both (Wright v. London and North Western Rail. Co. (1875), L. R. 10 Q. B. 298; affirmed (1876), 1 Q. B. D. 252, C. A., following Holmes v. North Eastern Rail. Co. (1869), L. R. 4 Exch. 254; affirmed (1871), L. R. 6 Exch. 123, Ex. Ch.). Similarly, where the servant of a master gives assistance to the defendant to expedite delivery of his master's goods, he is not a volunteer, the reason being that there is a common interest (Holmes v. North Eastern Rail. Co., supra; Wyllie v. Caledonian Rail. Co. (1871), 9 Macph. (Ct. of Sess.) 463). It has been held

(g), (h), (i) For notes (g), (h), and (i), see next page.

SECT. 1.
In Regard to Particular
Parties.

Invitee distinguished from bare licensee.

whose employment is of such a kind that danger may be taken to have been actually bargained for) who go on to premises upon business which concerns the occupier and upon his invitation, either express (h) or implied (l).

An invitee differs from a bare licensee in that the latter has merely permission to be on the premises and is not there by invitation or on lawful business of interest to both parties (m).

that a passer-by, who was casually appealed to by a workman for information as to which of two mains in a highway was the gas main, and who in order to indicate it got into the trench and was injured, did not become a volunteer (Cleveland v. Spier (1864), 16 C. B. (N. S.) 399). In O'Sullivan v. O'Connor & Son (1887), 22 L. R. Ir. 467, C. A., the plaintiff, after buying some felt, went to the defendant's loft to inspect it, and while assisting the defendant's servant to unroll it, fell from the loft, which was unsafe: held that he was a volunteer or a mere licensee; but semble, the case might have been otherwise if he had been inspecting before purchasing with a view to purchasing. As to the position of a volunteer with regard to the doctrine of common employment, see title MASTER AND SERVANT, Vol. XX., pp. 133, 134; Bass v. Hendon Urban District Council (1912), 28 T. L. R. 317, C. A.

(g) "Bare licensees" or "mere licensees" are persons who have permission to be on premises when, without such permission, they would be trespassers; see, further, p. 391, post. As to a "bare licence" to search for minerals, see title MINES, MINERALS, AND QUARRIES, Vol. XX., p. 568. As to licences to enter upon land, see, further, titles REAL PROPERTY AND CHATELS REAL; TRESPASS.

(h) The term "guest" so used is equivalent to visitor, and applies only to a person who does not pay for the accommodation given. Such a person is a bare licensee with the added disability of being in the same position as a servant (Southcote v. Stanley (1856), 1 H. & N. 247; Swainson v. North Eastern Rail. Co. (1878), 3 Ex. D. 341, 348, C. A.; and see note (t), p. 388, post). For the definition of "guest" at an inn, see title INNS AND INNKEEPERS, Vol. XVII., p. 313. As to negligence arising out of the special relation of innkeeper and guest, see p. 431, post.

(i) As to the position of servants, see title MASTER AND SERVANT, Vol. XX., pp. 102, 120, 138. They are not included in the same category as invitees or licensees at common law; see Priestley v. Fowler (1837), 3 M. & W. 1. The master of the house must not lay traps for either visitors or servants, but he need take no more care of them than he may reasonably be expected to take of himself (Southcote v. Stanley, supra).

(k) E.g., by direct invitation or request, as in Wingfield v. Jenkinson (1884), 1 T. L. R. 102.

(l) For example, by conduct which induces persons having business with the occupier to come on to the premises, or to use the particular way (Gavin v. Arroll & Co. (1889), 26 Sc. L. R. 370; Indermaur v. Dames (1866), L. R. 1 C. P. 274; and see cases cited in note (m), infra).

(m) Smith v. London and St. Katharine Docks Co. (1868), L. R. 3 C. P. 326 (optician taking instruments to ship); White v. France (1877), 2 C. P. D. 308; Chapman v. Rothwell (1858), E. B. & E. 168; Gallagher v. Humphery (1862), 10 W. R. 664; Southcote v. Stanley, supra; Bolch v. Smith (1862), 7 H. & N. 736 (where the respective positions of bare licensees and invitees are discussed). The distinguishing test of "business" has also been applied in Holmes v. North Eastern Rail. Co., supra; King v. Great Western Rail. Co. (1871), 24 L. T. 583 (servant of consignee taking delivery of stone injured by crane provided by defendants for the purpose); Wyllie v. Caledonian Rail. Co. (1871), 9 Macph. (Ct. of Sess.) 463; Wright v. London and North Western Rail. Co. (1875), L. R. 10 Q. B. 298; affirmed (1876), 1 Q. B. D. 252, C. A.; Brady v. Parker (1887), 24 Sc. L. R. 561; compare Nicolson v. Macandrew & Co. (1888), 25 Sc. L. R. 607 (plaintiff went to a place where he had no work to get a tool which had been lent to another man). In Burchell v.

655. The following classes of persons are ordinarily held to be invitees :—

SECT. 1.
In Regard to Particular
Parties.

Customers at shops or offices (n) during business hours (o) ;

Passengers at railway stations (p) or in trains (q) ;

Classification
of invitees.

Hickisson (1880), 50 L. J. (Q. B.) 101, the plaintiff, a child, accompanied his sister who went on business to the defendant's house ; a rail being absent from the railings of the steps, the plaintiff fell through and was hurt : there was no invitation to the plaintiff : semble, if the sister who was on business had fallen through, the defendant would have been liable ; and see Jenkins v. Great Western Railway, [1912] 1 K. B. 525, C. A. Compare also Binks v. South Yorkshire Railway and River Dun Co. (1862), 3 B. & S. 244 (where plaintiff had merely permission to be on defendants' premises) ; Ivay v. Hedges (1882), 9 Q. B. D. 80 (lodgers using roof to dry linen) ; Stiles v. Cardiff Steam Navigation Co. (1864), 10 Jur. (N. S.) 1199 ; Duthie v. Caledonian Rail. Co. (1898), 35 Sc. L. R. 726 ; Elliot v. Hall (1855), 15 Q. B. D. 315 (where defendants knew that trucks of coal would be unloaded by the consignee's servants, who would have to get into the trucks) ; Steer v. St. James's Residential Chambers Co. (1887), 3 T. L. R. 500 (the tenant of chambers let by defendants invited plaintiff to visit him ; the plaintiff fell down a lift well in the occupation of the defendants while on his way to his friend) ; Seymour v. Maddox (1851), 16 Q. B. 326 (chorus singer crossing dark floor to reach the stage) ; compare Weems v. Mathieson (1861), 4 Macq. 215, H. L. ; Redgrave v. Belsey (1897), 13 T. L. R. 484 ; and further, as to duty on a master to provide proper plant for his servant, see title MASTER AND SERVANT, Vol. XX., p. 139. As to the statutory liability to secure safety in factories and workshops, see title FACTORIES AND SHOPS, Vol. XIV., pp. 464 et seq.

(n) Chapman v. Rothwell (1858), E. B. & E. 168 ; see Indermaur v. Dames (1866), L. R. 1 C. P. 274, per WILLES, J., at p. 287 ; Parnaby v. Lancaster Canal Co. (1839), 11 Ad. & El. 223, Ex. Ch. ; Dolan v. Burnett (1896), 33 Sc. L. R. 399 ; compare Paterson v. Kidd's Trustees (1896), 34 Sc. L. R. 69, where Dolan v. Burnett, supra, was distinguished on the ground that the occupier had, two years prior to the accident, employed a thoroughly competent tradesman to overhaul the building, and was held not to be liable to the plaintiff as he had used reasonable precautions to make his premises safe ; compare O'Sullivan v. O'Connor & Son (1887), 22 L. R. Ir. 467, C. A. ; and see pp. 364, 372, 385, 386, note (f), ante, and p. 390, post.

(o) Mason v. Langford (1888), 4 T. L. R. 407, where the plaintiff went to a shop after business hours : the shutters were up but the door was ajar ; on pushing the door further open he fell down a flight of steps : the jury were directed to inquire whether the facts disclosed an invitation or not.

(p) Sturges v. Great Western Rail. Co. (1892), 8 T. L. R. 231, C. A. ; Watkins v. Great Western Rail. Co. (1877), 46 L. J. (Q. B.) 817, and Thatcher v. Great Western Rail. Co. (1893), 10 T. L. R. 13, C. A., were cases in which the plaintiffs were accompanying passengers to see them off by train ; compare Holmes v. North Eastern Rail. Co. (1869), L. R. 4 Exch. 254 ; Nicholson v. Lancashire and Yorkshire Rail. Co. (1865), 3 H. & C. 534 ; King v. Great Western Rail. Co. (1871), 24 L. T. 583 ; and, as to railway stations, see, further, title RAILWAYS AND CANALS. In Cooke v. Midland Great Western Railway of Ireland, [1909] A. C. 229, where the defendant company tacitly permitted children to come on to its premises and to play with a turntable which was in a dangerous condition, the House of Lords held that in the peculiar circumstances of the case there was evidence of negligence to go to a jury ; and see Jenkins v. Great Western Railway, supra.

(q) Marshall v. York, Newcastle and Berwick Rail. Co. (1851), 11 C. B. 655 ; compare Duthie v. Caledonian Rail. Co., supra (where a workman of one railway company was injured by a train of another being backed negligently into a yard where he worked). In Harris v. Perry & Co., [1903] 2 K. B. 219, C. A., it was held that a "bare licensee" when being carried has a right to a higher measure of duty than one who is merely permitted

SECT. 1.
In Regard to Particular
Parties.

Nature of duty required.

Passengers on piers (r);
Persons having business at the premises (s);
Persons paying to come on to the premises (t);

656. The duty of the occupier of premises on which the invitee comes, is to take reasonable care to prevent injury to the latter from unusual dangers which are more or less hidden (a), of whose to pass across the licensor's premises. Where the negligence complained of is in connection with the working of a railway or tramway by a public authority in intended execution of statutory powers, an action will not lie, unless it is commenced within six months of the occurrence (Lyles v. Southend-on-Sea Corporation, [1905] 2 K. B. 1, C. A.); see title LIMITATION OF ACTIONS, Vol. XIX., p. 176. As to negligence arising out of the special relation of carrier and passenger, see p. 426, post.

(r) John v. Bacon (1870), L. R. 5 C. P. 437; compare Monaghan v. Buchanan (1886), 23 Sc. L. R. 580; Dalyell v. Tyrer (1858), E. B. & E. 899. For the nature of the duty owed to persons using docks or wharves, see p. 419, post.

(s) See cases cited in notes (l)—(o), pp. 386, 387, ante. Where a child at school, who was told by a teacher to leave the room, was injured by a dangerous spring door, it was held that she had been invited to use it, and that the defendants were liable (Morris v. Carnarvon County Council, [1910] 1 K. B. 159); see Wright v. Lefever (1902), 51 W. R. 149, C. A. (person inspecting a house, the keys of which were given him by a house agent). A person who comes on to premises to perform a statutory duty, e.g., a pilot (see title SHIPPING AND NAVIGATION), is in the position of an invitee, and does not take all risks with regard to the safety of the premises (Smith v. Steele (1875), L. R. 10 Q. B. 125; compare Smith v. London and St. Katharine Docks Co. (1868), L. R. 3 C. P. 326).

(t) Parnaby v. Lancaster Canal Co. (1839), 11 Ad. & El. 223, 243, Ex. Ch.; and Shoebottom v. Egerton (1868), 18 L. T. 889 (canal companies charging tolls); Brazier v. Polytechnic Institution (1859), 1 F. & F. 507; and Pike v. Polytechnic Institution (1859), 1 F. & F. 712 (visitors paying to go to an exhibition); Axford v. Prior (1866), 14 W. R. 611 (guest for reward at an hotel); Francis v. Cockrell (1870), L. R. 5 Q. B. 501, Ex. Ch. (person paying for place on grand stand at racecourse); Winch v. Thames Conservators (1874), L. R. 9 C. P. 378, Ex. Ch. (payment to go on towing path); Sandys v. Florence (1878), 47 L. J. (Q. B.) 598 (guest for reward at an hotel), distinguishing Gautret v. Egerton (1867), L. R. 2 C. P. 371 (where the guest was not a guest for reward; see title INNS AND INNKEEPERS, Vol. XVII., p. 313); Lax v. Darlington Corporation (1879), 5 Ex. D. 28, C. A. (cattle accommodation provided for reward at a market); Welsh v. Canterbury and Paragon, Ltd. (1894), 10 T. L. R. 478 (person paying and visiting music hall); Glass v. Paisley Race Committee (1902), 40 Sc. L. R. 17 (grand stand at racecourse); Duncan v. Perthshire Cricket Club (1904), 42 Sc. L. R. 327 (stand at cricket match); Greenlees v. Royal Hotel, Dundee (1905), 42 Sc. L. R. 317 (guest for reward at hotel); The Bearn, [1906] P. 48, C. A. (wharf owner letting wharf). For the liability to invitees of servants of the Crown or of public bodies, see pp. 417, 418, post; and see titles CONSTITUTIONAL LAW, Vol. VI., pp. 413 et seq.; PUBLIC AUTHORITIES AND PUBLIC OFFICERS.

(a) Indermaur v. Dames (1866), L. R. 1 C. P. 274; affirmed (1867), L. R. 2 C. P. 311, Ex. Ch.; see Lowery v. Walker, [1910] 1 K. B. 173, C. A., per VAUGHAN WILLIAMS, L.J., at p. 183; Chapman v. Rothwell (1858), E. B. & E. 168; Axford v. Prior, supra (cases of dangerous holes in floors left unguarded); Crafter v. Metropolitan Rail. Co. (1866), L. R. 1 C. P. 301; North Eastern Rail. Co. (Directors etc.) v. Wanless (1874), L. R. 7 H. L. 12 (omitting to close gates of a level crossing); John v. Bacon, supra (unguarded hatchway on hulk used as pier); Parnaby v. Lancaster Canal existence the occupier is aware or ought to be aware (b), or, in other words, to have his premises reasonably safe for the use that is to be made of them (c). If this duty is neglected, an invitee who is injured thereby can recover damages in respect of his injuries (d). The occupier is not bound, however, to adopt the most recent inventions or devices, provided that he has done what is ordinarily and reasonably done to ensure safety (e).

SECT. 1.
In Regard to Particular
Parties.

Traps.

Co. (1839), 11 Ad. & El. 243, Ex. Ch. (neglect to fence off dangerous places by path); Manchester, Sheffield and Lincolnshire Rail. Co. v. Woodcock (1871), 25 L. T. 335; Smith v. Steele (1875), L. R. 10 Q. B. 125; Lax v. Darlington Corporation (1879), 5 Ex. D. 28, C. A. (dangerous railing in cattle market); Philipps v. Humber (1904), 41 Sc. L. R. 626 (shooting gallery). In Watkins v. Great Western Rail. Co. (1877), 46 L. J. (Q. B.) 817, LOPES, J., at p. 822, said that he recognised no distinction between that which had been called a "trap" and ordinary actionable negligence, except so far as the word "trap" might be used to designate a negligent act which is calculated to mislead a person using ordinary care and caution.

(b) Indermaur v. Dames (1866), L. R. 1 C. P. 274; Wright v. Lefever (1902), 51 W. R. 149, C. A.; "Apollo" (Owners) v. Port Talbot Co., The "Apollo," [1891] A. C. 499.

(c) Morris v. Carnarvon County Council, [1910] 1 K. B. 840, C. A. (spring door dangerous to small children); King v. Great Western Rail. Co. (1871), 24 L. T. 583 (defective crane used by consignees at railway yard); Winch v. Thames Conservators (1874), L. R. 9 C. P. 378, Ex. Ch. (towing path out of repair); Heaven v. Pender (1883), 11 Q. B. D. 503, C. A. (defective rope in a staging supplied by dock owners), explained in Le Lievre v. Gould, [1893] 1 Q. B. 491, 497, C. A.; Elliott v. Hall (1885), 15 Q. B. D. 315 (railway wagon out of repair); Monaghan v. Buchanan (1886), 23 Sc. L. R. 580 (mismanagement of mooring ropes); Brady v. Parker (1887), 24 Sc. L. R. 561 (open hatchway); Gavin v. Arroll & Co. (1889), 26 Sc. L. R. 370 (unfenced path near railway cutting); Sturges v. Great Western Rail. Co. (1892), 8 T. L. R. 231, C. A. (obstruction on platform); compare Stevenson v. Glasgow Corporation (1908), 45 Sc. L. R. 860 (unfenced stream in public path held not a breach of duty), following Hastie v. Edinburgh Magistrates, [1907] S. C. 1102; Francis v. Cockrell (1870), L. R. 5 Q. B. 501, Ex. Ch. (grand stand for use of spectators); Marney v. Scott, [1899] 1 Q. B. 986 (dangerous ship's ladder); compare Redgrave v. Belsey (1897), 13 T. L. R. 484, C. A. (trap-door left open by fellow servant, but premises not unsafe otherwise); Wilkinson v. Fairrie (1862), 1 H. & C. 633. As to the statutory duty of providers of public entertainments to make provision for the safety of children, see title INFANTS AND CHILDREN, Vol. XVII., p. 173; and see title THEATRES AND OTHER PLACES OF ENTERTAINMENT.

(d) The following cases all bear on the question of negligence on the part of the occupiers:—Griffiths v. London and North Western Rail. Co. (1866), 14 L. T. 797 (defective sling in crane apparatus); Shoebottom v. Egerton, 18 L. T. 889 (trustees of a canal taking reward for its use are bound to keep the bridges and ways in good repair); Francis v. Cockrell (1870), L. R. 5 Q. B. 501, Ex. Ch. (defect in grand stand); Sandys v. Florence (1878), 47 L. J. (Q. B.) 598 (fall of ceiling in room at an hotel); Thatcher v. Great Western Rail. Co. (1893), 10 T. L. R. 13, C. A. (passenger on platform struck by the open door of a guard's van); Welsh v. Canterbury and Paragon, Ltd. (1894), 10 T. L. R. 478 (Blondin dropped a chair on a visitor at a music hall); Moore v. Ransome's Dock Committee (1898), 14 T. L. R. 539, C. A. (dock unprovided with appliances, such as chains or ladders, to enable persons falling in to get out); The Bearn, [1906] P. 48, C. A. (dangerous berth at wharf).

(e) Crafter v. Metropolitan Rail. Co. (1866), L. R. 1 C. P. 301 (the fact that better steps might have been provided did not constitute negligence),

SECT. 1.
In Regard to Particular
Parties.

Liability commensurate with invitation.

Rule applies to invitation to use chattels.

657. The liability of the occupier is only commensurate with the extent of the invitation (f). Where, therefore, the occupier of premises has placed a notice warning persons of the existence of danger, and a person disregards the notice (g), or the circumstances show that the limits of the invitation have been otherwise exceeded (h), the liability is limited in a corresponding degree, and if the invitee wanders about in such a way as to be unable to see if there is danger or not (i), or if he knows of the danger and undertakes the risk (k), the occupier of the premises is not liable.

658. The effect of an invitation both on the invitee and the person inviting him, apart from any contract between the parties, is the same in the case of an invitation to use appliances or distinguishing Longmore v. Great Western Rail. Co. (1865), 19 C. B. (N. S.) 183 (dangerous footbridge over railway); M'Gill v. Bowman & Co. (1890), 28 Sc. L. R. 144.

(f) Mackie v. Macmillan (1898), 36 Sc. L. R. 137; Walker v. Midland Rail. Co. (1886), 2 T. L. R. 450, H. L.

(g) Anderson v. Coultis (1894), 58 J. P. 369 (notice on cliff promenade warning persons from going near the edge and to keep inside a bank); compare Winch v. Thames Conservators (1874), L. R. 9 C. P. 378, Ex. Ch. (where the Exchequer Chamber thought that the defendants would not be responsible if they issued a warning to invitees paying tolls, that they were to take the premises as they found them).

(h) E.g., O'Sullivan v. O'Connor & Son (1887), 22 L. R. Ir. 467, 476, C. A.; Walker v. Midland Rail. Co., supra (where an innkeeper was held not to be under a duty to his guest to keep those places safe where visitors are not entitled to go, and where they cannot be reasonably expected to go by mistake: thus where there was a well-lighted and properly indicated lavatory accommodation, it was held that a guest, who went about looking for the lavatory in the dark through a service room, and was injured, could not recover); and see title INNS AND INNKEEPERS, Vol. XVII., p. 314.

(i) Walker v. Midland Rail. Co., supra; Wilkinson v. Fairrie (1862), 1 H. & C. 633 (a doubtful authority, except in so far as it decides that, if the plaintiff chooses to go wandering about in the dark, he ceases to be an invitee and becomes a licensee; see observations in Paddock v. North Eastern Rail. Co. (1868), 18 L. T. 60, Ex. Ch.); Fleming v. Eadie & Son (1898), 35 Sc. L. R. 422 (sanitary inspector, asked to inspect drains in a house being reconstructed, went down cellar steps without a light and was injured because the lower steps were cut away; the darkness should have been a warning; compare Cairns v. Boyd (1879), 6 R. (Ct. of Sess.) 1004); Lewis v. Ronald (1909), 26 T. L. R. 30 (tradesman delivering goods to tenant of flat, the staircase of which the landlord contracted to light, wandered into a part of the staircase which was unlit and was injured: held, that the landlord was not liable); see Driscoll v. Partick Burgh Commissioners (1900), 37 Sc. L. R. 274 (duty of the landlord of flats to light the common stairs); compare Schofield v. Bolton Corporation (1910), 26 T. L. R. 230, C. A. (where a child strayed through a gate in a field, where the defendants allowed it to play, and eventually was injured on a railway line, but the defendants were held not liable, as there was no duty on the defendants to keep the gate shut, and no evidence that any child had strayed before); and see Jenkins v. Great Western Railway, [1912] 1 K. B. 525, C. A.

(k) See Thomas v. Quartermaine (1887), 18 Q. B. D. 685, C. A., per BOWEN, L.J., at p. 694; Driscoll v. Partick Burgh Commissioners, supra; Manchester, Sheffield and Lincolnshire Rail. Co. v. Woodcock (1871), 25 L. T. 335; compare Brooks v. Courtney (1869), 20 L. T. 440; and see p. 476, post.

other chattels not dangerous in themselves (l) as in the case of an invitation to come upon the invitor's premises (m). Thus, for example, there is a duty on a charterer of a vessel, upon which the servants of a stevedore are to come for the purpose of loading, to devote reasonable attention to the condition of the tackle and appliances which will be used in the work, though he is not bound to have a minute survey made (n). Where the use of any chattel, which is known to be in such a condition as to cause danger not necessarily incident to its use, is invited, there is a duty to warn the invitee of that danger (o).

SECT. 1.
In Regard to Particular
Parties.

Nature of
duty.

SUB-SECT. 3.—Duty to Bare Licensees and Visitors.

659. A licensee is a person who has permission to do an act which without such permission would be unlawful (p). The term

Definition.

(l) For the consideration of the duty in dealing with dangerous articles, see p. 407, post.

(m) Elliott v. Hall (1885), 15 Q. B. D. 315 (defective coal truck used by servant of consignee); see Earl v. Lubbock, [1905] 1 K. B. 253, C. A., per COLLINS, M.R., at p. 257; Smith v. Steele (1875), L. R. 10 Q. B. 125 (negligently slung boat causing injury to a pilot); Heaven v. Pender (1883), 11 Q. B. D. 503, C. A. (defective rope in staging supplied by dock owners); M'Cartan v. Belfast Harbour Commissioners, [1911] 2 I. R. 143, H. L., affirming [1910] 2 I. R. 470, C. A. (craneman employed by respondents causing injury to seaman employed by shipowners in unloading); King v. Great Western Rail. Co. (1871), 24 L. T. 583; Smith v. London and St. Katharine Docks Co. (1868) L. R. 3 C. P. 326; Gurling v. Hurst & Co. (1889), 6 T. L. R. 94 (negligent use of flaps of a hoist where sacks were being raised); Edwards v. Hutcheon (1889), 26 Sc. L. R. 550 (unguarded threshing machine); Hawkins v. Smith (1896), 12 T. L. R. 532 (rotten sack for unloading grain); compare Le Lievre v. Gould, [1893] 1 Q. B. 491, C. A.

(n) Marney v. Scott, [1899] 1 Q. B. 986; compare Scott v. Foley, Aikman & Co. (1899), 5 Com. Cas. 53. Where a stevedore has had an opportunity of inspecting tackle supplied by a ship for the use of his men, the respective liability of the stevedore and the shipowner for an accident is not always clear (Biddle v. Hart, [1907] 1 K. B. 649, C. A.; Mowbray v. Merryweather, [1895] 2 Q. B. 640, C. A.; but see Simpson v. Burrell & Son and Paton (1896), 33 Sc. L. R. 413; M'Lachlan v. Steamship "Peveril" Co., Ltd. and Macgregor and Ferguson (1896), 33 Sc. L. R. 634; compare Wood & Co. v. Mackay (1906), 43 Sc. L. R. 458; M'Gill v. Bowman & Co. (1890), 28 Sc. L. R. 144, per Lord YOUNG, at p. 147; and O'Neill v. Everest (1892), 8 T. L. R. 426, C. A.). In the absence of an opportunity of inspecting the tackle supplied by the ship, it would seem that the stevedore is not under any liability to his men under the Employers' Liability Act, 1880 (43 & 44 Vict. c. 42) (Traill & Sons v. Actieselskab Dalbeattie, Ltd. (1904), 41 Sc. L. R. 615); compare Kiddle v. Lovett (1885), 16 Q. B. D. 605 (where by contract the supervision of the tackle was left to the ship); and see title MASTER AND SERVANT, Vol. XX., pp. 139, 142.

(o) Earl v. Lubbock, [1905] 1 K. B. 253, C. A., per STIRLING, L.J., at p. 258; Elliott v. Hall, supra (the liability does not extend to latent defects not discoverable by an ordinary inspection).

(p) Thomas v. Sorrel (1673), Vaugh. 330, 351, Ex. Ch., cited by ROMER, L.J., in Warr (Frank) & Co., Ltd. v. London County Council, [1904] 1 K. B. 713, C. A.; compare Great Northern Rail. Co. v. Harrison (1854), 10 Exch. 376; and title LANDLORD AND TENANT, Vol. XVIII., p. 338. For the distinction between a licence and an easement, see title EASEMENTS AND PROFITS À PRENDRE, Vol. XI., p. 239; and, as to licences in relation to land generally, see title REAL PROPERTY AND CHATTELS REAL; see also title FISHERIES, Vol. XIV., p. 584; and compare title GAME, Vol. XV., p. 219.

SECT. 1.
In Regard to Particular
Parties.

Persons within the term.

Rights of the licensee and liability of the licensor.

"bare" or "mere" licensee is used to describe a person who has merely a permission, without any invitation express or implied (q). This permission or licence may also be either express or implied (r). A visitor, other than one who pays for the accommodation given him (s), is a bare licensee (t). So also is a servant (a), and the latter cannot, at common law, recover where the injury is caused by the negligence of a fellow servant (b).

660. A bare licensee is entitled to no more than permission to use the subject of the licence as he finds it. He must accept the permission with its concomitant conditions and perils (c). The grantor of the licence is in a position similar to that of the donor of a gift, and is not responsible for the safety of the licensee, unless acceptance of the grant involves a hidden peril, wilful suppression of the knowledge of which amounts to a deceit practised on the donee (d).

(q). See p. 386, ante. As to a "bare licence" to search for minerals, see title MINES, MINERALS, AND QUARRIES, Vol. XX., p. 568.

(r) Hounsell v. Smyth (1860), 7 C. B. (N. S.) 731; Binks v. South Yorkshire Railway and River Dun Co. (1862), 3 B. & S. 244; White v. France (1877), 2 C. P. D. 308. A distinction must, however, be drawn between cases of mere tacit acquiescence in persons coming upon premises without leave and cases where there is some encouragement or inducement which amounts to permission to use the premises (Lowery v. Walker, [1910] 1 K. B. 173, 185, 202, C. A.; reversed on the particular facts in the House of Lords, [1911] A. C. 10). Habitual user of a particular way across private property may amount to user by permission in a particular case (S. C., [1911] A. C. 10); compare Barrett v. Midland Rail. Co. (1858), 1 F. & F. 361; and see title TRESPASS.

(s) Such a visitor is an invitee; see pp. 385, 386, ante, and cases there cited.

(t) Southcote v. Stanley (1856), 1 H. & N. 247. In Collis v. Selden (1868), L. R. 3 C. P. 495, there was no averment as to the capacity in which the plaintiff, who was injured by a chandelier falling, was upon the defendant's premises—a public-house—and accordingly judgment was given for the defendant. In Axford v. Prior (1866), 14 W. R. 611, the plaintiff was a guest presumably for reward.

(a) Southcote v. Stanley, supra; Priestley v. Fowler (1837), 3 M. & W. 1. But one who, though employed, does an act not on duty, but to oblige the employer, has greater rights while doing the act than those of a bare licensee (Mansfield v. Baddeley (1876), 34 L. T. 696).

(b) Swainson v. North Eastern Rail. Co. (1878), 3 Ex. D. 341, C. A.; as to statutory remedies, see title MASTER AND SERVANT, Vol. XX., pp. 134 et seq.

(c) Hounsell v. Smyth (1860), 7 C. B. (N. S.) 731; Castle v. Parker (1868), 18 L. T. 367; see Indermaur v. Dames (1866), L. R. 1 C. P. 274, per WILLES, J., at p. 285; Bolch v. Smith (1862), 7 H. & N. 736, 742; Gallagher v. Humphrey (1862), 6 L. T. 684; Ivay v. Hedges (1882), 9 Q. B. D. 80; Batchelor v. Fortescue (1883), 11 Q. B. D. 474, C. A.; O'Brien v. Enrico, Arbib & Co. (1907), 44 Sc. L. R. 686.

(d) Gautret v. Egerton (1867), L. R. 2 C. P. 371, per WILLES, J., at p. 375, who says: "The dedication of a permission to use the way must be taken to be in the character of a gift. The principle of law as to gifts is that the giver is not responsible for damage resulting from the insecurity of the thing, unless he knew of its evil character at the time, and omitted to caution the donee. There must be something like fraud on the part of the giver"; and see Robbins v. Jones (1864), 15 C. B. (N. S.) 221. In Corby v. Hill (1858), 4 C. B. (N. S.) 556, such a hidden peril, amounting to a trap,

The licensee has, however, the right to expect that the natural perils incident to the subject of the licence shall not be increased without warning by the negligent behaviour of the grantor, and, if they are so increased, he can recover for injuries sustained in consequence thereof (e). A grantor of a licence to come on to his premises, who is aware that a licensee is actually there, is bound to take reasonable care not to do anything to injure him (f).

Where the acceptance of the licence involves the doing of some act by the grantor, the licensee has a right to expect that that act shall be performed with such reasonable care as the circumstances of the case require (g).

661. A person to whom a chattel is lent gratuitously is in the position of a bare licensee. He cannot recover for injuries sustained owing to a defect in the chattel, unless he can show that the lender knew the chattel to be defective for the purpose for which it was lent and failed to communicate the knowledge (h).

SECT. 1.

In Regard to Particular Parties.

Duty of licensor with regard to increase in risk.

With regard to performance of necessary act.

Gratuitous bailee.

was held sufficient to render the defendant liable. The defendant, however, who caused the existence of the peril was not the grantor of the licence, but another licensee, so that the decision might equally well have resulted had the obstruction been placed by the defendant upon a public way. The case is distinguished in Bolch v. Smith (1862), 7 H. & N. 736, where it was said that, were a peril masked by apparent security, liability might follow (per CHANNELL, B., at p. 742); compare Sullivan v. Waters (1864), 14 I. C. L. R. 460; see, further, title MASTER AND SERVANT, Vol. XX., p. 137.

(e) Gallagher v. Humphery (1862), 6 L. T. 684, per COCKBURN, C.J., at p. 685, as explained in Murley Brothers v. Grove (1882), 46 J. P. 360; M'Feat v. Rankin's Trustees (1879), 16 Sc. L. R. 614 (unfenced quarry near private road, used with consent of owner); see Lowery v. Walker, [1910] 1 K. B. 173, per KENNEDY, L.J., at p. 197, reversed on the particular facts, [1911] A. C. 10.

(f) Thatcher v. Great Western Rail. Co. (1893), 10 T. L. R. 13, C. A. Where a railway company permits persons to cross its line at a particular spot, there is a duty on the company to use reasonable care in moving over that portion of its line (Barrett v. Midland Rail. Co. (1858), 1 F. & F. 361); but where the grantor of a licence has no reason to suppose that a licensee will be in a particular place, there is no duty to take precautions against accident (Batchelor v. Fortescue (1883), 11 Q. B. D. 474, C. A.; see also Holmes v. North Eastern Rail. Co. (1875), L. R. 4 Exch. 254; Griffiths v. London and North Western Rail. Co. (1866), 14 L. T. 797; Tolhausen v. Davies (1888), 58 L. J. (Q. B.) 98, C. A.).

(g) Harris v. Perry & Co., [1903] 2 K. B. 219, C. A. Thus, "where a person undertakes to provide for the conveyance of another, although he does so gratuitously, he is bound to exercise due and reasonable care" (Lygo v. Newbold (1854), 9 Exch. 302, per PARKE, B., at p. 305); and the standard of reasonableness naturally must vary according to the circumstances of the case, the trust reposed, and the skill and appliances at the disposal of the person to whom another confides a duty (Harris v. Perry & Co., supra, per COLLINS, M.R., at p. 226; see also Great Northern Rail. Co. v. Harrison (1854), 10 Exch. 376; Moffat v. Bateman (1869), L. R. 3 P. C. 115; Shrimpton v. Hertfordshire County Council (1911), 27 T. L. R. 251, H. L.). As to the carriage of goods, see Southcote's Case (1601), 4 Co. Rep. 83 b; and, generally, title CARRIERS, Vol. IV., pp. 1 et seq.

(h) Coughlin v. Gillison, [1899] 1 Q. B. 145, C. A.; see Blakemore v. Bristol and Exeter Rail. Co. (1858), 8 E. & B. 1035; MacCarthy v. Young (1861), 6 H. & N. 329; Gautret v. Egerton (1867), L. R. 2 C. P. 371, 375; and see title BAILMENT, Vol. I., pp. 539 et seq.

SECT. 1.

In Regard to Particular
Parties.

Negligence of bare licensee.
Liability of bare licensee for act involving danger.

Extent of
liability.

662. A bare licensee who fails to use reasonable care and is injured in consequence cannot recover, even though the grantor of the licence might otherwise have been liable (i).

663. If the licensee is to do something upon the premises of the grantor of the licence, which may involve danger to the grantor or his property, or to other persons, it is the duty of the licensee to see that the premises are not left in a dangerous state, and if he fails to do so he is responsible for resulting damage (k).

SUB-SECT. 4.—Duty to Trespassers.

664. The occupier of premises owes no duty to persons who come upon them as trespassers (l). He must not, however, encourage or attract trespassers to a place where they are exposed, whether intentionally or not, to some specific danger of which he is cognisant (m), nor may he, when aware of the presence of a trespasser on his premises, do any act which endangers his safety (n).

(i) See p. 445, post. This principle requires some qualification in its application to the case of children, who cannot be presumed capable of taking the same amount of care as grown-up persons; see Cooke v. Midland Great Western Railway of Ireland, [1909] A. C. 229; Jenkins v. Great Western Railway, [1912] 1 K. B. 525, C. A.; and see pp. 366, 373, ante.

(k) Re Williams v. Groucott (1863), 4 B. & S. 149; compare Sybray v. White (1836), 1 M. & W. 435; Corby v. Hill (1858), 4 C. B. (N. S.) 556; Great Lazy Mining Co. v. Clague (1878), 4 App. Cas. 115, P. C.

(l) Grand Trunk Railway of Canada v. Barnett, [1911] A. C. 361, P. C.; Harcastle v. South Yorkshire Rail. Co. (1859), 4 H. & N. 167; see Lygo v. Newbold (1854), 9 Exch. 302; Great Northern Rail. Co. v. Harrison (1854), 10 Exch. 376; Stone v. Jackson (1855), 16 C. B. 199; Harrison v. North Eastern Rail. Co. (1874), 29 L. T. 844; McCabe v. Guinness (1876), 10 I. R. C. L. 21; Murley Brothers v. Grove (1882), 46 J. P. 360; Stiefsohn v. Brooke, Bond & Co. (1889), 5 T. L. R. 684; French v. Hills Plymouth Co. (1908), 24 T. L. R. 614. The same principle applies in the case of animals trespassing (Jordin v. Crump (1841), 8 M. & W. 782; Stansfield v. Bolling (1870), 22 L. T. 799; Ponting v. Noakes, [1894] 2 Q. B. 281; see Deane v. Clayton (1817), 7 Taunt. 489; title ANIMALS, Vol. I., pp. 396, 397); but while the use of man-traps, spring guns, or other engines calculated to destroy human life or inflict grievous bodily harm on any person, is a criminal offence (see title CRIMINAL LAW AND PROCEDURE, Vol. IX., p. 605), the use of traps to catch animals addicted to hunting is lawful (see title GAME, Vol. XV., p. 227), and will not give a cause of action to a trespasser injured thereby (Wootton v. Dawkins (1857), 2 C. B. (N. S.) 412). Special circumstances may occasionally throw the responsibility on occupiers to keep out trespassers; compare Haughton v. North British Rail. Co. (1892), 30 Sc. L. R. 111; see p. 398, post; and, generally, title TRESPASS. As to persons unintentionally straying from the highway, see p. 397, post.

(m) Jewson v. Gatti (1886), 2 T. L. R. 441, C. A.; Cooke v. Midland Great Western Railway of Ireland, supra. In these cases there was an attraction, held by the court to be irresistible by children, to go to a place where there was risk of injury to them from a specific cause, but there was no intention to injure them. In the case of Townsend v. Wathen (1808), 9 East, 277, traps were set for dogs and baited with flesh for the express purpose of enticing them into danger.

(n) Degg v. Midland Rail. Co. (1857), 1 H. & N. 773. Thus if an occupier of land were sporting or firing at a mark on his land, and saw a trespasser, and fired carelessly and hurt him, an action would lie (ibid., per BRAMWELL, B.; compare Smith v. Highland Rail. Co. (1888), 26 Sc. L. R. 33). But the trespasser cannot maintain an action unless he has a right to complain of the act causing the injury and to complain thereof against the SUB-SECT. 5.—Duty to Neighbours.

SECT. 1.

In Regard to Particular Parties.Nature of duty.Extraordinary user.

Ordinary user.

665. It is the duty of an occupier of premises to take reasonable care to prevent such consequences as may infringe the rights of his neighbours and inflict damage upon them arising from his use of those premises (o). In cases where there is no infringement of natural or acquired rights of property (p), such consequences may result from a non-natural and extraordinary use of the premises, in which case the occupier is liable, whether he has been negligent or not (q); but they may also arise from the use of the premises for ordinary purposes and in a customary manner, in which case the occupier is not liable to an action for negligence unless there is an omission to take reasonable care on his part (r).

666. An occupier is under a duty to prevent injury to his neighbour from the fabric of a building (s), from the escape of noxious and dangerous things from the premises (t), from failure to keep cattle in where there is a duty to do so (a), from the

Duty in
particular cases.

person he has made defendant in the action, so that an action cannot be maintained by a trespasser against a railway company for the negligence of its servants in carrying him (Grand Trunk Railway of Canada v. Barnett, [1911] A. C. 361, 369, P. C.).

(o) See title ACTION, Vol. I., pp. 9, 10; and see title NUISANCE, pp. 525, 530, post.

(p) As to which see titles EASEMENTS AND PROFITS À PRENDRE, Vol. XI., pp. 295, 324, 330, 333; MINES, MINERALS, AND QUARRIES, Vol. XX., pp. 570 et seq.; TRESPASS.

(q) Ball v. Ray (1873), 8 Ch. App. 467; St. Helen's Smelting Co. v. Tipping (1865), 11 H. L. Cas. 642; Hurdman v. North Eastern Railway (1878), 3 C. P. D. 168, C. A.; Farrer v. Nelson (1885), 15 Q. B. D. 258. In such cases the action is not for negligence, but for nuisance; see title NUISANCE, pp. 526 et seq., post, and cases cited at p. 396, post.

(r) Bower v. Peate (1876), 1 Q. B. D. 321; Dalton v. Angus (1881), 6 App. Cas. 740. The question of whether the user is ordinary or not is one of fact in each case (Smith v. Kenrick (1849), 7 C. B. 515; Smith v. Fletcher (1874), L. R. 9 Exch. 64, Ex. Ch.; Fletcher v. Smith (1877), 2 App. Cas. 781). Ordinary user has been held to include mining and quarrying in addition to ordinary agricultural operations (Wilson v. Waddell (1876), 2 App. Cas. 95; A.-G. v. Tomline (1879), 12 Ch. D. 214). Removing shingle from the foreshore by the owner was held, in A.-G. v. Tomline, supra, not to be a natural user; compare Crompton v. Lea (1874), L. R. 19 Eq. 115. Playing cricket appears to be a natural user of land; at any rate it has been held not to be negligent to play it near to the property of others where a person on that other property was injured (Ward v. Abraham (1910), 47 Sc. L. R. 252). Shooting, however, where the bullets or pellets might fall on a place where the shooter has not permission to shoot, is negligent (ibid.; see Taylor v. Dick (1897), 4 Scots Law Times 297; and see p. 400, post).

(s) Todd v. Flight (1860), 9 C. B. (N. S.) 377; see Chauntler v. Robinson (1849), 4 Exch. 163; see also titles BOUNDARIES, FENCES, AND PARTY WALLS, Vol. III., p. 136; LANDLORD AND TENANT, Vol. XVIII., pp. 504, 505; and see title BUILDING CONTRACTS, ENGINEERS, AND ARCHITECTS, Vol. III., p. 315.

(t) Rylands v. Fletcher (1868), L. R. 3 H. L. 330; compare Tenant v. Goldwin (1704), 1 Salk. 360; 2 Ld. Raym. 1089; and see title NUISANCE, pp. 515, 528, 529, post.

(a) Churchill v. Evans (1809), 1 Taunt. 529; Hilton v. Annesson (1872), 27 L. T. 519; and see title ANIMALS, Vol. I., p. 376.

SECT. 1.
In Regard to Particular
Parties.

Construction of buildings.

presence of dangerous things on the boundary (b), or from negligent conduct in the ordinary use of the premises (c).

667. Where buildings or works are constructed of such a nature that, unless proper care is taken, injury will be caused to the neighbour's property, there is a duty on the owner of the buildings or works to see that such care is exercised (d). Where, however, a person is conducting building operations in a town, he is not liable to indemnify his neighbours against inconvenience or damage to their property caused by dust or the partial blocking up of the access to their premises unless such operation is in itself unlawful, or, if lawful, is executed in a negligent manner (e), as, for example, if in pulling down his house he takes no steps to prevent the

(b) Crowhurst v. Amersham Burial Board (1878), 4 Ex. D. 5. Where poisonous trees are planted within the boundary and do not project there is no liability for injury to a neighbour's cattle in the absence of a duty to keep such cattle out (Wilson v. Newberry (1871), L. R. 7 Q. B. 31; Ponting v. Noakes, [1894] 2 Q. B. 281). Where, however, the relations between the parties are such that one has already acquired rights, an alteration of the other's premises made within one boundary, which is prejudicial to those rights, will give a ground of action (Re Williams v. Groucott (1863), 4 B. & S. 149); and see titles AGRICULTURE, Vol. I., p. 297; BOUNDARIES, FENCES, AND PARTY WALLS, Vol. III., pp. 126, 127. In Smith v. Giddy, [1904] 2 K. B. 448, the court purported to follow Crowhurst v. Amersham Burial Board, supra, but there the defendants had trees, which were noxious and likely to cause injury, brought on to the land, while in Smith v. Giddy, supra, the trees were ash trees and harmless, and there was no evidence that the defendants planted them or that they were likely to do any harm when planted; see also Giles v. Walker (1890), 24 Q. B. D. 656 (a plaintiff could not recover for damage done by thistle seeds being blown from defendant's land on to his, although this resulted from the land being brought under cultivation); compare Brady v. Warren, [1900] 2 I. R. 632; West Cumberland Iron and Steel Co. v. Kenyon (1879), 11 Ch. D. 781, 787; Bryant v. Lefever (1879), 4 C. P. D. 172, 176, C. A.; and see title AGRICULTURE, Vol. I., p. 295.

(c) Baird v. Williamson (1863), 15 C. B. (N. S.) 376; Bagnall v. London and North Western Rail. Co. (1862), 1 H. & C. 544, Ex. Ch.; compare Ward v. Abraham, [1910] S. C. 299.

(d) Dodd v. Holme (1834), 1 Ad. & El. 493, per LITTLEDALE, J., at p. 503 (plaintiff's house injured by the negligent building of the defendant's house); Collins v. Middle Level Commissioners (1869), L. R. 4 C. P. 279 (defective construction of the bank of a cut, in consequence of which water overflowed); compare Hurdman v. North Eastern Rail. Co. (1878), 3 C. P. D. 168, C. A. (raising surface of land so as to collect water and throw it on to plaintiff's land); Gill v. Edwin (1895), 72 L. T. 579, C. A. (alteration in lead flat and rainwater gutters); Broder v. Saillard (1876), 2 Ch. D. 700; and see titles BOUNDARIES, FENCES, AND PARTY WALLS, Vol. III., pp. 135, 136; BUILDING CONTRACTS, ENGINEERS, AND ARCHITECTS, Vol. III., pp. 315, 316; METROPOLIS, Vol. XX., p. 492.

(e) Laurent v. Lord Advocate (1869), 7 Macph. (Ct. of Sess.) 607; compare St. Helen's Smelting Co. v. Tipping (1865), 11 H. L. Cas. 642, per Lord WESTBURY, at p. 650; Massey v. Goyder (1829), 4 C. & P. 161; Bower v. Peate (1876), 1 Q. B. D. 321. The removal of soil which supports an adjoining building is not necessarily wrongful (see Richards v. Rose (1853), 9 Exch. 218, where there is no right of support (see Peyton v. London Corporation (1829), 9 B. & C. 725; Brown v. Windsor (1830), 1 Cr. & J. 20; Wyatt v. Harrison (1832), 3 B. & Ad. 871; title EASEMENTS AND PROFITS A PRENDRE, Vol. XI., pp. 251, 321).

bricks falling upon his neighbour's house (f). The amount of care to be taken in a particular case varies according to the circumstances (g).

SECT. 1.
In Regard to Particular
Parties.

SUB-SECT. 6.—Duty to the Public.

668. The duty on the occupiers (h) of premises adjoining places to which members of the public are entitled to go, such as highways or other public places (i), or to which they may reasonably be expected to go while using such public places in the ordinary manner with due care (k), may arise in two ways:

How the duty arises.

(1) a duty may exist towards members of the public who inadvertently stray off a public place while using such place in the ordinary manner with ordinary care (l);

(2) a duty may exist towards members of the public, while in a public place, in respect to a danger arising on the adjacent premises.

669. Although there is no general duty on an occupier to fence off his land from a highway (m), still, where the occupier of

(1) Duty towards public straying off public place in ordinary course.

(f) Bradbee v. Christ's Hospital (Governors etc.) (1842), 4 Man. & G. 714; see ibid., at p. 759, approving Dodd v. Holme (1834), 1 Ad. & El. 493.

(g) Laurent v. Lord Advocate (1869), 7 Macph. (Ct. of Sess.) 607; Chadwick v. Trower (1839), 6 Bing. (N. C.) 1, Ex. Ch. Where a stranger undermines and negligently damages a house, he is liable without any proof of a right to support (Bibby v. Carter (1859), 4 H. & N. 153; see title BOUNDARIES, FENCES, AND PARTY WALLS, Vol. III., p. 135).

(h) As to the liability of the owners of premises that are let, see p. 384, ante.

(i) Pickard v. Smith (1861), 10 C. B. (N. S.) 470, 479; compare the Quarry (Fencing) Act, 1887 (50 & 51 Vict. c. 19), s. 3 (place of public resort dedicated to the public); see title MINES, MINERALS, AND QUARRIES, Vol. XX., pp. 634, 635.

(k) Bedman v. Tottenham Local Board of Health (1887), 4 T. L. R. 22 (the defendants kept a private way leading directly from a public road, of which the private way was substantially a part, under a low archway dangerous to persons driving along the private way; and the plaintiff, by mistake, drove along it and was injured: held, that he could recover, and the fact that he was a trespasser at the moment made no difference, as the place was dangerous to people using the highway); Messerv. Cranston & Co. (1897), 35 Sc. L. R. 42 (persons using waste ground of a docks for storing timber were held to be under a duty to store it in such a way as to protect members of the public using the place habitually); compare Hawken v. Shearer (1887), 56 L. J. (Q. B.) 284; Binks v. South Yorkshire Railway and River Dun Co. (1862), 3 B. & S. 244; and, as to notices limiting the liability of persons to members of the public using public places, see Anderson v. Coutts (1894), 58 J. P. 369.

(l) Binks v. South Yorkshire Railway and River Dun Co., supra; and cases cited in note (k), supra. Such persons are unintentional trespassers, and the duty is confined to them. Those who, in consequence of failure to exercise ordinary care while using public places in the ordinary way, come upon private premises, become trespassers, to whom the occupier owes no duty to take care; see Barker v. Herbert, [1911] 2 K. B. 633, C. A.; and p. 394, ante.

(m) See title BOUNDARIES, FENCES, AND PARTY WALLS, Vol. III., pp. 128, 129. As to the duty of a highway authority in urban districts to fence off adjoining land, see title HIGHWAYS, STREETS, AND BRIDGES, Vol. XVI., p. 254. As to the duty of a highway authority to fence a highway, see ibid., p. 115.

SECT. 1.
In Regard to Particular
Parties.

premises adjoining a highway permits some danger (n) to exist at a place sufficiently near to the highway to be unsafe (o) to members of the public using it with ordinary care, it is incumbent on such occupier to take reasonable precautions to protect the public from falling into that danger (p), unless the danger existed before the highway was dedicated (q). If a person under statutory authority diverts a highway, it is his duty to protect it by fencing or otherwise at the point of diversion in cases where there is risk of the public being misled (r).

(n) E.g., such as an excavation or quarry (Hardcastle v. South Yorkshire Railway and River Dun Co. (1859), 4 H. & N. 67; compare Orr Ewing v. Colquhoun (1877), 2 App. Cas. 839, 864; a canal (Binks v. South Yorkshire Railway and River Dun Co. (1862), 3 B. & S. 244); a ditch (Barnes v. Ward (1850), 9 C. B. 392); a hoist hole (Hadley v. Taylor (1865), L. R. 1 C. P. 53); a pond (Ross v. Keith (1888), 26 Sc. L. R. 55); or an archway so low as to be dangerous (Bedman v. Tottenham Local Board of Health (1887), 4 T. L. R. 22). Liability may arise to a member of the public injured by reason of the occupier's negligence, or by a nuisance which he occasions (Reedie v. London and North Western Rail. Co., Hobbit v. Same (1849), 4 Exch. 244; compare R. v. Watts (1703), 1 Salk. 357); and see, generally, title NUISANCE, p. 515, post.

(o) It is a question of fact in each case whether the danger is so near as to be unsafe to the public using the highway (Hardcastle v. South Yorkshire Rail. Co., supra). It must be substantially adjoining the highway, so that by a false step, or sudden giddiness, or by the frightening of a horse, a person might meet the danger (ibid.); and so, where the plaintiff lost his way and fell into a quarry 150 feet away from the highway, it was held he could not recover (Prentices v. Assets Co., Ltd. (1890), 27 Sc. L. R. 401; compare Devlin v. Jeffray's Trustees (1902), 40 Sc. L. R. 92; Jenkins v. Great Western Railway [1912] 1 K. B. 525, C. A.); see, however, the Quarry (Fencing) Act, 1887 (50 & 51 Vict. c. 19), by which it is provided that any quarry, pit or opening, other than any natural opening, made for getting stone, slate, lime, chalk, clay, gravel or sand, which is dangerous to the public, and on open land within 50 yards of a highway or place of public resort, shall, unless kept reasonably fenced to prevent accident, be deemed to be a nuisance to be dealt with summarily under the Public Health Act, 1875 (38 & 39 Vict. c. 55), ss. 91 et seq.; and see titles HIGHWAYS, STREETS, AND BRIDGES, Vol. XVI., p. 169; MINES, MINERALS, AND QUARRIES, Vol. XX., pp. 634, 635; and, as to nuisances summarily abatable, see title NUISANCE, pp. 566 et seq., post; compare Hounsell v. Smyth (1860), 7 C. B. (N. S.) 731, where Blyth v. Topham (1607), Cro. Jac. 158, was followed; Evans v. Rhymney Local Board (1887), 4 T. L. R. 72.

(p) Ross v. Keith (1888), 26 Sc. L. R. 55; Silverton v. Marriott (1888), 59 L. T. 61; and cases cited in note (o), supra; and see title BOUNDARIES, FENCES, AND PARTY WALLS, Vol. III., pp. 128, 129. It is no defence by an occupier as against an injured person that the duty to fence is by statute thrown on other persons who have neglected it (Wettor v. Dunk (1864), 4 F. & F. 298; see also Quarry (Fencing) Act, 1887 (50 & 51 Vict. c. 19)).

(q) Cooper v. Walker (1862), 2 B. & S. 773; Fisher v. Prowse (1862), 2 B. & S. 770, in which Coupland v. Hardingham (1813), 3 Camp. 398, was disapproved on this point; Robbins v. Jones (1863), 15 C. B. (N. S.) 221; compare Jarvis v. Dean (1826), 3 Bing. 447; Cornwell v. Metropolitan Commissioners of Sewers (1855), 10 Exch. 771; and see title HIGHWAYS, STREETS, AND BRIDGES, Vol. XVI., p. 156, note (r).

(r) Hurst v. Taylor (1885), 14 Q. B. D. 918; and see titles BOUNDARIES, FENCES, AND PARTY WALLS, Vol. III., pp. 129, 130; HIGHWAYS, STREETS, AND BRIDGES, Vol. XVI., p. 78.

670. The occupier of premises adjoining a highway(s) is under an obligation to take reasonable care (t) not to injure persons on the highway, and is liable if, in consequence of failing to exercise such care, a member of the public is injured in the following cases:—

SECT. 1.
In Regard to Particular
Parties.

(a) where the premises are in a state likely to cause injury to persons passing by (a), and the occupier knows, or, where the defect is not merely temporary, ought reasonably to know, of their state (b);

(2) Duty
towards public in respect of state of premises adjoining public place.

(b) where something, calculated to cause injury (c) to those

(s) Where a portion of the premises is also a part of the highway—e.g., a cellar grating—and the defective state is due to wear and tear by the public, the occupier is not under any obligation to repair that portion (Robbins v. Jones (1863), 15 C. B. (N. S.) 221); aliter, if it was worn out for the occupier's benefit. There is, however, a duty on the occupier to see that nothing he does shall render it insecure (Braithwaite v. Watson (1889), 5 T. L. R. 331); and see note (i), p. 401, post; title NUISANCE, p. 515, post.

(t) Where all reasonable care has been taken to prevent injury being done by the property, and all reasonably probable events have been foreseen and provided against, the occupier is not liable (McDowall v. Great Western Railway, [1903] 2 K. B. 331, C. A.; compare Palmer v. Bateman, [1908] 2 I. R. 393, C. A.; and see note (n), p. 474, post). For cases in which the employment of a contractor to do work affects the liability of the owner or occupier, see p. 471, post.

(a) R. v. Watts (1703), 1 Salk. 357; Russell v. Shenton (1842), 3 Q. B. 449, following Cheetham v. Hampson (1791), 4 Term Rep. 318; Kearney v. London and Brighton Rail. Co. (1871), L. R. 6 Q. B. 759, Ex. Ch. (brick falling from a bridge over the road); Tarry v. Ashton (1876), 1 Q. B. D. 314 (lamp projecting over a highway); Silverton v. Marriott (1888), 59 L. T. 61; Beveridge v. Kinnear & Co. (1883), 21 Sc. L. R. 260 (faultily secured warehouse door); Braithwaite v. Watson, supra (insecure cellar plate in pavement); Palmer v. Bateman, supra (defective guttering). In Robinson v. Reid's Trustees (1900), 37 Sc. L. R. 718, it was held that a passer-by who was injured by falling glass due to the breaking of a sash cord known to be defective could not recover, as no one could possibly contemplate that such an accident would happen; compare Bishop v. Bedford Charity Trustees (1859), 1 E. & E. 697 (area grating); M'Martin v. Hannay (1872), 10 Macph. (Ct. of Sess.) 411 (defective common staircase); see O'Keefe v. Edinburgh Magistrates (1910), 48 Sc. L. R. 50.

(b) Palmer v. Bateman, supra; Tarry v. Ashton, supra; compare Gwinnell v. Eamer (1875), L. R. 10 C. P. 658; O'Keefe v. Edinburgh Magistrates, supra, where it was held that, to make the defendants liable where the plaintiff slipped on ice, formed by the freezing of the overflow from a fountain of which the defendants had control, there must either have been a structural defect in it, which made it overflow, or else some temporary defect brought to their notice. In McLoughlin v. Warrington Corporation (1910), 75 J. P. 57, C. A., it was held that the fact that during a royal procession a man climbed up a fountain, many years old, and dislodged the top stone, which fell and injured a boy in the highway, was evidence upon which the jury could find negligence in having the fountain in a defective condition; compare Barker v. Herbert, [1911] 2 K. B. 633, C. A.; and see title HIGHWAYS, STREETS, AND BRIDGES, Vol. XVI., pp. 133, 134.

(c) Proctor v. Harris (1830), 4 C. & P. 337 (flap in footway giving access to cellar of public-house); Jewson v. Gatti (1886), 2 T. L. R. 441, C. A. (unsafe barrier to area); compare Harrold v. Watney, [1898] 2 Q. B. 320, C. A. (defective fence); Brown v. Eastern and Midlands Rail. Co. (1889), 22

SECT. I.
In Regard to Particular
Parties.

using the highway, is attached to (d) or placed upon the premises (e);

(e) where the nature of the occupation of the premises (f), or the acts done by persons upon the premises (g), are such that injury may be caused to passers-by on the highway (h).

Act of third party.

671. If the injury occurs through the unauthorised interference of a third person causing what would otherwise be safe to become

Q. B. D. 391, C. A. (heap of earth on ground near to highway calculated to cause horses to shy); Shearer v. Malcolm (1898), 35 Sc. L. R. 924 (stepping stone projecting into highway); Watson v. Ellis (1885), 1 T. L. R. 317; De Teyron v. Waring (1885), 1 T. L. R. 414 (carpets placed from doorway to edge of kerb). In Duff v. National Telephone Co., Ltd. (1889), 26 Sc. L. R. 512, it was held not negligent to chain a two-wheeled barrow, not in itself dangerous, to a wall in a lane; but see p. 410, post. Elgin County Road Trustees v. Innes (1886), 24 Sc. L. R. 35, and Stewart v. Wright (1893), 9 T. L. R. 480, are cases where injury was caused by barbed wire fencing adjoining a highway, and the occupiers were held liable; compare Gibson v. Plumstead Burial Board (1897), 13 T. L. R. 273; see Barbed Wire Act, 1893 (56 & 57 Vict. c. 32); and title BOUNDARIES, FENCES, AND PARTY WALLS, p. 128. Compare Fenna v. Clare & Co., [1895] 1 Q. B. 199 (spikes on a wall); and see title NUISANCE, p. 515, post.

(d) As in Tarry v. Ashton (1876), 1 Q. B. D. 314, and Palmer v. Bateman, [1908] 2 I. R. 393, C. A. It must be remembered that where occupiers of premises adjoining a highway had the right of placing goods upon the highway before its dedication, the right remains afterwards (Morant v. Chamberlin (1861), 6 H. & N. 541); and see title HIGHWAYS, STREETS, AND BRIDGES, Vol. XVI., p. 156, note (r).

(e) See cases cited in note (c), p. 399, ante. In A.-G. v. Tod Heatley, [1897] 1 Ch. 560, C. A., it was held to be the duty of an occupier to prevent a nuisance from remaining on his land, although the nuisance was caused by the wrongful acts of the public themselves, namely, throwing refuse on to his land; see title NUISANCE, pp. 527, 555, 556, post.

(f) Byrne v. Boadle (1863), 2 H. & C. 722 (warehousemen raising and lowering bales of goods); Messer v. Cranston & Co. (1897), 35 Sc. L. R. 42 (timber storage); compare Stieffsohn v. Brooke, Bond & Co. (1889), 5 T. L. R. 684 (plaintiff, injured by climbing up to a hole in a wall adjoining the highway, held not entitled to recover, as it was his own fault that he was injured); Pickard v. Smith (1861), 10 C. B. (N. s.) 470 (coal cellar left open).

(g) De Boos v. Collard (1892), 8 T. L. R. 338 (where cellar flap opening suddenly was dangerous to members of the public unless warned, but the defendants were not the occupiers, and were accordingly held not liable); Milne & Co. v. Nimmo (1898), 35 Sc. L. R. 883 (where a horse was yoked and left in a yard and so able to bolt into street); compare Smith v. Wallace & Co. (1898), 35 Sc. L. R. 583, and, as supporting the latter case, Tolhausen v. Davies (1888), 57 L. J. (Q. B.) 392. It appears that a prolonged and loud whistle on a railway adjoining a highway might under certain circumstances, such as proof that there was no necessity to whistle, render the railway company liable if, in consequence, a horse was frightened and damage resulted; see Glancy v. Glasgow and South Western Rail. Co. (1898), 35 Sc. L. R. 462. It would appear not to be negligent to play cricket near to a highway except in very special circumstances; see Ward v. Abraham (1910), 47 Sc. L. R. 252 (where it was held not to be negligent to play quite near to neighbours' premises).

(h) McDowall v. Great Western Railway, [1903] 2 K. B. 331, C. A., and see note (l), p. 399, ante.

dangerous the occupier is not liable (i), unless he knew of the altered and dangerous condition (k).

SECT. 1.
In Regard to Particular
Parties.

SECT. 2.—In Regard to Water.

672. The duties of an occupier of land in regard to water which flows or collects naturally upon it are distinguishable from his duties where the water is brought there or accumulated artificially (l). In the first case, the duties are principally confined to such matters as interference with the natural course of a stream or the pollution of its waters, and such liability as may result does not ordinarily depend on negligence (m). In the second case, the occupier is responsible for that which may escape from his control and prove a source of damage to others (n). It is his duty, therefore, to keep it in control.

Distinction in
duty.

Where the risk to others is due simply to the fact of the artificial treatment of water, the duty upon the occupier is absolute, and no proof of negligence is required if the water escapes and damage ensues (o). Where this is not the case and the risk is due to some extraneous fact or circumstance, liability for negligence only ensues upon proof that such fact or circumstance was due to a wrongful act or omission on the part of the defendant (p).

When proof of wrongful act necessary.

The question of the natural or non-natural user of the land is Natural or non-natural

user.

(i) McDowall v. Great Western Railway, [1903] 2 K. B. 331, C. A. (the defendants left some railway waggons on a siding with the brakes on; some boys went on to the siding, opened the door of the van, took off the brakes, and the carriages ran down the line and knocked down the plaintiff, who was on a level crossing: held, that the defendants were not liable); Barker v. Herbert, [1911] 2 K. B. 633, C. A. (plaintiff, a boy, was injured by falling from a ledge inside defendants' area railing through which he had crawled, an opening having been made by a trespasser breaking the railing: held, that the defendant was not liable, since he had not created the danger or continued it after knowledge that it existed); compare Engelhart v. Farrant & Co., [1897] 1 Q. B. 240, C. A.; Murphy v. Smith (1886), 23 Sc. L. R. 709 (unauthorised forcible interference with sliding door to a yard: the groove had become blocked); compare Beveridge v. Kinnear & Co. (1883), 21 Sc. L. R. 260 (where a faultily secured door was thrown into the street by being hit with a bale of goods lowered from a third person's warehouse); Braithwaite v. Watson (1889), 5 T. L. R. 331 (where it was held to be negligent to leave a cellar plate unsecured so that anyone could move it); and the cases cited in note (c), p. 399, ante.

(k) Silverton v. Marriot (1888), 59 L. T. 61.

(l) See title EASEMENTS AND PROFITS À PRENDRE, Vol. XI., pp. 310, 311, 315.

(m) See titles FISHERIES, Vol. XIV., pp. 569—589; MINES, MINERALS, AND QUARRIES, Vol. XX., pp. 588, 592; NUISANCE, pp. 527 et seq., 546, post; TRESPASS; WATERS AND WATERCOURSES.

(n) Rylands v. Fletcher (1868), L. R. 3 H. L. 330, affirming Fletcher v. Rylands (1866), L. R. 1 Exch. 265, Ex. Ch.; see Smith v. Kenrick (1849), 7 C. B. 515; Hurdman v. North Eastern Rail. Co. (1878), 3 C. P. D. 168, C. A. As to the relative liabilities of a water company and of the occupier of premises in respect of an escape from a service pipe, see Stacey v. Metropolitan Water Board (1911), 9 L. G. R. 174; and title WATER SUPPLY.

(o) Rylands v. Fletcher, supra.

(p) Nichols v. Marsland (1876), 2 Ex. D. 1, C. A.; Fletcher v. Smith (1877), 2 App. Cas. 781; compare Whalley v. Lancashire and Yorkshire Rail. Co. (1884), 13 Q. B. D. 131, C. A.

SECT. 2.
In Regard to Water.

material in considering the origin of the injuries, but is not conclusive of liability (q). Thus an owner of mining rights is entitled to exercise them to the full and is not liable for injury resulting to his neighbour's mine through the percolation of water (r), even if the percolation is guided by artificial means not in the ordinary course of mining (s); but such right does not extend to throwing a greater burden upon his neighbour by operations in the course of mining which discharge into his neighbour's mine a greater quantity of water than would naturally gravitate there (t).

Water supplied to,
and drained
from, houses.

673. Where water is artificially introduced into buildings for supply to the occupants, or is in the ordinary course artificially drained away by pipes or gullies, liability for damage caused by its escape only ensues upon proof of negligence (a).

Liability of
statutory undertakers.

Water companies and others, who are entitled by statute to accumulate water artificially, are not liable except for acts which are not authorised directly or by implication, or for acts which, although authorised, are negligently performed (b).

Sewage.

674. The propositions above stated in regard to water generally apply also to sewage (c).

(q) The natural and non-natural user of land is discussed in Rylands v. Fletcher (1868), L. R. 3 H. L. 330; Wilson v. Waddell (1876), 2 App. Cas. 95; Salt Union, Ltd. v. Brunner, Mond & Co., [1906] 2 K. B. 822; and see title NUISANCE, pp. 525 et seq., post.

(r) Wilson v. Waddell, supra; Lomax v. Stott (1870), 39 L. J. (CH.) 834; Jegon v. Vivian (1871), 6 Ch. App. 742; Harrison, Ainslie & Co. v. Muncaster, [1891] 2 Q. B. 680, C. A.

(s) West Cumberland Iron and Steel Co. v. Kenyon (1879), 11 Ch. D. 782, C. A.

(t) Baird v. Williamson (1863), 15 C. B. (N. S.) 376; Crompton v. Lea (1874), L. R. 19 Eq. 115; Firmstone v. Wheeley (1844), 2 Dow. & L. 203; Whalley v. Lancashire and Yorkshire Rail. Co. (1884), 13 Q. B. D. 131, C. A. (where a railway company, having made an embankment, as it was entitled by statute to do, cut trenches in it, and wrongfully discharged accumulated water upon the plaintiff's land); and see title MINES, MINERALS, AND QUARRIES, Vol. XX., pp. 590, 591.

(a) Blake v. Woolf, [1898] 2 Q. B. 426; see Ross v. Fedden (1872), L. R. 7 Q. B. 661; Carstairs v. Taylor (1871), L. R. 6 Exch. 217; Anderson v. Oppenheimer (1880), 5 Q. B. D. 602, C. A.; Stevens v. Woodward (1881), 6 Q. B. D. 318; Sutton and Ash v. Card, [1886] W. N. 120; Blake v. Land and House Property Corporation, Ltd. (1887), 3 T. L. R. 667; Ruddiman & Co. v. Smith (1889), 60 L. T. 708 (taps left running); Abelson v. Brockman (1889), 54 J. P. 119 (sink stopped up); Gill v. Edouin (1891), 71 L. T. 762, affirmed (1895), 72 L. T. 579, C. A.; Hargroves, Aronson & Co. v. Hartopp, [1905] 1 K. B. 472.

(b) Dunn v. Birmingham Canal Co. (1872), L. R. 8 Q. B. 42, Ex. Ch.; Dixon v. Metropolitan Board of Works (1881), 7 Q. B. D. 418; Snook v. Grand Junction Waterworks Co. (1886), 2 T. L. R. 308; Green v. Chelsea Waterworks Co. (1894), 70 L. T. 547, C. A. For a discussion of the general principles governing the duties of those who exercise statutory powers, see title TORT. Where a canal or waterworks company is guilty of an act which is not authorised, and the remedy for it is provided by the statute from which the company draws its powers, that remedy must be employed. In some cases the statute appears to contemplate that there may also be an action for negligence (Evans v. Manchester, Sheffield and Lincolnshire Rail. Co. (1887), 36 Ch. D. 626). As to unauthorised acts in relation to liability for nuisance, see title NUISANCE, pp. 516 et seq., post.

(c) Rylands v. Fletcher, supra; Tenant v. Goldwin (1704), 2 Ld. Raym.

SECT. 3.—In Regard to Fire.

SECT. 3.

In Regard to Fire.

675. The duty of an occupier of premises, on which a fire is purposely kindled by the agency of the occupier or someone for whom he is responsible, is to secure that it shall not escape beyond the bounds of his premises so as, in the ordinary course, to cause damage to his neighbours or their property, or the public (d). For the results of a fire so kindled he is liable, but he is not liable for the results of a fire which is kindled by accident and without negligence (e), nor of one which is kindled or which spreads through the unauthorised act of a stranger (f), or vis major, or the act of God (g).

Liability only extends to fire purposely kindled by occupier's own agency.

676. If a chimney is on fire in an urban district, there is a statutory presumption of negligence against the occupier resulting in liability to a penalty (h). In the county of London he can, however, recover the penalty summarily in whole or in part from any other person to whose neglect or wilful default he proves the fire to be due (i). Elsewhere in boroughs and urban districts he is liable Liability for chimney fire.

1089; Humphries v. Cousins (1877), 2 C. P. D. 239; Dixon v. Metropolitan Board of Works (1881), 7 Q. B. D. 418; Ballard v. Tomlinson (1885), 29 Ch. D. 115, C. A.; compare Foster v. Warblington Urban Council, [1906] 1 K. B. 648, C. A.; Jones v. Llanrwst Urban Council, [1911] 1 Ch. 393; and see titles NUISANCE, pp. 528, 529, post; SEWERS AND DRAINS.

(d) Jones v. Festiniog Rail. Co. (1868), L. R. 3 Q. B. 733, applying the rule laid down in Rylands v. Fletcher (1868), L. R. 3 H. L. 330; see Beaulieu v. Finglam (1401), Y. B. 2 Hen. 4, 18, pl. 6. The duty applies equally whether the fire is kindled in a building or on premises (Turberville v. Stampe (1697), 1 Ld. Raym. 264; Filliter v. Phippard (1847), 11 Q. B. 347), or in an engine on a highway (Powell v. Fall (1880), 5 Q. B. D. 597, C. A.; Gunter v. James (1908), 24 T. L. R. 868).

(e) Fires Prevention (Metropolis) Act, 1774 (14 Geo. 3, c. 78), s. 86. Although this is a local Act, this provision applies to the whole country. It does not, however, affect agreements on the subject between landlord and tenant (ibid.); and see title LANDLORD AND TENANT, Vol. XVIII., pp. 519, 521. Liability was by this Act removed from one on whose premises fire accidentally commenced. Doubt at one time existed whether in view of this provision liability would attach to an accidental fire, even if there were negligence in causing it (see Canterbury (Viscount) v. A.-G. (1843), 1 Ph. 306, per Lord LYNDHURST, L.C., at p. 320, citing the opinion of Sir William Blackstone), but it is now decided that where negligence is proved liability will still attach (Filliter v. Phippard, supra; see Piggot v. Eastern Counties Rail. Co. (1846), 3 C. B. 229). The effect, therefore, is that, if a fire be proved to be accidental, the plaintiff must show that there was negligence before he can recover (see Vaughan v. Menlove (1837), 3 Bing. (N. C.) 468); and see, further, title INSURANCE, Vol. XVII., p. 542.

(f) Turberville v. Stampe, supra, per HOLT, C.J., but the presumption until the contrary is proved is that it is due to the fault of the occupier (Becquet v. MacCarthy (1831), 2 B. & Ad. 951, per Lord TENTERDEN, C.J., at p. 958). Where a contractor negligently lit a fire upon the property of an employer, it was held that the employer was liable unless he could show that the contractor was not acting within the scope of his contract (Black v. Christchurch Finance Co., [1894] A. C. 48, P. C.).

(g) Turberville v. Stampe, supra, per HOLT, C.J.

(h) Not exceeding £1 (Metropolitan Fire Brigade Act, 1865 (28 & 29 Vict. c. 90), s. 23). As to the enforcement of orders of courts of summary jurisdiction, see title MAGISTRATES, Vol. XIX., pp. 602 et seq.

(i) Ibid.; see title METROPOLIS, Vol. XX., p. 418.

SECT. 3.
In Regard
to Fire.

to the penalty unless he can prove that the fire was in no way due to the carelessness, neglect, or omission of himself or his servants (j).

Fire kindled under statutory
powers.

677. Persons who kindle a fire in the exercise of statutory powers are not liable for injury which is the direct result of doing with all due precautions an act authorised directly or by implication (k); but they are liable for injury which is the result of doing an unauthorised act or the negligent doing of an act which is authorised (l). The precautions required will vary with the circumstances, but may be stated generally to be all such as are practicable, and dictated by reason and experience (m).

Fire escapes in factories, workshops, and certain other buildings.

678. Factories and workshops throughout the country (n), and in London places requiring a licence as places of entertainment, and certain buildings (o), must be provided with means of escape from fire. The provision of appliances for extinguishing fires is not generally required, and in view of the varying degree of risk of fire in different classes of buildings it is not possible to lay down any rule, but it is probable that failure to provide such appliances in factories and places where the risk is considerable would be evidence of negligence (p). The pulling down of buildings rendered dangerous by a fire may be justified (q).

Fire brigades.

Their powers.

679. In London a fire brigade is established by statute (r), and in the case of boroughs, urban districts, and even rural parishes (s) power is given by statute for the establishment of a brigade. Such brigades are authorised by statute to enter and take possession of premises where fire breaks out within their districts (t); but voluntary fire brigades have no such authority, and if they enter on premises without being called upon to do so they enter on them

(j) Penalty not exceeding 10s. (Town Police Clauses Act, 1847 (10 & 11 Vict. c. 89), s. 31; Public Health Act, 1875 (38 & 39 Vict. c. 55), s. 171); see titles NUISANCE, p. 541, post; PUBLIC HEALTH AND LOCAL ADMINISTRATION.

(k) R. v. Pease (1832), 4 B. & Ad. 30; Vaughan v. Taff Vale Rail. Co. (1860), 5 H. & N. 679, Ex. Ch.; Fremantle v. London and North Western Rail. Co. (1860), 2 F. & F. 337, 340; see, generally, title TORT.

(l) Smith v. London and South Western Rail. Co. (1870), L. R. 6 C. P. 14, Ex. Ch.; and see p. 378, ante.

(m) Fremantle v. London and North Western Rail. Co., supra, at p. 340; Dimmock v. North Staffordshire Rail. Co. (1866), 4 F. & F. 1058; Groom v. Great Western Rail. Co. (1892), 8 T. L. R. 253.

(n) Factory and Workshop Act, 1901 (1 Edw. 7, c. 22), ss. 14—16; see title FACTORIES AND SHOPS, Vol. XIV., pp. 467, 468.

(o) See title METROPOLIS, Vol. XX., pp. 488—491; and see ibid., p. 476. Elsewhere boroughs and urban districts have power to make their own provision by bye-law; see titles PUBLIC HEALTH AND LOCAL ADMINISTRATION; THEATRES AND OTHER PLACES OF ENTERTAINMENT; and see title INFANTS AND CHILDREN, Vol. XVII., p. 173.

(p) See Beven, Negligence in Law, 3rd ed., pp. 492, 493.

(q) Dewey v. White (1827), Mood. & M. 56.

(r) See title METROPOLIS, Vol. XX., p. 417.

(s) See titles GAS, Vol. XV., p. 308; LOCAL GOVERNMENT, Vol. XIX., p. 253; PUBLIC HEALTH AND LOCAL ADMINISTRATION.

(t) Metropolitan Fire Brigade Act, 1865 (28 & 29 Vict. c. 90), s. 12; see merely as trespassers (a). A fire brigade maintained by a local authority has power to keep order, and may, if it is considered necessary, exclude the members of a voluntary fire brigade (b).

SECT. 3.
In Regard
to Fire.

680. The London County Council, and presumably any local authority whose officers commit acts of negligence, are liable for the damage caused by such acts (c). The members of a voluntary fire brigade who enter premises where a fire breaks out are jointly and severally liable for similar acts of negligence; and, if they are within the premises without being called upon by the occupier to do so, liability would attach to them as trespassers without proof of acts of negligence (a).

Voluntary
brigades.
Extent of
liability of local authority or of members of voluntary brigade.

681. Railway companies and others who use or make use of engines are liable for such damage as is caused by sparks or cinders emitted from them (d), and, if they are acting under statutory authority, are liable if the engine is negligently used (e), but negligence need not be proved where damage is done to agricultural lands or agricultural crops by sparks or cinders from a railway engine, and a sum not exceeding £100 is claimed, provided due notice is given to the railway company (f).

Damage by sparks from engines.

SECT. 4.—In Regard to Animals.

682. The duty of an owner of animals, apart from statute, varies with the knowledge he has of their character (g). Thus it is his absolute duty to control wild animals which he keeps (h) in a state

Duty varies with knowledge of character.

Joyce v. Metropolitan Board of Works (1881), 44 L. T. 811; Public Health Acts Amendment Act, 1907 (7 Edw. 7, c. 53), s. 87.

(a) See Carter v. Thomas, [1893] 1 Q. B. 673; title TRESPASS.

(b) Ibid.; see Public Health Acts Amendment Act, 1907 (7 Edw. 7, c. 53), ss. 87—89; title METROPOLIS, Vol. XX. pp. 417, 418.

(c) Joyce v. Metropolitan Board of Works, supra. There may be negligence by which a member of the brigade or voluntary helper suffers, and if it is due to defective apparatus the injured person may recover against the authority maintaining the brigade, but if the act complained of is that of a member of the brigade, the doctrine of common employment (as to which see, generally, title MASTER AND SERVANT, Vol. XX., pp. 132 et seq.) will apply, even if the person injured is an infant (Bass v. Hendon Urban District Council (1912), 28 T. L. R. 317, C. A.).

(d) Jones v. Festiniog Rail. Co. (1868), L. R. 3 Q. B. 733; Powell v. Fall (1880), 5 Q. B. D. 597, C. A.; Gunter v. James (1908), 24 T. L. R. 868.

(e) Fremantle v. London and North Western Rail. Co. (1860), 2 F. & F. 337, 340; Smith v. London and South Western Rail. Co. (1870), L. R. 6 C. P. 14, Ex. Ch.; compare Vaughan v. Taff Vale Rail. Co. (1860), 5 H. & N. 679, Ex. Ch.; Shaftesbury (Earl) v. London and South Western Rail. Co. (1895), 11 T. L. R. 269, C. A.; Canadian Pacific Railway v. Roy, [1902] A. C. 220, P. C.; and see title NUISANCE, p. 519, post.

(f) Railway Fires Act, 1905 (5 Edw. 7, c. 11), s. 1; and see, further, titles AGRICULTURE, Vol. I., pp. 279, 280; COMPULSORY PURCHASE OF LAND AND COMPENSATION, Vol. VI., pp. 64 et seq.

(g) See title ANIMALS, Vol. I., pp. 372 et seq. The owner of a dog which has done injury to cattle is liable by statute for the injury done without proof of knowledge of the animal's dangerous propensity or proof of negligence (Dogs Act, 1906 (6 Edw. 7, c. 32), s. 1 (1); see title ANIMALS, Vol. I., p. 397).

(h) As to what constitutes keeping, see Cleverton v. Uffernel (1887), 3 T. L. R. 509, and title ANIMALS, Vol. I., pp. 372 et seq.

SECT. 4.

In Regard to Animals.

Wild animals.

Domestic
animals.

of captivity, or animals which, although not wild by nature, are known by him to be of a savage disposition (i). If they escape from his premises and cause damage (k), or if, while upon his premises, they cause damage to persons who are there by his invitation or licence, he is liable for the damage caused without further proof of negligence (l). In the case of domestic animals not known to be of a savage disposition, he is not bound to keep them in unless he is under a duty to fence, and is therefore not liable for negligence if they wander from his premises and cause damage to another upon a highway (m). If, however, by his own act, or that of someone for whom he is responsible, he causes such an animal to go on to a highway or public place, and leaves it there unattended, in circumstances which result in damage being done to others, he is liable for the damage (n).

(i) See title ANIMALS, pp. 374, 375; Card v. Case (1848) 5 C. B. 622; Wyatt v. Rosherville Gardens (1886), 2 T. L. R. 282; Burton v. Moorhead (1881), 8 R. (Ct. of Sess.) 892; Clark v. Armstrong (1862), 24 Dunl. (Ct. of Sess.) 1320 (a bull is not necessarily to be regarded as savage); Harpers v. Great North of Scotland Rail. Co. (1886), 13 R. (Ct. of Sess.) 1139 (mere notice to a domestic servant of a dog having bitten someone is not sufficient); Colgit v. Norrish (1885), 2 T. L. R. 471, C. A.

(k) May v. Burdett (1846), 9 Q. B. 101; Filburn v. People's Palace and Aquarium Co. (1890), 25 Q. B. D. 258, C. A.

(l) Baker v. Snell, [1908] 2 K. B. 352, 825, C. A.; see also Mansfield v. Baddeley (1876), 34 L. T. 696; Smillie v. Boyd (1886), 24 Sc. L. R. 148; Lowery v. Walker, [1910] 1 K. B. 173, C. A.; reversed on the particular facts, [1911] A. C. 10. A mere trespasser cannot, however, recover (Marlor v. Ball (1900), 16 T. L. R. 239; see Lowery v. Walker, supra). In Baker v. Snell, supra, the plaintiff was a housemaid to the defendant, who owned a dog known to be savage which was in the care of a servant, who incited it to attack the plaintiff. COZENS-HARDY, M.R., and FARWELL, L.J., were of opinion that the owner of such a dog keeps it at his peril, and is liable for any injurious consequences caused by its escape, notwithstanding that it does so by reason of the intervening wilful act of a third party; but KENNEDY, L.J., dissented from this conclusion. The decision of the majority of the Court of Appeal formed the subject of a criticism by the late Mr. Thomas Beven (see Harvard Law Review, May, 1909, p. 465, title "Responsibility for the Keeping of Animals"), which points out that, though the judgments of the majority of the Court of Appeal profess to be based on the decisions of May v. Burdett, supra, and other cases cited in this note, they do not, when examined, go the length of deciding that a defendant is not at liberty to prove facts which may exculpate him. As to the dictum of FARWELL, L.J., in Baker v. Snell, supra, that one who keeps a vicious dog does a wrongful act, and keeps it at his peril in all circumstances, see Beck v. Dyson (1815), 4 Camp. 198; Brook v. Copeland (1794), 1 Esp. 203, cited in Bird v. Holbrook (1828), 4 Bing. 628, 638; Sarch v. Blackburn (1830), 4 C. & P. 297. See also the analogous cases of keeping dangerous things likely to do harm if they escape, cited at p. 407, post. As to invitees and licensees, see pp. 385, 391, ante.

(m) Higgins v. Searle (1909), 100 L. T. 280, C. A.; Hadwell v. Righton, [1907] 2 K. B. 345; Ellis v. Banyard (1911), 106 L. T. 51, C. A.; Jones v. Lee (1911), 106 L. T. 123; see Cox v. Burbidge (1863), 13 C. B. (N. S.) 430; title ANIMALS, Vol. I., pp. 375 et seq. Where, however, the person injured had an interest in the soil of the highway, the owner of the animal might be liable to him in trespass (Higgins v. Searle, supra; see title TRESPASS). As to the duty to fence, see p. 409, post.

(n) Illidge v. Goodwin (1831), 5 C. & P. 190; Whatman v. Pearson (1868), L. R. 3 C. P. 422.

The possession or disposal of animals known by the owner to be suffering from an infectious disease imposes upon him a duty to take precautions that the disease shall not be communicated to animals owned by others (o) or to persons employed by him (p).

SECT. 4.
In Regard to Animals.

Diseased
animals.

SECT. 5.—Dangerous or Injurious Goods or Matter.

683. The possession or use of articles which are dangerous by nature, such as fireworks (q), firearms (r), or dangerous chemicals and explosives (s), imposes upon the person possessing or using them the duty to take the highest possible degree of care (t). The mere fact that an accident results from the possession or use of such articles, where with proper care it should not so result, is prima facie evidence of negligence (a). Persons who leave such articles where they may be meddled with or used by casual passers-by, or others who are ignorant of their dangerous nature, are liable unless they can show that they were not negligent (b).

Duty in respect of articles dangerous by nature.

684. The employment of dangerous or defective machinery (c) or implements (d), or the conduct of dangerous operations (e), also imposes a duty to take the most scrupulous care, and failure to do so will render the person by whom they are employed or conducted liable to an employee (f) or to any injured person who has a right to be where he was when he suffered an injury (g).

Employment
of dangerous agencies or conduct of dangerous
operations.

(o) Cooke v. Waring (1863), 2 H. & C. 332; and, as to the extent of this duty, see, generally, title ANIMALS, Vol. I., pp. 419 et seq.

(p) Davies v. England and Curtis (1864), 33 L. J. (Q. B.) 321.

(q) Whitby v. Brock & Co. (1888), 4 T. L. R. 241, C. A.

(r) Dixon v. Bell (1816), 5 M. & S. 198; Sullivan v. Creed, [1904] 2 I. R. 317, C. A.

(s) Williams v. Eady (1893), 10 T. L. R. 41, C. A.

(t) Dixon v. Bell, supra; Parry v. Smith (1879), 4 C. P. D. 325.

(a) Whitby v. Brock & Co., supra.

(b) Dixon v. Bell, supra; Williams v. Eady, supra; Sullivan v. Creed, supra; compare McDowall v. Great Western Railway, [1902] 1 K. B. 618; reversed, [1903] 2 K. B. 331, C. A., on the ground that there was no evidence to go to the jury of the risk of interference by others.

(c) The European (1885), 10 P. D. 99; Britton v. Great Western Cotton Co. (1872), L. R. 7 Exch. 130.

(d) Clark v. Chambers (1878), 3 Q. B. D. 327.

(e) Holliday v. National Telephone Co., [1899] 2 Q. B. 392, C. A.; Dominion Natural Gas Co., Ltd. v. Collins and Perkins, [1909] A. C. 640, P. C.; The Andalusian (1877), 2 P. D. 231; The George Roper (1883), 8 P. D. 119. As to negligence in the observance of statutory duties imposed to protect employees in dangerous operations, see David v. Britannic Merthyr Coal Co., [1909] 2 K. B. 146, C. A.; Butler (or Black) v. Fife Coal Co., Ltd., [1912] A. C. 149; and see note (c), p. 424, post.

(f) See title MASTER AND SERVANT, Vol. XX., pp. 128 et seq. In the case of defective machinery etc., an employee must prove not only the defect, but that it arose or remained undiscovered by the negligence of the employer himself or his agent (Kiddle v. Lovett (1885), 16 Q. B. D. 605; see title MASTER AND SERVANT, Vol. XX., p. 139).

(g) Holliday v. National Telephone Co., supra; Powell v. Fall (1880), 5 Q. B. D. 587; Blenkiron v. Great Central Gas Consumers Co. (1860), 2 F. & F. 437; Paterson v. Blackburn Corporation (1892), 9 T. L. R. 55, C. A.

SECT. 5.

Dangerous or Injurious Goods or Matter.

Manufacture and supply of electricity and gas, and supply of water.

Sale or loan of dangerous
goods.

Implied
warranty.

Duty imposed on vendor or lender apart from warranty.

685. The manufacture and supply of electricity or gas and the supply of water are commonly regulated by statute, in which case manufacturers or persons giving the supply are not liable except for acts which are not authorised directly or by implication, or for acts which, although authorised, are negligently performed (h). Where the manufacture or supply is not regulated by statute, manufacturers are under an absolute duty to keep the electricity, gas or water under their control (i).

686. The sale of certain goods which are dangerous in themselves is regulated by statute (k).

Apart from such regulation, wherever a person sells goods (l) or supplies them for hire (m) there is a representation, or warranty, express or implied, that they are reasonably fit for the purpose for which they are sold or supplied (n). Where they prove not to be so fit, and damage results to the person to whom they are sold or supplied, the person selling or supplying them incurs liability to him (o). A third party will not have a right of action in respect of any damage incurred in consequence of a representation whether expressed or implied, unless such representation was made fraudulently with the intention that it should be acted on (p) and the damage results from the injured party's reliance on it (q).

Independently, however, of any warranty, the sale or supply of goods, which are known to the person selling or supplying them to be dangerous, imposes on him a duty to warn the person to whom they are sold or supplied if there is a doubt of his perception of the danger (r). Where this duty is neglected and damage results from

(h) See titles ELECTRIC LIGHTING AND POWER, Vol. XII., pp. 563 et seq.; GAS, Vol. XV., pp. 359 et seq.; WATER SUPPLY.

(i) National Telephone Co. v. Baker, [1893] 2 Ch. 186; Eastern and South African Telegraph Co. v. Cape Town Tramways Cos., [1902] A. C. 381, P. C.; Midwood & Co., Ltd. v. Manchester Corporation, [1905] 2 K. B. 597, C. A.; compare Rylands v. Fletcher (1868), L. R. 3 H. L. 330.

(k) E.g., by the Explosives Act, 1875 (38 & 39 Vict. c. 17); see title EXPLOSIVES, Vol. XIV., pp. 380 et seq.; the Pharmacy Acts, 1868 and 1869 (31 & 32 Vict. c. 121; 32 & 33 Vict. c. 117); see title MEDICINE AND PHARMACY, Vol. XX., pp. 377, 381 et seq.; and, as to petroleum, see titles PUBLIC HEALTH AND LOCAL ADMINISTRATION; SHIPPING AND NAVIGATION.

(l) Randall v. Newson (1877), 2 Q. B. D. 102, C. A.

(m) Ibid.; Steel v. State Line Steamship Co. (1878), 3 App. Cas. 72. In Hyman v. Nye (1881), 6 Q. B. D. 685, LINDLEY, J., at p. 688, held that a hired carriage, to be reasonably fit, must be as fit and proper as care and skill can make it for the journey for which it was required, or if no journey was specified, then along roads or on ground reasonably fit for carriages; see title BAILMENT, Vol. I., pp. 550, 551.

(n) Wallis v. Russell, [1902] 2 I. R. 585, C. A.; Bostock & Co., Ltd. v. Nicholson & Sons, Ltd., [1904] 1 K. B. 725; see title FOOD AND DRUGS, Vol. XV., pp. 3, 4.

(o) Priest v. Last, [1903] 2 K. B. 148, C. A.; Wren v. Holt (1903), 72 L. J. (K. B.) 340, C. A.; Frost v. Aylesbury Dairy Co., [1905] 1 K. B. 608, C. A.; Jackson v. Watson & Sons, [1909] 2 K. B. 193, C. A.; see, generally, title SALE OF GOODS.

(p) Langridge v. Levy (1837), 2 M. & W. 519; Thompson v. Lucas (1868), 17 W. R. 520.

(q) Gerhard v. Bates (1853), 2 E. & B. 476; Barry v. Croskey (1861), 2 John. & H. 1; see title MISREPRESENTATION AND FRAUD, Vol. XX., pp. 716, 717.

(r) Clarke v. Army and Navy Co-operative Society, [1903] 1 K. B. 155, the reasonable use of the goods to the person to whom they are sold or supplied, the person selling or supplying them is liable(s). He is also liable in such circumstances to a third party if he had reason to suppose that the goods were sold or supplied for such third party's use(t), or where the third party uses them by his invitation direct or implied(u). In general, however, his liability to third parties is confined to the case of articles dangerous in themselves where it is necessarily the case that such parties will come within their proximity(v).

SECT. 5.
Dangerous or Injurious Goods or Matter.

Liability to
third party.

687. Persons who give or lend goods which are dangerous are not liable for any damage that may result unless they know of the evil character of the goods at the time and fail to warn the person to whom they are given or lent(w).

Knowledge
of dangerous
character.

688. Certain obligations are placed by statute on persons suffering from dangerous infectious disorders to prevent the communication of infection(x).

Notification of infectious disorder.

SECT. 6.—In Regard to Fences.

689. There is no general duty(y) imposed on anyone to fence the boundaries of land except for the purpose of protecting the safety of persons rightfully using the highway either while on the highway itself or when unintentionally straying from it(a). Where there is a duty to fence, the fence must be sufficient having regard to the ordinary user of the land fenced(b).

Nature of
duty.

C. A. The duty exists both where, as in this case, the danger was incident to the ordinary use of the goods but not readily perceived, or where from their construction or otherwise the goods are in such a condition as to cause danger not necessarily incident to the use of them (Heaven v. Pender (1883), 11 Q. B. D. 503, C. A., per COTTON and BOWEN, L.J.J., at p. 517).

(s) Ibid. The duty is a duty as between the parties to the contract (Winterbottom v. Wright (1842), 10 M. & W. 109; Earl v. Lubbock, [1905] 1 K. B. 253, C. A.; compare Caledonian Rail. Co. v. Mulholland, [1898] A. C. 216; Longmeid v. Holliday (1851), 6 Exch. 761).

(t) George v. Skivington (1869), L. R. 5 Exch. 1; see Gladwell v. Steggall (1839), 5 Bing. (N. C.) 733.

(u) Heaven v. Pender, supra; compare Smith v. London and St. Katharine Docks Co. (1868), L. R. 3 C. P. 326.

(v) Dominion Natural Gas Co., Ltd. v. Collins and Perkins, [1909] A. C. 640, P. C.; see Dixon v. Bell (1816), 5 M. & S. 198; Thomas v. Winchester (1852), 6 New York State Reports, 397; Parry v. Smith (1879), 4 C. P. D. 325; and see cases cited in note (o), p. 408, ante. The duty appears to be restricted to the case of things physically dangerous. Thus a valuation or a prospectus does not come within the category of things dangerous in themselves (Le Lievre v. Gould, [1893] 1 Q. B. 491, C. A., per BOWEN, L.J., at p. 503). It is for the court and not for the jury to decide whether a particular thing is within this category (Blacker v. Lake and Elliott (1912), Times, 8th February).

(w) Gautret v. Egerton (1867), L. R. 2 C. P. 371, per WILLES, J., at p. 375; see p. 375, ante; title BAILMENT, Vol. I., pp. 550 et seq.

(x) Public Health Act, 1875 (38 & 39 Vict. c. 55), ss. 126—130; see, generally, title PUBLIC HEALTH AND LOCAL ADMINISTRATION.

(y) Apart from Act of Parliament, agreement to do so, or prescription, see title BOUNDARIES, FENCES, AND PARTY WALLS, Vol. III., pp. 128, 129.

(a) See p. 397, ante; titles BOUNDARIES, FENCES, AND PARTY WALLS, Vol. III., p. 129; HIGHWAYS, STREETS, AND BRIDGES, Vol. XVI., pp. 78, 114, 115, 133.

(b) Sharrod v. London and North Western Rail. Co. (1849), 4 Exch. 580; Manchester, Sheffield and Lincolnshire Railway v. Wallis (1854), 14 C. B.

SECT. 6.
In Regard to Fences.

Where excavations are made on land on which other persons have existing rights, the party making the excavation is bound to fence it so as to prevent injury to such other persons or their cattle (c). The owner of cattle which, being lawfully on the highway, stray on to and cause damage to adjoining unfenced property, is not liable unless he has been negligent (d).

SECT. 7.—In Regard to Highways.

SUB-SECT. 1.—In General.

Liability for obstructions :

(i.) temporary ;

690. The placing of an obstruction upon, or such an improper use of, a highway as amounts to an obstruction of the traffic on it constitutes a nuisance (e). In some cases obstruction of the highway may be authorised by law (f) or agreement (g), and it may be either temporary (h) or permanent (i). Where it is temporary, there is a duty, breach of which is an act of negligence, to remove the obstruction as soon as possible (k), and to see that it is so guarded that the risk to persons using the highway is reduced as 213; Luscombe v. Great Western Railway, [1899] 2 Q. B. 313 (no liability where cattle straying on highway got on the line); Midland Rail. Co. v. Daykin (1855), 17 C. B. 126 (liability where cattle lawfully on highway got on the line); Bessant v. Great Western Rail. Co. (1860), 8 C. B. (N. S.) 368; Wiseman v. Booker (1878), 3 C. P. D. 184; Dawson v. Midland Rail. Co. (1872), L. R. 8 Exch. 8; Dixon v. Great Western Rail. Co., [1897] 1 Q. B. 300, C. A.; compare Knuckey v. Redruth Rural Council, [1904] 1 K. B. 382; Coaker v. Willecocks, [1911] 2 K. B. 124, C. A.

(c) Re Williams v. Groucott (1863), 4 B. & S. 149; see Sybray v. White (1836), 1 M. & W. 435; Hawken v. Shearer (1887), 56 L. J. (Q. B.) 284.

(d) Goodwyn v. Cheveley (1859), 4 H. & N. 631; Tillett v. Ward (1882), 10 Q. B. D. 17; compare Gilligan v. Robb, [1910] S. C. 856.

(e) R. v. Russell (1805), 6 East, 427; R. v. Bartholomew, [1908] 1 K. B. 554; see titles HIGHWAYS, STREETS, AND BRIDGES, Vol. XVI., pp. 151 et seq., 167 et seq.; NUISANCE, p. 524, post.

(f) As in the case of a level crossing on a railway (see Caledonian Rail. Co. v. Ogilvy (1856), 2 Macq. 229, H. L.; Ellis v. London and South Western Rail. Co. (1857), 2 H. & N. 424; Boyd v. Great Northern Rail. Co., [1895] 2 I. R. 555), or of repairs to the highway itself by the highway authority; see title HIGHWAYS, STREETS, AND BRIDGES, Vol. XVI., pp. 101 et seq.

(g) As in the case of a highway dedicated with an obstruction already existing in it (Fisher v. Prouse (1862), 2 B. & S. 770; Cornwell v. Metropolitan Sewers Commissioners (1855), 10 Exch. 771), or of an entrance to a cellar through a pavement (Pickard v. Smith (1861), 10 C. B. (N. S.) 470), or of beams used for shoring up a house (Hoare v. Kearsley (1885), 1 T. L. R. 426); and see title HIGHWAYS, STREETS, AND BRIDGES, Vol. XVI., pp. 44, 45, 251, note (a).

(h) As in the case of stones set down on a road for purposes of repair (Foreman v. Canterbury Corporation (1871), L. R. 6 Q. B. 214).

(i) As in the case of a flap to an entrance to a cellar (Pickard v. Smith, supra), or gates on a level crossing (see cases cited in note (f), supra).

(k) Harris v. Mobbs (1878), 3 Ex. D. 268. Where a medical man was detained at a level crossing for twenty minutes owing to the unreasonable and negligent duty of a railway company's servants to open the gates, the company was held liable in damages (Boyd v. Great Northern Rail. Co., [1895] 2 I. R. 555). In a case of doubt or difficulty any private right of user must yield to the public right (A.-G. v. Brighton and Hove Co-operative Supply Association, [1900] 1 Ch. 276, 281, C. A.).

far as possible (l). Where it is permanent, there is a duty, breach of which is an act of negligence, to maintain it in such a state of security as persons using the highway have become accustomed to expect (m).

SECT. 7.
In Regard to Highways.

(ii.) permanent.

Act of third party.

691. An obstruction which, if normally placed, would be lawful does not render the owner liable if it is tampered with and rendered dangerous by the act of a wrongdoer (n), but a person who places on a highway an obstruction necessarily dangerous to passengers is not relieved from liability by the intervening act of a third party who moves it from one part of the highway to another (o).

692. A person who voluntarily encounters an obstruction cannot recover if, in so acting, he has not conducted himself as a reasonably prudent man (p), nor can one who involuntarily encounters an obstruction, if the effective cause of the damage he suffers is his own carelessness or want of skill (q).

Where obstruction is not the effective cause.

SUB-SECT. 2.—Vehicles on Highways.

693. A duty is imposed by statute upon every person in charge of a vehicle (r) on a highway not to cause any hurt or damage by his carelessness to any other person, or to any animals or goods which are lawfully upon the highway (s). And apart from statute such a person will be liable if, through neglect of proper care, he injures another in person or property (t). Even when animals or goods are negligently left upon the highway, a person who causes them damage is liable for such damage if avoidable negligence on his part is the effective cause of it (u).

Duty in respect of persons, animals, or goods on highway.

(l) Foreman v. Canterbury Corporation (1871), L. R. 6 Q. B. 214; Penny v. Wimbledon Urban Council, [1899] 2 Q. B. 72, C. A. Where the obstruction is open and visible and of a normal description, fencing and guarding is not always required (McLelland v. Johnstone (1902), 39 Sc. L. R. 326; Plantza v. City of Glasgow (1910), 47 Sc. L. R. 638); and see title HIGHWAYS, STREETS, AND BRIDGES, Vol. XVI., pp. 115, note (q), 124, 132 et seq.

(m) Thus entrances to coal shoots and cellars must be kept closed or, when open, must be guarded (Proctor v. Harris (1830), 4 C. & P. 337; Pickard v. Smith (1861), 10 C. B. (N. S.) 470), and the flap or plate must not be kept in a defective condition (Gandy v. Jubber (1864), 5 B. & S. 78; Osborn v. Metropolitan Water Board (1910), 102 L. T. 217; Rosenbaum v. Metropolitan Water Board (1910), 103 L. T. 739, C. A.); and see pp. 399, 410, ante.

(n) Daniels v. Potter (1830), 4 C. & P. 262; compare Bartlett v. Baker (1864), 3 H. & C. 153.

(o) Clark v. Chambers (1878), 3 Q. B. D. 327; and title HIGHWAYS, STREETS, AND BRIDGES, Vol. XVI., p. 161.

(p) Lee v. Nixey (1890), 63 L. T. 285.

(q) Flower v. Adam (1810), 2 Taunt. 314; compare Goldthorpe v. Hardman (1844), 13 M. & W. 377; as to contributory negligence, see pp. 445 et seq., post.

(r) Including a rider of a horse (Williams v. Evans (1876), 1 Ex. D. 277); or a bicycle (Taylor v. Goodwin (1879), 4 Q. B. D. 228).

(s) Highway Act, 1835 (5 & 6 Will. 4, c. 50), s. 78. Failure in this duty renders the offender liable to a penalty; see note (a), p. 412, post.

(t) Boss v. Litton (1832), 5 C. & P. 407, 409; R. v. Jones (1870), 11 Cox, C. C. 545; see p. 416, post.

(u) Davies v. Mann (1842), 10 M. & W. 546. In this case an ass had been left on a highway unattended and with its forefeet fettered. The owner

SECT. 7.

In Regard to Highways.

Duty in driving and in retaining control.

694. It is an unlawful act for a person to drive a vehicle without holding the reins of all the horses in his hands, if there is no other person on foot or on horseback to guide the vehicle; or to quit a vehicle of which he is in charge and go on the other side of the hedge or fence inclosing the highway, or wilfully to be at such a distance from the vehicle of which he is in charge, or in such a situation, that he cannot have the vehicle under his control, or to leave it so as to obstruct the highway (v). Commission of any such act renders the doer liable to a penalty, irrespective of any claim for damage from an accident of which such an act may be shown to be the effective cause (a).

Duty not to prevent passage.

695. It is the duty of a person in charge of a vehicle or beast of burden not to prevent wilfully anybody from passing him or the vehicle or animal under his charge, or to hinder or interrupt such passage (b).

Rule of the road.

696. If a person in charge of a vehicle or beast of burden meets or is overtaken by another vehicle or person or beast of burden, it is his duty to keep to the left or near side of the highway to permit passage (c), and it is a question of fact whether he has left sufficient room for a passer-by (d). Failure to observe any of these duties also renders him liable to a penalty (e), but non-observance of the rule of the road, while casting upon the person who neglects was held entitled to recover in spite of his own negligence, on the ground that the accident, which resulted in the death of the ass, might have been avoided but for the defendant's negligence.

(v) Highway Act, 1835 (5 & 6 Will. 4, c. 50), s. 78. As to leaving vehicles so as to obstruct the highway, see Benjamin v. Storr (1874), L. R. 9 C. P. 400, and, generally, title NUISANCE, p. 524, post.

(a) Highway Act, 1835 (5 & 6 Will. 4, c. 50), s. 78. To leave a carriage unattended is an offence within the meaning of this provision (Phythian v. Baxendale, [1895] 1 Q. B. 768). The offender, if the owner of the vehicle or animal under his charge, is liable on conviction before two justices to a penalty not exceeding £10; if not the owner, to one not exceeding £5. In default of payment he may be sent to prison with hard labour for any time not exceeding six weeks. He may be convicted by his own confession, by the view of a justice, or upon the oath of one or more credible witnesses. He may be arrested without warrant by anyone seeing the offence committed, and be brought before a justice. If he refuses to give his name he may be proceeded against without being named, or may be sent to prison with hard labour for any period not exceeding three months.

(b) Highway Act, 1835 (5 & 6 Will. 4, c. 50), s. 78.

(c) Ibid. This provision embodies what is known as the "Rule of the Road," a custom of very ancient origin based upon the general convenience: "The rule of the road is a paradox quite; for if you go right you go wrong, and if you go left you go right" (old saw). It applies also to persons riding on horses (Williams v. Evans (1876), 1 Ex. D. 277), and to bicycles (Taylor v. Goodwin (1879), 4 Q. B. D. 228). There are, however, certain exceptions generally accepted by custom. Thus, a horse without a rider which is being led, or a horse led by the rider of another horse, by custom keeps to the right or off side, in order to enable the man who is leading it to control it better in passing other occupants of the highway; see pp. 414, 416, post, and title STREET AND AERIAL TRAFFIC.

(d) Wordsworth v. Willan (1805), 5 Esp. 273.

(e) Highway Act, 1835 (5 & 6 Will. 4, c. 50), s. 78. The penalty and the provisions relating to its recovery are those set out in note (a), supra.

it a more stringent obligation to take care (f), is not of itself conclusive evidence of civil liability for the consequences of an accident (g); and there may be occasions when, in order to avoid an accident which would otherwise be inevitable, it is not only justified but required (h).

Where the centre of the highway is used for a tramline, the rule of the road is varied in the case of a vehicle overtaking a tramcar, because of the danger of collision involved in its observance. Overtaking vehicles should in such a case pass the tramcar on its left or near side (i).

In all other cases overtaking vehicles must observe the rule of the road, and should allow for the vehicle which they are about to pass pulling out towards the middle of the road, unless the person in charge of it is seen by the person in charge of the overtaking vehicle to be aware of the latter's intention (k).

697. The speed at which an animal is ridden or a vehicle is driven is material to the question of liability. It is an offence to ride or drive furiously to the danger of any one person or to the common danger of all persons on a highway (l). Both as regards civil and criminal liability, the rate of speed which will be considered dangerous, varies with the nature, conditions, and use of the particular highway and the amount of traffic which actually is, or may be expected to be, on it (m).

698. There is a special obligation to take care, both in regard to

SECT. 7.
In regard to Highways.

Effect of tramlines on rule.

Duty of overtaking vehicles.

Speed.

Guiding considerations.

Cross-roads : level crossings.

(f) Pluckwell v. Wilson (1832), 5 C. & P. 375. The obligation is especially stringent at night (Cruden v. Fentham (1799), 2 Esp. 685).

(g) Williams v. Richards (1852), 3 Car. & Kir. 81; Lloyd v. Ogleby (1859), 5 C. B. (N. S.) 667; North v. Smith (1861), 10 C. B. (N. S.) 572; see Cruden v. Fentham, supra; Clay v. Wood (1803), 5 Esp. 44; Chaplin v. Hawes (1828), 3 C. & P. 554.

(h) Wayde v. Carr (Lady) (1823), 2 Dow. & Ry. (K. B.) 255; Turley v. Thomas (1837), 8 C. & P. 103; Finegan v. London and North Western Rail. Co. (1889), 53 J. P. 663.

(i) Ramsay v. Thomson & Sons (1881), 19 Sc. L. R. 125; Jardine v. Stonefield Laundry Co. (1887), 24 Sc. L. R. 599. Owing to the terms in which the Motor Cars (Use and Construction) Order, 1904, was originally drafted, motor cars were at one time compelled to pass tramcars on the off side, and the owner of a car which passed on the left, or near, side was held liable to a penalty (Burton v. Nicholson, [1909] 1 K. B. 397); but, in consequence of this decision and the judgments delivered in the Divisional Court, the terms of the order have now been altered (Stat. R. & O., 1909, p. 497).

(k) Mayhew v. Boyce (1816), 1 Stark. 423.

(l) Under the Highway Act, 1835 (5 & 6 Will. 4, c. 50), s. 78, the penalty, and the provisions relating to its recovery, are the same as those set out in note (a), p. 412, ante. Under the Public Health Acts Amendment Act, 1907 (7 Edw. 7, c. 53), s. 79, the penalty must not exceed 40s., and the power of arrest without a warrant is only given to a constable who witnesses the offence. The Motor Car Act, 1903 (3 Edw. 7, c. 36), s. 1, dealing with the same subject, creates a variety of offences. It is therefore necessary in proceedings against an offender to particularise the offence in order to avoid duplicity (R. v. Wells (1904), 68 J. P. 392); see title STREET AND AERIAL TRAFFIC.

(m) Le Lievre v. Gould, [1893] 1 Q. B. 491, C. A., per Lord Esher, M.R., at p. 497; compare the Motor Car Act, 1903 (3 Edw. 7, c. 36), s. 1; Elwes v. Hopkins, [1906] 2 K. B. 1; and see title STREET AND AERIAL TRAFFIC.

SECT. 7. speed and otherwise, at cross-roads or recognised crossings(n), or In Regard to where the footpath is crowded and persons may be forced into the Highways. roadway (o).

Examples of negligent acts in connection with driving etc.

699. Driving with defective apparatus if the defect might reasonably have been discovered (p), or with a horse improperly harnessed (q), or leaving a horse or carriage unattended in a public place (r), or spurring a horse when close to other persons (s), are negligent acts, which render a defendant liable for injuries of which they are the effective cause. But the fact that a horse, which has strayed on a highway, kicks a child (t), or that a horse harnessed to a vehicle runs away (u) or stops without warning (a), or that a vehicle skids (b), is not conclusive evidence of negligence.

Intervention
 of third party.

A driver on a highway may be liable for negligence jointly with another (c), and this may be the case even where the injury is actually caused by that other (d), but not where the injury results solely from the intervention of a third party (e).

(n) Williams v. Richards (1852), 3 Car. & Kir. 81; see also Springett v. Ball (1865), 4 F. & F. 472. It is the duty of traffic on a side road to give way to that on a main road (Macandrew v. Tillard (1908), 46 Sc. L. R. 111). A similar duty rests on traffic emerging from a private road on to a highway (Campbell and Cowan & Co. v. Train (1910), 47 Sc. L. R. 475).

(o) Martin v. North Metropolitan Tramways Co. (1887), 3 T. L. R. 600, C. A.

(p) Welsh v. Lawrence (1818), 2 Chit. 262; Templeman v. Haydon (1852), 12 C. B. 507; Cotterill v. Starkey (1839), 8 C. & P. 691; compare The European (1885), 10 P. D. 99. But this is not the case where the defect was not known to the person sued (Doyle v. Wragg (1857), 1 F. & F. 7; Moffatt v. Bateman (1869), L. R. 3 P. C. 115). As to injuries to persons who have hired a defective vehicle, see Hyman v. Nye (1881), 6 Q. B. D. 685; title BAILMENT, Vol. I., pp. 550, 551; and p. 408, ante.

(q) Burkin v. Bilezikdjı (1889), 5 T. L. R. 673 (where a horse which was too large was put into the shafts of a van); Simson v. London General Omnibus Co. (1873), L. R. 8 C. P. 390 (where a horse addicted to kicking was harnessed to an omnibus without a kicking strap being used).

(r) Illidge v. Goodwin (1831), 5 C. & P. 190; Lynch v. Nurdin (1841), 1 Q. B. 29; M'Ewan v. Cutbill (1897), 35 Sc. L. R. 58; compare Goodman v. Taylor (1832), 5 C. & P. 410; and see pp. 411, 412, ante.

(s) North v. Smith (1861), 10 C. B. (N. S.) 572.

(t) Cox v. Burbidge (1863), 13 C. B. (N. S.) 430; see title ANIMALS, Vol. I., pp. 377, 378.

(u) Gibbons v. Pepper (1695), 1 Ld. Raym. 38; Hammack v. White (1862), 11 C. B. (N. S.) 588; Holmes v. Mather (1875), L. R. 10 Exch. 261; Manzoni v. Douglas (1880), 6 Q. B. D. 145. But it might be otherwise if it were known that the owner of the horse knew or ought to have known it to be dangerous and unfit to be driven (Villiers v. Avey (1887), 3 T. L. R. 812).

(a) Watson v. Wordie & Co. (1906), 8 F. (Ct. of Sess.) 876.

(b) Wing v. London General Omnibus Co., [1909] 2 K. B. 652, C. A.; Parker v. London General Omnibus Co. (1909), 101 L. T. 623, C. A.; compare Barnes Urban District Council v. London General Omnibus Co. (1908), 100 L. T. 115, where, however, the vehicle was known to be likely to skid.

(c) Davey v. Chamberlain (1802), 4 Esp. 229; see title TORT.

(d) See R. v. Swindall and Osborne (1846), 2 Car. & Kir. 230, where two persons were driving separate vehicles and abetting each other's furious driving, and both were tried for manslaughter and found guilty; see title CRIMINAL LAW AND PROCEDURE, Vol. IX., p. 582, note (l). As to criminal negligence, see p. 420, post.

(e) R. v. Ledger (1862), 2 F. & F. 857; Scott v. Shepherd (1773), 2 Wm. Bl. 892.

Where the driver is a servant, and the negligent act is done in pursuance of his employment, the master is liable (f).

700. If the vehicle is a hired vehicle, the person to whom it is hired is only liable for the negligence of the driver in so far as he is in a position to control the actions of the driver (g). A mere passenger, even though sitting by the side of the driver, and, therefore, physically in a position to control his actions (h), is not liable for the driver's negligence (i).

701. Though tramway companies have a statutory right to the use of a highway for the construction of tramlines and the running of trams (k), this right is subject to a duty to take care that the safety and convenience of the public are preserved (l). They have no monopoly of the highway, and are bound to permit others to use it as freely as if there were no tramway except where they would be intercepting or interfering with the use of the tramway as such (m). They are subject to the same liability as the owners or drivers of other vehicles for driving recklessly or dangerously (n), or for the use of defective apparatus (o).

SECT. 7.
In Regard to Highways.

Master and servant.
Hired vehicles.

Liability of tramways
undertakers.

(f) Quarman v. Burnett (1840), 6 M. & W. 499; Gordon v. Rolt (1849), 4 Exch. 365; Seymour v. Greenwood (1861), 7 H. & N. 355, Ex. Ch.; Williams v. Jones (1865), 3 H. & C. 602, Ex. Ch., per BLACKBURN, J., at p. 609. There is no liability attaching to the master where the act is a wanton one on the part of the servant done to effect some purpose of his own (Croft v. Alison (1821), 4 B. & Ald. 590; Beard v. London General Omnibus Co., [1900] 2 Q. B. 530, C. A.; Sanderson v. Collins, [1904] 1 K. B. 628, C. A.), but there may be if the act, though contrary to the master's orders, was done by the servant to serve his master's interests (Limpus v. London General Omnibus Co. (1862), 1 H. & C. 526, Ex. Ch.); see title MASTER AND SERVANT, Vol. XX., pp. 253 et seq.

(g) M'Laughlin v. Pryor (1842), 4 Man. & G. 48; Wheatley v. Patrick (1837), 2 M. & W. 650.

(h) Pike v. London General Omnibus Co. (1891), 8 T. L. R. 164.

(i) Compare the London Hackney Carriages Act, 1843 (6 & 7 Vict. c. 86), which alters the relationship of driver and cab-proprietor to that of master and servant, so far as concerns the public (King v. London Improved Cab Co. (1889), 23 Q. B. D. 281, C. A.; Keen v. Henry, [1894] 1 Q. B. 292, C. A.; see title STREET AND AERIAL TRAFFIC), though, as between the parties themselves, leaves them in the position of bailor and bailee (Smith v. London General Motor Cab Co., Ltd., [1911] A. C. 188 (claim under the Workmen's Compensation Act, 1906 (6 Edw. 7, c. 58))); see title MASTER AND SERVANT, Vol. XX., p. 67.

(k) Tramways Act, 1870 (33 & 34 Vict. c. 78); see, generally, title TRAMWAYS AND LIGHT RAILWAYS.

(l) Dublin United Tramways Co. v. Fitzgerald, [1903] A. C. 99, per Lord HALSBURY, L.C., at p. 103; Ogston v. Aberdeen District Tramways Co., [1897] A. C. 111.

(m) Ibid.; Hartley v. Chadwick (1904), 68 J. P. 512. The extent of their rights may be varied by the terms of the local Act, if any, under which they are constructed (Montreal City v. Montreal Street Railway, [1903] A. C. 482, P. C.); but they have, in general, no right to interfere with the use in safety of the highway by others (Ogston v. Aberdeen District Tramways Co., supra).

(n) M'Dermid v. Edinburgh Street Tramways Co. (1884), 22 Sc. L. R. 13; Rattee v. Norwich Electric Tramway Co. (1902), 18 T. L. R. 562, C. A. The (o) For note (o) see next page.

SECT. 7.

SUB-SECT. 3.—*Pedestrians on Highways.In Regard to Highways.

Rights and duties of pedestrians.

702. Persons on foot, even if infirm, have a right to be upon a highway, and are entitled to the exercise of reasonable care on the part of persons driving vehicles upon it (p); but they are not exempt from a duty to take care of themselves (q). The amount of care reasonably to be required of them depends on the usual and actual state of the traffic (r), and on the question whether the foot-passenger is at a recognised crossing or not (s).

Vehicles passing pedestrians.

Duty of driver.

703. The rule of the road does not apply to vehicles passing persons on foot (t), and the fact that a vehicle is on the wrong side of the road does not free a foot-passenger from his duty to look out (a). But the duty of the driver of a vehicle is not satisfied by creating a warning noise (b), and in an emergency, where either the vehicle or the foot-passenger must alter his course to avoid collision, the driver of the vehicle does not escape liability if he cannot show that he has tried to pull up or to one side (c).

SECT. 8.—*In Regard to Wharves and Docks.*SUB-SECT. 1.—Duties in Respect of Wharves and Docks.

Definition of wharf.

704. A wharf is a place constructed for the convenience of loading or unloading vessels, on the shore or margin of a harbour, river, or canal (d).

amount of care to be observed varies with regard to the circumstances of the highway (Martin v. North Metropolitan Tramways Co. (1887), 3 T. L. R. 600, C. A.; Hartley v. Chadwick (1904), 68 J. P. 512; see Leaver v. Pontypridd Urban District Council (1911), 56 Sol. Jo. 32, H. L.; Brocklehurst v. Manchester, Bury, Rochdale and Oldham Steam Tramways Co. (1886), 17 Q. B. D. 118).

(o) Sadler v. South Staffordshire and Birmingham District Steam Tramways Co. (1889), 23 Q. B. D. 17, C. A.

(p) Boss v. Litton (1832), 5 C. & P. 407; see Cotterill v. Starkey (1839), 8 C. & P. 691; Anderson v. Blackwood (1885), 23 Sc. L. R. 227.

(q) Cotterill v. Starkey, supra; Cotton v. Wood (1860), 8 C. B. (N. S.) 568; Hawkins v. Cooper (1838), 8 C. & P. 473; Williams v. Richards (1852), 3 Car. & Kir. 81.

(r) Smith v. Browne (1891), 28 L. R. Ir. 1, per HOLMES, J., at p. 5; see Clerk v. Patrie (1879), 16 Sc. L. R. 626; Allen v. North Metropolitan Tramways Co. (1888), 4 T. L. R. 561, C. A.; Shearer v. Dunedin Corporation, a New Zealand case cited without reference by Beven, Negligence in Law, 3rd ed., Vol. I., p. 549.

(s) Williams v. Richards, supra; Springett v. Ball (1865), 4 F. & F. 472.

(t) Cotterill v. Starkey (1839), 8 C. & P. 691.

(a) Hawkins v. Cooper (1838), 8 C. & P. 473; Lloyd v. Ogleby (1859), 5 C. B. (N. S.) 667; Clay v. Wood (1803), 5 Esp. 44.

(b) Smith v. Browne (1891), 28 L. R. Ir. 1.

(c) Ibid.; Clerk v. Petrie (1879), 16 Sc. L. R. 626; M'Kechnie v. Couper (1887), 14 R. (Ct. of Sess.) 345. The duty may be based on either of two grounds, the fact that a vehicle is capable of moving at a greater pace than a foot-passenger, or that, in the event of an accident, it is capable of doing so much more damage; compare the rule as between steamers and sailing vessels (Shannon (1828), 2 Hag. Adm. 173; Perth (1838), 3 Hag. Adm. 414); see title SHIPPING AND NAVIGATION.

(d) Haddock v. Humphrey, [1900] 1 Q. B. 609, C. A.; Ellis v. Cory & Sons (1901), 85 L. T. 499, C. A.; and see titles SHIPPING AND NAVIGATION; WATERS AND WATERCOURSES. Wharves are of two kinds, legal and sufferance; as to the latter, see Meyerstein v. Barber (1866), L. R. 2 C. P. 38, 50.

A dock is an artificial inclosure, connected with a harbour or a river, provided for the reception of vessels, and is generally shut off from the harbour or river by gates. A dock may be a dry or graving dock—that is, one which is used for the inspection and repair of vessels—or a wet dock, which is used for loading and unloading them (e).

SECT. 8.
In Regard to Wharves
and Docks.

Definition
of dock.

705. A wharfinger does not necessarily undertake to moor safely the vessels coming to his wharf (f), but, where, for profit, he agrees to allow his wharf to be used by a vessel, he must use reasonable diligence to ascertain whether the berth and the approaches to it are in an ordinary condition of safety for vessels coming to and lying at it (g). Thus, if a jetty is so placed that a vessel using it must at low water either come upon some obstruction (h), or ground, the wharfinger must see that the obstruction is moved or that the bed is fit for the vessel to ground on, or warn the person in charge of the vessel (i): if he fails to do so, and the vessel is injured, he is liable, even if the control of the bed of the river or berth is in other hands, such as harbour commissioners or trustees, on whom the duty of keeping it safe is imposed (k).

Duty of
wharfinger with respect to use of wharf.

706. The duty of dock-owners to the ships using their docks frequently depends on the statutes which regulate their authority, as well as on the condition and situation of the dock (l).

Duty of dock-owner with respect to use of dock.

(e) See titles SHIPPING AND NAVIGATION; WATERS AND WATERCOURSES.

(f) Curling v. Wood (1847), 16 M. & W. 628, Ex. Ch. (vessel damaged by woodwork under the water at low tide).

(g) Tredegar Iron and Coal Co. v. Steamship "Calliope" (Owners), The "Calliope," [1891] A. C. 11; compare The Bearn, [1906] P. 48, C. A.; The Moorcock (1889), 14 P. D. 64, C. A.

(h) E.g., a "campshed," as in White v. Phillips (1863), 15 C. B. (N. S.) 245; compare Curling v. Wood, supra.

(i) The Moorcock, supra; Tredegar Iron and Coal Co. v. Steamship "Calliope," (Owners), The "Calliope," supra; The Bearn, supra; White v. Phillips, supra.

(k) The Bearn, supra; The Moorcock, supra. Harbour boards or trustees may be liable to vessels injured by their negligence in carrying out the duties imposed on them, such as by allowing a particular channel or berth to become unsafe (e.g., The Bearn, supra; Mersey Docks and Harbour Board v. Penhallow (1861), 7 H. & N. 329, Ex. Ch., affirmed in Mersey Docks Trustees v. Gibbs (1866), L. R. 1 H. L. 93, and followed in Campbell v. Hornsby (1873), 7 L. R. C. L. 540, Ex. Ch.; Dormont v. Furness Rail. Co. (1883), 11 Q. B. D. 496; Bede Steamship Co. v. River Wear Commissioners, [1907] 1 K. B. 310, C. A.; R. v. Williams (1884), 9 App. Cas. 418, P. C.), or by the negligence of the harbour-master in giving directions which when followed result in a vessel being grounded (Reney v. Kircudbright Magistrates, [1892] A. C. 264), unless the accident is occasioned by some peculiarity of the build of the vessel of which the harbour-master is ignorant and uninformed, or misinformed by the captain (Lloyd v. Iron (1865), 4 F. & F. 1011). Where the directions for a change of station are given by the harbour-master in the exercise of discretionary statutory powers, the captain of the vessel so changed must still take all precautions to ensure the vessel's safety, and cannot throw the whole burden of the consequences of the change on to the harbour-master (The Excelsior (1868), L. R. 2 A. & E. 268); see, generally, titles SHIPPING AND NAVIGATION; WATERS AND WATERCOURSES.

(l) The Excelsior, supra (dock-master having discretionary power under

SECT. 8.
In Regard to Wharves
and Docks.

Duty as regards ships and persons connected therewith.

Generally speaking, their duty is to take reasonable care that ships entering and using their docks may do so in safety, both as regards the ships themselves and the persons connected with their working (m). If a ship is damaged by an obstruction, such as an accumulation of mud (n), or something sunk (o), or a snag (p), they are liable if they either knew of the obstruction and failed to remove it or to give warning of it, or if they had the means of knowing of it and neglected to use those means (q). Thus, where the defendants opened a dock for public use, when the channels leading to it were in such a state as to be dangerous to ships of large size, they were held to be negligent (r). If the dock is obviously not a dry dock, but is represented by the proper representative of the dock-owners to be fit for use as such, and as having a level bottom, the owners are liable if, in consequence of so using the dock, the vessel is injured by the bottom being uneven (s).

Duty of dock-
owner with respect to repair of ship.

707. Where the proprietor of the dock undertakes the repair of the ship he must take care to have it properly attended to. So where a sufficient number of workmen were not provided, and in consequence of a high tide breaking down the dock gates the ship was injured, the proprietor was held liable as, had there been a sufficient number of men, precautions could have been taken to prevent the damage after the danger was seen to be approaching (t).

statute to change the station of a ship, and using his discretion reasonably, is not liable for damage that may arise); compare Thompson v. North Eastern Rail. Co. (1860), 2 B. & S. 106, 119.

(m) Parnaby v. Lancaster Canal Co. (1839), 11 Ad. & El. 223, 243, Ex. Ch., approved in Mersey Docks Trustees v. Gibbs (1866), L. R. 1 H. L. 93, affirming Mersey Docks and Harbour Board v. Penhallow (1861), 7 H. & N. 329, Ex. Ch.; compare Bede Steamship Co. v. River Wear Commissioners, [1907] 1 K. B. 310, C. A.

(n) Bede Steamship Co. v. River Wear Commissioners, supra; Mersey Docks and Harbour Board v. Penhallow, supra; Mersey Docks Trustees v. Gibbs, supra, followed and applied in Campbell v. Hornsby (1873), 7 I. R. C. L. 540, Ex. Ch.

(o) Parnaby v. Lancaster Canal Co., supra (sunken barge); White v. Phillips (1863), 15 C. B. (N. S.) 245 (camp-shed); compare Curling v. Wood (1847), 16 M. & W. 628, Ex. Ch.; Forbes v. Lee Conservancy Board (1879), 4 Ex. D. 116.

(p) R. v. Williams (1884), 9 App. Cas. 418, P. C.

(q) Mersey Docks Trustees v. Gibbs, supra; The Moorcock (1889), 14 P. D. 64, C. A.; compare Butler v. M'Alpine, [1904] 2 I. R. 445, C. A.

(r) Thompson v. North Eastern Rail. Co., supra. Even if those in charge of the ship knew of the danger and exposed the ship to it the defendants might still be liable, unless those in charge did not act prudently (ibid.); compare Clayards v. Dethick (1848), 12 Q. B. 439; Williams v. Swansea Harbour Trustees (1863), 14 C. B. (N. S.) 845; Bede Steamship Co. v. River Wear Commissioners, supra.

(s) "Apollo" (Owners) v. Port Talbot Co., The "Apollo", [1891] A. C. 499. They would not be liable if the only representation was that other vessels had grounded safely and "this one can try her luck" (ibid.). In Wright & Son v. Lethbridge (1890), 63 L. T. 572, C. A., the foreman in a Royal dockyard was held not to be a servant of the defendants (Government officials) for this purpose; see Story, Law of Agency, para. 313.

(t) Leck v. Maestaer (1807), 1 Camp. 138. In Hibbs v. Ross (1866), L. R. 1 Q. B. 534, it was stated that those in charge of a ship are generally in the

There is no duty on the part of dock-owners to continue to do a voluntary act merely because it has been previously done (a).

SECT. 8.
In Regard to Wharves
and Docks.

708. The duty of wharfingers and dock-owners with respect to persons using their premises is to have those premises reasonably safe for those coming on to them on business (b).

Duty with respect to persons using premises.

SUB-SECT. 2.—Duty in Respect of Plant and Tackle supplied.

709. Where dock-owners or wharfingers in the course of their business provide plant or tackle for the use of ships (c), or appliances for obtaining access to them (d), they are liable for injuries caused by defects in plant, tackle, or appliances where used in connection with the business of the ship or of the dock-owners or wharfingers (e).

Duty of dock-owners and wharfingers.

SUB-SECT. 3.—Duty in Respect of Goods landed.

710. A wharfinger does not necessarily act as warehouseman, but may do so; his business, strictly, is concerned with the reception and dispatch of goods (f), and he is usually responsible as a common carrier for the delivery of the goods to a properly authorised person (g). His responsibility in respect of the goods may by agreement be limited (h).

Wharfinger:
(i.) as common carrier;

employ of the shipowners: a ship-keeper was held so to be employed in absence of proof that he was employed by someone else, e.g., the dock-owners.

(a) Such as the altering of mooring ropes, as the level of the water in the dock, and, in consequence, the ships in it sank (Loader v. London and India Docks Joint Committee (1891), 8 T. L. R. 5, C. A.).

(b) Smith v. London and St. Katharine Docks Co. (1868), L. R. 3 C. P. 326, following Corby v. Hill (1858), 4 C. B. (N. S.) 556; Moore v. Ransome's Dock Committee (1898), 14 T. L. R. 539, C. A., distinguishing Wakelin v. London and South Western Rail. Co. (1886), 12 App. Cas. 41; compare Keeble v. East and West India Dock Committee (1889), 5 T. L. R. 312, C. A. (where a stanchion, which supported a chain on a dock bridge, gave way on being seized by a person who slipped on the bridge, and it was held that there was no negligence, as the stanchion was not placed there to support persons falling); and see p. 385, ante.

(c) Scott v. London and St. Katherine Docks Co. (1865), 3 H. & C. 597, Ex. Ch.

(d) Smith v. London and St. Katharine Docks Co., supra; Loader v. London and India Docks Joint Committee, supra.

(e) Smith v. London and St. Katharine Docks Co., supra. Semble, a guest or person hawking goods would not usually be on such business; see Moore v. Ransome's Dock Committee, supra; and see p. 388, ante. As to cases under the Workmen's Compensation Act, 1906 (6 Edw. 7, c. 58), relating to accidents on quays and wharves, see title MASTER AND SERVANT, Vol. XX., pp. 168 et seq.

(f) E.g., Leigh v. Smith (1825), 1 C. & P. 638; for the duties of a sufferance wharfinger, compare Meyerstein v. Barber (1866), L. R. 2 C. P. 38, per WILLES, J., at p. 50.

(g) Cobban v. Downe (1803), 5 Esp. 41; followed in Leigh v. Smith, supra; compare Harman v. Anderson (1809), 2 Camp. 243; see Holl v. Griffin (1833), 10 Bing. 246; compare Chattock & Co. v. Bellamy & Co. (1895), 64 L. J. (Q. B.) 250; and see, generally, titles BAILMENT, Vol. I., pp. 562, 563; CARRIERS, Vol. IV., p. 11.

(h) Maving v. Todd (1815), 1 Stark. 72.

SECT. 8.
In Regard to Wharves
and Docks.

(ii.) as warehouseman.

Dock-owners as warehousemen and wharfingers.

If he acts as warehouseman he undertakes the duties and responsibilities of his position, and must take ordinary care of the goods entrusted to him.

711. Dock-owners are usually warehousemen and wharfingers, and their duties, apart from any special contract that may be made, is to take reasonable and ordinary care in dealing with the goods received by them in their capacity of warehousemen and wharfingers (i).

Part III.—Criminal Negligence and Neglect of Statutory Duty.

SECT. 1.—Relation between Civil and Criminal Remedies for Negligence.

When civil and criminal proceedings are both available.

712. Where negligence consists in or involves an unlawful act or default which is an offence against the public, and renders the person (j) who is guilty of the act or default liable to legal punishment, the negligent act or default amounts to a crime (k), and where such act or default results in injury to a private person, a right to take civil proceedings may enure to such private person and co-exist with the right to award punishment in proceedings instituted at the suit of the Crown (l).

Negligent act or default amounting to a crime.

713. A negligent act or default amounts to a crime where either (1) the statute law (m) or (2) the common law imposes for the benefit of the public some duty to refrain from such act or omission, as the case may be, and visits the negligent non-performance of such duty with a liability to punishment (n), but, even where injury results to an individual from such a negligent act or default, it

(i) See titles BAILMENT, Vol. I., pp. 544 et seq.; CARRIERS, Vol. IV., pp. 12, 13; and as to his lien, see titles BAILMENT, Vol. I., pp. 547, 549, 561; CARRIERS, Vol. IV., p. 93.

(j) A joint-stock company can be guilty of such an offence (R. v. Tyler and International Commercial Co., [1891] 2 Q. B. 588, C. A.).

(k) See title CRIMINAL LAW AND PROCEDURE, Vol. IX., p. 232.

(l) Ibid.; and see p. 421, post. As to the necessity for taking criminal proceedings before instituting a civil action, see titles ACTION, Vol. I., p. 27 et seq.; TORT.

(m) Where a statute imposes a duty and does not provide a penalty or punishment, a right of action will generally accrue to an individual who is injured by a breach of that duty; see Dawson & Co. v. Bingley Urban Council, [1911] 2 K. B. 149, C. A., per FARWELL and KENNEDY, L.JJ., at pp. 156, 159. For a statement of three classes of cases where a liability founded on a statute may be established, see Wolverhampton New Waterworks Co. v. Hawkesford (1859), 6 C. B. (N. S.) 336, 356; see p. 422, post; and titles ACTION, Vol. I., p. 8; PUBLIC AUTHORITIES AND PUBLIC OFFICERS; TORT. As to the construction of statutes, see title STATUTES.

(n) For a list of such cases, see title CRIMINAL LAW AND PROCEDURE, Vol. IX., p. 582, note (l). The infliction of a pecuniary fine is not necessarily punishment: it may be intended as a pecuniary compensation (R. v. Tyler and International Commercial Co., supra, per BOWEN, L.J., at p. 594).

does not necessarily follow that the individual so injured has a cause of action. The State, in imposing for the benefit of the public a duty to take care, may exclude or refrain from imposing any duty towards any individual (o), in which case there is usually no reason why any right should be either impliedly or expressly given to an individual to bring an action for damages resulting from the want of such care; or it may have regard to the benefit of individuals, or of the public, or of some class of the public regarded as a collection of individuals, in which case a duty towards any of the individuals intended to be benefited may reasonably co-exist with the duty towards the State, and it may reasonably be expected that a right of action will impliedly or expressly be given to any such individual, or member of such class, to bring an action for damages resulting from the want of such care (p).

Even where an action for damages resulting from the want of such care is not given by legislation, there may be a co-existing duty owed by the criminal party towards the injured party which is identical with that owed by the criminal party to the State, and in that case also an act which is criminally negligent may give rise to a civil action (q). In cases where a right of action is so given, or such an identical duty to take care co-exists and is broken, the act which is criminally negligent may be the ground of a civil action. In other cases the relation between a negligent act regarded as a crime and the same act regarded as a civil wrong arises from the fact that any statement of a legally recognised duty to take care, in order to be complete, must take account of all relevant provisions of the law of the State, criminal as well as civil, and that where any particular act is a breach of duties imposed by different parts of that law, it is necessary to apply the same principles of law and rules of evidence to each aspect of it (r).

SECT. 1.
Relation between Civil and Criminal Remedies
for Negligence.

Where duty towards individual excluded.

Where individual remedy may exist.

Remedy by virtue of co-existing duty on the part of person in default.

(o) M. Kinnon v. Penson (1853), 8 Exch. 319, 329. Under the Probation of Offenders Act, 1907 (7 Edw. 7, c. 17), s. 1 (3), a court having power to inflict punishment may, in addition to any other order made under that Act, order the offender to pay such damages for injury or compensation for loss as the court thinks reasonable, not exceeding in the case of a court of summary jurisdiction £10 or any higher limit fixed by the Act relating to the offence; see title MAGISTRATES, Vol. XIX., p. 605.

(p) Beckford v. Hood (1798), 7 Term Rep. 620, 627; Pharmaceutical Society v. Wheeldon (1890), 24 Q. B. D. 683, per HAWKINS, J., at p. 690; Crosfield (Joseph) & Sons, Ltd. v. Manchester Ship Canal Co., [1904] 2 Ch. 123, C. A., per VAUGHAN WILLIAMS, L.J., at p. 133 (such a remedy is particularly likely to be given where the Act is in the nature of a private legislative bargain between persons likely to be affected and a body of undertakers); Butler (or Black) v. Fife Coal Co., [1912] A. C. 149. If an absolute duty is imposed on mine-owners by a statute they must be liable to those for whose benefit it is imposed: if the duty imposed is less than absolute there is prima facie a right given to those for whose benefit it has been passed to enforce civil liability for a breach of it (ibid., per Lord KINNEAR, at p. 160).

(q) R. v. Noakes (1866), 4 F. & F. 920. The statute may be some evidence of what is due and ordinary care (Blamires v. Lancashire and Yorkshire Rail. Co. (1873), L. R. 8 Exch. 283, 289, Ex. Ch.). And as to the difference in the degree of negligence necessary to establish liability, see ibid., and p. 425, post.

(r) R. v. Cator (1802), 4 Esp. 117, 136, per HOTHAM, B., at p. 144. There is no difference in point of evidence whether the case be a criminal or

SECT. 2.

Neglect of or Negligence in Performing
Statutory Duty.

Negligence :
a duty to take care and a breach of the duty.

Neglect : omission to perform
statutory duty.

Where no remedy for breach of duty imposed for benefit of class.

Statutory duty not commensurate
with remedy.

SECT. 2.—Neglect of or Negligence in Performing Statutory Duty.

714. In the case of a public authority or a body exercising statutory powers a duty to take care may or may not exist in favour of a particular individual(s). Where such a duty exists, the authority or body is liable for an injury caused to such individual by a breach of the duty to take care so owed to him, unless the statute expressly or impliedly excludes such liability (t).

Accordingly, as negligence involves the existence of a duty to take care and a breach of such duty, an individual who is injured by negligence in the performance of a statutory duty has a right of action in respect of such negligence unless such right is expressly or impliedly excluded (u).

715. A neglect of, that is an omission to perform, a statutory duty, as distinguished from negligence in the performance of it, does not give rise to a right of action in favour of a person suffering damage by reason of such omission unless such right is expressly or impliedly given by statute (a).

716. When a statute imposes a duty for the benefit of a class and no remedy is provided for a breach of it, an action will lie for a breach of such duty at the suit of any member of the class who is injured thereby (b).

717. When a statute imposes such a duty and a remedy is civil case; the same rules must apply to both; compare Ward v. Hobbs (1878), 4 App. Cas. 13; O'Brien v. Arbib & Co., [1907] S. C. 975.

(s) Even without negligence a liability may arise from the use of something which involves danger and is not authorised expressly or by necessary implication (West v. Bristol Tramways Co., [1908] 2 K. B. 14, C. A.).

(t) As to cases where the statute expressly or impliedly excludes such liability, see p. 423, post. In Raleigh Corporation v. Williams, [1893] A. C. 540, P. C., it was held that a right of action existed for breach of a duty to repair part of a drainage system but not for negligent construction of another part as to which arbitration was indicated as the remedy.

(u) Hartnall v. Ryde Commissioners (1863), 4 B. & S. 361, as limited by Maguire v. Liverpool Corporation, [1905] 1 K. B. 767, C. A.; Ohrby v. Ryde Commissioners (1864), 5 B. & S. 743; Scott v. Manchester Corporation (1867), 2 H. & N. 204, Ex. Ch.; Foreman v. Canterbury Corporation (1871), 40 L. J. (Q. B.) 138; Taylor v. Greenhalgh (1876), 24 W. R. 311, C. A.; Bathurst Borough v. Macpherson (1879), 4 App. Cas. 256, P. C.; Shoreditch Corporation v. Bull (1904), 90 L. T. 210, H. L.; McLelland v. Manchester Corporation (1911), 28 T. L. R. 21; Dawson & Co. v. Bingley Urban Council, [1911] 2 K. B. 149, C. A.; and the cases relating to negligence by railway companies in performing their statutory duty to fence, cited in note (b), p. 409, ante.

(a) Cowley v. Newmarket Local Board, [1892] A. C. 345; Sydney Municipal Council v. Bourke, [1895] A. C. 433, P. C.; Saunders v. Holborn District Board of Works, [1895] 1 Q. B. 64; Maguire v. Liverpool Corporation, supra; and see note (p), p. 421, ante.

(b) Groves v. Wimborne (Lord), [1898] 2 Q. B. 402, C. A. Neglect to take all reasonable means to secure compliance with a rule by his servants may be negligence of the master (David v. Britannic Merthyr Coal Co., Ltd., [1910] A. C. 74; Buller (or Black) v. Fife Coal Co., [1912] A. C. 149; compare Watkins v. Naval Colliery Co. (1897), Ltd., [1911] 2 K. B. 162, C. A.); see title MASTER AND SERVANT, Vol. XX., p. 130.

provided which is not commensurate with the duty, an action at law may arise on the cessation of the statutory remedy (c).

718. Where a statutory remedy is given for a particular breach of duty for which there is an already existing remedy, these remedies may co-exist, but if it appears that the statutory remedy is intended to supersede the previously existing one, and it is unreasonable that they should co-exist, the statutory remedy excludes the other (d).

719. Where a new obligation is created by a statute, and performance of that obligation is directed by the statute to be enforced in a specified manner, no other means of enforcing it exists (e); but where it appears from the language used, and the nature of the duty, that it was within the purview of the legislature in the particular statute (f) to give a private right of action in addition to the remedy, or means provided for enforcing that obligation, then a right of action may arise for the neglect of it. It is a question in each case whether the legislature so intended or not (g).

720. The failure to perform a duty imposed by a statute under the sanction of a penalty may (a), although it does not necessarily (b), give a right of action to an individual injured by that omission.

SECT. 2.
Neglect of or Negligence in Performing
Statutory Duty.

Statutory remedy co-existing with remedy previously available.

When
statutory remedy is the only remedy.

Duty imposed
under sanction of a penalty.

(c) Pulsford v. Devenish, [1903] 2 Ch. 625 (remedy for neglect of liquidator's duty to pay pari passu after completion of winding up).

(d) Great Northern Fishing Co. v. Edgehill (1883), 11 Q. B. D. 225; compare Wolverhampton New Waterworks Co. v. Hawkesford (1859), 6 C. B. (N. S.) 336; Burgess v. Northwich Local Board (1880), 6 Q. B. D. 264.

(e) Doe d. Rochester (Bishop) v. Bridges (1831), 1 B. & Ad. 847; Saunders v. Holborn District Board of Works, [1895] 1 Q. B. 64; compare Cowley v. Newmarket Local Board, [1892] A. C. 345; Robinson v. Workington Corporation, [1897] 1 Q. B. 619, C. A.; E. v. Hall, [1891] 1 Q. B. 747; and see title MAGISTRATES, Vol. XIX., p. 579.

(f) Atkinson v. Newcastle Waterworks Co. (1877), 2 Ex. D. 441, C. A.; Groves v. Wimborne (Lord), [1898] 2 Q. B. 402, C. A.; Dawson & Co. v. Bingley Urban Council, [1911] 2 K. B. 149, C. A., per KENNEDY, L.J., at p. 159.

(g) In Dawson & Co. v. Bingley Urban Council, supra, a breach of the duty imposed by the Public Health Act, 1875 (38 & 39 Vict. c. 55), s. 66, to provide marks indicating the position of street fire-plugs, for breach of which no penalty was imposed, was held to give a right of action where damages resulting from a fire were increased by the delay in finding the fire-plug, owing to the indicating marks being incorrectly placed; and see Vallance v. Falle (1884), 13 Q. B. D. 109.

(a) Clarke v. Holmes (1862), 7 H. & N. 937, Ex. Ch.; Caswell v. Worth (1856), 5 E. & B. 849; Groves v. Wimborne (Lord), supra (cases of unfenced machinery); Pickering v. James (1873), L. R. 8 C. P. 489 (returning officer liable in damage to a party aggrieved for breach of the former's duty to see that the official mark was on the ballot paper); compare Kelly v. Glebe Sugar Refining Co. (1893), 30 Sc. L. R. 758 (unfenced shafting); Britannic Merthyr Coal Co., Ltd. v. David, [1910] A. C. 74; Baddeley v. Granville (Earl) (1887), 19 Q. B. D. 423; Butler (or Black) v. Fife Coal Co., Ltd., [1912] A. C. 149 (mining regulations).

(b) Especially when the sole penalty is a fine (Saunders v. Holborn District Board of Works, supra; Institute of Patent Agents v. Lockwood, [1894] A. C. 347; Robinson v. Workington Corporation, supra; Atkinson v. Newcastle Waterworks Co., supra; Pictou Municipality v. Gelderi, [1893] A. C. 524, P. C.; Cowley v. Newmarket Local Board, supra; compare Doe d. Rochester (Bishop) v. Bridges, supra. The law as stated in Couch v. Steel (1854), 3 E. & B. 402, by Lord CAMPBELL, C.J., at

SECT. 2.
Neglect of or Negligence in Performing
Statutory Duty.

When remedy
available.

Where the statute aims at the protection of a particular class (c), or at the attainment of a particular purpose, which in the ordinary course is calculated to benefit a particular individual or member of a class (d), an individual injured by a neglect of the obligation, either as one of that class, or by reason of being affected by the failure to attain that particular purpose, may have his remedy although a penalty is imposed by the statute (e). Where the obligation is to do something for the public generally, or for so large a body of persons that they can only be dealt with en masse,

p. 414, "that a person suffering private special damage for the breach of a statutory duty did not lose his remedy because the act imposed a penalty," was doubted in Atkinson v. Newcastle Waterworks Co. (1877), 2 Ex. D. 441, C. A., and treated as overruled in Saunders v. Holborn District Board of Works, [1895] 1 Q. B. 64.

(c) E.g., persons coming under statutory provisions relating to factories and workshops (Coe v. Platt (1851), 6 Exch. 752; affirmed (1852), 7 Exch. 460, Ex. Ch.; Coe v. Platt (1852), 7 Exch. 923; Caswell v. Worth (1856), 5 E. & B. 849; Clarke v. Holmes (1862), 7 H. & N. 937, Ex. Ch.; Kelly v. Glebe Sugar Refining Co. (1893), 30 Sc. L. R. 758; Groves v. Wimborne (Lord), [1898] 2 Q. B. 402, C. A.; Iles v. Abercarn Welsh Flannel Co. (1886), 2 T. L. R. 547; O'Brien v. Arbib & Co., [1907] S. C. 975; compare Hoey v. Dublin and Belfast Junction Rail. Co. (1870), 5 I. R. C. L. 206). It appears that contributory negligence (see p. 445, post) may be an answer to an action for negligence by breach of an express statutory duty to fence (Morrison v. General Steam Navigation Co. (1853), 8 Exch. 733; Iles v. Abercarn Welsh Flannel Co., supra; Caswell v. Worth, supra; see title MASTER AND SERVANT, Vol. XX., p. 121); but "volenti non fit injuria" is not (ibid.; Baddeley v. Granville (Earl) (1887), 19 Q. B. D. 423; Britton v. Great Western Cotton Co. (1872), L. R. 7 Exch. 130; compare Clarke v. Holmes, supra; Thomas v. Quartermaine (1887), 18 Q. B. D. 685, C. A. (persons coming within the provisions of mining regulations); Britannic Merthyr Coal Co., Ltd. v. David, [1910] A. C. 74; Butler (or Black) v. Fife Coal Co., Ltd., [1912] A. C. 149; see title FACTORIES AND SHOPS, Vol. XIV., pp. 531, 532). As to general rules for safety in mines, see title MINES, MINERALS, AND QUARRIES, Vol. XX., pp. 611 et seq. Where the person injured is not one of the class contemplated by the legislature, although the negligence complained of may be a breach of the statute, the person injured cannot set up that breach (O'Brien v. Arbib & Co., supra; see title FACTORIES AND SHOPS, Vol. XIV., p. 482).

(d) Such as provisions for shipment or carriage of dangerous goods (Brass v. Maitland (1856), 6 E. & B. 470; Williams v. East India Co. (1802), 3 East, 192; Cramb v. Caledonian Rail. Co. (1892), 29 Sc. L. R. 869; see title CARRIERS, Vol. IV., p. 27); provisions regulating level crossings, or gates, or fences, in connection with railways (Williams v. Great Western Rail. Co. (1874), L. R. 9 Exch. 157, as explained in Wakelin v. London and South Western Rail. Co. (1886), 12 App. Cas. 41, 43; Brooks v. London and North Western Rail. Co. (1884), 33 W. R. 167; compare Corry v. Great Western Rail. Co. (1881), 7 Q. B. D. 322, C. A.; Charman v. South Eastern Rail. Co. (1888), 21 Q. B. D. 524, C. A.; Woods v. Caledonian Rail. Co. (1886), 23 Sc. L. R. 798 (fences); see titles BOUNDARIES, FENCES, AND PARTY WALLS, Vol. III., pp. 130, 131; RAILWAYS AND CANALS). For breaches of the Merchant Shipping Act, see title SHIPPING AND NAVIGATION.

(e) Compare Ward v. Hobbs (1878), 4 App. Cas. 13 (where a statute made it an offence to send an animal suffering from contagious disease to market, and an animal so suffering was sold on the terms of "no warranty," it was held that the statute did not affect private bargains; see title FOOD AND DRUGS, Vol. XV., p. 4, note (h)); and compare Gorris v. Scott (1874), L. R. 9 Exch. 125.

and the failure to comply with the obligation is liable to affect all such persons alike, although not necessarily in the same degree, no separate right of action will arise from the mere failure to fulfil the obligation (f), but a criminal breach of a statutory duty may be used as evidence of negligence in some cases where a duty to take care exists otherwise than by virtue of the statute, as, for example, in the case of passengers on a railway (g), or on a highway (h).

SECT. 2.
Neglect of or Negligence in Performing
Statutory
Duty.

SECT. 3.—Negligence in the Performance of other than Statutory Duties where such Negligence amounts to Crime.

721. Where the duty to take care imposed by the common law for the benefit of the public is identical with the duty imposed for the benefit of an individual, the want of care required to constitute criminal negligence is in general at least as great as that required to found an action for damages (i). In such cases, therefore, where there is criminal negligence there is also civil liability unless

What want of care is necessary to constitute criminal
negligence.

(f) See Clegg, Parkinson & Co. v. Earby Gas Co., [1896] 1 Q. B. 592, per WILLS, J., at p. 594; see Dawson & Co. v. Bingley Urban Council, [1911] 2 K. B. 149, C. A. From Leader v. Moxton (1773), 3 Wils. 461, it appears that if a person carry out statutory duties in an oppressive manner, and could have avoided the injury thereby caused, he is liable; and see Yorkshire West Riding Council v. Holmfirth Urban Sanitary Authority, [1894] 2 Q. B. 842, C. A.; A.-G. v. Dorking Union Guardians (1882), 20 Ch. D. 595, C. A.; Saunders v. Holborn District Board of Works, [1895] 1 Q. B. 64; Beaumont v. Huddersfield Corporation (1902), 19 T. L. R. 97, C. A., where the statute gave a right to individuals injured to sue for penalties; and see title PUBLIC HEALTH AND LOCAL ADMINISTRATION.

(g) North Eastern Rail. Co. (Directors etc.) v. Wanless (1874), L. R. 7 H. L. 12; Woods v. Caledonian Rail. Co. (1886), 23 Sc. L. R. 798; Williams v. Great Western Rail. Co. (1874), L. R. 9 Exch. 157 (gates open at level crossing where the statute enjoined they should be closed); Blamires v. Lancashire and Yorkshire Rail. Co. (1873), L. R. 8 Exch. 283, Ex. Ch.; see title CARRIERS, Vol. IV., p. 52.

(h) Lights are now required to be placed on certain vehicles at night; see Lights on Vehicles Act, 1907 (7 Edw. 7, c. 45); Local Government Act, 1888 (51 & 52 Vict. c. 41), s. 85; Locomotives Acts, 1865 (28 & 29 Vict. c. 83) and 1898 (61 & 62 Vict. c. 29), s. 5; and Locomotives on Highways Act, 1896 (59 & 60 Vict. c. 36). Breach of this duty, although punishable on summary conviction with a fine, would be evidence of negligence in case of a collision occurring at night; compare Walker v. Stretton (1896), 60 J. P. 313; Williams v. Groves (1896), 12 T. L. R. 450 (cases on bye-laws before the Lights on Vehicles Act, 1907 (7 Edw. 7, c. 45)). Where, however, the provisions of bye-laws are such that they cannot be complied with literally, a breach does not always carry with it liability for negligence. Thus where a bye-law obliged a cabman to be either at the horse's head or on the driver's seat, and the cabman went to the back of the cab to get some food for the horse, which thereupon bolted and injured the plaintiff, it was held that the breach of the bye-law was not negligent (Shaw v. Croall & Sons (1885), 22 Sc. L. R. 792). As to lights at sea, see title SHIPPING AND NAVIGATION. As to lights on motor cars and bicycles, see title STREET AND AERIAL TRAFFIC.

(i) R. v. Noakes (1866), 4 F. & F. 920; Edsall v. Russell (1842), 4 Man. & G. 1090, 1099; R. v. Markuss (1864), 4 F. & F. 356; R. v. Lowe (1850), 3 Car. & Kir. 123; R. v. Nicholls (1875), 13 Cox, C. C. 75; R. v. Franklin (1883), 15 Cox, C. C. 163; R. v. Doherty (1887), 16 Cox, C. C. 306; compare

SECT. 3.
Negligence
in the Performance of other than Statutory
Duties etc.

civil process is for some reason unavailable, as in the case of an infant in arms neglected by its parent (k), or in a case where contributory negligence, which is no defence in a criminal charge, is available in a civil action as showing that the real cause of the injury was the act of the party injured (l).

Part IV.—Negligence arising out of Special Relations.

SECT. 1.—Carriers by Road, by Railway, and by Sea.

SUB-SECT. 1.—Damage to Passengers or their Luggage.

Duty and responsibility of carrier of passengers
for hire.

722. A carrier (m) of passengers for hire undertakes to carry his passengers (n) with due care and to carry them safely as far as reasonable care and forethought can attain that end (o). He is liable for any negligence on the part of himself or his servants (p). He is answerable for the soundness and sufficiency of any means of conveyance provided by him, and is bound to provide against defects by periodical examination when necessary, and it is prima facie evidence of negligence against him if a passenger is injured by reason of want of soundness or sufficiency, or want of such examination, of the means of conveyance (q).

Hammack v. White (1862), 11 C. B. (N. S.) 588 ; R. v. Fenton (1830), 1 Lew. C. C. 179. For examples of cases where the omission or breach of some duty to take care amounts to crime, see title CRIMINAL LAW AND PROCEDURE, Vol. IX., p. 582, note (l).

(k) This duty exists at common law apart from the Children Act, 1908 (8 Edw. 7, c. 67), Part II.; see R. v. Friend (1802), Russ. & Ry. 20, C. C. R.; and title CRIMINAL LAW AND PROCEDURE, Vol. IX., pp. 582 et seq., 623 ; and see the notes to ibid., pp. 582 et seq.

(l) See title CRIMINAL LAW AND PROCEDURE, Vol. IX., p. 586, note (c). Evidence to show contributory negligence on the part of the deceased is relevant, as tending to prove that the negligence of the accused was not the real cause of the death of the deceased ; see R. v. Bunney (1894), 6 Queensland L. J. 80. As to contributory negligence, see pp. 445 et seq., post.

(m) Any person who carries goods or passengers for hire or gratuitously is a carrier ; see title CARRIERS, Vol. IV., p. 2.

(n) A passenger is one who travels or is carried in some vessel or vehicle (Oxford English Dictionary) ; compare note (d), p. 429, post. As to whether the payment of a fare is for certain purposes essential, see The "Lion" (1869), L. R. 2 P. C. 525 ; White v. Boulton (1791), Peake, 113 [81] ; Aston v. Heaven (1797), 2 Esp. 534 ; Hamilton v. Caledonian Rail. Co. (1857), 19 Dunl. (Ct. of Sess.) 457.

(o) See title CARRIERS, Vol. IV., pp. 44, 45 ; Simson v. London General Omnibus Co. (1873), L. R. 8 C. P. 390.

(p) Ansell v. Waterhouse (1817), 6 M. & S. 385.

(q) Israel v. Clark (1803), 4 Esp. 259 ; Francis v. Cockrell (1870), L. R. 5 Q. B. 501, Ex. Ch. ; Simson v. London General Omnibus Co., supra.

A gratuitous carrier is bound to exercise due and reasonable care and skill (r), and when his occupation or profession implies the possession of a certain degree of skill he is liable for injuries caused by his failure to use that degree of skill (s).

SECT. 1.
Carriers by Road, by Railway,
and by Sea.

723. The liability of a carrier of passengers may be varied by contract (t), and may, in the case of a railway having statutory powers, be altered by enactments relating to the provision of means of, and facilities for, conveyance and incidental accommodation, and to the liability incurred (a).

Duty of gratuitous carrier.
Variation of liability by contract.

724. A railway company is liable for negligence (b) in the performance of any duty or the exercise of any power conferred on it by statute for the benefit of passengers if such negligence causes injury to any passenger, whether he is being carried for reward or not (c). It is also liable to any passenger for any negligence, whether occurring on its own line or not (d), in the performance of the contract of carriage, when such passenger is carried for reward (e). It is also liable to any person lawfully on any part

Liability of a railway company.

(r) Lygo v. Newbould (1854), 9 Exch. 302; Austin v. Great Western Rail. Co. (1867), L. R. 2 Q. B. 442; Moffatt v. Bateman (1869), L. R. 3 P. C. 115; Foulkes v. Metropolitan District Rail. Co. (1880), 5 C. P. D. 157, C. A., per BAGGALLAY, L.J., at p. 164; Harris v. Perry & Co., [1903] 2 K. B. 219; and see p. 367, ante.

(s) See title CARRIERS, Vol. IV., p. 5; and see pp. 368, 374, ante.

(t) See p. 428, post.

(a) See title RAILWAYS AND CANALS.

(b) Railway companies are bound to use proper care and skill in carrying their passengers; they are not liable as common carriers of passengers independently of negligence (East Indian Railway v. Kalidas Mukerjee, [1901] A. C. 396, P. C.).

(c) See title CARRIERS, Vol. IV., p. 46; Marshall v. York, Newcastle and Berwick Rail. Co. (1851), 11 C. B. 655; Austin v. Great Western Rail. Co., supra; compare Coyle v. Great Northern Rail. Co. (1887), 20 L. R. Ir. 409.

(d) The liability is co-extensive with the contractual relation (Great Western Rail. Co. v. Blake (1862), 7 H. & N. 987, Ex. Ch.; Thomas v. Rhymney Rail. Co. (1871), L. R. 6 Q. B. 266, 273; Daniel v. Metropolitan Rail. Co. (Directors etc.) (1871), L. R. 5 H. L. 45, 55; compare Wright v. Midland Rail. Co. (1873), L. R. 8 Exch. 137). There is equally a duty to take care whether the obligation to carry arises from contract or from statute (East Indian Railway v. Kalidas Mukerjee, supra, at p. 402).

(e) As to the question how far the carriage, where there is a contract, is in pursuance of a private contract and not merely of a public duty, see Lyles v. Southend-on-Sea Corporation, [1905] 2 K. B. 1, C. A. As to what constitutes a contract with the passenger, see Brien v. Bennett (1839), 8 C. & P. 724; Cooke v. Midland Rail. Co. (1892), 9 T. L. R. 147, C. A. As to special terms exempting the carrier from liability, see McCawley v. Furness Rail. Co. (1872), L. R. 8 Q. B. 57; Gallin v. London and North Western Rail. Co. (1875), L. R. 10 Q. B. 212; and note (o), p. 428, post. As to the necessity of knowledge or adequate means of knowledge of such special terms in order to make them binding, see cases cited in notes (p), (q), p. 428, post, and notes (r)—(c), p. 429, post. In the case of an infant, even if the contract contains an express exemption of the carrier from liability for negligence, the carrier still is liable (Flower v. London and North Western Rail. Co., [1894] 2 Q. B. 65; see title INFANTS AND CHILDREN, Vol. XVII., pp. 63, 64).

SECT. 1.
Carriers by Road, by Railway,
 and by Sea.

Passenger's
 luggage.

Liability of common carrier.

Liability for luggage deposited in railway cloak-room.

Limitation
 by special contract of liability in respect of passenger or goods deposited.

of its premises for any injury caused by negligence on the part of the company or its servants (f).

725. A passenger is entitled to take with him while he is in transit (g) a reasonable amount of ordinary personal luggage (h), and the obligation of a common carrier in reference to the luggage so taken (i), so far as it is not varied by statute or by special contract (k), is to afford reasonable facilities for the carriage of it (l), and to be responsible as a common carrier for the safety of it so far as it is within the carrier's custody and control (m).

726. A railway company receiving a passenger's luggage or other chattels in a cloak-room is, in the absence of special contract, only bound to take proper care that the luggage or other chattels are safely kept from loss or injury (n).

727. A special contract limiting the liability of the company, either in respect of a contract of carriage or a deposit of chattels, may be entered into and may result from the acceptance for carriage of a passenger or the deposit of a chattel, with notice of the special terms on which the company agrees to carry or to accept the deposit, and will so result if the special terms are either brought to the knowledge of the passenger or bailor or are so brought to his attention that it is reasonable in the circumstances to assume that he assented to them (o). Such an assent will be assumed without actual knowledge where the passenger or bailor knows that a ticket, receipt, or other document handed to him contains writing, whether it is printed on the back (p) or on the face (q), and that the writing contains conditions, or where the delivery to (f) Watkins v. Great Western Rail. Co. (1877), 37 L. T. 193; Rogers v. Rhymney Rail. Co. (1872), 26 L. T. 879; Thatcher v. Great Western Rail. Co. (1893), 10 T. L. R. 13, C. A.; Dublin, Wicklow and Wexford Rail. Co. v. Slattery (1878), 3 App. Cas. 1155 (persons crossing rails and injured by negligence); Davey v. London and South Western Rail. Co. (1883), 12 Q. B. D. 70, C. A. (person injured while on public footway). For other cases relating to persons injured while on a level crossing, see note (a), p. 388, ante, and note (f), p. 393, ante; compare note (i), p. 401, ante; and for other cases where persons so injured were themselves guilty of contributory negligence, see p. 445, post.

(g) See title CARRIERS, Vol. IV., pp. 42, 43.

(h) Ibid., p. 40.

(i) Ibid., p. 41.

(k) Ibid., p. 43.

(l) Ibid., p. 40.

(m) Ibid., p. 42.

(n) See title BAILMENT, Vol. I., p. 549. If the company fails to take such care it is responsible for the value of the chattels, but not for consequential damages arising from the loss (ibid.).

(o) Zunz v. South Eastern Rail. Co. (1869), L. R. 4 Q. B. 539; Parker v. South Eastern Rail. Co., Gabell v. Same (1877), 2 C. P. D. 416, C. A., per MELLISH, L.J., at pp. 422, 423; and see titles BAILMENT, Vol. I., p. 549; CARRIERS, Vol. IV., pp. 29, 54. As to the necessity for such an agreement being not unreasonable, see title CARRIERS, Vol. IV., pp. 28, 31, 35, 36.

(p) Harris v. Great Western Rail. Co. (1876), 1 Q. B. D. 515 (clear reference on face to conditions on back).

(q) Stewart v. London and North Western Rail. Co. (1864), 3 H. & C. 135; compare Henderson v. Stevenson (1875), L. R. 2 Sc. & Div. 470.

him of such ticket (r), receipt (a), or other document (b), in such a manner that he can see that there is writing on it, is reasonable notice that the writing contains conditions (c).

728. The liability of a carrier of passengers by sea (d) is altered, in the case of a ship, by statutory enactments relating to the ship, the manning and equipment of it, the provision made for passengers on it, the making of the contract of carriage and breaches of such contract (e), and the liability in respect of injuries to passengers from negligence in the performance of such contract (e).

Independently of special conditions imposed by statute or by contract (f), the owner, and, on his behalf, the master of a ship, is bound to make reasonable provision for the food (g), comfort (h), and accommodation (i), and to take reasonable care for the safety (j), of passengers throughout the voyage (k), having due regard to what is customary in that respect (l), and to provide reasonable facilities for the carriage of a passenger's luggage (m), provided it is not in excess of what is usual on a similar voyage (n).

Sub-SECT. 2.—Damage to Goods.

729. A common carrier of goods is responsible for the safety of the goods entrusted to him in all events except when loss or injury arises from the act of God, or the King's enemies, or is caused by the inherent defect of the goods (o), or by their dangerous nature, unless the carrier knew or ought to have known of it, or by the act or omission of the consignor himself or of some

SECT. 1.
Carriers by Road, by Railway,
and by Sea.

Liability of carriers by sea.

Liability of common carrier of goods.

(r) Le Blanche v. London and North Western Rail. Co. (1876), 1 C. P. D. 286, C. A.

(a) See title BAILMENT, Vol. I., p. 549.

(b) Lockyer v. International Sleeping Car and European Express Train Co. (1892), 61 L. J. (Q. B.) 501 (official guide); Woodgate v. Great Western Rail. Co. (1884), 51 L. T. 826 (time table).

(c) Richardson, Spence & Co., and "Lord Gough" Steamship Co. v. Rowntree, [1894] A. C. 217. As to conditions in bills of lading, see Crooks v. Allan (1879), 5 Q. B. D. 38 (type too small to attract notice); title SHIPPING AND NAVIGATION.

(d) The term "passenger" for the purposes of the Merchant Shipping Act, 1894 (57 & 58 Vict. c. 60), Part III., includes any person carried in a ship other than the master and crew, and the owner, his family, and servants (Merchant Shipping Act, 1894 (57 & 58 Vict. c. 60), s. 267; The Hanna (1866), L. R. 1 A. & E. 283); compare note (n), p. 426, ante.

(e) See title SHIPPING AND NAVIGATION.

(f) Any reasonable person must suppose that there will, in a contract of carriage of a passenger by sea, be conditions regulating the conduct of the passenger, and giving the shipowner powers of control, without which it would be impossible to secure the safety of passengers or their luggage (Acton v. Castle Mail Packets Co. (1895), 11 T. L. R. 518).

(g) Siordet v. Brodie (1812), 3 Camp. 253; Chamberlain v. Chandler (1823), 3 Mason, 242, 245, 246.

(h) Andrews v. Little & Co. (1887), 3 T. L. R. 544, C. A. (neglect to provide means for getting out of berth).

(i) Adderley v. Cookson (1809), 2 Camp. 15.

(j) Andrews v. Little & Co., supra.

(k) As to the commencement of the voyage, see Gillan v. Simpkin (1815), 4 Camp. 241.

(l) Ibid.

(m) Upperton v. Union-Castle Mail Steamship Co. (1902), 19 T. L. R. 123 (luggage stowed in vacant lavatory and damaged by water).

(n) Macrow v. Great Western Rail. Co. (1871), L. R. 6 Q. B. 612.

(o) See title CARRIERS, Vol. IV., pp. 10, 27, and see p. 371, ante.

SECT. 1.

Carriers by Road, by Railway,
and by Sea.

Variation of
liability.

Liability of carriers in other cases.

person for whom the consignor is responsible (p); and, save in reference to these excepted cases, it is unnecessary to allege any want of care in an action for loss or injury (q). In reference to these excepted cases he is bound to take all reasonable means to protect the goods from damage arising in consequence of any of the causes above specified, and, if he negligently fails to do so, is liable for any loss or damage resulting from such negligence (r).

The common law liability of a common carrier of goods for loss, injury, or delay cannot be varied by the exhibition of a public notice purporting to vary it (s), but may be varied by statute (t) or by a special contract with the consignor in relation to the goods carried (u).

730. A carrier of goods who is not a common carrier, or a common carrier when carrying goods of which he is not a common carrier, or when carrying goods outside the scope of his public employment, is liable for negligence in such carriage (w), but may protect himself from such liability by a contract which contains sufficiently clear language exonerating him (x).

A shipowner carrying goods by sea is entitled to limit his liability for loss arising from the negligence of the master or crew of his ship without his own fault or privity (a).

SECT. 2.—Bailees.

Liability of gratuitous
bailee.

731. A gratuitous bailee is, in the absence of any special agreement, bound to exercise that degree of diligence (b), in the safe custody of the chattel entrusted to him, which men of common prudence exercise about their own affairs, and is liable for negligence if, after taking into account all the circumstances, he is found to have failed to exercise it (c).

(p) See title CARRIERS, Vol. IV., pp. 8, 9, 15, 16. As to his duties in respect of delivery, see ibid., pp. 11—17; Bristol and Exeter Railway (Directors etc.) v. Collins (1859), 7 H. L. Cas. 194. As to his duties in a case of stoppage in transitu, see titles CARRIERS, Vol. IV., pp. 96 et seq.; SALE OF GOODS; SHIPPING AND NAVIGATION.

(q) See title CARRIERS, Vol. IV., p. 8; Devereux v. Barclay (1819), 2 B. & Ald. 702.

(r) See title CARRIERS, Vol. IV., pp. 9, 16.

(s) See ibid., p. 16.

(t) Ibid., pp. 21—35.

(u) Ibid., pp. 16, 30—33. As to charterparties and bills of lading, and the special exemptions contained therein, including clauses exempting ship-owners from liability for negligence, see title SHIPPING AND NAVIGATION.

(w) Moffat v. Great Western Rail. Co. (1867), 15 L. T. 630; Pickering v. North Eastern Rail. Co. (1887), 4 T. L. R. 7, C. A.; Smith v. Midland Rail. Co. (1887), 4 T. L. R. 68; Ainsby v. Great Northern Rail. Co. (1891), 8 T. L. R. 148.

(x) Rosin and Turpentine Import Co. v. Jacobs & Co. (1910), 27 T. L. R. 259, H. L.

(a) Merchant Shipping Act, 1894 (57 & 58 Vict. c. 60), s. 592; and see title SHIPPING AND NAVIGATION.

(b) Wilson v. Brett (1843), 11 M. & W. 113; see title BAILMENT, Vol. I., p. 531.

(c) See title BAILMENT, Vol. I., pp. 531, 532; and see p. 374, ante. Mere inability to find goods after a lapse of three years is not sufficient to establish negligence (Powell v. Graves & Co. (1886), 2 T. L. R. 663); but if they are not returned the burden of proof is on the bailee (Bain v. Strang (1889), 16 R. (Ct. of Sess.) 186; Sutherland v. Hutton (1896), 23 R. (Ct. of Sess.) 718). As to the liability for the act or default of a servant, see Cheshire v. Bailey, [1905] 1 K. B. 237, C. A.; title MASTER AND SERVANT, Vol. XX., pp. 249 et seq.

A bailee for reward in the absence of special contract is not an insurer. He is bound to exercise such care as a careful and vigilant man would exercise in the custody of his own chattels of a similar description and character (d).

SECT. 2.

Bailees.

SECT. 3.—Innkeepers.

732. An innkeeper is bound to take reasonable care of the persons of his guests (e), and is liable for any damage resulting to them from his negligence while they are his guests (f). His duty to take reasonable care extends to all food and accommodation which he provides or holds himself out as providing for his guests (g).

Liability as regards guests.

733. An innkeeper (h), in the absence of special provision by contract or statute, is bound to keep the goods of his guests which are brought to his inn by them, without subtraction, while they are his guests (i), and he is liable for any loss (j) of or damage to such goods (k) unless the loss or damage arises from the misconduct or negligence of the guest who owns them (l), or of someone for whose misconduct or negligence the guest is responsible (m), or from the act of God or of an alien enemy (n), or unless the guest has himself assumed the exclusive control of the goods in such a way as to relieve the innkeeper from responsibility (o). If he retains the goods of his guest in the exercise of his lien upon them for charges due, he is not required to use greater care in their custody than he uses as to his own (p).

Liability as regards goods.

734. The liability of an innkeeper in respect of damage to the person or goods of his guest may be limited by special contract. His liability to make good any loss of or injury to his guests' property, not being a live animal or carriage, to a greater amount than £30, is limited by statute, provided the notice required by the Limitation of liability by special contract or statute.

(d) See title BAILMENT, Vol. I., p. 544; Smith v. Cook (1875), 1 Q. B. D. 79; and see p. 368, ante. It has been held that where goods are taken from the bailee by order of a court of law the fact that he, having informed the court as to the bailment, did not inform the bailor as to the proceedings is not evidence of negligence (Ranson v. Platt, [1911] 1 K. B. 499).

(e) See title INNS AND INNKEEPERS, Vol. XVII., p. 313.

(f) As to what constitutes a guest, see ibid., pp. 313, 318; Axford v. Prior (1866), 14 W. R. 611. As to the duty to persons who are not guests, but are volunteers or licensees, see pp. 385, 391, ante.

(g) See title INNS AND INNKEEPERS, Vol. XVII., pp. 302, 307.

(h) This liability is confined to an innkeeper strictly so called; see title INNS AND INNKEEPERS, Vol. XVII., p. 316. Keepers of restaurants, boarding-houses, or lodging-houses, which are not inns (see ibid., pp. 308, 316), are only liable if negligence is proved; see Ultzen v. Nicols, [1894] 1 Q. B. 92; Scarborough v. Cosgrove, [1905] 2 K. B. 805, C. A.

(i) See title INNS AND INNKEEPERS, Vol. XVII., pp. 314, 317.

(j) Including loss by an accidental fire: see Thorogood v. Marsh (1819), Gow, 105. The fact of loss is prima facie evidence of negligence (Dawson v. Chamney (1843), 5 Q. B. 164).

(k) The goods include a horse left at an innkeeper's livery stable (Day v. Bather (1863), 2 H. & C. 14).

(l) Oppenheim v. White Lion Hotel Co. (1871), L. R. 6 C. P. 515; compare Talley v. Great Western Rail. Co. (1870), L. R. 6 C. P. 44.

(m) See title INNS AND INNKEEPERS, Vol. XVII., pp. 319, 320.

(n) See ibid., p. 321; Richmond v. Smith (1828), 8 B. & C. 9.

(o) See title INNS AND INNKEEPERS, Vol. XVII., p. 320.

(p) Angus v. McLachlan (1883), 23 Ch. D. 330.

SECT. 3.
Innkeepers.

statute is duly exhibited, unless the loss occurs through the wilful act, default, or neglect of the innkeeper or his servant, or unless the property has been deposited with him expressly for safe custody(q).

SECT. 4.—Bankers.

Duty as to payments out of customer's funds.

735. The duty of a banker, as to payments out of the funds of a customer in his hands, is to pay cheques to order of a named payee which are drawn on him by the customer, provided he has in his hands funds sufficient and available for the purpose. If the banker refuses to pay when there are funds available, or pays his customer's funds to a wrong party, there is a failure to fulfil this duty irrespective of any proof of negligence on the banker's part (r). If the cheque is made payable to a fictitious person or to bearer, the banker is not liable if he paid it in good faith and without negligence (s).

A third party cannot require information from a banker as to his customer's account except under compulsion of law, and a banker who answers inquiries regarding his customer's position is not responsible for loss or damage sustained in consequence, unless such answers are put into writing and signed by him (t).

Duty in respect of customer's acceptances.

The relation of banker and customer does not of itself impose a duty of honouring the customer's acceptances (u), but such a duty may be imposed by some special arrangement, expressed or implied, in respect of genuine bills of exchange, and where such a duty exists, the banker, in the absence of special terms, is under a duty to pay to the person named as payee (v), or by special arrangement may be liable only in respect of a failure to take reasonable care in ascertaining the identity of that person.

Duty of customer.

Where a banker is by law or by such a special arrangement under such a duty towards his customer, the customer owes a duty to the banker (a) to take such reasonable care and precautions as must be taken to have been in the contemplation of the parties when the relation of banker and customer, or the special arrangement, as the case may be, was entered into (b), and where the customer's negligent omission to perform that duty causes the banker to be misled into the act or default complained of, the (q) Innkeepers Act, 1863 (26 & 27 Vict. c. 41). The notice exhibited must be an accurate copy of ibid., s. 1, without the omission of any material word (Spice v. Bacon (1877), 2 Ex. D. 463, C. A.). See title INNS AND INNKEEPERS, Vol. XVII., p. 321.

(r) See title BANKERS AND BANKING, Vol. I., p. 602.

(s) See titles BANKERS AND BANKING, Vol. I., p. 608; BILLS OF EXCHANGE, PROMISSORY NOTES, AND NEGOTIABLE INSTRUMENTS, Vol. II., p. 474.

(t) See title BANKERS AND BANKING, Vol. I., p. 643.

(u) Bank of England v. Vagliano Brothers, [1891] A. C. 107, per Lord MACNAGHTEN, at p. 157. As to paying on an indemnity in respect of a lost negotiable instrument, see title EQUITY, Vol. XIII., p. 26.

(v) Ibid., per Lord WATSON, at p. 131; and see title BILLS OF EXCHANGE, PROMISSORY NOTES, AND NEGOTIABLE INSTRUMENTS, Vol. II., pp. 550, 551.

(a) The duty must be owed to the banker (Carlisle and Cumberland Banking Co. v. Bragg, [1911] 1 K. B. 489, C. A.).

(b) Halifax Union v. Wheelwright (1875), L. R. 10 Exch. 183; Young v. Grote (1827), 4 Bing. 253; Ireland v. Livingston (1872), L. R. 5 H. L. 395; Bank of England v. Vagliano Brothers, supra; Scholfield v. Londesborough (Earl), [1896] A. C. 514; Kepitigalla Rubber Estates, Ltd. v. National Bank of India, Ltd., [1909] 2 K. B. 1010.

customer may be estopped from claiming in respect of such act or default (c).

SECT. 4.
Bankers.

736. The duty of a banker in respect of bills of exchange entrusted to him for collection is to take all reasonable and proper steps having regard to what is customary with respect to the presentation for payment, and, in case of refusal, with respect to the protesting of a bill, when protest is necessary (d).

Duty of banker in respect of bills for collection.

737. In respect of valuables deposited with a banker for safe custody, the standard of care required depends on whether the banker is to be regarded as a gratuitous bailee or as a bailee for reward (e); but, whether the bailment is gratuitous or for reward, a banker is not an insurer and contracts only to use reasonable care and diligence (f).

Duty of banker in respect of valuables
deposited.

Part V.—Liability of Particular Parties.

SECT. 1.—Private Persons.

738. Actionable negligence is a tort, and the person who is under a duty to take care, and fails to fulfil that duty, is responsible for such failure, whether the duty rests on him and he fails to fulfil it on his own behalf, or as servant of or agent for another (g), and whether he himself, or someone for whom he is responsible, is the person on whom the duty rests and who fails to fulfil it (h).

Principal and agent.

739. Any one of two or more joint tortfeasors is liable for the tort, and therefore, where two or more persons jointly owe a duty to tortfeasors.

Joint

(c) See title ESTOPPEL, Vol. XIII., pp. 385 (neglect to give information as to forgery), 400, 401, 402; Wallace's Trustees v. Port-Glasgow Harbour Trustees (1880), 7 R. (Ct. of Sess.), 645, 648.

(d) See, further, title BANKERS AND BANKING, Vol. I., p. 598. As to cheques, see ibid., pp. 590 et seq.; and see title BILLS OF EXCHANGE, PROMISSORY NOTES AND NEGOTIABLE INSTRUMENTS, Vol. II., p. 531.

(e) See titles BAILMENT, Vol. I., pp. 533, 534; BANKERS AND BANKING, Vol. I., pp. 627, 628; and see p. 374, ante.

(f) Lloyd v. Grace, Smith & Co., [1911] 2 K. B. 489, C. A., per FARWELL, L.J., at p. 513; reversed, for reasons not yet given (1912), 132 L. T. Jo. 534, H. L.

(g) See titles AGENCY, Vol. I., p. 224; MASTER AND SERVANT, Vol. XX., pp. 276, 277; TORT.

(h) See title TORT. As to the responsibility for a contractor, see ibid., and pp. 471, 472, post. As to the responsibility of a husband for his wife's torts, see titles HUSBAND AND WIFE, Vol. XVI., pp. 436, 437; TORT. As to the responsibility of a master for a servant's negligence, see titles MASTER AND SERVANT, Vol. XX., pp. 248 et seq.; TORT; and see Lloyd v. Grace, Smith & Co., supra. The master is not responsible to a servant in his employment for the negligent act of a fellow-servant in the same employment; see title MASTER AND SERVANT, Vol. XX., pp. 132, 133; Tarrant v. Webb (1856), 13 C. B. 797, approved of in Wilson v. Merry (1868), L. R. 1 Sc. & Div. 326; Hedley v. Pinkney & Sons Steamship Co., [1892] 1 Q. B. 58, C. A.; Coldrick v. Partridge, Jones & Co., Ltd., [1910] A. C. 77. It is to be noticed that this defence does not apply where one servant sues a fellow-servant for negligence (Lees v. Dunkerley Brothers, [1911] A. C. 5).

SECT. 1.

Private Persons.Persons jointly interested.

take care and fail in the fulfilment of that duty, each one of them is responsible for such failure (i).

740. A person is liable where, by reason of his being jointly in possession of, or jointly interested with another in, a chattel managed by that other for the benefit of both, they owe a joint duty to take care and fail to fulfil it (k), whether such joint duty arises merely out of such possession or interest, or also out of statutes regulating the conditions under which the chattel is to be dealt with (l). Thus a cab-proprietor in London (m) may be liable for damage caused by the negligent driving of the cab by the driver, although the relationship between them is that of a bailor and bailee (n).

Liability
affected by characteristics, capacity, or relationship.

741. Where it is sought to make anyone liable for injury resulting from a failure to fulfil a duty to take care, an answer to the claim may arise, not only out of the nature of the act alleged to be negligent and the circumstances in which it occurred, but also out of the characteristics of the person who owed the duty (o), or out of the capacity in which he was acting (p), or out of the relationship of the person to the party injured (p).

(i) See titles SHIPPING AND NAVIGATION; TORT; see The Seacombe, The Devonshire, [1912] P. 21, C. A. As to costs where one defendant is found not to have been negligent, see Bullock v. London General Omnibus Co., [1907] 1 K. B. 264, C. A.

(k) Davey v. Chamberlain (1802), 4 Esp. 229.

(l) Steel v. Lester (1877), 3 C. P. D. 121 (defendant, registered as "managing owner," was held liable for damage done by the ship, although the latter was navigated by another, who chose the crew and the ports to be visited). The owner of a traction engine who lets it out on hire for a term is not responsible for the negligence of the hirer in its use, even though his name and address remain upon it (Smith v. Bailey, [1891] 2 Q. B. 403, C. A., disapproving Stables v. Eley (1825), 1 C. & P. 614, which, if correctly reported, decided that if a person permits a vehicle bearing his name to go upon the highway he holds himself out as liable for the negligence of the person driving it). In Smith v. Bailey, supra, Lord ESHER, M.R., at p. 406, thought that "the utmost effect which could be given to that decision is that under such circumstances there would be prima facie evidence of liability, which might be met, however, by showing the truth of the matter"; and see title BAILMENT, Vol. I., pp. 564, 565.

(m) To which place alone the London Hackney Carriages Act, 1843 (6 & 7 Vict. c. 86), applies; see, further, title STREET AND AERIAL TRAFFIC. The London Hackney Carriages Act, 1843 (6 & 7 Vict. c. 86), was passed for the protection of the public, and, although it does not so expressly enact, it has been interpreted as imposing responsibility on the cab-owner as if he were the master of the driver; see the cases cited in note (n), infra.

(n) Smith v. General Motor Cab Co., Ltd., [1911] A. C. 188; see Gates v. Bill (R.) & Son, [1902] 2 K. B. 38; Keen v. Henry, [1894] 1 Q. B. 292, C. A., overruling King v. Spurr (1881), 8 Q. B. D. 104; King v. London Improved Cab Co. (1889), 23 Q. B. D. 281, C. A.; Venables v. Smith (1877), 2 Q. B. D. 279; Powles v. Hider (1856), 6 E. & B. 207; compare Doggett v. Waterloo Taxi-Cab Co., Ltd., [1910] 2 K. B. 336, C. A.

(o) Thus, where the person is an infant or a lunatic, the duty to take care may differ from that required from a person of full age and sound understanding; see titles INFANTS AND CHILDREN, Vol. XVII., pp. 46, 74; LUNATICS AND PERSONS OF UNSOUND MIND, Vol. XIX., p. 403; TORT; pp. 362, 363, ante, and pp. 453, 463, post.

(p) See p. 435, post.

SECT. 2.—Persons Acting in Particular Capacities.

742. Where a person who is alleged to have failed to fulfil a duty to take care was, in the matter out of which the alleged duty and failure arose, acting on behalf of the Crown (q), or in a judicial capacity (r), or as a witness (s) or counsel or advocate in a court of law (t), or as a public official in the exercise of statutory powers or the performance of statutory duties (u), or in certain other capacities to which express statutory protection is given (v), the fact that he was acting in such capacity may affect the extent of the duty to take care or the liability for a failure to fulfil it (w).

SECT. 2.
Persons
Acting in Particular Capacities.

Facts affecting extent of duty to take care or liability in respect of it.

SECT. 3.—Persons Standing in Particular Relation to the Person Injured.

743. The relationship of the person to the party injured may affect the duty to take care or the liability for an act or omission which is alleged to be a failure to fulfil such duty (x), as, for instance, where the parties are in one employment (y). Or again, the duty to take care may be modified by some agreement with or consent by the party to whom the duty would otherwise be owed (z).

Circumstances affecting or modifying duty.

Part VI.—Proof of Negligence.

SECT. 1.—Burden of Proof.

744. The burden of proof in an action for damages for negligence rests primarily upon the plaintiff, who, in order to maintain the action, must show that he was injured by an act or omission for which the defendant is in law responsible (a). Except in those cases in which the law presumes liability from an act or omission immediately upon proof of its occurrence (b), this involves

Burden primarily on plaintiff.

What proof involves.

(q) See titles ACTION, Vol. I., p. 14; CONSTITUTIONAL LAW, Vol. VI., pp. 413 et seq.; CROWN PRACTICE, Vol. X., p. 28; TORT; and as to negligent navigation of the King's ships, see title SHIPPING AND NAVIGATION.

(r) See title CONSTITUTIONAL LAW, Vol. VI., p. 416.

(s) See title EVIDENCE, Vol. XIII., p. 588; Bynoe v. Bank of England, [1902] 1 K. B. 467, C. A.; Seaman v. Netherclift (1876), 2 C. P. D. 53, C. A.

(t) See titles BARRISTERS, Vol. II., p. 394; SOLICITORS.

(u) See titles PUBLIC AUTHORITIES AND PUBLIC OFFICERS; TORT.

(v) See title TORT.

(w) This in each case depends on the particular circumstances; see also pp. 464 et seq., post.

(x) As to the relationship of master and pupil, see title EDUCATION, Vol. XII., p. 123.

(y) See title MASTER AND SERVANT, Vol. XX., p. 132.

(z) See pp. 476, 479, 480, post.

(a) Hammack v. White (1862), 11 C. B. (N. S.) 588; Manzoni v. Douglas (1880), 6 Q. B. D. 145; and see note (e), p. 363, ante. As to the exceptions to the rule, see pp. 436, 439, post. As to burden of proof in general, see title EVIDENCE, Vol. XIII., pp. 433 et seq.

(b) See p. 439, post.

SECT. 1.
Burden of Proof.

When burden shifted.

the proof of some duty owed by the defendant to the plaintiff (c), some breach of that duty (d), and an injury to the plaintiff between which and the breach of duty a causal connection must be established (e). It is, therefore, insufficient for the plaintiff to prove a breach of duty without proving injury (f), or to prove injury without proving a breach of duty (g), or injury which may or may not be due to a breach of duty (h).

If, however, he proves injury due to facts which can only be reasonably explained by attributing negligence to the defendant (i), or which point prima facie to negligence on the latter's part (j), the burden of proof is shifted, and it is then for the defendant to show that he has taken all reasonable precautions in order to avoid liability for the act complained of (k).

(c) Heaven v. Pender (1883), 11 Q. B. D. 503, C. A., per BRETT, M.R., at p. 507; O'Neil v. Everest (1892), 61 L. J. (Q. B.) 453.

(d) Toomey v. London, Brighton and South Coast Rail. Co. (1857), 3 C. B. (N. S.) 146; Cornman v. Eastern Counties Rail. Co. (1859), 4 H. & N. 781, 786; Welfare v. Brighton Rail. Co. (1869), L. R. 4 Q. B. 693; Cotton v. Wood (1860), 8 C. B. (N. S.) 568.

(e) Hanson v. Lancashire and Yorkshire Rail. Co. (1872), 20 W. R. 297; Smith v. Midland Rail. Co. (1887), 57 L. T. 813; Metropolitan Rail. Co. v. Jackson (1877), 3 App. Cas. 193.

(f) Remorquage à Hélice (Société Anonyme de) v. Bennetts, [1911] 1 K. B. 243.

(g) Lovegrove v. London, Brighton and South Coast Rail. Co. (1864), 16 C. B. (N. S.) 669, per WILLES, J., at p. 692.

(h) Bird v. Great Northern Rail. Co. (1858), 28 L. J. (EX.) 3; Smith v. Great Eastern Rail. Co. (1866), L. R. 2 C. P. 4; Czech v. General Steam Navigation Co. (1867), L. R. 3 C. P. 14; Bridges v. North London Rail. Co. (1871), L. R. 6 Q. B. 377, Ex. Ch.; Smith v. Midland Rail. Co., supra (the mere fact that cattle were found to be injured when unloaded from defendant's trucks, whereas they were sound when loaded, not sufficient to establish negligence, for the injuries might have been due to some other cause, such as the restiveness of the cattle); compare Manchester, Sheffield and Lincolnshire Rail. Co. v. Woodcock (1871), 25 L. T. 335; Powell v. M'Glynn and Bradlaw, [1902] 2 I. R. 154, 190, C. A.; Daniel v. Metropolitan Rail. Co. (1868), L. R. 3 C. P. 216, 222; reversed on another point (1871), L. R. 5 H. L. 45; Williams v. Great Western Rail. Co. (1874), L. R. 9 Exch. 157.

(i) Czech v. General Steam Navigation Co., supra, disapproving Great Western Rail. Co. of Canada v. Fawcett (1863), 1 Moo. P. C. C. (N. S.) 101; The Glendarroch, [1894] P. 226, C. A.

(j) Simson v. London General Omnibus Co. (1873), L. R. 8 C. P. 390; compare Skinner v. London, Brighton and South Coast Rail. Co. (1850), 5 Exch. 787; Williams v. Great Western Rail. Co., supra; and see Wakelin v. London and South Western Rail. Co. (1886), 12 App. Cas. 41; Paterson v. London, Tilbury, and Southend Railway (1912), Times, 16th March, C. A.

(k) See cases cited in notes (h), (i), (j), supra. To establish negligence on the part of an employer at common law, it is not sufficient to show that a servant was injured by machinery which went wrong for some unexplained cause (Macfarlane v. Thomson (1884), 22 Sc. L. R. 179). The contrary had been decided in Walker v. Olsen (1882), 19 Sc. L. R. 708, but this case was doubted and distinguished in Macfarlane v. Thomson, supra. In Ramage and Ferguson v. Forsyth (1890), 28 Sc. L. R. 26, where the nature of the work (shipbuilding) rendered it necessary for certain manholes to be left open, it was stated that, in order to succeed, a servant, who was injured by falling through one of them, must prove how they could have been protected and fenced and the work still carried on; and see title MASTER AND SERVANT, Vol. XX., p. 130.

745. If the plaintiff only establishes facts which are equally consistent with the true cause of the accident being his own or the defendant's negligence, he cannot succeed (l), nor can he recover when the cause of the damage is left in doubt or is attributable with equal reason to some cause other than the defendant's negligence (m). If, however, negligence on the part of the defendant which might have caused the injury is established, it may be sufficient for the plaintiff to prove facts which show a greater likelihood that the injury was due to the defendant's negligence than his own (n).

746. Where the plaintiff relies on the breach of a statutory duty as constituting negligence, he satisfies the burden which is on him by proving such breach, and the defendant in order to escape liability must show that he has taken all reasonable care that the duty should be duly and properly performed (o). Where the defendant is compelled by statute to rely on another person, such as a pilot, and is not responsible for that person's negligence (p), he may be liable if he or his servants were also negligent and contributed thereby to the plaintiff's injury (q).

SECT. 1.
Burden of Proof.

Evidence equally balanced.

Statutory
duty.

(l) Wakelin v. London and South Western Rail. Co. (1886), 12 App. Cas. 41; compare Pomfret v. Lancashire and Yorkshire Rail. Co., [1903] 2 K. B. 718, C. A.; Reynolds v. Tilling (Thomas), Ltd. (1903), 19 T. L. R. 539; Morgan v. Sim, The London (1857), 11 Moo. P. C. C. 307, 311; Russell v. London and South Western Rail. Co. (1908), 24 T. L. R. 548, C. A.; Ramage and Ferguson v. Forsyth (1890), 28 Sc. L. R. 26. Where the question whether the injured person was negligent depends upon his knowledge at the time of the accident (see p. 449, post) and, owing to his death, direct proof of such knowledge is impossible, the action will fail if the circumstances raise an inference that he knew or ought to have known of certain dangers or of precautions imposed in respect thereof, and that the accident happened by reason of his failure to act reasonably by the light of that knowledge (see ibid., and cases there cited).

(m) Muddle v. Stride (1840), 9 C. & P. 380 (where the damage was suggested to be caused by perils of the sea; it was, however, pointed out that if those perils required a higher degree of care to be taken than was taken the plaintiff should succeed); compare Powell v. M'Glynn and Bradlaw, [1902] 2 I. R. 154, C. A.; see Ellis v. Banyard (1911), 28 T. L. R. 122, C. A., reversing (1911), 27 T. L. R. 417 (where, in the Divisional Court, different views were taken by the two judges as to the fact that cattle strayed from the defendant's field was prima facie evidence of negligence).

(n) Fenna v. Clare & Co., [1895] 1 Q. B. 199; Smith v. Midland Rail. Co. (1887), 57 L. T. 813, applying Harris v. Midland Rail. Co. (1876), 25 W. R. 63; Williams v. Great Western Rail. Co. (1874), L. R. 9 Exch. 157.

(o) Beaumont v. Huddersfield Corporation (1902), 19 T. L. R. 97, C. A. (where the duty was to provide a fixed quantity of water daily); Britannic Merthyr Coal Co., Ltd. v. David, [1910] A. C. 74; North Eastern Rail. Co. (Directors etc.) v. Wanless (1874), L. R. 7 H. L. 12; Brooks v. London and North Western Rail. Co. (1884), 33 W. R. 167; Solomons v. Stepney Borough Council (1905), 69 J. P. 360; compare Kearney v. London and Brighton Rail. Co. (1871), L. R. 6 Q. B. 759, Ex. Ch. If the statutory duty is absolute, the defendant cannot escape liability for breach of it; see Butler (or Black) v. Fife Coal Co., Ltd., [1912] A. C. 149; and see p. 424, ante.

(p) Merchant Shipping Act, 1894 (57 & 58 Vict. c. 60), s. 633; and see title SHIPPING AND NAVIGATION. As to the defence of reliance on others, see p. 479, post.

(q) Clyde Navigation Co. v. Barclay (1876), 1 App. Cas. 790, criticising the ruling of KINDERSLEY, V.-C., on this point in The "Iona" (1867), L. R. 1 P. C. 426. Where the defendant in such a case has proved that he has complied with the statutory obligation, and that the person so relied on has caused the injury, the plaintiff must prove that the defendant or his

SECT. 1.

Burden of Proof.

Proof of performance of conditions.

Proof that plaintiff was not negligent.

When burden subsequently placed on plaintiff.

Master and servant.

747. If the defendant has by way of a contract introduced conditions that limit his liability, the burden is on him to prove that the facts of the case are such as enable him to claim the advantage of such conditions (r).

748. It is for the plaintiff to prove facts from which the proper inference is that the injury complained of was caused by the negligence of the defendant and not by his own(s). It is not, therefore, necessary for him in the first instance to prove that there was no negligence on his part (t), unless, from the other facts which he proves, the inference that he was negligent himself could as properly be drawn (a).

The burden of proving that he was not negligent himself may, however, be subsequently placed on him by the evidence given on behalf of the defendant (b); and, if both parties were negligent, it is for the plaintiff to prove that the defendant could, by the exercise of reasonable care and diligence, have abstained from the act or omission which caused the injury (c). If the evidence shows that the plaintiff's negligence was subsequent to that of the defendant, the plaintiff can only succeed if he shows that his act did not so divert the natural consequences of the defendant's act as to prevent its being the effective cause of the injury (d), or that the defendant still had an opportunity the use of which, with the exercise of reasonable care and diligence, would have obviated the accident (e).

749. In cases where it is sought to make a master liable for the negligence of one who is proved to have been acting as his servant, the burden of proving that the act complained of was within the scope of the servant's employment is not upon the plaintiff (f), servants by their negligence contributed to the injury, unless of course the defendant has in his evidence disclosed a prima facie case against himself, when, in the event of his being unable to exonerate himself, he will be liable (Clyde Navigation Co. v. Barclay (1876), 1 App. Cas. 790); see also The Indus (1886), 12 P. D. 46, C. A.

(r) Kent v. Midland Rail. Co. (1874), L. R. 10 Q. B. 1; The Glendarroch, [1894] P. 226, 235, C. A.; see, for example, title CARRIERS, Vol. IV., p. 28, note (b). As to the introduction of such conditions, see pp. 427, 428, ante.

(s) Bettany v. Waine (1885), 1 T. L. R. 588, citing Wakelin v. London and South Western Rail. Co. (1884), [1896] 1 Q. B. 189, n., C. A., per BOWEN, L.J., at p. 193, n.

(t) Wakelin v. London and South Western Rail. Co. (1886), 12 App. Cas. 41, per Lord WATSON, at p. 47; see Dublin, Wicklow and Wexford Rail. Co. v. Slattery (1878), 3 App. Cas. 1155.

(a) Wakelin v. London and South Western Rail. Co. (1886), 12 App. Cas. 41, per Lord HALSBURY, L.C., at p. 45.

(b) See p. 445, post.

(c) Radley v. London and North Western Rail. Co. (1876), 1 App. Cas. 754; Reynolds v. Tilling (Thomas), Ltd. (1903), 19 T. L. R. 539; Butterly v. Drogheda Corporation, [1907] 2 I. R. 134, C. A.; Mills v. Armstrong, The "Bernina" (1888), 13 App. Cas. 1, 5.

(d) The Ovingdean Grange, [1902] P. 208, C. A. As to effective cause, see pp. 378 et seq., ante.

(e) Radley v. London and North Western Rail. Co., supra, per Lord PENZANCE, at p. 759; Cayzer v. Carron Co. (1884), 9 App. Cas. 873; H. M. S. Sans Pareil, [1900] P. 267, C. A., per VAUGHAN WILLIAMS, L.J., at p. 287.

(f) Stevens v. Woodward (1881), 6 Q. B. D. 318; see title MASTER AND SERVANT, Vol. XX., p. 136.

unless the act is one which would not in the ordinary course be within the scope of the employment of servants of that class (g).

SECT. 1.
Burden of Proof.

Principal and
agent.

750. Where it is sought to make a principal liable for the negligence of his agent, the burden of proving that the act complained of was within the scope of the agent's authority is upon the plaintiff (h); but he may discharge the burden by proving that the act is a necessary consequence of some act expressly authorised by the principal, or is one of a class of acts within the apparent authority of the agent (i).

SECT. 2.—Presumption of Negligence: Res Ipsa Loquitur.

751. An exception to the general rule that the burden of proof of the alleged negligence is in the first instance on the plaintiff (h) occurs wherever the facts already established are such that the proper and natural inference immediately arising from them is that the injury complained of was caused by the defendant's negligence (l). To these cases the maxim res ipsa loquitur applies. Where, therefore, there is a duty upon the defendant to exercise care, and the circumstances in which the injury complained of happened are such that with the exercise of the requisite care no risk would in the ordinary course of events ensue, the burden is in the first instance upon the defendant to disprove his liability (m). In such a case, if the injurious agency itself and the surrounding circumstances are all entirely within the defendant's control, the inference is that the defendant is liable (n), and this inference is strengthened if the

In cases
where established facts lead to inference of defendant's
negligence.

(g) Stevens v. Woodward (1881), 6 Q. B. D. 318; Beard v. London General Omnibus Co., [1900] 2 Q. B. 530, C. A.; see Forsyth v. Manchester Corporation (1912), Times, 23rd March; and see title MASTER AND SERVANT, Vol. XX., p. 136.

(h) See p. 435, ante; title AGENCY, Vol. I., pp. 211—214.

(i) Ibid.

(k) See title EVIDENCE, Vol. XIII., pp. 433 et seq.

(l) Byrne v. Boodle (1863), 2 H. & C. 722 (where a barrel of flour fell from an upper floor of the defendant's warehouse on the plaintiff, who was then passing on the highway beneath); compare Briggs v. Oliver (1866), 4 H. & C. 403 (a somewhat similar case, where, however, the court was divided, MARTIN, B., dissenting from the decision on the ground that without calling further evidence the inference that the defendant was negligent was insufficiently certain).

(m) Ibid.; Burke v. Manchester, Sheffield and Lincolnshire Rail. Co. (1870), 22 L. T. 442 (where the plaintiff was injured by a train, in which he was travelling, running into stationary buffers); Chapronière v. Mason (1905), 21 T. L. R. 633, C. A. (where the presence of a stone in a bun was held to be prima facie evidence of negligence, and to throw on the defendant the burden of rebutting it). The maxim res ipsa loquitur has no application to master and servant cases where negligence on the part of an employer must be proved affirmatively (Paterson v. Wallace & Co. (1854), 1 Macq. 748, H. L.).

(n) Carpue v. London and Brighton Rail. Co. (1844), 5 Q. B. 747, as interpreted in Hanson v. Lancashire and Yorkshire Rail. Co. (1872), 20 W. R. 297; Skinner v. London, Brighton and South Coast Rail. Co. (1850), 5 Exch. 787. In these cases collisions occurred between trains belonging to the same railway company on the same line of rails. The principle was carried a step further in Ayles v. South Eastern Rail. Co. (1868), L. R. 3 Exch. 146, a collision case, where one of the trains belonged to a company

SECT. 2.
Presumption of Negligence :
Res Ipsa
Loquitur.

In cases where cause of accident is unknown.

injurious agency is inanimate (o). If the surrounding circumstances are not wholly within the defendant's control (p), or the injurious agency is animate (q), there is frequently no certain inference, and the plaintiff will not have discharged the burden without proof of some negligent act or omission on the part of the defendant. Injuries to animals do not give rise to any certain inference if the facts are consistent with the animals having injured themselves (r).

752. The cases in which the maxim res ipsa loquitur applies are to be distinguished from those in which the cause of the accident is unknown (s). In the one case further evidence is not required from the plaintiff because the inference is already clear; in the other case it is not required because it would be impossible to give it. The effect of the distinction is that, in the one case, the defendant having running powers over the line of the other company—the latter being considered to have control of both trains. A railway embankment which gave way owing to its being badly constructed (Great Western Rail. Co. of Canada v. Braid (1863), 1 Moo. P. C. C. (N. S.) 101), and running a train over a rail known to be defective (Pym v. Great Northern Rail. Co. (1861), 2 F. & F. 619), have been held to be matters so much within the defendant's control as to raise the presumption of its negligence.

(o) Scott v. London and St. Katherine Docks Co. (1865), 3 H. & C. 596, Ex. Ch.; Kearney v. London and Brighton Rail. Co. (1871), L. R. 6 Q. B. 759, Ex. Ch.; compare Higgs v. Maynard (1866), Har. & Ruth. 581 (accident due to the fall of a ladder, where the plaintiff was nonsuited on the ground that the ladder was not shown to be in the defendant's control); Crisp v. Thomas (1890), 62 L. T. 810 (scholar injured by the fall of a blackboard).

(p) This must usually be the case in accidents upon a highway resulting from collision or running down (Wing v. London General Omnibus Co., [1909] 2 K. B. 652, C. A., per FLETCHER MOULTON, L.J., at p. 663; compare Hammack v. White (1862), 11 C. B. (N. S.) 588; Cotton v. Wood (1859), 8 C. B. (N. S.) 588). But it is not the case where the accident is due to inherent defects which were or should have been within the defendant's knowledge and power to control (Christie v. Griggs (1809), 2 Camp. 79; Simson v. London General Omnibus Co. (1873), L. R. 8 C. P. 390); or where the injury is done to a fixed object, such as a lamp-post, which is properly placed upon the highway (Walton (Isaac) & Co., Ltd. v. Vanguard Motor Bus Co. (1908), 72 J. P. 505; Barnes Urban District Council v. London General Omnibus Co. (1908), 73 J. P. 68). In the case of accidents on railways, collisions between trains on the same line of rails are prima facie accidents which could have been controlled (see note (n), p. 439, ante), but where a collision is with cattle at a private level crossing there is no certain inference of negligence against the railway company (Patchell v. Irish North Western Rail. Co. (1871), 6 I. R. C. L. 117). Injury to a passenger from a train upon another line of rails (Hanson v. Lancashire and Yorkshire Rail. Co. (1872), 20 W. R. 297), or injury to a passenger due to his getting out before the carriage in which he is travelling is drawn up at the platform (Bridges v. North London Rail. Co. (1871), L. R. 6 Q. B. 377, Ex. Ch.; reversed (1874), L. R. 7 H. L. 213), does not raise a certain inference of negligence against a railway company.

(q) Hammack v. White, supra; Manzoni v. Douglas (1880), 6 Q. B. D. 145; see Cooper v. Barton (1810), 3 Camp. 5, n.; Cox v. Burbridge (1863), 13 C. B. (N. S.) 430; Ellis v. Banyard (1911), 28 T. L. R. 122, C. A.

(r) Russell v. London and South Western Rail. Co. (1908), 24 T. L. R. 548, C. A.; see Cooper v. Barton, supra; Smith v. Midland Rail. Co. (1887), 57 L. T. 813.

(s) McArthur v. Dominion Cartridge Co., [1905] A. C. 72; see The Calderon (1912), Times, 26th March.

is liable if he does not produce sufficient evidence to counteract the inference; in the other case, the court is left to decide, upon such facts as are available, whether negligence on the part of the defendant is the more reasonable inference or not (t).

In cases where the injury is caused by the use of tackle or machinery for which the defendant is responsible there is no immediate inference that the defendant is at fault (a), but if the injury is traced directly to some defect in the tackle or machinery it is not necessary for the plaintiff to show the precise nature of the defect, since the inference from the fact of the defect is sufficient to throw upon the defendant the burden of showing that the defect was one for which he was not to blame (b).

In cases where the facts relating to the alleged negligence are peculiarly within the knowledge of the defendant, the burden of disproving the inference alleged by the plaintiff to follow from them lies upon the defendant (c).

753. The doctrine of res ipsa loquitur will not readily be applied to an accident where from the nature of things the probability that the accident is due to negligence is no greater than that it is due to some other cause (d). But it may be applicable where the probability that the accident is due to negligence is materially greater than that it is due to any other cause, and the circumstances directly contributing to the accident are such as should have been within the control of the defendant (e).

SECT. 2.
Presumption of Negligence:
*Res Ipsa
Loquitur*.

Injury caused by things for which defendant is responsible.

Facts
peculiarly within defendant's knowledge.

Application of doctrine to probabilities, equal and unequal.

SECT. 3.—Functions of Judge and Jury.

754. In cases where the subject-matter of the action is negligence, the principle to be applied, in order to define the respective functions of the judge and jury, is that it is the province of the judge to decide principle.

General

(t) McArthur v. Dominion Cartridge Co., [1905] A. C. 72; Farrell v. Limerick Corporation (1911), 45 I. L. T. 169; Flannery v. Waterford and Limerick Rail. Co. (1877), 11 I. R. C. L. 30, per PALLES, C.B.

(a) Macfarlane v. Thomson (1884), 22 Sc. L. R. 179.

(b) Ibid.; see Walker v. Olsen (1882), 9 R. (Ct. of Sess.) 946; Fraser v. Fraser (1882), 9 R. (Ct. of Sess.) 896; Milne v. Townsend (1892), 29 Sc. L. R. 747; The Calderon (1912), Times, 26th March.

(c) Hibbs v. Ross (1866), L. R. 1 Q. B. 534, per BLACKBURN, J., at p. 543; and see title EVIDENCE, Vol. XIII., p. 435.

(d) Cotton v. Wood (1860), 8 C. B. (N. S.) 568; Moffatt v. Bateman (1869), L. R. 3 P. C. 115; but see Clerk v. Petrie (1879), 16 Sc. L. R. 626 (where it was held that a man was presumed to be negligent in running over, while driving, a foot-passenger crossing the road, there being nothing unusual in the circumstances and it being broad daylight).

(e) Watson v. Weekes (1887), unreported, but referred to in the judgment of SMITH, J., in Tollhausen v. Davies (1888), 57 L. J. (Q. B.) 392 (where the fact that a horse harnessed to a cart and without any driver was running away was held to be more consistent with negligence than with care); Snee v. Durkie (1903), 6 F. (Ct. of Sess.) 42; compare Lord YOUNG's dissenting judgment in Smith v. Wallace & Co. (1898), 35 Sc. L. R. 583; Cox v. Burbidge (1863), 13 C. B. (N. S.) 430 (where a horse was loose on a highway, but there was nothing to point to that being the fault of the defendant, and there was held to be no evidence of negligence); see also Ellis v. Banyard (1911), 28 T. L. R. 122, C. A.

SECT. 3.

Functions
of Judge and Jury.Preliminary questions.

whether or not there is evidence on which the jury can reasonably find negligence, either by direct proof (f) or by inference (g), and the province of the jury to say whether or not negligence is in fact established or ought to be inferred (h).

In determining whether there is any reasonable evidence of negligence, the judge may have to decide some preliminary question of fact, or some questions of mixed fact and law, and it is his duty to determine any such questions by himself after hearing the evidence upon them when evidence is necessary (i). He may proceed upon the common knowledge and experience of mankind where simple operations or ordinary conditions are in question (k).

When plaintiff may be nonsuited, or case withdrawn
from jury.

755. A judge may nonsuit or withdraw the case from the jury:—

(1) Where a prima facie case is not made out, for example, (i.) where there is no evidence given on behalf of the plaintiff of negligence on the part of the defendant (l); (ii.) where there is a mere scintilla of evidence of negligence (m); (iii.) where the facts alleged by the plaintiff are at least equally (n) consistent with the injury having been caused by the plaintiff's negligence;

(f) Flannery v. Waterford and Limerick Rail. Co. (1877), 11 I. R. C. L. 30; see title EVIDENCE, Vol. XIII., p. 429.

(g) Bridges v. North London Rail. Co. (1874), L. R. 7 H. L. 213, reversing (1871), L. R. 6 Q. B. 377, Ex. Ch., as explained in Metropolitan Rail. Co. v. Jackson (1877), 3 App. Cas. 193.

(h) See cases cited in note (g), supra; Ryder v. Wombwell (1868), L. R. 4 Exch. 32, Ex. Ch.; compare Giblin v. McMullen (1868), L. R. 2 P. C. 317; and see Wright v. Midland Rail. Co. (1885), 1 T. L. R. 406, n., C. A. (where the principles laid down by the Divisional Court, in S. C. (1884), 51 L. T. 539, were approved, but the decision of that court as to the application of those principles reversed); see also Brown v. Great Western Rail. Co. (1885), 1 T. L. R. 406, where Wright v. Midland Rail. Co., supra, was followed, and Davey v. London and South Western Rail. Co. (1883), 12 Q. B. D. 70, C. A., held to be decided wrongly.

(i) See title EVIDENCE, Vol. XIII., pp. 421, 428; and see Wright v. Midland Rail. Co., supra, in which case LINDLEY, L.J., at p. 411, n., dissented from the majority of the court only in applying the particular principles to the facts of that case.

(k) Loughney v. Caledonian Rail. Co. (1902), 39 Sc. L. R. 289 (where the alleged negligence consisted in failing to provide a crane or block and tackle to unload barrels from a platform on to a lorry of about the same height).

(l) Metropolitan Rail. Co. v. Jackson, supra; Wright v. Midland Rail. Co., supra; Curtin v. Great Southern and Western Rail. Co. of Ireland (1887), 22 L. R. Ir. 219, C. A.; Callender v. Carlton Iron Co. (1894), 10 T. L. R. 366, H. L., affirming (1893), 9 T. L. R. 646, C. A.; compare Dallas v. Great Western Rail. Co. (1893), 9 T. L. R. 344, C. A. But on the case being opened he cannot at once nonsuit the plaintiff without his counsel's consent and without hearing the evidence tendered by him (Fletcher v. London and North Western Rail. Co., [1892] 1 Q. B. 122, C. A.). In Newman v. London and South Western Rail. Co. (1890), 7 T. L. R. 138, a nonsuit was entered by STEPHEN, J., after verdict for plaintiff by the jury.

(m) Toomey v. London, Brighton and South Coast Rail. Co. (1857), 3 C. B. (N. S.) 146, per WILLIAMS, J., at p. 150; see Doorman v. Jenkins (1834), 2 Ad. & El. 256; Abbott v. Freeman (1876), 35 L. T. 783, C. A.

(n) Wakelin v. London and South Western Rail. Co. (1886), 12 App. Cas. 41; compare Midland Rail. Co. v. Bromley (1856), 17 C. B. 372; Hull v.

(2) Where, although negligence on the part of the defendant is established, it would be unreasonable for any jury to find that it was the natural or effective cause of the injury (o), or where a complete answer, such as inevitable accident, is conclusively established by the defendant (p);

(3) Where on the undisputed facts of the case it appears that the accident was directly caused by the plaintiff's own negligence, although there may have been on these facts some negligence on the part of the defendant (q); but this power should not be exercised except in a very clear case, where the evidence is so strong that it would be wholly unreasonable for the jury to find that the plaintiff had not caused the accident by his own negligence (r).

Great Northern Rail. Co. of Ireland (1890), 26 L. R. Ir. 289. This applies only to cases where, upon the facts alleged by the plaintiff, the inference that the injury is due to his own negligence is as natural as that it was due to the negligence of the defendant. It does not apply to cases where, after a prima facie case is alleged by the plaintiff, there is contradictory evidence of fact (see Dublin, Wicklow and Wexford Rail. Co. v. Slattery (1878), 3 App. Cas. 1155), or where there is a mere balance of testimony (Smith v. South Eastern Rail. Co., [1896] 1 Q. B. 178, C. A.; see Wakelin v. London and South Western Rail. Co. (1884), reported [1896] 1 Q. B. 189, n., C. A., per BOWEN, L.J., at p. 196, n.).

(o) Adams v. Lancashire and Yorkshire Rail. Co. (1869), L. R. 4 C. P. 739. The law there laid down was approved in Gee v. Metropolitan Rail. Co. (1873), L. R. 8 Q. B. 161, Ex. Ch., but the application of it to the particular facts was questioned; and see Wright v. Midland Rail. Co. (1885), 1 T. L. R. 406, n., C. A.; Metropolitan Rail. Co. v. Jackson (1877), 3 App. Cas. 193.

(p) Fawkes v. Poulson & Son (1892), 8 T. L. R. 725, C. A.

(q) Skelton v. London and North Western Rail. Co. (1867), L. R. 2 C. P. 631; compare James v. Great Western Rail. Co. (1886), L. R. 2 C. P. 634, n.; and see Falkiner v. Great Southern and Western of Ireland Rail. Co. (1871), 5 I. R. C. L. 213; Allen v. North Metropolitan Tramways Co. (1888), 4 T. L. R. 561, C. A.; Sayer v. Hatton (1885), Cab. & El. 492; Wright v. Midland Rail. Co. (1884), 51 L. T. 539; compare S. C., 1 T. L. R. 406, n., C. A.; Griffiths v. East and West India Dock Co. (1889), 5 T. L. R. 371, C. A.; Coyle v. Great Northern Rail. Co. of Ireland (1887), 20 L. R. Ir. 409.

(r) Griffiths v. East and West India Dock Co., supra. A different view was taken in Davey v. London and South Western Rail. Co. (1883), 12 Q. B. D. 70, C. A., where it was laid down that the plaintiff must prove affirmatively that he had not contributed to the accident by his negligence, and if he failed to do this he could be nonsuited; but in Wright v. Midland Rail. Co. (1885), 1 T. L. R. 406, n., C. A., BRETT, M.R., at pp. 409, 410, stated that he regretted his decision in Davey v. London and South Western Rail. Co., supra, although he remarked in Wakelin v. London and South Western Rail. Co., supra, at p. 191, that he did not recede from the principles laid down in Davey v. London and South Western Rail. Co., supra. However, in White v. Barry Rail. Co. (1899), 15 T. L. R. 474, 475, C. A., reversed on other grounds (1901), 17 T. L. R. 644, H. L., the court stated that the judgment of the majority in Davey v. London and South Western Rail. Co., supra, was wrong. In Holland v. North Metropolitan Tramways Co. (1886), 3 T. L. R. 245, MANISTY, J., had previously expressed a similar view. In Yarmouth v. France (1887), 19 Q. B. D. 647, Lord ESHER, M.R., at p. 654, stated that a judge has no right to say that the evidence of contributory negligence on the part of the plaintiff was conclusive, but that it should be left to the jury to consider; but this was obiter, and, in so far as it conflicts with the cases cited in

SECT. 3.
Functions of Judge
and Jury.

Cases which must not be withdrawn
from jury.

A judge may not withdraw the case from the jury:—

(1) Where there is material evidence as to the actual facts, but such evidence is conflicting, even although the evidence may be very strong on one side and weak on the other (s);

(2) Where the material primary facts are undisputed, but two different inferences may be reasonably drawn by different minds from those facts (t);

(3) Whenever some ground exists on which a jury may reasonably find a verdict either way (a);

(4) Where, although negligence on the defendant's part is established, the defendant sets up a defence about which there is some conflict of evidence (b);

(5) Where contributory negligence is set up as a defence and the reasonableness of the plaintiff's conduct is called into question (c), or where there is a conflict as to whether the negligence of the plaintiff or the defendant was the direct and effective cause of the accident (d).

support of the principle stated in the text, supra, it is thought not to be law.

(s) Dublin, Wicklow and Wexford Rail. Co. v. Slattery (1878), 3 App. Cas. 1155; see Abrath v. North Eastern Rail. Co. (1883), 11 Q. B. D. 440, C. A., where, although the action was one for malicious prosecution, BOWEN, L.J., at p. 456, dealt generally with the question; Clayards v. Dethick (1848), 12 Q. B. 439.

(t) Wright v. Midland Rail. Co. (1885), 1 T. L. R. 406, n., C. A.; compare Bridges v. North London Rail. Co. (1874), L. R. 7 H. L. 213; Clarke v. Midland Rail. Co. (1880), 43 L. T. 381; Flannery v. Waterford and Limerick Rail. Co. (1887), 11 I. R. C. L. 30.

(a) Ruddy v. London and South Western Rail. Co. (1892), 8 T. L. R. 658, C. A. In this case GRANTHAM, J., had entered judgment for defendants, notwithstanding a verdict of a jury in plaintiff's favour, on the ground that from plaintiff's own evidence it was clear that he had walked straight into the cart that injured him: the Court of Appeal held, however, that, as there was evidence that at the time of the impact the cart was going at a dangerous speed, it might be that the plaintiff, although he saw the cart coming, might reasonably not have expected it to be upon him so quickly, and that therefore the jury ought to have the opportunity of giving a decision; compare Doorman v. Jenkins (1834), 2 Ad. & El. 256; Leishmann v. London, Brighton and South Coast Rail. Co. (1871), 23 L. T. 712.

(b) E.g., defence of inevitable accident, or volenti non fit injuria (Whitby v. Brock & Co. (1888), 4 T. L. R. 241, C. A.; see pp. 467, 476, post).

(c) Robson v. North Eastern Rail. Co. (1876), 2 Q. B. D. 85, C. A., explaining Bridges v. North London Rail. Co., supra; Walton v. London, Brighton and South Coast Rail. Co. (1866), Har. & Ruth. 424; compare Woods v. Caledonian Rail. Co. (1886), 23 Sc. L. R. 798 (where the court declined to lay down arbitrary rules, such as that there must be contributory negligence if the plaintiff rushes heedlessly into danger, or that there cannot be such negligence if he does so to save another's life); Woolley v. Scovell (1828), 3 Man. & Ry. (κ. B.) 105; Hawkins v. Cooper (1838), 8 C. & P. 473 (where the defendant's cart was being driven carelessly and on the wrong side of the road, but there was some evidence that the plaintiff crossed the road in such a manner as to bring disaster on herself: it was held that the case was one for the jury to consider); compare Leishmann v. London, Brighton and South Coast Rail. Co., supra.

(d) Metropolitan Rail. Co. v. Jackson (1877), 3 App. Cas. 193, explaining Bridges v. North London Rail. Co., supra. These cases put an end to a series of conflicting decisions as to the occasions, chiefly in connection with 756. If the jury find special facts, it is then the judge's duty to decide what is the legal effect of their finding, and his ruling may be appealed from (e).

SECT. 3.
Functions
of Judge
and Jury.

757. If the judge fails to direct the jury on a particular point set up in the defence, a new trial will not be granted at the instance of the defendant if the facts are such that any verdict for the defendant would have been against the weight of evidence (f).

Finding of special facts.
When new trial not granted.

A new trial ought not to be granted on the ground that the verdict of the jury was against the weight of the evidence, unless the verdict was one which a jury, viewing the whole of the evidence reasonably, could not properly find (g).

Part VII.—Contributory Negligence.

758. In an action for injuries arising from negligence it is a defence if the defendant proves that the plaintiff, by some negligence on his own part, directly contributed to the injury in the sense that it formed a material part of the effective cause thereof (h). When this is proved the plaintiff's negligence is said to be contributory (i).

A defence to a claim for injuries.

"level crossing," "invitation to alight," and "slamming door" cases, in which the judge was right in withdrawing the case from a jury, e.g., Siner v. Great Western Rail. Co. (1869), L. R. 4 Exch. 117, Ex. Ch.; Cockle v. London and South Eastern Rail. Co. (1872), L. R. 7 C. P. 321, Ex. Ch.; Praeger v. Bristol and Exeter Rail. Co. (1871), 24 L. T. 105, Ex. Ch.; Toomey v. London, Brighton and South Coast Rail. Co. (1857), 3 C. B. (N. S.) 146; Crafter v. Metropolitan Rail. Co. (1866), L. R. 1 C. P. 300; Foy v. London, Brighton and South Coast Rail. Co. (1865), 18 C. B. (N. S.) 225; Fordham v. Brighton Rail. Co. (1869), L. R. 4 C. P. 619, Ex. Ch.; Ellis v. Great Western Rail. Co. (1874), L. R. 9 C. P. 551, Ex. Ch.; Finegan v. London and North Western Rail. Co. (1889), 5 T. L. R. 598 (where it was held that, where the question is which of two drivers of vehicles is in fault, a nonsuit is not justified); Fordham v. Brighton Rail. Co., supra; North Eastern Rail. Co. (Directors etc.) v. Wanless (1874), L. R. 7 H. L. 12.

(e) Lloyd v. Woolland Brothers (1902), 19 T. L. R. 32, C. A.; see McCauley v. Great Northern, Piccadilly and Brompton Rail. Co. (1909), Times, 30th April; and see, generally, title EVIDENCE, Vol. XIII., pp. 428 et seq.

(f) Great Western Rail. Co. of Canada v. Braid (1863), 1 Moo. P. C. C. (N. S.) 101; Ford v. Lacey (1861), 7 H. & N. 151; compare Wakeman v. Robinson (1823), 1 Bing. 213; and see title PRACTICE AND PROCEDURE.

(g) Metropolitan Rail. Co. v. Wright (1886), 11 App. Cas. 152; see Cox v. English, Scottish, and Australian Bank, [1905] A. C. 168, P. C.

(h) As to effective or proximate cause, see pp. 378 et seq., ante.

(i) Tuff v. Warman (1858), 5 C. B. (N. S.) 573; Walton v. London, Brighton and South Coast Rail. Co. (1866), 14 L. T. 253; see Marriott v. Stanley (1840), 1 Man. & G. 568; Butterfield v. Forrester (1809), 11 East, 60, followed in Bridge v. Grand Junction Rail. Co. (1838), 3 M. & W. 244; Witherley v. Regent Canal Co. (1862), 12 C. B. (N. S.) 2; Clayards v. Dethick (1848), 12 Q. B. 439; Coyle v. Great Northern Rail. Co. of Ireland (1887), 20 L. R. Ir. 409; Thomas v. Quartermaine (1887), 18 Q. B. D. 685, C. A.; Ellis v. Great Western Rail. Co. (1874), L. R. 9 C. P. 551, approving

PART VII.
Contributory
Negligence.

Negligence on the part of the plaintiff which is only remote, and is not a substantial cause of the accident, does not properly come within the term—causa proxima non remota spectatur (j). It is ordinarily and properly applied only to cases in which both parties are alleged to have been negligent (k).

Mere negligence of plaintiff does not suffice.

759. The fact that there has been negligence on the part of the plaintiff which has contributed to cause the injury does not of itself give rise to the defence of contributory negligence so as to disentitle him from recovering (l). It is still open to the plaintiff to establish that, notwithstanding his (the plaintiff's) negligence, the defendant could by the exercise of ordinary care and diligence have avoided the injury which happened (m).

What must be proved.

In order that a plea of contributory negligence (n) may be successful, it must be shown either that there was negligence on the part of the plaintiff which contributed to the accident and that the defendant could not by using ordinary care have avoided the accident (o), or that, notwithstanding the defendant's negligence, the plaintiff could, by exercising ordinary

Cliff v. Midland Rail. Co. (1870), L. R. 5 Q. B. 258; Holden v. Liverpool New Gas and Coke Co. (1846), 3 C. B. 1.

(j) Spaight v. Tedcastle (1881), 6 App. Cas. 217; Florence v. Mann (1890), 28 Sc. L. R. 215; M'Naughton v. Caledonian Rail. Co. (1858), 21 Dunl. (Ct. of Sess.) 160; Sills v. Brown (1840), 9 C. & P. 601; Dowell v. General Steam Navigation Co. (1855), 5 E. & B. 195; see Walters v. Pfeil (1829), Mood. & M. 363 (where it was said that a defendant may be liable for injuring a neighbour's property by pulling down his own negligently, although the plaintiff may himself have failed to take precautions which he might have taken).

(k) See Thomas v. Quartermaine (1887), 18 Q. B. D. 685, C. A., per BOWEN, L.J., at p. 697.

(l) Tuff v. Warman (1858), 5 C. B. (N. S.) 573; Radley v. London and North Western Rail. Co. (1876), 1 App. Cas. 754; considered in Mitchell v. Caledonian Rail. Co. (1909), 46 Sc. L. R. 517; compare Raisin v. Mitchell (1839), 9 C. & P. 613; see Geeves v. London General Omnibus Co., Ltd. (1901), 17 T. L. R. 249; compare Bridge v. Grand Junction Rail. Co. (1838), 3 M. & W. 244; H.M.S. Sans Pareil, [1900] P. 267, C. A.; for other cases relating to collisions at sea, see title SHIPPING AND NAVIGATION.

(m) Springett v. Ball (1865), 4 F. & F. 472; M'Dermid v. Edinburgh Street Tramways Co. (1884), 22 Sc. L. R. 13. As to cases where the property injured is an obstruction to a highway, as, for example, an oyster bed in a navigable river, see Colchester Corporation v. Brooke (1845), 7 Q. B. 339; Dimes v. Petley (1850), 15 Q. B. 276; compare Lack v. Seward (1829), 4 C. & P. 106 (barge left moored in river); Petrie v. S.S. Kestrevor (Owners), [1898] 2 I. R. 556, C. A.

(n) In Doyle v. Kinahan (1869), 17 W. R. 679 (Ir. Ex.), it was held that by a plea of contributory negligence a defendant implies that he could not have avoided the accident; compare Tuff v. Warman, supra.

(o) Tuff v. Warman, supra; Radley v. London and North Western Rail. Co., supra, at p. 759, where the law was thus stated: "The plaintiff in an action for negligence cannot succeed if it is found by the jury that he has himself been guilty of any negligence or want of ordinary care which contributed to cause the accident"; but this must be qualified by adding, "yet if the defendant could in the result, by the exercise of ordinary care and diligence, have avoided the mischief which happened, the plaintiff's negligence will not excuse him." Compare Cayzer, Irvine & Co. v. Carron Co. (1884), 9 App. Cas. 873; H.M.S. Sans Pareil, supra; Spaight v. Tedcastle, supra; see also note (q), p. 447, post.

care (p), have avoided the accident (q). Where, therefore, the defendant is negligent and the plaintiff is alleged to have been guilty of contributory negligence, the test to be applied is whether the defendant's negligence was the real direct and effective cause of the misfortune (r). When the acts of negligence alleged are not contemporaneous this test in general results in throwing the responsibility on that party who last had an opportunity of avoiding, by the exercise of ordinary care or skill, the effect of the negligence of the other, and who failed to do so (s). If negligence on the part of the defendant is proved and contributory negligence by the plaintiff is at best only a matter of doubt, the defendant is liable (t).

PART VII.
Contributory
Negligence.

The test to be applied.

(p) The degree of care to be taken by the plaintiff varies with the time, place, and surrounding circumstances (Smith v. Browne (1891), 28 L. R. Ir. 1; Ramsey v. Thomson & Sons (1881), 9 R. (Ct. of Sess.) 140; and see p. 360, ante).

(q) Davies v. Mann (1842), 10 M. & W. 546; Bridge v. Grand Junction Rail. Co. (1838), 3 M. & W. 244; Walton v. London, Brighton and South Coast Rail. Co. (1866), 14 L. T. 253; Watson v. Ellis (1885), 1 T. L. R. 317; De Teyron v. Waring (1885), 1 T. L. R. 414; Lee v. Nixey (1890), 63 L. T. 285; compare Butterfield v. Forrester (1809), 11 East, 60; see Butterley v. Drogheda Corporation, [1907] 2 I. R. 134, approving Reynolds v. Tilling (1903), 19 T. L. R. 539; Dowell v. General Steam Navigation Co. (1855), 5 E. & B. 195; compare Marriott v. Stanley (1840), 1 Man. & G. 568 (where it was held not to be a misdirection to ask the jury to say whether the plaintiff had been so deficient in reasonable and ordinary care that he had brought the injury on himself); and see Ellis v. Great Western Rail. Co. (1874), L. R. 9 C. P. 551; Walker v. Midland Rail. Co. (1886), 2 T. L. R. 450. In some of the older cases, e.g., Vanderplank v. Miller (1828), 1 Mood. & M. 169; Pluckwell v. Wilson (1832), 5 C. & P. 375; Vennall v. Garner (1832), 1 Cr. & M. 21; Luxford v. Large (1833), 5 C. & P. 421; Williams v. Holland (1833), 6 C. & P. 23; Woolf v. Beard (1838), 8 C. & P. 373; Raisin v. Mitchell (1839), 9 C. & P. 613; Martin v. Great Northern Rail. Co. (1855), 16 C. B. 179; and to a certain extent in Sills v. Brown (1840), 9 C. & P. 601; Dowell v. General Steam Navigation Co., supra; Witherley v. Regent Canal Co. (1862), 12 C. B. (N. S.) 2, the rule laid down, that a plaintiff who in any way contributed to the accident by his own negligence could not recover against the defendant, seems to have been inadequately stated, since it was not qualified by adding that if the defendant could reasonably have avoided the accident the plaintiff could still succeed, notwithstanding his negligence; see note (o), p. 446, ante. This qualification was first definitely stated in Radley v. London and North Western Rail. Co. (1876), 1 App. Cas. 754, though it had been substantially adopted in those cases, prior to 1876, which are cited in the first part of this note.

(r) In Butterley v. Drogheda Corporation, supra, Lord O'BRIEN, C.J., at p. 138, said that in his view the best questions to be left to the jury were: (1) Was the defendant guilty of negligence? (2) If so, was the defendant's negligence the real, direct and immediate cause of the misfortune? It was considered that these questions were less likely to confuse the jury than those usually left to them; compare M'Evoy v. Waterford Steamship Co. (1886), 18 L. R. Ir. 159; and see Campbell and Cowan & Co. v. Train (1910), 47 Sc. L. R. 475.

(s) Compare Walton v. London, Brighton and South Coast Rail. Co., supra; Tuff v. Warman (1858), 5 C. B. (N. S.) 573; Davies v. Mann, supra; Morrison v. General Steam Navigation Co. (1853), 8 Exch. 733; Cayzer, Irvine Co. v. Carron Co. (1884), 9 App. Cas. 873; H.M.S. Sans Pareil, [1900] P. 267, C. A.; Avis v. Great Eastern Rail. Co. (1892), 8 T. L. R. 693; Smith v. Browne, supra.

(t) M'Martin v. Hannay (1872), 10 Macph. (Ct. of Sess.) 411.

PART VII.
Contributory
Negligence.

Effect of defendant's act as creating emergency or situation involving choice of course.

Where, however, both by their negligence equally contribute to cause the injury the plaintiff cannot recover (u). Neither can he recover where there is contributory negligence by his servant (v) or by anyone else for whom he is responsible.

760. If the defendant by his negligence creates an emergency or a situation of unusual difficulty so as to cast on the plaintiff the burden of using more than ordinary care to avert an accident, the fact that the latter did not take such extraordinary care and so avoid the mishap does not by itself excuse the defendant (a).

Similarly, where the defendant's act places the plaintiff in such a situation as to involve the choice of one of two evils, the fact that he chooses that which turns out to be the only one which would have injured him does not of itself prevent his recovering against the defendant (b). If, however, the plaintiff's act resulted from a rash apprehension of a danger which was really non-existent, and his injury is attributable to that rashness and not to the defendant's negligence, he cannot recover (b).

(u) Reynolds v. Tilling (1903), 19 T. L. R. 539; Fenna v. Clare & Co., [1895] 1 Q. B. 199; see p. 437, ante.

(v) The Egyptian (1910), 102 L. T. 465, H. L. The same man was employed as night watchman by the plaintiff and was hired by the defendant to navigate his boat. While acting for the defendant he ran into and made a hole in the plaintiff's boat, which took in water. The servant then proceeded to act as night watchman, and owing to his negligence the leak was not discovered. As the vessel got lower in the water another hole came under water and she sank. It was held that the damage caused by the sinking was due to the contributory negligence of the plaintiff's servant, and was not therefore recoverable.

(a) The Ovingdean Grange, [1902] P. 208, C. A.; compare Stoomvaart Maatschappij Nederland v. Peninsular and Oriental Steam Navigation Co. (1880), 5 App. Cas. 876.

(b) Jones v. Boyce (1816), 1 Stark. 493 (where owing to a defective rein the horses in a coach became ungovernable while going down a hill and ran into some piles, and the plaintiff chose to jump off the coach rather than run the risk of being overturned, it was held he could recover); Chaplin v. Hawes (1828), 3 C. & P. 554, followed in Turley v. Thomas (1837), 8 C. & P. 103; Stoomvaart Maatschappij Nederland v. Peninsular and Oriental Steam Navigation Co., supra. In Flower v. Adam (1810), 2 Taunt. 314, the facts were that the defendant's servants placed a large heap of lime rubbish in the highway; the dust from this frightened the plaintiff's horse, which ran towards a waggon; in avoiding the waggon the plaintiff pulled the horse round too much and collided with a heap of rubbish placed near by a third person: it was held that the plaintiff could not recover, as it was "owing to his not being a skilful charioteer" that he drove into the heap. It is thought that in a similar case nowadays the jury would be directed that if the defendant's negligence placed the driver in a difficulty he would not be disentitled by an error of judgment when in such a difficulty, nor would mere unskillfulness, under such circumstances, relieve the defendant from liability. In Wilkinson v. Kinneil Cannel and Coking Coal Co., Ltd. (1897), 34 Sc. L. R. 533, the plaintiff, together with his fellow-servant and his master's property, were placed in great danger by the negligence of defendant's servants; the plaintiff leapt out of danger, but without hesitation and in a moment of agitation he came back into it to save his fellow-servant and possibly his master's property: it was held that the

761. Knowledge by the plaintiff of an existing* danger or of the defendant's negligence may be an important element in determining whether or not he has been guilty of contributory negligence; and it is a question of fact in each case whether such knowledge in the particular circumstances made it so unreasonable for the plaintiff to do what he did as to debar him from recovering (c).

PART VII.
Contributory
Negligence.
Knowledge of plaintiff.

762. The knowledge which a plaintiff has of the dangers of railways or other places where the public have rights of access, and of the precautions taken in respect of such dangers, may tend either to establish or to refute contributory negligence. On the one hand, the plaintiff must act reasonably with regard to the dangers which he knows, or ought to know, exist (d),^m and to any regulations or other precautions imposed for the purpose of avoiding them (e). On the other hand, he is entitled to rely on reasonable care and proper precautions being taken (f), and, in places to which the

Knowledge of dangers of railways and other public places.

jury must decide whether the plaintiff was doing what was right and reasonable, and whether his whole action was fairly attributable to the defendant's negligence; if so, defendant would be liable. Compare Woods v. Caledonian Rail. Co. (1886), 23 Sc. L. R. 798.

(c) E.g., Smith v. Baker & Sons, [1891] A. C. 325; and Robertson v. Primrose & Co. (1909), 47 Sc. L. R. 147 (servant working under a crane which was carrying stones); Osborne v. London and North Western Rail. Co. (1888), 21 Q. B. D. 220 (knowledge of dangerous condition of steps in railway station and careful user of them when alternative route possible held not contributory negligence); Stuart v. Evans (1883), 49 L. T. 138; Clayards v. Dethick (1848), 12 Q. B. 439 (which can only be supported on the ground that the plaintiff was unaware of the danger (Lax v. Darlington Corporation (1879), 5 Ex. D. 28, C. A., per BRAMWELL, L.J., at p. 36)); Thompson v. North Eastern Rail. Co. (1860), 2 B. & S. 106; Thomas v. Quartermaine (1887), 18 Q. B. D. 685, C. A.; Williams v. Birmingham Battery and Metal Co., [1899] 2 Q. B. 338, 345; Grant v. Drysdale (1883), 20 Sc. L. R. 774; but compare Dynen v. Leach (1857), 26 L. J. (EX.) 221 (which appears inconsistent with the more recent decisions cited in this note in so far as it decided a judge might nonsuit); compare Reney v. Kirkcudbright (Magistrates), [1892] A. C. 264; Ramage and Ferguson v. Forsyth (1890), 28 Sc. L. R. 26 (servant falling through manhole while passing along an obviously dark and dangerous place).

(d) Manning v. London and North Western Rail. Co. (1907), 23 T. L. R. 222, C. A. (evidence admitted of platforms of equal depth at other stations); and see title CARRIERS, Vol. IV., p. 50; Goldberg v. Glasgow and South Western Rail. Co., [1907] S. C. 1036 (passenger injured by starting of train); The Highland Loch (1912), 28 T. L. R. 213, H. L. (ketch injured by lying near launching place after warning).

(e) Benson v. Furness Rail. Co. (1903), 88 L. T. 268; Drury v. North Eastern Railway, [1901] 2 K. B. 322 (injury caused by shutting carriage door). Non-compliance with regulations which are habitually disregarded is not necessarily sufficient to establish negligence (Dublin, Wicklow and Wexford Railway v. Slattery (1878), 3 App. Cas. 1155).

(f) Brown v. Great Western Rail. Co. (1885), 52 L. T. 622; compare Wilby v. Midland Rail. Co. (1876), 35 L. T. 244 (where plaintiff chose to cross the line at a place where there was no crossing provided and tumbled into an excavation, and it was proved that a proper crossing was provided elsewhere; held that he could not recover. It seems that if there had been evidence that the defendants invited the plaintiff to go that way, or had habitually allowed persons to cross where they pleased, the defendants might have been liable); compare Clarke v. Midland Rail. Co. (1880), 43 L. T. 381 (where it was suggested that the plaintiff used a level crossing instead of a bridge because he said the defendants' servants were

PART VII.
Contributory
Negligence.
Illustrations.

public have access, is entitled to assume the existence of such protection as the public have through custom become justified in expecting (g).

Thus, to stand at the open door of a carriage while the train is slowing down and coming into the station (h), or to attempt to get into a train while in motion, although it may have been started while the passenger was opening the door (i), may amount to contributory negligence. But it is not necessarily contributory negligence to build a stack near to a railway line (k), nor yet to go upon private premises where there is a particular danger known to the owner, if the plaintiff is ignorant of its presence and no warning has been given (l), although under ordinary circumstances it is contributory negligence to wander about private premises in the dark (m); and persons who, without having business, go idly on to private premises where danger exists have only themselves to blame if they are injured (n).

Claims by servants.

763. Where a servant is injured by an accident due jointly to the negligence of third parties and to that of his employers, he accustomed to drive him off the latter); Curtin v. Great Southern and Western Rail. Co. of Ireland (1887), 22 L. R. Ir. 219, C. A.; McDonnell v. Great Southern and Western Rail. Co. of Ireland (1888), 24 L. R. Ir. 369, C. A.; Falkiner v. Great Southern and Western Rail. Co. of Ireland (1871), 5 I. R. C. L. 213; and as to contributory negligence arising from a passenger leaning against the door of the carriage, see title CARRIERS, Vol. IV., p. 51; Pickering v. Belfast Corporation, [1911] 2 I. R. 224, C. A.; Jenner v. South Eastern Rail. Co. (1911), 27 T. L. R. 445; London, Tilbury and Southend Rail. Co. v. Glasscock (1903), 19 T. L. R. 305, H. L. (passenger alighting beyond platform); Paterson v. London, Tilbury and Southend Rail. Co. (1912), Times, 16th March, C. A.

(g) Smith v. South Eastern Rail. Co., [1896] 1 Q. B. 178; Dublin, Wicklow and Wexford Railway v. Slattery (1878), 3 App. Cas. 1155; Rosenbaum v. Metropolitan Water Board (1910), 26 T. L. R. 510, per CHANNELL, J.; considered and new trial ordered on the question of danger (1911), 27 T. L. R. 103, C. A.

(h) Folkes v. North London Rail. Co. (1892), 8 T. L. R. 269.

(i) Avis v. Great Eastern Rail. Co. (1892), 8 T. L. R. 693.

(k) Groom v. Great Western Rail. Co. (1892), 8 T. L. R. 253; the reason given being that experience shows that trains run millions of miles with but few claims being made in respect of fires caused by them; compare Dimmock v. North Stafford Rail. Co. (1866), 4 F. & F. 1058.

(l) Bird v. Holbrook (1828), 4 Bird. 628; compare Sarch v. Blackburn (1830), 4 C. & P. 297 (plaintiff bitten by a dog).

(m) Walker v. Midland Rail. Co. (1886), 2 T. L. R. 450. See note (h), p. 390, ante; compare Mackie v. Macmillan (1898), 36 Sc. L. R. 137; Fleming v. Eadie & Son (1898), 35 Sc. L. R. 422; Cairns v. Boyd (1879), 6 R. (Ct. of Sess.) 1004; Ramage and Ferguson v. Forsyth (1890), 28 Sc. L. R. 26; and see note (i), p. 390, ante.

(n) Smith v. Highland Rail. Co. (1888), 26 Sc. L. R. 33; Daly v. Arrol (1886), 24 Sc. L. R. 150. Where a person bitten had no knowledge of the vicious nature of a dog it was said that even treading on its toes would not disentitle him from recovering (Smith v. Pelah (1747), 2 Stra. 1263 [1264]; but this cannot now be said to be law (Charlwood v. Greig (1851), 3 Car. & Kir. 46, 48); compare Sarch v. Blackburn (1830), 4 C. & P. 297, where it was held that a notice, "Beware of the dog," did not relieve the defendant from liability in respect of his dog biting a person on his premises, because the plaintiff was not able to read; and see note (b), p. 363, ante.

cannot recover against the former, as he cannot be in a better position in such a case than his employers (o).

Where a servant seeks to recover damages against his master the latter may set up contributory negligence as a defence (p), although the negligence complained of by the servant is the breach of a statutory duty (q).

It is prima facie evidence of such contributory negligence if the servant continues in the service after being aware of the defect or negligence he complains of, but it is not conclusive (r), inasmuch as such knowledge does not necessarily disentitle him to recover, since the servant may have taken additional care on account of the known danger, or may have failed to appreciate the risk attached to his continuing to work (s). It is a question of fact in each case whether or not his continuing to work with such knowledge amounted to negligence (t).

764. A defendant cannot excuse himself for the consequences of his misconduct by proving that the plaintiff's injury was contributed to by the negligence of a third party (a). The plaintiff in such a

PART. VII.
Contributory
Negligence.

Evidence.

Contributory negligence of
third party.

(o) Child v. Hearn (1874), L. R. 9 Exch. 176 (where the servant of a railway company was injured in consequence of defendant's pigs straying on to the line through a fence which it was the company's duty to maintain). As to the doctrine of "identification," now obsolete, see p. 452, post.

(p) Paterson v. Wallace (1854), 1 Macq. 748; Groves v. Wimborne (Lord), [1898] 2 Q. B. 402, C. A., per VAUGHAN WILLIAMS, L.J., at p. 419. The master's duty to his servant is to take care that the latter is not induced to work under a notion that the tackle or machinery is staunch when the master knows or ought to know it is not so (ibid.); and, where the servant is put to work at dangerous machinery, to take care for the servant's safety (Caswell v. Worth (1856), 5 E. & B. 849; Britton v. Great Western Cotton Co. (1872), L. R. 7 Exch. 130; Clark v. Holmes (1862), 7 H. & N. 937; see title MASTER AND SERVANT, Vol. XX., p. 131).

(q) Caswell v. Worth (1856), 5 E. & B. 849 (where it was held that the fact that the statute imposed a penalty for the breach of certain duties in fencing dangerous machinery made no difference, and that the servant could rely on the breach unless the injury suffered by him was really due to his own wrongful interference); Iles v. Abercarn Welsh Flannel Co. (1886), 2 T. L. R. 547, Div. Ct.; Kelly v. Glebe Sugar Refining Co. (1893), 30 Sc. L. R. 758; compare Britton v. Great Western Cotton Co., supra, and Groves v. Wimborne (Lord), supra; and see cases cited in note (c), p. 424, ante.

(r) Hoey v. Dublin and Belfast Junction Rail. Co. (1870), 5 I. R. C. L. 206.

(s) Clark v. Holmes, supra; see title MASTER AND SERVANT, Vol. XX., p. 131.

(t) Clarke v. Holmes, supra; Kelly v. Glebe Sugar Refining Co., supra (where a boy of fifteen was injured by an unfenced shaft which he had approached unnecessarily while engaged in his own pursuits, it was held that it was for the jury to say whether in the circumstances the shaft was so manifestly dangerous to a boy of fifteen as to make him so much in fault in going near it as he did that he could not recover); and see p. 373, ante.

(a) Abbott v. Macfie (1863), 2 H. & C. 744; Harrison v. Great Northern Rail. Co. (1864), 3 H. & C. 231; Hill v. New River Co. (1868), 9 B. & S. 303; Clarke v. Chambers (1878), 3 Q. B. D. 327; Rigby v. Hewitt (1850), 5 Exch. 240, per POLLOCK, C.B., at p. 242; and see, generally, p. 380, ante.

PART VII.
Contributory
Negligence.

case can sue either of the persons who have been negligent, provided that his injury does not result from contributory negligence for which he is responsible (b). Accordingly, where a person travelling in a vehicle belonging to a third person is injured by the negligence of the defendant, he is entitled to recover against the latter notwithstanding that the driver of the vehicle in which the plaintiff is travelling may have been guilty of some negligence contributing to the accident (c). He is not identified with the negligence of the driver of the vehicle in which he is, merely because he is travelling in it (d). The proper test as to the liability in such a case is whether the negligence of the driver of the vehicle which collided with that in which the plaintiff was travelling wholly or in part caused the accident; if so, the plaintiff can recover, and the fact that there was negligence on the part of the driver of the vehicle in which the plaintiff was travelling makes no difference (d).

Effect of imminent danger justifying unusual
course.

765. Where negligence on the part of the defendant is proved, an act which in ordinary circumstances would afford an answer to an action may be so justified by the imminence of the danger caused to the plaintiff, or some third party, that it will not afford an answer (e). It is a question of fact in each case (f), and the courts will not lay down any general principle that there cannot be contributory negligence even where the plaintiff's act was necessary to save life, although such necessity may often justify an act which would otherwise be unjustifiable (g).

(b) Greenland v. Chaplin (1850), 5 Exch. 243. The defendant in that event cannot shelter himself behind the other negligent party, nor claim to share the damages with him; see Devlin v. Belfast Corporation, [1907] 2 I. R. 437, C. A. (compare Illidge v. Goodwin (1831), 5 C. & P. 190, per TINDAL, C.J., at p. 192, where it was held that, where a horsed vehicle was left unattended in the street and backed into a shop, the owner was liable whether or not the plaintiff's servant or a stranger had contributed to the accident by causing the horse to back); but see Hayman v. Hewitt (1798), Peake, Add. Cas. 170. In Engelhart v. Farrant & Co., [1897] 1 Q. B. 240, C. A., the responsibility of a master for the negligence of his servant was held to extend to a case in which, although the accident was immediately caused by a third person, yet that person's action arose from the servant's negligence, and was such that the servant might reasonably have foreseen. In that case Illidge v. Goodwin, supra, and Lynch v. Nurdin (1841), 1 Q. B. 29, were approved, and Mann v. Ward (1891), 8 T. L. R. 699, C. A., was doubted.

(c) Mills v. Armstrong, The Bernina (1888), 13 App. Cas. 1, overruling Thorogood v. Bryan (1849), 8 C. B. 115, and Armstrong v. Lancashire and Yorkshire Rail. Co. (1875), L. R. 10 Exch. 47, in which the doctrine of identification was held to defeat the plaintiff's claim.

(d) Mathews v. London Street Tramways Co. (1888), 5 T. L. R. 3.

(e) Roebuck v. Norwegian Titanic Co. (1884), 1 T. L. R. 117. The ground of the decision apparently was that it was implied in the plaintiff's service that he should do anything he could to be of real use in saving his fellow-workman.

(f) Wilkinson v. Kinneil Cannel and Coking Coal Co. (1897), 34 Sc. L. R. 533.

(g) Woods v. Caledonian Rail. Co. (1886), 23 Sc. L. R. 798. As to the distinction between saving life and saving property, see Scaramanga v. Stamp (1880), 5 C. P. D. 295, C. A. (deviation on a voyage).

766. A distinction must be drawn between children and adults, for an act which would constitute contributory negligence on the part of an adult may fail to do so in the case of a child or young person (h), the reason being that the same standard of care cannot be expected from a child as from an adult (i). Where a child is of such an age as to be naturally ignorant of danger or to be unable to fend for itself at all (k), he cannot be said to be guilty of contributory negligence in regard to a matter beyond his appreciation; but quite young children are held responsible for not exercising that standard of care which may reasonably be expected of them (l).

Where a child in doing an act which contributes to the accident is only following the instincts natural to his age and the circumstances, he is not guilty of contributory negligence (m); but the taking of reasonable precautions (n) by the defendant to protect a child against his own propensities, may afford evidence that the defendant was not negligent, and was therefore not liable (o).

PART VII.
Contributory
Negligence.

Contributory negligence on the part of children.

Natural acts of children.

(h) Lynch v. Nurdin (1841), 1 Q. B. 29, as explained in Lygo v. Newbold (1854), 9 Exch. 302; Grizzle v. Frost (1863), 3 F. & F. 622; Crocker v. Banks (1888), 4 T. L. R. 324 (girl aged seventeen omitting to wear protection mask); Robinson v. Smith (W. H.) (1901), 17 T. L. R. 423.

(i) Lynch v. Nurdin, supra; Lay v. Midland Rail. Co. (1875), 34 L. T. 30; Forbes v. Aberdeen Harbour Commissioners (1888), 15 R. (Ct. of Sess.) 323; Frasers v. Edinburgh Street Tramways Co. (1882), 20 Sc. L. R. 192; Gardner v. Grace (1853), 1 F. & F. 359; Gibson v. Glasgow Police Commissioners (1893), 30 Sc. L. R. 469 (where a child fell into unfenced water by a public playground).

(k) Gardner v. Grace (1858), 1 F. & F. 359 (child aged three and a half run over); Campbell v. Ord and Maddison (1873), 11 Sc. L. R. 54, and McGregor v. Ross and Marshall (1883), 20 Sc. L. R. 462 (see judgment of Lord YOUNG, at p. 468), in both of which cases a child of four was playing with a machine; and see Cooke v. Midland Great Western Railway of Ireland, [1909] A. C. 229, 236, 238, 241.

(l) Frasers v. Edinburgh Street Tramways Co., supra (a boy of six accustomed to go to school alone every day knows that he must look out for traffic when crossing the road), distinguishing Campbell v. Ord and Maddison, supra, because in the latter case the child was injured by an unknown danger. In Plantza v. Glasgow Corporation (1910), 47 Sc. L. R. 688, a boy of five was held to be guilty of contributory negligence in walking into an obstruction on the footway; compare Hughes v. Maefie (1863), 2 H. & C. 744; McLelland v. Johnstone (1902), 39 Sc. L. R. 326; and see Martin v. Ward (1887), 24 Sc. L. R. 587.

(m) Lynch v. Nurdin, supra (children playing with an unattended horse and cart); Harrold v. Watney, [1898] 2 Q. B. 320, C. A. (child climbing on to a rotten fence); compare Jewson v. Gatti (1886), 2 T. L. R. 441, decided on another ground; but see Jenkins v. Great Western Railway, [1912] 1 K. B. 525, C. A. In Mangan v. Atterton (1866), L. R. 1 Exch. 239, the defendant, who had left unattended and unprotected a dangerous machine exposed for sale in a market place, was held not to be responsible for an injury received by a child in playing with it under very similar circumstances to those in Lynch v. Nurdin, supra; but MARTIN, B., and BRAMWELL, B., based their decisions on different grounds, and their ruling is questioned in Clark v. Chambers (1878), 3 Q. B. D. 327, 339.

(n) As to the precaution to be taken, see Royan v. McLellans (1889), 27 Sc. L. R. 79; Ross v. Keith (1888), 16 R. (Ct. of Sess.) 86; Haughton v. North British Rail. Co. (1892), 30 Sc. L. R. 111; and see p. 373, ante.

(o) Bailey v. Neal (1888), 5 T. L. R. 20; McGregor v. Ross and Marshall

PART VII.
Contributory
Negligence.

Negligence of person in control of child.

767. Where a child of tender years is under another person's control, that person's negligence, if it has contributed to the injury to the child, is a good defence to an action brought on behalf of the child (a).

Where the circumstances are such that it is impossible to take precautions for children different from those taken for adults, the negligent act of the person in charge of a child in allowing him to be present in such circumstances may be the real cause of the injury and may afford an answer to an action (b). Thus an action will not succeed where a child has been injured owing to the negligence of his parents or guardian in allowing him to go abroad alone, and so not preventing him from getting into danger (c).

Part VIII.—Negligence Causing Death.

SECT. 1.—Civil Liability.

No civil liability for death from
negligence.

768. Apart from statutory provisions, there is no civil liability in tort for the death of a person as the result of negligence in cases where the cause of action is the wrong which caused the death (d). At common law such liability does not exist, since "actio personalis moritur cum persona" (e). Thus a husband cannot recover damages for the death of his wife (f), or a parent for that of his child (g), or

(1883), 20 Sc. L. R. 462; Ross v. Keith (1888), 26 Sc. L. R. 55; compare Stiefsohn v. Brook, Bond & Co. (1889), 5 T. L. R. 684.

(a) Waite v. North Eastern Rail. Co. (1859), E. B. & E. 728; and see note (c), infra.

(b) Morran v. Waddell (1883), 21 Sc. L. R. 28; Grant v. Caledonian Rail. Co. (1870), 9 Macph. (Ct. of Sess.) 258 (where a child was knocked down by a train at a level crossing). No doubt it would be unreasonable in these and other situations of similar danger to make defendants liable for not taking extraordinary precautions to protect young children; they ought not to be in such places by themselves; compare Singleton v. Eastern Counties Rail. Co. (1859), 7 C. B. (N. S.) 287. As to duty to take care where children are concerned, see, generally, p. 373, ante.

(c) Schofield v. Bolton Corporation (1910), 26 T. L. R. 230, C. A.; Duff v. National Telephone Co. (1889), 26 Sc. L. R. 512; Morran v. Waddell, supra; compare Haughton v. North British Rail. Co. (1892), 30 Sc. L. R. 111, and Austin v. Great Western Rail. Co. (1867), L. R. 2 Q. B. 442 (where a child of over three years was injured while travelling with his mother and, although no ticket was taken for the child, he was held entitled to maintain an action; there was no negligence on the part of the mother which contributed to the accident); compare also Marshall v. York, Newcastle and Berwick Rail. Co. (1851), 11 C. B. 655.

(d) Jackson v. Watson, [1909] 2 K. B. 193, C. A., per VAUGHAN WILLIAMS, L.J., at p. 202; see preamble to the Fatal Accidents Act, 1846 (9 & 10 Vict. c. 93).

(e) Baker v. Bolton (1808), 1 Camp. 493; discussed in Osborn v. Gillett (1873), L. R. 8 Exch. 88; Clark v. London General Omnibus Co., [1906] 2 K. B. 648, C. A.; Jackson v. Watson, supra; see title EXECUTORS AND ADMINISTRATORS, Vol. XIV., p. 226.

(f) Higgin v. Butcher (1606), Yelv. 89; Baker v. Bolton (1808), 1 Camp. 493.

(g) Clark v. London General Omnibus Co., [1906] 2 K. B. 648, C. A., dis-

a master for that of his servant (h). Nor in any such case can the cost of the funeral expenses be recovered (i).

If, however, as a result of the negligence complained of, death does not immediately ensue, there may be liability for damages for loss of society or service during the period between the injury and the death, but the liability ceases to accrue at the moment of death (k).

769. The personal representatives of one who is killed owing to an act of negligence cannot recover for the benefit of the estate for injuries to the deceased (l), even where the deceased has been put to expense thereby (m), but they can recover for injuries which have operated to the detriment of the real (m) or personal (n) estate of the deceased during the continuance of his lifetime (o).

770. Where there is a cause of action independently of the wrong causing the death, such as a breach of contract, an action can be maintained and damage arising from the death may be included as an element of the damage (p).

SECT. 1.

Civil Liability.

Liability where death does not immediately ensue.

Injuries to deceased's estate.

Cause of action independent of tort.

SECT. 2.—Civil Responsibility under the Fatal Accidents Acts (q).

771. A person (which term includes a corporation) is liable (r) to an action for damages if another is killed by some wrongful approving Bedwell v. Golding (1902), 18 T. L. R. 436; see The Vera Cruz (1884), 9 P. D. 88, 96.

Who is responsible.

(h) Osborn v. Gillett (1873), L. R. 8 Exch. 88.

(i) Clark v. London General Omnibus Co., [1906] 2 K. B. 648, C. A., per Lord ALVERSTONE, C.J., at p. 658; compare R. v. Vann (1851), 21 L. J. (M. C.) 39.

(k) Baker v. Bolton (1808), 1 Camp. 493; Osborn v. Gillett, supra.

(l) Chamberlain v. Williamson (1814), 2 M. & S. 408; Pulling v. Great Eastern Rail. Co. (1882), 9 Q. B. D. 110; Lendon v. London Road Car Co. (1888), 4 T. L. R. 448.

(m) Civil Procedure Act, 1833 (3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 42), s. 2; Jones v. Simes (1890), 43 Ch. D. 607.

(n) Stat. (1330) 4 Edw. 3, c. 7, s. 4; stat. (1351) 25 Edw. 3, c. 5; Tharpe v. Stallwood (1843), 5 Man. & G. 760; Twycross v. Grant (1878), 4 C. P. D. 40, C. A.

(o) See, generally, title EXECUTORS AND ADMINISTRATORS, Vol. XIV., pp. 226, 227.

(p) Jackson v. Watson, [1909] 2 K. B. 193, C. A., per VAUGHAN WILLIAMS, L.J., at p. 201; see Potter v. Metropolitan Rail. Co. (1874), 32 L. T. 36; Bradshaw v. Lancashire and Yorkshire Rail. Co. (1875), L. R. 10 C. P. 189; Leggott v. Great Northern Rail. Co. (1876), 1 Q. B. D. 599 (cases in which the personal representative was held entitled to recover in respect of the death of the deceased, who was killed while travelling as a passenger on a railway); and see Frost v. Aylesbury Dairy Co., [1905] 1 K. B. 608, C. A.; Jackson v. Watson, supra.

(q) Fatal Accidents Act, 1846 (9 & 10 Vict. c. 93), commonly called Lord Campbell's Act, as amended by the Fatal Accidents Act, 1864 (27 & 28 Vict. c. 95), and supplemented by the Fatal Accidents (Damages) Act, 1908 (8 Edw. 7, c. 7), in this section of the title referred to together as "the Acts."

(r) Fatal Accidents Act, 1846 (9 & 10 Vict. c. 93), s. 1.

SECT. 2.
Civil Responsibility under the Fatal
Accidents
Acts.

act(s), neglect or default (t) such as would have entitled the person injured (a), but for his death, to have maintained an action and recovered damages against such person in respect of it. This liability remains notwithstanding that the death was caused under such circumstances as amount to a felony (b).

(s) This term includes direct acts of trespass to the person, as well as criminal acts of violence.

(t) Default assumes a duty and means "not doing what is reasonable under the circumstances" (Re Young and Harston's Contract (1885), 31 Ch. D. 168, C. A., per BOWEN, L.J., at p. 174).

(a) "The condition that the action could have been maintained by the deceased if death had not ensued has reference not to the nature of the loss or injury sustained but to the circumstances under which the bodily injury arose, and the nature of the wrongful act, neglect, or default, complained of" (Pym v. Great Northern Rail. Co. (1862), 2 B. & S. 759, per COCKBURN, C.J., at p. 767; affirmed (1863), 4 B. & S. 396). Any defences, therefore, which would have been open to the defendant if the injured party had lived are available under the Acts (Armsworth v. South Eastern Rail. Co. (1847), 11 Jur. 758; Coldrick v. Partridge, Jones & Co., Ltd., [1910] A. C. 77 (common employment)). Thus contributory negligence on the part of the deceased is a defence (Tucker v. Chaplin (1848), 2 Car. & Kir. 730; Senior v. Ward (1859), 1 E. & E. 385; Coyle v. Great Northern Rail. Co. of Ireland (1887), 20 L. R. Ir. 409); but a defendant is not allowed to succeed on this defence if his own tortious act placed the deceased in a dilemma in which, in extremis, he took a wrong course (The George and Richard (1871), L. R. 3 A. & E. 466). It is also an answer to an action that the deceased before death accepted or recovered compensation from the defendants in satisfaction of all claims in respect of the injury (Read v. Great Eastern Rail. Co. (1868), L. R. 3 Q. B. 555), though it is always open to the plaintiff to show that the deceased's mind did not go with the terms of the receipt which he gave and that he was unaware of its effect (Rideal v. Great Western Rail. Co. (1859), 1 F. & F. 706; Huckle v. London County Council (1910), 27 T. L. R. 112, C. A.), or that the receipt was obtained by fraud (Lee v. Lancashire and Yorkshire Rail. Co. (1871), 6 Ch. App. 527; Stewart v. Great Western Rail. Co. (1865), 2 De G. J. & Sm. 319; Hirschfeld v. London, Brighton and South Coast Rail. Co. (1876), 2 Q. B. D. 1; see title EVIDENCE, Vol. XIII., p. 562). If a person is under the belief, in consequence of a representation made by the person asking him to sign a receipt in full discharge of all claims, that it will not prevent a further claim being preferred should the medical men be wrong in their estimate of the time necessary for his recovery, his mind could not be said to go with the receipt (Lee v. Lancashire and Yorkshire Rail. Co., supra). If the conditions on a passenger's ticket are such as would prevent him from recovering damages if injured, no action can be brought successfully under the Acts should the passenger be killed (Haigh v. Royal Mail Steam Packet Co., Ltd. (1883), 52 L. J. (Q. B.) 640, C. A.; compare The Stella, [1900] P. 161). Similarly, it is a defence that the deceased was working under a contract with his employer, at the time of the injury, by which he undertook to look to a certain fund alone for compensation in case of injury or death (Griffiths v. Dudley (Earl) (1882), 9 Q. B. D. 357). If, however, the person contracting on terms which prevent his recovering damages is an infant, the court will consider whether the contract was for his benefit, and, if considered to be otherwise, will not enforce it (Stephens v. Dudbridge Ironworks Co., Ltd., [1904] 2 K. B. 225, C. A.); see title INFANTS AND CHILDREN, Vol. XVII., p. 72.

(b) It is thought that this provision defeats the defence by a principal that the agent was not authorised to commit a crime, and that, therefore, in so doing was acting outside the scope of his authority. There is no duty to prosecute before bringing a civil action where the death was caused by a felonious act (Osborn v. Gillett (1873), L. R. 8 Exch. 88; compare Appleby

772. The action is to be brought for the benefit of the wife, husband, parent or child (c) of the deceased, and can be brought in all cases in which the injured person, if he had lived, could have maintained an action in British courts (d) against the persons responsible for the injury. Accordingly, relatives of a foreigner killed by a collision caused by the negligent navigation of a British ship on the high seas are entitled to bring an action in respect of his death (e). The right of action is not given merely to the relatives as a class, but to the individuals comprised in that class, and it is no defence to an action for the benefit of the relatives to say that the estate of the deceased passed to them, or some of them, undiminished, if it can be shown that a single member of the persons entitled under the Fatal Accidents Acts (f) has suffered pecuniary loss by the death of the person injured (g).

Particulars must be given of the persons for whose benefit the action is being brought, and their claims (h).

SECT. 2.
Civil Responsibility under the Fatal
Accidents
Acts.
—
Who benefits by such responsibility.

773. An action under the Acts (f) must be commenced within twelve calendar months after the death of the person injured, and

Within what time action must be brought.

v. Franklin (1885), 17 Q. B. D. 93; see, generally, title ACTION, Vol. I., p. 27.

(c) Fatal Accidents Act, 1846 (9 & 10 Vict. c. 93), s. 2. "Parent" includes grandparents and step-parents; "child" includes grandchildren and step-children (ibid., s. 5; see title INFANTS AND CHILDREN, Vol. XVII., p. 45). An illegitimate child is not included (Dickinson v. North Eastern Rail. Co. (1863), 2 H. & C. 735; compare Clarke v. Carfin Coal Co., [1891] A. C. 412), but a child en ventre sa mère is (The George and Richard (1871), L. R. 3 A. & E. 466; compare Blake v. Midland Rail. Co. (1852), 18 Q. B. 93, 109); in such a case the claim cannot be made on behalf of the child until it is born.

(d) As to the jurisdiction of the Admiralty Courts to try cases under the Fatal Accidents Acts, see Seward v. "Vera Cruz" (1884), 10 App. Cas. 59, H. L., overruling The Franconia (1877), 2 P. D. 163 (where it was held that proceedings in rem against the ship could not be brought in respect of damages under these Acts); but in certain events the Admiralty Courts may try cases under the Acts; compare The Orwell (1888), 13 P. D. 80; Seward v. "Vera Cruz," supra, at p. 64; see also The Nereid (1889), 14 P. D. 78; Roche v. London and South Western Rail. Co., [1899] 2 Q. B. 502, C. A.

(e) Davidsson v. Hill, [1901] 2 K. B. 606, overruling Adam v. British and Foreign Steamship Co., [1898] 2 Q. B. 430. As to the right of an alien to maintain an action for personal injuries, see Cocks v. Purday (1848), 5 C. B. 860, at p. 884; The Guldfaxe (1868), 19 L. T. 748; The Explorer (1870), L. R. 3 A. & E. 289.

(f) See note (g), p. 455, ante.

(g) Pym v. Great Northern Rail. Co. (1863), 4 B. & S. 396. As to what is included in "pecuniary loss," see p. 459, post.

(h) Fatal Accidents Act, 1846 (9 & 10 Vict. c. 93), s. 4. If a person claims to be entitled and his name has been omitted from the particulars, he cannot, where the whole issue of liability and the amount of damages is pending, claim, as of right, to be made a party or to appear at the trial by solicitor and counsel (Steele v. Great Northern Rail. Co. of Ireland (1890), 26 L. R. Ir. 96, C. A.), but where the only question is the distribution, among the persons entitled, of a sum of money paid into court, such a claimant has been allowed to appear and to tender evidence as to the amount of this share without being made a party (Johnston v. Great Northern Rail. Co. of Ireland (1887), 20 L. R. Ir. 4).

SECT. 2.
Civil Responsibility under the Fatal
Accidents
Acts.

if brought against a public authority must be commenced within six months of the wrongful act (i). It must be brought in the name of the executor or administrator of the deceased (k), unless there be neither, in which case the action may be brought in the name of any or all of the relatives entitled to benefit under the Acts (l) at any time within the prescribed period after the death (m). If there is an executor or administrator, and he fails to bring the action within six months after the death, the right of action, after that time, passes to any or all of the relatives entitled to benefit (n). Where the action is brought in the name of any or all of the relatives, it must be for the benefit of the same persons as if it had been brought in the name of an executor or administrator (n).

One action for one injury.

When separate actions main-tainable.

774. Only one action lies in respect of the same subject-matter of complaint (o) under the Acts (p), and accordingly, if the deceased before death recovered compensation in an action for the injury which eventually caused his death, no further action can be brought (q). But if he only sued and recovered in respect of a portion of the damages sustained, leaving a separable and divisible portion which would have enabled him to bring a subsequent action for personal injuries (r), then an action under the Acts (p) may

(i) See title LIMITATION OF ACTIONS, Vol. XIX., p. 181; ibid., note (d); and see title PUBLIC AUTHORITIES AND PUBLIC OFFICERS.

(k) Fatal Accidents Act, 1846 (9 & 10 Vict. c. 93), s. 2. The right is given to them in a representative capacity, and differs from an independent and personal right given in Canada to the relations, as to which see Robinson v. Canadian Pacific Railway, [1892] A. C. 481; Miller v. Grand Trunk Railway, [1906] A. C. 187.

(l) Fatal Accidents Act, 1864 (27 & 28 Vict. c. 95), s. 1.

(m) Holleran v. Bagnell (1879), 4 L. R. Ir. 740. The relatives need not wait six months to see whether an executor or administrator will be appointed (ibid.).

(n) Fatal Accidents Act, 1864 (27 & 28 Vict. c. 95), s. 1.

(o) Fatal Accidents Act, 1846 (9 & 10 Vict. c. 93), s. 3. It is no bar to an action under the Acts for damages for pecuniary loss due to the decease of a stepmother that in another action, in which the same claimant's interest was inquired into and compensated, damages were obtained for loss due to the death of the father, who was killed at the time and in the same accident as the stepmother (Johnston v. Great Northern Rail. Co. of Ireland (1890), 26 L. R. Ir 691). "One accident" in a policy of insurance was held to mean accident to one person, and not merely one occurrence which caused injury at the same time to many persons (South Staffordshire Tramways Co., Ltd. v. Sickness and Accident Assurance Association, [1891] 1 Q. B. 402; compare Allen v. London Guarantee and Accident Co., Ltd. (1912), 28 T. L. R. 254 (driving accident policy)).

(p) See note (q), p. 455, ante.

(q) Read v. Great Eastern Rail. Co. (1868), L. R. 3 Q. B. 555; compare Wood v. Gray & Sons, [1892] A. C. 576 (a case on Scottish law); and see note (a), p. 456, ante.

(r) Brunsdon v. Humphrey (1884), 14 Q. B. D. 141, C. A.; see ibid., per BOWEN, L.J., at p. 151: "it certainly would appear unsatisfactory to hold that the damage done in a carriage accident to a man's portmanteau was the same injury as the damage done to his spine"; and see ibid., per BRETT, M.R., at p. 146: "two actions may be brought in respect of the same facts where those facts give rise to two distinct causes of action." Compare Roberts v. Eastern Counties Rail. Co. (1859), 1 F. & F. 460.

be brought (s). Similarly, an action by the executors against a defendant under the Acts (t) is no bar to an action by them against the same defendant in respect of damages to their testator's personal estate arising out of the same injury (u), and a claimant who has already recovered in respect of the death of one person can maintain a second action in respect of the death of another person resulting from the same wrongful act (a).

SECT. 2.
Civil Responsibility under the Fatal
Accidents
Acts.

775. Mere proof of death by negligence is not sufficient to support a claim for even nominal damages (b). Compensation must be based, not only on the injury which causes the death, but on the pecuniary loss which arises in consequence of the death (c), and the damages recovered must be apportioned to the parties respectively for whose benefit the action is brought (d). It follows that damages cannot be recovered for the gravity of the injury to the deceased or as a solatium for the mental anguish or loss of society due to the death (e), nor yet for the cost of mourning (f), medical (g) or funeral expenses (h) occasioned by the injury and consequent death.

Basis of claim is pecuniary loss arising from the death.

776. In order to recover compensation there must be a pecuniary loss (i) sustained by the persons claiming, either actual or expected.

Pecuniary loss must be sustained by claimants.

(s) Brunsdon v. Humphrey (1884), 14 Q. B. D. 141, C. A.

(t) See note (q), p. 455, ante.

(u) Bradshaw v. Lancashire and Yorkshire Rail. Co. (1875), L. R. 10 C. P. 189; followed in Leggott v. Great Northern Rail. Co. (1876), 1 Q. B. D. 599. In the former case it was held that damages caused to the deceased's estate by his illness and consequent inability during his life to attend to business were distinct and could be sued upon, if arising from negligence in carrying out a contractual liability (see note (e), p. 427, ante), separately from damages under the Acts (Barnett v. Lucas (1872), 6 I. R. C. L. 247 (in which Read v. Great Eastern Rail. Co. (1868), L. R. 3 Q. B. 555, was distinguished); followed in Daly v. Dublin, Wicklow and Wexford Rail. Co. (1892), 30 L. R. Ir. 514; compare Potter v. Metropolitan District Rail. Co. (1874), 30 L. T. 765; affirmed on appeal (1875), 32 L. T. 36, in which it was held that, where, in consequence of an accident to a wife whose husband had paid for her railway ticket, the husband's estate suffered damage by reason of expenses due to illness and her inability to attend to assist in his business, and the husband died before bringing an action, an action in respect of such damage by the wife as executrix (after recovering for her personal injuries in a prior action against the defendants) was maintainable.

(a) Johnston v. Great Northern Rail. Co. of Ireland (1887), 20 L. R. Ir. 4.

(b) Duckworth v. Johnson, [1859] 4 H. & N. 653; Hall v. Great Northern Rail. Co. (1890), 26 L. R. Ir. 289.

(c) Pym v. Great Northern Rail. Co. (1862), 2 B. & S. 759; affirmed (1863), 4 B. & S. 396, Ex. Ch. A merely nominal loss is not sufficient (Boulter v. Webster (1865), 11 L. T. 598).

(d) Fatal Accidents Act, 1846 (9 & 10 Vict. c. 93), s. 2. See Fatal Accidents Act, 1864 (27 & 28 Vict. c. 95), s. 2; and see p. 460, post.

(e) Armstrong v. South Eastern Rail. Co. (1847), 11 Jur. 758; Blake v. Midland Rail. Co. (1852), 18 Q. B. 93.

(f) Dalton v. South Eastern Rail. Co. (1858), 4 C. B. (N. S.) 296.

(g) Boulter v. Webster, supra.

(h) Clark v. London and General Omnibus Co., [1906] 2 K. B. 648, C. A.; Boulter v. Webster, supra.

(i) A father, for instance, suffers no pecuniary damage by the death of a son who worked for him at full wages (Sykes v. North Eastern Rail. Co. (1875), 44 L. J. (C. P.) 191).

SECT. 2.

Civil Responsibility under the Fatal
Accidents
Acts.

Where actual loss can be proved, the claim is free from difficulty, but pecuniary loss may also be evidenced by proof of a reasonable expectation of pecuniary benefit (k); and, while appreciable pecuniary loss must be shown and damages proportional to the injury given, the damages are not given merely in respect of the loss of a legal right (l), inasmuch as they are to be distributed among relations only and not among all individuals sustaining the loss; and they should be calculated in reference to a reasonable expectation of pecuniary benefit as of right or otherwise from the continuance of the life (m).

Reasonable expectation of pecuniary benefit sufficient to ground
claim.

777. As to what constitutes a reasonable expectation of pecuniary benefit sufficient to ground a claim for damages, it is not possible to lay down any general rule. It is an inference which a jury are entitled to draw only where the facts proved to their satisfaction afford them reasonable grounds for drawing such a conclusion (n); they at all events have to be satisfied on proper materials that the position of those claiming would have been less precarious but for the loss of the deceased (o). The loss of educational prospects and personal comfort which, but for the death of a person, might fairly have been expected to have been secured to the plaintiff (p), is sufficient to sustain a claim. So, also, services rendered or assistance given by the deceased, even if a child (q), can be (k) Pym v. Great Northern Rail. Co. (1862), 2 B. & S. 759; affirmed (1863), 4 B. & S. 396, Ex. Ch.; Springett v. Ball (1865), 4 F. & F. 472, 474; Hetherington v. North Eastern Rail. Co. (1882), 9 Q. B. D. 160 (where a crippled parent, the plaintiff, had been helped in the past by his son (the deceased), although not for five years before death, and it was held that there was evidence of a reasonable expectation of further assistance which entitled the father to damages); Jenkins v. Taff Vale Rail. Co. (1912), 132 L. T. Jo. 535, C. A. (where the deceased was a girl of sixteen, an apprentice: her parents both surviving her, the father being a colliery fireman, the mother keeping a small shop). For the general principles on which damages are to be estimated, see Livingstone v. Rawyards Coal Co. (1880), 5 App. Cas. 25, per Lord BLACKBURN, at p. 39.

(l) Dalton v. South Eastern Rail. Co. (1858), 4 C. B. (N. S.) 296, following Franklin v. South Eastern Rail. Co. (1858), 3 H. & N. 211; Bramall v. Lees (1857), 29 L. T. (o. s.) 111; compare Weems v. Mathieson (1861), 4 Macq. 215, H. L. (an analogous case in Scotch law).

(m) Jenkins v. Taff Vale Rail. Co., supra; Franklin v. South Eastern Rail. Co., supra, per POLLOCK, C.B., at p. 214.

(n) Pym v. Great Northern Rail. Co., supra.

(o) Johnston v. Great Northern Rail. Co. of Ireland (1890), 26 L. R. Ir. 691.

(p) Pym v. Great Northern Rail. Co. (1862), 2 B. & S. 759, per COCKBURN, C.J., at p. 767; affirmed (1863), 4 B. & S. 396; qualifying Gillard v. Lancashire and Yorkshire Rail. Co. (1848), 12 L. T. (o. s.) 356.

(q) Bramall v. Lees (1857), 29 L. T. (o. s.) 111 (child of twelve living at home who was expected in a year or two to help his parents); Franklin v. South Eastern Rail. Co., supra; Duckworth v. Johnson (1859), 4 H. & N. 653 (boy of fourteen who contributed 4s. a week towards support of family); Condon v. Great Southern and Western Rail. Co. (1865), 16 I. C. L. R. 415 (where it was stated that though a child may not have directly earned wages he may have assisted his parents to do so, and the jury might estimate from the evidence what the pecuniary value of that assistance was and, using their general knowledge of life in the sphere in which the child was and considering the proved tendencies of the particular child, could form their own opinion as to what reasonable expectation there was of such benefit having continued if the child had lived). Duckworth v. Johnson, supra, and taken into account if a pecuniary value can reasonably be put on them (r).

The expectation of pecuniary advantage must not be too remote(s), and if it is doubtful whether any profit would have ensued to the deceased if he had continued to live, or whether, if that profit were made, the plaintiff would have shared in it either as of right or from the bounty of the deceased, the plaintiff cannot succeed (t).

778. Where the person claiming damages was entitled to an annuity from the deceased during their joint lives, the basis of the damages is the capitalised value of that annuity, after taking into consideration matters which affect the normal expectancy of life

SECT. 2.

Civil Responsibility under the Fatal
Accidents
Acts.

—
Must not be too remote.

Capitalisation
in respect of loss of annuity.

Condon v. Great Southern and Western Rail. Co. (1865), 16 I. C. L. R. 415, were considered in Hull v. Great Northern Rail. Co. of Ireland (1890), 26 L. R. Ir. 289, where the second case was commented on and the first disapproved, on the ground that it left it open to the jury to speculate and did not clearly observe that the burden of proof was upon the plaintiff. If the plaintiff gives evidence of a set of circumstances consistent equally with pecuniary benefit or pecuniary loss, the case must be withdrawn from the jury (ibid.). In Wolfe v. Great Northern Rail. Co. of Ireland (1890), 26 L. R. Ir. 548, it was held that the jury might estimate something based on evidence for the increasing advantage which would have been derived from the services of an active, healthy and intelligent child, who at the age of ten did housework for her parents. It is not necessary for the plaintiff to prove the cost of maintenance of the child unless defendants ask for it (ibid.). In Hetherington v. North Eastern Rail. Co. (1882), 9 Q. B. D. 160, it was stated that, where there is evidence that from time to time the deceased gave pecuniary assistance to the plaintiff, the jury must be asked to say whether there was a reasonable expectation that, if deceased had lived, there would be further assistance.

(r) Jenkins v. Taff Vale Rail. Co. (1912), 132 L. T. Jo. 535, C. A. It was suggested in Bourke v. Cork and Macroom Rail. Co. (1879), 4 L. R. Ir. 682, and held in Holleran v. Bagnell (1879), 6 L. R. Ir. 333, that in order to claim damages for a reasonable expectation of pecuniary advantage the plaintiff must show that the benefit had begun to accrue or existed at the time of the death; but this decision appears to be inconsistent with Bramall v. Lees (1857) 29 L. T. (o. s.) 111; and with Jenkins v. Taff Vale Rail. Co., supra; and see p. 460, ante.

(s) Where a woman is living in adultery, apart from her husband, and there is no legal claim on him for maintenance, nor any actual help given by him, there is no case for damages, even though the wife give evidence to the effect that the husband appeared willing, a few days before his death, to condone her offence and take her back (Stimpson v. Wood & Son (1888), 57 L. J. (Q. B.) 484). In Harrison v. London and North Western Rail. Co. (1885), Cab. & El. 540, the plaintiff, aged fifty-nine, lived apart from and was unfriendly to his wife, aged fifty-six, and children, and contributed nothing to her support; the wife, who would have become entitled under a will to a large sum if she survived her mother, was killed, and it was held that the plaintiff had no reasonable probability of benefiting if his wife had not died: (1) because it was improbable that she would have done anything for him; (2) she might have predeceased the mother even if she had died naturally; (3) the plaintiff might have predeceased the wife; (4) it was improbable, even if the wife became entitled to the money and refused to help the husband, that a decree for the restitution of conjugal rights would have been made at his suit under the Matrimonial Causes Act, 1884 (47 & 48 Vict. c. 68), s. 3 (5). The prospect that he might become a pauper and that his wife would be called on to support him was equally too remote.

(t) Bourke v. Cork and Macroom Rail. Co., supra.

SECT. 2.

Civil Responsibility under the Fatal
Accidents
Acts.Deductions
from damages.Apportionment and payment of damages.

and the risk of the deceased failing to earn money to pay the annuity (u), but exact arithmetical compensation in such a case should not be given (v), nor may the damages be so large as to make an investment which will produce the exact income lost (a).

779. In assessing damages under the Acts (b), no deductions are to be made in respect of any sums received or payable on the death of the deceased under any contract of insurance (c), but some deduction may be made in respect of the premiums on a life insurance policy that would have had to be paid by the deceased had he lived (d).

780. Damages, when recovered, are, after deducting any costs not recovered from the defendant, to be divided among the persons for whose benefit the action is brought (e) in such shares as the jury shall find (f). In cases where there is no jury, as, for example, where the defendant pays a sum into court (g) which satisfies the person or persons in whose name the action is brought, an order may be obtained for the settlement of the appropriation by a jury (h), or the court may apportion the shares into which the sum is to be

(u) Rowley v. London and North Western Rail. Co. (1873), L. R. 8 Exch. 221; see title DAMAGES, Vol. X., pp. 303, 304, 350.

(v) Phillips v. London and South Western Rail. Co. (1879), 5 C. P. D. 280, C. A., where BRETT, L.J., at p. 290, says that a jury must take into consideration many matters that cannot be expressed arithmetically; see Phillips v. London and South Western Rail. Co. (1879), 5 Q. B. D. 85; per JAMES, L.J., at p. 87, where Rowley v. London and North Western Rail. Co., supra, was considered and applied.

(a) Johnston v. Great Western Rail. Co., [1904] 2 K. B. 250.

(b) See note (g), p. 455, ante.

(c) Fatal Accidents Act, 1908 (8 Edw. 7, c. 7), s. 1. The Act, which came into force on the 1st August, 1908, is retrospective and applies to sums paid prior to its passing. It does away with so much of the decision of Hicks v. Newport, Abergavenny and Hereford Rail. Co. (1857), 4 B. & S. 403, n., as laid down that such deductions were to be made in the case of sums received from accident insurance policies, unless the policies were effected with a company which had a private Act providing that such moneys need not be taken into consideration.

(d) Hicks v. Newport, Abergavenny and Hereford Rail. Co., supra; approved on this point in Grand Trunk Rail. Co. of Canada v. Jennings (1888), 13 App. Cas. 800, P. C. In the latter case it was held that any provision made by a husband for his widow is a matter for deduction in assessing damages as to her share, but, having regard to the Fatal Accidents Act, 1908 (8 Edw. 7, c. 7), s. 1, any such provision which is based on moneys paid or payable on the death under policies of insurance will not be deducted. The rule as to these deductions applies only to claims under the Acts (Hicks v. Newport, Abergavenny and Hereford Rail. Co., supra). As to the rule in case of accidents not resulting in death, see titles CARRIERS, Vol. IV., p. 59; INSURANCE, Vol. XVII., p. 566, note (l).

(e) See pp. 457, 458, ante.

(f) Fatal Accidents Act, 1846 (9 & 10 Vict. c. 93), s. 2.

(g) A defendant may pay a sum into court as compensation to all persons entitled without specifying how it is to be divided Fatal Accidents Act, 1864 (27 & 28 Vict. c. 95), s. 2). As to the position of a plaintiff as trustee where a settlement is arrived at, see Condliff v. Condliff (1874), 29 L. T. 831.

(h) Kidd v. Midland Rail. Co. (1877), Times, 27th March, cited in Yearly Practice of the Supreme Court, 1912, p. 287.

divided among the persons entitled to it (i), and direct the mode of investment (j) or payment of such shares (k).

SECT. 2.
Civil Responsibility under the Fatal
Accidents
Acts.

Part IX.—Other Defences to Actions for Negligence.

SECT. 1.—Infancy.

781. The infancy of the defendant does not afford a defence to an action for negligence (l), unless the duty alleged to have been negligently performed arises out of a contract on which the infant could not be sued (m), but such infancy may be relevant to the question whether the act or omission complained of was or was not negligent (n). Infancy.

SECT. 2.—Defective Intelligence.

782. The lunacy of the defendant does not afford a defence to an action for negligence (o), unless the duty alleged to have been negligently performed arose out of a contract into which the lunatic was incapable of entering (p), or arose out of some obligation which the lunatic was, and was known to the party accepting it to be, by reason of his lunacy, incapable of undertaking (q). Lunacy.

(i) Bulmer v. Bulmer (1883), 25 Ch. D. 409. But it appears that all the parties who might have brought claims should be before the court. In distributing the sum the court will follow as far as practicable the rules laid down by the Statute of Distributions (see title DESCENT AND DISTRIBUTION, Vol. XI., pp. 16 et seq.), and, accordingly, where a widow and children were entitled, the widow was given one-third and the remainder was divided between the children (Sanderson v. Sanderson (1877), 36 L. T. 847). In Logan v. Great Northern Rail. Co. of Ireland (1910), 44 I. L. T. 190, the court refused so to apportion the money paid in on the ground that the Fatal Accidents Act, 1864 (27 & 28 Vict. c. 95), s. 2, expressly reserved this for a jury.

(j) In Shallow v. Vernon (1875), 9 I. R. C. L. 150, a fund was allowed to be paid out of court on the terms that the widow invested a portion of it in her own name and that of a trustee in trust for certain infant children.

(k) See note (i), supra.

(l) Jennings v. Randall (1799), 8 Term Rep. 335; Burnard v. Haggis (1863), 14 C. B. (N. S.) 45; Dixon v. Bell (1816), 1 Stark. 287; Marsh v. Loader (1863), 14 C. B. (N. S.) 535; Latt v. Booth (1852), 3 Car. & Kir. 292.

(m) See title INFANTS AND CHILDREN, Vol. XVII., pp. 74, 75. If the contract is not within the Infants Relief Act, 1874 (37 & 38 Vict. c. 62), and is not prejudicial to the infant, a duty to take care may arise out of it (see title INFANTS AND CHILDREN, Vol. XVII., pp. 63—74), and may be binding on the infant (Clements v. London and North Western Rail. Co., [1894] 2 Q. B. 482).

(n) Children of very tender years are not to have negligence imputed to them (Beven on Negligence, 3rd ed., p. 163; and see pp. 362, 363, ante).

(o) See titles LUNATICS AND PERSONS OF UNSOUND MIND, Vol. XIX., p. 403; TORT.

(p) See title LUNATICS AND PERSONS OF UNSOUND MIND., Vol. XIX., p. 396.

(q) From the decision in Imperial Loan Co. v. Stone, [1892] 1 Q. B. 599, it

SECT. 3.
Performance of
Statutory Duties etc.
—
Defences.

SECT. 3.—Performance of Statutory Duties or Exercise of Statutory Powers.

783. It is a defence to an action for negligently causing injury by doing a particular act to prove that that which was in fact done

(1) was required or authorised by statute (r) ; or

(2) was necessarily done in the execution of works which the defendants were required or authorised to execute by statute (s), or by a provisional order having statutory force (t) ; or

(3) was lawfully done by the defendants under and by virtue of the powers given to them by an Act of Parliament (a), provided that in each of the above cases the statute does not expressly (b) nor impliedly (c) give a right of action in respect of the act so done (d) ; or follows that, where the duty to take care arises from a contract, the lunatic is not liable for a failure to fulfil it to a party who knew that his lunacy incapacitated him from undertaking it, and there appears to be no reasonable ground for a different rule where the obligation was imposed on the lunatic as a result of any acts done with knowledge of the lunacy by or on behalf of the injured person.

(r) Strictly speaking, a defence of this nature can only arise when the statute directs the particular act and the method of doing it (British Cast Plate Manufacturers v. Meredith (1792), 4 Term Rep. 794 ; approved in Sutton v. Clarke (1815), 6 Taunt. 29, 43 ; compare Leader v. Moxton (1773), 3 Wils. 461 ; R. v. Pease (1832), 4 B. & Ad. 30). As to what constitutes compliance with statutory direction, see Gray v. Thomsons (1889), 27 Sc. L. R. 113 ; London County Council v. Great Eastern Rail. Co., [1906] 2 K. B. 312 ; compare Glossop v. Heston and Isleworth Local Board (1878), 12 Ch. D. 102 ; Robinson v. Workington Corporation, [1897] 1 Q. B. 619, C. A.

(s) Hammersmith Rail. Co. v. Brand (1869), L. R. 4 H. L. 171 ; and see title TORT.

(t) National Telephone Co. v. Baker, [1893] 2 Ch. 186 ; compare Shelfer v. City of London Electric Lighting Co., [1895] 1 Ch. 287, C. A.

(a) The statute may affect the duty to take care which would otherwise be imposed on the persons carrying out the duty ; compare Snook v. Grand Junction Waterworks Co., Ltd. (1886), 2 T. L. R. 308 ; and Dunn v. Birmingham Canal Co. (1872), L. R. 8 Q. B. 42, Ex. Ch., as to the effect of statutory duties and powers to supply water on the rule in Rylands v. Fletcher (1868), L. R. 3 H. L. 330 ; and see p. 402, ante.

(b) When the statute provides a special remedy for injury caused by carrying it out, the act complained of must have been done in the intended exercise of the powers given by the statute (Burgess v. Northwich Local Board (1880), 6 Q. B. D. 264 ; and see note (b), p. 402, ante).

(c) No right to compensation will be implied unless the injury would have been the subject of a claim for damages if the statutory powers to do that which caused it had not been given (Ricket v. Metropolitan Rail. Co. (1867), L. R. 2 H. L. 175) ; see p. 422, ante ; and see title COMPULSORY PURCHASE OF LAND AND COMPENSATION, Vol. VI., pp. 44, 45.

(d) The following are instances where a right of action is reserved by the statute for any damage caused in carrying out the powers conferred :—Watkins v. Reddin (1861), 2 F. & F. 629 (see title HIGHWAYS, STREETS, AND BRIDGES, Vol. XVI., p. 155, note (e)) ; compare Powell v. Fall (1880), 5 Q. B. D. 597 ; Jordeson v. Sutton, Southcoates and Drypool Gas Co., [1899] 2 Ch. 217 (see title GAS, Vol. XV., pp. 322, 359) ; Colwell v. St. Pancras Borough Council, [1904] 1 Ch. 707 (provisional order) ; compare Shelfer v. City of London Electric Lighting Co., [1895] 1 Ch. 287, 309, C. A. ; Midwood & Co., Ltd. v. Manchester Corporation, [1905] 2 K. B. 597, C. A. (see

(4) that the act was done by a subordinate body acting merely ministerially in the performance of statutory duties for the due performance of which it is answerable only to some higher authority (e).

784. The particular act may be held to be authorised by statute where it is one which is a natural incident (f) or effect (g) of the operation legalised under the statute, or is ordinarily necessary for carrying out the powers conferred by the statute in question (h).

SECT. 3.
Performance of
Statutory Duties etc.

Incidental act deemed to be authorised
by statute.

title ELECTRIC LIGHTING AND POWER, Vol. XII., pp. 563, 564, notes (y), (b)). The burden of proof is on those who contend that a right of action is taken away by statute (Clowes v. Staffordshire Potteries Co. (1872), 8 Ch. App. 125, per MELLISH, L.J., at p. 139). Where a special remedy is provided by the statute, that remedy is generally the only one available (Ricket v. Metropolitan Rail. Co. (1867), L. R. 2 H. L. 175; Brierley Hill Local Board v. Pearsall (1884), 9 App. Cas. 595; Walshaw v. Brighouse Corporation, [1899] 2 Q. B. 286, C. A.; Burgess v. Northwich Local Board (1880), 6 Q. B. D. 264; Metropolitan Asylum District v. Hill (1881), 6 App. Cas. 193). In Colac Corporation v. Summerfield, [1893] A. C. 187, P. C., it was held that where the statute provided for compensation to be paid for any damage "which may be sustained through the exercise of the powers conferred," such compensation included all such damage, and, as the powers had not been exceeded, it was therefore immaterial whether they were exercised properly or negligently; compare Clothier v. Webster (1862), 12 C. B. (N. S.) 790; Piggott v. Middlesex County Council, [1909] 1 Ch. 134; and see title COMPULSORY PURCHASE OF LAND AND COMPENSATION, Vol. VI., p. 44. As to the test for the statutory remedy being the only one, see, generally, p. 422, ante; Dawson & Co. v. Bingley Urban Council, [1911] 2 K. B. 149, C. A.; East Freemantle Corporation v. Annois, [1902] A. C. 213, P. C.; Wolverhampton New Waterworks Co. v. Hawkesford (1859), 6 C. B. (N. S.) 336; and see title ACTION, Vol. I., p. 8. Where a statutory remedy has been provided but has become wholly inoperative, there may be a right to bring an action (Bentley v. Manchester, Sheffield and Lincolnshire Rail. Co., [1891] 3 Ch. 222).

(e) Bolton v. Crowther (1824), 4 Dow. & Ry. (K. B.) 195; Brennan v. Limerick Union Guardians (1878), 2 L. R. Ir. 42; Dunbar v. Ardee Union Guardians, [1897] 2 I. R. 76; Tozeland v. West Ham Guardians, [1907] 1 K. B. 920, C. A., as explained in Ching v. Surrey County Council, [1909] 2 K. B. 762, 774; compare Manley v. St. Helen's Canal and Rail. Co. (1858), 2 H. & N. 840 (where the public company's powers were for their own profit); and see title PUBLIC AUTHORITIES AND PUBLIC OFFICERS.

(f) Eastern and South African Telegraph Co. v. Cape Town Tramways Cos., [1902] A. C. 381, P. C.; Simkin v. London and North Western Rail. Co. (1888), 21 Q. B. D. 453, C. A.; Hammersmith Rail. Co. v. Brand (1868), L. R. 4 H. L. 171; A.-G. and Hare v. Metropolitan Rail. Co., [1893] 1 Q. B. 384, C. A.

(g) Evans v. Manchester, Sheffield and Lincolnshire Rail. Co. (1887), 36 Ch. D. 626; Hammersmith Rail. Co. v. Brand, supra; London, Brighton and South Coast Rail. Co. v. Truman (1885), 11 App. Cas. 45; Cracknell v. Thetford Corporation (1869), L. R. 4 C. P. 629; compare Lambert v. Lowestoft Corporation, [1901] 1 Q. B. 590; Geddis v. Bann Reservoir (Proprietors) (1878), 3 App. Cas. 430; Canadian Pacific Railway v. Roy, [1902] A. C. 220; and see Piggott v. Eastern Counties Rail. Co. (1846), 3 C. B. 229.

(h) R. v. Pease (1832), 4 B. & Ad. 30, as explained in Queen v. Bradford Navigation Co. (1865), 6 B. & S. 631 (where it was stated that if powers are conferred under circumstances in which they may be exercised without injury being caused, and new circumstances arise which render the exercise of them impossible without causing a nuisance, the persons causing it are

SECT. 3.
Performance of
Statutory
Duties etc.

Thus the rule (i) that dangerous things brought on to land for the purposes of the owner and collected and kept there must be kept in at the peril of the owner, who, if they escape, is prima facie answerable for all the damage which is the natural consequence of that escape, is excluded where the bringing, collecting, and keeping the dangerous thing is authorised by statute (k), except where by that statute a duty is imposed to keep it secure (l). Where the rule is excluded, in order to succeed, a person injured by the exercise of statutory powers must do more than prove that the dangerous thing escaped; he must show that it escaped owing to the negligence of the owner (m).

Act done
under discretionary power.

785. The particular act may be held not to be authorised by statute when there is a merely discretionary power or permission given to a public authority enabling the act to be done or not to be done at the will of the authority (n), or where the power enables it liable); Whalley v. Lancashire and Yorkshire Rail. Co. (1884), 13 Q. B. D. 131, C. A. (where the defendants, although empowered to make an embankment and to do all acts ordinarily done on railways, were held to have exceeded their powers by cutting holes in the embankment to let off flood water in such a way as to injure the neighbouring property; see title NUISANCE, pp. 516 et seq., 562 et seq., post; compare Collins v. Middle Level Commissioners (1869), L. R. 4 C. P. 279); Jones v. Festiniog Rail. Co. (1868), L. R. 3 Q. B. 733 (authorised railway by statute, but steam locomotives upon it not specially authorised: held that the defendants were liable for damage done by sparks from such engines; see, however, p. 405, ante); Metropolitan Asylum District v. Hill (1881), 6 App. Cas. 193 (statute authorised the defendants to erect a fever hospital, but did not specifically authorise them to build it where it might interfere with the rights of others: held, that they must not put it where it would interfere with such rights); A.-G. and Hare v. Metropolitan Rail. Co., [1893] 1 Q. B. 384, C. A.; and see Price's Patent Candle Co. v. London County Council, [1908] 2 Ch. 526.

(i) Rylands v. Fletcher (1868), L. R. 3 H. L. 330, affirming Fletcher v. Rylands (1866), L. R. 1 Exch. 265; see p. 401, ante.

(k) Dunn v. Birmingham Canal Co. (1872), L. R. 8 Q. B. 42, Ex. Ch.; Geddis v. Bann Reservoir (Proprietors) (1878), 3 App. Cas. 430; Dixon v. Metropolitan Board of Works (1881), 7 Q. B. D. 418; Snook v. Grand Junction Waterworks Co., Ltd. (1886), 2 T. L. R. 308; Evans v. Manchester, Sheffield and Lincolnshire Rail. Co. (1887), 36 Ch. D. 626; Green v. Chelsea Waterworks Co. (1894), 10 T. L. R. 259; Eastern and South African Telegraph Co. v. Cape Town Tramways Cos., [1902] A. C. 381, P. C.; Lambert v. Lowestoft Corporation, [1901] 1 Q. B. 590; compare Blyth v. Birmingham Waterworks (1856), 11 Exch. 781; Whalley v. Lancashire and Yorkshire Rail. Co., supra; Collins v. Middle Level Commissioners (1869), L. R. 4 C. P. 279.

(l) Dunn v. Birmingham Canal Co. (1872), L. R. 8 Q. B. 42, Ex. Ch.; compare Gilbert v. Trinity House Corporation (1886), 17 Q. B. D. 795; compare River Wear Commissioners v. Adamson (1877), 2 App. Cas. 743, 750.

(m) See pp. 378, 402, ante, and cases cited in note (p), p. 467, post; and compare title ELECTRIC LIGHTING AND POWER, Vol. XII., p. 564. Negligence does not mean failure to ransack science to find a possible means of preventing accidents, but denotes a failure to adopt or use precautions of known practical utility, or a failure to exercise proper care and skill; as to this, see cases cited in note (k), supra; and see pp. 364, 368, ante.

(n) Metropolitan Asylum District v. Hill, supra (where it was stated that where words are permissive it is a fair inference that the legislature intended that discretion should be exercised in strict conformity with private rights).

to be done by an alternative method which would not have caused injury (o).

786. Unless the particular act alleged to be negligent is authorised, statutory authority does not afford a defence where there is negligence (p), or want of proper precaution in doing the act which causes the injury (q). An action for negligence in the use of works authorised by statute is not precluded by the fact that construction and maintenance of the works are authorised by statute, even where the statute provides a special remedy for default in maintaining them (r).

SECT. 3.
Performance of
Statutory Duties etc.

Statutory authority no defence unless particular act authorised.

SECT. 4.—Inevitable Accident: Act of God.

SUB-SECT. 1.—Definitions, Nature and Characteristics of the Terms.

787. Where an accident takes place which could not have been obviated by any ordinary care, caution, and skill on the part of the party charged, the accident is said to be inevitable (s). It is said to

Inevitable
accident distinguished from act of God.

(o) West v. Bristol Tramways Co., [1908] 2 K. B. 14, 22, C. A.

(p) Vaughan v. Taff Vale Rail. Co. (1860), 5 H. & N. 679; Hammersmith Rail. Co. v. Brand 1869), L. R. 4 H. L. 171; Dunn v. Birmingham Canal Co. (1872), L. R. 8 Q. B. 42, Ex. Ch.; Snook v. Grand Junction Waterworks Co., Ltd. (1886), 2 T. L. R. 308; Evans v. Manchester, Sheffield and Lincolnshire Rail. Co. (1887), 36 Ch. D. 626; Lambert v. Lowestoft Corporation, [1901] 1 Q. B. 590; Hawthorn Corporation v. Kannuluik, [1906] A. C. 105 P. C.; Jones v. Llanrwst Urban Council, [1911] 1 Ch. 393. In Geddis v. Bann Reservoir (Proprietors) (1878), 3 App. Cas. 430, Lord BLACKBURN, at p. 456, said that if the promoters by a reasonable exercise of the powers given to them by statute or enjoyed by them at common law could have obviated the damage, it was negligent not to make use of such powers; compare Bligh v. Rathangan River Drainage Board, [1898] 2 I. R. 205. As to misfeasance and nonfeasance, see pp. 375 et seq., ante.

(q) Blyth v. Birmingham Waterworks (1856), 11 Exch. 781; Fremantle v. London and North Western Rail. Co. (1861), 10 C. B. (N. S.) 89; Bagnall v. London and North Western Rail. Co. (1862), 1 H. & C. 544; Manchester South Junction Rail. Co. v. Fullarton (1863), 14 C. B. (N. S.) 54; Stapley v. London, Brighton and South Coast Rail. Co. (1865), L. R. 1 Exch. 21; Queen v. Bradford Navigation Co. (1865), 6 B. & S. 631; Dimmock v. North Staffordshire Rail. Co. (1866), 4 F. & F. 1058; Cliff v. Midland Rail. Co. (1870), L. R. 5 Q. B. 258; Smith v. London and South Western Rail. Co. (1870), L. R. 1 C. P. 14; Hanson v. Lancashire and Yorkshire Rail. Co. (1872), 20 W. R. 297; Oliver v. North Eastern Rail. Co. (1874), L. R. 9 Q. B. 409; Hurst v. Taylor (1885), 14 Q. B. D. 918; Snook v. Grand Junction Waterworks Co., Ltd., supra; Sadler v. South Staffordshire and Birmingham District Steam Trams Co. (1889), 23 Q. B. D. 17; South Eastern and Chatham Rail. Co. v. London County Council (1901), 84 L. T. 632; Wisely v. Aberdeen Harbour Commissioners (1887), 24 Sc. L. R. 315; Port-Glasgow and Newark Sailcloth Co., Ltd. v. Caledonian Rail. Co. (1892), 29 Sc. L. R. 577; Marshall v. Caledonian Rail. Co. (1899), 36 Sc. L. R. 845; Dawson & Co. v. Bingley Urban Council, [1911] 2 K. B. 149, C. A.; compare Drew v. New River Co. (1834), 6 C. & P. 754.

(r) Baron v. Portslade Urban District Council, [1900] 2 Q. B. 588, C. A.

(s) The Europa (1850), 14 Jur. 627; The Marpesia (1872), L. R. 4 P. C. 212; approved in The Merchant Prince, [1892] P. 179, C. A., and The Schwan, [1892] P. 419, C. A. In the last case LOPES, J., at p. 434, said the same definition of the term applied without distinction to cases on land or at sea; compare The William Lindsay (1873), L. R. 5 P. C. 338; Fawkes v. Poulson & Son (1892), 8 T. L. R. 725, C. A.; Pandorf v. Hamilton (1886), 17 Q. B. D. 670, C. A.; and Nitro Phosphate and Odam's Chemical Manure Co. v. London and St. Katharine Docks Co. (1878), 9 Ch. D. 503.

SECT. 4.
Inevitable
 Accident: Act of God.

When accident may be considered
 inevitable.

be distinguished from an act of God in that the latter term, although capable of being included within the definition of inevitable accident, is not applied to occurrences which to some extent have their origin in the agency of man and are not wholly dependent on the agency of natural forces (t).

788. Extraordinary skill and diligence are in ordinary circumstances not required to be exercised (u). If the defendant, notwithstanding the exercise of ordinary care and skill, is unable to avoid the accident, the latter may be held to be inevitable (a). Where, however, the circumstances give rise to exceptional likelihood of danger, more than an ordinary degree of care may be required, and the absence of it may involve liability (b).

SUB-SECT. 2.—Application of the Defence to Duties Created by Common Law.

When defence
 available.

789. It is a defence to an action for negligence that the accident was inevitable (c), or was due to an act of God (d), provided that

(t) Nugent v. Smith (1876), 1 C. P. D. 423, C. A., where MELLISH, L.J., at p. 444, says that an accident is to be regarded as the result of the act of God when "it is due to natural causes directly and exclusively without human intervention and such that it could not have been prevented by any amount of foresight and pains and care reasonably to have been expected." For the nature, characteristics, and application of the phrase "act of God," see title CONTRACT, Vol. VII., p. 428; The Boucau, [1909] P. 163 (where there was a combination of extraordinary conditions of tide, current, and winds); and see title CARRIERS, Vol. IV., pp. 8, 9, 15, 38, note (n). It is apprehended that the distinction referred to in the text, supra, although not altogether unimportant in dealing with negligence, is of importance in such cases as loss by common carriers, who are freed from their responsibility where the loss is due to an act of God, but not where it is due to inevitable accident (Forward v. Pittard (1785), 1 Term Rep. 27, 34).

(u) Fawkes v. Poulson & Son (1892), 8 T. L. R. 725, C. A. (evidence given that from a business point of view it was practically impossible to prevent such an accident as the slipping of the chain of a crane from a bale of goods); Great Western Rail. Co. of Canada v. Braid (1863), 1 Moo. P. C. C. (N. S.) 101 (where it was stated that the railway company was bound to bear in mind, in constructing their line, the risk of storms of unusual severity which were still not beyond the reasonable foresight of men and within the power of skilled engineers to resist); and see p. 364, ante.

(a) The Europa (1850), 14 Jur. 627; compare Readhead v. Midland Rail. Co. (1869), L. R. 4 Q. B. 379; and see Stanley v. Powell, [1891] 1 Q. B. 86.

(b) Ibid.; and see p. 365, ante. As to how far a person is entitled to protect himself from a threatened danger with the result that he injures another (e.g., in Scott v. Shepherd (1773), 3 Wils. 403; Nield v. London and North Western Rail. Co. (1874), L. R. 10 Exch. 4), as compared with the transfer of an existing misfortune, see Whalley v. Lancashire and Yorkshire Rail. Co. (1884), 13 Q. B. D. 131, C. A.; Greyvensteyn v. Hattlingh, [1911] A. C. 355, P. C.; and, as to the defence of imminent personal risk, see p. 479, post.

(c) Weaver v. Ward (1616), Hob. 134 (a case of trespass, a fortiori a defence to an action for negligence); Davis v. Saunders (1770), 2 Chit. 639; Aston v. Heaven (1797), 2 Esp. 533; Wakeman v. Robinson, (1823), 1 Bing. 213; Crofts v. Waterhouse (1825), 3 Bing. 319; Lack v. Seward (1829), 4 C. & P. 106; Goodman v. Taylor (1832), 5 C. & P. 410; The Shannon

(d) For note (d) see next page.

there has been no want of care on the defendant's part (e), and that the damage for which it is sought to make him liable was not caused by his own act (f).

The inevitable accident, or the act of God relied on must be the effective cause of the occurrence complained of if it is to afford a defence (g).

SECT. 4.
Inevitable
Accident :
Act of God.

Effective
cause.

790. In order to establish a defence of inevitable accident (h) the defendant (i) must either show what was the cause of the accident and that the result of that cause was inevitable (k), or he must show all possible causes, one or other of which produced the effect, and with regard to each of such possible causes he must show that the result could not have been avoided (l).

Proof required for defence of inevitable
accident.

791. The defence "act of God" (m) has been held to apply to the case of the escape of water, stored without negligence in artificial

When defence
"act of God"
applicable.

(1842), 1 Wm. Rob. 463; The Europa (1850), 14 Jur. 627; The William Lindsay (1873), L. R. 5 P. C. 338; Holmes v. Mather (1875), L. R. 10 Exch. 261; Manzoni v. Douglas (1880), 6 Q. B. D. 145; Douglas v. Gray (1890), 27 Sc. L. R. 687; Fawkes v. Poulson & Son (1892), 8 T. L. R. 725, C. A.; see also cases cited in note (s), p. 467, ante.

(d) Nichols v. Marsland (1876), 2 Ex. D. 1, C. A., affirming L. R. 10 Exch. 265; River Wear Commissioners v. Adamson (1877), 2 App. Cas. 743, 750; Clark v. Glasgow Assurance Co. (1854), 1 Macq. 668, H. L.; Dixon v. Metropolitan Board of Works (1881), 7 Q. B. D. 418; Blyth v. Birmingham Waterworks (1850), 11 Exch. 781.

(e) Burt v. Victoria Graving Dock Co. (1882), 47 L. T. 378, per FIELD, J., at p. 381; Dixon v. Metropolitan Board of Works (1881), 7 Q. B. D. 418; The William Lindsay, supra; The Britannia, [1905] P. 98. If there is such want of care that an ordinary occurrence would have caused injury, the fact that the occurrence causing the injury was extraordinary is not a defence (Steggles v. New River Co. (1865), 13 W. R. 413).

(f) Dixon v. Metropolitan Board of Works, supra (where defendant's act in opening a sewer gate was the immediate cause of the accident); Davis v. Garrett (1830), 6 Bing. 716; Siordet v. Hall (1828), 4 Bing. 607 (severe frost caused steam pipe to burst, the boiler having been negligently left cold all night when full); Hall v. Fearnley (1842), 3 Q. B. 919; Nitro-Phosphate and Odam's Chemical Manure Co. v. London and St. Katharine's Docks Co. (1878), 9 Ch. D. 503; compare Great Western Rail. Co. v. Davies (1879), 39 L. T. 475; Smith v. Shepherd (1795), Abbot on Shipping, 14th ed., p. 578; Wakeman v. Robinson (1823), 1 Bing. 213. If all that the defendant does is done to protect his land from an extraordinary occurrence he is not liable (Greyvensteyn v. Hattingh, [1911] A. C. 355, P. C.).

(g) See cases cited in note (t), p. 470, post; compare Nichols v. Marsland, supra. As to effective cause, see pp. 378 et seq., ante.

(h) As to what must be proved to make out a defence of act of God, see title CONTRACT, Vol. VII., p. 428.

(i) As to the burden of proof, see The Merchant Prince, [1892] P. 179, C. A.

(k) I.e., as defined p. 467, ante.

(l) The Merchant Prince, supra, per FRY, L.J., at p. 189. In Burns v. Cork and Brandon Rail. Co. (1863), 13 I. C. L. R. 543, the court held on demurrer that this defence was not made out on the part of carriers by showing that the accident was due to a defective crank-pin which, although examined by the defendants, was supplied by other persons about whose care or skill in the selection of the crank-pin there was no averment in the plea demurred to.

(m) "Actus Dei nemini facit injuriam" (2 Bl. Com. 122). For early

SECT. 4.
Inevitable
Accident:
Act of God.

lakes, which burst the banks owing to swelling of the volume of water properly there by flood water caused by an extraordinary rainfall (n); and while the defence of inevitable accident does not apply to the escape of things likely to be dangerous if they escape, brought on land for purposes other than those connected with the natural user thereof (o), yet it may apply in circumstances where it is inevitable that risks should be incurred, as in conducting traffic by land or sea, where it is reasonable to infer that the plaintiff takes the risk of inevitable accident on himself (p).

When defence
"inevitable accident"
applicable.

792. The defence of "inevitable accident" has been held to be established where a bystander was injured by a ball slipping from the chain of a crane (q), or by a blow from a sledge hammer where the striker missed his aim (r); or where the injury arose, on a highway on land, from an unforeseen cause such as sudden and unavoidable fright of horses (s), or, at sea, from a cause which the defendant could not possibly prevent by the exercise of ordinary care, caution and skill (t).

instances of the application of the principle, see The Book of Assizes, 22 Ass. 41; Y. B. 40 Edw. 3, 5, pl. 11; Mouse's Case (1609), 12 Co. Rep. 63 (goods jettisoned by a carrier to save a barge); Keighley's Case (1610), 10 Co. Rep. 139 a, 140 (damage caused by sea water); Bird v. Astock (1615), 2 Bulst. 280 (where a carrier was held excused).

(n) Nichols v. Marsland (1876), 2 Ex. D. 1, C. A.; Thomas v. Birmingham Canal Co. (1879), 49 L. J. (Q. B.) 851.

(o) Chalmers v. Dixon (1876), 13 Sc. L. R. 299.

(p) Fletcher v. Rylands (1866), L. R. 1 Exch. 265, per Lord BLACKBURN, at p. 286; affirmed sub nom. Rylands v. Fletcher (1868), L. R. 3 H. L. 330; compare Smith v. London and South Western Rail. Co. (1870), L. R. 6 C. P. 14; see, generally, p. 364, ante, and see p. 476, post.

(q) Fawkes v. Poulson & Son (1892), 8 T. L. R. 725, C. A., where Dr. LUSHINGTON's definition of inevitable accident (see The Virgil (1843), 2 Wm. Rob. 201, 205; adopted in The Marpesia (1872), L. R. 4 P. C. 212) was applied.

(r) Douglas v. Gray (1890), 27 Sc. L. R. 687.

(s) Aston v. Heaven (1797), 2 Esp. 533; Crofts v. Waterhouse (1825), 3 Bing. 319; Goodman v. Taylor (1832), 5 C. & P. 410; Holmes v. Mather (1875), L. R. 10 Exch. 261; Manzoni v. Douglas (1880), 6 Q. B. D. 145.

(t) The Marpesia, supra; The Shannon (1842), 1 Wm. Rob. 463 (darkness); The Buckhurst (1881), 6 P. D. 153 (where in consequence of a ship being blown from its mooring in a gale the rudder became damaged and the ship unmanageable); Lack v. Seward (1829), 4 C. & P. 106 (tides or current); The Boucar, [1909] P. 163; Davis v. Saunders (1770), 2 Chit. 639; The William Lindsay (1873), L. R. 5 P. C. 338 (defective buoy); The London (1863), 1 Mar. L. C. 398 (cable parting); compare S.S. Toward (Owners) v. S.S. Turkistan (Owners) (1885), 13 R. (Ct. of Sess.) 342. In Mackenzie v. Stornoway Pier and Harbour Commission, [1907] S. C. 435, there was no blame imputable to defendants, while in S.S. Fulwood v. Dumfries Harbour Commissioners, [1907] S. C. 456, the defendants had failed to keep the berth safe. See also The Aimo (1873), 2 Asp. M. L. C. 96 (prior collision); The Peerless (1860), Lush. 30 (where the chain caught in the windlass); The Virgo (1876), 3 Asp. M. L. C. 285 (steerage gear breaking); compare The Merchant Prince, [1892] P. 179, C. A.; and The Turret Court (1900), 69 L. J. (r.) 117 (steam steering gear jammed; collision held not due to inevitable accident since hand steering gear might have been in readiness for use); The Calderon (1912), Times, 26th March; The Julia (1861), Lush. 224, also reported as Bland v. Ross (1860), 14 Moo. P. C. C. 210 (effect of 793. The defence may apply in the case of a failure to fulfil an obligation created by statute (a). Whether it does apply or not depends on the construction of the particular statute (b). In the case of a statute creating a duty and requiring the performance of it, or rendering the person liable for the non-performance of it, or for the consequences of such non-performance, the defence is as a rule no excuse (c). It is, however, generally otherwise if the statute merely refers to and confirms a duty already existing at common law and declares to whom it shall attach (d).

SUB-SECT. 3.—Application of the Defence to Duties Imposed by Statute.

SECT. 4.

Inevitable Accident : Act of God.

Application depends on construction of statute.

SECT. 5.—Independent Contractor.

794. Where an act, which causes injury to another and is actionable on the ground of a failure to use proper care, is committed in the performance of a contract or of some term of a contract, that fact does not of itself render liable the person for whose benefit the contract enures (e). If the performance of the contract or of the particular term of it (f) does not, and in the natural course of things will not, involve or result in any particular duty, such as a duty towards an individual or class to use proper care to protect him or them from danger (g), and the performance is undertaken by an independent contractor (h), who acts as such and not as a servant inevitable accident cause of collision with tug and tow); and see title SHIPPING AND NAVIGATION.

When liability may attach to independent contractor and not to employer.

(a) For the consideration of the application to cases of obligation created by contract express or implied, see titles CONTRACT, Vol. VII., p. 431; SHIPPING AND NAVIGATION.

(b) River Wear Commissioners v. Adamson (1877), 2 App. Cas. 743; compare Re Richmond Gas Co. and Richmond (Surrey) Corporation, [1893] 1 Q. B. 56; and, as to construction of statutes generally, see title STATUTES.

(c) River Wear Commissioners v. Adamson, supra, at p. 750.

(d) Ibid., at p. 766. Thus, where a statute required an appellant to quarter sessions to serve a notice on the respondent, it was held that the death of the latter dispensed with the necessity for serving the notice (R. v. Leicestershire Justices (1850), 15 Q. B. 88).

(e) See titles BUILDING CONTRACTS, ENGINEERS, AND ARCHITECTS, Vol. III., p. 316; TORTS.

(f) Padbury v. Holliday and Greenwood (1912), Times, 17th February (action discontinued against specified sub-contractor and successful against principal contractor).

(g) See titles HIGHWAYS, STREETS, AND BRIDGES, Vol. XVI., p. 136, MASTER AND SERVANT, Vol. XX., pp. 264, 265; and p. 474, post.

(h) As to the position of an independent contractor, see titles AGENCY, Vol. I., pp. 147, 148; HIGHWAYS, STREETS, AND BRIDGES, Vol. XVI., p. 136; MASTER AND SERVANT, Vol. XX., pp. 264; TORT. The real test for some purposes, as pointed out by COLERIDGE, J., in Milligan v. Wedge (1840), 12 Ad. & El. 737, at p. 742, is "to ascertain the relation between the party charged and the party actually doing the injury. Unless the relation of master and servant exist between them the act of the one creates no liability in the other." A contractor is, therefore, said to be independent when he is recognised as exercising a distinct calling (Milligan v. Wedge, supra), and is subject to no control by the employer (Quarman v. Burnett (1840), 6 M. & W. 499; Reedie v. London and North Western Rail. Co. (1849), 4 Exch. 244; Martin v. Temperley (1843), 4 Q. B. 298; Burgess v. Gray (1845), 1 C. B. 578; Overton v. Freeman (1852), 11 C. B. 867; Peachey v. Rowland (1853),

SECT. 5.
Independent Contractor.

Effect of controlling or interfering.

or agent of the other party to the contract, the liability for a failure to use proper care may attach to such independent contractor and not to such other party. But if such other party retains in his own hands the control over or interferes with such performance, he may also be responsible (i).

13 C. B. 182; Innocent v. Peto (1864), 4 F. & F. 8; Pearson v. Cox (1877), 2 C. P. D. 369; Johnson v. Lindsay, [1891] A. C. 371; Ruth v. Surrey Commercial Dock Co. (1891), 8 T. L. R. 116, C. A. It is sometimes doubtful whether the person doing the work for the employer is a contractor or a servant; if the latter, the master is liable, even though the act is only incidental to the employment (Ruddeman & Co. v. Smith (1889), 5 T. L. R. 417). For examples of this difficulty, see Hutchinson v. York, Newcastle and Berwick Rail. Co. (1850), 5 Exch. 343; Sadler v. Henlock (1855), 4 E. & B. 570; Wiggett v. Fox (1856), 11 Exch. 832; Abraham v. Reynolds (1860), 5 H. & N. 143; Blake v. Thirst (1863), 2 H. & C. 20; Warburton v. Great Western Rail. Co. (1866), L. R. 2 Exch. 30; Rourke v. White Moss Colliery Co. (1877), 2 C. P. D. 205; Swainson v. North Eastern Rail. Co. (1878), 3 Ex. D. 341; Jones v. Liverpool Corporation (1885), 14 Q. B. D. 890; Donovan v. Laing Wharton and Down Construction Syndicate [1893] 1 Q. B. 629, C. A.; Preston Corporation v. Biorntstad, [1898] A. C. 513; Waldock v. Winfield, [1901] 2 K. B. 596, C. A. A servant does not become an independent contractor merely by being given piecework (Wiggett v. Fox, supra; Tucker v. Axbridge Highway Board (1888), 5 T. L. R. 26; see title MASTER AND SERVANT, Vol. XX., p. 68).

(i) Whether or not control is exercised so as to render the employer liable is a question of fact (Brady v. Giles (1835), 1 Mood. & R. 494). The mere fact that a certain amount of supervision is exercised (Reedie v. London and North Western Rail. Co. (1849), 4 Exch. 244; Cuthbertson v. Parsons (1852), 12 C. B. 304 (modified control by servant of employee), or directions given as to the work to be done, not amounting to directions as to the manner in which it is to be done, will not as a rule give such control to the employer (Steel v. South Eastern Rail. Co. (1855), 16 C. B. 550; Bennett v. Castile & Sons (1898), 14 T. L. R. 288, C. A.; compare Holliday v. National Telephone Co., [1899] 2 Q. B. 392, C. A.); nor does it matter whether the agreement between the employer and the contractor is in writing or not (ibid.). In the following cases it was held that control was retained by the employer:—M'Laughlin v. Pryor (1842), 4 Man. & G. 48 (defendant urging hired postilions to do a wrongful act); Burgess v. Gray (1845), 1 C. B. 578 (entire control not abandoned over a contractor employed to connect a house with a sewer); Ruth v. Surrey Commercial Dock Co., supra (dock labourers unloading by piecework and employing other labourers themselves); Union Steamship Co., Ltd. v. Claridge, [1894] A. C. 185, P. C. (contract providing for retention of control of crew assisting stevedore); Jones v. Scullard, [1898] 2 Q. B. 565 (driver jobbed by the owner of the vehicle, horse, harness, and livery); Holliday v. National Telephone Co., [1899] 2 Q. B. 392, C. A. (contractor engaged on work jointly with defendants); Mileham v. St. Marylebone Borough Council (1903), 1 L. G. R. 412 (a driver, jobbed with horse to defendants to drive water cart, was entrusted with the key of the defendants' watercock); compare, however, Jones v. Liverpool Corporation (1885), 14 Q. B. D. 890; Perkins v. Stead (1907), 23 T. L. R. 433 (purchaser of a motor car driven by vendors' driver to a place arranged for delivery to the purchaser). On the other hand, control was held not to have been retained in Milligan v. Wedge (1840), 12 Ad. & El. 737 (licensed driver); compare Martin v. Temperley (1843), 4 Q. B. 298 (licensed waterman); Allen v. Hayward (1845), 7 Q. B. 960 (commissioners employing contractor to do drainage work); Knight v. Fox (1850), 5 Exch. 721 (contractor, employed to build a bridge, contracted for the erection of a scaffold); Overton v. Freeman (1852), 11 C. B. 867 (sub-contract by contractors, employed to pave streets, for doing a portion of the work, where there was no evidence that

795. Thus a principal is not liable for damage resulting from the casual or collateral (k) negligence of an independent contractor, or of the latter's servants (l), while doing the work contracted to be done (m).

SECT. 5.
Independent Contractor.

796. Where a person employs another to do work which does, or in the natural course of things will, involve or result in a duty the contractors were present directing or sanctioning the act complained of); Peachey v. Rowland (1853), 13 C. B. 182 (sub-contractor employed to fill in drain and carry away refuse); Gayford v. Nicholls (1854), 9 Exch. 702 (contractor's servants, in building for the defendants, negligently and unnecessarily damaged the plaintiff's house); Brown v. Acerington Cotton Spinning Co. (1865), 3 H. & C. 511 (competent clerk of works employed to superintend contractor's men); Murray v. Currie (1870), L. R. 6 C. P. 24 (shipowner employing stevedore held not responsible to one of the latter's men where the stevedore controlled his own men); Steel v. South Eastern Rail. Co. (1855), 16 C. B. 550 (master bricklayer employed to do certain work under the orders of the defendants' surveyor, but not subject to his directions as to the way in which it was to be done); Jones v. Liverpool Corporation (1885), 14 Q. B. D. 890; Bennett v. Castle & Sons (1898), 14 T. L. R. 288, C. A. (contractor's servants doing an act with the employer's permission). Compare also the following cases decided on the question of common employment:—Johnson v. Lindsay & Co., [1891] A. C. 371; Cameron v. Nystrom, [1893] A. C. 308; McCallum v. North British Rail. Co. (1893), 30 Sc. L. R. 427; Sadler v. Henlock (1855), 4 E. & B. 570; Marrow v. Flimby and Broughton Moor Coal and Fire Brick Co., Ltd., [1898] 2 Q. B. 588, C. A.; Swainson v. North Eastern Rail. Co. (1878), 3 Ex. D. 341; and see title MASTER AND SERVANT, Vol. XX., pp. 67, 133.

Liability to third party.

(k) Negligence is said to be casual or collateral when it arises incidentally in the course of the performance of, and not directly from, the act authorised, such as a workman leaving a tool or barrow in a road (Hole v. Sittingbourne and Sheerness Rail. Co. (1861), 6 H. & N. 488, per POLLOCK, C.B., at p. 497), or letting a stone fall from a bridge (Reedie v. London and North Western Rail. Co. (1849), 4 Exch. 244), or building (Crawford v. Peel and Carmichael (1887), 20 L. R. Ir. 332) under construction (Penny v. Wimbledon Urban District Council, [1899] 2 Q. B. 72, C. A., per A. L. SMITH, L.J., at p. 76). On the other hand, the negligence of the contractor in the following cases was held to be not casual:—where a plumber was engaged, on a highway, in connecting telephone wire tubes, and had to use a benzoline lamp of which the safety valve was known to be out of order and injury was caused to a passer-by owing to the lamp exploding (Holliday v. National Telephone Co., [1899] 2 Q. B. 392, C. A.); where heaps of soil due to excavation in a highway were negligently left unguarded (Penny v. Wimbledon Urban District Council, supra; compare Hardaker v. Idle District Council, [1896] 1 Q. B. 335, C. A.; Robinson v. Beaconsfield Urban District Council (1911), 27 T. L. R. 319; affirmed, [1911] 2 Ch. 188, C. A.); leaving the movable derrick or platform used for working at an electric tram standard so near the lines as to injure a passenger on a tram (Maxwell v. British Thompson Houston Co., Ltd. (1902), 18 T. L. R. 278. Butler v. Hunter (1862), 7 H. & N. 826 (neighbour's house injured by pulling down the defendant's), which was commented on in Hughes v. Percival (1883), 8 App. Cas. 443, 447, is perhaps explainable on the ground that the injury arose, not from the act itself, but from the improper way in which it was done; and see, further, titles HIGHWAYS, STREETS, AND BRIDGES, Vol. XVI., pp. 136, 137; MASTER AND SERVANT, Vol. XX., pp. 264, 265.

(l) Quarman v. Burnett (1840), 6 M. & W. 499; Pearson v. Cox (1877), 2 C. P. D. 369; Dalton v. Angus (1881), 6 App. Cas. 740, 829.

(m) See Penny v. Wimbledon Urban District Council, supra, and see p. 475, post.

SECT. 5.
 Independent Contractor.

Work necessarily dangerous.

towards a third party or towards the community, the employer cannot escape responsibility for the performance of that duty by employing someone else, however competent, to perform it, even though the person so employed is an independent contractor and has agreed to assume the whole responsibility (n).

797. Thus an employer cannot divest himself of liability in an action for negligence by reason of having employed an independent contractor, where the work contracted to be done is necessarily dangerous (o), or is from its nature likely to cause danger to others unless precautions are taken to prevent such danger (p); or where (n) Dalton v. Angus (1881), 6 App. Cas. 740, 829, approving Bower v. Peate (1876), 1 Q. B. D. 321, and Quarman v. Burnett (1840), 6 M. & W. 499; Blake v. Woolf, [1898] 2 Q. B. 426 (plumber employed to repair cistern which in consequence of defective work overflowed and caused damage to neighbour); Milligan v. Wedge (1840), 12 Ad. & El. 737; Rapson v. Cubitt (1842), 9 M. & W. 710; Upton v. Greenlees (1855), 17 C. B. 30, per WILLES, J., at p. 71; Pickard v. Smith (1861), 10 C. B. (N. S.) 470; Butler v. Hunter (1862), 7 H. & N. 826, as commented on in Hughes v. Percival (1883), 8 App. Cas. 443; Kiddle v. Lovett (1885), 16 Q. B. D. 605; Pearson v. Cox (1877), 2 C. P. D. 369 (builder); Odell v. Cleveland House, Ltd. (1910), 102 L. T. 602; compare Daniel v. Metropolitan Rail. Co. (1871), L. R. 5 H. L. 45, at p. 61 (from which it appears that a man who, being under no obligation himself, employs others, in whose skill, as being experienced in the matter, reliance can reasonably be placed, to do certain work is not bound to interfere from time to time to see that the work is not being negligently done); and Palmer v. Bateman, [1908] 2 I. R. 393 (where the fact that a competent contractor was employed to supervise periodically premises adjoining a highway was thought to be evidence that proper care was taken to see that the premises were safe); see also Robinson v. Beaconsfield Rural Council, [1911] 2 Ch. 188, C. A. (sewage disposal).

(o) Holliday v. National Telephone Co., [1899] 2 Q. B. 392, C. A., per A. L. SMITH, L.J., at p. 399 (dipping benzoline lamp into a cauldron of molten lead on highway); Black v. Christchurch Finance Co., [1894] A. C. 48, P. C. (timber burning near adjoining property); Hughes v. Percival, supra (interfering with party wall); compare Hardaker v. Idle District Council, [1896] 1 Q. B. 335, C. A. In Lawrence v. Jenkins (1873), L. R. 8 Q. B. 274, the defendant, who was bound to maintain the plaintiff's fence, allowed a third party to fell timber with the result that the fence was damaged, and in consequence the plaintiff's cattle strayed and were injured: held that the defendant was bound to keep the fence up at his peril and was liable.

(p) The Snark, [1900] P. 105, C. A. (raising a sunken barge in the Thames); Dalton v. Angus, supra; Lemaitre v. Davis (1881), 19 Ch. D. 281; Hughes v. Percival, supra (building causing injury to neighbour's house); Bower v. Peate, supra; Francis v. Cockerell (1870), L. R. 5 Q. B. 501; M'Gill v. Bowman & Co. (1890), 28 Sc. L. R. 144; Glass v. Paisley Race Committee (1902), 5 F. (Ct. of Sess.) 14; Brown v. Lewis (1896), 12 T. L. R. 455 (duty incumbent on a building owner inviting public to a stand constructed by a contractor); Pickard v. Smith, supra; Reedie v. London and North Western Rail. Co. (1849), 4 Exch. 244. It appears that a duty to take precautions arises where the owner of property becomes aware of something on his premises, even if that thing be there through the act of a stranger, which is a source of risk (Silverton v. Marriott (1888), 59 L. T. 61; Tarry v. Ashton (1876), 1 Q. B. D. 315; Palmer v. Bateman, supra; Hill v. Tottenham Urban District Council (1898), 15 T. L. R. 53; Penny v. Wimbledon Urban District Council, [1899] 2 Q. B. 72, C. A.; Shoreditch Borough Council v. Bull (1904), 20 T. L. R. 254, H. L., affirming S. C. (1902), 19 T. L. R. 64, C. A. (interference with the structure of a roadway).

the work contracted to be done is work which the principals were under a statutory obligation to perform (q); or where the work contracted to be done is unlawful (r); or where the injury complained of arises directly from doing the thing contracted to be done (s), as in the case of building operations which involve injury to the premises of another (t).

The fact that the contractor is liable does not of itself free the principal from liability (a).

SECT. 5.
Independent Contractor.

Statutory obligation.
Illegality.

(q) The reason being that a duty is imposed, either expressly or impliedly, by such statutory authority, to see that everything reasonable is done to ensure the safety of the public (Gray v. Pullen (1864), 5 B. & S. 970); see the observations of Lord CHELMSFORD in Wilson v. Merry (1868), L. R. 1 Sc. & Div. App. 326, at p. 341 (where the reasoning on which the decision in Gray v. Pullen is based was disputed); see, however, Holliday v. National Telephone Co., [1899] 2 Q. B. 392, C. A., per A. L. SMITH, L. J., at p. 400; Clements v. Tyrone County Council, [1905] 2 I. R. 415; and compare Cattle v. Stockton Waterworks Co. (1875), L. R. 10 Q. B. 453; Hole v. Sittingbourne and Sheerness Rail. Co. (1861), 6 H. & N. 488 (defendants being authorised to build a bridge that would open, and their contractor having built one which failed to do so and obstructed plaintiffs' vessel, the defendants were held liable); compare Allen v. Hayward (1845), 7 Q. B. 960; Hardaker v. Idle District Council, [1896] 1 Q. B. 335, C. A.; Hill v. Tottenham Urban District Council (1898), 15 T. L. R. 53, following Penny v. Wimbledon Urban District Council, [1898] 2 Q. B. 212; and Shoreditch Borough Council v. Bull (1904), 20 T. L. R. 254, H. L.

(r) Ellis v. Sheffield Gas Consumers Co. (1853), 2 E. & B. 767 (the defendants, who had no statutory power to break up streets, employed a contractor to open trenches and to fill them up after the mains were laid: the plaintiff was injured by falling over a heap of rubbish left on the footway, and the defendants were held liable); compare Hole v. Sittingbourne and Sheerness Rail. Co., supra (where there was a failure to comply with the statutory duty), and Tilling (T.), Ltd. v. Dick Kerr & Co., Ltd., [1905] 1 K. B. 563 (where the statutory powers were exceeded). In Paterson v. Lindsay (1885), 23 Sc. L. R. 180, it was said that blasting operations were illegal if not conducted with all precautions for the safety of persons on adjoining premises.

(s) Pickard v. Smith (1861), 10 C. B. (N. S.) 470; Whiteley v. Pepper (1877), 2 Q. B. D. 276; Gray v. Pullen, supra; Lemaitre v. Davis (1881), 19 Ch. D. 281, applying Dalton v. Angus (1881), 6 App. Cas. 740; Hughes v. Percival (1883), 8 App. Cas. 443; Black v. Christchurch Finance Co., [1894] A. C. 48, P. C.; compare Daniel v. Metropolitan Rail. Co. (1871), L. R. 5 H. L. 45.

(t) Lemaitre v. Davis, supra; Hughes v. Percival, supra; Blake v. Thirst (1863), 2 H. & C. 20, per POLLOCK, C.B., at p. 24; compare Pitts v. Kingsbridge Highway Board (1871), 25 L. T. 195 (where the act complained of arose directly from the building operations), with Crawford v. Peel and Carmichael (1887), 20 L. R. Ir. 332 (where it was collateral); see White v. Peto (1888), 58 L. T. 710.

(a) Whiteley v. Pepper, supra; compare Penny v. Wimbledon Urban District Council, [1899] 2 Q. B. 72, C. A. The contractor cannot avail himself of the protection afforded to his employer when the latter is a public authority; see the Public Authorities Protection Act, 1893 (56 & 57 Vict. c. 61); Tilling (T.), Ltd. v. Dick Kerr & Co., Ltd., supra. But he may in some cases escape liability if he has merely done or supplied the very thing contracted for when the employer has failed to order the thing proper for the purpose. Thus, in Campbell v. Morrison (1891), 29 Sc. L. R. 251, where a sub-contractor, in accordance with an order, supplied planks which were not strong enough for the purpose for which they were required, which was, to act as a gangway for a ship, and the

SECT. 6.

Consent :

Volenti Non Fit Injuria.

Nature of defence.

Distinguished from contributory negligence.

Proof required :
(i.) perception ;SECT. 6.—Consent : Volenti Non Fit Injuria.

798. Where a plaintiff relies on the breach of some duty to take care (b), other than the direct breach of a statutory duty (c), owed by the defendant to him, it is a good defence that the plaintiff consented to that breach of duty, or, knowing of it, voluntarily incurred the whole risk entailed by it (d). In such a case the maxim "volenti non fit injuria" applies (e). This defence is to be distinguished from the defence of contributory negligence, seeing that a plaintiff may have voluntarily exposed himself to the risk of being injured while exercising the utmost care (f).

799. In order to establish the defence, the plaintiff must be shown not only to have perceived the existence of danger, for this plaintiff was injured by their collapse, it was held that as the sub-contractor's obligation was only to satisfy the principal contractor, and he had done so, he was not answerable to the plaintiff ; compare Earl v. Lubbock, [1905] 1 K. B. 253, C. A. Where the employers are liable they may have a remedy over against the contractor under the contract ; and a defendant may, apart from any contract of indemnity, have such a remedy against a contractor whose negligence has resulted in the defendant being liable in damages to others (City of Birmingham Tramways Co., Ltd. v. Law, [1910] 2 K. B. 965, where the plaintiffs, lessees of the tramway, recovered a sum which was properly paid as compensation to persons injured by an accident to a tram, derailed by the negligence of the contractors, who had undertaken with the owners, the corporation, to relay the tramway; the ground of the decision being that the plaintiffs, as lessees, were injured in their proprietary rights and in their right of passage along the highway). For an example of the contractor escaping liability while the employer was liable for the contractor's act, see Ilford Gas Co. v. Ilford Urban District Council (1903), 67 J. P. 365 (where the act causing damage was done by the direction of the defendants and was negligently conceived, the direction given having been properly carried out by the contractor).

(b) The defence may be available in other cases, e.g., Washborn v. Black (1774), 11 East, 405, n. ; see title TRESPASS ; compare Ross v. Fedden (1872), L. R. 7 Q. B. 661 ; Anderson v. Oppenheimer (1880), 5 Q. B. D. 602, C. A. ; Blake v. Woolf, [1898] 2 Q. B. 426, per WRIGHT, J., at p. 428.

(c) Baddeley v. Granville (Earl) (1887), 19 Q. B. D. 423, approving dicta to this effect in Thomas v. Quartermaine (1887), 18 Q. B. D. 685, C. A. ; compare Britton v. Great Western Cotton Co. (1872), L. R. 7 Exch. 130 ; Clarke v. Holmes (1862), 7 H. & N. 937.

(d) Thomas v. Quartermaine, supra, per BOWEN, L.J., at p. 696 ; approved in Yarmouth v. France (1887), 19 Q. B. D. 647, per LINDLEY, L.J., at p. 659 ; and in Smith v. Baker & Sons, [1891] A. C. 325, 337 ; compare Robertson v. Primrose & Co. (1909), 47 Sc. L. R. 147.

(e) The doctrine of this maxim does not depend upon the relationship of employer and employed (see title MASTER AND SERVANT, Vol. XX., p. 120) ; it is of general application to all (Smith v. Baker & Sons, supra). The maxim is "volenti" and not "scienti." A man may know of a danger and be obliged to incur it (Thrussell v. Handyside (1888), 20 Q. B. D. 359 ; Thomas v. Quartermaine, supra, per BOWEN, L.J., at p. 696 ; Membery v. Great Western Rail. Co. (1889), 14 App. Cas. 179).

(f) Thomas v. Quartermaine, supra, per BOWEN, L.J., at p. 697 ; compare Indermaur v. Dames (1866), L. R. 2 C. P. 311 ; Woodley v. Metropolitan Rail. Co. (1877), 2 Ex. D. 384, 390. As to contributory negligence, see pp. 445 et seq., ante.

alone would be insufficient (g), but also that he fully appreciated it (h) and voluntarily accepted the risk (i). The question whether the plaintiff's acceptance of the risk was voluntary is generally a question of fact; and the answer to it may be inferred from his conduct in the surrounding circumstances (k). The inference may more readily be drawn in cases where it is proved that the plaintiff knew of the danger and comprehended it (l), as, for example, where the danger is apparent, or proper warning is given of it (m), and there is nothing to show that he was obliged to incur it (n), than in

SECT. 6.

Consent :
Volenti Non
Fit Injuria.

(ii.) appreciation ; and (iii.) acceptance of risk.

(g) Thomas v. Quartermaine (1887), 18 Q. B. D. 685, C. A. ; Smith v. Baker & Sons, [1891] A. C. 325. It is necessary that the plaintiff should be shown to have notice of the danger ; thus, where a trespasser was injured by a concealed danger of which there was no notice given, the maxim did not apply (Bird v. Holbrook (1828), 4 Bing. 628 ; compare Osborne v. London and North Western Rail. Co. (1888), 21 Q. B. D. 220).

(h) Thomas v. Quartermaine, supra. The risk must be such as can be comprehended by the plaintiff in spite of Lord ESHER's comment in Yarmouth v. France (1887), 19 Q. B. D. 647, at p. 657, that this gives an advantage to a man of slow comprehension (Sarch v. Blackburn (1830), 4 C. & P. 297 ; Cowley v. Sunderland Corporation (1861), 6 H. & N. 565 ; compare Ilott v. Wilkes (1820), 3 B. & Ald. 304 ; Giles v. London County Council (1903), 2 L. G. R. 326 ; Torrance v. Ilford Urban District Council (1909), 25 T. L. R. 355, C. A.). In Cowley v. Sunderland Corporation, supra, a dangerous drying machine was provided by the defendants in a public washhouse : the plaintiff was injured while using it, and the defence was held not to be established, as the danger was not one likely to be understood by persons of the class—the poor and the ignorant—for whom the washhouse was provided. In Giles v. London County Council, supra, a cricketer was injured by a dangerous sign, one of many placed to mark off different cricket pitches : held, that it was an obvious danger which he could appreciate. It appears that the result would have been different had the ground been provided for children ; compare Harrold v. Watney, [1898] 2 Q. B. 320 ; and consider p. 373, ante.

(i) Williams v. Birmingham Battery and Metal Co., [1899] 2 Q. B. 338, C. A. ; Dynen v. Leach (1857), 26 L. J. (EX.) 221 ; Smith v. Baker and Sons, supra ; and see cases cited in note (k), infra.

(k) There must, however, be a finding of fact to this effect (Osborne v. London and North Western Rail. Co. (1888), 21 Q. B. D. 220, per WILLS, J., at pp. 223, 224, following the view expressed in Yarmouth v. France, supra, by Lord ESHER, M.R., at p. 657 ; compare Membery v. Great Western Rail. Co. (1887), 4 T. L. R. 504, per BOWEN, L.J., at p. 505 ; Membery v. Great Western Rail. Co. (1889), 14 App. Cas., 179, per Lord HALSBURY, at p. 186.

(l) See Thomas v. Quartermaine, supra, per BOWEN, L.J., at p. 696 ; Bolch v. Smith (1862), 7 H. & N. 736 ; Giles v. London County Council, supra.

(m) See cases cited in note (n), infra ; Ilott v. Wilkes, supra ; Williams v. Clough (1858), 3 H. & N. 258 ; compare Degg v. Midland Rail. Co. (1857), 1 H. & N. 773 ; Griffiths v. London and St. Katharine's Docks Co. (1884), 13 Q. B. D. 259, C. A.

(n) Membery v. Great Western Rail. Co. (1889), 14 App. Cas. 179, per Lord HALSBURY, at p. 185 ; Webster v. Brown (1892), 29 Sc. L. R. 631 (where it was held that a person who had for some months knowingly used defective and dangerous doorsteps must take the consequences of so doing) ; McEvoy v. Waterford Steamship Co. (1886), 18 L. R. Ir. 159 (where the plaintiff unnecessarily stood at a dangerous place when he could have worked equally well elsewhere) ; Torrance v. Ilford Urban District Council (1909), 25 T. L. R. 355, C. A. (a carter saw and had the opportunity of

SECT. 6.

Consent :
Volenti Non
Fit Injuria.

cases where he had knowledge that there was danger but not full comprehension of its extent, or where, while taking an ordinary and reasonable course, he had not an adequate opportunity of electing whether he would accept the risk or not (o). The defence is perhaps most frequently made use of in cases where the relationship of master and servant exists: (p).

Risks incident to games.

Unlawful
games.

800. A person engaged in playing a lawful game (q) takes upon himself the risks incident to being a player, and has no remedy by action for injuries received in the course of the game unless they be due to some unfair act or foul play (r). If the game is unlawful, the fact that the plaintiff was himself participating in an illegal act is a bar to his recovering damages in respect of any injury arising out of it (s), but the mere fact that the plaintiff consented to join in an illegal game does not necessarily debar him from recovering damages for injuries he received while playing it. The circumstances may be such that the plaintiff can establish a cause of action against the defendant without any reference to the illegal transaction in which they were engaged, and that the defendant, having on him the burden of establishing the consent of the plaintiff, may be unable to do so without at the same time establishing the illegal nature of the game, in which case the consent is not available to him as a defence (a).

appreciating the danger involved in driving over a road which the defendant had covered with a large quantity of granite, yet drove on with the result that his horse was injured : held, that he elected to take the risk) : in Abbott v. Freeman (1877), 35 L. T. 783, the plaintiff stood where he knew horses were tried by being trotted up and down and was injured by a horse swerving when whipped : held that he could not recover ; compare Church v. Appleby (1888), 5 T. L. R. 88 ; Skipp v. Eastern Counties Rail. Co. (1853), 9 Exch. 223 ; Brooks v. Courtney (1869), 20 L. T. 440 ; Breslin v. Dublin United Tramway Co. (1911), 45 I. L. T. 220, C. A.

(o) Clayards v. Dethick (1848), 12 Q. B. 439 ; Thompson v. North Eastern Rail. Co. (1860), 2 B. & S. 106 ; Osborne v. London and North Western Rail. Co. (1888), 21 Q. B. D. 220 (passenger using dangerous steps at a station). In Wing v. London General Omnibus Co., Ltd., [1909] 2 K. B. 652, C. A., FLETCHER MOULTON, L. J., at p. 667, stated that the election by the plaintiff to take the risk of travelling in a class of vehicle, which is in certain circumstances likely to become unmanageable, throws upon the plaintiff the burden of proving that the particular vehicle is defective.

(p) Questions then arise whether the servant contracted to incur the risk ; see Smith v. Baker & Sons, [1891] A. C. 325 ; compare Holmes v. Worthington (1861), 2 F. & F. 533 ; Wallace v. Culter Mills (1892), 29 Sc. L. R. 784 ; and see title MASTER AND SERVANT, Vol. XX., pp. 120, 131.

(q) As to what constitutes a game, as being lawful or unlawful, see title GAMING AND WAGERING, Vol. XV., pp. 284 et seq.

(r) Reid v. Mitchell (1885), 22 Sc. L. R. 748 : Boulter v. Clerk (1747), Buller, Nisi Prius, 16, confines the application of the maxim to lawful games ; compare Matthew v. Ollerton (1693), Comb. 218 ; see R. v. Latimer (1886), 17 Q. B. D. 359 ; R. v. Coney (1882), 8 Q. B. D. 534 ; compare Stanley v. Powell, [1891] 1 Q. B. 86 ; and as to persons, not playing, who are injured when a game is in progress, see Ward v. Abraham (1910), 47 Sc. L. R. 252 ; and see pp. 395 et seq., ante ; and title TRESPASS.

(s) See titles EQUITY, Vol. XIII., p. 73 ; GAMING AND WAGERING, Vol. XV., p. 271.

(a) If a man license another to beat him such a licence is void because it is against the peace (Boulter v. Clerk, supra).

SECT. 7.—*Imminent Personal Risk.*SECT. 7.
Imminent
Personal Risk.

801. It is a defence to an action for negligence that the defendant did the act complained of in an emergency, in response to his instinct for self-preservation (b), provided that his action was what a reasonable man might well have done under the circumstances (c). Thus no blame is attached to a person who, when a lighted squib is thrown at him, throws it away and inflicts damages on another (d); nor to a person who loses his presence of mind by reason of some wrongful act of another (e); nor to a person who is forced by another's negligence to choose one of two evils and who acts reasonably and honestly in adopting a course believed to be the lesser of the two evils (f).

Act done
for self-preservation.
Choice of one of two evils.

SECT. 8.—Reliance on Others.

802. The duty owed by the defendant to the plaintiff, whether it arose from contract (g) or from statutory provisions (h), may be a duty to employ competent persons to do the class of acts out of which the injury arose (i) without any correlative duty to insure that the persons so employed will use that degree of care and skill which a person competent to do such acts might reasonably be expected to use (k). In such a case, if a reasonably competent

In respect of
persons employed.

(b) The Khedive (1880), 5 App. Cas. 876; Scott v. Shepherd (1773), 1 Smith, L. C., 11th ed., 454; 3 Wils. 403; compare Holmes v. Mather (1875), L. R. 10 Exch. 261; compare Gibbons v. Pepper (1695), 4 Mod. Rep. 404. In Hall v. Fearnley (1842), 3 Q. B. 919, WIGHTMAN, J., at p. 922, explained that Wakeman v. Robinson (1823), 1 Bing. 213, laid down that an involuntary act might be a defence on the general issue.

* (c) Jones v. Boyce (1816), 1 Stark. 493; approved in Wilson v. Newport Dock Co. (1866), L. R. 1 Exch. 177, per MARTIN, B., at p. 187; compare E. v. Pitts (1842), Car. & M. 284 (where it was said that it is murder, though the deceased has voluntarily jumped into a river, if he has risked that as the only escape from a violent man; see Adams v. Lancashire and Yorkshire Rail. Co. (1869), L. R. 4 C. P. 739, per BRETT, J., at p. 744; The City of Lincoln (1889), 15 P. D. 15, C. A.; The Industrie, [1894] P. 58, C. A.); and see p. 366, ante.

(d) Scott v. Shepherd, supra.

(e) Jones v. Boyce, supra; Woolley v. Scovell (1828), 3 Man. & Ry. (K. B.) 105; The Khedive, supra (where, however, the common law rule stated was held not to apply, seeing that under the Merchant Shipping Acts a law was framed to meet the very emergency that arose); compare Wakeman v. Robinson, supra (where a driver who pulled the wrong rein in an emergency was under the particular circumstances held liable).

(f) The Highland Loch (1912), 28 T. L. R. 213, H. L.; and see note (r), p. 367, ante.

(g) Hall v. Lees, [1904] 2 K. B. 602, C. A.

(h) As to the responsibility of a master or shipowner for the negligence of a qualified pilot where the latter's employment is compulsory, see the Merchant Shipping Act, 1894 (57 & 58 Vict. c. 60), s. 683; and title SHIPPING AND NAVIGATION.

(i) Thus the duty of a hirer of a horse which becomes ill may be only to call in a veterinary surgeon, and if so he is not answerable for the medicines the surgeon may administer (Dean v. Keate (1811), 3 Camp. 4; see ibid., per Lord ELLENBOROUGH).

(k) Ibid. Evans v. Liverpool Corporation, [1906] 1 K. B. 160; Hillyer

SECT. 8. man is employed by the defendant and is negligent, the defendant Reliance on is not responsible (l).

Others.

In respect of goods
 supplied.

803. Such a defence may be available where the circumstances are such as to cast no duty to take care on the defendant (m), as in the case of a dealer in goods, bought from a manufacturer of repute, when there is no implied warranty and nothing in the condition of the goods to put the dealer on his guard (n), or where the defendant has been relieved of a duty to take care by some agreed provision, as where plant or tackle is to be supplied to the approval of certain persons, and the required approval having been obtained, those supplying the plant are free from liability if it fails in the purpose for which it has been so approved (o).

v. Governors of St. Bartholomew's Hospital, [1909] 2 K. B. 820, C. A. ; see titles MASTER AND SERVANT, Vol. XX., p. 266, note (m) ; MEDICINE AND PHARMACY, Vol. XX., p. 334.

(l) Hall v. Lees, [1904] 2 K. B. 602, C. A. (where the duty of the defendants, who were the committee of an association which from philanthropic motives supplied skilled nurses to persons needing them, was stated to be to find and supply nurses in selecting whom they had employed all reasonable care and skill in order to ensure their being competent and efficient) ; compare Leaver v. Pontypridd Urban District Council (1911), 56 Sol. Jo. 32, H. L. (where a tramcar driver, going cautiously past an obstruction, was directed by a person in charge of the obstruction, who was better able to see than the driver, to proceed and damage resulted). As to when time begins to run in such a case, see title LIMITATION OF ACTIONS, Vol. XIX., p. 51.

(m) Daniel v. Metropolitan Rail. Co. (1871), L. R. 5 H. L. 45 ; compare Palmer v. Bateman, [1908] 2 I. R. 393 ; see note (n), p. 474, ante ; M'Inulty v. Primrose (1897), 34 Sc. L. R. 334, where the servant of the defendant, a contractor, was injured because of a defective staircase erected by another contractor : held, no duty upon the defendant ; similarly in Dalziel v. Osborne (1857), 20 Dunl. (Ct. of Sess.) 55, a defendant who sold poison in mistake for medicine was held not liable, as he agreed to procure it from elsewhere ; compare Thomas v. Winchester (1852), 6 New York Rep. 397 (where on appeal it was held that the manufacturer of a drug who labels as harmless what in fact is a deadly drug is liable to anyone who subsequently is injured in consequence : the intermediate sellers were found by the jury to be guilty of no negligence, and the Court of Appeals did not decide whether this was correct or not) ; but see Heaven v. Pender (1883), 11 Q. B. D. 503, C. A., per BRETT, M. R., at p. 514. An independent duty arises where there is an invitation to the plaintiff (see pp. 388 et seq., ante), even although in the case of defective premises someone else owes a duty to keep safe the particular part in respect of which complaint is made (The Bearn, [1906] P. 48, C. A. ; The Moorcock (1889), 14 P. D. 64, C. A. ; compare Edwards v. Hutcheon (1889), 26 Sc. L. R. 550).

(n) Gordon v. M'Hardy (1903), 41 Sc. L. R. 129 ; Dalziel v. Osborne, supra : and see pp. 407, 408, ante.

(o) Wood & Co. v. Mackay (1906), 43 Sc. L. R. 458 ; M'Gill v. Bowman (1890), 28 Sc. L. R. 144 ; compare Kiddle v. Livett (1885), 16 Q. B. D. 605 ; Campbell v. Morrison (1891), 29 Sc. L. R. 251 ; Cramb v. Caledonian Rail. Co. (1892), 29 Sc. L. R. 869. In Burns v. Cork and Brandon Rail. Co. (1863), 13 I. C. L. R. 543, it was held that carriers, for whom the standard of care was high, and who purchased their rolling stock from manufacturers, are responsible for defects in that stock due to the negligence of those from whom they purchase ; see Sharp v. Grey (1833), 9 Bing. 457, per ALDERSON, J., at p. 459 ; and see, generally, title CARRIERS, Vol. IV., pp. 44, 45.

Part X.—Damages.

SECT. 1.—In General.

804. In order to entitle a plaintiff to maintain an action for negligence he must have suffered some temporal loss or injury (p) which must be directly due to the act complained of (q). In order to compensate him for such loss, damages are awarded him, and these should, as nearly as possible, place him in the same position as that in which he would have been but for the injury or wrong sustained (a), provided that the injuries for which compensation is sought are such as in the ordinary course of things result from the act complained of (b). Conversely a defendant is liable for all the consequences of his negligent act provided they directly and naturally flow from that act (c).

805. The principle that damages will be given for the consequences naturally and probably flowing from a proved act of negligence is of equal application whether the act constitutes or involves a breach of contract or not, but some difference may arise in estimating the measure of damages (d). Where there is a breach

SECT. 1.

In General.

Compensation for temporal loss or injury.

Injury must result from act complained of.

Measure of damages in respect of breach of contractual duty.

(p) Williams v. Morland (1824), 2 B. & C. 910; approved in Brunsdon v. Humphrey (1884), 14 Q. B. D. 141, C. A., per BOWEN, L.J., at p. 150. Where the defendants had been negligent, but the plaintiffs had suffered no damage, the defendants were held entitled to the costs of the action (Cole and Others v. Christy, Manson and Woods (1910), 26 T. L. R. 469). As to the possibility of recovering nominal damages, see The Mediana, [1900] A. C. 113, per Lord HALSBURY, L.C., at p. 117; Columbus Co. v. Clowes, [1903] 1 K. B. 244.

(q) Remorquage à Hélice (Société Anonyme de) v. Bennetts, [1911] 1 K. B. 243; and see p. 378, ante.

(a) Phillips v. London and South Western Rail. Co. (1879), 5 Q. B. D. 78, C. A.; 5 C. P. D. 280, C. A.; see Livingstone v. Rawyards Coal Co. (1880), 5 App. Cas. 25, per Lord BLACKBURN, at p. 39; compare Dreyfus v. Peruvian Guano Co. (1889), 42 Ch. D. 66; affirmed 43 Ch. D. 316, C. A., but varied [1892] A. C. 166. In estimating prospective loss of income it is right to take all circumstances, such as the accidents of life, into account (Rowley v. London and North Western Rail. Co. (1873), L. R. 8 Exch. 221; Johnston v. Great Western Rail. Co., [1904] 2 K. B. 250, C. A.).

(b) The Argentino (1889), 14 App. Cas. 519; The Notting Hill (1884), 9 P. D. 105, C. A., applying as far as possible the rule in Hadley v. Baxendale (1854), 9 Exch. 341; compare American Braided Wire Co. v. Thomson (1890), 44 Ch. D. 274, 280, C. A.; see p. 378, ante.

(c) The Argentino, supra; The Notting Hill, supra; compare Scott v. Shepherd (1773), 3 Wils. 403; 1 Smith, L. C., 11th ed., p. 454; Rigby v. Hewitt (1850), 5 Exch. 240, per POLLOCK, B., at p. 243; Sharpe v. Powell (1872), L. R. 7 C. P. 253; compare Caffrey v. Darby (1801), 6 Ves. 488; Byrne v. Wilson (1862), 15 I. C. L. R. 332; Smith v. London and South Western Rail. Co. (1870), L. R. 6 C. P. 14; The George and Richard (1871), L. R. 3 A. & E. 466; De la Bere v. Pearson, Ltd., [1907] 1 K. B. 483.

(d) The Notting Hill, supra, per BRETT, M.R., at p. 113, citing Mayne on Damages, 3rd ed., p. 39; Cassaboglou v. Gibb (1883), 11 Q. B. D. 797, C. A.; The Argentino (1888), 13 P. D. 191, C. A., per BOWEN, L.J., at p. 201; Cobb v. Great Western Rail. Co., [1893] 1 Q. B. 459, C. A., per BOWEN, L.J., at p. 464; Salvesen v. Nordstjernen, [1905] A. C. 302;

SECT. I.

In General.

of a duty which arises out of a contract, the measure of damages, whether they are to be arrived at either on the basis of an express provision in the contract or on the basis of what may reasonably be supposed to have been in the minds of the parties when the contract was made, may be susceptible of more precise calculation than where the duty does not so arise (e).

Measure of damages for breach of duty not arising from contract.

Where the duty does not arise out of a contract, the measure of damages, in any action which can be maintained (f) for the breach of it, may involve the consideration of all the actual consequences of the proved act of negligence, which have been ascertained and determined (g) to be natural (g), whether they might reasonably be supposed to have been, at the time of the negligent act or omission, within the contemplation of the negligent person, or not (h).

General damages.

806. In an action for negligence those damages are called "general damages" which follow in the ordinary course, naturally and directly, from the act or omission complained of, or which the law will assume to flow from such act or omission. They may include damages on which an exact money value cannot be placed or supported by direct proof (i).

Special damages.

Those damages which are not presumed by law to be the direct, natural or probable consequence of the act or omission complained of, but which do in fact result in the circumstances of the particular case from such act or omission so as to be capable of being recovered in addition to the "general damages," are called "special damages" (k).

Special damages must be claimed and proved.

Special damages must be claimed specially and proved strictly. When so claimed and proved, they may be recovered if they in fact resulted from the negligent act or omission complained of, notwithstanding that they were not within the contemplation of the parties to the action (l).

Ströms Bruks Aktie Bolag v. Hutchison, [1905] A. C. 515, per Lord MACNAGHTEN, at p. 525.

(e) Hadley v. Baxendale (1854), 9 Exch. 341; see title DAMAGES, Vol. X., pp. 313 et seq.

(f) If the consequences are such that they could not, by any amount of care and forethought reasonably to be expected, have been foreseen, the action only is maintainable if the duty to guard against the injury was an absolute one; see pp. 371, 372, 405, 406, 468, ante.

(g) Consequences which are due to an altogether foreign and independent cause may be determined not to be material (Isitt v. Railway Passengers Assurance Co. (1889), 22 Q. B. D. 504, per WILLS, J., at p. 512).

(h) Smith v. London and South Western Rail. Co. (1870), L. R. 6 C. P. 14; Ströms Bruks Aktie Bolag v. Hutchison, supra, per Lord MACNAGHTEN, at p. 526; Halestrap v. Gregory, [1895] 1 Q. B. 561.

(i) See title DAMAGES, Vol. X., pp. 303, 308 et seq.; M'Lawrin v. North British Rail. Co. (1892), 29 Sc. L. R. 291; The Mediana, [1900] A. C. 113, 117. Particulars may be ordered of a specific loss claimed (Watson v. North Metropolitan Tramways Co. (1886), 3 T. L. R. 273); but not of the amount claimed for general damages (London and Northern Bank v. Newnes (George), Ltd., (1900), 16 T. L. R. 433, C. A.).

(k) See title DAMAGES, Vol. X., p. 304; and Ströms Bruks Aktie Bolag v. Hutchison, supra, at p. 526.

(l) See title DAMAGES, Vol. X., p. 304; Ratcliffe v. Evans, [1892] 2 Q. B. 524, C. A., per BOWEN, L.J., at p. 528.

SECT. 1.

In General.

Nature of damages for personal injury.

807. Where personal injury results from a negligent act, general damages are given for bodily pain and suffering (m), injury to health (n), and for personal inconvenience (o). Such damages cannot be a perfect compensation, but must be arrived at by a reasonable consideration of the circumstances of the plaintiff and by making allowances for the ordinary chances of life (p). In addition, special damage may be recovered for pecuniary loss sustained (q), whether it be for expenses properly incurred in medical or nursing attendance, or for loss of earnings in the plaintiff's ordinary avocation (q) which he has been prevented from earning owing to his injuries, and in respect of the time during which he will be likely to remain unable to earn them (a), or in respect of his incapacity to earn an increasing income in future (b), or for any other loss or injury actually suffered which follows in the ordinary course of things from the negligent act (c).

808. Where an act is complained of as negligent, there may be accompanying circumstances which tend to aggravate the damages beyond the actual pecuniary loss sustained (d). Circumstances relied on in aggravation of damages should be pleaded (e).

Aggravated
damages.

(m) Phillips v. London and South Western Rail. Co. (1879), 5 Q. B. D. 78, C. A.; 5 C. P. D. 280, C. A.; and see note (c), infra. As to remoteness of damage, see pp. 486 et seq., post.

(n) The Greta Holme, [1897] A. C. 596, per Lord HALSBURY, L.C., at p. 601; Fair v. London and North Western Rail. Co. (1869), 21 L. T. 326 (personal injury may involve damages for physical incapacity to enjoy life).

(o) Hobbs v. London and South Western Rail. Co. (1875), L. R. 10 Q. B. 111, which was adversely commented on in McMahon v. Field (1881), 7 Q. B. D. 591, C. A., because of the application of the principle laid down to the particular facts; compare Hamlin v. Great Northern Rail. Co. (1856), 1 H. & N. 408.

(p) Phillips v. London and South Western Rail. Co., supra; compare Potter v. Metropolitan Rail. Co. (1873), 28 L. T. 735.

(q) The Greta Holme, supra, per Lord HALSBURY, L.C., at p. 601.

(a) Phillips v. London and South Western Rail. Co., supra; Rowley v. London and North Western Rail. Co. (1873), L. R. 8 Exch. 221; Re Trent and Humber Co., Ex parte Cambrian Steam Packet Co. (1868), 4 Ch. App. 112; Johnston v. Great Western Rail. Co., [1904] 2 K. B. 250.

(b) Fair v. London and North Western Rail. Co. (1869), 21 L. T. 326; McLaurin v. North British Rail. Co. (1892), 29 Sc. L. R. 291; and see title DAMAGES, Vol. X., p. 324.

(c) This includes damages which result from nervous shock causing physical injury, whether the incident creating the shock was accompanied by physical impact or not, and whether the injury results directly from the shock or from a cause of action induced by the shock (Jones v. Boyce (1816), 1 Stark. 493; Dubieu v. White & Sons, [1901] 2 K. B. 669; see pp. 487, 488, post; title CARRIERS, Vol. IV., p. 59).

(d) Emblen v. Myers (1860), 30 L. J. (EX.) 71. In Bell v. Midland Rail. Co. (1861), 10 C. B. (N. S.) 287, WILLES, J., at p. 307, approving Emblen v. Myers, supra, said exemplary damages were proper, because the railway company had acted wrongly with a high hand, in plain violation of an Act of Parliament, and had persisted in its conduct in order to destroy the plaintiff's business and secure gain to itself: BYLES, J. (ibid., at p. 308), agreed that where a wrongful act was accompanied by "words of

(e) For note (e) see next page.

SECT. 1.
In General.

Diminished
damages.

Insufficient
grounds.

A defendant may, in order to diminish the damages, show that the plaintiff has not done his best to minimise his loss (f), or that the loss has been increased or affected by the conduct of the plaintiff, or diminished by some act or conduct of the defendant (g), or that part of the loss would have been sustained in any event even if there had been no negligence on his part (h).

He cannot, however, diminish the damages by showing that the plaintiff has obtained compensation for the injury under a policy of insurance (i), or that the plaintiff is a wealthy man (k), or that the damages sought to be recovered were partly caused by the plaintiff's own act, if such act was reasonably done for the purpose of avoiding the consequences of the defendant's negligence (l); for the plaintiff's negligence cannot affect the question of damages (m). Nor where goods are injured by the defendant's negligence does it affect the question of damages that the plaintiff has only a qualified property in the goods injured (n), or is only the bailee of the contumely and abuse," exemplary damages could be given. See Cooley v. Edinburgh and Glasgow Rail. Co. (1845), 8 Dunl. (Ct. of Sess.) 288 (where it was held that, even where liability was admitted, the plaintiff could show how in fact the accident occurred, since it might have a bearing on the damages); and see Livingstone v. Rawyards Coal Co. (1880), 5 App. Cas. 25, per Lord BLACKBURN, at p. 39; compare Forde v. Skinner (1830), 4 C. & P. 239 (where a pauper complained of an assault in cutting off his hair by force, and the jury were directed that if it were done not for cleanliness, but to take down the pauper's pride, the damages would be aggravated); see Whitham v. Kershaw (1885), 16 Q. B. D. 613, C. A., per BOWEN, L.J., at p. 618.

(e) See title DAMAGES, Vol. X., p. 346.

(f) American Braided Wire Co. v. Thomson (1890), 44 Ch. D. 274, 288, C. A.; Roth & Co. v. Taysen, Townsend & Co. (1896), 1 Com. Cas. 306; and see title DAMAGES, Vol. X., p. 335.

(g) See title DAMAGES, pp. 325, 346; and as to the necessity of pleading such circumstances see ibid., p. 346; compare Dodd v. Holme (1834), 1 Ad. & El. 493.

(h) Nitro Phosphate and Odam's Chemical Manure Co. v. London and St. Katharine Docks Co. (1878), 9 Ch. D. 503, C. A. (where it was said that some part of the damage was caused by act of God, and would have occurred even if the defendants had performed their duty); see Workman v. Great Northern Rail. Co. (1863), 32 L. J. (Q. B.) 279. In Dodd v. Holme (1834), 1 Ad. & El. 493, the fact that the plaintiff's house, which was injured by the defendant's negligence, was in such a ruinous condition that it must have soon fallen of its own accord, was allowed to affect the damages; compare Dawson & Co. v. Bingley Urban Council, [1911] 2 K. B. 149, C. A., reversing S. C., 27 T. L. R. 46 (where a portion of the damage caused by a fire was attributable to the defendant's neglect to indicate correctly the position of fire-plugs as required by the Public Health Act, 1875 (38 & 39 Vict. c. 55), s. 66).

(i) Mason v. Sainsbury (1782) 3 Doug. (K. B.) 60; Cullen v. Butler (1816), 5 M. & S. 461; Yates v. Whyte (1838), 4 Bing. (N. C.) 272; Bradburn v. Great Western Rail. Co. (1874), L. R. 10 Exch. 1; and see Jebsen v. East and West India Dock Co. (1875), L. R. 10 C. P. 300; see also the Fatal Accidents (Damages) Act, 1908 (8 Edw. 7, c. 7), and p. 462, ante.

(k) Phillips v. London and South Western Rail. Co. (1879), 5 Q. B. D. 78, C. A., and again, on another appeal, 5 C. P. D. 280, C. A.

(l) The Industrie (1871), L. R. 3 A. & E. 303.

(m) If the plaintiff's act directly contributes to the accident the defendant must succeed; if it only contributes indirectly it must be left out of consideration altogether in assessing damages (Florence v. Mann (1890), 28 Sc. L. R. 215).

(n) Whittingham v. Bloxham (1831), 4 C. & P. 597.

thing damaged, and that the conditions of the bailment are such as do not make him responsible to the owner for the loss sustained (o).

SECT. 1.
In General.

809. Where a chattel has been injured owing to a negligent act, the cost of repairing it (p), the difference in value between the former worth and that of the chattel when repaired (q), and the damage sustained owing to the loss of use of the chattel while being repaired, are all recoverable (r). Loss of profits may also be recovered if it can be shown that they follow directly from the wrongful act (s), but not otherwise (t). As a rule, damages are not given for the depreciation of the value of an article owing to a fall in the market price during the period of delay occasioned by the defendant's negligence (a).

Measure of damages to chattels.

(o) The Winkfield, [1902] P. 42, C. A., overruling Claridge v. South Staffordshire Tramway Co., [1892] 1 Q. B. 422; see Glenwood Lumber Co. v. Phillips, [1904] A. C. 405, 410; compare Giles v. Grover (1832), 1 Cl. & Fin. 72; and see City of Birmingham Tramways Co., Ltd. v. Law, [1910] 2 K. B. 965. But liability must depend on whether the act complained of is the cause from which such damage naturally and directly follows; see note (s), infra.

(p) The Greta Holme, [1897] A. C. 596.

(q) Hughes v. Quentin (1838), 8 C. & P. 703 (horse injured); The Greta Holme, supra (collision at sea), the rule being the same for collisions both on land and sea; see The Argentino (1889), 14 App. Cas. 519, affirming 13 P. D. 191; title SHIPPING AND NAVIGATION.

(r) The Argentino, supra; The Greta Holme, supra; The Mediana, [1900] A. C. 113; The Marpessa, [1906] P. 14, 95, C. A.; affirmed, [1907] A. C. 241; The Astrakhan, [1910] P. 172; compare Re Trent and Humber Co., Ex parte Cambrian Steam Packet Co. (1868), 4 Ch. App. 112, per Lord Cairns, at p. 117.

(s) Hadley v. Baxendale (1854), 9 Exch. 341; compare The Notting Hill (1884), 9 P. D. 105, C. A. Thus in Buckmaster v. Great Eastern Rail. Co. (1870), 23 L. T. 471, where the plaintiff lost business through being late for market owing to the defendant's negligence, it was held that he could recover in respect of such loss.

(t) For an example of loss of profits not allowed, see The Parana (1877), 2 P. D. 118; compare The Notting Hill, supra; Wilson v. Lancashire and Yorkshire Rail. Co. (1861), 9 C. B. (N. S.) 632; The Bodlewell, [1907] P. 286 (contingent profit of ship being worked at a loss). Loss of profits must be distinguished from loss of earnings of the article damaged or depreciation of its value; see Fletcher v. Tayleur (1855), 17 C. B. 21; The Argentino, supra; and see title DAMAGES, Vol. X., pp. 317, 318. For the rules applicable in Admiralty cases as to the division of loss between parties to a collision, see The Milan (1861), 31 L. J. (ADM.) 105; Chartered Mercantile Bank of India v. Netherlands India Steam Navigation Co. (1883), 10 Q. B. D. 521, C. A.; Maritime Conventions Act, 1911 (1 & 2 Geo. 5, c. 57), s. 1; The Rosalia, [1912] P. 109; title SHIPPING AND NAVIGATION.

(a) Smeed v. Foord (1859), 1 E. & E. 602 (neglect to supply a thrashing machine on a certain day, in consequence of which corn was damaged by rain, and had to be stacked specially and dried in a kiln: during the delay caused in consequence the market price fell, but, although the plaintiff recovered damages for the expense of stacking, drying, and the deterioration of the grain, he could not recover for the difference in the market price); compare Collard v. South Eastern Rail. Co. (1861), 7 H. & N. 79 (where in a case of non-delivery of goods by a carrier the loss of the fall in price was recovered); and see Gee v. Lancashire and Yorkshire Rail. Co. (1860), 6 H. & N. 211.

SECT. 1.

In General.

Measure of damages to land and buildings.

810. Where injury to land results from a negligent act the measure of damages is, as a rule, when the plaintiff is in possession, the cost of making good the damage done as far as possible, and the depreciation, if any, in the value of the property injured (b). Where, however, the result of the defendant's negligence is the total demolition of the plaintiff's house, so that a new house has to be built, the plaintiff is not entitled to a sum equivalent to the cost of building the new house, but only to the value of the old one (c), seeing that the benefit that the plaintiff will receive in having a new house must be taken into consideration (d). A reversioner can only recover damages for such injury where it is of such a permanent character as to affect the property after it falls into his possession (e). Where such an injury exists the measure of damage is the injury to the reversion (f), and is estimated by considering the depreciation of the selling value of the reversioner's interest (g).

Solicitors.

Where, owing to the negligence of a solicitor in investigating the title to land which his client purports to purchase, the client is wrongfully in possession and is evicted by the true owner, the damages to be recovered by the client from his solicitor include the sum required to obtain a title, with interest (h).

Measure of damages in contractual relations.

811. The measure of damages for negligence on the part of persons in the contractual or quasi-contractual relation, already dealt with in this title, is stated in the several titles there referred to (i).

The measure of damages under the Fatal Accidents Acts is dealt with elsewhere (k).

SECT. 2.—Remoteness of Damage.

Distinguished from proximate cause.

812. The question of remoteness of damage must be distinguished from that of effective cause. For while the latter term is employed where the inquiry is whether or not a negligent act is the effective or real cause of loss or injury to the plaintiff (l), the former, strictly speaking, is confined to the inquiry

(b) Nitro-Phosphate and Odam's Chemical Manure Co. v. London and St. Katharine Docks Co. (1878), 9 Ch. D. 503, 520, C. A.; Rust v. Victoria Graving Dock Co. and London and St. Katharine Dock Co. (1887), 36 Ch. D. 113 (both cases are instances of land injured by flood brought about by the negligence of the defendant).

(c) Lukin v. Godsall (1795), Peake, Add. Cas. 15; compare Hide v. Thornborough (1846), 2 Car. & Kir. 250; and see title DAMAGES, Vol. X., p. 341.

(d) Lukin v. Godsall, supra.

(e) Rust v. Victoria Graving Dock Co. and London and St. Katharine Docks Co., supra, approving Baxter v. Taylor (1832), 4 B. & Ad. 72; Mumford v. Oxford, Worcester and Wolverhampton Rail. Co. (1856), 1 H. & N. 34; Simpson v. Savage (1856), 1 C. B. (N. S.) 347.

(f) Whitham v. Kershaw (1885), 16 Q. B. D. 613, C. A.

(g) Johnstone v. Hall (1856), 2 K. & J. 414; compare Dobson v. Blackmore (1847), 9 Q. B. 991; and see title DAMAGES, Vol. X., p. 341.

(h) Allen v. Clark (1863), 7 L. T. 781.

(i) See titles AGENCY, Vol. I., pp. 191, 192, 195; BAILMENT, Vol. I., pp. 546, 560, 564; CARRIERS, Vol. IV., pp. 17, 21.

(k) See pp. 459 et seq., ante.

(l) As to effective or proximate cause, see pp. 378 et seq., ante. Thus, for whether or not some or any of the consequences of that injury are so remote as to prevent damages being recoverable therefor (n).

SECT. 2.

Remoteness of Damage.

Remoteness of damage depends on absence of sequence of facts.

813. Remoteness of damage in cases of negligence does not depend on whether or not the consequences of the negligent act could have been reasonably foreseen (n), nor on the length of time intervening between the negligent act and the injury and its consequences (o), but it does depend on whether or not there is an absence of direct, necessary and natural sequence between them (p), and to this extent the inquiry is similar, though subsequent, to that of whether the negligent act is the effective cause of the example, in Cobb v. Great Western Rail. Co., [1894] A. C. 419, the plaintiff complained that he was robbed owing to the defendants negligently permitting the compartment, in which he was, to become overcrowded: in the absence of any allegation or evidence that the company's servants knew that the persons crowding in were thieves, it was held that there was no connection establishing liability between the overcrowding and the robbery; compare Glover v. London and South Western Rail. Co. (1867), L. R. 3 Q. B. 25.

(m) See, for example, Re United Service Co., Johnson's Claim (1871), 6 Ch. App. 212 (where, a bank having been negligent in leaving the plaintiff's securities in the unchecked control of the manager, the plaintiff, who had successfully brought actions against persons to whom his securities had been transferred, was not allowed, on the ground that the loss was too remote, to recover against the bank the costs of such suits which had been disallowed); Watson v. Ambergate, Nottingham and Boston Rail. Co. (1851), 15 Jur. 448; Hobbs v. London and South Western Rail. Co. (1875), L. R. 10 Q. B. 111, which was commented on in McMahon v. Field (1881), 7 Q. B. D. 591; see also Hughes v. Quentin (1838), 8 C. & P. 703 (where although damages were given for the cost of curing and the depreciation in value of a horse injured by negligence, yet they were not given for the hire of another while it was being cured). As to this last point, see The Greta Holme, [1897] A. C. 596. The term "remoteness of damage" is sometimes used in a loose sense to denote the absence of causal connection between the injury or loss, and the negligent act complained of, as in Hoey v. Felton (1861), 11 C. B. (N. S.) 142; Sharp v. Powell (1872), L. R. 7 C. P. 253; Cattle v. Stockton Waterworks Co. (1875), L. R. 10 Q. B. 453; followed in Remorquage à Hélice (Société Anonyme de) v. Bennetts, [1911] 1 K. B. 243.

(n) In Smith v. London and South Western Rail. Co. (1870), L. R. 6 C. P. 14, the suggested test for remoteness, that the inquiry should be as to whether the consequences could be reasonably anticipated, was rejected: "if negligence is once established it would be no answer that it did more damage than was expected" (ibid., per BLACKBURN, B., at p. 22, and also per KELLY, C.B., at p. 20). It was also stated that the question whether the defendant could be expected reasonably to have foreseen danger or not is only important in determining whether he was negligent; compare Mullett v. Mason (1866), L. R. 1 C. P. 559.

(o) Dulieu v. White & Sons, [1901] 2 K. B. 669, per KENNEDY, J., at pp. 676 et seq.; M'Intyre v. Gallacher (1883), 21 Sc. L. R. 58.

(p) Smith v. London and South Western Rail. Co., supra; Dulieu v. White & Sons, supra; Shoreditch Borough Council v. Bull (1904), 19 T. L. R. 64, C. A.; affirmed (1904), 20 T. L. R. 254, H. L.; compare Gilbertson v. Richardson (1848), 5 C. B. 502. When the consequences of the negligent act cease to operate, the liability for them ceases also (The Douglas (1882), 7 P. D. 151, C. A.; and see p. 380, ante). In Cattle v. Stockton Waterworks Co., supra, where the plaintiff, a contractor, was put to extra expense owing to the defendants' negligence in allowing water to leak into the land upon which the contractor was working, he was not able to recover; and see Remorquage à Hélice (Société Anonyme de) v. Bennetts, supra.

SECT. 2.
Remoteness
of Damage.
Illustrations.

injury (a). It is for the judge to decide whether or not the damage is too remote (b).

Damages cannot be recovered for mental pain or anxiety unattended by any physical injury (c); but they may be recovered in cases of nervous shock resulting in physical injury (d), where the shock is due to apprehension (e) of physical injury to the claimant (f) or to false news of a bereavement affecting the claimant (g), but not where it is due to horror at the sight of injury to another (h). It is immaterial whether there was actual impact at the time of the shock or not (i), or whether the physical injury resulted directly from the shock (i) or indirectly from a course of action induced by the shock (k). Thus where animals, frightened owing

(a) As to the effect of the intervention of the conscious act of another, independent volition, see p. 380, ante; and as to measure of damages, see pp. 481 et seq., 484, ante.

(b) Hobbs v. London and South Western Rail. Co. (1875), L. R. 10 Q. B. 111, per BLACKBURN, J., at p. 122.

(c) Lynch v. Knight (1861), 9 H. L. Cas. 577, per Lord WENSLEYDALE, at p. 598; Allsop v. Allsop (1860), 5 H. & N. 534; The Rigel, [1912] P. 99 (where it was held that the plaintiffs, who had recovered damages for injury done to their ship by collision, could not recover from the defendants, whose ship was at fault, a sum adjudged to be paid by the plaintiffs to an employee as statutory compensation for nervous shock produced by the imminence of the collision); see Beven on Negligence, 3rd ed., pp. 67, 68. As to the possibility of nervous shock being a "physical" injury, see Dulieu v. White & Sons, [1901] 2 K. B. 669, per KENNEDY, J., at p. 677. As to similar questions relating to injury resulting from an accident within an accident insurance policy, see Scarr and General Accident Insurance Co., [1905] 1 K. B. 387, and cases there cited.

(d) Dulieu v. White & Sons, supra; Wilkinson v. Downton, [1897] 2 Q. B. 57; Byrne v. Great Southern and Western Rail. Co. (1884), C. A. (Ir.), unreported, but cited and followed in Bell v. Great Northern Rail. Co. of Ireland (1890), 26 L. R. Ir. 428; Cooper v. Caledonian Rail. Co. (1902), 4 F. (Ct. of Sess.) 880; Gilligan v. Robb, [1910] S. C. 856. In Victorian Railways Commissioners v. Coultas (1888), 13 App. Cas. 222, where the respondent had suffered a shock from narrowly escaping a collision at a level crossing, owing to the negligence of the appellants' servant, the Privy Council held that damages could not be recovered if they arose from mere terror unaccompanied by any physical injury, but occasioning a nervous or mental shock; but, as is pointed out in Dulieu v. White & Sons, supra, by KENNEDY, J., at p. 678, that decision confuses mental with nervous shock, and the decision itself has been frequently disapproved; see Pugh v. London, Brighton and South Coast Rail. Co., [1896] 2 Q. B. 248, per Lord ESHER, M.R., at p. 250; Bell v. Great Northern Rail. Co. of Ireland, supra, per PALLES, C.B., at p. 439; Wilkinson v. Downton, supra, per WRIGHT, J., at p. 60.

(e) As to the necessity of the apprehension being reasonable, see Cooper v. Caledonian Rail. Co., supra; Holmes v. Mather (1875), L. R. 10 Exch. 261 (whether the apprehension was reasonable or not is a question of fact).

(f) Bell v. Great Northern Rail. Co. of Ireland, supra; Cooper v. Caledonian Rail. Co., supra; Gilligan v. Robb, supra.

(g) Wilkinson v. Downton, supra.

(h) Smith v. Johnson & Co. (1897), not reported, but cited in Wilkinson v. Downton, supra, per WRIGHT, J., at p. 61; Dulieu v. White & Sons, supra, per KENNEDY, J., at p. 675.

(i) Dulieu v. White & Sons, supra, per KENNEDY, J., at p. 677.

(k) Jones v. Boyce (1816), 1 Stark. 493; Harris v. Mobbs (1878), 3 Ex. D. 268; Wilkins v. Day (1883), 12 Q. B. D. 110; see The Bywell Castle (1879), 4 P. D. 219, C. A., per JAMES, L.J., at p. 223. The damage which to the defendant's negligence, come to some harm (l) or, while frenzied, are enabled, by reason of some third person's negligence, to do or suffer injury, the loss sustained is recoverable from the defendant (m). SECT. 2.

Remoteness of Damage.

814. Damage caused to a plaintiff by the collection and conduct of a crowd due to some act of the defendant is too remote, unless such collection and conduct is a natural and probable consequence of the defendant's act (n). The collection of a crowd has been held to be the natural and probable consequence of a boxing contest (o) or of a pigeon-shooting match conducted near a highway (p). Damage resulting from a crowd.

815. The mere fact that there is difficulty in arriving at or assessing damages is not a ground for holding that they are too remote (q), although it is otherwise when they are so entirely dependent on chance as to be altogether incapable of assessment (r). Difficulty in assessment.

816. Where the person whose negligent act causes an injury is insured, and, on an action being brought, the insurance company under the terms of its policy defends the action in his name but without his consent, the company, if it is unsuccessful, is liable for the costs of the action (s). Liability of insurer of defendant.

immediately results from an act may really be the result not of the act but of a fright, which rendered the act involuntary, and, therefore, ought to be regarded as the direct and immediate cause of the damage (Wilkinson v. Downton, [1897] 2 Q. B. 57, per WRIGHT, J., at p. 61).

(l) Harris v. Mobbs (1878), 3 Ex. D. 268. In the case of a claim for damage to an animal through fright, the damage will almost necessarily result from a course of action induced by the fright.

(m) Sneesby v. Lancashire and Yorkshire Rail. Co. (1875), 1 Q. B. D. 42, C. A. (cattle, frightened owing to defendant's negligence, got out of control and broke through a defective fence, and so on to the defendants' main line, where some were killed); Hill v. New River Co. (1868), 9 B. & S. 303 (horses, frightened by a spout of water in the roadway caused by the defendant's negligence, fell into an unfenced excavation made by other persons); and see title ANIMALS, Vol. I., pp. 363 et seq.

(n) Scott's Trustees v. Moss (1889), 27 Sc. L. R. 30; Beatty v. Gillbanks (1882), 9 Q. B. D. 308; compare O'Kelly v. Harvey (1883), 14 L. R. Ir. 105, C. A.; Guille v. Swan (1822) (N. Y.), 19 Johnson, 381. In Scholes v. North London Rail. Co. (1870), 21 L. T. 835, damage, done by a crowd which assembled in the plaintiff's garden to see an engine which had fallen there owing to the defendant's negligence, was held too remote; and see notes (o), (p), infra.

(o) Bellamy v. Wells (1890), 60 L. J. (CH.) 156; compare Barber v. Penley, [1893] 2 Ch. 447; Betterton's Case (1695), Holt (K. B.), 538; R. v. Carlile (1834), 6 C. & P. 636.

(p) R. v. Moore (1832), 3 B. & Ad. 184 (where the defendant objected to the presence of such persons); followed in Walker v. Brewster (1867), L. R. 5 Eq. 25; Bellamy v. Wells, supra; and Barber v. Penley, supra.

(q) Chaplin v. Hicks, [1911] 2 K. B. 786, C. A. In Watson v. Ambergate, Nottingham and Bristol Rail. Co. (1851), 15 Jur. 448, the point was not decided as to whether or not damages were recoverable for the loss of the chance of winning a prize when the article had been lost owing to the defendant's negligence; compare Sapwell v. Bass, [1910] 2 K. B. 486.

(r) Sapwell v. Bass, supra, at p. 493.

(s) Allen v. London Guarantee and Accident Co. (1912), 28 T. L. R. 254.

SECT. 2. Where an action is properly brought against two defendants for negligence and damages are recovered against one, but not against the other, the costs given to the successful defendant may be included in those awarded to the plaintiff against the unsuccessful defendant (t).

Remoteness
of Damage.

Costs.

(t) Bullock v. London General Omnibus Co., [1907] 1 K. B. 264, C. A. ; see Sargeant v. London General Omnibus Co. (1912), Times, 19th March.

NEGOTIABLE INSTRUMENTS.

See BANKERS AND BANKING ; BILLS OF EXCHANGE, PROMISSORY NOTES, AND NEGOTIABLE INSTRUMENTS.

NEUTRALITY.

See CRIMINAL LAW AND PROCEDURE ; PRIZE LAW AND JURISDICTION ; SHIPPING AND NAVIGATION.

NEW TRIAL.

See COUNTY COURTS ; MAYOR'S COURT, LONDON ; PRACTICE AND PROCEDURE.

NEWSPAPERS.

See COPYRIGHT AND LITERARY PROPERTY; CRIMINAL LAW AND PROCEDURE; LIBEL AND SLANDER; PRESS AND PRINTING.

NEXT FRIEND.

See INFANTS AND CHILDREN.

NEXT OF KIN.

See DESCENT AND DISTRIBUTION; EXECUTORS AND ADMINIS-TRATORS; WILLS.

NEXT PRESENTATION.

See ECCLESIASTICAL LAW.

NIGHT.

See CRIMINAL LAW AND PROCEDURE; TIME.

NISI PRIUS.

See COURTS; PRACTICE AND PROCEDURE.

NOBILITY.

See PEERAGES AND DIGNITIES.

NOLLE PROSEQUI.

See CRIMINAL LAW AND PROCEDURE.

NOMINATION.

See ECCLESIASTICAL LAW; ELECTIONS.

NON COMPOS MENTIS.

See LUNATICS AND PERSONS OF UNSOUND MIND.

NONCONFORMISTS.

See ECCLESIASTICAL LAW; HUSBAND AND WIFE.

NONFEASANCE.

See NEGLIGENCE; TORT.

NONSUIT.

See COUNTY COURTS; PRACTICE AND PROCEDURE.

NOTARIES.

	PAGE
SECT. 1. DEFINITION AND HISTORY - - - - -	493
SECT. 2. CLASSIFICATION AND APPOINTMENT - - - - -	494
Sub-sect. 1. Ecclesiastical Notaries - - - - -	494
Sub-sect. 2. General Notaries - - - - -	494
Sub-sect. 3. District Notaries - - - - -	496
Sub-sect. 4. Notaries practising in British Dominions beyond the Seas - - - - -	497
Sub-sect. 5. British Diplomats and Consuls acting as Notaries in Foreign Countries - - - - -	497
SECT. 3. STAMP DUTIES AND FEES - - - - -	497
SECT. 4. REFUSAL TO APPOINT - - - - -	498
SECT. 5. STRIKING NOTARY OFF THE ROLL - - - - -	498
SECT. 6. FUNCTIONS - - - - -	499
SECT. 7. ADMISSIBILITY IN EVIDENCE OF NOTARIAL ACTS - - - - -	500

For Solicitors - - - - See title SOLICITORS.

SECT. 1.—Definition and History.

817. A notary public is a duly appointed officer whose public office it is, amongst other matters, to draw, attest, or certify, usually under his official seal, deeds and other documents, including conveyances of real and personal property, and powers of attorney relating to real and personal property situate in England, the British dominions beyond the seas, or in foreign countries; to note or certify transactions relating to negotiable instruments; to prepare wills or other testamentary documents; to draw up protests or other formal papers relating to occurrences on the voyages of ships and their navigation as well as the carriage of cargo in ships.

Definition of notary and his office.

His office, which is one of great antiquity (a), is recognised in all

(a) In ancient times notaries recorded matters of judicial importance as well as important private transactions or events where an officially authenticated record or a document drawn up with professional skill or knowledge was necessary or advisable. An interesting history of the origin and development of the office of notary will be found in Brooke, Office and Practice of a Notary of England, 6th ed., by Cranstoun. In later times up to the reign of Henry VIII., the Popes of Rome issued faculties which had force in England. Under such faculties, notaries were appointed and authorised to practise. In 1534, by stat. (1533-4) 25 Hen. 8, c. 21, s. 22, the right of the Pope to exercise such jurisdiction was formally ended, and any person applying to the Court of Rome for a faculty became liable to the penalty specified in the Act of Provisions and Præmunire, 1393-4 (16 Ric. 2, c. 5). Since 1534 all faculties appointing

SECT. 1.
Definition
and History.

civilised countries, and by the law of nations his acts have credit everywhere (b).

SECT. 2.—Classification and Appointment.

SUB-SECT. 1.—Ecclesiastical Notaries.

Who may be appointed.

818. The office of ecclesiastical notary is held by the registrars of the ecclesiastical courts (c). The secretary of a bishop, or any person necessarily created a notary in order to hold any ecclesiastical office, may be appointed as an ecclesiastical notary. An ecclesiastical notary need not serve an apprenticeship, but is appointed if personally fit as a matter of course. He must not allow his name to be used improperly (d); nor can he have or retain an apprentice to serve him (e).

Powers and liabilities.

819. The provisions of the statutes hereinafter referred to (f) relating to apprenticeship and other matters do not apply to ecclesiastical notaries except as to penalties for allowing the name of the ecclesiastical notary to be used improperly (g).

By whom appointed.

820. Ecclesiastical notaries are appointed by the Master of the Faculties (h).

SUB-SECT. 2.—General Notaries.

General
notaries.

821. A general notary is a notary holding a faculty (i) entitling him to practise in all places in England, including the area under the jurisdiction of the ancient Company of Scriveners of the City of London (k), or entitling him to practise in all places in England outside that area.

Appointment.

822. General notaries are appointed pursuant to statute (l).

notaries to practise in England have, under the provisions of the above-mentioned stat. (1533-4) 25 Hen. 8, c. 21, been issued by the Archbishop of Canterbury, whose chief officer is known as the Master of the Faculties. He presides in the Court of Faculties, and exercises jurisdiction over the appointment of notaries (see the text, infra, and pp. 496, 497, post), and their removal (see p. 498, post) from the roll of notaries. The stat. (1533-4) 25 Hen. 8, c. 21, was repealed by stat. (1554) 1 & 2 Ph. & Mar. c. 8, s. 10; but revived by stat. (1558) 1 Eliz. c. 1, s. 8. See also Burn, Ecclesiastical Law, Vol. III., p. 2, and title ECCLESIASTICAL LAW, Vol. XI., p. 510.

(b) Hutcheon v. Mannington (1802), 6 Ves. 823, per Lord ELDON, L.C., at p. 824; and see note (m), p. 501, post.

(c) There are few ecclesiastical notaries besides the registrars of ecclesiastical courts.

(d) Public Notaries Act, 1801 (41 Geo. 3, c. 79), s. 14; Norwich Notaries, Eaton v. Watson, Same v. Hansell, [1904] W. N. 24.

(e) Public Notaries Act, 1843 (6 & 7 Vict. c. 90), s. 2.

(f) See p. 496, post.

(g) Public Notaries Act, 1801 (41 Geo. 3, c. 79), s. 14; Norwich Notaries, Eaton v. Watson, Same v. Hansell, supra.

(h) See note (a), p. 493, ante; title ECCLESIASTICAL LAW, Vol. XI., p. 510.

(i) See pp. 495, 496, 497, post; title ECCLESIASTICAL LAW, Vol. XI., pp. 510, note (l), 540 et seq.

(k) Public Notaries Act, 1801 (41 Geo. 3, c. 79), s. 13; and see title COMPANIES, Vol. V., p. 750. The jurisdiction extends over the City of London, the liberties of Westminster, the borough of Southwark and the area within a circuit of three miles of the City (ibid.).

(l) Public Notaries Acts, 1801 (41 Geo. 3, c. 79); and 1843 (6 & 7 Vict. c. 90).

The faculty or instrument by which a notary is certified of his appointment and authorised to practise issues from the Court of Faculties (m), and is countersigned by the registrar. This faculty is granted subject to the express provision that it is registered and subscribed by the Clerk of the Crown in Chancery (n) before it is available (o).

SECT. 2.
Classification and Appointment.

Grant and registration of faculty.
Qualification
to practise.
Admission.

Qualification
for admission.
Service.

823. No person in England is permitted to act as a public notary, or do any notarial act, unless he has been duly sworn, admitted and enrolled in the court wherein notaries have been accustomedly sworn, admitted and enrolled (p).

In order to be thus admitted the applicant must previously have been bound by a contract in writing or by indenture of apprenticeship to serve as clerk and apprentice to a practising notary for not less than seven years (q), reduced to five years if the applicant desires to practise only outside the area under the jurisdiction of the Scriveners' Company (r).

824. Provision is made for transferring the apprentice in the event of the death of the notary to whom he is apprenticed and in other events (s).

Transfer of apprentice.

825. Before the apprentice can be enrolled as a notary, he must make and file an affidavit of due service (t), which must be service in the proper business of a notary (u). If, however, the master is a solicitor as well as a notary, the apprentice will not be disqualified by having served a clerkship to his master or his partner as a solicitor at the same time as that of his apprenticeship (a); provided such apprentice does not intend to practise within the area under the jurisdiction of the Scriveners' Company.

Affidavit of service.

826. If the apprentice applies for a faculty enabling him to practise within the area under the jurisdiction of the Scriveners'

Qualification
to practise within area of Scriveners'
Company.

(m) Public Notaries Acts, 1801 (41 Geo. 3, c. 79), ss. 3, 10; and 1843 (6 & 7 Vict. c. 90), ss. 7, 8.

(n) See title CONSTITUTIONAL LAW, Vol. VI., p. 330; Vol. VII., pp. 11 et seq.

(o) Stat. (1533-4) 25 Hen. 8, c. 21, s. 4.

(p) Public Notaries Act, 1801 (41 Geo. 3, c. 79), s. 1.

(q) Ibid., s. 2. None of the provisions as to apprenticeship (see the text, infra) apply to ecclesiastical notaries; see p. 494, ante.

(r) Public Notaries Act, 1843 (6 & 7 Vict. c. 90), ss. 3, 6. Within three months from the date of the contract of apprenticeship an affidavit, stating the date and parties thereto, must be made by one of the subscribing witnesses of the execution of the contract, and must be filed by the Master of the Faculties or his surrogate, who makes memorandum on the contract of apprenticeship of the date of filing of such affidavit (Public Notaries Act, 1801 (41 Geo. 3, c. 79), ss. 2, 4). The affidavit must be produced and read before the applicant is enrolled as a public notary (ibid., s. 3). The officer filing the affidavit is, at a fee of 5s., to enter the substance of the facts in a book, which is open to inspection on payment of a fee of 1s. (ibid., s. 5).

(s) Ibid., s. 8.

(t) Ibid., s. 9.

(u) R. v. Scriveners' Co. (1830), 10 B. & C. 511; R. v. Scriveners' Co. (1842), 3 Q. B. 939, Ex. Ch., as reported sub nom. Scriveners' Co. v. R., 12 L. J. (Ex.) 492.

(a) Public Notaries Act, 1843 (6 & 7 Vict. c. 90), s. 1.

SECT. 2.
Classification and Appointment.

Powers of Master of Faculties as to qualification.

Company (b), he must take up the freedom of the Scriveners' Company according to its rules, and obtain a certificate of the clerk of the company to that effect and produce it to the Master of the Faculties, before such a faculty can issue (c).

827. In respect of the appointment of notaries admitted to practise outside the area under the jurisdiction of the Scriveners' Company, either in England or elsewhere in the British Dominions, the Master of the Faculties has power to make rules requiring evidence as to the competency of the applicant and may admit or reject an applicant at his discretion (d).

SUB-SECT. 3.—District Notaries.

District
notaries.

828. A district notary is a notary admitted to practise in a particular district. A solicitor who resides more than ten miles from the Royal Exchange, London, may be admitted by the Master of the Faculties to practise as a district notary outside the City of London, the liberties of Westminster, the borough of Southwark and outside a circuit of ten miles from the Royal Exchange, London (e). The faculty describes the area within which the solicitor is authorised to practise as a notary (f).

Qualification.

829. No service as an apprentice is required previous to the issue of the faculty. The applicant presents a memorial to the Master of the Faculties and produces a certificate of personal fitness signed by two notaries. His application must be supported by bankers, merchants and others residing in the district.

Appointment.

Caveat.

A caveat may be entered, if the application is opposed by other notaries practising in the district, to whom, if two or more in number, notice of the application must be given by the applicant.

Grounds of appointment.

The Master of the Faculties must be satisfied of the fitness of the applicant, and that for the due convenience and accommodation of the public the number of notaries in the district in question is insufficient (g).

(b) As to the limits of this area, see note (k), p. 494, ante.

(c) Public Notaries Act, 1801 (41 Geo. 3, c. 79), s. 13. Under the powers of their charter and according to their rules, the Scriveners' Company require a person, taking up the freedom of the company for the purpose of practising as a notary in the area under their jurisdiction, to pass an examination in (amongst other subjects) mercantile law, the law of real and personal property, the practice of a notary's office, as well as in the language of one of the foreign European States.

(d) Public Notaries Act, 1843 (6 & 7 Vict. c. 90), s. 4.

(e) Public Notaries Act, 1833 (3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 70), ss. 2, 3.

(f) Ibid., ss. 1, 2; see the observations of the Master of the Faculties in Bailleau v. Victorian Society of Notaries, [1904] P. 180, 183; Graham v. Smart (1863), 9 Jur. (N. S.) 387; Birmingham Notaries, Tunbridge v. Mathews, Colmore v. Same, Clarke v. Same, [1903] W. N. 158; Norwich Notaries, Eaton v. Watson, Same v. Hansell, [1904] W. N. 24.

(g) Public Notaries Act, 1833 (3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 70), ss. 1, 2; Graham v. Smart, supra; Birmingham Notaries, Tunbridge v. Mathews, Colmore v. Same, Clarke v. Same, supra; Norwich Notaries, Eaton v. Watson, Same v. Hansell, supra; Rules of the Court of Faculties, dated 19th November, 1833; Rules of the Court of Faculties, dated 23rd February, 1838 (see Brooke, Office and Practice of a Notary of England, 6th ed., by Cranstoun, pp. 54 et seq.). There is a rule of practice that the Court of Faculties will appoint a second

SUB-SECT. 4.—Notaries practising in British Dominions beyond the Seas.

830. The Master of the Faculties has power to issue a faculty to any person to practise as a notary in the British Dominions or Colonies beyond the seas (h).

No service of apprenticeship is required previous to the issue of the faculty, nor need the applicant for such a faculty be a solicitor; but the applicant must satisfy the Master of the Faculties that he is competent to practise as a notary. In issuing the faculty the Master of the Faculties is guided mainly by considerations of public convenience (i).

SECT. 2.

Classification and Appointment.

Notaries in British Dominions and Colonies. Appointment.

SUB-SECT. 5.—British Diplomats and Consuls acting as Notaries in Foreign Countries.

831. Every British ambassador (j), envoy, minister, chargé d'affaires, and secretary of embassy or legation in any foreign country, and every British consul-general (j), consul, vice-consul, acting consul, pro-consul, and consular agent, acting consul-general, acting vice-consul, and acting consular agent, may do any notarial act which any notary public may do within the United Kingdom, and every oath, affidavit, and notarial act done by or before such person is as effectual as if done by or before any lawful authority in any part of the United Kingdom (k).

Diplomatic and consular officers acting as notaries.

SECT. 3.—Stamp Duties and Fees.

832. Stamp duties are payable in respect of (1) articles of apprenticeship to a notary, (2) a faculty admitting a notary to practise in England, (3) the annual certificate which a notary practising in England must take out, and (4) every notarial act including a protest of a bill of exchange or promissory note (l).

Stamp duties and fees.

notary in a town in which only one notary is practising (Re Rochdale Notaries, Hudson v. Bouflower, [1910] W. N. 228).

(h) Stat. (1533-4) 25 Hen. 8, c. 21, s. 2.

(i) Public Notaries Act, 1843 (6 & 7 Vict. c. 90), s. 4; Baillieu v. Victorian Society of Notaries, [1904] P. 180; Fay v. Society of Notaries for the State of Victoria, [1909] P. 15.

(j) As to these officials, see title CONFLICT OF LAWS, Vol. VI., pp. 428, 434.

(k) Commissioners for Oaths Acts, 1889 (52 & 53 Vict. c. 10), s. 6; 1891 (54 & 55 Vict. c. 50), s. 2. In order that any document may be admitted in evidence, it is not necessary to prove the seal or signature of such a person or his official character (ibid.); and see title EVIDENCE, Vol. XIII., pp. 497, 628.

(l) Stamp Act, 1891 (54 & 55 Vict. c. 39), ss. 25, 43, 44, 47, and Sched., sub nom. Apprenticeship; Faculty; Certificate; Notarial Act. If the articles of apprenticeship are executed out of London the Master of the Faculties issues a summons to the surrogate of the place where the articles are stated to have been executed, and the execution of the articles is there sworn to; see note (r), p. 495, ante. The affidavit and articles are returned to the Court of Faculties. The stamp duty on the instrument of apprenticeship is 2s. 6d. The stamp duty payable on every faculty admitting a notary to practise in England is £30. The stamp duty on a certificate is £9 if the notary practises within ten miles of the General Post Office, and £6 if he practises only beyond such limit, but only one-half of the fees is payable during the first three years after admission, enrolment, or of practice. The stamp duty on a notarial act is 1s., except in the case of a protest of a bill of exchange or promissory note where the duty on the bill or note does not exceed 1s., in which case the duty on the protest is the same as on the bill or note (Stamp Act, 1891 (54 & 55 Vict. c. 39), Sched.; see Eglington's (Earl) Trustees v. Inland Revenue Commissioners (1865), 3 H. & C. 871); the duty may be denoted by an adhesive-stamp (Stamp Act, 1891 (54 & 55 Vict. c. 39), s. 90).

SECT. 3.

Stamp Duties and Fees.

Special
provisions.
Position of apprentice.

A solicitor who is also a notary is only liable to take out one certificate (m), but the certificate must be registered at the office of the Master of the Faculties (n). A notary who practises within the jurisdiction of the Scriveners' Company must take up the freedom of that company (o).

833. The position of an apprentice is not affected by the omission of the notary to renew his certificate (p).

SECT. 4.—Refusal to Appoint.

Refusal to appoint.

834. If the grant of the faculty is refused by the Master of the Faculties complaint may be made to the Lord Chancellor, who may (by writ) require that the reason for such refusal should be signified to the Crown in the Court of Chancery, and provision is made for allowing such reason or for granting a faculty if the reason is held to be insufficient (q).

SECT. 5.—Striking Notary off the Roll.

Striking
notary off
the roll.

835. The Master of the Faculties has jurisdiction to strike a notary off the roll of notaries for misconduct as a notary or for other good cause (r). If there is any defect in the apprenticeship articles, or their registration, or in the service or admission, application to strike the notary off the roll must be made within twelve months from his enrolment, unless there has been fraud, when the application can be made at any time (s).

Any notary allowing his name to be used for the benefit of an unqualified person may be struck off the roll (t).

Any solicitor admitted as a notary to practise in a particular district may be struck off the roll of notaries if he practises

(m) Stamp Act, 1891 (54 & 55 Vict. c. 39), s. 45.

(n) For this a fee of 1s. is payable. The certificate should be taken out on the 16th November in each year. One month's grace is, however, allowed, so that if the certificate is taken out within such month it relates back to the 16th November and bears that date (Stamp Act, 1891 (54 & 55 Vict. c. 39), s. 48 (b)). Charges for work done by a notary up to the 16th December are recoverable if the certificate is taken out on or before that date. But if the certificate is taken out after that date, charges for work done during the month of grace cannot be recovered at law (ibid., s. 43); compare Re Sweeting, [1898] 1 Ch. 268; Kent v. Ward (1894), 70 L. T. 612, C. A.

(o) Public Notaries Act, 1801 (41 Geo. 3, c. 79), s. 13. The fees payable to the Scriveners' Company for admission by servitude or patrimony are £6 16s. 6d. (including a duty of £1), or for admission by redemption £14 14s. (including a stamp duty of £3).

(p) Solicitors (Clerks) Act, 1844 (7 & 8 Vict. c. 86), s. 4.

(q) Stat. (1533-4) 25 Hen. 8, c. 21, s. 11; Public Notaries Act, 1843 (6 & 7 Vict. c. 90), s. 5.

(r) Re Champion (Charles Noble), [1906] P. 86; Re Prior, Ex parte Incorporated Society of Provincial Notaries Public of England and Wales, [1908] W. N. 193; Re Terrill, Ex parte Incorporated Society of Provincial Notaries Public of England and Wales, [1908] W. N. 194. Where a solicitor who is also a notary has been struck off the roll of solicitors (see title SOLICITORS), the Court of Faculties will follow the finding of fact by the Divisional Court, but will admit proof of further facts, if any, since that decision (Re a Notary Public (1908), Times, 19th December).

(s) Public Notaries Act, 1843 (6 & 7 Vict. c. 90), s. 9.

(t) Public Notaries Act, 1801 (41 Geo. 3, c. 79), s. 10.

outside the district mentioned in the faculty or within the city of London, the liberties of Westminster, the borough of Southwark, or a circuit of ten miles from the Royal Exchange in London (u).

SECT. 5.
Striking Notary off
the Roll.

SECT. 6.—Functions.

836. A notary is entitled to prepare deeds, agreements and wills relating to real and personal property situate in England; to prepare deeds and other documents intended to take effect in the British dominions beyond the seas and in foreign States in such form and language as may conform to the law of the place where such deed or document is intended to operate; to verify, authenticate, and attest by his official seal the execution of deeds or other documents, contracts, and powers of attorney; to prepare bottomry and respondentia bonds, average agreements and other mercantile documents (a); and to translate and verify the translation of documents in any foreign language into the English language, and vice versâ.

Preparation of legal documents.

Mercantile
documents.
Translations.

837. A notary is frequently employed to present an inland or foreign bill of exchange for acceptance or payment. The clerk of the notary usually presents the bill.

Presentation of bills of exchange.

If the bill is not accepted or paid, the notary "notes" the bill. Subsequently the notary amplifies, or, as it is commonly called, "extends" the noting by preparing and signing the protest (b).

"Noting."

838. Another important branch of a notary's practice deals with the noting and drawing up of "ships' protests" (c).

Ships' protests.

The object of the protest is to exonerate the master and mariners or person making the protest from any charge of improper, illegal, or negligent conduct, when damage or injury has happened to a ship or her cargo during a voyage, and to record formally any facts or circumstances relating to disputes or other matters which it is thought desirable to authenticate formally in order to exculpate the master or mariners from any charge or complaint of illegal or improper action.

Object of protest.

A "note" of the protest is made in a book of the notary, setting forth the date, the name of the ship, the name of her master, and the voyage, and protests against the perils of the seas causing damage. The note may be amplified or "extended." The document, which is under the seal of the notary, sets out a full statement of the material facts relating to any accident, collision, disaster, or difficulty either to the ship or her cargo.

Noting.

Protests are frequently drawn up which deal with the conduct of any person having business relations or duties in connection with the ship or her cargo for the purpose of putting on record in an authentic form all material facts; and they are laid before

Protest.

Purposes
for which protests
prepared.

(u) Public Notaries Act, 1833 (3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 70), s. 4.

(a) As to which see title SHIPPING AND NAVIGATION.

(b) As to noting and protesting bills, see title BILLS OF EXCHANGE, PROMISSORY NOTES, AND NEGOTIABLE INSTRUMENTS, Vol. II., pp. 535—539. For forms of protests and notarial act of honour, see Encyclopædia of Forms and Precedents, Vol. II., pp. 521—523.

(c) As to shipping generally, see title SHIPPING AND NAVIGATION.

SECT. 6.
Functions.

underwriters, average adjusters, and merchants for the purpose of adjusting losses on policies of marine insurance and settling disputes between shipowner and cargo-owner, and for other business purposes.

Drawing bonds for payment.

839. In connection with the raising of money by foreign States or corporations on the security of an issue of numbered bonds, which are redeemable at certain dates fixed at the time of issue by drawings, a notary is frequently employed to superintend the drawing by lot of the bond or bonds to be redeemed. He certifies the numbers of the bonds drawn.

Administering oaths and taking declarations.

840. From a very early period notaries have exercised, and still exercise, the right of administering oaths, and they are in the daily practice of preparing and taking affidavits for various purposes. They are also authorised to take declarations in lieu of oaths (d). In particular they take declarations and affidavits relating to stamp and other duties (e). They may also take declarations in actions pending in any of the British dominions beyond the seas relating to a debt, where one of the parties is resident in Great Britain or Ireland, or relating to real property situate in such dominions (f).

A notary may take a declaration by the attesting witness of a will or deed, or other competent person to prove the due execution thereof (g). In certain cases it is the practice of the Bank of England to accept a declaration made before a notary (h).

SECT. 7.—Admissibility in Evidence of Notarial Acts.

Proof by production of document under seal of notary.

841. The mere production of a certificate or protest, under the hand or seal of an English notary (i), relating to matters taking place or occurring in England, is not of itself in an English court of justice evidence of the matters set forth in the certificate or protest; thus, the production of a protest under the seal of a notary is not of itself admissible to prove that a foreign bill has been presented for payment in England (k). To prove such presentation the notary or his clerk, who actually made the presentation, must be called, but if the notary or the clerk has died, the entries as to the presentment and dishonour of the bill made by such notary or

English
notaries.

(d) Statutory Declarations Act, 1835 (5 & 6 Will. 4, c. 62), s. 18.

(e) Stamp Duties Management Act, 1891 (54 & 55 Vict. c. 38), s. 24; Revenue Act, 1898 (61 & 62 Vict. c. 46), ss. 7 (6).

(f) Statutory Declarations Act, 1835 (5 & 6 Will. 4, c. 62), ss. 15, 18.

(g) Ibid., ss. 16, 18. For form of certificate of notary to document for use abroad, see Encyclopædia of Forms and Precedents, Vol. I., p. 365.

(h) For example, the bank, pursuant to the Statutory Declarations Act, 1835 (5 & 6 Will. 4, c. 62), s. 14, accepts a declaration so made in lieu of an affidavit to prove the identity or the death of a proprietor of stock, or relating to the loss, mutilation, or defacement of a bank-note.

(i) A notarial act means "either the act of authenticating or certifying a document, indorsement, certificate, or entry, by a written instrument under the signature or official seal of a notary; or an instrument, attestation or certificate, made or signed by a notary in the execution of the duties of his office". (Brooke, Office and Practice of a Notary of England, 6th ed., p. 61).

(k) Chesmer v. Noyes (1815), 4 Camp. 129; Nye v. Macdonald (1870), L. R. 3 P. C. 331, per Lord CAIRNS, at p. 343; and see title EVIDENCE, Vol. XIII., p. 497.

clerk are admissible to prove the presentment and dishonour of the bill (l).

842. Greater weight is given to the protests and notarial acts of foreign notaries and of notaries practising in the British dominions beyond the seas (m); thus the dishonour of a foreign bill presented abroad may be proved by producing a protest under the seal of a notary (n).

A notary public in Scotland, Ireland, or the Channel Islands, or in any of the British dominions beyond the seas has power to swear and take examinations, affidavits, declarations, affirmations, and attestations of honour in all actions or matters depending in the Supreme Court, as well as acknowledgments required to enrol any deed in the Central Office, and judicial notice is taken of the seal or signature of the notary public (o).

SECT. 7.
Admissibility in Evidence of Notarial Acts.

Foreign
notaries.

(l) Sutton v. Gregory (1797), Peake, Add. Cas. 150; Poole v. Dicus (1835), 1 Bing (N. C.) 649; see title EVIDENCE, Vol. XIII., p. 465.

(m) Judicial notice is taken of the seal of a notary verifying an affidavit sworn abroad (Cole v. Sherard (1855), 11 Exch. 482), or a power of attorney executed abroad (Hayward v. Stephens (1866), 36 L. J. (CH.) 135), or in the colonies (Re Goss's Estate (1866), 12 Jur. (N. S.) 595; Hutcheon v. Mannington (1802), 6 Ves. 823; Ex parte Worsley (1798), 2 Hy. Bl. 275; Omealy v. Newell (1807), 8 East, 364), but when an affidavit is taken abroad before a notary authorised to administer oaths, then his signature must be verified (Re Davis's Trusts (1869), L. R. 8 Eq. 98); but the rule has been relaxed where the fund was small; see Mayne v. Butter (1864), 13 W. R. 128; compare Brooke v. Brooke (1881), 17 Ch. D. 833; and see cases cited in title EVIDENCE, Vol. XIII., pp. 497, 628. As to colonial notaries, see also title EVIDENCE, Vol. XIII., p. 497.

(n) Chesmer v. Noyes (1815), 4 Camp. 129.

(o) R. S. C., Ord. 38, r. 6; Yearly Practice of the Supreme Court, 1912, p. 534. Where several pieces of paper appear to constitute one document which is notarially verified it is not essential that each separate piece should be initialled (Hamel v. Panet (1876), 46 L. J. (P. C.) 5). See, further, title EVIDENCE, Vol. XIII., p. 496.

NOTARIAL

NOTICE, CONSTRUCTIVE.

See CHOSSES IN ACTION; EQUITY; FRAUDULENT AND VOIDABLE CONVEYANCES; MORTGAGE.

NOTICE OF DISHONOUR.

See BANKERS AND BANKING ; BILLS OF EXCHANGE, PROMISSORY NOTES AND NEGOTIABLE INSTRUMENTS ; GUARANTEE.

NOTICE TO QUIT.

See AGRICULTURE ; ALLOTMENTS ; LANDLORD AND TENANT.

NOVATION.

See BUILDING CONTRACTS, ENGINEERS, AND ARCHITECTS ; CONTRACT ; GUARANTEE.

NUISANCE.

	PAGE
PART I. DEFINITION AND CLASSIFICATION	505
SECT. 1. DEFINITION AND DESCRIPTION	505
SECT. 2. ESSENTIAL FACTORS	508
Sub-sect. 1. In General	508
Sub-sect. 2. Injuria or Wrongful Act	508
Sub-sect. 3. Loss or Damage Caused	510
SECT. 3. CLASSIFICATION	511
Sub-sect. 1. Common Law and Statutory Nuisances	511
Sub-sect. 2. Public and Private Nuisances	511
PART II. NUISANCES IN RESPECT OF PARTICULAR MATTERS	513
SECT. 1. ANIMALS	513
Sub-sect. 1. At Common Law	513
Sub-sect. 2. Statutory	513
SECT. 2. BRIDGES	514
SECT. 3. DANGEROUS PROPERTY	515
Sub-sect. 1. Public Nuisance	515
Sub-sect. 2. Private Nuisance	515
SECT. 4. ELECTRICAL SUPPLY	516
Sub-sect. 1. Escape of Electricity	516
Sub-sect. 2. Overhead Wires	516
SECT. 5. EXERCISE OF SPECIAL STATUTORY POWERS	516
Sub-sect. 1. In General	516
(i.) Rules of Construction	516
(ii.) Duties Absolute and Discretionary	518
(iii.) Scope of the Powers	518
Sub-sect. 2. Where the Exercise is Compulsory or the Nuisance Inevitable	519
Sub-sect. 3. Where the Exercise is Permissive only	520
Sub-sect. 4. Where the Mode of Exercise is Discretionary	523
SECT. 6. GASWORKS	523
SECT. 7. HIGHWAYS	524
SECT. 8. NEIGHBOURING OWNERS	524
Sub-sect. 1. In General	524
Sub-sect. 2. Injury to Property	525
(i.) In General	525
(ii.) Ordinary User of Property	525
(iii.) Extraordinary User of Property	527
(iv.) User of Property Fraught with Danger	530
(v.) Damage Caused by Trees	530

PART II. NUISANCES IN RESPECT OF PARTICULAR MATTERS—
continued.

SECT. 8. NEIGHBOURING OWNERS— continued.
Sub-sect. 3. Injury to Health and Comfort	530
(i.) In General	530
(ii.) Noise and Vibration	531
(iii.) Pollution of Air	532
(iv.) Interference with Prospect or View	534
SECT. 9. OFFENSIVE TRADES	534
SECT. 10. OPEN SPACES AND COMMONS	535
SECT. 11. PUBLIC HEALTH, COMFORT AND SAFETY	535
Sub-sect. 1. At Common Law	535
Sub-sect. 2. Under Statute	536
SECT. 12. PUBLIC MORALITY	541
SECT. 13. SMOKE	541
Sub-sect. 1. In General	541
Sub-sect. 2. Smoke from Fireplaces and Furnaces of Works etc.	542
(i.) Capable of Summary Abatement	542
(ii.) Other Statutory Provisions	544
Sub-sect. 3. On Railways	545
Sub-sect. 4. On Highways	546
(i.) Heavy Locomotives	546
(ii.) Light Locomotives	546
SECT. 14. WATERS AND WATERWAYS	546
PART III. REMEDIES	547
SECT. 1. IN GENERAL	547
SECT. 2. ABATEMENT—	547
Sub-sect. 1. By Private Persons	547
(i.) Where the Right Exists	547
(ii.) Extent of the Right	549
Sub-sect. 2. By Local Authorities	549
SECT. 3. CIVIL PROCEEDINGS	550
Sub-sect. 1. In General	550
Sub-sect. 2. Parties	550
(i.) Who may Sue	550
(a) Reversioners	550
(b) Occupiers and Persons in Possession	551
(ii.) When the Attorney-General is a Necessary Party	552
(iii.) Who is Liable to be Sued	554
(a) The Person Creating or Continuing a Nuisance	554
(b) Landlords and Tenants	556
(c) Principals and Contractors	557
(d) Principals, Agents and Servants	557
(e) Public Bodies	557
(f) Joint Nuisances	558
Sub-sect. 3. Damages	558
Sub-sect. 4. Injunction	560
Sub-sect. 5. Defences	562
(i.) What may be Defences	562
(ii.) What are not Defences	564

PART III. REMEDIES—continued.

SECT. 4. SUMMARY PROCEEDINGS	- - - - -	565
Sub-sect. 1. In General	- - - - -	565
Sub-sect. 2. In Case of Nuisances made Summarily Abatable	- - - - -	566
Sub-sect. 3. Indictment	- - - - -	574

For Animals, Damage by -	-	See title	ANIMALS.
Boundaries and Fences	-	„	BOUNDARIES, FENCES, AND PARTY WALLS.
Burial	- - -	„	BURIAL AND CREMATION.
Cremation	- - -	„	BURIAL AND CREMATION.
Criminal Nuisance	- - -	„	CRIMINAL LAW AND PROCEDURE.
Damages	- - -	„	DAMAGES.
Easements	- - -	„	EASEMENTS AND PROFITS À PRENDRE.
Explosives	- - -	„	EXPLOSIVES.
Extraordinary Traffic	- - -	„	HIGHWAYS, STREETS, AND BRIDGES.
Factories	- - -	„	FACTORIES AND SHOPS.
Ferries	- - -	„	FERRIES.
Fishing Rights	- - -	„	FISHERIES.
Food and Drugs	- - -	„	FOOD AND DRUGS.
Highways	- - -	„	HIGHWAYS, STREETS, AND BRIDGES.
Injunction	- - -	„	INJUNCTION.
Light and Air	- - -	„	EASEMENTS AND PROFITS À PRENDRE.
Local Government Authorities	- - -	„	LOCAL GOVERNMENT.
Man-traps and Spring Guns	- - -	„	ANIMALS; CRIMINAL LAW AND PROCEDURE.
Metropolitan Authorities	- - -	„	METROPOLIS.
Negligence	- - -	„	NEGLIGENCE.
Open Spaces	- - -	„	COMMONS AND RIGHTS OF COMMON; OPEN SPACES AND RECREATION GROUNDS.
Overhead Wires	- - -	„	ELECTRIC LIGHTING AND POWER; HIGHWAYS, STREETS, AND BRIDGES; TELEGRAPHS AND TELEPHONES.
Prescriptive Rights	- - -	„	EASEMENTS AND PROFITS À PRENDRE.
Public Health	- - -	„	PUBLIC HEALTH AND LOCAL ADMINISTRATION.
Sewers and Drains	- - -	„	SEWERS AND DRAINS.
Support, Right of	- - -	„	EASEMENTS AND PROFITS À PRENDRE; MINES, MINERALS, AND QUARRIES.
Tort, Principles of	- - -	„	TORT.
Trespass	- - -	„	TRESPASS.
Water, Rights in respect of	- - -	„	WATERS AND WATERCOURSES.
Water Supply	- - -	„	WATER SUPPLY.
Watercourses	- - -	„	WATERS AND WATERCOURSES.

Part I.—Definition and Classification.

SECT. 1.—Definition and Description.

843. The term “nuisance” as used in law is not a term Definition. capable of exact definition (a). It has been used with meanings

(a) Bamford v. Turnley (1862), 3 B. & S. 62, 66, Ex. Ch., per POLLOCK, C.B., at p. 79.

SECT. 1.
Definition
and Description.

varying in extent by the old writers (b), and even at the present day there is not entire agreement as to whether certain acts or omissions shall be classed as nuisances or whether they do not rather fall under other divisions of the law of tort (c).

Nuisances may be broadly divided into (1) acts not warranted by law or omissions to discharge a legal duty, which acts or omissions obstruct or cause inconvenience or damage to the public in the exercise of rights common to all His Majesty's subjects (d); (2) acts or omissions which have been designated or treated as nuisances by statute (e); (3) acts or omissions connected with the user or occupation of land which cause damage to another person in connection with the latter's user or occupation of land.

The first two divisions include acts and omissions of great variety, which hardly admit of classification. The third division also includes many acts or omissions of different kinds, such as (a) interference with the specific rights of property known to our law as easements or servitudes (f); (b) interference with natural rights to the use and enjoyment of property arising out of the management and use of neighbouring property (g); (c) user of property in such a way that injury is caused to individuals exercising rights as members of the public (h).

Nuisance and trespass
distinguished.

844. Some varieties of nuisance closely resemble acts which are classed under the head of trespass (i). The distinction between the two is that in trespass the immediate act itself which constitutes the offence occasions a prejudice or an injury to the sufferer's person or property or amounts to dispossession, whereas in the case of nuisance the act itself often does not directly affect the person or property of another, but the consequences of such act become or are prejudicial to his person or property (k).

(b) For definitions as given by the old writers, see Jacob's Law Dictionary, sub voce "Nuisance"; Bac. Abr., tit. "Nuisances"; 16 Vin. Abr., tit. "Nuisance"; 3 Bl. Com., p. 216. The last-named says: "Nuisance, nocumentum, or annoyance signifies anything that worketh hurt, inconvenience, or damage." This, however, is inadequate as a definition of legal nuisance, since there are many instances in which hurt, inconvenience, or damage is caused for which the sufferer has no remedy in law; see pp. 508, note (h), 511, post.

(c) For the general principles of tort, see title TORT.

(d) Stephen's Digest of the Criminal Law, 6th ed., p. 140. These are public nuisances. For examples, see pp. 511, 512, post.

(e) For examples, see pp. 536 et seq., 540, post.

(f) See titles EASEMENTS AND PROFITS À PRENDRE, Vol. XI., p. 330; HIGHWAYS, STREETS, AND BRIDGES, Vol. XVI., pp. 151 et seq.; WATERS AND WATERCOURSES; p. 534, post. Some authors do not class these under the head of nuisance, e.g., Salmond on the Law of Torts, 2nd ed., p. 228.

(g) For examples, see pp. 524 et seq., post.

(h) For examples, see pp. 515, 524, 532, 534, 541, post.

(i) See title TRESPASS.

(k) Reynolds v. Clarke (1725), 1 Stra. 634; Weeton v. Woodcock (1839), 5 M. & W. 587, 594; Haward v. Bankes (1760), 2 Burr. 1113; Kine v. Jolly, [1905] 1 Ch. 480, C. A., per VAUGHAN WILLIAMS, L.J., at pp. 487, 488; see also Scott v. Shepherd (1773), 2 Wm. Bl. 892; 1 Smith, L. C., 11th ed., 454, 455, 456, 459. The distinction has ceased to be of practical importance since the time when pleadings were highly technical. The following acts have been held to be trespass:—the actual pouring of water on to a neighbour's land (Preston v. Mercer (1656), Hard. 60, as explained in Reynolds v. Clarke, supra); injuring a person on the highway by throwing logs at him (Reynolds v. Clarke, supra). On

845. Again, some of the matters which are considered in this title are sometimes dealt with under the head of negligence (l) or under special heads (m). The distinction between nuisance and negligence, broadly speaking, is that in the acts or omissions which are classed as nuisances the duty on the part of the wrongdoer is an absolute one, and if damage be proved liability arises (n), while, in the omissions which fall within the sphere of negligence, liability always depends upon the failure to use the degree of care which was necessary to be used in the particular circumstances.

It is only by way of exception that considerations as to the existence of negligence enter within the sphere of the law of nuisance. The presence of negligence sometimes converts what would otherwise be a lawful act into an unlawful one, as in the case of negligence in the exercise of statutory powers (o), or where a person having exercised a legitimate right of user is warned of the existence of danger in a continuance of such exercise and ignores the warning (p), or where negligence in the otherwise legitimate user of a house causes a nuisance (q); or where prejudice is caused to a mine-owner by the negligent working of an adjoining mine (r).

846. It is the better view that the word "nuisance," when used in a covenant between lessee and lessor, should not be construed in the narrow sense of the word so as to exclude everything which does not amount to a nuisance in law, but that consideration must be given to the fact that the object of the covenant may be and usually is to obtain for the covenantee a protection more extensive than that which the law gives him apart from the covenant (s).

SECT. 1.
Definition
and Description.

Nuisance and negligence distinguished.

Effect of negligence on an otherwise lawful act.

"Nuisance" in covenants.

the other hand the following acts were held or considered to be nuisance and not trespass:—overburdening a floor whereby it fell and did damage to the goods of another in his cellar beneath (Edwards v. Halinder (1594), Poph. 46); diverting the water of a river by digging trenches in the defendant's own ground, (Levridge v. Hoskins (1709), 11 Mod. Rep. 257); fixing a spout to defendant's house whereby water was poured on to the plaintiff's land (Reynolds v. Clarke (1725), 1 Stra. 634); so working a mine as to cause water to flow through other mines into those of the plaintiff (Haward v. Bankes (1760), 2 Burr. 1113); logs left by one party to lie in the highway to the personal injury of another (Reynolds v. Clerk, supra, per FORTESCUE, J., at p. 635).

(l) See title NEGLIGENCE, pp. 357 et seq., ante.

(m) For example, injuries to neighbouring owners are sometimes classed in text-books apart from nuisances, e.g., Pollock, Law of Torts, 8th ed., p. 338.

(n) See pp. 522, 528, post.

(o) See p. 518, post.

(p) Vaughan v. Menlove (1837), 3 Bing. (N. C.) 468, where defendant ignored the warnings of neighbours that his haystack was steaming and might ignite, and it did so ignite, and damage was caused by the consequential fire to his neighbour's property: he was held liable. The action was based on negligence, but might also have been framed in nuisance under the principle sic utere tuo ut alienum non lædas; see p. 528, post.

(q) See Moy v. Stoop (1909), 25 T. L. R. 262, where it was held that there was no nuisance in the using of a house as a crèche, but that a nuisance might possibly be caused by the negligence of the nurses in allowing the babies to cry.

(r) Smith v. Kenrick (1849), 7 C. B. 515; and see other cases cited in note (s), p. 525, post.

(s) Tod-Heatly v. Benham (1888), 40 Ch. D. 80, C. A., per LINDLEY, L.J., at p. 95. In this case the decision of BACON, V.-C., in Harrison v. Good (1871), L. R. 11 Eq. 338, was questioned. In Harrison v. Good, supra, the covenant restrained purchasers of certain lots of land from doing anything which should

SECT. 1.

Definition
and Description.

"Nuisance"
in statutes.

847. The term "nuisance," when used in statutes, generally bears the strict meaning of legal nuisance. Its interpretation, however, is governed by the purpose and context of the statute itself (t). Thus, in the Public Health Acts (u) the word generally bears its ordinary legal meaning, but when it is used for the purpose of the provisions relating to methods of summary abatement or punishment of nuisances (a), it is limited in its application to such nuisances as affect the health and permanent comfort of the neighbourhood (b). Again, to constitute a nuisance for the purpose of these provisions, it is not necessary that the matter complained of should be injurious to health if it is substantially offensive to the senses (c).

SECT. 2.—*Essential Factors.*SUB-SECT. 1.—In General.

Essentials.

848. In order to constitute a nuisance in law it is essential that there should exist either actually or impliedly (1) injuria or wrongful act constituting or causing damage, and (2) damnum or damage, loss, or inconvenience. The latter alone—damnum absque injuria—gives no right of action (d).

SUB-SECT. 2.—Injuria or Wrongful Act.

Injuria as an essential.

849. In order to constitute an actionable nuisance the act complained of must be injuria, that is, the violation of some be a nuisance to the occupiers of adjoining property, and Bacon, V.-C., held that the establishment of a national school was not a nuisance within the meaning of the covenant, because it was not a nuisance in law, although it would probably cause "annoyance" in the popular sense of the term. In Tod-Heatly v. Benham (1888), 40 Ch. D. 80, C. A., the covenant was wider, including besides the expression "nuisance" the words "annoyance or grievance," and it was held that the latter words covered the establishment of a hospital for the treatment of outdoor patients suffering from diseases of the throat, nose, ear, skin, and eye, fistula and other diseases. See also Doe d. Bish v. Keeling (1813), 1 M. & S. 95 (the establishment of a school held a breach of covenant not to carry on a trade or business, this being an annoyance such as the covenant contemplated); Wickenden v. Webster (1856), 6 E. & B. 387 (to the same effect, under a similar covenant, extended to a prohibition against using premises for a purpose other than a private dwelling-house); Kemp v. Sober (1851), 15 Jur. 458 (the establishment of a school held a breach of covenant not to use premises for trade, business, or calling, or to the annoyance of other houses); Collins v. Slade, [1874] W. N. 205 (a covenant against "annoyance or damage" held to be broken by converting a part of a factory into a place of entertainment); Errington v. Birt (1911), 105 L. T. 373 (the user of premises as a fried fish shop held to be breach of covenant not to do anything on the premises which should or might be a nuisance, annoyance or inconvenience). As to covenants generally, see TITLES DEEDS AND OTHER INSTRUMENTS, Vol. X., pp. 441, 475—496; LANDLORD AND TENANT, Vol. XVIII., p. 517.

(t) As to the interpretation of statutes, see, generally, title STATUTES.

(u) Public Health Act, 1875 (38 & 39 Vict. c. 55); Public Health (London) Act, 1891 (54 & 55 Vict. c. 76); see p. 536, post.

(a) Public Health Act, 1875 (38 & 39 Vict. c. 55), ss. 91—111; Public Health (London) Act, 1891 (54 & 55 Vict. c. 76), ss. 1—15; as to which see pp. 537 et seq., post.

(b) Great Western Rail. Co. v. Bishop (1872), L. R. 7 Q. B. 550; see, further, p. 537, post.

(c) Bishop Auckland Local Board v. Bishop Auckland Iron Co. (1882), 10 Q. B. D. 138; see p. 537, post.

(d) See titles ACTION, Vol. I., p. 7; DAMAGES, Vol. X., p. 308; TORT; and see the text, infra.

right which another possesses. There must, therefore, be a right existing in the complainant, and a corresponding duty on the part of the alleged wrongdoer not to interfere with that right (e). Absence of the right or of the duty, or of the violation of the duty, prevents the act complained of from being actionable (f).

SECT. 2.
Essential
Factors.

850. The act or omission causing or constituting an alleged nuisance is unlawful per se when, apart from its consequences, it is of itself a violation of statutory provisions or of private common law rights. Act wrongful per se.

In such cases the law presumes damage to exist (g). This presumption is based, in the case of private nuisances, on the ground that, by a continuance of the illegal act, a wrongdoer might be able to gain a right to continue it (h). In the case of public nuisances the presumption cannot be based upon this ground, because no prescriptive right to commit a public nuisance can be obtained (i), but it is the duty of the Attorney-General to protect the public against an illegal act of a public nature, and for this purpose it is not necessary to prove actual or prospective damage (k). Presumption of damage.

851. An act which is in ordinary circumstances innocent may under particular conditions become an actionable nuisance. Act wrongful on account of manner or circumstances.

Whether such an act does constitute a nuisance must be determined, not merely by an abstract consideration of the act itself, but by reference to all the circumstances of the particular case (l), including, for example, the time of the commission of the act complained of; the place of its commission; the manner of committing it, that is, whether it is done wantonly or in the (e) See Dunn v. Birmingham Canal Co. (1872), L. R. 8 Q. B. 42, Ex. Ch., per BRAMWELL, B., at p. 49; and see title ACTION, Vol. I., p. 9.

(f) See cases cited at pp. 525, 526, 563, post; and see titles NEGLIGENCE, pp. 360 et seq., ante; TORT.

(g) See Baten's Case (1610), 9 Co. Rep. 53 b; Ashby v. White (1703), 2 Ld. Raym. 938; 3 Ld. Raym. 320; 1 Smith, L. C., 11th ed., 240, 284; Hobson v. Todd (1790), 4 Term Rep. 71; Pindar v. Wadsworth (1802), 2 East, 154; Barker v. Green (1824), 2 Bing. 317; Williams v. Morland (1824), 2 B. & C. 910; Fay v. Prentice (1845), 1 C. B. 828; Pryce v. Belcher (1847), 4 C. B. 866; Embrey v. Owen (1851), 6 Exch. 353; Sampson v. Hoddinott (1857), 1 C. B. (N. S.) 590; Norbury (Earl) v. Kitchin (1867), 15 L. T. 501; Bickett v. Morris (1866), L. R. 1 Sc. & Div. 47; Pennington v. Brinsop Hall Coal Co. (1877), 5 Ch. D. 769; A.-G. v. Conduit Colliery Co., [1895] 1 Q. B. 301; McCartney v. Londonderry and Lough Swilly Railway, [1904] A. C. 301.

(h) See Hobson v. Todd, supra, at p. 74; Pindar v. Wadsworth, supra; Harrop v. Hirst (1868), L. R. 4 Exch. 43; McCartney v. Londonderry and Lough Swilly Railway, supra.

(i) See pp. 512, 563, post.

(k) A.-G. v. Cockermouth Local Board (1874), L. R. 18 Eq. 172; A.-G. v. Shrewsbury (Kingsland) Bridge Co. (1882), 21 Ch. D. 752; A.-G. v. London and North Western Railway, [1899] 1 Q. B. 72; see Ware v. Regent's Canal Co. (1858), 3 De G. & J. 212.

(l) Sturges v. Bridgman (1879), 11 Ch. D. 852, 865, C. A.; Rushmer v. Polsue and Alfieri, Ltd., [1906] 1 Ch. 234, C. A.; affirmed, [1907] A. C. 121; Colls v. Home and Colonial Stores, Ltd., [1904] A. C. 179, 185; Clarke v. Clark (1865), 1 Ch. App. 16; Broder v. Saillard (1876), 2 Ch. D. 692; Christie v. Davey, [1893] 1 Ch. 316; Gaunt v. Fynney (1872), 8 Ch. App. 8; Luscombe v. Steer (1867), 17 L. T. 229.

SECT. 2.
Essential Factors.

Effect of motive or intention.

reasonable exercise of rights; and the effects of its commission, that is, whether those effects are transitory or permanent, occasional or continuous (m); so that the question of nuisance or no nuisance is one of fact (n).

852. An act which is otherwise lawful, and which a person has a right to perform in the ordinary enjoyment of his property and rights, does not become unlawful merely because the doer is actuated by motives of malice or the like (o).

SUB-SECT. 3.—Loss or Damage Caused.

Damage as an essential.

853. Damage, actual or prospective, is one of the essentials of actionable nuisance. Its existence must be proved (a), except in those cases in which it is presumed by law to exist (b).

The damage need not consist of pecuniary loss (c), but it must be material or substantial (d); that is, it must not be merely sentimental, speculative, or trifling (e), nor such as is merely temporary, fleeting, or evanescent (f); but nothing can be

(m) Bamford v. Turnley (1862), 3 B. & S. 62, 66, 79, Ex. Ch.; St. Helen's Smelting Co. v. Tipping (1865), 11 H. L. Cas. 642; Scott v. Firth (1864), 4 F. & F. 349; A.-G. v. Sheffield Gas Consumers Co. (1853), 3 De G. M. & G. 304, 339; Brand v. Hammersmith and City Rail. Co. (1867), L. R. 2 Q. B. 223, 246, Ex. Ch.; see also Ogston v. Aberdeen District Tramways Co., [1897] A. C. 111; compare City of Montreal v. Montreal Street Railway, [1903] A. C. 482, P. C.; and see, generally, title TORT.

(n) R. v. Tindall (1837), 6 Ad. & El. 143; R. v. Betts (1850), 16 Q. B. 1022; R. v. Train (1862), 2 B. & S. 640, 646; Crumph v. Lambert (1867), L. R. 3 Eq. 409, 413; R. v. Burt (1870), 11 Cox, C. C. 399; Fleming v. Hislop (1886), 11 App. Cas. 686; Bantwick v. Rogers (1891), 7 T. L. R. 542.

(o) See Bradford Corporation v. Pickles, [1895] A. C. 587; Allen v. Flood, [1898] A. C. 1; Quinn v. Leathem, [1901] A. C. 495, 509. An example is where a landowner diverts and appropriates underground water for the purpose of compelling a water authority to buy him out (Bradford Corporation v. Pickles, supra). "It is the act, not the motive for the act, that must be regarded" (ibid., per Lord MACNAGHTEN, at p. 601); see also Simmons v. Lillystone (1853), 8 Exch. 431; and title TORT.

(a) R. v. Betts (1850), 16 Q. B. 1022; A.-G. v. Kingston-on-Thames Corporation (1865), 34 L. J. (CH.) 481; Salvin v. North Brancepeth Coal Co. (1874), 9 Ch. App. 705. As to damages generally, see title DAMAGES, Vol. X., pp. 301 et seq.; and as to proof of damage, see ibid., pp. 346 et seq.

(b) See p. 509, ante.

(c) A.-G. v. Conduitt Colliery Co., [1895] 1 Q. B. 301.

(d) R. v. Shepard (1822), 1 L. J. (o. s.) (K. B.) 45; R. v. Tindall, supra; R. v. Russell (1854), 3 E. & B. 942; Scott v. Firth (1864), 4 F. & F. 349; R. v. Leprue (1866), 30 J. P. 723; S. C., sub nom., R. v. Leprieu, 15 L. T. 158, R. v. Lepille, 15 W. R. 45; Smith v. Thackerah (1866), L. R. 1 C. P. 564 (but see this case commented on in A.-G. v. Conduitt Colliery Co., [1895] 1 Q. B. 301); Cooke v. Forbes (1867), L. R. 5 Eq. 166; Luscombe v. Steer (1867), 17 L. T. 229; A.-G. v. Gee (1870), L. R. 10 Eq. 131; Kine v. Jolly, [1905] 1 Ch. 480, 489, C. A.; R. v. Bartholomew, [1908] 1 K. B. 554, C. C. R. As to what amount of damage will justify the grant of an injunction, see p. 560, post; and title INJUNCTION, Vol. XVII., p. 206.

(e) See Fleming v. Hislop, supra, per Lord SELBORNE, at p. 690; St. Helen's Smelting Co. v. Tipping, supra; Salvin v. North Brancepeth Coal Co., supra; Gaunt v. Fynney (1872), 8 Ch. App. 8.

(f) Benjamin v. Storr (1874), L. R. 9 C. P. 400, per BRETT, J., at p. 407; see Taylor v. Bennett (1836), 7 O. & P. 329. As to what is temporary, see Inchbald v. Robinson, Inchbald v. Barrington (1869), 4 Ch. App. 389; compare R. v. Moore (1832), 3 B. & Ad. 184, and Walker v. Brewster (1867), L. R. 5 Eq. 25; so deemed which results in substantial damage, and regard is to be had, therefore, not merely to the duration of the thing complained of in point of time, but to the effect of the act or omission upon the plaintiff (g).

The mere fact that an act causes loss or depreciation in value to another does not make that act a nuisance in law (h).

SECT. 2.
Essential Factors.

SECT. 3.—Classification.

SUB-SECT. 1.—Common Law and Statutory Nuisances.

854. Nuisances are divisible into common law and statutory nuisances.

Common law and statutory nuisances.

A common law nuisance is one which, apart from statute, violates the principles which the common law lays down for the protection of the public and of individuals in the exercise and enjoyment of their rights.

Common law
nuisance.

A statutory nuisance is one which, whether or not it constitutes a nuisance at common law, is made a nuisance by statute, either in express terms or by implication.

Statutory
nuisance.

SUB-SECT. 2.—Public and Private Nuisances.

855. Nuisances may also be divided into those which are public, general, or common, and those which are private (i).

Public and private
nuisances.

A public nuisance is one which inflicts damage, injury, or inconvenience upon all the King's subjects, or upon all who come within the sphere of its operation. It may, however, affect some to a greater extent than others (k).

Public
nuisance.

R. v. Burt (1870), 11 Cox, C. C. 399; Jones v. Chappell (1875), L. R. 20 Eq. 539; Harrison v. Southwark and Vauxhall Water Co., [1891] 2 Ch. 409; compare Colwell v. St. Pancras Borough Council, [1904] 1 Ch. 707.

(g) Fritz v. Hobson (1880), 14 Ch. D. 542, per FRY, J., at p. 556.

(h) Harrison v. Good (1871), L. R. 11 Eq. 338; see Simpson v. Savage (1856), 1 C. B. (N. S.) 347; Jones v. Chappell (1875), L. R. 20 Eq. 539; Fishmongers' Co. v. East India Co. (1752), 1 Dick. 163. Examples are the establishment of a school in competition with an existing one (Gloucester Grammar School (Masters) Case (1410), Y. B. 11 Hen. 4, fo. 47, pl. 21, cited in Keeble v. Hickeringill (1706), 11 East, 574, n., 576); the noise of music lessons and practice in a neighbouring house (Christie v. Davey, [1893] 1 Ch. 316); the establishment of a large school near a residence (Harrison v. Good, supra); the occasional discomfort caused by a neighbour burning his weeds, emptying cesspools, or repairing his house (Bamford v. Turnley (1862), 3 B. & S. 62, 66, 83, Ex. Ch.); the setting up of a decoy for ducks which attracts the birds from another's decoy (Keeble v. Hickeringill, supra); the building of a bridge over a river to the destruction of the trade of a ferry (Hopkins v. Great Northern Rail. Co. (1877), 2 Q. B. D. 224, C. A.; Dibden v. Skirrow, [1908] 1 Ch. 41, C. A.; see title FERRIES, Vol. XIV., p. 561). As to protecting property from floods, see cases cited in notes (u), p. 563, and (a), p. 564, post; see also title WATERS AND WATERCOURSES.

(i) See Jacob's Law Dictionary, sub voce "Nuisance"; 16 Vin. Abr., tit. "Nuisance"; 2 Roll Abr. 83. The distinction made by the old writers between a common nuisance and a public nuisance (see the argument in R. v. White and Ward (1757), 1 Burr. 333) is of no practical importance.

(k) Soltau v. De Held (1851), 2 Sim. (N. S.) 133, 142. Where a noise caused by a tinman plying his trade affected three houses only, it was held that this was a private nuisance and not an indictable one (R. v. Lloyd (1802), 4 Esp. 200). Whether the overheating of a church so as to be injurious to health was a public nuisance was doubted, but not decided, in Woodman v. Robinson (1852), 2 Sim. (N. S.) 204.

SECT. 3.

Classification.Private nuisance.Distinctions between public and private
nuisances :
(i.) As to remedies ;(ii.) as to defences.

856. A private nuisance is one which affects those persons who are immediately within the scope of its operation, but does not injure or inflict inconvenience upon others who are further removed from it. It may be even advantageous or pleasurable to those who are at a distance, as in the case of church bells (l).

857. The importance of the division of nuisances into public and private lies chiefly in the difference of the remedies applicable to each (m), and in the fact that a private individual has no right of action in respect of a public nuisance, unless he can show that he has sustained some special damage over and above that inflicted upon the community at large (n).

858. A further important distinction is that, whilst a private nuisance may be justified upon the ground that the right to commit it has been acquired by prescription, no amount of time will afford a like defence in the case of a public nuisance (o), and that the Crown cannot grant to a person a right to commit a public nuisance (p) ; nor can a local authority legalise an obstruction or encroachment in a highway or public right of navigation (q), unless it is authorised by statute to give its consent to what, without statutory powers, would be a nuisance (r) ; nor, in the case of navigable rivers, which in law are a species of highway (s), can conservators authorise a construction which is a public nuisance to the navigation (t).

(l) Soltau v. De Held (1851), 2 Sim. (N. S.) 133, 143.

(m) See pp. 547, 550, 552, 574, post.

(n) See pp. 547 et seq., 553, post.

(o) R. v. Cross (1812), 3 Camp. 224 ; Dewell v. Sanders (1618), Cro. Jac. 490 ; Vooght v. Winch (1819), 2 B. & Ald. 662 ; A.-G. v. Barnsley Corporation, [1874] W. N. 37 ; Blackburne v. Somers (1879), 5 L. R. Ir. 1 ; Sheringham Urban District Council v. Halsey (1904), 68 J. P. 395 ; Harvey v. Truro Rural Council, [1903] 2 Ch. 638 ; and see title FISHERIES, Vol. XIV., pp. 589, 592.

(p) A.-G. v. Burridge (1822), 10 Price, 350 ; and as to the inability of the Crown to make grants interfering with the public right of navigation or fishing in navigable rivers, at least subsequent to the commencement of the reign of Edward I., see ibid. ; A.-G. v. Parmeter (1822), 10 Price, 378 ; Williams v. Wilcox (1838), 8 Ad. & El. 314 ; Colchester Corporation v. Brooke (1845), 7 Q. B. 339 ; Malcomson v. O'Dea (1863), 10 H. L. Cas. 593 ; Gann v. Whitstable Free Fishers (1865), 11 H. L. Cas. 192 ; Simpson v. A.-G., [1904] A. C. 476 ; and see titles CONSTITUTIONAL LAW, Vol. VII., p. 113 ; FISHERIES, Vol. XIV., pp. 576, 588.

(q) R. v. Grosvenor (Lord) (1819), 2 Stark. 511 ; Kearns v. Cordwainers' Co. (1859), 6 C. B. (N. S.) 388 ; R. v. United Kingdom Electric Telegraph Co., Ltd. (1862), 31 L. J. (M. C.) 166, but see 2 B. & S. 647, n. ; A.-G. v. Thames Conservators (1862), 1 Hem. & M. 1 ; R. v. Train (1862), 2 B. & S. 640 ; Hawkins v. Robinson (1872), 36 J. P. 756 ; Preston Corporation v. Fulwood Local Board (1885), 53 L. T. 718 ; A.-G. v. Barker (1900), 83 L. T. 245 ; A.-G. v. Mayo County Council, [1902] 1 I. R. 13 ; Harvey v. Truro Rural Council, [1903] 2 Ch. 638.

(r) A.-G. v. Cambridge Consumers Gas Co. (1868), L. R. 6 Eq. 282.

(s) R. v. Hammond (1717), 10 Mod. Rep. 382 ; Ball v. Herbert (1789), 3 Term Rep. 253 ; Anon. (1808), 1 Camp. 517, n. ; Rose v. Miles (1815), 4 M. & S. 101 ; Colchester Corporation v. Brooke (1845), 7 Q. B. 339 ; Dimes v. Petley (1850), 15 Q. B. 276 ; Gann v. Whitstable Free Fishers, supra ; Orr Ewing v. Colquhoun (1877), 2 App. Cas. 839 ; Original Hartlepool Collieries Co. v. Gibb (1877), 5 Ch. D. 713 ; The Swift, [1901] P. 168 ; and see, as to navigable rivers generally, title WATERS AND WATERCOURSES.

(t) R. v. Grosvenor (Lord), supra ; see R. v. Hollis (1819), 2 Stark. 536.

Part II.—Nuisances in respect of Particular Matters.

SECT. 1.—Animals.

SUB-SECT. 1.—At Common Law.

859. The keeping of any animals (a) in such a position or in such circumstances as to cause material discomfort or annoyance to the public in general or to a particular person is a nuisance. If it affects the public generally, it is a public nuisance, and may be punished by indictment or restrained by proceedings taken by the Attorney-General; if it violates private rights only, it is actionable by the individual who is thereby injured. Thus, to keep swine near a public place in a town has been held to be an indictable nuisance (b); and injunctions have been granted against keeping animals in such circumstances as to cause discomfort or annoyance to neighbours (c).

So, if an animal is by nature savage, or, not being savage by nature, is known to its owner to be vicious or of a mischievous disposition, or if it is infected with disease, it can only be kept at the risk of the owner, who will be liable for damage caused by it (d).

SECT. 1.

Animals.

Keeping of animals.

Savage animals.

SUB-SECT. 2.—Statutory.

860. The keeping of any animal so as to be a nuisance or injurious to health is a nuisance capable of being abated or punished by summary proceedings (e). It is not necessary that the annoyance should amount to injury to health (f).

Keeping of animals in general.

861. In urban districts it is an offence to keep (g) any swine or pig-stye in a dwelling-house, or so as to be a nuisance to any person, whether the nuisance arises from the character of the Provisions as to urban districts and London.

(a) As to damage caused by animals, see title ANIMALS, Vol. I., pp. 372 et seq.; and, as to diseased animals, see ibid., pp. 419 et seq.

(b) R. v. Wigg (1705), 2 Ld. Raym. 1163.

(c) See Ball v. Ray (1873), 8 Ch. App. 467; Broder v. Saillard (1876), 2 Ch. D. 692 (horses in stables adjoining private property); A.-G. v. Squire (1906), 5 L. G. R. 99 (a large number of pigs in premises adjoining a village street).

(d) See title ANIMALS, Vol. I., pp. 372 et seq. As to the misdemeanour of bringing a diseased animal into a public place, see ibid., p. 420.

(e) Public Health Act, 1875 (38 & 39 Vict. c. 55), s. 91 (3); Public Health (London) Act, 1891 (54 & 55 Vict. c. 76), s. 2 (1) (c); and see p. 538, post. As to procedure, see p. 565, post.

(f) See Banbury Sanitary Authority v. Page (1881), 8 Q. B. D. 97; Bishop Auckland Local Board v. Bishop Auckland Iron Co. (1882), 10 Q. B. D. 138.

(g) The "keeping" may be of a temporary character, and the bringing of swine on to premises during the day in the course of business, pending their being sent away in the evening by train or otherwise, may amount to "keeping," although the animals are not fed on the premises nor kept overnight (Steers v. Manton (1893), 57 J. P. 584).

SECT. 1.
Animals.

place in which the animals are kept or from the manner in which they are kept (h). Original and continuing penalties may be imposed, and the urban authority must have such nuisance abated and may recover the expenses thereof from the occupier of the premises on which the nuisance exists (i). Similar but more stringent provisions are made for London (k), whereby premises within 40 yards of a street or public place are declared unfit for the purpose (l), and the user of premises for such purpose may be prohibited (m).

Provisions
under Town
Police Clauses
Act.

862. In urban districts, and in any other district affected by any Act with which the Town Police Clauses Act, 1847 (n), is incorporated, penalties are imposed upon any person who, in any street, to the annoyance or danger of the residents or passengers, keeps any pig-stye to the front of any street, not being shut off from the street by a sufficient wall or fence, or who keeps any swine in or near a street, so as to be a common nuisance (o).

Bye-laws.

863. Urban authorities (p) may make bye-laws (a) for the prevention of the keeping of animals on any premises so as to be injurious to health (b).

Sanitary authorities in London have a similar power of making bye-laws (c).

SECT. 2.—Bridges.

Non-repair.

864. The non-repair of a public bridge constitutes a nuisance for which the persons responsible for its repair are liable either to statutory proceedings or to indictment at common law (d).

(h) Digby v. West Ham Local Board of Health (1858), 22 J. P. 304.

(i) Public Health Act, 1875 (38 & 39 Vict. c. 55), s. 47.

(k) Public Health (London) Act, 1891 (54 & 55 Vict. c. 76), s. 17.

(l) Ibid., s. 17 (4).

(m) Ibid., s. 18.

(n) 10 & 11 Vict. c. 89.

(o) Ibid., s. 28, incorporated as to urban districts with the Public Health Act, 1875 (38 & 39 Vict. c. 55), by ibid., s. 171.

(p) As to these, see title LOCAL GOVERNMENT, Vol. XIX., p. 262. Rural authorities may obtain the power of making such bye-laws; see ibid., pp. 331, 332.

(a) As to bye-laws, generally, see titles METROPOLIS, Vol. XX., pp. 460 et seq.; PUBLIC HEALTH AND LOCAL ADMINISTRATION.

(b) Public Health Act, 1875 (38 & 39 Vict. c. 55), s. 44. A bye-law against keeping pigs in a borough, without any qualification as to its being a nuisance, has been held bad (Everett v. Grapes (1861), 25 J. P. 644, a case under the Municipal Corporations Act, 1835 (5 & 6 Will. 4, c. 76), s. 90); and so has a bye-law prohibiting the keeping of pigs in a rural district within 50 feet of a dwelling-house (Heap v. Burnley Union (1884), 12 Q. B. D. 617); but a bye-law forbidding the keeping of pigs within 100 feet of a dwelling-house in an urban district has been held good (Wanstead Local Board of Health v. Wooster (1873), 55 L. T. Jo. 81; see also Lutton v. Doherty (1885), 16 L. R. Ir. 493, in which case the limit of 21 feet was held reasonable; and see Steers v. Manton (1893), 57 J. P. 584). It is not necessary to prove that a nuisance has in fact arisen in order to secure a conviction for breach of the bye-law (Tong Street Local Board v. Seal (1874), 39 J. P. 278).

(c) Public Health (London) Act, 1891 (54 & 55 Vict. c. 76), s. 16 (1) (c); see title METROPOLIS, Vol. XX., pp. 460 et seq.

(d) As to bridges generally, see title HIGHWAYS, STREETS, AND BRIDGES, Vol. XVI., pp. 184 et seq.

SECT. 3.—Dangerous Property.

SECT. 3.

SUB-SECT. 1.—*Public Nuisance.Dangerous Property.

Danger in or near public place.

865. Property which of itself, apart from the use to which it is put (e), is dangerous may be a public or a private nuisance according to circumstances. If it is so near to a public place, whether land or water, as to deter persons from using that place, or to make such user dangerous or inconvenient, it is a public nuisance (f), and none the less so because the danger consists in the risk of the passenger accidentally deviating from the public place, provided that the danger substantially affects the public place (g), which is a question of law and not of fact (h). But a highway may have been dedicated with a cause of danger on or near it (i), in which case there is no obligation on the adjoining owner to fence his dangerous property, so long as he does not do anything to increase the risk (k).

866. Similarly, a building or fence so ruinous as to be likely to fall and to injure persons using a highway is an indictable nuisance, and the occupier thereof, even though only a tenant-at-will, is liable, the quantum of his interest in the property, and his liability to repair it under any agreement or covenant, being immaterial so far as the public are concerned (l).

Ruinous buildings and fences.

SUB-SECT. 2.—Private Nuisance.

867. When the danger from such property does not affect the public, the liability of the owner or occupier of the property for Danger on private property.

(e) As to user of property for dangerous purposes, see p. 530, post.

(f) Barnes v. Ward (1850), 9 C. B. 392; A.-G. v. Conduit Colliery Co., [1895] 1 Q. B. 301; White v. Phillips (1863), 15 C. B. (N. s.) 245 (a navigable river made dangerous by an improper campshed); Harrold v. Watney, [1898] 2 Q. B. 320, C. A. (rotten fence adjoining highway); Jewson v. Gatti (1886), 2 T. L. R. 381; Fenna v. Clare & Co., [1895] 1 Q. B. 199; Silverton v. Marriott (1888), 52 J. P. 677; and see cases cited in titles BOUNDARIES, FENCES, AND PARTY WALLS, Vol. III., p. 126; HIGHWAYS, STREETS, AND BRIDGES, Vol. XVI., pp. 115, 151 et seq.; NEGLIGENCE, pp. 397 et seq., ante; TORT; WATERS AND WATERCOURSES.

(g) Barnes v. Ward, supra; Hardcastle v. South Yorkshire Railway and River Dun Co. (1859), 4 H. & N. 67; Hounsell v. Smyth (1860), 7 C. B. (N. s.) 731.

(h) Hardcastle v. South Yorkshire Railway and River Dun Co., supra; Hounsell v. Smyth, supra. Cases in which the danger was held not to be sufficiently near are Blithe v. Topham (1607), 1 Roll. Abr. 88; Binks v. South Yorkshire Railway and River Dun Co. (1862), 3 B. & S. 244.

(i) R. v. Dant (1865), Le. & Ca. 567; Stone v. Jackson (1855), 16 C. B. 199; Fisher v. Prowse, Cooper v. Walker (1862), 2 B. & S. 770; Hardcastle v. South Yorkshire Railway and River Dun Co., supra; Binks v. South Yorkshire Railway and River Dun Co., supra; see Coupland v. Hardingham (1813), 3 Camp. 398, explained in Cornwell v. Metropolitan Commissioners of Sewers (1855), 10 Exch. 771, 775; Jarvis v. Dean (1826), 3 Bing. 447, explained in Fisher v. Prowse, Cooper v. Walker, supra; and see title HIGHWAYS, STREETS, AND BRIDGES, Vol. XVI., pp. 156, 157.

(k) R. v. Dant, supra; Hardcastle v. South Yorkshire Railway and River Dun Co., supra; Binks v. South Yorkshire Railway and River Dun Co., supra; Cornwell v. Metropolitan Commissioners of Sewers, supra; Hounsell v. Smyth, supra.

(l) R. v. Watts (1703), 1 Salk. 357; S. C., sub nom. R. v. Watson, 2 Ld. Raym. 856; Harrold v. Watney, supra; and see title BOUNDARIES, FENCES, AND PARTY WALLS, Vol. III., p. 126.

SECT. 3. damage arising depends upon the relation between him and the person damnified, and the duty existing between them (n).
Dangerous Property.

SECT. 4.—Electrical Supply.

SUB-SECT. 1.—Escape of Electricity.

Statutory provisions.

868. The Acts or orders under which electrical undertakings are authorised invariably provide that the undertakers are not to be exonerated from indictment, action, or other proceedings for nuisance caused or permitted by them. Under such conditions the undertakers are liable for damage done by the escape of electricity on the principle (n) that a person, who brings into being or collects on his premises an agent likely to do damage if it escapes, is liable for the consequences of such escape (o).

SUB-SECT. 2.—Overhead Wires.

Over private property.

869. The stretching of wires over real property of occupiers or owners, though without being attachment to the property, is unlawful if done without their consent, and may constitute a nuisance which they can abate or for which they have a right of action if damage results (p).

Over public streets.

Apart from any special circumstances of danger, the existence of wires across public streets at a proper height, so as not to obstruct the user of the streets, does not constitute a public nuisance, nor give a right of action for an injunction to the local authority in whom the streets are vested (q). But various statutes require the consent of local authorities before wires can be carried over streets (r), and in certain circumstances (s) local authorities have power to make bye-laws for the prevention of danger and obstruction from such wires (t).

SECT. 5.—Exercise of Special Statutory Powers.

SUB-SECT. 1.—In General.

(i.) Rules of Construction.

Burden of proof.

870. Acts which would otherwise be wrongful may be justified as being authorised by statute. Whether or not the legislature has

(m) See pp. 524, 550 et seq., post; see also titles NEGLIGENCE, pp. 426 et seq., 433 et seq., ante; TORT.

(n) See p. 528, post.

(o) As to the responsibilities of undertakers for nuisance, generally, see title ELECTRIC LIGHTING AND POWER, Vol. XII., pp. 563 et seq.

(p) See Pickering v. Rudd (1815), 4 Camp. 219; Reynolds v. Clarke (1725), 1 Stra. 634; Fay v. Prentice (1845), 1 C. B. 828; Corbett v. Hill (1870), L. R. 9 Eq. 671; see also Kenyon v. Hart (1865), 6 B. & S. 249, 252; and see, further, title TELEGRAPHS AND TELEPHONES.

(q) Wandsworth Board of Works v. United Telephone Co. (1884), 13 Q. B. D. 904, C. A.; Finchley Electric Light Co. v. Finchley Urban Council, [1902] 1 Ch. 866.

(r) As to wires of electrical undertakings, see title ELECTRIC LIGHTING AND POWER, Vol. XII., p. 571; as to telegraph wires, see title TELEGRAPHS AND TELEPHONES.

(s) See title HIGHWAYS, STREETS, AND BRIDGES, Vol. XVI., p. 260.

(t) Ibid. In London the whole matter is dealt with by the London Overhead Wires Act, 1891 (54 & 55 Vict. c. lxxvii.). See title HIGHWAYS, STREETS, AND BRIDGES, Vol. XVI., p. 206.

authorised interference with private rights depends upon the construction of the statute (u) under which the powers are exercised. The burden of proof of the authority of Parliament to do the act complained of rests upon those who claim the right to do it, and they are bound to show, with sufficient clearness, that the statute under which they act does take away ordinary private rights (a).

SECT. 5.
Exercise of Special
Statutory
Powers.

871. Statutes which confer a special authority affecting the property and rights of individuals must be construed strictly against the parties to whom the authority is given, and in favour of persons affected (b), and for the due exercise of such authority it is essential that all conditions precedent must have been complied with and the prescribed means followed (c), though their fulfilment will be presumed after a long lapse of time (d).

Construed strictly.

872. The fact that the statute relied upon limits the operation of the statutory powers to a particular site does not of itself determine the question as to the character of the works authorised on the site (e).

Site prescribed.

873. The absence from a statute of any compensation clauses is an important consideration in determining whether or not the statute confers absolute powers to interfere with private rights; but such consideration is not conclusive either way, though the absence

Absence of compensation
clauses.

(u) As to the construction of statutes, generally, see title STATUTES.

(a) Hammersmith etc. Rail. Co. v. Brand (1869), L. R. 4 H. L. 171, 189; Clowes v. Staffordshire Potteries Waterworks Co. (1872), 8 Ch. App. 125, 139; A.-G. v. Gaslight and Coke Co. (1877), 7 Ch. D. 217; Metropolitan Asylum District v. Hill (1881), 6 App. Cas. 193, 208, 213; see Truman v. London, Brighton and South Coast Rail. Co. (1885), 29 Ch. D. 89, 108, C. A.; reversed (1885), 11 App. Cas. 45.

(b) R. v. Croke (1774), 1 Cowp. 26; Scales v. Pickering (1828), 4 Bing. 448; see Demerara Electric Co. v. White, [1907] A. C. 330, P. C.

(c) Liverpool and North Wales Steamship Co., Ltd. v. Mersey Trading Co., Ltd., [1909] 1 Ch. 209, C. A. (deviation from plans); A.-G. v. Mid-Kent Rail. Co. and South-Eastern Rail. Co. (1867), 3 Ch. App. 100 (deviation from conditions); Ferrand v. Bradford Corporation (1856), 21 Beav. 412 (defendants restrained from diverting a stream without first paying compensation or making the statutory deposit); Staffordshire Canal Co. v. Hallen (1827), 6 B. & C. 317 (plaintiffs not entitled to recover for damage done to their banks unless their statutory obligation to keep the banks in repair was proved to have been discharged); R. v. Great North of England Rail. Co. (1846), 9 Q. B. 315; R. v. Scott (1842), 3 Q. B. 543; Liverpool Corporation v. Chorley Waterworks Co. (1852), 2 De G. M. & G. 852, C. A. (prescribed means not followed); Brownlow v. Metropolitan Board of Works (1863), 13 C. B. (N. S.) 768; affirmed (1864), 16 C. B. (N. S.) 546, Ex. Ch.; Saunby v. London (Ont.) Water Commissioners, [1906] A. C. 110, P. C.; Herron v. Rathmines and Rathgar Improvement Commissioners, [1892] A. C. 498; Roberts v. Gwyrfa District Council, [1899] 2 Ch. 608, C. A. (interference with flow of a stream without first obtaining consent as required by statute); Burnley Co-operative Society v. Pickles (1898), 77 L. T. 803 (building bridge less than statutory span); A.-G. v. Furness Rail. Co. (1878), 38 L. T. 555 (the like facts). Where, however, the plaintiff did not allege any right of ownership in the soil of the river obstructed, but relied upon a public right of passage, it was held that it was not necessary for the defendants to prove the fulfilment of preliminary conditions (Abraham v. Great Northern Rail. Co. (1851), 16 Q. B. 586). As to the obstruction of rivers, see, further, title WATERS AND WATERCOURSES.

(d) Clippens Oil Co. v. Edinburgh and District Water Trustees, [1904] A. C. 64; compare title EVIDENCE, Vol. XIII., p. 506.

(e) See Jordeson v. Sutton, Southcoates and Drypool Gas Co., [1898] 2 Ch. 614.

SECT. 5.
Exercise of Special
Statutory
Powers.

Effect of distinction.

Powers under provisional
orders.

Powers for specified purposes.

of a provision for compensation will generally be found to indicate that private rights are not to be affected (f).

(ii.) Duties Absolute and Discretionary.

874. A distinction must be drawn between duties which are absolute and those which are discretionary (g). In the former case liability arises upon breach of the duty without proof of negligence (h); in the latter, negligence or misfeasance must be shown (i).

(iii.) Scope of the Powers.

875. Acts done under powers granted by persons to whom Parliament has delegated authority to grant such powers, for example, under provisional orders of the Board of Trade, are regarded as having been done under statutory authority (k).

876. Where authorities are given general powers to effect certain specified purposes, the powers will ordinarily be construed to

(f) See London and North Western Rail. Co. v. Evans, [1893] 1 Ch. 16, 29, C. A.; Hammersmith etc. Rail. Co. v. Brand (1869), L. R. 4 H. L. 171, 215; Normanton Gas Co. v. Pope and Pearson, Ltd. (1883), 32 W. R. 134, C. A.; Consett Waterworks Co. v. Ritson (1889), 43 W. R. 122, C. A.; Bradford Corporation v. Pickles, [1895] 1 Ch. 145, 152, C. A.; Jordeson v. Sutton, Southcoates and Drypool Gas Co., [1892] 2 Ch. 614, 621. For a case where there were no means of obtaining compensation, see Kennet and Avon Navigation Co. v. Witherington (1852), 18 Q. B. 531; and no provision for awarding it, East Freemantle Corporation v. Annois, [1902] A. C. 213, P. C.; and see, further, titles COMPULSORY PURCHASE OF LAND AND COMPENSATION, Vol. VI., pp. 31, 32, 55, 56; CORPORATIONS, Vol. VIII., pp. 388, 389; MINES, MINERALS, AND QUARRIES, Vol. XX., pp. 578 et seq.; NEGLIGENCE, p. 360, ante.

(g) See Metropolitan Asylum District v. Hill (1881), 6 App. Cas. 193; London and Brighton Rail. Co. v. Truman (1885), 11 App. Cas. 45.

(h) Holborn Union Guardians v. St. Leonard's, Shoreditch, Vestry (1876), 2 Q. B. D. 145; Roths (Countess) v. Kirkcaldy Waterworks Commissioners (1882), 7 App. Cas. 694; Cattle v. Stockton Waterworks (1875), L. R. 10 Q. B. 453; and see title NEGLIGENCE, p. 377, ante; see also title CORPORATIONS, Vol. VIII., pp. 389, 391.

(i) Hammond v. St. Pancras Vestry (1874), L. R. 9 C. P. 316; Glossop v. Heston and Isleworth Local Board (1879), 12 Ch. D. 102, C. A. (injunction against pollution refused on the ground that the defendants had done no act to create or increase the pollution, but had only failed in their duty to provide sufficient system of drainage); A.-G. v. Dorking Union Guardians (1882), 20 Ch. D. 595, C. A., a similar case; Bateman v. Poplar District Board of Works (No. 2) (1887), 37 Ch. D. 272; Fleming v. Manchester Corporation (1881), 44 L. T. 517; Gibraltar Sanitary Commissioners v. Orfila (1890), 15 App. Cas. 400, P. C.; A.-G. v. Clerkenwell Vestry, [1891] 3 Ch. 527 (following Glossop v. Heston and Isleworth Local Board, supra); Ogilvie v. Blything Union Rural Sanitary Authority (1891), 65 L. T. 338; Stretton's Derby Brewery Co. v. Derby Corporation, [1894] 1 Ch. 431; Robinson v. Workington Corporation, [1897] 1 Q. B. 619, C. A.; Evans v. Liverpool Corporation, [1906] 1 K. B. 160; Queens of the River Steamship Co. v. Easton, Gibb & Co. (1907), 96 L. T. 901; see also Wilson v. Halifax Corporation (1868), L. R. 3 Exch. 114; Ohrby v. Ryde Commissioners (1864), 5 B. & S. 743; Blyth v. Birmingham Waterworks Co. (1856), 11 Exch. 781; Whitehouse v. Birmingham Canal Co. (1857), 27 L. J. (EX.) 25; Snook v. Grand Junction Waterworks Co., Ltd. (1886), 2 T. L. R. 308; Green v. Chelsea Waterworks Co. (1894), 70 L. T. 547, C. A.; Lambert v. Lowestoft Corporation, [1901] 1 K. B. 590; Lingke v. Christchurch Corporation (1912), 132 L. T. Jo. 418.

(k) National Telephone Co. v. Baker, [1893] 2 Ch. 186; and as to provisional orders, see titles COMPULSORY PURCHASE OF LAND AND COMPENSATION, Vol. VI., pp. 8–11; ELECTRIC LIGHTING AND POWER, Vol. XII., pp. 552, 556 et seq.; GAS, Vol. XV., pp. 312 et seq.; PARLIAMENT, pp. 727 et seq., post; RAILWAYS AND CANALS; STATUTES; TRAMWAYS AND LIGHT RAILWAYS; WATER SUPPLY.

cover any method of effecting those purposes (l), although such method may not have been known nor have been in existence at the time when the powers were originally granted (m).

877. An authority to do specific works includes all things reasonably necessary for the execution of those works (n); but an act which does injury to others cannot be justified as necessary, within the meaning of a statute empowering undertakers to do all other acts necessary for making and maintaining the authorised works, merely because it is more convenient or more economical from the point of view of the undertakers. The act must also be judged by the effect it has upon the accommodation and convenience of those whose rights are sought to be interfered with (o).

SECT. 5
Exercise of Special
Statutory
Powers.

Authority for specific works.

SUB-SECT. 2.—Where the Exercise is Compulsory or the Nuisance Inevitable.

878. Where the legislature has authorised the exercise of the powers (p) under consideration and has expressly or impliedly directed the manner (q) and place in which, and the purpose for which, the powers are to be exercised, or where, without such directions, the inevitable or natural result of the proper exercise by the undertakers of such powers is the creation or causing of a nuisance, no liability arises in respect of it (a).

General
principle.

(l) Bishop v. North (1843), 11 M. & W. 418; see also Dand v. Kingscote (1840), 6 M. & W. 174.

(m) A.-G. v. Cambridge Consumers Gas Co. (1868), L. R. 6 Eq. 282.

(n) Harrison v. Southwark and Vauxhall Water Co., [1891] 2 Ch. 409; Saunby v. London (Ont.) Water Commissioners, [1906] A. C. 110, P. C.; Manser v. Northern and Eastern Counties Rail. Co. (1841), 2 Ry. & Can. Cas. 380; Ricket v. Metropolitan Rail. Co. (Directors etc.) (1867), L. R. 2 H. L. 175. As to building a temporary bridge, see Priestley v. Manchester and Leeds Rail. Co. (1840), 4 Y. & C. (EX.) 63; see A.-G. v. Eastern Counties and Northern and Eastern Rail. Cos. (1842), 2 Ry. & Can. Cas. 823; and see, further, title CORPORATIONS, Vol. VIII., p. 358.

(o) Fenwick v. East London Rail. Co. (1875), L. R. 20 Eq. 544; R. v. Wycombe Rail. Co. (1867), L. R. 2 Q. B. 310; Pugh v. Golden Valley Rail. Co. (1879), 12 Ch. D. 274; affirmed (1880), 15 Ch. D. 330, C. A., distinguishing A.-G. v. Ely, Haddenham, and Sutton Rail. Co. (1869), 4 Ch. App. 194; Tilling (T.), Ltd. v. Dick Kerr & Co., Ltd., [1905] 1 K. B. 562.

(p) As to waiver of powers conferred for the public good, see title CORPORATIONS, Vol. VIII., p. 360; Re South Eastern Railway and Wiffin's Contract, [1907] 2 Ch. 366.

(q) An obligation to put down wood-paving does not justify the use of wood soaked in creosote which is detrimental to adjoining property (West v. Bristol Tramways Co., [1908] 2 K. B. 14, C. A.).

(a) Thus, a railway company authorised to construct a line within prescribed limits is not liable for nuisance occasioned by the proximity of the railway to a highway (R. v. Pease (1832), 4 B. & Ad. 30); or for damage done by sparks from engines, if the company is authorised to use such engines and has taken every reasonable precaution and the best scientific means to prevent such injury and has not been negligent in the management of its engines (Vaughan v. Taff Vale Rail. Co. (1860), 5 H. & N. 679; Dimmock v. North Staffordshire Rail. Co. (1866), 4 F. & F. 1058; Smith v. London and South Western Rail. Co. (1870), L. R. 6 C. P. 14; Port Glasgow and Newark Sailcloth Co. v. Caledonian Rail. Co., [1893] W. N. 29, H. L.; Shaftesbury (Earl) v. London and South Western Rail. Co. (1895), 11 T. L. R. 269, C. A.; Canadian Pacific Railway v. Roy, [1902] A. C. 220, P. C.; but as to the statutory liability of a railway company to compensate for damage to agricultural land and crops caused by sparks from engines, see Railway Fires Act, 1905 (5 Edw. 7, c. 11); titles AGRICULTURE, Vol. I., pp. 278 et seq.; RAILWAYS AND CANALS); or for damage caused by

SECT. 5.

SUB-SECT. 3.—Where the Exercise is Permissive only.

Exercise of Special
Statutory
Powers.

Principles for exercise of
powers.

879. Where persons, whether for the purpose of profit or for the benefit of the public (b), are authorised by statute to effect a vibration during the proper working of the railway (Hammersmith etc. Rail. Co. v. Brand (1869), L. R. 4 H. L. 171; A.-G. v. Metropolitan Rail. Co., [1894] 1 Q. B. 384, C. A.); or the noise and inconvenience of working (London and Brighton Rail. Co. v. Truman (1885), 11 App. Cas. 45); but the company is liable for nuisance caused by smoke from its engines, since the emission of smoke is prohibited and penalised by statute (Smith v. Midland Rail. Co. and Lancashire and Yorkshire Rail. Co. (1877), 26 W. R. 10; and see p. 545, post), where there is negligence in the use of its engines (Freemantle v. London and North-Western Rail. Co. (1860), 2 F. & F. 337; on appeal (1861), 10 C. B. (N. S.) 89; Bliss v. London and North-Western Rail. Co. (1860), 2 F. & F. 341; Longman v. Grand Junction Canal Co. (1863), 3 F. & F. 736); or where the company has no power to use steam locomotives (Jones v. Festiniog Rail. Co. (1868), L. R. 3 Q. B. 733); or where, having used properly equipped engines in a proper manner, it has negligently left combustible matter along its banks likely to be ignited by sparks (Smith v. London and South Western Rail. Co. (1870), L. R. 6 C. P. 14). As to burden of proof, see Piggot v. Eastern Counties Rail. Co. (1846), 3 C. B. 229; Aldridge v. Great Western Rail. Co. (1841), 3 Man. & G. 515. Other instances in which injury has been justified under statutory powers are:—restriction of access to premises by altering a roadway (British Cast Plate Manufacturers (Governor etc.) v. Meredith (1792), 4 Term Rep. 794; Boulton v. Crowthier (1824), 2 B. & C. 703; East Freemantle Corporation v. Annois, [1902] A. C. 213, P. C.); damage to premises consequent on the opening of flood-gates (Whitehouse v. Birmingham Canal Co. (1857), 27 L. J. (EX.) 25; Dixon v. Metropolitan Board of Works (1881), 7 Q. B. D. 418; distinguished in Price's Patent Candle Co., Ltd. v. London County Council, [1908] 2 Ch. 526, C. A.); pollution of a stream after satisfying the statutory requirements to use the best known process of purifying before discharging the effluent (Lea Conservancy Board v. Hertford Corporation (1884), 48 J. P. 628; for a case of pollution in which it was held that there was no statutory protection, see A.-G. v. Hackney Local Board (1875), L. R. 20 Eq. 626); interference with a telephone or telegraph system by an electric tramway (National Telephone Co. v. Baker, [1893] 2 Ch. 186; Eastern and South African Telegraph Co. v. Cape Town Tramways Co., [1902] A. C. 381, P. C.); insertion of poles for tramways in the subsoil (Escott v. Newport Corporation, [1904] 2 K. B. 369; Fareham Local Board and Fareham Electric Light Co. v. Smith, [1891] W. N. 76); obstruction of ancient lights by erecting buildings (Bedford (Duke) v. Dawson (1875), L. R. 20 Eq. 353; Wigram v. Fryer (1887), 36 Ch. D. 87; see title EASEMENTS AND PROFITS À PRENDRE, Vol. XI., p. 283); flooding of mines by the making of a canal caused by owners of the former working in the ordinary way (Dunn v. Birmingham Canal Co. (1872), L. R. 8 Q. B. 42, Ex. Ch.); annoyance caused by things reasonably necessary for the execution of the authorised works (Harrison v. Southwark and Vauxhall Water Co., [1891] 2 Ch. 409; compare Knight v. Isle of Wight Electric Light and Power Co. (1904), 73 L. J. (CH.) 299; Ash v. Great Northern, Piccadilly, and Brompton Rail. Co. (1903), 19 T. L. R. 639; Allison v. City and South London Rail. Co. (1892), Times, 24th February; and see p. 522, post); obstruction of navigation by constructing a pier and floating wharf (Jolliffe v. Wallasey Local Board (1873), L. R. 9 C. P. 62), or railway embankment (Abraham v. Great Northern Rail. Co. (1851), 16 Q. B. 586); and see and compare titles CORPORATIONS, Vol. VIII., p. 389; ELECTRIC LIGHTING AND POWER, Vol. XII., p. 583; GAS, Vol. XV., p. 359; HIGHWAYS, STREETS, AND BRIDGES, Vol. XVI., p. 152; MINES, MINERALS, AND QUARRIES, Vol. XX., pp. 578, 580; WATERS AND WATERCOURSES.

(b) Ruck v. Williams (1858), 3 H. & N. 308; Southampton and Itchin Bridge Co. v. Southampton Local Board (1858), 8 E. & B. 801; Whitehouse v. Fellowes (1861), 10 C. B. (N. S.) 765; Coe v. Wise (1866), L. R. 1 Q. B. 711, Ex. Ch.; Mersey Docks Trustees v. Gibbs (1866), L. R. 1 H. L. 93; Collins v. Middle Level Commissioners (1869), L. R. 4 C. P. 279; Winch v. Thames Conservators (1874), L. R. 9 C. P. 378, Ex. Ch.; see Broadbent v. Imperial Gas Co. (1857), 7 De G. M. & G. 436, 462; Bradford Corporation v. Pickles, [1895] 1 Ch. 145, 152, C. A.

particular object, and are granted powers in that behalf, they are bound to exercise their powers, whether in the original construction or in the subsequent maintenance of the authorised works, with due regard to the common law rights of others (c), but not necessarily to provide for every possible contingency (d).

The powers must not be exercised in an oppressive manner when that can be avoided, nor must unnecessary injury be caused (e).

The right to commit a nuisance in the exercise of permissive powers has been negatived in the following cases: in providing public urinals (f); in providing hospitals under the directions of the Local Government Board, where the provision was not made compulsory (g); in irrigating lands by the compulsory diversion of streams and running the water off through adjacent lands (h); in taking water for a canal from a stream, when that stream had become polluted, thus creating a public nuisance (i); in the running of tramways, as by using brine to keep the road clear of snow (k), or by using raised rails during reconstruction (l), or by noise and smells from stables (m), or by not taking reasonable care in attending to the lines (n) or in driving the cars (o); in

SECT. 5.
Exercise of Special
Statutory
Powers.

Powers not to be exercised oppressively.

Illustrations.

(c) See Geddis v. Bann Reservoir (Proprietors) (1878), 3 App. Cas. 430, per Lord BLACKBURN at pp. 455, 456; Metropolitan Asylum District v. Hill (1881), 6 App. Cas. 193; Gas Light and Coke Co. v. St. Mary Abbott's, Kensington, Vestry (1885), 15 Q. B. D. 1, C. A.; Clowes v. Staffordshire Potteries Waterworks Co. (1872), 8 Ch. App. 125; Arnold v. Furness Rail. Co. (1874), 22 W. R. 613; Fenwick v. East London Rail. Co. (1875), L. R. 20 Eq. 544; Boughton v. Midland and Great Western Railway of Ireland (1873), 7 I. R. C. L. 169; Bligh v. Rathangan Drainage Board, [1898] 2 I. R. 205; Roberts v. Charing Cross, Euston, and Hampstead Rail. Co. (1903), 87 L. T. 732, following East Freemanite Corporation v. Annois, [1902] A. C. 213, P. C.; Manley v. St. Helens Canal and Rail. Co. (1858), 2 H. & N. 840; Wiggins v. Boddington (1828), 3 C. & P. 544; A.-G. v. Furness Rail. Co. (1878), 38 L. T. 555.

(d) The power to provide a bridge for ordinary traffic as then existing does not import a duty to provide in the future a bridge for extraordinary weights (R. v. East and West India Dock Co. (1888), 60 L. T. 232). As to extraordinary traffic, see title HIGHWAYS, STREETS, AND BRIDGES, Vol. XVI., pp. 172 et seq.

(e) See Coats v. Clarence Rail. Co. (1830), 1 Russ. & M. 181; Biscoe v. Great Eastern Rail. Co. (1873) L. R. 16 Eq. 636.

(f) Vernon v. St. James, Westminster, Vestry (1880), 16 Ch. D. 449, C. A.; see Biddulph v. St. George, Hanover Square, Vestry (1863), 33 L. J. (CH.) 411, C. A.; Sellers v. Matlock Bath Local Board (1885), 14 Q. B. D. 928; Parish v. London Corporation (1901), 67 J. P. 55; Leyman v. Hessle Urban District Council (1902), 76 J. P. 56.

(g) Metropolitan Asylum District v. Hill, supra (erection of a hospital for infectious diseases so as to be a nuisance to private owners), approved in Canadian Pacific Railway v. Parke, [1899] A. C. 535, P. C.; A.-G. v. Colney Hatch Lunatic Asylum (1868), 4 Ch. App. 146 (pollution of a stream by drainage from the asylum); see A.-G. v. Birmingham Borough Council (1858), 4 K. & J. 528.

(h) Canadian Pacific Railway v. Parke, supra.

(i) R. v. Bradford Navigation Co. (1865), 6 B. & S. 631.

(j) Ogston v. Aberdeen District Tramways Co., [1897] A. C. 111.

(l) Tilling (T.), Ltd. v. Dick Kerr & Co., Ltd., [1905] 1 K. B. 562.

(m) Rapier v. London Tramways Co., [1893] 2 Ch. 588, C. A.

(n) Sadler v. South Staffordshire and Birmingham District Steam Tramways Co. (1889), 23 Q. B. D. 17, C. A.

(o) Rattee v. Norwich Electric Tramway Co. (1902), 18 T. L. R. 562, C. A.

SECT. 5.
Exercise of Special
Statutory
Powers.

Proviso preserving remedies for nuisance.

repairing roads by using heavy steam rollers (p); in using locomotives on a railway so as to cause a nuisance by smoke from the engines (q); in granting a licence to erect an embankment which obstructed the right of access of riparian owners, when the statute under which the licence was granted gave the power of granting the licence so only as to justify an obstruction of public navigation (a); in the discharge of sewage (b).

880. An express proviso contained in a statute that in the event of a nuisance being caused the rights of action of third parties in respect thereof shall remain unprejudiced, amounts to a permission to exercise the powers conferred by the statute, but if in doing so the undertakers occasion a nuisance they must bear the consequences, whether the nuisance has been caused by their negligence or otherwise (c). Thus, statutes which allow the use of locomotives on highways subject to certain conditions being fulfilled, preserving all liability for nuisances caused, do not exempt from liability a person so using locomotives, even though he has fulfilled all the requirements of the statutes or all the requirements imposed by bye-laws made under the statutes (d), and has not been guilty of negligence in the construction or user of the engines (e), unless there are words in the statute expressly or impliedly limiting liability to a specific class of acts or omissions (f); statutes which impose upon a local authority the duty of effectually draining its district and confer upon it power to drain into the sea, rivers and streams, with a proviso against committing a nuisance thereby, do not authorise or justify the pollution of such waters (g);

(p) Gas Light and Coke Co. v. St. Mary Abbott's, Kensington, Vestry (1885), 15 Q. B. D. 1, C. A.; Chichester Corporation v. Foster, [1906] 1 K. B. 167.

(q) Smith v. Midland Rail. Co. and Lancashire and Yorkshire Rail. Co. (1877), 26 W. R. 10.

(a) Lyon v. Fishmongers' Co. (1876), 1 App. Cas. 662.

(b) See cases cited in note (g), infra.

(c) See also title CORPORATIONS, Vol. VIII., p. 389; GAS, Vol. XV., p. 359; and as to negligence generally, see title NEGLIGENCE, pp. 357 et seq., ante.

(d) Powell v. Fall (1880), 5 Q. B. D. 597, C. A. (sparks from an engine); Galer v. Rawson (1889), 6 T. L. R. 17, C. A.; Bantwick v. Rogers (1891), 7 T. L. R. 542; Jeffery v. St. Pancras Vestry (1894), 63 L. J. (Q. B.) 618; Watkins v. Reddin (1861), 2 F. & F. 629 (frightening horses). As to whether and when a motor vehicle used on a public road is a nuisance by means of its liability to skid, see Wing v. London General Omnibus Co., [1909] 2 K. B. 652, C. A.; Walton (Isaac) & Co. v. Vanguard Motorbus Co., Gibbons v. Same (1908), 25 T. L. R. 13. As to traffic on streets, see, generally, title STREET AND AERIAL TRAFFIC; Parker v. London General Omnibus Co., Ltd. (1909), 101 L. T. 623, C. A.

(e) Chichester Corporation v. Foster, supra (locomotive so heavy as to break underground pipes); Armagh Union Guardians v. Bell, [1900] 2 I. R. 371, C. A.; see also Gas Light and Coke Co. v. St. Mary Abbott's, Kensington, Vestry, supra; A.-G. v. Scott, [1904] 1 K. B. 404, C. A.

(f) E.g., in Brocklehurst v. Manchester, Bury, Rochdale and Oldham Steam Tramways Co. (1886), 17 Q. B. D. 118, where the liability was limited to damage caused by the act or default of the defendants or their servants, in which case the defendants were held not liable for a pure accident caused by a horse shying at a tramcar.

(g) Oldaker v. Hunt (1854), 19 Beav. 485; A.-G. v. Luton Local Board of Health (1856), 2 Jur. (N. S.) 180; A.-G. v. Birmingham Borough Council (1858), 4 K. & J. 528; Manchester, Sheffield etc. Rail. Co. v. Workson, Board nor do statutes with a similar proviso empowering bodies of persons to supply electricity or gas protect undertakers from liability for nuisance (h).

SECT. 5.
Exercise of Special
Statutory
Powers.

SUB-SECT. 4.—Where the Mode of Exercise is Discretionary.

881. Where public bodies are given a discretion in the exercise of powers conferred upon them by statute, the courts will not interfere with the exercise of that discretion so long as it is exercised bonâ fide and reasonably (i); and in exercising their discretionary statutory powers local authorities are under no obligation in the proper exercise of those powers to protect the interests of individuals which are affected by such exercise unless there is something in the statute by which the powers are conferred to impose that obligation (k).

General
principles.

SECT. 6.—Gasworks.

882. Statutes and provisional orders authorising the making and supplying of gas almost invariably incorporate the provisions of the Gasworks Clauses Act, 1847 (l), or contain a similar express

Statutory
provisions.

of Health (1856), 23 Beav. 198; Bidder v. Croydon Local Board of Health (1862), 6 L. T. 778; A.-G. v. Metropolitan Board of Works (1863), 9 L. T. 139; A.-G. v. Kingston-on-Thames Corporation (1865), 34 L. J. (CH.) 481; Cator v. Lewisham Board of Works (1864), 5 B. & S. 115, 127, Ex. Ch.; Goldsmid v. Tunbridge Wells Improvement Commissioners (1866), 1 Ch. App. 349, 352; A.-G. v. Richmond (1866), L. R. 2 Eq. 306; Glossop v. Heston and Isleworth Local Board (1879), 12 Ch. D. 102, C. A.; A.-G. v. Leeds Corporation (1870), 5 Ch. App. 583; A.-G. v. Dorchester Corporation (1905), 93 L. T. 290; Harrington (Earl) v. Derby Corporation, [1905] 1 Ch. 205; Foster v. Warblington Urban Council, [1906] 1 K. B. 648, C. A.; Owen v. Faversham Corporation (1908), 72 J. P. 404; affirmed, 73 J. P. 33, C. A.; Price's Patent Candle Co., Ltd. v. London County Council, [1908] 2 Ch. 526, C. A. As to drainage generally, see title SEWERS AND DRAINS. As to pollution of water, see, further, title WATERS AND WATERCOURSES.

(h) Shelfer v. City of London Electric Lighting Co., Meux's Brewery Co. v. City of London Electric Lighting Co., [1895] 1 Ch. 287, C. A. (vibration and noise from machinery); Jordeson v. Sutton, Southcoates and Drypool Gas Co., [1899] 2 Ch. 217, C. A. (withdrawal of support and obstruction of ancient lights); Colwell v. St. Pancras Borough Council, [1904] 1 Ch. 707 (vibration from new machinery); Demerara Electric Co., v. White, [1907] A. C. 330, P. C. (noise and vibration); Midwood & Co., Ltd. v. Manchester Corporation, [1905] 2 K. B. 597, C. A. (damage by explosion); A.-G. v. Gaslight and Coke Co. (1877), 7 Ch. D. 217 (nuisance alleged to be inevitable if gas of the statutory standard was to be manufactured); Wise v. Metropolitan Electric Supply Co. (1894), 10 T. L. R. 446; Knight v. Isle of Wight Electric Light and Power Co. (1904), 73 L. J. (CH.) 299; and see titles ELECTRIC LIGHTING AND POWER, Vol. XII., pp. 560 et seq.; Gas, Vol. XV., pp. 322, 359 et seq.

(i) Biddulph v. St. George's, Hanover Square, Vestry (1863), 33 L. J. (CH.) 411, C. A.; Forbes v. Lee Conservancy Board (1879), 4 Ex. D. 116; Vernon v. St. James, Westminster, Vestry (1880), 16 Ch. D. 449, C. A.; Chaplin (W. H.) & Co., Ltd. v. Westminster Corporation, [1901] 2 Ch. 329; Westminster Corporation v. London and North Western Railway, [1905] A. C. 426; Mayo v. Seaton Urban District Council (1903), 68 J. P. 7; Wilkinson v. Hull etc. Railway and Dock Co. (1882), 20 Ch. D. 323, C. A. The court will give the public body credit for being the best judge of its requirements (A.-G. v. Great Eastern Rail. Co. (1871), 6 Ch. App. 572).

(k) Southwark and Vauxhall Water Co. v. Wandsworth Board of Works, [1898] 2 Ch. 603, C. A.

(l) 10 & 11 Vict. c. 15.

SECT. 6.
Gasworks.

provision preserving the liability of the undertakers to indictment or other legal proceeding for nuisance caused in the making and supplying of gas (m). There are also numerous statutory provisions for the protection of water from pollution by gas washings and the like (n).

SECT. 7.—Highways.

Nuisance on highways.

883. Any unlawful interference with, or obstruction of, a highway which materially renders it less commodious or safe for ordinary uses by the public is a nuisance.

The interference or obstruction cannot be justified on the ground of sanction by the highway or other local authority, unless it has statutory power to give such sanction; nor on the grounds that notwithstanding the interference or obstruction sufficient room for passage has been left, or that the part obstructed is not metalled or made up or is not habitually or ordinarily used by the public for passage, or that the interference or obstruction complained of is or will result in a great benefit to many of the public (o).

SECT. 8.—Neighbouring Owners.

SUB-SECT. 1.—In General.

Principles governing exercise of rights.

884. Every person is required by law to exercise his rights, whether over his own or public property, with due regard to the co-existing rights of others, and an unreasonable, excessive, or extravagant exercise of his rights to the damage of others constitutes a nuisance in law. Thus, a person is guilty of a nuisance who, in the exercise of his right of access to his premises either on a public highway (p), or a public navigable river (q), acts so unreasonably as to have no regard to the similar rights of access possessed by his neighbours; or who, during building operations, uses excessively one passage when he might reduce the inconvenience to his neighbours by using others which are available (a); or who uses an exceptionally heavy traction engine on the highway so as to break underground pipes (b); or who carries on disturbing building operations during the night without any real necessity (c).

(m) See Gasworks Clauses Act, 1847 (10 & 11 Vict. c. 15), s. 29.

(n) See title GAS, Vol. XV., pp. 359 et seq.

(o) See generally, on this subject, title HIGHWAYS, STREETS, AND BRIDGES, Vol. XVI., pp. 49, 151 et seq.

(p) Benjamin v. Storr (1874), L. R. 9 C. P. 400; A.-G. v. Brighton and Hove Co-operative Supply Association, [1900] 1 Ch. 276, C. A.; see title HIGHWAYS, STREETS, AND BRIDGES, Vol. XVI., pp. 60, 61, 155.

(q) Original Hartlepool Collieries Co. v. Gibb (1877), 5 Ch. D. 713; see title WATERS AND WATERCOURSES.

(a) Fritz v. Hobson (1880), 14 Ch. D. 542.

(b) Chichester Corporation v. Foster, [1906] 1 K. B. 167; see Gas Light and Coke Co. v. St. Mary Abbott's, Kensington, Vestry (1885), 15 Q. B. D. 1, C. A.

(c) See, on the one hand, Webb v. Barker, [1881] W. N. 158; Beaumont v. Emery, [1875] W. N. 106, C. A.; Howland v. Dover Harbour Board (1898), 14 T. L. R. 355, C. A.; Lipman v. Pulman (George) & Sons, Ltd. (1904), 91 L. T. 132; on the other, Clark v. Lloyd's Bank, Ltd. (1910), 79 L. J. (CH.) 645, following Browning and Heseltine v. Harrod's Stores (1902), Times, 13th August, and Stump v. Byewater (1902), The Builder Newspaper, 16th August; Ash v.

SUB-SECT. 2.—Injury to Property.(i.) In General.

885. Any material damage, actual or prospective, to the corporeal hereditament of a person by another in the management of his own property amounts to an actionable nuisance, unless it can be justified as the natural result of a reasonable use of his property (d), or as having been authorised by statute (e), or as having been done under agreement, express or implied, between himself and the person affected (f), or as being due to some act or default of the person affected, or to vis major, or the act of God, or to the act of a stranger (g).

SECT. 8.
Neighbouring Owners.

When actionable; when justifiable.

886. Instances of injury to property, or interference with rights in respect of property (h), are most commonly found to arise from excavations causing subsidence (i), from vibration in the execution of works (k), from the escape of water or noxious fumes (l), or animals (m), from the use of property for dangerous purposes (n), from interference with light and air (o), or rights of access (p) or rights of way (q), or from an excessive or extravagant exercise of rights (r).

Illustrations.

(ii.) Ordinary User of Property.

887. Owners or occupiers of land are legally entitled to use or occupy their land for any purpose for which it may in the ordinary and natural course of the enjoyment of land be used or occupied, and they are not responsible for damage sustained by the property of others through natural agencies operating as a consequence of such ordinary and natural user or occupation (s).

Extent of right of user :
(i.) Of land ;

Great Northern, Piccadilly and Brompton Rail. Co. (1903), 19 T. L. R. 639 ; compare Roberts v. Charing Cross, Euston, and Hampstead Rail. Co. (1903), 87 L. T. 732.

(d) See the text, infra.

(e) See p. 519, ante.

(f) See title TORT. As to a prescriptive right to commit the act, see p. 563, post.

(g) See p. 564, post ; and see titles NEGLIGENCE, pp. 467 et seq., ante ; TORT.

(h) As to interference with easements generally, see title EASEMENTS AND PROFITS À PRENDRE, Vol. XI., pp. 330 et seq.

(i) As to this, see EASEMENTS AND PROFITS À PRENDRE, Vol. XI., pp. 319 et seq. ; MINES, MINERALS, AND QUARRIES, Vol. XX., pp. 570 et seq.

(k) See Shelfer v. City of London Electric Lighting Co., Meux's Brewery Co. v. City of London Electric Lighting Co., [1895] 1 Ch. 287, C. A.

(l) See pp. 528, 529, post.

(m) See p. 513, ante.

(n) See p. 530, post.

(o) See title EASEMENTS AND PROFITS À PRENDRE, Vol. XI., pp. 297 et seq.

(p) See title HIGHWAYS, STREETS, AND BRIDGES, Vol. XVI., pp. 59, 60–61.

(q) See title EASEMENTS AND PROFITS À PRENDRE, Vol. XI., pp. 295 et seq.

(r) See p. 524, ante ; and see p. 527, post.

(s) See Rylands v. Fletcher (1868), L. R. 3 H. L. 330, per Lord CAIRNS, L. C., at p. 338 ; West Cumberland Iron and Steel Co. v. Kenyon (1879), 11 Ch. D. 782, C. A., per BRETT, L. J., at p. 787 ; Salt Union, Ltd. v. Brunner, Mond & Co., [1906] 2 K. B. 822. Thus, no liability arises when, by the ordinary working of mines, subterranean water is tapped so as to dry up a well or the under stratum in adjoining property (Acton v. Blundell (1843), 12 M. & W. 324, Ex. Ch. ; Popplewell v. Hodgkinson (1869), L. R. 4 Exch. 248, Ex. Ch. ; see also Smith v. Fletcher (1874), L. R. 9 Exch. 64, Ex. Ch.) ; or is liberated so as to flow by natural gravitation into adjoining mines (Smith v. Kenrick (1849), 7 C. B. 515 ;

SECT. 8.

Neighbouring Owners.(ii.) of neighbouring premises.

So in the case of adjoining or neighbouring buildings or premises, each of the respective owners or occupiers is entitled to the full use and enjoyment of his property in the ordinary manner of its use and for the ordinary purposes for which premises are designed, and, so long as he confines himself to such user and exercises such user and enjoyment in a reasonable manner, having regard to surrounding circumstances, he is not guilty of committing a nuisance (t).

What is not ordinary user.

888. As a general rule, no act can be justified as an ordinary user of premises which in fact results in a state of things amounting to a substantial interference with the ordinary use and enjoyment of property by other persons (a); and a person who injures the property of another or disturbs him in his legitimate enjoyment of it cannot justify that injury or disturbance as being the natural result of the exercise of his own rights of enjoyment, if he exercises

Baird v. Williamson (1863), 15 C. B. (N. s.) 376), even though the defendant knows what the consequences of such working will be (ibid.); or is penned back so as to flood an adjoining mine (Lomax v. Stott (1870), 39 L. J. (CH.) 834); or when the effect of such working is to admit a river which may flood the mines of plaintiff and defendant (Crompton v. Lea (1874), L. R. 19 Eq. 115), or to cause a subsidence and cracks in the defendant's land through which rain collects and escapes into the defendant's, and thence into the plaintiff's, mine (Smith v. Fletcher (1874), L. R. 9 Exch. 64, Ex. Ch.; Wilson v. Waddell (1876), 2 App. Cas. 95); or when, by draining or excavating in his property, a person withdraws the subterranean water which supports the neighbouring land (Popplewell v. Hodgkinson (1869), L. R. 4 Exch. 248, Ex. Ch.; compare Jordeson v. Sutton, Southcoates and Drypool Gas Co., [1899] 2 Ch. 217, C. A., where running silt was withdrawn; Fletcher v. Birkenhead Corporation, [1906] 1 K. B. 605); or dries up the sources of supply to a stream (Chasemore v. Richards (1859), 7 H. L. Cas. 349); or when, by draining his gravel pits, the defendant prevents a riparian owner lower down the stream from growing his watercress so well as formerly (Weeks v. Heward (1862), 10 W. R. 557); or when an owner refrains from cutting thistles which have grown naturally on his land and the seeds of which have consequently been carried by the wind to his neighbour's fields (Giles v. Walker (1890), 24 Q. B. D. 656); see, further, titles AGRICULTURE. Vol. I., p. 295; EASEMENTS AND PROFITS À PRENDRE, Vol. XI., p. 312; MINES, MINERALS, AND QUARRIES, Vol. XX., pp. 589—591; NEGLIGENCE, p. 396, ante.

(t) Thus it has been held a justifiable user of premises, for which no liability arises for the inconvenience caused, when a person has pulled down the wall of a vault in ignorance of the existence of an adjoining vault (Chadwick v. Trower (1839), 6 Bing. (N. c.) 1, Ex. Ch.); when he has stored timber on the roof of his building whereby his neighbour's chimneys were caused to smoke (Bryant v. Lefever (1879), 4 C. P. D. 172, C. A.); when he has used a lower floor of premises for manufacture with a heating apparatus, ignorant of the fact that the business on the upper floor was sensitive to heat, the heat from below not being such as to cause inconvenience or personal discomfort to the persons working above (Robinson v. Kilvert (1889), 41 Ch. D. 88, C. A.); or when he has used his dwelling-house for music and singing lessons (Christie v. Davey, [1893] 1 Ch. 316), or a crèche (Moy v. Stoop (1909), 25 T. L. R. 262); compare cases cited in note (k), p. 528, post.

(a) Walter v. Selfe (1851), 4 De G. & Sm. 315; Bamford v. Turnley (1862), 3 B. & S. 62, 66, Ex. Ch.; Cavey v. Ledbitter (1863), 13 C. B. (N. s.) 470 (brick burning near dwelling-houses); Bostock v. North Staffordshire Rail. Co. (1852), 5 De G. & Sm. 584 (attracting to a reservoir large crowds of persons, who trespassed upon and damaged plaintiff's property); see also Chase v. London County Council (1898), 62 J. P. 184; Stockport Waterworks Co. v. Potter (1861), 7 H. & N. 160 (polluting water in the course of carrying on business); Bartlett v. Marshall (1896), 60 J. P. 104; A.-G. v. Cole & Son, [1901] 1 Ch. 205 (fat-melting business); Knight v. Isle of Wight Electric Light and Power Co. (1904), 73 L. J. (CH.) 299 (interference with ordinary comfort by vibration etc.). As to damage caused by poisonous or overhanging trees, see p. 530, post.

his rights in an excessive and extravagant manner (b), or, it seems, if the inconvenience or injury resulting from the exercise of rights might easily be avoided (c), or if the user is extraordinary (d) or dangerous (e). Moreover, an owner of property who suffers his property to become and remain a place of deposit for refuse and filth, is responsible for any nuisance that arises in consequence (f).

SECT. 8.
Neighbour-
Owners.

(iii.) Extraordinary User of Property.

889. A person cannot, by applying his property to special or extraordinary uses or purposes, whether for business or pleasure, restrict the right of his neighbour in the ordinary and legitimate enjoyment of his property (g), or impose upon his neighbour burdens which, in the ordinary course of things, he is not called upon to bear (h).

Owner cannot restrict rights of neighbour.

890. Extraordinary user may consist of the interference with the course of natural agencies, the alteration or use of premises for unusual or non-natural purposes, the use of them for purposes which are noxious, the bringing of matter on to premises which is likely to do damage if it escapes, or the use of property for dangerous purposes (i).

What constitutes extraordinary user.

891. Liability arises when damage is occasioned by an owner or occupier who, by his active agency, interferes with natural conditions or the normal state of the premises, if by such interference a new or a heavier burden is imposed on his neighbour (j).

Interference with natural or normal conditions.

(b) See p. 524, ante; and see the text, infra.

(c) Beardmore v. Tredwell (1862), 3 Giff. 683; Fritz v. Hobson (1880), 14 Ch. D. 542; see Vaughan v. Menlove (1837), 3 Bing. (N. C.) 468; and see p. 524, ante.

(d) Ball v. Ray (1873), 8 Ch. App. 467, and Broder v. Saillard (1876), 2 Ch. D. 692 (stables contiguous to dwelling-house); Jenkins v. Jackson (1888), 40 Ch. D. 71 (room over offices used for dancing); Bamford v. Turnley (1862), 3 B. & S. 62, 66, Ex. Ch.; Walter v. Selfe (1851), 4 De G. & Sm. 315 (brick burning near dwellings). As to extraordinary user of property, see, further, the text, infra.

(e) See p. 530, post.

(f) A.-G. v. Tod Heatley, [1897] 1 Ch. 560, C. A.; Barker v. Herbert, [1911] 2 K. B. 633, C. A.

(g) Robinson v. Kilvert (1889), 41 Ch. D. 88, C. A.; Eastern and South African Telegraph Co. v. Cape Town Tramways Co., [1902] A. C. 381, P. C. (defendants held not liable for escape of minute quantities of electricity which affected the plaintiffs' apparatus by reason only of the manner in which it had been constructed); see also Weeks v. Heward (1862), 10 W. R. 557; and note (c), p. 529, post.

(h) See the text, infra.

(i) See the text, infra, and p. 530, post.

(j) West Cumberland Iron and Steel Co. v. Kenyon (1879), 11 Ch. D. 782, C. A. Instances of this are found where an owner or occupier erects a cornice so as to overhang his neighbour's property (Fay v. Prentice (1845), 1 C. B. 828); or where, having a right to have his rainwater fall from his roof on to his neighbour's land, he causes damage by erecting a spout to collect and discharge the water in a volume (Reynolds v. Clarke (1725), 1 Stra. 634); or where a railway company, in making a cutting, removed an impervious stratum of soil without taking precautions to prevent flood-water soaking through the exposed stratum (Bagnall v. London and North Western Rail. Co. (1861), 7 H. & N. 423; affirmed (1862), 1 H. & C. 544, Ex. Ch.); or where a mine shaft was sunk and subsequently abandoned without being properly protected (Re Groucott v. Williams (1863), 4 B. & S. 149); or where water which had collected

SECT. 8.

Neighbouring Owners.

Conversion to unusual or unsuitable purposes.

Non-natural purposes.

Storage of matter liable to escape and do injury.

892. The conversion of premises from their original and usual purposes to purposes which are unusual and unsuitable, having regard to the neighbourhood and the surrounding circumstances, is an extraordinary user, and the person so using the premises is guilty of nuisance if in fact substantial annoyance or injury be thereby caused (k).

893. Similarly, the use of premises for purposes which may be considered non-natural, such as the use of a building estate for burning bricks, is an extraordinary user and unjustifiable if damage results (l).

894. A person who for his own purposes creates, collects, or brings on to his property anything which has a tendency to escape beyond his control, and, if it does escape, is likely to do injury to his neighbours, must keep it at his peril, and he is liable for the damage caused by its escape (m). It is immaterial that the thing escapes without his wilful act or default or neglect (n), or that he has no knowledge of its existence (o). In the event of its escape he can only excuse himself by showing that the escape was due to some act or default of the person injured (p), or to vis major or act of God (q), or to the act of a stranger which there was no duty on the part of the defendant to foresee and guard against (r), or that he had a prescriptive or contractual right to discharge it as against the person affected (s), or that the matter was collected or stored on the premises for the benefit or at the

by natural agencies was pumped to a higher level, whence it escaped into an adjoining mine (Baird v. Williamson (1863), 15 C. B. (N. S.) 376); or where defendants had diverted a stream from which water escaped into surface hollows, caused by the ordinary working of a mine, and through them escaped into and flooded plaintiff's mine (Smith v. Musgrave (1877), 47 L. J. (Q. B.) 4, H. L.; S. C. sub nom. Fletcher v. Smith (1877), 2 App. Cas. 781); or where an artificial mound was raised which collected and discharged water to the damage of adjoining premises (Broder v. Saillard (1876), 2 Ch. D. 692; Brine v. Great Western Rail. Co. (1862), 2 B. & S. 402; Hurdman v. North Eastern Rail. Co. (1878), 3 C. P. D. 168, C. A.; Fitzsimons v. Inglis (1814), 5 Taunt. 534); or where land was overstocked with game to the damage of the neighbours (Farrer v. Nelson (1885), 15 Q. B. D. 258); and compare the cases cited in note (s), p. 525, ante.

(k) Ball v. Ray (1873), 8 Ch. App. 467 (converting into stables the front part of a house in a residential street in the west end of London); Reinhardt v. Mentasti (1889), 42 Ch. D. 685 (converting room into a kitchen with a stove not occupying the site of the fireplace); Sanders-Clark v. Grosvenor Mansions Co., Ltd., and G. D'Allesandri, [1900] 2 Ch. 373 (a similar case); and compare cases cited in notes (t), (a), p. 526, ante.

(l) Walter v. Selfe (1851), 4 De G. & Sm. 315; Bamford v. Turnley (1862), 3 B. & S. 62, 66, Ex. Ch.; Cavey v. Ledbitter (1863), 13 C. B. (N. S.) 470.

(m) See the cases cited in note (b), p. 529, post. For cases relating to the pollution of air, see p. 532, post; for cases relating to the escape of noxious fumes, see p. 529, post; and as to the escape of animals, see p. 513, ante; title ANIMALS, Vol. I., pp. 375 et seq.

(n) Rylands v. Fletcher (1868), L. R. 3 H. L. 330; 1 Smith, L. C., 11th ed., 810; Humphries v. Cousins (1877), 2 C. P. D. 239.

(o) Humphries v. Cousins, supra.

(p) See title TORT.

(q) See p. 564, post.

(r) See title NEGLIGENCE, pp. 467 et seq., ante; p. 564, post.

(s) See title EASEMENTS AND PROFITS À PRENDRE, Vol. XL., pp. 243 et seq.; and see p. 563, post.

request, express or implied, of the person damnified (t), or, it seems, that the presence of the matter on the premises was a natural and ordinary user of the premises (a), or that there was statutory authority for storing it and there was no negligence in its escape (b).

SECT. 8.
Neighbouring Owners.

895. The escape of noxious fumes is wholly indefensible, even though the effect of the noxious element would not be felt but for the delicate character of the property affected (c). Nor is it any Escape of noxious fumes.

(t) Carstairs v. Taylor (1871), L. R. 6 Exch. 217 (water cistern used by tenants of upper and lower floors); Anderson v. Oppenheimer (1880), 5 Q. B. D. 602, C. A. (a case similar in facts); Blake v. Woolf, [1898] 2 Q. B. 426 (a similar case); Gill v. Edouin (1894), 71 L. T. 762; affirmed (1895), 72 L. T. 579, C. A. (a case of common benefit); compare Ross v. Fedden (1872), L. R. 7 Q. B. 661 (where the sink from which water escaped was wholly used and controlled by defendant); Blake v. Land and House Property Corporation (1887), 3 T. L. R. 667 (a similar case of a water-closet); Ruddiman & Co. v. Smith (1889), 60 L. T. 708, and Abelson v. Brockman (1889), 54 J. P. 119 (cases of negligence in the user of water apparatus); Stevens v. Woodward (1881), 6 Q. B. D. 318.

(a) See judgment in Blake v. Woolf, supra. As to natural and ordinary user of land, see p. 525, ante.

(b) The principle of Rylands v. Fletcher (1868), L. R. 3 H. L. 330, does not apply to persons properly exercising their statutory powers (Green and Haydon v. Chelsea Waterworks Co. (1894), 70 L. T. 547, C. A., in which case it was unsuccessfully sought to make the defendants liable, in the absence of any negligence, for damage done by the bursting of one of their water mains); see Snook v. Grand Junction Waterworks Co. (1886), 2 T. L. R. 308; Cattle v. Stockton Waterworks (1875), L. R. 10 Q. B. 453; Dunn v. Birmingham Canal Co. (1872), L. R. 8 Q. B. 42, Ex. Ch. As to the exercise of special statutory powers, see pp. 516 et seq., ante. Liability has been held to exist upon the above-mentioned principle when damage has resulted from a person having lighted a bonfire on his premises whence it has spread to his neighbour's (Tubervil v. Stamp (1697), 1 Salk. 13; see Filliter v. Phippard (1847), 11 Q. B. 347, 354); from the escape of sewage (Tenant v. Golding (1704), 1 Salk. 21, 360 ("he whose dirt it is must keep it that it may not trespass"), explained fully in Fletcher v. Rylands (1866), L. R. 1 Exch. 265, 282—284, Ex. Ch.; Humphries v. Cousins (1877), 2 C. P. D. 239 (where the existence of the leaking drain was not even known); Alston v. Grant (1854), 3 E. & B. 128); from the escape of water from artificial reservoirs, although constructed with skill and care by a competent contractor (Rylands v. Fletcher, supra, affirming Fletcher v. Rylands, supra); from the decay of a wire fence (Firth v. Bowling Iron Co. (1878), 3 C. P. D. 254); from the escape of moisture oozing from an artificial mound (Broder v. Saillard (1876), 2 Ch. D. 692; Hurdman v. North Eastern Rail. Co. (1878), 3 C. P. D. 168, C. A.); from the escape of water which had been allowed to collect in a cellar (Snow v. Whitehead (1884), 27 Ch. D. 588); from the escape by natural percolation of sewage matter which had been discharged into a disused well (Ballard v. Tomlinson (1885), 29 Ch. D. 115, C. A.); from the creation of an electric current and the discharge thereof into the earth beyond the control of defendants (National Telephone Co. v. Baker, [1893] 2 Ch. 186; compare Eastern and South African Telegraph Co. v. Cape Town Tramways Co., [1902] A. C. 381, P. C., cited in note (g), p. 527, ante); from the use, for the paving of a public street, of wood blocks soaked in creosote (West v. Bristol Tramways Co., [1908] 2 K. B. 14, C. A.).

(c) Cooke v. Forbes (1867), L. R. 5 Eq. 166 (noxious fumes doing damage to plaintiff's goods by reason of the delicate nature of their manufacture); compare Robinson v. Kilvert (1889), 41 Ch. D. 88, C. A. (where the cause of the damage was heat in the legitimate carrying on of a business). For other cases of noxious fumes, see Walter v. Selfe (1851), 4 De G. & Sm. 315; R. v. Garland (1851), 15 J. P. 260; St. Helen's Smelting Co. v. Tipping (1865), 11 H. L. Cas. 642; Bankart v. Houghton (1860), 27 Beav. 425; Shotts Iron Co. v. Inglis (1882), 7 App. Cas. 518; Doré v. Pecorini (1887), 31 Sol. Jo. 726 (noxious fumes from a restaurant). As to hospitals for infectious diseases, see pp. 534, 561, post. As to the acquisi-

SECT. 8.
Neighbouring Owners.

Property dangerous in itself or its user.

Poisonous or overhanging trees.

Principles of mutual enjoyment.

defence to say that the fumes arise from a trade which is carried on in a locality devoted to the carrying on of similar trades (d).

(iv.) User of Property Fraught with Danger.

896. It is an unreasonable and unlawful use of property by the owners or occupiers to allow premises to become or remain in a ruinous or dangerous condition (e), or to be applied to or for dangerous purposes (f) or operations (g), so as to occasion, or to be likely to occasion, serious injury or damage to the persons or property of others whilst lawfully exercising their rights.

(v.) Damage Caused by Trees.

897. A person who plants poisonous shrubs on his property, or allows his trees to overhang his neighbour's boundary, is liable to an action for nuisance if damage results to his neighbour's cattle (h), provided that they are not trespassing (i), or to his neighbour's crops (j).

SUB-SECT. 3.—Injury to Health and Comfort.

(i.) In General.

898. Apart from any limit to the enjoyment of his property which may have been acquired against him by contract (k), grant, or tion of the right to send impure air over a neighbour's property, see title EASEMENTS AND PROFITS À PRENDRE, Vol. XI., p. 327; and see, further, p. 532, post.

(d) St. Helen's Smelting Co. v. Tipping (1865), 11 H. L. Cas. 642.

(e) See Todd v. Flight (1860), 9 C. B. (N. S.) 377 (ruinous building); R. v. Probert (1799), 2 East, P. C. 1030 (person setting fire to his own house, when in a situation likely to cause danger to others, liable to an indictment); Tarry v. Ashton (1876), 1 Q. B. D. 314 (dangerous lamp overhanging public footway); see also Chaundler v. Robinson (1849), 4 Exch. 163; London Corporation v. Bolt (1799), 5 Ves. 129 (conversion of old houses in London for a purpose that made them dangerous to the public). As to the respective liabilities of landlord and tenant to third persons in respect of want of repair, see title LANDLORD AND TENANT, Vol. XVIII., pp. 504, 505.

(f) R. v. Taylor (1742), 2 Stra. 1167 (storing of gunpowder in large quantities, to the danger of buildings held an indictable nuisance); R. v. Lister and Biggs (1857), Dears. & B. 209, C. C. R. (storing of highly inflammable substances held indictable, although the utmost care was taken to avoid accident); Hepburn v. Lordan (1865), 2 Hem. & M. 345 (storing of jute in large quantities); Crowder v. Tinkler (1816), 19 Ves. 617 (gunpowder factory).

(g) R. v. Mutters (1864), Le. & Ca. 491, C. C. R. (blasting); Arnold v. Furness Rail. Co. (1874), 22 W. R. 613 (blasting); Banister v. Bigge (1865), 34 Beav. 287 (ball practice at rifle range); Hawley v. Steele (1877), 6 Ch. D. 521 (using a common for rifle practice).

(h) See title AGRICULTURE, Vol. I., p. 296; such liability being based on the principle of Rylands v. Fletcher (1868), L. R. 3 H. L. 330. For similar injuries, but based on the breach of obligation to fence, see Lawrence v. Jenkins (1873), L. R. 8 Q. B. 274; Firth v. Bowling Iron Co. (1878), 3 C. P. D. 254; and see title BOUNDARIES, FENCES, AND PARTY WALLS, Vol. III., pp. 129 et seq.

(i) See title AGRICULTURE, Vol. I., p. 297.

(j) Ibid., p. 296.

(k) See Lyttleton Times Co., Ltd. v. Warners, Ltd., [1907] A. C. 476, P. O., where it was held that a tenant could not complain of noise and vibration caused by the landlord using the adjoining building for the purpose and in the manner contemplated by them both when making the lease. As to the effect of the covenant "for quiet enjoyment," see title LANDLORD AND TENANT, Vol. XVIII., pp. 523 et seq.

prescription (l), every person is entitled, as against his neighbour, to the comfortable and healthful enjoyment of the premises owned or occupied by him whether for pleasure or business. In deciding whether in any particular case this right has been invaded and a nuisance thereby caused, it is necessary to determine whether the act complained of is an inconvenience materially interfering with the ordinary physical comfort of human existence, not merely according to elegant or dainty modes and habits of living, but according to plain and sober and simple notions obtaining among the English people (m). It is also necessary to take into account the circumstances and character of the locality in which the complainant is living, and the similar annoyances which previously existed there (n).

SECT. 8.
Neighbouring Owners.

(ii.) Noise and Vibration.

899. The making or causing to be made such a noise or vibration as materially interferes (o) with the comfort of the neighbouring inhabitants, when judged by the standard above stated (p), is an actionable nuisance, and one for which an injunction will be granted (q), and it is no excuse to affirm that the place where it is made is situate in a noisy neighbourhood if the nuisance complained of is a material addition to the noise already existing (r), or to say that the best known means have been taken to prevent or reduce the noise complained of (s), or that the cause of the nuisance is the exercise of a trade in a reasonable and proper manner and in a reasonable place (t).

Nuisance by noise or vibration.

The question of nuisance or no nuisance is one of degree (a), and depends upon the circumstances of the case (b).

Surrounding
circumstances.

(l) As to prescriptive rights, see p. 563, post, and generally, title EASEMENTS AND PROFITS À PRENDRE, Vol. XI., pp. 243 et seq.

(m) Walter v. Selfe (1851), 4 De G. & Sm. 315, per KNIGHT BRUCE, V.-C., at p. 322.

(n) St. Helen's Smelting Co. v. Tipping (1865), 11 H. L. Cas. 642; Polsue and Alfieri, Ltd. v. Rushmer, [1907] A. C. 121.

(o) Injunctions were refused, on the ground that the noise was not sufficient materially to interfere with comfort, in Gaunt v. Fynney (1872), 8 Ch. App. 8 (noise from a factory alleged to disturb domestic comfort); Fanshawe v. London and Provincial Dairy Co. (1888), 4 T. L. R. 694 (noise from a dairy business); Heath v. Brighton Corporation (1908), 98 L. T. 718 (humming noise from electrical generating station alleged to disturb worshippers in a church); Hardman v. Holberton, [1866] W. N. 379 (church bells); Harrison v. Southwark and Vauxhall Water Co., [1891] 2 Ch. 409 (noise of pumps in sinking a shaft); Eyass v. Bettam (1885), 2 T. L. R. 88. As to the jurisdiction of the court in nuisance cases, see title INJUNCTION, Vol. XVII., p. 232.

(p) See the text, supra.

(q) Bradley v. Gill (1688), 1 Lut. 69; Styan v. Hutchinson (1799), 2 Selwyn, Law of Nisi Prius, 13th ed., 1068; and see p. 560, post. As to a prescriptive right to make a noise, see Sturges v. Bridgman (1879), 11 Ch. D. 852, C. A.; title EASEMENTS AND PROFITS À PRENDRE, Vol. XI., p. 240, note (d); and see p. 563, post.

(r) Crumph v. Lambert (1867), L. R. 3 Eq. 409; Rushmer v. Polsue and Alfieri, Ltd., [1906] 1 Ch. 234, C. A.; affirmed, [1907] A. C. 121.

(s) Walker v. Brewster (1867), L. R. 5 Eq. 25; Rushmer v. Polsue and Alfieri, Ltd., supra, [1906] 1 Ch. 234, C. A.; affirmed, [1907] A. C. 121.

(t) Scott v. Frith (1864), 4 F. & F. 349; Gaunt v. Fynney, supra.

(a) Gaunt v. Fynney, supra.

(b) Injunctions have been granted, or may in proper cases be granted, in

SECT. 8.

Neighbouring Owners.Smoke;
fumes; smells.(iii.) Pollution of Air (c).

900. Smoke (d), fumes (e), or smells, either together or singly, which materially interfere with the ordinary comfort, physically, of human existence, when judged by the standard previously stated (f), constitute a nuisance in law. They need not be actually noxious or injurious to health (g); and it is immaterial that there are other sources of discomfort in the neighbourhood, if the one complained of is a material addition thereto (h). The fact that the nuisance respect of noise or vibration arising from factories in a manufacturing town (Crump v. Lambert (1867), L. R. 3 Eq. 409; White v. Cohen (1852), 1 Drew. 312; Baxter v. Bower (1875), 44 L. J. (CH.) 627, C. A.; Heather v. Pardon (1877), 37 L. T. 393; Rushmer v. Polsue and Alfieri, Ltd., [1906] 1 Ch. 234, C. A.; affirmed, [1907] A. C. 121; Gaunt v. Fynney (1872), 8 Ch. App. 8; Manser v. Bowers, [1872] W. N. 163; steam-saws (Gort (Viscountess) v. Clark (1868), 16 W. R. 569; Husey v. Bailey (1895), 11 T. L. R. 221; Gilling v. Gray (1910), 27 T. L. R. 39); steam-hammers (Goose v. Bedford (1873), 21 W. R. 449; Eaden v. Firth (1863), 1 Hem. & M. 573; Roskell v. Whitworth (1871), 19 W. R. 804); mortar-mills (Fenwick v. East London Rail. Co. (1875), L. R. 20 Eq. 544; Sander v. Manley and Rogers, [1878] W. N. 181); electric generating stations (Shelfer v. City of London Electric Lighting Co., Meux's Brewery Co. v. City of London Electric Lighting Co., [1895] 1 Ch. 287, C. A.; Colwell v. St. Pancras Borough Council, [1904] 1 Ch. 707; Knight v. Isle of Wight Electric Light and Power Co. (1904), 73 L. J. (CH.) 299); fêtes and disorderly people attending them (Bostock v. North Staffordshire Rail. Co. (1852), 5 De G. & Sm. 584; Walker v. Breuster (1867), L. R. 5 Eq. 25); roundabouts and steam organs (Inchbald v. Robinson, Inchbald v. Barrington (1869), 4 Ch. App. 388; Winter v. Baker (1887), 3 T. L. R. 569; Phillips v. Thomas (1890), 62 L. T. 793; Lambton v. Mellish, Lambton v. Cox, [1894] 3 Ch. 163; Becker v. Earl's Court, Ltd. (1911), 56 Sol. Jo. 73); the stabling of horses close to dwelling-houses (Ball v. Ray (1873), 8 Ch. App. 467; Broder v. Saillard (1876), 2 Ch. D. 692); blacksmith's forges (Gullick v. Tremlett (1872), 20 W. R. 358; Bradley v. Gill (1868), 1 Lut. 69); bell-ringing (Soltan v. De Held (1852), 2 Sim. (N. S.) 133; see Martin v. Nutkin (1725), 2 P. Wms. 266); rifle-firing at open ranges (Hawley v. Steele (1877), 6 Ch. D. 521), and in rifle galleries (Winter v. Baker, supra); the use of a pestle and mortar in a confectioner's business (Sturges v. Bridgman (1879), 11 Ch. D. 852, C. A.); noise from cans in a dairy business (Tinkler v. Aylesbury Dairy Co. (1888), 5 T. L. R. 52); dancing in rooms over business premises (Jenkins v. Jackson (1888), 40 Ch. D. 71); noisy crowds and whistling for cabs at night at a proprietary club (Bellamy v. Wells (1890), 63 L. T. 635); in connection with an exhibition (Germaine v. London Exhibitions, Ltd. (1896), 75 L. T. 101); the playing of musical instruments discordantly and loudly for the purpose of annoying a neighbour (Christie v. Davey, [1893] 1 Ch. 316); noise from persons attending on Sundays a racecourse in a residential neighbourhood (Dewar v. City and Suburban Racecourse Co., [1899] 1 I. R. 345); the giving of singing lessons in a house adjoining business premises (Motton v. Mills (1897), 13 T. L. R. 427); the use of premises as a skittle and bowling alley (Barham v. Hodges, [1876] W. N. 234); noise from unloading, keeping, and driving cattle at a railway goods station (London and Brighton Rail. Co. v. Truman (1885), 11 App. Cas. 45). As to carrying on of building operations by night, see p. 524, ante.

(c) As to the right to light, see title EASEMENTS AND PROFITS À PRENDRE, Vol. XI., pp. 297 et seq.; and as to the right to air, see ibid., pp. 326, 327. As to the pollution of water, see p. 546, post; title WATERS AND WATERCOURSES.

(d) See, further, p. 541, post.

(e) As to injury to property by noxious fumes, see p. 529, ante,

(f) See p. 531, ante.

(g) R. v. White and Ward (1757), 1 Burr. 333; Banbury Sanitary Authority v. Page (1881), 8 Q. B. D. 97; A.-G. v. Keymer Brick and Tile Co. (1903), 67 J. P. 434.

(h) Salvin v. North Brancepeth Coal Co. (1874), 9 Ch. App. 705. As to joint nuisance, see p. 558, post.

existed long before the complainant occupied his premises does not relieve the offender (i), unless he can show that, as against the complainant, he has acquired the right to commit the annoyance complained of (j).

SECT. 8.
Neighbouring Owners.

The question of nuisance or no nuisance is in these cases pre-eminently one of degree, and no specific rules can be laid down. Circumstances and the locality must also be considered, for that which would be a nuisance in one district may be tolerated in another (k).

Surrounding
circumstances.

901. Apart from fumes and stinks arising from trades held to be offensive (l), the vitiation of the atmosphere has been or may be held to be a nuisance and capable of being restrained by injunction when it arises from the burning of bricks (m), manure works (n), glass works (o), cement works (p), chemical works (q), smoke from railway engine sheds (r), the stabling of horses left standing in a street opposite business premises for an unreasonable time (s), gasworks (t), the smelting of ore (a), a blacksmith's shoeing-forge (b), smoke from factory engines (c), the discharge and deposit of manure at a railway siding (d), the burning of mineral refuse (e), coke-ovens (f), stables (g), deposit of house and street

Fumes etc. from commercial operations.

(i) Bliss v. Hall (1838), 4 Bing. (N. C.) 183. As to the defence of coming to the nuisance, see also p. 565, post.

(j) As to a prescriptive right to pollute air, see Harvie v. Robertson (1903), 5 F. (Ct. of Sess.) 338, and title EASEMENTS AND PROFITS À PRENDRE, Vol. XI., p. 327.

(k) See A.-G. v. Cole & Son, [1901] 1 Ch. 205; Reinhardt v. Mentasti (1889), 42 Ch. D. 685.

(l) See pp. 534, 535, post.

(m) Walter v. Selfe (1851), 4 De G. & Sm. 315; Pollock v. Lester (1853), 11 Hare, 266; Cleeve v. Mahany (1861), 9 W. R. 882; Beardmore v. Tredwell (1862), 3 Giff. 683; Bamford v. Turnley (1862), 3 B. & S. 66, Ex. Ch.; Cavey v. Ledbitter (1863), 13 C. B. (N. S.) 470; Luscombe v. Steer (1867), 17 L. T. 229; Roberts v. Clarke (1868), 18 L. T. 49; Bareham v. Hall (1870), 22 L. T. 116; Dunston v. Neal, Seely v. Neal (1885), 1 T. L. R. 462.

(n) Knight v. Gardner (1869), 19 L. T. 673.

(o) Savile v. Kilner (1872), 26 L. T. 277.

(p) Umfreville v. Johnson (1875), 10 Ch. App. 580; A.-G. v. Francis (1874), 1 Seton, Judgments and Orders, 6th ed., 605.

(q) Bigsby v. Dickinson (1876), 4 Ch. D. 24, C. A.; Cooke v. Forbes (1867), L. R. 5 Eq. 166; Barlow v. Bailey, [1871] W. N. 95; Brooke v. Wigg (1878), 8 Ch. D. 510, C. A.; R. v. White and Ward (1757), 1 Burr. 333.

(r) Smith v. Midland Rail. Co. and Lancashire and Yorkshire Rail. Co. (1877), 37 L. T. 224.

(s) Benjamin v. Storr (1874), L. R. 9 C. P. 400.

(t) Broadbent v. Imperial Gas Co. (1857), 7 De G. M. & G. 436.

(a) Tipping v. St. Helen's Smelting Co. (1865), 1 Ch. App. 66; Blankart v. Houghton (1860), 27 Beav. 425; see title MINES, MINERALS, AND QUARRIES, Vol. XX., pp. 592, 593.

(b) Gullick v. Tremlett (1872), 20 W. R. 358.

(c) Sampson v. Smith (1838), 8 Sim. 272; Crump v. Lambert (1867), L. R. 3 Eq. 409.

(d) Swaine v. Great Northern Rail. Co. (1864), 4 De G. J. & Sm. 211, C. A.

(e) Fleming v. Hislop (1886), 11 App. Cas. 686, 691.

(f) Salvin v. North Brancepeth Coal Co. (1874), 9 Ch. App. 705.

(g) Rupier v. London Tramways Co., [1893] 2 Ch. 588, C. A.

SECT. 8. refuse (h), a cooking stove (i), the manufacture of fish guano and Neighbour- fish oil (j), the carrying on of a fried fish shop (k). ing Owners. A hospital for infectious diseases is not necessarily a nuisance (l), Hospital. nor is it an offensive business (m) under the Public Health Acts (n).

(iv.) Interference with Prospect or View.

Destruction of 902. Apart from the infringement of a right to light, and privacy or prospect. assuming that the act complained of is otherwise lawful (o), no action lies for the invasion of privacy by the opening of windows, nor for the obstruction of a view or prospect (p), even though the value of a house or premises may be diminished thereby (q).

SECT. 9.—Offensive Trades.

At common 903. Though the carrying on of offensive trades (r) is largely law. regulated by statute, and nuisances arising therefrom may be dealt with summarily under statutory provisions (s), the common law liability remains, and a person is guilty of a misdemeanour who, in the carrying on of any trade or occupation, makes loud noises, or offensive or unwholesome smells (t), in such places and in such (h) A.-G. v. Keymer Brick and Tile Co. (1903), 67 J. P. 434.

(i) Sanders-Clark v. Grosvenor Mansions Co., Ltd. and G. D'Allessandri, [1900]
 2 Ch. D. 373.

(j) A.-G. v. Plymouth Fish Guano and Oil Co., Ltd. (1911), 76 J. P. 19.

(k) Errington v. Birt (1911), 105 L. T. 373.

(l) Metropolitan Asylum District v. Hill (1881), 6 App. Cas. 193; A.-G. v. Rathmines and Pembroke Hospital Board, [1904] 1 I. R. 161, C. A.

(m) Withington Local Board of Health v. Manchester Corporation, [1893] 2 Ch. 19, C. A. As to an injunction in such a case, see p. 561, post.

(n) Public Health Act, 1875 (38 & 39 Vict. c. 55); Public Health (London) Act, 1891 (54 & 55 Vict. c. 76). As to the Public Health Acts generally, see title PUBLIC HEALTH AND LOCAL ADMINISTRATION.

(o) If the act causing the interference with the prospect or view is itself illegal, any loss arising from the interference may be recovered as damages. Where a council obstructed plaintiff's windows by unlawfully erecting a stand in the public street, whereby plaintiff lost the profit she would otherwise have made by letting the windows to view a procession, she was held entitled to receive such loss as special damage from the council (Campbell v. Paddington Corporation, [1911] 1 K. B. 869).

(p) Aldred's Case (1610), 9 Co. Rep. 57 b; Knowles v. Richardson (1670), 1 Mod. Rep. 55; Fishmongers' Co. v. East India Co. (1753), 1 Dick. 163, per Lord HARDWICKE, L.C.; A.-G. v. Doughty (1752), 2 Ves. Sen. 453; Chandler v. Thompson (1811), 3 Camp. 80, per LE BLANC, J.; Wells v. Ody (1836), 7 C. & P. 410, per PARKE, B.; Re Penny and South Eastern Rail. Co. (1857), 7 E. & B. 660 (no compensation for being overlooked from railway); Turner v. Spooner (1861), 1 Drew. & Sm. 467; Johnson v. Wyatt (1863), 2 De G. J. & Sm. 18, C. A., per TURNER, L.J., at p. 27; Tapling v. Jones (1865), 11 H. L. Cas. 290, per Lord WESTBURY, L.C., at p. 305; Smith v. Owen (1866), 35 L. J. (CH.) 317 (bringing forward adjoining shop front); Butt v. Imperial Gas Co. (1866), 2 Ch. App. 158 (gas meter blocking view of business premises); Potts v. Smith (1868), L. R. 6 Eq. 311; Buccluch (Duke) v. Metropolitan Board of Works (1870), L. R. 5 Exch. 221, 237, Ex. Ch.; Dalton v. Angus (1881), 6 App. Cas. 740, 798, 824; Foli v. Devonshire Club (1887), 3 T. L. R. 706 (obstructing view of a procession by erecting a stand); compare Campbell v. Paddington Corporation, supra; see note (o), supra.

(q) Re Penny and South Eastern Rail. Co., supra.

(r) As to trades generally, see title TRADE AND TRADE UNIONS.

(s) See titles METROPOLIS, Vol. XX., p. 494; PUBLIC HEALTH AND LOCAL ADMINISTRATION.

(t) Which need not be injurious to the health if offensive to the senses (R. v.

circumstances as to annoy any considerable number of the public (u) in the exercise of their common rights, as by the emission of noisome stinks (v), smells from a slaughter-house (w), or tannery (a), or the emission of poisonous fumes (b).

SECT. 9.
Offensive Trades.

Certain trades and occupations, when carried on in populous places, have, by reason of the effluvia from them, been held to be nuisances at common law, for example, a tallow-chandler's (c), a lime-kiln and dye-house (d), fat-melting works (e), a slaughter-house (f), a tallow melter's (g), a tan pit (h), a tanner's (i), soap works (k), horse-flesh boilers (l), a varnish maker's (m), the keeping of swine (n), or a brewhouse (o), but this last is not of necessity a nuisance (p).

SECT. 10.—Open Spaces and Commons.

904. A violation of rights of common may amount to a nuisance for which the commoner has his remedy at common law (q).

Common law
nuisances.

Conservators of commons, and persons responsible for the management of open spaces and recreation grounds, are empowered by statute to make bye-laws and regulations for the prevention of nuisances in such places (r).

Statutory
nuisances.

SECT. 11.—Public Health, Comfort, and Safety.

SUB-SECT. 1.—At Common Law.

905. Whilst there are many statutory provisions (s) which enable nuisances affecting public health and comfort to be dealt with

Common law
liability.

Neil (1826), 2 C. & P. 485; see Bishop Auckland Local Board v. Bishop Auckland Iron Co. (1882), 10 Q. B. D. 138; Malton Board of Health v. Malton Manure Co. (1879), 4 Ex. D. 302).

(u) See R. v. White and Ward (1757), 1 Burr. 333; R. v. Pappineau (1726), 1 Stra. 686; R. v. Davey (1805), 5 Esp. 217.

(v) R. v. White and Ward, supra; and see pp. 532, 533, ante.

(w) R. v. Watts (1826), 2 C. & P. 486.

(a) R. v. Pappineau, supra.

(b) R. v. Garland (1851), 5 Cox, C. C. 165.

(c) Bliss v. Hall (1838), 4 Bing. (N. C.) 183.

(d) See Aldred's Case (1610), 9 Co. Rep. 57 b.

(e) A.-G. v. Cole & Son, [1901] 1 Ch. 205; R. v. Watts, supra.

(f) Jones v. Powell (1628), Palm. 536, 539.

(g) Morley v. Pragnel (1638), Cro. Car. 510.

(h) Jones v. Powell, supra.

(i) R. v. Pappineau, supra.

(k) R. v. Pierce (1683), 2 Show. 327.

(l) Grindley v. Booth (1865), 3 H. & C. 669.

(m) R. v. Neil (1826), 2 C. & P. 485.

(n) Aldred's Case, supra.

(o) R. v. Cross (1826), 2 C. & P. 483.

(p) A.-G. v. Cleaver (1811), 18 Ves. 211, 218; Gorton v. Smart (1822), 1 Sim. & St. 66.

(q) See title COMMONS AND RIGHTS OF COMMON, Vol. IV., pp. 514 et seq.

(r) See titles COMMONS AND RIGHTS OF COMMON, Vol. IV., pp. 603, 607, 608, 611, 612; OPEN SPACES AND RECREATION GROUNDS, pp. 587, 591, 594, 597, 599, post.

(s) See titles METROPOLIS, Vol. XX., p. 465; PUBLIC HEALTH AND LOCAL ADMINISTRATION.

SECT. 11.
Public Health,
Comfort,
and Safety.

Injurious
food.

Summary
powers for abatement of certain
nuisances.

summarily, the common law liability remains, and every person commits an indictable nuisance who does anything which endangers the lives, health, or property of the public (t).

The public exposure for sale of food known to be unfit for consumption and the mixing of unwholesome ingredients in food are acts constituting criminal nuisances, as being dangerous to the lives and health of the public, but such offences are usually dealt with under special statutory provisions (a).

SUB-SECT. 2.—Under Statute.

906. The Public Health Act, 1875 (b), gives to municipal and to urban and rural district councils (c), and the Public Health (London) Act, 1891 (d), gives to metropolitan borough councils and the Common Council of the City of London (e), in their respective districts, special powers to deal summarily with certain classes of nuisances which the health of the community requires to be dealt with speedily (f). These powers, however, are in addition to any powers under other statutes or at law or in equity, subject to the limitation that no person is to be punished for the same offence both under the provisions of the Public Health Acts (g) and any other law or enactment (h); and the local authorities are empowered, if they think the statutory remedies are inadequate, to take other legal proceedings in respect of the nuisances summarily abatable, and to pay the expenses thereof out of the funds and rates applicable by them to the general

(t) See title CRIMINAL LAW AND PROCEDURE, Vol. IX., pp. 554 et seq. Examples are: the keeping of a corpse unburied (R. v. Vann (1851), 2 Den. 325, 331, C. C. R.), provided the person charged has the means for paying for its burial (ibid.; and see title BURIAL AND CREMATION, Vol. III., p. 404); the exposure in a public place of a person infected with small-pox (R. v. Vantandillo (1815), 4 M. & S. 73), but it would be a defence to an indictment if it could be shown that there was lawful and sufficient excuse for so doing (R. v. Burnett (1815), 4 M. & S. 272; see Metropolitan Asylum District v. Hill (1881), 6 App. Cas. 193, per Lord BLACKBURN, at p. 204); the keeping of explosives or highly inflammable matter in a manner calculated to terrify the neighbourhood or to do damage to neighbouring property (R. v. Lister and Biggs (1857), Dears. & B. 209, C. C. R.; R. v. Taylor (1742), 2 Stra. 1167; R. v. Bennett (1858), Bell, C. C. 1; for statutes now regulating the keeping of explosives, see title EXPLOSIVES, Vol. XIV., p. 356); going about a public street armed so as to terrify the public (R. v. Meade (1903), 19 T. L. R. 540).

(a) See title FOOD AND DRUGS, Vol. XV., p. 35.

(b) 38 & 39 Vict. c. 55.

(c) See title LOCAL GOVERNMENT, Vol. XIX., pp. 262, 293, 329, 385.

(d) 54 & 55 Vict. c. 76.

(e) See title METROPOLIS, Vol. XX., p. 465.

(f) Public Health Act, 1875 (38 & 39 Vict. c. 55), ss. 91—111; Public Health (London) Act, 1891 (54 & 55 Vict. c. 76), ss. 2—14. As to the jurisdiction over ships for these purposes, see Public Health Act, 1875 (38 & 39 Vict. c. 55), s. 110; Public Health (London) Act, 1891 (54 & 55 Vict. c. 76), s. 110; see titles METROPOLIS, Vol. XX., p. 466; PUBLIC HEALTH AND LOCAL ADMINISTRATION; as to port sanitary authorities, see title LOCAL GOVERNMENT, Vol. XIX., p. 292.

(g) Public Health Act, 1875 (38 & 39 Vict. c. 55); Public Health (London) Act, 1891 (54 & 55 Vict. c. 76). As to the Public Health Acts generally, see title PUBLIC HEALTH AND LOCAL ADMINISTRATION.

(h) Public Health Act, 1875 (38 & 39 Vict. c. 55), s. 111; Public Health (London) Act, 1891 (54 & 55 Vict. c. 76), s. 138.

purposes of the Public Health Acts (i), but such proceedings must be taken in the name of the Attorney-General (k).

It is the duty of the authorities above mentioned to cause inspection to be made of their districts for the detection of nuisances summarily abatable, and to employ their statutory powers to abate them (l).

907. The nuisances which are summarily abatable under the Public Health Acts (i) are those which constitute a nuisance, that is, a nuisance to the public generally, or those which are injurious [or dangerous (m)] to health (n), that is, private nuisances of this character (o).

The public nuisance here referred to must be such as to affect the health or comfort of the neighbourhood. It does not include such a nuisance as arises from the dripping of water from a bridge on to the highway (o). But it is not necessary that the nuisance should cause injury to health if it interferes with the personal comfort of the public (p).

908. The following are the nuisances summarily abatable under the Public Health Acts (i):—

(1) Any premises in such a state as to be a nuisance or injurious [or dangerous (m)] to health (n). This refers to the condition of the premises themselves (q). It does not extend to all premises on which there is a nuisance, and, therefore, does not affect nuisances arising from the sewage works or sewers of a local authority (r), nor a nuisance arising from the use to which premises are put (s).

SECT. 11.
Public Health,
Comfort,
and Safety.

Duty of authorities.
General
description
of nuisances summarily abatable.

Meaning of
"public nuisance."

Specific
nuisances summarily
abatable.
Unwholesome
premises.

(i) Public Health Act, 1875 (38 & 39 Vict. c. 55), s. 107; Public Health (London) Act, 1891 (54 & 55 Vict. c. 76), s. 13.

(k) See pp. 550, 552, post.

(l) Public Health Act, 1875 (38 & 39 Vict. c. 55), s. 92; Public Health (London) Act, 1891 (54 & 55 Vict. c. 76), s. 1. As to the methods of compelling the authorities to perform this duty, see titles LOCAL GOVERNMENT, Vol. XIX., pp. 277, 291, 338, 375; METROPOLIS, Vol. XX., p. 465; PUBLIC HEALTH AND LOCAL ADMINISTRATION. For the general duty imposed on local authorities to enforce any law relating to nuisances, see Housing of the Working Classes Act, 1885 (48 & 49 Vict. c. 72), s. 7, but this is repealed as to London (Public Health (London) Act, 1891 (54 & 55 Vict. c. 76), s. 142).

(m) In London only.

(n) Public Health Act, 1875 (38 & 39 Vict. c. 55), s. 91 (1); Public Health (London) Act, 1891 (54 & 55 Vict. c. 76), s. 2 (1) (a).

(o) Great Western Rail. Co. v. Bishop (1872), L. R. 7 Q. B. 550, per COCKBURN, C.J., at p. 552.

(p) Malton Board of Health v. Malton Manure Co. (1879), 4 Ex. D. 302; Bishop Auckland Local Board v. Bishop Auckland Iron Co. (1882), 10 Q. B. D. 138; Houldershaw v. Martin (1885), 49 J. P. 179.

(q) R. v. Parlbly (1889), 22 Q. B. D. 520, per WILLS, J., at p. 525.

(r) R. v. Parlbly, supra; Fulham Vestry v. London County Council, [1897] 2 Q. B. 76.

(s) Such a user may be restrained by injunction; see Metropolitan Asylum District v. Hill (1881), 6 App. Cas. 193, and cases cited in notes (f), (g), p. 530, ante; A.-G. v. Tod Heatley, [1897] 1 Ch. 560, C. A. (where an owner was restrained from allowing his vacant land to become the repository of filth and refuse); A.-G. v. Broun (1898), Times, 23rd July (where gipsies were restrained from occupying land as an encampment without previously making satisfactory

SECT. 11.

Public Health, Comfort, and Safety.

Pools, ditches etc.

Keeping of animals.

Accumulation or deposit.

Over-crowding.

(2) Any pool, ditch (t), gutter, watercourse [cistern, water-closet, earth closet (a)], privy, urinal, cesspool, drain (b) [dung-pit (a)], or ashpit so foul or in such a state as to be a nuisance or injurious [or dangerous (a)] to health (c); and, where the Public Health Acts Amendment Act, 1907 (d), is applied (e), any gutter, drain, shoot, stack-pipe, or down-spout in such a condition as to cause damp to a building (f), and any cistern for domestic water supply so placed, constructed, or kept as to render the water liable to contamination at the risk of health (g).

(3) Any animal so kept as to be a nuisance or injurious [or dangerous (a) to health] (h).

(4) Any accumulation or deposit which is a nuisance or injurious [or dangerous (a)] to health, except when necessary for the effectual carrying on of any business or manufacture, and the court is satisfied that it has not been kept longer than necessary, and that the best available means have been taken to prevent injury to the public health (i); and, where the Public Health Acts Amendment Act, 1907 (k), is applied (l), any deposit of material which renders a building so damp as to be dangerous or injurious to health (m).

(5) Any house (n) or part of a house so overcrowded as to be sanitary arrangements); A.-G. v. Stone (1895), 60 J. P. 168 (where a landowner was restrained from letting his land to gipsies when it was shown that the occupation of the land by them was dangerous to the health of the neighbourhood).

(t) As to the power of local authorities to deal with offensive ponds, pools, ditches, and the like, see title PUBLIC HEALTH AND LOCAL ADMINISTRATION; and see note (t), p. 540, post.

(a) In London only.

(b) See title SEWERS AND DRAINS.

(c) Public Health Act, 1875 (38 & 39 Vict. c. 55), s. 91 (2); Public Health (London) Act, 1891 (54 & 55 Vict. c. 76), s. 2 (1) (b).

(d) 7 Edw. 7, c. 53.

(e) See title PUBLIC HEALTH AND LOCAL ADMINISTRATION.

(f) Public Health Acts Amendment Act, 1907 (7 Edw. 7, c. 53), s. 35.

(g) Ibid.

(h) Public Health Act, 1875 (38 & 39 Vict. c. 55), s. 91 (3); Public Health (London) Act, 1891 (54 & 55 Vict. c. 76), s. 2 (1) (c); see also p. 513, ante, and title ANIMALS, Vol. I., p. 372.

(i) Public Health Act, 1875 (38 & 39 Vict. c. 55), s. 91 (4), and proviso; Public Health (London) Act, 1891 (54 & 55 Vict. c. 76), s. 2 (1) (d), (2) (i); Bishop Auckland Local Board v. Bishop Auckland Iron Co. (1882), 10 Q. B. D. 138 (deposit of cinders etc. giving off objectionable but not injurious fumes); see also Smith v. Waghorn (1863), 27 J. P. 744 (accumulation of dung); Margate Pier (Proprietors) v. Margate Town Council (1869), 33 J. P. 437 (accumulation of seaweed); Draper v. Sperring (1861), 10 C. B. (N. S.) 113 (sheep droppings in a market-place; and see title MARKETS AND FAIRS, Vol. XX., p. 22, note (n)); Great Northern Rail. Co. v. Lurgan Town Commissioners, [1897] 2 I. R. 340 (the loading and unloading of manure at a railway station held to be no nuisance within this provision).

(k) 7 Edw. 7, c. 53.

(l) See title PUBLIC HEALTH AND LOCAL ADMINISTRATION.

(m) Public Health Acts Amendment Act, 1907 (7 Edw. 7, c. 53), s. 35.

(n) This includes a building used by a philanthropic association as a night shelter for the destitute (P. v. Mead, Ex parte Gates (1895), 59 J. P. 150); and the superintendent of the association is the proper defendant (ibid.). The tenant and not the landlord was held liable in Home v. Kelso Local Authority (1876), 3 Couper, 239. It also includes a day school where there are neither dangerous or injurious to the health of the inmates (o), whether or not members of the same family (p). If there are two convictions within three months the petty sessional court may order the closing of the house for such period as the court thinks necessary (q). In London, if the medical officer of health certifies to such overcrowding, the sanitary authority must take summary proceedings (r) to abate the nuisance (s). A warrant to enter any house alleged to be overcrowded may be obtained (t).

SECT. 11.
Public Health, Comfort,
and Safety.

(6) Any factory, workshop, or workplace not covered by the definition of "factory" (excluding "domestic factory") in the Factory and Workshop Act, 1901 (u), which is not kept in a cleanly state, free from effluvia, properly ventilated, and free from overcrowding. In London, where a dwelling-house is used as such factory, workshop, or workplace, or such factory is used as a dwelling-house, the court must have regard to such circumstances when considering the question of nuisance from overcrowding (a).

Unwholesome
factories etc.

(7) Smoke nuisances as hereafter described (b).

Smoke.

(8) In London, the absence from premises of water fittings as prescribed (c) under statutory powers (d), and any occupied house without a proper and sufficient supply of water (e).

Absence of water fittings
(in London).

(9) Premises in London used by a metropolitan borough council for the treatment and disposal of street or house refuse which are a nuisance or injurious or dangerous to health (f).

Refuse destructors
(in London).

909. Various statutes have extended the provisions of the Public Health Act, 1875 (g), relating to nuisances summarily abatable, to unfenced shafts and side entrances of mines which have been abandoned and discontinued (h), to certain unfenced shafts or side

Extensions of list of nuisances summarily
abatable.

boarders nor resident staff (Wimbledon Urban District Council v. Hastings (1902), 67 J. P. 45); and as regards London, see definition of "house" in the Public Health (London) Act, 1891 (54 & 55 Vict. c. 76), s. 141.

(o) The temporary occupants of a night shelter are inmates (R. v. Slade, Ex parte Robinson (1896), 60 J. P. 358).

(p) Public Health Act, 1875 (38 & 39 Vict. c. 55), s. 91 (5); Public Health (London) Act, 1891 (54 & 55 Vict. c. 76), s. 2 (1) (e).

(q) Public Health Act, 1875 (38 & 39 Vict. c. 55), s. 109; Public Health (London) Act, 1891 (54 & 55 Vict. c. 76), s. 7.

(r) See p. 566, post.

(s) Public Health (London) Act, 1891 (54 & 55 Vict. c. 76), s. 4 (3) (c).

(t) Ibid., s. 115 (6).

(u) 1 Edw. 7, c. 22.

(a) See title FACTORIES AND SHOPS, Vol. XIV., pp. 436 et seq.

(b) See p. 541, post.

(c) That is, prescribed under the Metropolis Water Act, 1871 (34 & 35 Vict. c. 113), ss. 27—33; see title WATER SUPPLY.

(d) Public Health (London) Act, 1891 (54 & 55 Vict. c. 76), s. 2 (1) (f). This absence of fittings renders the premises unfit for human habitation unless the contrary is shown (ibid., s. 4 (3) (d)).

(e) Ibid., s. 48 (1). If it is a dwelling-house the absence of this supply renders it unfit for human habitation.

(f) Public Health (London) Act, 1891 (54 & 55 Vict. c. 76), s. 22 (2). In this case the county council must take the summary proceedings (ibid.).

(g) 38 & 39 Vict. c. 55, ss. 91—111.

(h) Coal Mines Act, 1911 (1 & 2 Geo. 5, c. 50), ss. 26, 37 (which come into operation on the 1st July, 1912); see title MINES, MINERALS, AND QUARRIES, Vol. XX., p. 603; and titles BOUNDARIES, FENCES, AND PARTY WALLS,

SECT. 11.
Public Health,
Comfort,
and Safety.

Penalised
nuisances.

Bye-laws.

Boundary ditches etc.

entrances of metalliferous mines (i), to unfenced quarries (k), to tents, vans, sheds, or similar structures used for human habitation, which are in such a state as to be a nuisance or injurious to health, or which are so overcrowded as to be injurious to the health of the inmates, whether or not members of the same family (l).

910. Apart from nuisances made summarily abatable (m), and those which are specially mentioned elsewhere (n), there are others in respect of which proceedings in courts of summary jurisdiction may be taken for the recovery of penalties or for the suppression of the nuisance, or in respect of which bye-laws may be made with consequential penalties summarily recoverable (o).

911. An urban authority—that is, a borough council or urban district council (p)—has power to make bye-laws (q) for the prevention of nuisances arising from snow, filth, dust, ashes, and rubbish (r), and sanitary authorities in London may make bye-laws in respect of tents, vans, and sheds used for human habitation (s).

912. Offensive watercourses or ditches lying near to or forming the boundary of districts of local authorities may be dealt with by taking summary proceedings against the neighbouring authority and obtaining an order for the execution of works necessary for the purpose of removing the nuisance (t); and it is no defence to

Vol. III., p. 130; HIGHWAYS, STREETS, AND BRIDGES, Vol. XVI. p. 169; MINES, MINERALS, AND QUARRIES, Vol. XX., p. 585.

(i) Metalliferous Mines Regulation Act, 1872 (35 & 36 Vict. c. 77), s. 13; see title MINES, MINERALS, AND QUARRIES, Vol. XX., p. 628.

(k) Quarry (Fencing) Act, 1887 (50 & 51 Vict. c. 19), s. 3; see title MINES, MINERALS, AND QUARRIES, Vol. XX., pp. 634, 635.

(l) Housing of the Working Classes Act, 1885 (48 & 49 Vict. c. 72), s. 9; Public Health (London) Act, 1891 (54 & 55 Vict. c. 76), s. 95 (1). Tents etc. of His Majesty's naval or military forces are expressly exempted (ibid., s. 95 (4)).

(m) See pp. 536, 537, ante.

(n) See, as to animals, p. 513, ante; as to offensive trades, p. 534, ante; as to sanitary conveniences, see title PUBLIC HEALTH AND LOCAL ADMINISTRATION; as to smoke, p. 541, post; as to water, see p. 546, post; title WATERS AND WATERCOURSES.

(o) See p. 565, post. As to proceedings in courts of summary jurisdiction generally, see title MAGISTRATES, Vol. XIX., pp. 589 et seq.

(p) Public Health Act, 1875 (38 & 39 Vict. c. 55), s. 6; Local Government Act, 1894 (56 & 57 Vict. c. 73), s. 20; see title LOCAL GOVERNMENT, Vol. XIX., pp. 262, 292, 293, 302.

(q) As to bye-laws generally, see ibid., p. 328; titles METROPOLIS, Vol. XX., pp. 460, 467; PUBLIC HEALTH AND LOCAL ADMINISTRATION.

(r) Public Health Act, 1875 (38 & 39 Vict. c. 55), s. 44; see title HIGHWAYS, STREETS, AND BRIDGES, Vol. XVI., p. 256. The like power exists in London in respect of the same matters in streets (Public Health (London) Act, 1891 (54 & 55 Vict. c. 76), s. 16 (1) (a)); see title METROPOLIS, Vol. XX., pp. 461, 462. As to similar bye-laws in respect of the keeping of animals, see p. 514, ante; and in respect of other matters, see title PUBLIC HEALTH AND LOCAL ADMINISTRATION. For the effect of such a bye-law, see London, Brighton, and South Coast Rail. Co. v. Hayward's Heath Urban District Council (1899), 80 L. T. 266.

(s) Public Health (London) Act, 1891 (54 & 55 Vict. c. 76), s. 95 (2).

(t) Public Health Act, 1875 (38 & 39 Vict. c. 55), s. 48. As to the general powers to deal with offensive ditches, pools etc., given to parish councils and to metropolitan sanitary authorities, see titles LOCAL GOVERNMENT, Vol. XIX., p. 248; METROPOLIS, Vol. XX., pp. 456, 467, 468; PUBLIC HEALTH AND LOCAL ADMINISTRATION.

say that the order cannot be complied with without committing a trespass (a).

SECT. 12.—Public Morality.

913. The following are public nuisances liable to be punished criminally, either at common law or under the statutes specially relating to them: disorderly houses (b), which include bawdy houses (c) and unlicensed places of entertainment (d), gaming houses (e); betting houses (f); lotteries (g); obscene publications (h); betting in streets (i); acts of public indecency (k); disgusting exhibitions (l).

SECT. 13.—Smoke.

SUB-SECT. 1.—In General.

914. Smoke, even when unaccompanied by noise or noxious vapours, and although not injurious to health, may constitute an actionable nuisance (m), or be the subject of indictment (n), provided that the annoyance produced is such as materially to interfere with the ordinary comfort of human existence. The fact that the smoke issues from premises in a manufacturing town does not affect the question of nuisance or no nuisance, if it can be shown that the annoyance otherwise caused has been materially increased (o).

915. In urban districts the wilfully setting on fire or causing to be set on fire any chimney renders the offender liable to a penalty; but this provision does not exempt him from liability to be indicted for felony (p).

SECT. 11.
Public Health,
Comfort,
and Safety.
—
Public
nuisances.

When smoke amounts to nuisance.

Chimney fires.

(a) Woburn Sanitary Authority v. Newport Pagnell Sanitary Authority (1887), 51 J. P. 356.

(b) See titles CRIMINAL LAW AND PROCEDURE, Vol. IX., pp. 541 et seq.; INTOXICATING LIQUORS, Vol. XVIII., pp. 136 et seq.

(c) See titles CRIMINAL LAW AND PROCEDURE, Vol. IX., p. 542; INTOXICATING LIQUORS, Vol. XVIII., p. 138.

(d) See title CRIMINAL LAW AND PROCEDURE, Vol. IX., p. 543.

(e) Ibid., pp. 545 et seq.; GAMING AND WAGERING, Vol. XV., pp. 287 et seq.; INTOXICATING LIQUORS, Vol. XVIII., pp. 138, 139.

(f) See titles CRIMINAL LAW AND PROCEDURE, Vol. IX., pp. 548 et seq.; GAMING AND WAGERING, Vol. XV., pp. 294 et seq.

(g) See title CRIMINAL LAW AND PROCEDURE, Vol. IX., pp. 547, 548.

(h) Ibid., pp. 538, 539.

(i) Ibid., p. 551.

(k) Ibid., p. 537.

(l) Ibid., p. 537.

(m) Aldred's Case (1610), 9 Co. Rep. 57 b; see Crump v. Lambert (1867), L. R. 3 Eq. 409; affirmed on appeal, 17 L. T. 133; Savile v. Kilner (1871), 26 L. T. 277; Umfreville v. Johnson (1875), 10 Ch. App. 580; Smith v. Midland Rail. Co. and Lancashire and Yorkshire Rail. Co. (1877), 37 L. T. 224; Rapier v. London Tramways Co., [1893] 2 Ch. 588, C. A.; Lambton v. Mellish, Lambton v. Cox, [1894] 3 Ch. 163; Husey v. Bailey (1895), 11 T. L. R. 221; Sanders-Clark v. Grosvenor Mansions Co., Ltd., and G. D'Allessandri, [1900] 2 Ch. 373.

(n) See R. v. White and Ward (1757), 1 Burr. 333; R. v. Dewsnap (1812), 16 East, 194.

(o) See Crump v. Lambert, supra.

(p) Town Police Clauses Act, 1847 (10 & 11 Vict. c. 89), s. 30, incorporated with the Public Health Act, 1875 (38 & 39 Vict. c. 55) (ibid., s. 171). As to arson, see title CRIMINAL LAW AND PROCEDURE, Vol. IX., p. 770.

SECT. 13.
Smoke.

Accidental chimney fires render the occupier in urban districts liable to a penalty of 10s., unless it can be shown that there has been no omission, neglect, or carelessness on the part of himself or his servant (q).

SUB-SECT. 2.—Smoke from Fireplaces and Furnaces of Works etc.

(i.) Capable of Summary Abatement (r).

When summarily
abatable.

916. Any fireplace or furnace used for working engines by steam, or in any mill, factory, dye-house, brewery, bakehouse, or gasworks, or in any manufacturing or trade process whatever, which does not, as far as practicable (s), consume the smoke arising from the combustible used therein, is a nuisance liable to be dealt with summarily under statutory provisions (t), unless the justices are satisfied that such fireplace or furnace is constructed in such manner as to consume as far as practicable (a), having regard to the nature of the manufacture or trade, all smoke arising therefrom, and that such fireplace or furnace has been carefully attended to by the person having charge thereof (b).

The question of the efficiency of the construction, or of any alteration, of the fireplace or furnace is one of fact for the justices (c).

Black smoke from trade chimneys.

917. Any chimney (d), not being a chimney of a private dwelling-house (e), sending forth black smoke in such quantity as to be a nuisance is capable of being dealt with summarily (f) under statutory provisions (g), and in such case the offence is completed

(g) Town Police Clauses Act, 1847 (10 & 11 Vict. c. 89), s. 31.

(r) For proceedings for summary abatement, see pp. 565, 566, post.

(s) See Cooper v. Woolley (1867), L. R. 2 Exch. 88, a case under the Towns Improvement Clauses Act, 1847 (10 & 11 Vict. c. 34), s. 108 (see note (t), infra, and note (f), p. 545, post), which decided that the words "as far as possible," used in a local Act incorporating it, meant as far as was possible consistent with carrying on the trade in which the furnace was employed.

(t) Public Health Act, 1875 (38 & 39 Vict. c. 55), s. 91 (7); Public Health (London) Act, 1891 (54 & 55 Vict. c. 76), s. 24. Similar provisions imposing penalties for infringement are found in the Towns Improvement Clauses Act, 1847 (10 & 11 Vict. c. 34), s. 108, which is not incorporated with the Public Health Act, 1875 (38 & 39 Vict. c. 55), but is commonly incorporated with private or local Acts.

(a) See note (s), supra.

(b) Public Health Act, 1875 (38 & 39 Vict. c. 55), s. 91; Public Health (London) Act, 1891 (54 & 55 Vict. c. 76), s. 24.

(c) Higgins v. Northwich Union Guardians (1870), 34 J. P. 806.

(d) The funnel of a steamboat is a chimney (Tough v. Hopkins, [1904] 1 K. B. 804; see also Walker v. Evans (1859), 2 E. & E. 356). As to the non-applicability of the provisions as to smoke of a local Act to vessels trading direct with foreign ports, see Macaulay v. Moss Steamship Co., Ltd. (1910), 102 L. T. 887.

(e) The term "private dwelling-house" is strictly interpreted. It has been held not to include a West End London Club, consisting of 750 members, with the usual accommodation for members, and a staff of servants resident on the premises (McNair v. Baker, [1904] 1 K. B. 208); nor a large building consisting of residential flats (Queen Anne Residential Mansions and Hotel Co. v. Westminster City Council (1901), 46 Sol. Jo. 70).

(f) See pp. 565, 566, post.

(g) Public Health Act, 1875 (38 & 39 Vict. c. 55), s. 91 (7); Public Health (London) Act, 1891 (54 & 55 Vict. c. 76), s. 24.

by the emission of the smoke without considering the construction of the furnace (h).

SECT. 13.

Smoke.

918. The above-mentioned provisions cannot be enforced in such a way as to interfere with or to obstruct the efficient working of mines (i), or the processes of the smelting of ores and minerals (k), or the calcining, puddling, and rolling of iron and other metals, or the conversion of pig iron into wrought iron (l). The owner of a coal mine is thus protected if, but only if, he can show that the smoke nuisance could not be prevented without interference with the efficient working of the mine (m). But the saving provision (n) does not relieve the owners of mines or of the processes named from liability for a public nuisance in a suit brought by the Attorney-General for its abatement (o), nor from their common law liability to a person whose property is affected by it (p). Relief in favour of certain industries.

919. Power is given to local authorities, or any of their officers, to enter into any premises for the purpose of enforcing the provisions of any statute in force in the district requiring the consumption by fireplaces and furnaces of their own smoke. The entry may be made at any time between 9 a.m. and 6 p.m., or, in the case of a nuisance arising in respect of any business, at any hour when such business is in progress or is usually carried on (q). Power of entry.

920. The question of nuisance or no nuisance is one of fact (r), and the justices are entitled to have regard to the circumstances of the case, including the nature of the district and the nature of the industries carried on there. It is not necessary to prove annoyance to any particular person, or injury to any particular property, in order to secure a conviction (r), nor is it necessary to prove that the smoke is sufficient to be injurious to health if it is sufficient to cause annoyance or discomfort (s). Nuisance or no nuisance depends on circumstances.

921. Under the Public Health Act, 1875 (t), the master is liable for the nuisance caused by his servant, even though the furnaces Liability of employer.

(h) Weekes v. King (1885), 49 J. P. 709; see Ex parte Schofield, [1891] 2 Q. B. 428, C. A.

(i) The question of what is a mine within this provision is a question of fact for the justices (R. v. Dunsford (1835), 2 Ad. & El. 568).

(k) The corresponding provision of the repealed Nuisances Removal Act for England, 1855 (18 & 19 Vict. c. 121), s. 44, was held to prevent the application of that Act to manufacturers of the produce of ores and minerals, so that justices had no power to order the abatement of a smoke nuisance arising from a bichrome manufactory (Norris v. Barnes (1872), L. R. 7 Q. B. 537).

(l) Public Health Act, 1875 (38 & 39 Vict. c. 55), s. 334; and see title MINES, MINERALS, AND QUARRIES, Vol. XX., p. 593. As to the general effect of this provision, see Re Dudley Corporation (1881), 8 Q. B. D. 86, 95, 96, C. A.

(m) Patterson v. Chamber Colliery Co. (1892), 56 J. P. 200.

(n) Public Health Act, 1875 (38 & 39 Vict. c. 55), s. 334; see the text, supra.

(o) As to proceedings in which the Attorney-General is a necessary party, see p. 552, post.

(p) A.-G. v. Logan, [1891] 2 Q. B. 100.

(q) Public Health Act, 1875 (38 & 39 Vict. c. 55), s. 102.

(r) South London Electric Supply Corporation v. Perrin, [1901] 2 K. B. 186.

(s) Gaskell v. Bayley (1874), 38 J. P. 805.

(t) 38 & 39 Vict. c. 55.

SECT. 13.
Smoke.

are properly constructed, and the owners have exercised reasonable and proper supervision over the persons in charge of the furnaces, and the nuisance has arisen through the neglect of stokers and not of the owners or their responsible foreman (a).

Daily offences.

922. Each daily emission of black smoke constitutes a separate offence, and separate summonses may be issued simultaneously in respect of breaches of the statute on separate days, and separate costs on each summons may be awarded (b).

Nuisance
from several chimneys.

923. When a person is charged with allowing black smoke to issue from certain chimneys on his premises so as to constitute a nuisance, and this is shown to have been caused by his act or default, the fact that there are several chimneys together, each used for a separate purpose, does not invalidate the summons because it is not shown from which of the chimneys the smoke issued. The justices must hear the evidence and make their order as to one or more of the chimneys (c).

Contents of notice to abate.

924. When giving notice to abate (d) a smoke nuisance, it is not necessary to specify what works and things are to be done for the purpose of abatement (e).

(ii.) Other Statutory Provisions.

Trade furnaces in London.

925. In London, the furnaces employed in the working of engines by steam and in buildings used for the purpose of trade or manufacture must be constructed so as to consume or burn the smoke arising from such furnaces. Penalties are imposed on owners or occupiers of the premises or their foremen, or other persons employed by such owners or occupiers, who use furnaces not so constructed, or negligently use any furnace so that the smoke is not consumed effectually, or carry on any trade or business occasioning noxious or offensive effluvia or other annoyance without using the best practicable means for preventing or counteracting the effluvia or annoyance.

Steam vessels on the Thames.

Penalties are also imposed upon the owner or master of a steam vessel on the Thames, either above London Bridge or plying to and fro between London Bridge and any place on the river westward of the Nore light, if the engine or furnace of the vessel is not

(a) Niven v. Greaves (1890), 54 J. P. 548; see Barnes v. Akroyd (1872), L. R. 7 Q. B. 474; compare Chisholm v. Doulton (1889), 22 Q. B. D. 736; Willcock v. Sands (1868), 32 J. P. 565. In these cases an element of the statutory offence was the "negligent" user of a furnace, so that where negligence on the part of the owner and his foreman was negatived or not alleged, it was held that the master was not responsible, but that the stoker whose negligence caused the nuisance was alone liable to the penalty; see title MASTER AND SERVANT, Vol. XX., pp. 258 et seq.

(b) R. v. Waterhouse (1872), L. R. 7 Q. B. 545.

(c) Barnes v. Norris (1876), 41 J. P. 150.

(d) See pp. 548, 566, post.

(e) Millard v. Wastall, [1898] 1 Q. B. 342; Central London Rail. Co. v. Hammersmith Metropolitan Council (1904), 68 J. P. 217.

constructed effectually to consume its own smoke, or, being so constructed, is wilfully or negligently used so as not to do so (f).

SECT. 13.
Smoke.

SUB-SECT. 3.—On Railways.

926. Every locomotive steam engine used on a railway must be constructed on the principle of consuming, and so as to consume, its own smoke (g); and in the event of proceedings being taken on account of an engine not consuming its own smoke, a penalty of £5 for every day during which the engine is used on the railway may be imposed, if the justices find that the engine is not so constructed as required (h), or if, being so constructed, it has failed to consume its own smoke, as far as practicable (i), at the time charged in the complaint, either through the default of the company or of any servant in the employment of the company (k).

Liability
for not consuming
smoke.

927. It is a question of fact for the justices to decide whether in the circumstances the engine has consumed its own smoke as far as practicable. Where, in a properly constructed engine, smoky coal only is used and black smoke is emitted for more than three minutes, it may be that, in the absence of any explanation by the company, there is sufficient evidence to justify a conviction (l); but where defective construction and negligent management of the engine are negatived, and dark smoke is emitted for a short time on two occasions in the course of about an hour, the coal used being a bituminous but a good hard steam coal, a refusal to convict may be justified, even though, if other coal twice as costly had been used, there would have been less smoke (m).

Nuisance a question of fact.

(f) Public Health (London) Act, 1891 (54 & 55 Vict. c. 76), s. 23 (1), (2), (3). The words "consume or burn the smoke" do not mean that all the smoke must be consumed. The court may remit any fine if of opinion that the furnace has been so constructed as to consume as far as possible, consistently with the carrying on of the trade (Cooper v. Woolley (1867), L. R. 2 Exch. 8; see note (s), p. 542, ante), all the smoke arising from it, and the owner or occupier has carefully attended to the same, and has caused the smoke to be consumed as far as possible (Public Health (London) Act, 1891 (54 & 55 Vict. c. 76), s. 23 (4)). No proceedings under ibid., s. 23, can be taken except under the direction of a sanitary authority (ibid., s. 23 (5)). Powers of entry are given (ibid., s. 23 (6)); and see ibid. ss. 10, 115, 116; and pp. 572, 573, post). In the port of London the port sanitary authority takes proceedings (Public Health (London) Act, 1891 (54 & 55 Vict. c. 76), s. 21 (7); see title METROPOLIS, Vol. XX., p. 411); see Walker v. Evans (1859), 2 E. & E. 356; and as to the general liability of owners or masters of vessels, see title SHIPPING AND NAVIGATION. As to the obligation imposed on water companies to construct their furnaces etc. on the most effectual principle for consuming their own smoke, see title WATER SUPPLY.

(g) Railways Clauses Consolidation Act, 1845 (8 & 9 Vict. c. 20), s. 114.

(h) Ibid.

(i) See note (f), supra, and note (s), p. 542, ante.

(k) Regulation of Railways Act, 1868 (31 & 32 Vict. c. 119), s. 19, bringing this offence within the Railways Clauses Consolidation Act, 1845 (8 Vict. c. 20), s. 114. As to railway companies generally, see title RAILWAYS AND CANALS. As to light railways, see title TRAMWAYS AND LIGHT RAILWAYS.

(l) South Eastern and Chatham Rail. Co. v. London County Council (1901), 65 J. P. 568.

(m) London County Council v. Great Eastern Railway, [1906] 2 K. B. 312.

SECT. 13.

Smoke.

Liability for not consuming
smoke.

SUB-SECT. 4.—On Highways.(i.) Heavy Locomotives.

928. Every locomotive (n), other than a light locomotive (o), used on a highway must be constructed on the principle of consuming its own smoke; and any person using a locomotive not so constructed, or not consuming, so far as practicable (p), its own smoke, is liable to a fine of £5 for every day during which the locomotive is so used on the highway (q). The burden of proof is discharged by the prosecutor when he has proved that black smoke has issued; and it then rests on the defendant to negative that evidence by showing that the engine did consume its own smoke as far as practicable (r). To establish the commission of the offence it is not necessary to show that the engine was on the highway for an entire day (s).

Emission of vapour due to lubrication.

The above provision (t) does not apply to a heavy motor vehicle constructed to consume its own smoke, where the smoke nuisance alleged is due to the driver negligently lubricating his machine so as to cause the emission of visible vapour (u).

(ii.) Light Locomotives.

Definition.

929. A light locomotive is a vehicle, propelled by mechanical power, under five tons (v) in weight unladen, not used for the purpose of drawing more than one vehicle (such vehicle with its locomotive not exceeding in weight unladen six and a half tons (v)), and so constructed that no smoke or visible vapour is emitted therefrom except from any temporary or accidental cause (w). The failure of the last requirement brings the locomotive within the provisions above stated relating to heavy locomotives (x).

SECT. 14.—Waters and Waterways.

Nuisance in respect of water.

930. Any unlawful interference with the rights of the public or of owners of land in connection with water and waterways may be a nuisance (y).

(n) That is, any locomotive propelled by steam or by other than animal power (Highways and Locomotives (Amendment) Act, 1878 (41 & 42 Vict. c. 77), s. 38).

(o) See the text, infra. Light locomotives are excepted from the above provision by the Locomotives on Highways Act, 1896 (59 & 60 Vict. c. 36), s. 1 (1) and Schedule.

(p) As to the meaning of these words, see note (s), p. 542, ante; see also London County Council v. Great Eastern Railway, [1906] 2 K. B. 312.

(q) Highways and Locomotives (Amendment) Act, 1878 (41 & 42 Vict. c. 77), s. 30, as amended by the Statute Law Revision Acts, 1894 (57 & 58 Vict. c. 36), and 1898 (61 & 62 Vict. c. 22).

(r) Pitt Rivers v. Glasse (1891), 55 J. P. 663.

(s) See Smith v. Stokes (1863), 4 B. & S. 84, decided under the Highway Act, 1835 (5 & 6 Will. 4, c. 50), s. 70.

(t) See note (q), supra.

(u) R. v. Wilbraham, Ex parte Rowcliffe (1907), 71 J. P. 336; Star Omnibus Co. (London), Ltd. v. Tagg (1907), 71 J. P. 352. As to motor traffic generally, see title STREET AND AERIAL TRAFFIC.

(v) Increased from three to five tons and four to six and a half tons respectively by the Heavy Motor Car Order, 1904, Art. III., made under powers conferred by the Motor Car Act, 1903 (3 Edw. 7, c. 36), s. 12 (1).

(w) Locomotives on Highways Act, 1896 (59 & 60 Vict. c. 36), s. 1 (1).

(x) See the text, supra.

(y) See titles COUNTY COURTS, Vol. VIII., pp. 680 et seq.; EASEMENTS AND Part III.—Remedies.

SECT. 1.—In General.

SECT. 1.

In General.

931. There are four classes of remedies for nuisance, namely: abatement without recourse to legal proceedings; civil proceedings for damages or injunction; summary proceedings for penalties or abatement; and criminal proceedings by indictment (z).

Classes of remedies.

SECT. 2.—*Abatement.*SUB-SECT. 1.—By Private Persons.(i.) Where the Right Exists.

932. By abatement is meant the summary removal or remedy of a nuisance by the party injured without having recourse to legal proceedings. It is not a remedy which the law favours, and is not usually advisable (a), and its exercise destroys any right of action in respect of the nuisance (b). The right certainly exists when the nuisance is caused by an act of commission (c).

Nuisance arising from acts of commission.

933. Where the nuisance arises merely from omission on the part of the offender, it is not clear whether it admits of abatement (d), except in the case of the cutting of boughs overhanging the public highway or private property, when abatement is clearly lawful (e). It would seem that the term "abatement" is hardly the proper expression for an act which supplies the omitted duty (f).

Nuisance arising from omissions.

934. If the nuisance is a public one, a private individual cannot of his own authority abate it, unless it does him some special injury over and above that suffered by the rest of the public (g).

In case of public nuisance.

PROFITS À PRENDRE, Vol. XL, pp. 310 et seq.; FISHERIES, Vol. XIV., pp. 589, 619, 628; MINES, MINERALS, AND QUARRIES, Vol. XX., p. 592; SHIPPING AND NAVIGATION; WATERS AND WATERCOURSES.

(z) As to abatement, see the text, infra; as to civil proceedings, see pp. 550 et seq., post; as to summary proceedings, see pp. 565 et seq., post; as to criminal proceedings by indictment, see p. 574, post.

(a) Lonsdale (Earl) v. Nelson (1823), 2 B. & C. 302, per BEST, J., at p. 312; Campbell Davys v. Lloyd, [1901] 2 Ch. 518, C. A., per COLLINS, L.J., at p. 524.

(b) Baten's Case (1610), 9 Co. Rep. 53 b.

(c) Penruddock's Case (1598), 5 Co. Rep. 100 b; James v. Hayward (1630), Cro. Car. 184; R. v. Rosewell (1699), 2 Salk. 459; Raikes v. Townsend (1804), 2 Smith, K. B. 9; Lonsdale (Earl) v. Nelson, supra; Sutcliffe v. Sowerby Highways Surveyors (1859), 1 L. T. 7.

(d) See Lonsdale (Earl) v. Nelson, supra, at p. 311; Campbell Davys v. Lloyd, supra, and see the dictum of BEST, J., in Lonsdale (Earl) v. Nelson, supra, commented on in Lenmon v. Webb, [1895] A. C. 1, 9.

(e) Lenmon v. Webb, supra; see Morrice v. Baker (1616), 3 Bulst. 196; Lonsdale (Earl) v. Nelson, supra; and see title AGRICULTURE, Vol. I. p. 296.

(f) Campbell Davys v. Lloyd, supra.

(g) Colchester Corporation v. Brooke (1845), 7 Q. B. 339; Dimes v. Petley (1850), 15 Q. B. 276; Bateman v. Bluck (1852), 18 Q. B. 870. Previous authorities stated that anyone might abate a public nuisance (James v. Hayward, supra; R. v. Wilcox (1690), 2 Salk. 458). A general pardon after conviction only discharges the penalty and not an order for abatement. The latter

SECT. 2.

Abatement.Power of abatement.

935. The injured party need not wait until he has suffered actual injury before exercising his power of abatement (h), but he cannot justify the removal of the scaffolding or foundations of a building on the ground that when finished it may constitute a nuisance by blocking his ancient lights (i).

When notice
necessary.

936. It has been established that no notice is necessary before abating a nuisance which consists of overhanging boughs, when they can be lopped by the person aggrieved from his own property and without entry on his neighbour's land (k). There is also authority for saying that, without notice, a nuisance may be abated on the land of another in cases of emergency, and in order to protect life or property (l). It has further been held that abatement without notice may be justified, although involving entry on the land of another, where he is the original wrongdoer bringing into existence the nuisance (m), and, possibly, where the nuisance arises from a default in the performance of some legal duty imposed upon the wrongdoer (n). The trend of later judicial opinion, however, has been to require notice in all cases, except those of emergency, when the abatement involves entry on the land of another (o). On the authorities, notice is certainly necessary where the person complained of is not the original wrongdoer but continues a nuisance (p), and, so far as abatement is available at all, in all cases, except those of emergency, where the nuisance arises from omissions (q), and where the premises affected are at the time inhabited (r).

Who may
abate.

937. The right of abatement exists in any person whose rights or whose property are damnified by the nuisance, including a lessee (s).

is not the punishment of the party, but the removal of a public grievance (R. v. Wilcox (1690), 2 Salk. 458).

(h) Penruddock's Case (1598), 5 Co. Rep. 100 b.

(i) Morrice v. Baker (1616), 3 Bulst. 196; S. C., sub nom. Norris v. Baker (1616), 1 Roll. Rep. 393.

(k) Lemmon v. Webb, [1894] 3 Ch. 1, C. A.; affirmed, [1895] A. C. 1; see titles AGRICULTURE, Vol. I., p. 296; EASEMENTS AND PROFITS À PRENDRE, Vol. XI., p. 331.

(l) Jones v. Williams (1843), 11 M. & W. 176; accepted to this extent by the Court of Appeal and the House of Lords in Lemmon v. Webb, supra; see also Lonsdale (Earl) v. Nelson (1823), 2 B. & C. 302, per BEST, J., at p. 312.

(m) Penruddock's Case, supra; Winsmore v. Greenbank (1745), Willes, 577, 583; Lonsdale (Earl) v. Nelson, supra, per BEST, J., at pp. 311, 312; Jones v. Williams, supra (where this seemed to be treated as beyond doubt).

(n) Jones v. Williams, supra.

(o) See the judgments in Lemmon v. Webb, supra, both in the Court of Appeal and the House of Lords; and see title EASEMENTS AND PROFITS À PRENDRE, Vol. XI., p. 331.

(p) Penruddock's Case, supra, and the cases cited in notes (l), (m), supra.

(q) Ibid.

(r) Perry v. Fitzhove (1846), 8 Q. B. 757; Davies v. Williams (1851), 16 Q. B. 546; Jones v. Jones (1862), 1 H. & C. 1; and see title EASEMENTS AND PROFITS À PRENDRE, Vol. XI., p. 296.

(s) Penruddock's Case, supra. As to the right of a commoner to abate a nuisance on a common, see title COMMONS AND RIGHTS OF COMMON, Vol. IV., pp. 515, 516.

(ii.) Extent of the Right.

SECT. 2.

Abatement.

938. In abating a public nuisance, a private individual can only interfere with it so far as it causes special injury to him, and so far as may be necessary to enable him to exercise his public rights, and he is not justified in doing damage to the property of the person creating the nuisance if he is able to exercise his rights with reasonable convenience and without doing such damage (t).

Public
nuisances.

939. In the case of a private nuisance, the person injured by it may justify its abatement and the entry on his neighbour's land for that purpose (a), provided that the abatement is not effected in circumstances specially calculated to lead to a breach of the peace (b); that no more than the offending portion is removed (c); that no unnecessary damage is done (d); that, where there are two ways of abating the nuisance, the less mischievous is followed, unless it would inflict some wrong on an innocent third party or the public (e); and that previous notice is given when necessary (f). In the case of a nuisance arising merely from omission, even if the remedy by abatement exists, it will not justify the entry on private lands to effect the purpose (g).

Private nuisances.SUB-SECT. 2.—By Local Authorities.

940. So far as their own property is concerned, local authorities have the same right to abate nuisances in respect of it and its enjoyment as is possessed by private individuals.

Rights at common law.

Such local authorities as possess or succeed to the duties and powers of highway surveyors (h) have at common law the right to abate nuisances on the highway without taking legal proceedings, but they do so at their own risk (i). A similar power of abatement (t) James v. Hayward (1630), Cro. Car. 184; Colchester Corporation v. Brooke (1845), 7 Q. B. 339; Dimes v. Petley (1850), 15 Q. B. 276; Bateman v. Bluck (1852), 18 Q. B. 870; R. v. Richmond Justices (1860), 24 J. P. 422; Bagshaw v. Buxton Local Board of Health (1875), 1 Ch. D. 220, 224. In Lodie v. Arnold (1697), 2 Salk. 458, it was said that the abatement need not be effected in an orderly manner and with as little hurt as possible; but there is no other case in which such a view is taken.

(a) Raikes v. Townsend (1804), 2 Smith, K. B. 9; 1 Hawk. P. C. c. 75, s. 12, and cases cited in notes (l), (m), p. 548, ante.

(b) Perry v. Fitzhowe (1846), 8 Q. B. 757 (abatement held not justified while the plaintiff and his family were in the house during its demolition); commented on in Burling v. Read (1850), 11 Q. B. 904; and see, contra, Davies v. Williams (1851), 16 Q. B. 546, the difference being that in this last case notice had been previously given and the occupier refused to remove the offending structure.

(c) Cooper v. Marshall (1757), 1 Burr. 259; Greenslade v. Halliday (1830), 6 Bing. 379 (where the defendant was held not to be justified in removing a board which the plaintiff had fastened to stakes to form a means for crossing a stream, although the defendant might have justified the removal of the stakes only).

(d) Colchester Corporation v. Brooke, supra; Perry v. Fitzhowe, supra; Dimes v. Petley (1850), 15 Q. B. 276; R. v. Richmond Justices (1860), 24 J. P. 422.

(e) Roberts v. Rose (1865), L. R. 1 Exch. 82, Ex. Ch.

(f) See p. 548, ante.

(g) E.g., to erect a permanent bridge in place of one which the person liable has neglected to repair (Campbell Davys v. Lloyd, [1901] 2 Ch. 518, C. A.).

(h) See title HIGHWAYS, STREETS, AND BRIDGES, Vol. XVI., p. 25, note (b).

(i) Reynolds v. Presteign Urban District Council, [1896] 1 Q. B. 604; Harris

SECT. 2. is possessed by any authority which represents the public in the matter affected by the nuisance.

Abatement. Power is given by statute to various local authorities to abate nuisances (j).

Limitations : 941. So far as the exercise of the common law right of abatement is concerned, local authorities are governed by the same principles as those which regulate abatement by private individuals (k).

(i.) Common law ;
(ii.) statutory. The statutes which confer a right of abatement in special circumstances sometimes impose restrictions upon its exercise by defining the period when it may be exercised, as in the case of lopping trees overhanging a highway (l), or by requiring previous notice from the authority, and in some cases imposing the condition of previous default in obeying an order of a justice or justices (m).

SECT. 3.—Civil Proceedings.

SUB-SECT. 1.—In General.

942. Civil proceedings to restrain the commission or continuation of acts constituting a nuisance, or to recover damages, whether brought by or in the name of the Attorney-General or by a private individual or local body, take the form of an action in the Chancery Division or the King's Bench Division of the High Court; or, where the damages claimed do not exceed £100, in the county court (n).

SUB-SECT. 2.—Parties.

(i.) Who may Sue.

(a) Reversioners.

943. In order to give a right of action in respect of a nuisance to an owner of property, as a reversioner, the injury complained of must be such that from its permanent character or otherwise it is necessarily prejudicial to the reversion (o), that is to say, it must be something which will continue to the time when the reversion will come into possession, or something which operates as a denial

v. Northamptonshire County Council (1897), 61 J. P. 599; Keane v. Reynolds (1853), 2 E. & B. 748, per Lord CAMPBELL, C.J.; Turner v. Ringwood Highway Board (1870), L. R. 9 Eq. 418; Mill v. Hawker (1875), L. R. 10 Exch. 92, Ex. Ch.; Bagshaw v. Buxton Local Board of Health (1875), 1 Ch. D. 220, 224; Louth District Council v. West (1896), 65 L. J. (Q. B.) 535.

(j) As to nuisances in respect of highways, see title HIGHWAYS, STREETS, AND BRIDGES, Vol. XVI., pp. 161 et seq.; in respect of animals, see p. 513, ante; in respect of public health, see pp. 535, 537, ante; and see title PUBLIC HEALTH AND LOCAL ADMINISTRATION.

(k) See p. 547, ante.

(l) See title HIGHWAYS, STREETS, AND BRIDGES, Vol. XVI., pp. 113, 165.

(m) See p. 572, post.

(n) See titles COUNTY COURTS, Vol., VIII. p. 428; INJUNCTION, Vol. XVII., p. 199; PRACTICE AND PROCEDURE. As to whether an action is excluded where a statutory remedy is given, see titles ACTION, Vol. I., p. 8; TORT.

(o) Jackson v. Pasked (1813), 1 M. & S. 234. "Permanent" means that which will continue indefinitely until something is done to remove it (Jones v. Llanrust Urban District Council, [1911] 1 Ch. 393, per PARKER, J., at p. 404).

of right of the reversioner (a). The question whether there is damage to the reversion is a question of fact (b).

SECT. 2.
Civil Proceedings.

(b) Occupiers and Persons in Possession.

944. A person who is in lawful occupation of premises is entitled to be protected against any interference with his rights as such occupier (c). Thus, the occupation of oyster-beds within the limits of a several fishery gives the occupier a right of action against third persons who pollute the beds (d), but the mere

(a) Mayfair Property Co. v. Johnston, [1894] 1 Ch. 508; Alston v. Scales (1832), 9 Bing. 3; and see the cases cited infra. A reversioner has, therefore, been held to have a right of action when his property was injured by vibration (Shelfer v. City of London Electric Lighting Co., Meux's Brewery Co. v. City of London Electric Lighting Co., [1895] 1 Ch. 287, C. A.; Colwell v. St. Pancras Borough Council, [1904] 1 Ch. 707); or his trees damaged by smoke or fumes (Walter v. Selfe (1851), 4 De G. & Sm. 315); or his buildings affected by damp from an artificial mound (Broder v. Saillard (1876), 2 Ch. D. 692); or the ancient lights of his premises obstructed by the erection of a permanent structure (Jesser v. Gifford (1767), 4 Burr. 2141; Wilson v. Townend (1860), 1 Drew. & Sm. 324; Metropolitan Association v. Petch (1858), 5 C. B. (N. S.) 504; Shadwell v. Hutchinson (1829), 3 C. & P. 615), and in such a case the reversioner may bring another action for damages in respect of a further period of continuance (Shadwell v. Hutchinson (1830), 4 C. & P. 333); or a right of way belonging to him has been obstructed by a permanent structure (Bower v. Hill (1835), 1 Scott, 526; see Bell v. Midland Rail. Co. (1861), 10 C. B. (N. S.) 287), or by locking a gate across it under such circumstances as to amount to a denial of his right (Kidgill v. Moor (1850), 9 C. B. 364); or where damage has been done by the destruction of trees owing to flooding (Bedingfield v. Onslow (1685), 3 Lev. 209; compare Baxter v. Taylor (1832), 4 B. & Ad. 72); see also Jones v. Llanrwst Urban District Council, [1911] 1 Ch. 393, 404. On the other hand, it has been held that a reversioner has no right of action for nuisances caused by noise or smoke affecting the comfort of tenants, even to the extent of compelling them to leave, since such nuisances may cease at any moment (Cooper v. Crabtree (1881), 19 Ch. D. 193; affirmed (1882), 20 Ch. D. 589, C. A.; Jones v. Chappell (1875), L. R. 20 Eq. 539; House Property and Investment Co. v. H. P. Horse Nail. Co. (1885), 29 Ch. D. 190; Simpson v. Savage (1856), 1 C. B. (N. S.) 347; Mumford v. Oxford, Worcester and Wolverhampton Rail. Co. (1856), 1 H. & N. 34; Broder v. Saillard, supra); for an entry on land in possession of a tenant in exercise of an alleged right of way (Baxter v. Taylor (1832), 4 B. & Ad. 72; and see Damper v. Bassett, [1901] 2 Ch. 350; compare Kidgill v. Moor, supra), because such entry would not be evidence against the reversioner (Bower v. Hill, supra, at p. 528); for obstruction of his tenant's access to premises (Dobson v. Blackmore (1847), 9 Q. B. 991; Mott v. Shoolbred (1875), L. R. 20 Eq. 22); for damage done by flooding where the damage was not such as would last to the end of the term (Rust v. Victoria Graving Dock Co. and London and St. Katharine Dock Co. (1887), 36 Ch. D. 113, C. A.); for neglect to repair a road over which there was a right of way (Hopwood v. Schofield (1837), 2 Mood. & R. 34); for the wrongful raising of a wall and the placing of timber thereon overhanging a yard, the alleged injury being the loss of the user of the original wall and the discharge of rain-water into the yard (Jackson v. Pesked (1813), 1 M. & S. 234).

(b) Tucker v. Newman (1839), 11 Ad. & El. 40; Young v. Spencer (1829), 10 B. & C. 145; Jones v. Llanrwst Urban District Council, supra, at p. 404.

(c) Aldred's Case (1610), 9 Co. Rep. 57 b. As to the right of an undischarged bankrupt in possession to sue without joining the trustee, see Temple v. London and Birmingham Rail. Co. (1838), 9 Sim. 209. As to the general position of licensees, see titles EASEMENTS AND PROFITS À PRENDRE, Vol. XI., p. 340; LANDLORD AND TENANT, Vol. XVIII., pp. 337 et seq.; MINES, MINERALS, AND QUARRIES, Vol. XX., pp. 567 et seq.; REAL PROPERTY AND CHATTELS REAL; TRESPASS.

(d) Foster v. Warblington Urban Council, [1906] 1 K. B. 648, C. A.; see

SECT. 3.
Civil Proceedings.

depositing of oysters where the public have a right of fishing does not suffice to give the occupier a right of action (e).

Occupation of pasturage under demise from a local authority which had no power to demise it does not give sufficient occupation upon which to base an action (f); neither has the wife of a tenant of premises such occupation (g). A tenant under a building agreement who, under and for the purpose of that agreement, has a right of entry on the foreshore cannot maintain an action against a person for taking shingle or placing bathing tents thereon (h), but a contractor who was damnified by interference with a dam which he had made with the consent of the owner of the soil has been held to have sufficient possession to give him a right of action (i).

Tenants.

945. A tenant is none the less entitled to be protected from a nuisance because he is only a yearly (k) or weekly (l) tenant, but the fact that his term is a short one may be a circumstance to be considered when an injunction is claimed (m), and the injunction may be limited to the continuance of his tenancy (n).

Possessory
title.

946. A possessory title may suffice to enable a person to maintain an action, as where a corporation was found, without deciding its right as against the Crown, to be in possession of a foreshore upon which the defendant was causing a nuisance, and an injunction was granted (o).

(ii.) When the Attorney-General is a Necessary Party.

In case of
public
nuisances.

947. Subject to certain exceptions (p), all civil proceedings brought in respect of public nuisances must be brought with the sanction and in the name of the Attorney-General (a). This rule applies whether it is an individual or the local authority who seeks to proceed. Where there is an excessive exercise of statutory powers (b)

Colchester Corporation v. Brooke (1845), 7 Q. B. 339; title FISHERIES, Vol. XIV., p. 589. As to the joinder of several occupiers in respect of a discomfort which would be a nuisance to each of them, see Hudson v. Maddison (1841), 12 Sim. 416 (where it was held that they could not sue together).

(e) Truro Corporation v. Rowe, [1902] 2 K. B. 709, C. A.; see title FISHERIES, Vol. XIV., pp. 575, 626, note (k).

(f) Coverdale v. Charlton (1878), 4 Q. B. D. 104, C. A.

(g) Malone v. Laskey, [1907] 2 K. B. 141, C. A.

(h) Laird v. Briggs (1881), 19 Ch. D. 22, C. A.

(i) Dyson v. Collick (1822), 5 B. & Ald. 600.

(k) Inchbald v. Robinson, Inchbald v. Barrington (1869), 4 Ch. App. 388.

(l) See Jones v. Chappell (1875), L. R. 20 Eq. 539.

(m) Jacomb v. Knight (1863), 3 De G. J. & Sm. 533, C. A.; see title INJUNCTION, Vol. XVII., p. 232.

(n) Simper v. Foley (1862), 2 John. & H. 555.

(o) Hastings Corporation v. Ivall (1874), L. R. 19 Eq. 558.

(p) See p. 553, post.

(a) Wallasey Local Board v. Gracey (1887), 36 Ch. D. 593; Tottenham Urban District Council v. Williamson & Sons, [1896] 2 Q. B. 353, C. A.; see Baines v. Baker (1752), Amb. 158 (small-pox hospital); Ware v. Regent's Canal Co. (1858), 3 De G. & J. 212; Bermondsey Vestry v. Brown (1865), L. R. 1 Eq. 204 (right of way); Stoke Parish Council v. Price, [1899] 2 Ch. 277; Boyce v. Paddington Borough Council, [1903] 1 Ch. 109; Watson v. Hythe Borough Council (1906), 70 J. P. 153.

(b) As to the exercise of special statutory powers, see pp. 516 et seq., ante.

which does not cause private injury, the Attorney-General alone can take proceedings, and it is his duty to do so if the interests of the public are affected (c).

SECT. 3.
Civil Proceedings.

948. Any person, whether affected by the nuisance or not, may act as relator in proceedings by the Attorney-General (d), and so may a local authority (e), but a relator is not essential and the Attorney-General may proceed by an ex-officio information, there being no difference in the two proceedings except in the matter of costs (f), for which the relator renders himself liable (g), though otherwise he is not a party to the action (g).

Relators.

949. A local authority or a private individual having a valid right of action in respect of the special injury sustained through a public nuisance (h) may join as plaintiffs in the proceedings of the Attorney-General in respect of their special injury (i).

Joinder of plaintiffs with Attorney-
General.

950. A private individual may bring an action in his own name in respect of a public nuisance when, and only when, he can show that he has suffered some particular, direct (k), and substantial damage over and above that sustained by the public at large (l), or when the interference with the public right involves a violation of some private right of his own (m), or when a statute has given him a special protection or benefit which is being invaded (n).

Private action on public
nuisances.

951. Local authorities may take civil proceedings in their own names in respect of public nuisances when they have sustained or are threatened with damage to property of which they are the actual owners (o), or when they are seeking to enforce a contract

Proceedings by local authorities alone.

(c) Ware v. Regent's Canal Co. (1858), 3 De G. & J. 212; but see Herron v. Rathmines and Rathgar Improvement Commissioners, [1892] A. C. 498 (in which case a declaration was made and an injunction granted, although no actual damage was proved: it was, however, alleged that the result of deviating from the statutory conditions deprived the plaintiff of material benefits secured by the Act); see also A.-G. v. London and North Western Railway, [1899] 1 Q. B. 72 (proceedings to compel the defendants to comply with the provisions of a statute as to the speed of trains); and see p. 509, ante.

(d) See A.-G. v. Logan, [1891] 2 Q. B. 100.

(e) A.-G. v. Logan, supra.

(f) See A.-G. v. Cockermouth Local Board (1874), L. R. 18 Eq. 172, 176; A.-G. v. Logan, supra.

(g) See A.-G. v. Logan, supra.

(h) See p. 506, ante, and the text, infra.

(i) A.-G. v. Logan, supra; A.-G. v. Lonsdale (Earl) (1868), L. R. 7 Eq. 377; A.-G. v. Cockermouth Local Board, supra; A.-G. v. Gee (1870), L. R. 10 Eq. 131; A.-G. v. Birmingham Borough Council (1858), 4 K. & J. 528.

(k) Paine v. Partrick (1690), Carth. 191.

(l) Williams's Case (1592), 5 Co. Rep. 72 b; Marys's (Robert) Case (1612), 9 Co. Rep. 111 b, 113 a; see A.-G. v. Forbes (1836), 2 My. & Cr. 123; Bell v. Quebec Corporation (1879), 5 App. Cas. 84, P. C.; Whelan v. Hewson (1871), 6 I. R. C. L. 283.

(m) Boyce v. Paddington Borough Council, [1903] 1 Ch. 109.

(n) Devonport Corporation v. Plymouth, Devonport, and District Tramways Co. (1884), 52 L. T. 161, C. A.

(o) A.-G. v. Logan, supra (where the local board was held entitled to join in proceedings as plaintiffs in respect of injury to the trees of its park, which were damaged by fumes); Sheringham Urban District Council v. Holsey

SECT. 3.
Civil Proceedings.

involving rights of property (p); or when they are complaining of the breach of statutory conditions imposed by an enactment which gives them special protection or benefit (q); or when they have an express or an implied statutory power to take proceedings (r). The fact that the Public Health Act, 1875 (s), gives local authorities the right to cause proceedings to be taken in the High Court in respect of nuisances made summarily abatable (a) does not, in the absence of a particular interest in them, justify them in proceeding in their own names, and the presence of the Attorney-General is then necessary (b).

(iii.) Who is Liable to be Sued.

(a) The Person Creating or Continuing a Nuisance.

Rule of liability.

952. Any person is liable for a nuisance who either creates or causes it, or continues its existence or allows it to continue, or who authorises its creation or continuance.

Creating or causing a
nuisance.

953. A person is liable as having created or caused a nuisance when he does an act, or is guilty of an omission, which directly gives rise to the nuisance (c); when he authorises such act or (1904), 20 T. L. R. 402 (action in respect of a post belonging to the council and put up to protect a pathway from being used for carriages); compare Stoke Parish Council v. Price, [1899] 2 Ch. 277; A.-G. and Spalding Rural Council v. Garner, [1907] 2 K. B. 480; Exeter Corporation v. Devon (Earl) (1870), L. R. 10 Eq. 232.

(p) Nuneaton Local Board v. General Sewage Co. (1875), L. R. 20 Eq. 127, as explained in Wallasey Local Board v. Gracey (1887), 36 Ch. D. 593, 598.

(q) Devonport Corporation v. Plymouth, Devonport, and District Tramways Co. (1884), 52 L. T. 161, C. A.

(r) E.g., where a statute places the mode and control of testing gas in the hands of a council and an action is brought in respect of such mode of testing (London County Council v. South Metropolitan Gas Co., [1904] 1 Ch. 76, C. A.).

(s) 38 & 39 Vict. c. 55, s. 107; see p. 536, ante, and p. 565, post.

(a) See pp. 565, 566, post.

(b) Wallasey Local Board v. Gracey, supra; Tottenham Urban District Council v. Williamson & Sons, [1896] 2 Q. B. 353, C. A.; see Bermondsey Vestry v. Brown (1865), L. R. 1 Eq. 204.

(c) Corby v. Hill (1858), 4 C. B. (N. S.) 556 (defendant held liable for injury caused by obstructing a private road with building material, put there with the consent of the owner); King v. Ford (1816), 1 Stark. 421 (schoolmaster permitting scholar to let off fireworks); Ex parte Liverpool Corporation (1857), 22 J. P. 562 (corporation held liable for the nuisance from the drainage of a gaol it had built, and not the justices having management of the gaol); St. Helens Chemical Co. v. St. Helens Corporation (1876), 1 Ex. D. 196 (appellants held liable for nuisance caused by their chemicals combining in a sewer with other chemicals also discharged by them into the sewer; as to joint nuisances, see p. 558, post); Ogston v. Aberdeen District Tramways Co., [1897] A. C. 111 (sweeping snow into heaps and melting it with salt); R. v. Bradford Navigation Co. (1865), 6 B. & S. 631; A.-G. v. Bradford Canal Proprietors (1866), L. R. 2 Eq. 71 (continuing to exercise right of abstracting water after the source had become polluted); Hall v. Norfolk (Duke), [1900] 2 Ch. 493 (owner of minerals held not liable for subsidence caused by the working of his predecessor in title, although the damage did not arise until defendant came into possession); Young v. Fosten (1893), 69 L. T. 147 (building contractor held liable under a statute for nuisance caused by bad repair of sanitary apparatus); Riddell v. Spear (1879), 40 L. T. 130 (tenant cutting sewer made without his consent by his landlord through the demised land); and see title SEWERS AND DRAINS.

omission (d); when without any intention or expectation of committing a nuisance he does or authorises an act, from which a nuisance arises as a natural and probable consequence (e); or when, being an owner or occupier of property, he grants a licence or gives an order to another to do acts upon it which are likely to cause a nuisance, and such licensee or person receiving the order in so acting commits a nuisance (f).

954. A person is liable for the continuance of a nuisance when he directly continues it or authorises its continuance (g); when he has originally erected a nuisance which in the nature of things is likely to be continued and is continued, although he has ceased to be in possession of, or interested in, the land on which the nuisance exists, and has no power to remove it without being guilty of a trespass (h); or when he purchases the reversion of premises let to a tenant upon which there exists a nuisance for which the original reversioner would have been liable, even though he has no opportunity of putting an end to the existing tenancy, or of abating the nuisance (i).

Continuing a
nuisance.

But apart from active interference, or original authorisation or adoption of the nuisance, a person is not liable for its continuance without his authority or consent, at least when he receives no

(d) R. v. Longton Gas Co. (1860), 2 E. & E. 651 (householder held liable for authorising disturbance of a street in order to effect a connection with a gas main for which there was no statutory authority); compare Igoe v. Eveleigh (1870), 4 I. R. C. L. 238.

(e) R. v. Moore (1832), 3 B. & Ad. 184; Bostock v. North Staffordshire Rail. Co. (1852), 5 De G. & Sm. 584; Walker v. Brewster (1867), L. R. 5 Eq. 25 (causing crowds to collect by attractions); see also Inchbald v. Robinson, Inchbald v. Barrington (1869), 4 Ch. App. 388; compare Chase v. London County Council and Leslie & Co. (1898), 62 J. P. 184; see Chibnall v. Paul & Son (1881), 29 W. R. 536 (arranging urinal so as to induce nuisance); Smith v. London and South Western Rail. Co. (1870), L. R. 6 C. P. 14, Ex. Ch. (leaving hedge trimmings by side of railway which became ignited); Brown v. Bussell (1868), L. R. 3 Q. B. 251 (making drain to discharge contents into open ditch); St. Helens Chemical Co. v. St. Helens Corporation (1876), 1 Ex. D. 196 (discharging matter into a sewer by different drains, which matter on meeting caused chemical nuisance); Gibbings v. Hungerford, [1904] 1 I. R. 211, C. A. (local authority held liable for nuisance caused by a third person draining sewage through the authority's pipes on to the land of plaintiff who had given the authority leave to discharge surface water).

(f) Draper v. Sperring (1861), 10 C. B. (N. S.) 113 (owner of market held liable for nuisance from sheep droppings in pens let to third persons); White v. Jameson (1874), L. R. 18 Eq. 303 (permission to burn bricks on defendant's land); Jenkins v. Jackson (1888), 40 Ch. D. 71 (letting room over offices for dancing); Phillips v. Thomas (1890), 62 L. T. 793; Howland v. Dover Harbour Board (1898), 14 T. L. R. 355, C. A.; and see title LANDLORD AND TENANT, Vol. XVIII., p. 504, note (u).

(g) Brent v. Haddon (1619), Cro. Jac. 555 (lessee continuing an obstructive bank); Ryppon v. Bowles (1615), Cro. Jac. 373 (lessee of house with a nuisance); Thompson v. Gibson (1841), 7 M. & W. 456 (defendant lessor of obstructive buildings); Dimes v. Petley (1850), 15 Q. B. 276 (defendant occupier); A.-G. v. Basingstoke Corporation (1876), 45 L. J. (Ch.) 726 (flow of sewage); Broder v. Saillard (1876), 2 Ch. D. 692 (defendant occupier); Silverton v. Marriott (1888), 52 J. P. 677.

(h) Thompson v. Gibson, supra; Roswell v. Prior (1702), 12 Mod. Rep. 635.

(i) R. v. Pedly (1834), 1 Ad. & El. 822.

SECT. 3.
Civil Proceedings.

benefit from it (k), though he may be liable if he takes no steps to prevent the continuance of a public nuisance caused by third parties on his property (l).

(b) Landlords and Tenants.

Occupier primâ facie liable.

955. Primâ facie the occupier of premises is the person liable to third parties for a nuisance existing on or arising from the premises (m).

Where landlord liable.

The landlord is not liable for any nuisance caused by the tenant by reason of the manner in which the premises are used by the latter (n), but, apart from a nuisance caused in that way, the landlord is liable for the existence of a nuisance upon premises which are in the occupation of his tenant in the following cases, namely: where he has let the premises with a nuisance existing upon them of the existence of which he knew or ought to have known (o); where he re-lets the premises after the user of them has created a nuisance upon them (p); where he has undertaken the repairs of the premises and a nuisance arises from his breach of duty to repair (q);

(k) Saxby v. Manchester and Sheffield Rail. Co. (1869), L. R. 4 C. P. 198.

(l) A.-G. v. Tod Heatley, [1897] 1 Ch. 560, C. A. (defendant held liable for a continuing public nuisance upon a piece of vacant land owing to persons throwing refuse on to it).

(m) Walker v. Goë (1859), 4 H. & N. 350, Ex. Ch.; Pickard v. Smith (1861), 10 C. B. (N. s.) 470; Cheetham v. Hampson (1791), 4 Term Rep. 318; Chauntler v. Robinson (1849), 4 Exch. 163; Pretty v. Bickmore (1873), L. R. 8 C. P. 401 (defective coal plate, tenant liable for repairs); Tarry v. Ashton (1876), 1 Q. B. D. 314; Hadley v. Taylor (1865), L. R. 1 C. P. 53; A.-G. v. Kirk (1896), 12 T. L. R. 514, C. A. (builder whose building agreement had been cancelled, but who was regarded as being in possession of the premises). As to what suffices to constitute occupation, see Hadley v. Taylor, supra. As to the liability when the tenant is insolvent and the lease is delivered to the landlord, see Bishop v. Bedford Charity Trustees (1859), 1 E. & E. 697, where the judges in the Queen's Bench were equally divided. As to the liability of the landlord to his tenant or his tenant's visitors, see Lane v. Cox, [1897] 1 Q. B. 415, C. A.; Robbins v. Jones (1863), 15 C. B. (N. s.) 221, 240; Malone v. Laskey, [1907] 2 K. B. 141, C. A.; Cavalier v. Pope, [1906] A. C. 428; Keates v. Cadogan (Earl) (1851), 10 C. B. 591; and see titles LANDLORD AND TENANT, Vol. XVIII., pp. 505, 507; NEGLIGENCE, pp. 382, 383, ante.

(n) Cheetham v. Hampson, supra; Rich v. Basterfield (1847), 4 C. B. 783 (use of smoking chimneys); Russell v. Shenton (1842), 3 Q. B. 449 (neglect to cleanse drains).

(o) Alston v. Grant (1854), 2 C. L. R. 933 (letting with improperly constructed sewer); R. v. Peddy (1834), 1 Ad. & El. 822 (letting dwelling-houses with common conveniences which constituted the nuisance owing to lack of cleansing, but see the grounds of decision in this case stated in Rich v. Basterfield, supra); Todd v. Flight (1860), 9 C. B. (N. s.) 377 (dangerous chimney-stack); Guinnell v. Eamer (1875), L. R. 10 C. P. 658 (defective coal plate, defendant not knowing of defect and not negligent in not knowing); see also Robbins v. Jones, supra.

(p) Roswell v. Prior (1702), 12 Mod. Rep. 635; R. v. Peddy, supra; Gandy v. Jubber (1865), 5 B. & S. 485; 9 B. & S. 15, Ex. Ch.; Sandford v. Clarke (1888), 21 Q. B. D. 398; Bowen v. Anderson, [1894] 1 Q. B. 164; Winter v. Baker (1887), 3 T. L. R. 569. As to what constitutes a re-letting in the case of a weekly tenancy or of a tenancy from year to year, see title LANDLORD AND TENANT, Vol. XVIII., pp. 439, note (o), 505, note (c).

(q) Payne v. Rogers (1794), 2 Hy. Bl. 350 (defective coal plate); see Leslie v. Pounds (1812), 4 Taunt. 649 (where the landlord undertook to do repairs and the nuisance was caused by the negligence of his workmen). There can be no where he lets the premises for a purpose which is likely to cause a nuisance of a particular character and such nuisance results (r); where he lets the premises taking from the lessee a covenant to do the things which result in the nuisance (s).

SECT. 3.
Civil Proceedings.

(c) Principals and Contractors.

956. Where a principal employs an independent contractor to execute work for him, he may, in certain circumstances, still be liable for injury arising from a nuisance caused by the independent contractor. He is liable if the nuisance is a natural consequence of the work (t).

Liability of principal.

(d) Principals, Agents and Servants.

957. A person is liable for a nuisance committed by his agent or servant in the course of his employment and within its scope (a), and this liability extends so far as to make the employer criminally responsible for public nuisances so caused, although he has no personal knowledge of them (b). But the liability of the employer does not arise where the servant or agent acts beyond the scope of his employment (c).

Liability of principal or employer.

(e) Public Bodies.

958. Public bodies in whom property or works are vested for public purposes, whether for profit or not, are liable for nuisances in the same way as other persons are liable (d), except in the case public bodies.

Liability of

liability on the landlord if the tenant has consented to do repairs (Pretty v. Bickmore (1873), L. R. 8 C. P. 401; Nelson v. Liverpool Brewery Co. (1877), 2 C. P. D. 311); see title LANDLORD AND TENANT, Vol. XVIII., p. 505.

(r) Jenkins v. Jackson (1888), 40 Ch. D. 71 (letting room for dancing over offices); Harris v. James (1876), 45 L. J. (Q. B.) 545 (letting premises to be worked as a lime quarry); Winter v. Baker (1887), 3 T. L. R. 569 (letting premises for use for a noisy show). But a person who lets premises for a school is not liable for a nuisance caused by boys crowding and causing annoyance in the street (Harrison v. Good (1871), L. R. 11 Eq. 338); and see title LANDLORD AND TENANT, Vol. XVIII., p. 504, note (u).

(s) Burt v. Victoria Graving Dock Co., Ltd., and London and St. Katherine's Dock Co. (1882), 47 L. T. 378.

(t) See titles BUILDING CONTRACTS, ENGINEERS, AND ARCHITECTS, Vol. III., pp. 238, 315 et seq.; HIGHWAYS, STREETS, AND BRIDGES, Vol. XVI., p. 136; MASTER AND SERVANT, Vol. XX., pp. 264, 265; TORT.

(a) "Whatever is done for the working of my mine, or the repair of my house, by persons mediately or immediately employed by me, may be considered as done by me. I have the control or management of all that belongs to my land or my house, and it is my fault if I do not so exercise my authority as to prevent injury to another" (Laugher v. Pointer (1826), 5 B. & C. 547, per ABBOTT, C.J., at p. 576); see Stone v. Cartwright (1795), 6 Term Rep. 411; Bush v. Steinman (1799), 1 Bos. & P. 404; Limpus v. General Omnibus Co. (1862), 1 H. & C. 526, Ex. Ch.; Whatman v. Pearson (1868), L. R. 3 C. P. 422; see also titles AGENCY, Vol. I., p. 211; MASTER AND SERVANT, Vol. XX., pp. 248 et seq. As to the general principles of liability, see title TORT.

(b) R. v. Medley (1834), 6 C. & P. 292; R. v. Stephens (1866), L. R. 1 Q. B. 702; see Niven v. Greaves (1890), 54 J. P. 548; and see title MASTER AND SERVANT, Vol. XX., pp. 256, 257, 258.

(c) Bolingbroke v. Swindon Local Board (1874), L. R. 9 C. P. 575; see title MASTER AND SERVANT, Vol. XX., pp. 254, 255.

(d) See Foreman v. Canterbury Corporation (1871), L. R. 6 Q. B. 214; Pendlebury v. Greenhalgh (1875), 1 Q. B. D. 36, C. A.; compare Taylor v. Greenhalgh

SECT. 3.
Civil Proceedings.

of local authorities acting in the capacity of surveyors of highways, who are not liable for nuisance caused by nonfeasance in that capacity (e).

(f) Joint Nuisances.

Effect of joint
nuisances.

959. A nuisance which arises by the joint action of two or more persons will be restrained by the court, although the act of any one of them would only result in an inappreciable inconvenience or damage and be insufficient in itself to constitute a nuisance in law (f). So, where the discharge of chemicals into a sewer or stream is innocuous until they combine with other chemicals in the sewer or stream, the persons guilty of each such discharge are nevertheless severally guilty of committing a nuisance (g).

SUB-SECT. 3.—Damages.

Claim for damages.

960. The person injured by a nuisance may bring an action against the tortfeasor, and may claim damages for the injury either alone or in conjunction with a claim for an injunction (h).

Measure.

961. The damages should be such as to compensate for whatever loss results to the plaintiff as a direct and natural consequence of the wrongful act (i).

(1874), L. R. 9 Q. B. 487; Foster v. Warblington Urban Council, [1906] 1 K. B. 648, C. A. As to the general liability of corporations for tort, see title CORPORATIONS, Vol. VIII., pp. 386 et seq. As to proceedings against public bodies generally, see title PUBLIC AUTHORITIES AND PUBLIC OFFICERS.

(e) See titles HIGHWAYS, STREETS, AND BRIDGES, Vol. XVI., pp. 132, 133; LOCAL GOVERNMENT, Vol. XIX., p. 290.

(f) Lambton v. Mellish, Lambton v. Cox, [1894] 3 Ch. 163 (noise, although the amount of noise made by one was not of itself sufficient to constitute an actionable nuisance); Thorpe v. Brumfitt (1873), 8 Ch. App. 650 (obstruction of access); Sadler v. Great Western Rail. Co., [1896] A. C. 450; Blair and Sumner v. Deakin, Eden and Thwaites v. Deakin (1887), 52 J. P. 327 (pollution of stream); Nixon v. Tynemouth Union Rural Sanitary Authority (1888), 52 J. P. 504 (a similar case); Hendon Union Guardians v. Bowles (1869), 20 L. T. 609; and see, generally, title TORT.

(g) St. Helens Chemical Co. v. St. Helens Corporation (1876), 1 Ex. D. 196; Blair and Sumner v. Deakin, Eden and Thwaites v. Deakin, supra; see Brown v. Bussell (1868), L. R. 3 Q. B. 251; and see, further, p. 571, post.

(h) As to damages generally, see title DAMAGES, Vol. X., pp. 317 et seq. As to injunctions, see p. 560, post.

(i) Grosvenor Hotel Co. v. Hamilton, [1894] 2 Q. B. 836, C. A.; Collins v. Middle Level Commissioners (1869), L. R. 4 C. P. 279. This will not include the cost of restoring the premises to their original condition (Jones v. Gooday (1841), 8 M. & W. 146), nor the injury to the amenities of a house by reason of the fouling of a neighbouring stream; but it will include the expense of securing a new water supply, and of a new engine to take the place of one rendered useless (Harrington (Earl) v. Derby Corporation, [1905] 1 Ch. 205). It will not include loss of profit and extra cost incurred by a contractor in executing work under a roadway, the soil of which belonged to the person engaging the contractor, where the work has been delayed owing to the leak of a pipe belonging to a water company, even assuming that there was any liability on the part of the company to anyone (Cattle v. Stockton Waterworks (1875), L. R. 10 Q. B. 453). If, as the result of the nuisance, the plaintiff has been dispossessed of the premises, he may recover not only the value of the term which he has lost, but also the expense of removing to other premises (Grosvenor Hotel Co. v. Hamilton, supra).

962. Upon proof that there has been in law an invasion of the plaintiff's right by the act or omission of the defendant, the plaintiff is entitled to nominal damages, even though no actual damage be proved. The law presumes damage in such a case (j) because a continuance of the nuisance might eventually destroy the plaintiff's right (k).

SECT. 3.
Civil Proceedings.
Nominal
damages.

Exemplary damages may be given if the circumstances warrant them, as, for example, where the defendant has wilfully acted with the intention of injuring the defendant (l).

Exemplary
damages.

963. Where a reversioner sues, the damages awarded should be the amount by which the value of the reversion is lessened by the injury (m), but he cannot recover loss of rent due to the existence of prejudice against the neighbourhood arising from fear of a recurrence of the nuisance, nor compensation for the diminution which a temporary nuisance may cause in the present selling value (a).

Damages for reversioner.

964. Where the wrongful act is complete, the damages must be awarded once and for all, and no further action can be brought on subsequent loss resulting from that wrongful act (b).

Finality of award.

965. All damages must be assessed down to the time when

Period of assessment.

(j) As to the presumption of damage in the case of a public nuisance, see pp. 509, 510, ante.

(k) Wells v. Watling (1778), 2 Wm. Bl. 1233 (right of common); Hobson v. Todd (1790), 4 Term Rep. 71 (a similar case); Pindar v. Wadsworth (1802), 2 East, 154 (a similar case); Bealey v. Shaw (1805), 6 East, 208 (alteration of flow of water); Williams v. Morland (1824), 2 B. & C. 910 (a similar case); Bower v. Hill (1835), 1 Bing. (N. C.) 549 (obstruction of watercourse); Fay v. Prentice (1845), 1 C. B. 828 (cornice overhanging premises); Wood v. Waud (1849), 3 Exch. 748 (pollution of water); Kidgill v. Moor (1850), 9 C. B. 364 (right of way); Embreij v. Owen (1851), 6 Exch. 353 (interference with flow of water); Northam v. Hurley (1853), 1 E. & B. 665 (diversion of stream); Medway River Navigation Co. v. Romney (Earl) (1861), 9 C. B. (N. S.) 575 (abstraction of water); Sampson v. Hoddinott (1857), 1 C. B. (N. S.) 590 (detention of water); Norbury (Earl) v. Kitchin (1866), 15 L. T. 501 (obstruction of stream); Harrop v. Hirst (1868), L. R. 4 Exch. 43 (abstraction of water); Wilts and Berks Canal Navigation Co. v. Swindon Waterworks Co. (1874), 9 Ch. App. 451 (a similar case); M'Glone v. Smith (1888), 22 L. R. Ir. 559 (obstructing water); Nixon v. Tynemouth Union Rural Sanitary Authority (1888), 52 J. P. 504. Where a plaintiff has obtained an injunction he may have nominal damages, although not claimed in the action, as in acknowledgment of the wrong done to him (Lipman v. Pulman & Sons, Ltd. (1904), 91 L. T. 132; see also title DAMAGES, Vol. X., p. 305).

(l) Emblen v. Myers (1860), 6 H. & N. 54; Bell v. Midland Rail. Co. (1861), 10 C. B. (N. S.) 287; Thompson v. Hill (1870), L. R. 5 C. P. 564; but quære whether exemplary damages can be given when the defendant is not the actual wrongdoer but is made liable on the principle of respondet superior (Black v. North British Rail. Co., [1908] S. C. 444, per Lord DUNEDIN (Lord President), at p. 454; and see title DAMAGES, Vol. X., p. 306).

(m) Hosking v. Phillips (1848), 3 Exch. 168.

(a) Rust v. Victoria Graving Dock Co. and London and St. Katharine Dock Co. (1887), 36 Ch. D. 113, C. A.

(b) Clegg v. Dearden (1848), 12 Q. B. 576; Harrington (Earl) v. Derby Corporation, [1905] 1 Ch. 205; Carey v. Bermondsey Metropolitan Borough Council (1903), 67 J. P. 111; see Offin v. Rochford Rural Council, [1906] 1 Ch. 342; Crawford v. Hornsea Steam Brick and Tile Co. (1876), 45 L. J. (CH.) 432, C. A.; and see title DAMAGES, Vol. X., p. 306.

SECT. 3.
Civil Proceedings.

In case of continuing
nuisances.

the assessment is made (c), and this rule applies to continuing nuisances (d).

966. A continuing nuisance is one in which the wrongful act or omission is repeated or continues. In such cases there is a new nuisance each day (e), and the cause of action continues de die in diem (f). The recovery of damages for the erection of the nuisance does not amount to a grant of a licence to continue it, and subsequent actions may be brought for the continuance, and substantial damages may be awarded in them (g); and, although in the original action nominal damages might suffice, the measure of damages in subsequent actions may be the amount which the jury think sufficient to compel the defendant to abate the nuisance (h).

SUB-SECT. 4.—Injunction.

General
principles.

967. The principles upon which the court acts in granting or refusing injunctions generally apply to injunctions claimed in respect of nuisance (i).

When
granted.

968. As a rule, and subject to legal and equitable defences (k), an injunction will be granted to restrain the continuance of a nuisance where the injury done by it is substantial (l), or where, however slight the damage may be, the nuisance is a continuing or recurring one, so that it would give rise to a series of actions if no injunction were granted (m), or where the defendant claims the

(c) R. S. C., Ord. 36, r. 58.

(d) Hole v. Chard Union, [1894] 1 Ch. 293, C. A.; and, as to the running of time in such a case, see title LIMITATION OF ACTIONS, Vol. XIX., p. 52.

(e) Roswell v. Prior (1702), 12 Mod. Rep. 635; and see cases cited in notes (f), (g), infra. As to the meaning of the expression "in case of continuance of injury or damage" in the Public Authorities Protection Act, 1893 (56 & 57 Vict. c. 61), s. 1, see Carey v. Bermondsey Metropolitan Borough Council (1903), 67 J. P. 111; Harrington (Earl) v. Derby Corporation, [1905] 1 Ch. 205; Hague v. Doncaster Rural District Council (1908), 25 T. L. R. 130; see A.-G. v. Lewes Corporation, [1911] 2 Ch. 495; and see title PUBLIC AUTHORITIES AND PUBLIC OFFICERS.

(f) Hole v. Chard Union, supra; Hague v. Doncaster Rural District Council, supra.

(g) Shadwell v. Hutchinson (1831), 2 B. & Ad. 97; Battishill v. Reed (1856), 18 C. B. 696; see title DAMAGES, Vol. X., p. 310.

(h) Battishill v. Reed, supra. The diminution in the selling value of the property is not the proper measure where subsequent actions may be brought (ibid.); see title DAMAGES, Vol. X., p. 341; and see p. 559, ante.

(i) See title INJUNCTION, Vol. XVII., p. 199. As to perpetual injunctions, see ibid., p. 206; as to damages in lieu of injunctions, see ibid., p. 212; as to mandatory injunctions, see ibid., p. 215; as to interlocutory injunctions, see ibid., p. 217; as to acquiescence and delay, see ibid., pp. 210, 219, 220, 221.

(k) See, generally, title INJUNCTION, Vol. XVII., pp. 197 et seq.

(l) A.-G. v. Sheffield Gas Consumers Co. (1853), 3 De G. M. & G. 304; A.-G. v. Nichol (1809), 16 Ves. 338; Wilson v. Townend (1860), 1 Drew. & Sm. 324; Grand Junction Canal Co. v. Shugar (1871), 6 Ch. App. 483; Thorpe v. Brumfitt (1873), 8 Ch. App. 650; Lambton v. Mellish, Lambton v. Cox, [1894] 3 Ch. 163; Soltau v. De Held (1851), 2 Sim. (N. S.) 133.

(m) A.-G. v. Sheffield Gas Consumers Co., supra; Clowes v. Staffordshire Potteries Waterworks Co. (1872), 8 Ch. App. 125, 142; A.-G. v. Birmingham Borough Council (1858), 4 K. & J. 528, 540; see A.-G. v. Lewes Corporation, supra.

right to continue the conduct complained of (n), or threatens to do so (o).

Where the right to do the act complained of is claimed and an undertaking is refused, the inference will be drawn that a repetition of the nuisance is intended, and an injunction will be granted (p).

SECT. 3.

Civil Proceedings.

When right to commit is claimed.

969. As a rule, an injunction to restrain the continuance of an alleged nuisance will not be granted when the damage caused by the nuisance is trivial or not serious (q), or when it is of a temporary or occasional character (r), or when the injury can be adequately compensated by damages (s).

When not granted.

970. An injunction may be granted to restrain the commission of a prospective nuisance (a). To obtain such an injunction it is necessary to show a strong case of probability that the apprehended mischief will in fact arise (b). If imminent danger of a substantial kind be shown, or should it appear that the apprehended danger, if it comes, will be irreparable, an injunction will be granted (c). An injunction to restrain the erection of a hospital for infectious diseases will only be granted when there is real danger to health and property (d); in the present state of science, the establishment of a small-pox

Prospective
nuisance.

Illustrations.

(n) Roberts v. Gwyrfaï District Council, [1899] 1 Ch. 583; A.-G. v. Preston Corporation (1896), 13 T. L. R. 14; A.-G. v. Acton Local Board (1882), 22 Ch. D. 221; Swindon Waterworks Co. v. Wilts and Berks Canal Navigation Co. (1873), L. R. 7 H. L. 697.

(o) Potts v. Levy (1854), 2 Drew. 272. Where there is no nuisance existing, and no threat or intention to use the property in such a manner as to lead to a nuisance is expressed, an injunction will not as a rule be granted (Cowley (Lord) v. Byas (1877), 5 Ch. D. 944, C. A.; see also North Eastern Rail. Co. v. Crossland (1862), 2 John. & H. 565).

(p) Phillips v. Thomas (1890), 62 L. T. 793.

(q) A.-G. v. Sheffield Gas Consumers Co. (1853), 3 De G. M. & G. 304; A.-G. v. Cambridge Consumers Gas Co. (1868), 4 Ch. App. 71; Wandsworth Board of Works v. London and South Western Rail. Co. (1862), 31 L. J. (CH.) 854; Llanudnod Urban Council v. Woods, [1899] 2 Ch. 705.

(r) Swaine v. Great Northern Rail. Co. (1864), 4 De G. J. & Sm. 211, C. A.; A.-G. v. Preston Corporation (1896), 13 T. L. R. 14; Cooke v. Forbes (1867), L. R. 5 Eq. 166 (an injunction was refused in respect of the escape of noxious fumes where the escape was shown to be accidental, and to have happened on two or three occasions only, and the defendants had taken careful precautions toward preventing it). As to the liability for escape of noxious fumes, see p. 529, ante.

(s) See A.-G. v. Sheffield Gas Consumers Co., supra; Haines v. Taylor (1846), 10 Beav. 75; Wood v. Sutcliffe (1851), 2 Sim. (N. S.) 163.

(a) See cases cited in notes (b)—(d), infra, and (e)—(g), p. 562, post; Dawson v. Paver (1847), 5 Hare, 415; Elwell v. Crowthor (1862), 31 Beav. 163; A.-G. v. Kingston-on-Thames Corporation (1865), 34 L. J. (CH.) 481.

(b) A.-G. v. Manchester Corporation, [1893] 2 Ch. 87.

(c) Fletcher v. Bealey (1885), 28 Ch. D. 688; Haines v. Taylor, supra; Ripon (Earl) v. Hobart (1834), 3 My. & K. 169.

(d) Metropolitan Asylum District v. Hill (1881), 6 App. Cas. 193; Bendelow v. Wortley Union Guardians (1887), 57 L. T. 849 (injunction granted on the ground that there was appreciable injury to plaintiff's property); Fleet v. Metropolitan Asylums District (Managers) (1884), 1 T. L. R. 80; affirmed (1886), 2 T. L. R. 361, C. A. (injunction refused on failure to show danger to health or property); A.-G. v. Nottingham Corporation, [1904] 1 Ch. 673; A.-G. v. Manchester Corporation, supra; A.-G. v. Rathmines and Pembroke Joint Hospital Board, [1904] 1 I. R. 161.

SECT. 3.
Civil Proceedings.

hospital will not be assumed to be a serious source of danger so as to constitute a nuisance for which an injunction will be granted in a quia timet action (e).

Evidence
necessary.

971. It is not sufficient merely to allege that the proposed acts of the defendant will have an illegal result as against the plaintiff, without putting before the court sufficient material to enable it to judge of that question for itself (f). Where some degree of present nuisance exists, the court will take into account its probable continuance and increase, and its present existence raises a presumption of its continuance (g). As between adjoining owners, the court will consider whether the defendant is using his property reasonably or not (h).

Effect of motive.

972. Though the motive with which the act alleged to be a nuisance is done does not alter its character (i), the motive which actuates the person who brings the proceedings to restrain acts alleged to be a nuisance is to be considered in determining whether an injunction should or should not be granted (j).

Nuisance
ceasing since action
brought.

973. The court will refuse to grant an injunction to restrain obstruction of the right of access to premises, caused by crowds attending a theatre, when the nuisance existed at the time of action brought but has since ceased owing to the intervention of the police (k). A declaration that the defendant is not entitled to commit the act complained of is sometimes made instead of granting an injunction (l), but, where damage to property has been proved, the rule appears to be that the plaintiff is entitled to an injunction notwithstanding that the defendants have ceased the nuisance after the commencement of the action (m).

SUB-SECT. 5.—Defences.

(i.) What may be Defences.

General
description.

974. An act or omission which in itself may constitute a nuisance may be prevented from having that consequence in law on account of some other matter which is successfully pleaded as an answer to an action brought in respect of the act or omission.

Statutory
authority.

The act or omission may have been specifically authorised by statute, and may, therefore, not be actionable, but the defence of statutory authority cannot be successfully raised unless it can be

(e) A.-G. v. Nottingham Corporation, [1904] 1 Ch. 673; A.-G. v. Manchester Corporation, [1893] 2 Ch. 87. As to relief in the nature of a quia timet action, see title EQUITY, Vol. XIII., p. 52.

(f) Haines v. Taylor (1847), 2 Ph. 209.

(g) Goldsmid v. Tunbridge Wells Improvement Commissioners (1866), 1 Ch. App. 349; Phillips v. Thomas (1890), 62 L. T. 793.

(h) Sanders-Clerk v. Grosvenor Mansions Co., Ltd., and G. D'Allessandri, [1900] 2 Ch. 373; and see pp. 526, 528, ante, and cases cited in note (b), p. 531, ante.

(i) See p. 510, ante; and, as to motive, see title TORT.

(j) A.-G. v. Cambridge Consumers Gas Co. (1868), 4 Ch. App. 71; A.-G. v. Sheffield Gas Consumers Co. (1853), 3 De G. M. & G. 304; Harris v. Southwark and Vauxhall Water Co., [1891] 2 Ch. 409, 414; Christie v. Davy, [1893] 1 Ch. 316.

(k) Barber v. Penley, [1893] 2 Ch. 447.

(l) Batcheller v. Tunbridge Wells Gas Co. (1901), 84 L. T. 765.

(m) Chester (Dean and Chapter) v. Smelling Corporation, Ltd. (1901), 85 L. T. 67 (in this case the company had, since action, gone into liquidation).

shown that the act was within the powers conferred by the statute (n).

Again, a prescriptive right may have been acquired (o), but it cannot be successfully set up (p), where, during the period of user, the nuisance complained of has not been actionable or preventable by the plaintiff (q), or where the nuisance is appreciably in excess of the right acquired (r), or is materially different in character from that for which the right is acquired (s); nor can a prescriptive right be acquired in respect of a public nuisance (t).

975. Again, an owner or occupier is entitled to protect his land against an extraordinary danger, which threatens it, even though he thus makes it necessary for his neighbour either to take similar measures or to put up with the consequences of not doing so (u). But an owner or occupier is not entitled either to prevent

SECT. 3.

Civil Proceedings.

Prescriptive right.

Self-protection against extraordinary danger.

(n) Jones v. Festiniog Rail. Co. (1868), L. R. 3 Q. B. 733 (liability for damage caused by a spark from a locomotive engine, the use of which was not authorised by the statute); Roberts v. Haines (1856), 6 E. & B. 643; affirmed (1857), 7 E. & B. 625, Ex. Ch. (subsidence caused under purported exercise of statutory rights); Tunbridge Wells Corporation v. Baird, [1896] A. C. 434 (interference with subsoil beyond statutory powers); London and North Western Railway v. Westminster Corporation, [1904] 1 Ch. 759, C. A.; reversed by the House of Lords on the facts, but not on the principle of law, [1905] A. C. 426, 432. As to the exercise of statutory powers, see pp. 516 et seq., ante.

(o) Mason v. Hill (1833), 5 B. & Ad. 1; Wright v. Williams (1836), 1 M. & W. 77; Bealey v. Shaw (1805), 6 East, 208; Carlyon v. Lovering (1857), 1 H. & N. 784, 797; Holker v. Porritt (1875), L. R. 10 Exch. 59, Ex. Ch.; and see cases cited in titles EASEMENTS AND PROFITS À PRENDRE, Vol. XI., pp. 256 et seq., 327; WATERS AND WATERCOURSES. As to how far a local authority can acquire a right to pollute streams, see A.-G. v. Luton Local Board of Health (1856), 2 Jur. (N. S.) 180; Rigby v. Bristol Corporation (1860), 29 L. J. (EX.) 359, 364; Goldsmid v. Tunbridge Wells Improvement Commissioners (1866), 1 Ch. App. 349. It is difficult to see how such a right can now be acquired having regard to the express statutory provisions against it; see titles SEWERS AND DRAINS.

(p) As to the prescriptive right which is essential to a successful plea, where the injury is an increasing one, e.g., increase in impurity of stream, see Goldsmid v. Tunbridge Wells Improvement Commissioners, supra, affirming S. C. (1865), L. R. 1 Eq. 161; Brown v. Dunstable Corporation, [1899] 2 Ch. 378, 387.

(q) Sturges v. Bridgman (1879), 11 Ch. D. 852, C. A. The failure to complain of noise for twenty years does not bar the right to complain where it has been increased, even though slightly (Heather v. Pardon (1877), 37 L. T. 393).

(r) Brown v. Best (1747), 11 Wils. 174; Crossley & Sons, Ltd. v. Lightowler (1867), 2 Ch. App. 478; Metropolitan Board of Works v. London and North Western Rail. Co. (1881), 17 Ch. D. 246, C. A.; A.-G. v. Acton Local Board (1882), 22 Ch. D. 221; Blackburne v. Somers (1879), 5 L. R. Ir. 1; Frechette v. La Compagnie Manufacturière de St. Hyacinthe (1883), 9 App. Cas. 170, P. C.

(s) McIntyre Brothers v. McGavin, [1893] A. C. 268; Baxendale v. McMurray (1867), 2 Ch. App. 790; Foster v. Warblington Urban Council, [1906] 1 K. B. 648; Clarke v. Somersetshire Drainage Commissioners (1888), 57 L. J. (M. C.) 96.

(t) See p. 512, ante.

(u) R. v. Pagham Commissioners of Sewers (1828), 8 B. & C. 355 (erecting groynes to protect property from inroads by the sea); Nield v. London and North Western Rail. Co. (1874), L. R. 10 Exch. 4 (damming a canal to protect banks against flood-water); see Thomas v. Birmingham Canal Co. (1880), 45 J. P. 21 (opening sluices in a heavy rainfall to protect a canal); Ridge v. Midland Rail. Co. (1888), 53 J. P. 55; Dewey v. White (1827), Mood. & M. 56; Maxey Drainage Board v. Great Northern Rail. Co. (1912), 76 J. P. (Journal) 63 (embankment to protect property from flood-water); and see Greyvensteijn v. Hattingh, [1911] A. C. 355, P. C. (driving away locusts).

SECT. 3.
Civil Proceedings.

Vis major;
act of God;
act of stranger.

injury to his own property by diverting a natural stream, whether tidal or not, or the accustomed flow of flood-water, from its accustomed channel so as to throw it and its destructive effects on to his neighbour's land (a); or to rid himself of the consequences of a misfortune already suffered by diverting them to his neighbour's detriment (b).

Though a person who brings things on to his land likely to do injury if allowed to escape must ordinarily keep them at his peril (c), he can excuse himself by showing that the escape was due to vis major or the act of God (d), or to the act of a stranger which there was no duty on the part of the defendant to foresee and guard against (e).

(ii.) What are not Defences.

Illustrations.

976. Where, after taking all the circumstances into consideration, an annoyance is such as to amount to a nuisance, it cannot be justified on the ground that the place is a suitable or convenient one for the performance of the act which occasions the nuisance (f); or that it arises from the carrying on of a trade, lawful in itself and properly conducted, for purposes necessary and beneficial to the community (g); or that it arises from the defendant's use of his own property in a common and useful manner and for his own convenience (h); or that the character of the neighbourhood has changed since the trade giving rise to the nuisance was established (i); or that the nuisance, being a public one, has been authorised by the Crown (k), or by a local authority (k), unless it has statutory powers to authorise it (l); or that a prescriptive right has been acquired to commit it (m); or that the benefit to the

(a) Menzies v. Breadalbane (Earl) (1828), 3 Bli. (N. S.) 414; R. v. Trafford (1831), 1 B. & Ad. 874; (1832), 8 Bing. 204, Ex. Ch.; see Bickett v. Morris (1866), L. R. 1 Sc. & Div. 47, per Lord CHELMSFORD, L.C., at p. 56; and see title WATERS AND WATERCOURSES.

(b) Whalley v. Lancashire and Yorkshire Rail. Co. (1884), 13 Q. B. D. 131, C. A.

(c) See p. 528, ante.

(d) Nichols v. Marsland (1875), L. R. 10 Exch. 255; affirmed (1876), 2 Ex. D. 1, C. A.; Tubervil v. Stamp (1697), 1 Salk. 13; Dixon v. Metropolitan Board of Works (1881), 7 Q. B. D. 418; Blyth v. Birmingham Waterworks Co. (1856), 11 Exch. 781; and see titles NEGLIGENCE, pp. 467 et seq., ante; TORT.

(e) Box v. Jubb (1879), 4 Ex. D. 76; Rylands v. Fletcher (1866), L. R. 1 Exch. 265, Ex. Ch.; Wilson v. Newberry (1871), L. R. 7 Q. B. 31; Barker v. Herbert, [1911] 2 K. B. 633, C. A.; see Gill v. Edouin (1894), 71 L. T. 762; and see titles NEGLIGENCE, pp. 467 et seq., ante; TORT.

(f) Bainford v. Turnley (1862), 3 B. & S. 62, 66, Ex. Ch., overruling Hole v. Barlow (1858), 4 C. B. (N. S.) 334; Cavey v. Ledbitter (1863), 13 C. B. (N. S.) 470; St. Helen's Smelting Co. v. Tipping (1865), 11 H. L. Cas. 642; and see pp. 527, 532, ante.

(g) R. v. Pierce (1683), 2 Show. 327; Stockport Waterworks Co. v. Potter (1861), 7 H. & N. 160; Scott v. Firth (1864), 10 L. T. 240; Elliotson v. Feetham (1835), 2 Bing. (N. C.) 134; West v. White (1877), 46 L. J. (CH.) 333; and see p. 533, ante.

(h) Walter v. Selfe (1851), 4 De G. & Sm. 315; and see p. 526, ante.

(i) A.-G. v. Cole & Son, [1901] 1 Ch. 205; and see pp. 528, 531, 533, ante.

(k) See p. 512, ante.

(l) See pp. 512, 516 et seq., ante.

(m) See title EASEMENTS AND PROFITS À PRENDRE, Vol. XI., pp. 256 et seq.; and see p. 563, ante.

public far exceeds the disadvantage (n); or that the plaintiff has come to the nuisance (o); or that similar nuisances already exist in the locality when it is shown that the defendant materially increases the existing nuisance (p); or that the plaintiff himself has committed a nuisance (q); or that the nuisance complained of was done to prevent the plaintiff from reaping the benefit of a wrong which he had done to defendant (r); or that the act of the defendant was in itself harmless until combined with the acts of others (s); or that others were in fault in not having done their duty (t).

SECT. 4.—Summary Proceedings.

SUB-SECT. 1.—In General.

977. Apart from special provisions relating to nuisances which are made summarily abatable (a) under the Public Health Acts (b), penalties in respect of statutory nuisances or for breach of orders

SECT. 3.
Civil Proceedings.

Statutory
penalties.

(n) R. v. Ward (1836), 4 Ad. & El. 384, overruling in effect R. v. Russell (1827), 6 B. & C. 566; Beardmore v. Tredwell (1862), 3 Giff. 683; R. v. Train (1862), 2 B. & S. 640; R. v. Morris (1830), 1 B. & Ad. 441; A.-G. v. Cambridge Consumers Gas Co. (1868), 4 Ch. App. 71; A.-G. v. Basingstoke Corporation (1876), 45 L. J. (CH.) 726; A.-G. v. Terry (1874), 9 Ch. App. 423; A.-G. v. Mid-Kent Rail. Co. and South-Eastern Rail. Co. (1867), 3 Ch. App. 100; Raphael v. Thames Valley Rail. Co. (1867), 2 Ch. App. 147.

(o) Tipping v. St. Helens Smelting Co. (1865), 1 Ch. App. 66; Elliotson v. Feetham (1835), 2 Bing. (N. C.) 134; Bliss v. Hall (1838), 4 Bing. (N. C.) 183; Mousley v. Hutchinson (1838), 7 L. J. (C. P.) 122, n.; see also Barber v. Penley, [1893] 2 Ch. 447, 449; A.-G. v. Manchester Corporation, [1893] 2 Ch. 87, 95; London and Brighton Rail. Co. v. Truman (1885), 11 App. Cas. 45, 52; Crump v. Lambert (1867), L. R. 3 Eq. 409, 413; Sander v. Manley and Rogers, [1878] W. N. 181; Shotts Iron Co. v. Inglis (1882), 7 App. Cas. 518; and, as to coming to a nuisance, see also pp. 531, 532, 533, ante.

(p) Crump v. Lambert (1867), L. R. 3 Eq. 409; Cooke v. Forbes (1867), L. R. 5 Eq. 166, 172; Polsue and Alfieri, Ltd. v. Rushmer, [1907] A. C. 121; Crossley & Sons, Ltd. v. Lightowler (1867), 2 Ch. App. 478; A.-G. v. Leeds Corporation (1870), 5 Ch. App. 583; R. v. Neil (1826), 2 C. & P. 485; St. Helens's Smelting Co. v. Tipping (1865), 11 H. L. Cas. 642; Salvin v. North Brancepeth Coal Co. (1874), 9 Ch. App. 705; and see pp. 531, 532, ante.

(q) Colchester Corporation v. Brooke (1845), 7 Q. B. 339.

(r) Ibbotson v. Peat (1865), 3 H. & C. 644.

(s) Harrison v. Great Northern Rail. Co. (1864), 3 H. & C. 231; and see p. 558, ante.

(t) Oyston v. Aberdeen District Tramways Co., [1897] A. C. 111; Wettor v. Dunk (1864), 4 F. & F. 298; Bell v. Twentyman (1841), 1 Q. B. 766; see A.-G. v. Colney Hatch Lunatic Asylum (1868), 4 Ch. App. 146. As to proceedings under the Public Health Acts (see note (b), infra), see St. Helens Chemical Co. v. St. Helens Corporation (1876), 1 Ex. D. 196 (where the local authority was held entitled to take proceedings, although itself in fault in not flushing the sewers); compare Fordom v. Parsons, [1894] 2 Q. B. 780; Wincanton Rural Council v. Parsons, [1905] 2 K. B. 34. In A.-G. v. Scott, [1904] 1 K. B. 404, C. A., it was held that it was no answer to a motion by the Attorney-General for an interim injunction to allege that the damage to a road by a traction engine would not have occurred but for the neglect of the relators to keep the road in proper repair. The court for this purpose assumed that a nuisance had been committed. On the hearing of the action it was found that the nuisance had not been committed by the defendant (A.-G. v. Scott, [1905] 2 K. B. 160, C. A.).

(a) As to such nuisances, see pp. 536, 537, ante, and as to the proceedings thereon, see pp. 566 et seq., post.

(b) Public Health Act, 1875 (38 & 39 Vict. c. 55); Public Health (London) Act, 1891 (54 & 55 Vict. c. 76).

SECT. 4.
Summary Proceedings.

relating thereto may generally be recovered by proceedings in courts of summary jurisdiction (c), subject to any exceptional provisions in the particular statute which deals with a particular nuisance (d).

SUB-SECT. 2.—In Case of Nuisances made Summarily Abatable.

Information.

978. Outside the Metropolis, information of the existence of those nuisances which are summarily abatable (e) may be given by any person aggrieved, or by two inhabitant householders, or by an officer of the local authority, or by the relieving officer, or by the police (f). In London, any person may, and every officer of the local authority (g) and every relieving officer must, give information in accordance with regulations (h); and official preliminary intimation in writing of the existence of the nuisance must be given to the person responsible for it (i).

Notice to abate.

979. Notice to abate (k) an existing nuisance must be served (l)

(c) See title MAGISTRATES, Vol. XIX., pp. 567, 571 et seq.

(d) For provisions in the Public Health Acts relating generally to the recovery and application of penalties, see titles METROPOLIS, Vol. XX., pp. 467, 468; PUBLIC HEALTH AND LOCAL ADMINISTRATION.

(e) For a list of these, see pp. 537 et seq., ante.

(f) Public Health Act, 1875 (38 & 39 Vict. c. 55), s. 93. As to the local authority, see titles LOCAL GOVERNMENT, Vol. XIX., pp. 266, 292, 313, 331, 371, 375, 385; METROPOLIS, Vol. XX., p. 408; PUBLIC HEALTH AND LOCAL ADMINISTRATION.

(g) See title METROPOLIS, Vol. XX., pp. 409, 452 et seq.

(h) The local authority is required to make such regulations, and to give directions to its officers, so as to secure that nuisances may be brought to the notice of offenders (Public Health (London) Act, 1891 (54 & 55 Vict. c. 76), s. 3; see title PUBLIC HEALTH AND LOCAL ADMINISTRATION).

(i) Public Health (London) Act, 1891 (54 & 55 Vict. c. 76), s. 3. As to the person responsible, see p. 567, post. No provision is made in the Public Health Act, 1875 (38 & 39 Vict. c. 55), for the giving of such a preliminary intimation, though one is sometimes given. As to its effect, when given, upon the right of an occupier to recover money spent under it as having been paid under legal compulsion, see North v. Walthamstow Urban District Council (1898), 62 J. P. 836; Haedicke v. Friern Barnet Urban District Council (1904), 20 T. L. R. 567; Ellis v. Bromley Rural District Council (1899), 81 L. T. 224; and see title CONTRACT, Vol. VII., pp. 468, 478. A person who acts merely upon a preliminary intimation given under the Public Health (London) Act, 1891 (54 & 55 Vict. c. 76), s. 3, acts voluntarily and not under legal compulsion, and cannot recover the expenses of so doing from the person liable therefor; see Thompson and Norris Manufacturing Co., Ltd. v. Hawes (1895), 73 L. T. 369, C. A.; Proctor v. Islington Metropolitan Borough (1903), 67 J. P. 164; Harris v. Hickman, [1904] 1 K. B. 13; Oliver v. Camberwell Borough Council (1904), 68 J. P. 165; and compare p. 567, post.

(k) For forms of notice, see Public Health Act, 1875 (38 & 39 Vict. c. 55), Sched. IV., Form A; Public Health (London) Act, 1891 (54 & 55 Vict. c. 76), Sched. III., Form A; Encyclopædia of Forms and Precedents, Vol. VI., p. 413, Vol. X., pp. 472, 544, 596—599. As to authentication of notices, see respectively Public Health Act, 1875 (38 & 39 Vict. c. 55), s. 266; Public Health (London) Act, 1891 (54 & 55 Vict. c. 76), s. 127. The notice may be addressed to "the owner" or "the occupier" of the premises, without his name or further description (Public Health Act, 1875 (38 & 39 Vict. c. 55), s. 267; Public Health (London) Act, 1891 (54 & 55 Vict. c. 76, s. 128 (3)).

(l) As to service, see Public Health Act, 1875 (38 & 39 Vict. c. 55), s. 267; Public Health (London) Act, 1891 (54 & 55 Vict. c. 76), s. 128; title PUBLIC HEALTH AND LOCAL ADMINISTRATION.

SECT. 4.
Summary Proceedings.

by, or by the direction of (m), the sanitary authority upon the person responsible (n), requiring him to abate the nuisance within the time (o) specified in the notice, and to do such things as may be necessary for that purpose (p). Outside the Metropolis the notice must (q), and in London it may (r), specify the works to be executed. In London, a notice designed to prevent the recurrence of the nuisance may be given either in the abatement notice or separately, and it may be given although the nuisance has been abated if recurrence is likely (s).

Outside the Metropolis an appeal lies from an abatement notice to the Local Government Board (t). No appeal is provided for under the statute relating to the Metropolis.

980. The person responsible, and who is therefore to be served with the abatement notice, is primarily the person by whose act, default, or sufferance the nuisance arises or continues (u), subject to the following exceptions:—(1) If such person cannot be found, the notice is to be served on the owner or occupier (a) of the Person to be served.

(m) It cannot be given by the officer on his own initiative; see St. Leonard Vestry v. Holmes (1885), 50 J. P. 132.

(n) See the text, infra.

(o) The time must be specified, but a notice to abate forthwith is good (Thomas v. Nokes (1894), 58 J. P. 672; Thomas v. Western Steam Trawling Co. (1894), 59 J. P. 232).

(p) Public Health Act, 1875 (38 & 39 Vict. c. 55), s. 94; Public Health (London) Act, 1891 (54 & 55 Vict. c. 76), s. 4 (1), (3).

(q) R. v. Wheatley (1885), 16 Q. B. D. 34; Millard v. Wastall, [1898] 1 Q. B. 342. Under similar provisions in the Public Health Act, 1848 (11 & 12 Vict. c. 63), it was held that the power to determine the nature and extent of the works was vested in the local board, and that the justices had no power to review the determination of the board in proceedings for penalties for non-compliance with notices (Hargreaves v. Taylor (1863), 3 B. & S. 613). The proper remedy is by way of appeal to the Local Government Board; see the text, infra. It must be noticed that the Public Health Act, 1875 (38 & 39 Vict. c. 55), s. 96, empowers the court to make an order requiring the respondent "to comply with all or any of the requisitions of the notice" (see pp. 568, 569, post), and this provision contemplates that the justices may consider the necessity or advisability of the works which the local authority has required (see R. v. Llewellyn (1884), 13 Q. B. D. 681). Where a local board had undertaken the cleansing of privies and, after typhoid fever, had failed to eradicate the germs of disease in the brickwork, it was held that the board could not, under proceedings for the nuisance thereby arising, call upon the owner to abolish the privies and substitute water-closets (Barnett v. Laskey (1898), 63 J. P. 5).

(r) Public Health (London) Act, 1891 (54 & 55 Vict. c. 76), s. 4 (1).

(s) Ibid., s. 4 (2). For an instance of a recurring nuisance, see Draper v. Sperring (1861), 10 C. B. (N. S.) 113; see p. 555, ante. It is not necessary that there should have been a previous notice under the Public Health (London) Act, 1891 (54 & 55 Vict. c. 76), s. 4 (1), to abate the nuisance, or that the notice under ibid., s. 4 (2), should include a notice under ibid., s. 4 (1) (Central London Rail. Co. v. Hammersmith Borough Council (1904), 90 L. T. 645).

(t) Public Health Act, 1875 (38 & 39 Vict. c. 55), s. 268. As to the Local Government Board, see title CONSTITUTIONAL LAW, Vol. VII., pp. 103, 104.

(u) Public Health Act, 1875 (38 & 39 Vict. 55), s. 94; Public Health (London) Act, 1891 (54 & 55 Vict. c. 76), s. 4 (1); see p. 554, ante.

(a) The authority may proceed against either, with the exception that they must proceed only against the owner where the nuisance arises from structural defects (see p. 568, post); but in neither case is he liable unless the nuisance arises or continues by his act etc. (River Thames Conservators v. Port of London Port Sanitary Authority, [1894] 1 Q. B. 647).

SECT. 4.
Summary Proceedings.

premises, unless it is clear that neither of these is the defaulter, in which case the local authority may abate the nuisance (b), and, in London, may do what is necessary to prevent its recurrence (c); (2) in any case in which the nuisance arises from the want or defective construction of any structural convenience (d), or where there is no occupier of the premises, the owner is the person to be served (e).

Proceedings
on default.

981. If the abatement notice is not complied with, or if the nuisance, although abated, is likely to recur, summary proceedings must be taken by the authority before the justices (f), who may make one of three orders hereafter described (g), and, outside the Metropolis, may in addition impose penalties, and must give directions as to costs (h). In London, penalties may be imposed, whether a nuisance order is made or not, upon any person from whose wilful act or default the nuisance arose, or upon any person who makes default in complying with the requisitions of the abatement notice within the time specified (i).

Orders :—

982. Orders made under the Public Health Act, 1875 (k), must be signed by two justices (l).

Abatement
orders.

983. An abatement order may require compliance with all or any of the requisitions of the abatement notice, or otherwise require the abatement of the nuisance, within a time specified in the order (m), and, outside the Metropolis, may order all works necessary for that purpose to be done (n).

(b) Public Health Act, 1875 (38 & 39 Vict. c. 55), s. 94; Public Health (London) Act, 1891 (54 & 55 Vict. c. 76), s. 4 (1), (3) (b).

(c) Public Health (London) Act, 1891 (54 & 55 Vict. c. 76), s. 4 (3) (b).

(d) Public Health Act, 1875 (38 & 39 Vict. c. 55), s. 94; Public Health (London) Act, 1891 (54 & 55 Vict. c. 76), s. 4 (3) (a), the expression in the latter being any "want or defect of a structural character"; and see Kinson Pottery Co. v. Poole Corporation, [1899] 2 Q. B. 41.

(e) Public Health Act, 1875 (38 & 39 Vict. c. 55), s. 94; Public Health (London) Act, 1891 (54 & 55 Vict. c. 76), s. 4 (3) (a); River Thames Conservators v. Port of London Port Sanitary Authority, [1894] 1 Q. B. 647. As to the definition of owner, see title PUBLIC HEALTH AND LOCAL ADMINISTRATION.

(f) Public Health Act, 1875 (38 & 39 Vict. c. 55), s. 95; Public Health (London) Act, 1891 (54 & 55 Vict. c. 76), s. 5 (1). The complaint may be addressed to "the owner" of the premises, naming them, without further name or description (Public Health Act, 1875 (38 & 39 Vict. c. 55), s. 267; Public Health (London) Act, 1891 (54 & 55 Vict. c. 76), s. 128 (3); R. v. Mead, [1894] 2 Q. B. 124). For forms of summons, see Public Health Act, 1875 (38 & 39 Vict. c. 55), Sched. IV., Form B.; Public Health (London) Act, 1891 (54 & 55 Vict. c. 76), Sched. III., Form B. See also title MAGISTRATES, Vol. XIX., pp. 593 et seq.

(g) I.e., an abatement, prohibition, or closing order; see the text, infra, and p. 569, post.

(h) Public Health Act, 1875 (38 & 39 Vict. c. 55), s. 96.

(i) Public Health (London) Act, 1891 (54 & 55 Vict. c. 76), s. 4 (4).

(k) 38 & 39 Vict. c. 55.

(l) Winy v. Epsom Urban Council, [1904] 1 K. B. 798.

(m) Public Health Act, 1875 (38 & 39 Vict. c. 55), s. 96; Public Health (London) Act, 1891 (54 & 55 Vict. c. 76), s. 5 (3). An order may be partly good and partly bad, in which case it may stand as to the former part though quashed as to the latter (R. v. Horrocks, Ex parte Bonstead (1900), 64 J. P. 661).

(n) Public Health Act, 1875 (38 & 39 Vict. c. 55), s. 96.

A prohibition order prohibits the recurrence of the nuisance (o), and outside the Metropolis it may direct the execution of any works necessary to prevent recurrence (p).

Every order made under the Public Health Act, 1875 (q), which requires works or things to be done, must specify the particular works and things to be done, otherwise it is invalid (r); but the specification is not necessary when the nuisance is such as not to require any works (s). The respondent is not entitled to have an alternative inserted in the order (t). The justices have absolute power to specify the works, structural or otherwise, which in their discretion they think necessary (u). In London, the necessary works are to be specified only when the respondent desires such specification, or the court thinks it desirable (v).

A closing order prohibits a dwelling-house from being used for human habitation (w). It can only be made when unfitness of the house for that purpose is shown (x), and there is no obligation to make it, except in London (y). It may be rescinded on fitness being proved to the satisfaction of the court (z).

984. Where the person responsible (a) cannot be found, or the owner or occupier is not known or cannot be found, the nuisance order may be directed to, and must then be executed by, the sanitary authority (b).

985. It is no defence to the summary proceedings for the respondent to allege that he has a right to do the things which ultimately result in the nuisance. His rights as against other

SECT. 4.
Summary
Proceedings.

Prohibition
order.

Specification of works
required.

Closing
orders.

Nuisance order directed to an authority.

Defences.

(o) Public Health Act, 1875 (38 & 39 Vict. c. 55), s. 96; Public Health (London) Act, 1891 (54 & 55 Vict. c. 76), s. 5 (4).

(p) Public Health Act, 1875 (38 & 39 Vict. c. 55), s. 96.

(q) 38 & 39 Vict. c. 55.

(r) R. v. Wheatley (1885), 16 Q. B. D. 34. This rule applies also where the complaint is lodged by a private individual (R. v. Horrocks, Ex parte Boustead (1900), 64 J. P. 661).

(s) Millard v. Wastall, [1898] 1 Q. B. 342.

(t) Whitaker v. Derby Urban Sanitary Authority (1885), 2 T. L. R. 68, where it was sought to have inserted the words "or otherwise necessary to abate the nuisance."

(u) R. v. Kent Justices (1885), 49 J. P. 404; Whitaker v. Derby Urban Sanitary Authority, supra; compare Ex parte Whitchurch (1881), 6 Q. B. D. 545, where the point was doubted; Ex parte Saunders (1883), 11 Q. B. D. 191; R. v. Llewellyn (1884), 13 Q. B. D. 681; and see note (q), p. 567, ante.

(v) Public Health (London) Act, 1891 (54 & 55 Vict. c. 76), s. 5 (5).

(w) Public Health Act, 1875 (38 & 39 Vict. c. 55), s. 97; Public Health (London) Act, 1891 (54 & 55 Vict. c. 76), s. 5 (6). Closing orders must also be made under the Housing, Town Planning, etc. Act, 1909 (9 Edw. 7, c. 44), s. 17; see title PUBLIC HEALTH AND LOCAL ADMINISTRATION.

(x) As to the effect of the absence from a dwelling-house of proper water fittings, or of a proper and sufficient water supply, see p. 539, ante, and notes (c)—(e), ibid.

(y) Public Health Act, 1875 (38 & 39 Vict. c. 55), s. 97; Public Health (London) Act, 1891 (54 & 55 Vict. c. 76), s. 5 (7). Under the latter a fine may also be imposed.

(z) Public Health Act, 1875 (38 & 39 Vict. c. 55), s. 97; Public Health (London) Act, 1891 (54 & 55 Vict. c. 76), s. 5 (8).

(a) As to the "person responsible," see p. 567, ante.

(b) Public Health Act, 1875 (38 & 39 Vict. c. 55), s. 100; Public Health (London) Act, 1891 (54 & 55 Vict. c. 76), s. 8. As to the sanitary authority, see note (f), p. 566, ante; title PUBLIC HEALTH AND LOCAL ADMINISTRATION.

SECT. 4.
Summary
Proceedings.

persons are immaterial, and the proceedings will not be stayed pending the determination of private disputes (c).

Inability to obey and execute the order without committing a trespass may be a good defence, and an order involving the commission of a trespass will probably be quashed (d).

The fact that the complaining local authority has contributed to the nuisance does not exonerate the individual who also occasions the nuisance (e); but if the nuisance is really caused by the neglect of the sanitary authority to do its duty, for example, to provide a proper and effective system of sewers, the authority cannot, it would seem, successfully proceed against a householder exercising his legal rights (f).

Who may complain of
nuisance.

986. Besides the local authority, any person aggrieved, or any inhabitant or any owner of premises in the district, may, outside the Metropolis, complain to the justices of the existence of a nuisance (g), and, in London, any person may do so (h). In all such cases the proceedings, their incidents and consequences, are the same as if the complaint had been lodged by the local authority (i). But the court may adjourn the summons for an examination of the premises and may authorise entry for that purpose. The court may also authorise a constable or other person to do the necessary works and to recover the expenses from the party on whom the order is made (k), and such person then has the same powers as an officer of the local authority (l).

Complaint against local authority.

A private individual may also make a complaint against a local authority in respect of a nuisance committed by it, but the court has no jurisdiction to entertain a complaint in respect of a nuisance caused by sewage works of the authority (m).

Nuisance
outside district.

987. Proceedings may be taken in respect of nuisances outside the district of the local authority, whether a metropolitan district or

(c) Brown v. Bussell (1868), L. R. 3 Q. B. 251; Riddell v. Spear (1879), 40 L. T. 130.

(d) Scarborough Corporation v. Scarborough Rural Sanitary Authority (1876), 1 Ex. D. 344; R. v. Trimble (1877), 36 L. T. 508; Letterkenny Town Commissioners v. Collins (1891), 28 L. R. Ir. 235; compare Parker v. Inge (1886), 17 Q. B. D. 584, which seems irreconcilable. The defence does not avail under the Public Health Acts Amendment Act, 1890 (53 & 54 Vict. c. 59), s. 19; see Lancaster v. Barnes District Council, [1898] 1 Q. B. 855, and title SEWERS AND DRAINS. As to the effect of an "owner" ceasing to be such during the proceedings, see Broadbent v. Shepherd, [1901] 2 K. B. 274.

(e) St. Helens Chemical Co. v. St. Helens Corporation (1876), 1 Ex. D. 196.

(f) Molloy v. Gray (1889), 24 L. R. Ir. 258; see Kirkheaton Local Board v. Beaumont (1888), 52 J. P. 68; Fordom v. Parsons, [1894] 2 Q. B. 780; compare Kinson Pottery Co. v. Poole Corporation, [1899] 2 Q. B. 41; Graham v. Wroughton, [1901] 2 Ch. 451, C. A.; and see title SEWERS AND DRAINS.

(g) Public Health Act, 1875 (38 & 39 Vict. c. 55), s. 105.

(h) Public Health (London) Act, 1891 (54 & 55 Vict. c. 76), s. 12 (1).

(i) Public Health Act, 1875 (38 & 39 Vict. c. 55), s. 105; Public Health (London) Act, 1891 (54 & 55 Vict. c. 76), s. 12 (1).

(k) Public Health Act, 1875 (38 & 39 Vict. c. 55), s. 105; Public Health (London) Act, 1891 (54 & 55 Vict. c. 76), s. 12 (2).

(l) Public Health Act, 1875 (38 & 39 Vict. c. 55), s. 105; Public Health (London) Act, 1891 (54 & 55 Vict. c. 76), s. 12 (3).

(m) R. v. Parlbay (1889), 22 Q. B. D. 520; Fulham Vestry v. London County Council, [1897] 2 Q. B. 76.

otherwise, but they must be taken in the district where the nuisance exists (n).

SECT. 4.
Summary
Proceedings.

Joint
nuisance.

988. Proceedings may be instituted against two or more persons who wholly or partially cause a nuisance. They may be included in one proceeding. Orders and fines may be made against or imposed upon one, some, or all according to requirements, and the costs distributed as the court thinks fair and reasonable. Proceedings do not abate on the death of any of such persons. Any legal right of contribution amongst them is not affected, and persons who have been proceeded against may recover a proportionate part of the expenses from those persons responsible who have not been proceeded against (o).

989. Outside the Metropolis, an appeal lies from an order of justices to the court of quarter sessions (p), and in the meantime proceedings and liability to penalties remain in abeyance (q).

Appeals:
(i.) outside London;
(ii.) in London.

In London, the same right of appeal and of stay is given (r), but only where the nuisance order is or includes a prohibition or closing order, or requires the execution of structural works (s). Upon the appeal being dismissed or abandoned the appellant becomes liable to a daily penalty during non-compliance with the order, unless he satisfies the court before whom proceedings are taken for the fine that there was substantial ground for the appeal, and that it was not brought for the purpose of delay. The court of quarter sessions may impose the fine when dismissing an appeal (t).

If the petty sessional court in London thinks that the nuisance will be injurious or dangerous to health, and that immediate abatement will not cause any injury which cannot be compensated by damages, the court may order the authority to abate the nuisance, notwithstanding the appeal. If the appeal is successful the authority must pay compensation; if unsuccessful or abandoned, the authority may recover the expenses of the abatement (a).

Abatement pending appeal.

990. In case of non-compliance with the order of the justices, daily penalties may be imposed on persons during default, unless it can be shown that they have used all due diligence to carry out

Penalties for non-compliance with orders.

(n) Public Health Act, 1875 (38 & 39 Vict. c. 55), s. 108; Public Health (London) Act, 1891 (54 & 55 Vict. c. 76), s. 14.

(o) Public Health Act, 1875 (38 & 39 Vict. c. 55), s. 255; Public Health (London) Act, 1891 (54 & 55 Vict. c. 76), s. 120; see also ibid., s. 11 (2); and Nathan v. Rouse, [1905] 1 K. B. 527; and see p. 558, ante.

(p) Public Health Act, 1875 (38 & 39 Vict. c. 55), s. 269; see title MAGISTRATES, Vol. XIX., pp. 642 et seq.

(q) Public Health Act, 1875 (38 & 39 Vict. c. 55), s. 99. There is no appeal from a Divisional Court to the Court of Appeal (R. v. Whitchurch (1881), 7 Q. B. D. 534, C. A.), nor from a refusal by the former court to grant an order nisi for a mandamus to magistrates to state a case (Ex parte Schofield, [1891] 2 Q. B. 428, C. A.); see title CROWN PRACTICE, Vol. X., p. 124.

(r) Public Health (London) Act, 1891 (54 & 55 Vict. c. 76), ss. 6 (1), 125.

(s) Ibid., s. 6 (2).

(t) Ibid., s. 6 (3).

(a) Ibid., s. 6 (4).

SECT. 4.

Summary
Proceedings.Inability to obey orders.

the order. Double penalties are imposed for knowingly and wilfully acting contrary to prohibition orders (b).

The defence of having used all due diligence will avail an owner of premises, who has been unable to abate a nuisance existing on lands to which he has no right of access without permission of the occupier, when he has done his best to obtain such permission but has failed (c).

Where an order directs an owner to abate a nuisance, and in his default directs the local authority to do so, the owner is none the less liable to penalties because the local authority has failed to carry out the order (d).

Power or duty of authority to enter and abate after order made.

991. Where an order has been obtained for the abatement of a nuisance and has been disobeyed, it is competent to the authority after conviction to enter the premises and abate the nuisance (e). But this is a power and not a duty, so that a mandamus cannot be obtained to compel the authority to abate the nuisance (f). It may, however, outside the Metropolis, form the subject of complaint to the Local Government Board (g). In London, the metropolitan borough councils, but not the City Corporation, may be compelled to proceed by the London County Council, or by the Local Government Board after complaint made to the Board by the County Council (h). Where the City authority is in default an officer of the City police or some other person appointed may proceed on the authority of the Local Government Board (i).

Power to enter and examine.

992. Beyond the power to enter premises and abate a nuisance after disobedience of a nuisance order, the local authority has powers of entry and examination at limited hours for the purpose of ascertaining whether a nuisance exists, or whether, after a nuisance order has been made, and so long as it remains unexecuted, it is being obeyed (k).

Proceedings
when admission refused.

993. In the event of refusal of admission, any justice on complaint (l) thereof on oath by any officer of the authority outside the

(b) Public Health Act, 1875 (38 & 39 Vict. c. 55), s. 98; Public Health (London) Act, 1891 (54 & 55 Vict. c. 76), s. 5 (9).

(c) Parker v. Inge (1886), 17 Q. B. D. 584.

(d) See Tomlins v. Great Stanmore Nuisance Removal Committee (1865), 12 L. T. 118.

(e) Public Health Act, 1875 (38 & 39 Vict. c. 55), s. 98; Public Health (London) Act, 1891 (54 & 55 Vict. c. 76), s. 5 (9). Power is given to sell any materials removed and to apply the proceeds to the expenses and costs (Public Health Act, 1875 (38 & 39 Vict. c. 55), s. 101; Public Health (London) Act, 1891 (54 & 55 Vict. c. 76), s. 9).

(f) Re Ham Board of Health, Ex parte Bassett (1857), 3 Jur. (N. S.) 136; see title CROWN PRACTICE, Vol. X., p. 97.

(g) Public Health Act, 1875 (38 & 39 Vict. c. 55), s. 299.

(h) Public Health (London) Act, 1891 (54 & 55 Vict. c. 76), ss. 100, 101, 133; see title METROPOLIS, Vol. XX., p. 409.

(i) Public Health (London) Act, 1891 (54 & 55 Vict. c. 76), ss. 134, 135; see title METROPOLIS, Vol. XX., p. 469.

(k) Public Health Act, 1875 (38 & 39 Vict. c. 55), s. 102; Public Health (London) Act, 1891 (54 & 55 Vict. c. 76), s. 10.

(l) For form of notice of intention to complain, see Encyclopædia of Forms and Precedents, Vol. X., pp. 470, 545.

SECT. 4.
Summary Proceedings.

Metropolis, made after reasonable notice in writing of the intention to make the entry has been given to the person having the custody of the premises (m), may order the person having such custody to allow the admission, or if there be no person having such custody, an order may be made authorising entry. Any such order operates until the nuisance has been abated or the work for which the entry was necessary has been done; and refusal to allow entry under order renders the offender liable to penalties (n). The applicant for an order must show some reason why entry is necessary (o).

The power of the justices to make orders for entry is discretionary, and if made the order should be in such form as to show the particular matter to which it has reference (p). Without a justices' order the local authority has no right of entry against the will of the occupier (q).

Orders for entry.

In London, similar general powers of entry are given. The person claiming right of entry must, if required, produce some written document, properly authenticated, showing his right to enter (r). Any person refusing or failing to admit anyone who is authorised and claims to enter is liable to a penalty not exceeding £5 if the entry is for the purpose of giving effect to a magistrate's order, and is so stated in the document above mentioned or is claimed by an officer of the authority; or if the refusal or failure is with intent to prevent the discovery of some contravention of the statute or a bye-law under it; or is declared by the statute conferring the right of entry to render the person refusing or failing subject to a fine. Beyond this, a warrant may be granted authorising entry, and by force if necessary, with heavy penalties in case of default. The warrant remains in force until the purpose for which entry is required has been satisfied (s).

Powers of entry in London.

994. Costs and expenses of the proceedings are deemed to be money paid for the use and at the request of the person on whom any order is made or, where no order is made, of the person by whose act or default the nuisance arose. They are recoverable in a court of summary jurisdiction (t), or in a county court (u), or in the High Court (v). If the owner (w) is liable for them they may

Costs and expenses of proceedings.

(m) For form of notice of intended entry, see Encyclopædia of Forms and Precedents, Vol. X., p. 543.

(n) Public Health Act, 1875 (38 & 39 Vict. c. 55), ss. 102, 103.

(o) Vines v. North London Collegiate and Camden Schools for Girls (1899), 63 J. P. 244.

(p) Wimbledon Urban District Council v. Hastings (1902), 87 L. T. 118.

(q) Consett Urban Council v. Crawford, [1903] 2 K. B. 183.

(r) For a form of authority, see Encyclopædia of Forms and Precedents, Vol. X., pp. 543, 545.

(s) Public Health (London) Act, 1891 (54 & 55 Vict. c. 76), s. 115; and see cases cited in notes (o), (q), supra. As to the power to enter tents, vans, sheds, and the like used for human habitation when overcrowding or infectious disease is suspected, see Public Health (London) Act, 1891 (54 & 55 Vict. c. 76), s. 95 (3).

(t) See title MAGISTRATES, Vol. XIX., p. 567.

(u) See title COUNTY COURTS, Vol. VIII., p. 678.

(v) Public Health Act, 1875 (38 & 39 Vict. c. 55), s. 104; Public Health (London) Act, 1891 (54 & 55 Vict. c. 76), s. 11.

(w) See the Public Health Act, 1875 (38 & 39 Vict. c. 55), s. 4; and see

SECT. 4.
Summary Proceedings.

be recovered from any owner for the time being (a), subject, outside the Metropolis, to their not exceeding a year's rack-rent (b) of the premises. They may, where the owner is liable (c), be recovered from the occupier of the premises (d), who may deduct the amount actually paid (e) from his rent, but he is not to be liable to pay more than the amount of rent due from him after the demand of such costs and expenses, or after notice not to pay his landlord any rent without first satisfying the costs and expenses (f). This limitation as to amount does not apply if he refuses to disclose the name and address of his landlord. The court may apportion the payment among persons who have jointly caused the nuisance (g). Contracts between landlords and tenants are protected (h).

SUB-SECT. 3.—Indictment.

Public
nuisance
a misdemeanour.

995. Every public nuisance is a misdemeanour at common law and the subject of indictment (i), and this procedure is not ousted unless it is clearly barred by the express or clearly implied terms of a statute (k). At the trial the court may order the abatement of the nuisance (l).

Public Health (London) Act, 1891 (54 & 55 Vict. c. 76), s. 141; title PUBLIC HEALTH AND LOCAL ADMINISTRATION.

(a) See Plumstead Board of Works v. Ingoldby (1873), L. R. 8 Exch. 63, 174, Ex. Ch.

(b) Public Health Act, 1875 (38 & 39 Vict. c. 55), s. 104; see title LANDLORD AND TENANT, Vol. XVIII., p. 478.

(c) If the notice to abate a structural nuisance was served on the occupier only and not on the owner, the provisions as to deductions do not apply (Butcher v. Ruth (1887), 22 L. R. Ir. 380).

(d) The fact that the local authority has an unsatisfied judgment against the owner is no defence in proceedings against the occupier (Bermondsey Vestry v. Ramsey (1871), L. R. 6 C. P. 247).

(e) Ryan v. Thompson (1868), L. R. 3 C. P. 144. As to the effect on a right of distress, see Skinner v. Hunt, [1904] 2 K. B. 452, C. A.

(f) Public Health Act, 1875 (38 & 39 Vict. c. 55), s. 104; Public Health (London) Act, 1891 (54 & 55 Vict. c. 76), s. 121 (a). For form of demand and notice, see Encyclopædia of Forms and Precedents, Vol. X., p. 475.

(g) Public Health Act, 1875 (38 & 39 Vict. c. 55), s. 104; Public Health (London) Act, 1891 (54 & 55 Vict. c. 76), s. 11 (2); see Reeve v. Sadler (1903), 67 J. P. 63; Nathan v. Rouse, [1905] 1 K. B. 527.

(h) Public Health Act, 1875 (38 & 39 Vict. c. 55), s. 104; Public Health (London) Act, 1891 (54 & 55 Vict. c. 76), s. 121 (b).

(i) See title CRIMINAL LAW AND PROCEDURE, Vol. IX., p. 329.

(k) See 2 Hawk. P. C., c. 25, s. 4; R. v. Hall, [1891] 1 Q. B. 747, where the subject is fully discussed.

(l) See title CRIMINAL LAW AND PROCEDURE, Vol. IX., p. 412.

NULLITY OF MARRIAGE.

See CONFLICT OF LAWS; HUSBAND AND WIFE.

NUNCUPATIVE WILLS.

See EXECUTORS AND ADMINISTRATORS; ROYAL FORCES; WILLS.

OATH AND AFFIRMATION.

See CONSTITUTIONAL LAW; CRIMINAL LAW AND PROCEDURE;
ELECTIONS; EVIDENCE; JURIES; LOCAL GOVERNMENT; MAGISTRATES; PARLIAMENT; PRACTICE AND PROCEDURE;
SOLICITORS.

OATH OF ALLEGIANCE.

See ALIENS; CONSTITUTIONAL LAW; PARLIAMENT.

OBSCENE BOOKS.

See CRIMINAL LAW AND PROCEDURE; NUISANCE.

OBSTRUCTING JUSTICE.

See CRIMINAL LAW AND PROCEDURE.

OFFER AND ACCEPTANCE.

See CONTRACT; LANDLORD AND TENANT; SALE OF GOODS; SALE
OF LAND.

OFFICIAL RECEIVER.

See BANKRUPTCY AND INSOLVENCY; COMPANIES; PARTNERSHIP; RECEIVERS.

OFFICIAL REFEREE.

See COURTS.

OFFICIAL SECRETS.

See CONSTITUTIONAL LAW ; CRIMINAL LAW AND PROCEDURE.

OFFICIAL SOLICITOR.

See COURTS.

OFFICIAL TRUSTEES OF CHARITABLE FUNDS.

See CHARITIES.

OLD AGE PENSIONS.

See POOR LAW.

OLD METAL DEALERS.

See CRIMINAL LAW AND PROCEDURE ; TRADE AND TRADE UNIONS.

OLD STYLE.

See TIME.

OMNIBUSES.

See STREET AND AERIAL TRAFFIC.

OPEN SPACES AND RECREATION GROUNDS.

	PAGE
PART I. PRELIMINARY - - - - -	579
SECT. 1. DEFINITIONS - - - - -	579
SECT. 2. JUS SPATIANDI - - - - -	579
SECT. 3. EXEMPTIONS - - - - -	580
SECT. 4. OFFENCES - - - - -	581
PART II. ESTABLISHMENT, MAINTENANCE, AND REGULA- TION - - - - -	582
SECT. 1. ROYAL PARKS - - - - -	582
SECT. 2. VILLAGE GREENS - - - - -	583
SECT. 3. OPEN SPACES UNDER THE OPEN SPACES ACT, 1906 -	584
SECT. 4. PUBLIC PLEASURE GROUNDS UNDER THE PUBLIC HEALTH ACTS - - - - -	587
SECT. 5. OPEN SPACES UNDER THE SETTLED ESTATES AND SETTLED LAND ACTS - - - - -	590
SECT. 6. RECREATION GROUNDS UNDER THE TOWNS IMPROVE- MENT CLAUSES ACT, 1847 - - - - -	590
SECT. 7. RECREATION GROUNDS UNDER THE RECREATION GROUNDS ACT, 1859 - - - - -	591
SECT. 8. WALKS AND PLAYGROUNDS UNDER THE PUBLIC IMPROVE- MENTS ACT, 1860 - - - - -	592
SECT. 9. THE TOWN GARDENS PROTECTION ACT, 1863 - - -	594
SECT. 10. PLACES OF PUBLIC RESORT UNDER THE NATIONAL TRUST ACT, 1907 - - - - -	596
SECT. 11. THE METROPOLIS - - - - -	598
Sub-sect. 1. General Provisions Applicable in London -	598
Sub-sect. 2. The Metropolitan Borough Councils - - -	600
Sub-sect. 3. The City Corporation - - - - -	601
SECT. 12. OTHER OPEN SPACES AND RECREATION GROUNDS -	602
PART III. MONUMENTS - - - - -	602
SECT. 1. ERECTION - - - - -	602
SECT. 2. PROTECTION AND MAINTENANCE - - - - -	602
Sub-sect. 1. Ancient Monuments Protection Acts - - -	602
Sub-sect. 2. Housing, Town Planning, etc. Act, 1909 -	605
Sub-sect. 3. In Particular Districts - - - - -	606

For Allotments	-	-	-	-	See title	ALLOTMENTS; SMALL HOLDINGS AND SMALL DWELLINGS.
Animals	-	-	-	-	"	ANIMALS; GAME.
Bathing	-	-	-	-	"	PUBLIC HEALTH AND LOCAL ADMINISTRATION.
Betting in Public Places	-	-	-	-	"	CRIMINAL LAW AND PROCEDURE; GAMING AND WAGERING.
Burial Grounds	-	-	-	-	"	BURIAL AND CREMATION; ECCLESIASTICAL LAW.
Churchyards	-	-	-	-	"	ECCLESIASTICAL LAW.
Commons	-	-	-	-	"	COMMONS AND RIGHTS OF COMMON.
Compulsory Purchase	-	-	-	-	"	COMPULSORY PURCHASE OF LAND AND COMPENSATION.
Crown Estates	-	-	-	-	"	CONSTITUTIONAL LAW.
Dogs	-	-	-	-	"	ANIMALS; GAME.
Drinking Fountains	-	-	-	-	"	PUBLIC HEALTH AND LOCAL ADMINISTRATION.
Drunkenness	-	-	-	-	"	CRIMINAL LAW AND PROCEDURE; INTOXICATING LIQUORS.
Easements	-	-	-	-	"	EASEMENTS AND PROFITS À PRENDRE.
Fairs, Sale of Intoxicating Liquor at	-	-	-	-	"	INTOXICATING LIQUORS.
Fences	-	-	-	-	"	BOUNDARIES, FENCES, AND PARTY WALLS.
Footpaths	-	-	-	-	"	HIGHWAYS, STREETS, AND BRIDGES.
Foreshore	-	-	-	-	"	WATERS AND WATERCOURSES.
Game	-	-	-	-	"	GAME.
Gifts	-	-	-	-	"	CHARITIES; GIFTS.
Graveyards	-	-	-	-	"	BURIAL AND CREMATION; ECCLESIASTICAL LAW.
Grazing Rights	-	-	-	-	"	COMMONS AND RIGHTS OF COMMON; EASEMENTS AND PROFITS À PRENDRE.
Inclosure Acts	-	-	-	-	"	COMMONS AND RIGHTS OF COMMON.
Inns of Court	-	-	-	-	"	BARRISTERS.
Larceny	-	-	-	-	"	CRIMINAL LAW AND PROCEDURE.
Land Tax	-	-	-	-	"	LAND TAX.
Local Authorities	-	-	-	-	"	LOCAL GOVERNMENT.
Lopping Trees	-	-	-	-	"	AGRICULTURE; HIGHWAYS, STREETS, AND BRIDGES; NUISANCE; TRESPASS.
Malicious Damage	-	-	-	-	"	CRIMINAL LAW AND PROCEDURE.
Manorial Rights	-	-	-	-	"	COPYHOLDS.
Markets	-	-	-	-	"	MARKETS AND FAIRS.
Military Manœuvres	-	-	-	-	"	ROYAL FORCES.
Metropolis	-	-	-	-	"	METROPOLIS.
Nuisance	-	-	-	-	"	HIGHWAYS, STREETS, AND BRIDGES; NUISANCE; PUBLIC HEALTH AND LOCAL ADMINISTRATION.
Police	-	-	-	-	"	POLICE.
Prescriptive Rights	-	-	-	-	"	EASEMENTS AND PROFITS À PRENDRE.
Public Health	-	-	-	-	"	PUBLIC HEALTH AND LOCAL ADMINISTRATION.
Racecourses	-	-	-	-	"	THEATRES AND OTHER PLACES OF ENTERTAINMENT.
Rates	-	-	-	-	"	RATES AND RATING.
Real Property	-	-	-	-	"	REAL PROPERTY AND CHATTELS REAL.
Rights of Way	-	-	-	-	"	EASEMENTS AND PROFITS À PRENDRE.

For River-banks	-	-	-	-	See title	FISHERIES; WATERS AND WATER-COURSES.
Roadside Wastes	-	-	-	-	„	HIGHWAYS, STREETS, AND BRIDGES.
School Playgrounds	-	-	-	-	„	EDUCATION.
Small Holdings	-	-	-	-	„	ALLOTMENTS; SMALL HOLDINGS AND SMALL DWELLINGS.
Streets	-	-	-	-	„	HIGHWAYS, STREETS, AND BRIDGES; STREET AND AERIAL TRAFFIC.
Summary Jurisdiction	-	-	-	-	„	MAGISTRATES.
Trespass	-	-	-	-	„	TRESPASS.
Undeveloped Land Duty	-	-	-	-	„	REVENUE.
Vagrants	-	-	-	-	„	POOR LAW.
Wild Birds' Protection	-	-	-	-	„	ANIMALS; GAME.

Part I.—Preliminary.

SECT. 1.—Definitions.

996. The term “open space,” as dealt with in this title, means an open space upon which building is restricted or prohibited. Definitions.

The term “recreation ground,” as dealt with in this title, means a recreation ground the establishment or regulation of which is provided for by law (a).

SECT. 2.—Jus Spatiandi.

997. There can be no common law right in the public or customary right in the inhabitants of a particular place to stray over Common law right.

(a) There are five kinds of open spaces and recreation grounds : (1) public recreation grounds or open spaces, over which the public have a right to go for recreation (as to allotments for recreation grounds under the Inclosure Acts, see title COMMONS AND RIGHTS OF COMMON, Vol. IV., pp. 591 et seq.); (2) private recreation grounds, over which certain persons only have similar rights; (3) commons (see title COMMONS AND RIGHTS OF COMMON, Vol. IV., pp. 441 et seq.); (4) sanitary open spaces, upon which buildings are prohibited for sanitary reasons (compare title METROPOLIS, Vol. XX., pp. 481 et seq.); (5) open spaces devoted to purposes inconsistent with building operations, such as burial grounds (see title BURIAL AND CREMATION, Vol. III., pp. 401 et seq.), highways (see title HIGHWAYS, STREETS, AND BRIDGES, Vol. XVI., pp. 1 et seq.), markets (see title MARKETS AND FAIRS, Vol. XX., pp. 1 et seq.), the foreshore (see title WATERS AND WATERCOURSES), and the like; and see pp. 601, 602, post. As to offences in connection with open spaces and recreation grounds under the Larceny Act, 1861 (24 & 25 Vict. c. 96), and the Malicious Damage Act, 1861 (24 & 25 Vict. c. 97), see title CRIMINAL LAW AND PROCEDURE, Vol. IX., pp. 637 et seq., 768 et seq., 774, 782, 791. As to betting in public gardens, see ibid., p. 551; title GAMING AND WAGERING, Vol. XV., pp. 292, 293. For offences in roads and squares under the Town Police Clauses Act, 1847 (10 & 11 Vict. c. 89), and as to the offence of injuriously affecting a public park or promenade by advertisements under the Advertisements Regulation Act, 1907 (7 Edw. 7, c. 28), s. 2 (2), see title PUBLIC HEALTH AND LOCAL ADMINISTRATION; see also title STREET AND AERIAL TRAFFIC. As to offences arising from electric generating stations, see title ELECTRIC LIGHTING AND POWER, Vol. XII., pp. 565, 566. As to destructive insects, see title AGRICULTURE, Vol. I., pp. 280, 281.

SECT. 2.
Jus Spatiaudi.

an open space or to remain on that space for such purposes as they may think proper—jus spatiaudi vel manendi (b).

The only common law right of the kind which can be claimed by the public is to pass and repass from one point to another across an open space (c), and the only customary right of the kind which can be claimed by the inhabitants of a particular place is to play lawful games upon an open space (d).

SECT. 3.—Exemptions.

Licences in mortmain.

998. Certain open spaces are exempt from the provisions of various Acts, as follows:—

(1) Local authorities having power by statute to acquire land for open spaces and recreation grounds, whether alone or jointly with another authority (e), can hold such land without licence in mortmain (f). The provision of a public open space or recreation ground is a charitable object (g).

Compulsory purchase.

(2) No part of any park, garden or pleasure ground may be compulsorily acquired under the Small Holdings and Allotments Act, 1908 (h), under the Housing of the Working Classes Acts, 1890—1909 (i), or under the Development and Road Improvement Funds Act, 1909 (k).

(3) No open space may be compulsorily acquired under the Housing, Town Planning, etc. Act, 1909 (l), or under the Development and Road Improvement Funds Act, 1909 (m), except (i.) in exchange (n) for other land approved, under the former Act (l), by the Local Government Board (o), and, under the latter Act (m), by the

(b) A.-G. v. Antrobus, [1905] 2 Ch. 188, per FARWELL, J., at pp. 198, 206; Eyre v. New Forest Highway Board (1892), 56 J. P. 517, 519; and see title TRESPASS.

(c) See title HIGHWAYS, STREETS, AND BRIDGES, Vol. XVI., pp. 49 et seq.

(d) See p. 583, post.

(e) Bodies Corporate (Joint Tenancy) Act, 1899 (62 & 63 Vict. c. 20), s. 1.

(f) See titles CHARITIES, Vol. IV., pp. 124 et seq., 132, 137 et seq., 263; COMPULSORY PURCHASE OF LAND AND COMPENSATION, Vol. VI., pp. 163 et seq.; CORPORATIONS, Vol. VIII., pp. 367 et seq.; LOCAL GOVERNMENT, Vol. XIX., pp. 267, 318, 364; METROPOLIS, Vol. XX., pp. 455 et seq. As to acquisition of suburban commons, see title COMMONS AND RIGHTS OF COMMON, Vol. IV., p. 598.

(g) See also the definition of a "parochial charity" in the Local Government Act, 1894 (56 & 57 Vict. c. 73), s. 75 (2). As to the enactments to be complied with on such acquisition or provision, see title CHARITIES, Vol. IV., pp. 124 et seq.

(h) 8 Edw. 7, c. 36, s. 41. Woodlands not wholly surrounded by or adjacent to land acquired under the Act are also exempt (ibid.). As to the other provisions of this Act, see titles ALLOTMENTS, Vol. I., pp. 331 et seq.; SMALL HOLDINGS AND SMALL DWELLINGS.

(i) Housing, Town Planning, etc. Act, 1909 (9 Edw. 7, c. 44), s. 45. See, further, title PUBLIC HEALTH AND LOCAL ADMINISTRATION.

(k) 9 Edw. 7, c. 47, s. 5 (2).

(l) 9 Edw. 7, c. 44, s. 73.

(m) 9 Edw. 7, c. 47, s. 5.

(n) Public notice must be given of the proposed exchange, and the order effecting it must provide for the transfer of all private and public rights over the lands exchanged (ibid., s. 19 (2), (3); Housing, Town Planning, etc. Act, 1909 (9 Edw. 7, c. 44), s. 73 (2), (3)).

(o) Ibid., s. 73 (1).

Board of Agriculture and Fisheries (p), or (ii.) with the express consent of Parliament, or (iii.) for the construction or improvement of roads in rural districts (q). SECT. 3.
Exemptions.

(4) The Development Commissioners (r) cannot acquire part of an open space lying on either side of a new road to be constructed by the Road Board (s).

(5) Parks, gardens and open spaces, which are open to the public as of right, and those to which the public have access, if such access is in the opinion of the Inland Revenue Commissioners of public benefit, and certain other land intended to be kept unbuilt on, are not liable to undeveloped land duty (t). Land duties.

(6) Land bonâ fide used for games or other recreation is exempt from undeveloped land duty (u) and, if held by a corporation without a view to profit, from increment value duty (v). Rates.

(7) An open space which has been irrevocably dedicated to the public for the purposes of recreation, and cannot be let or used so as to produce a substantial profit, is extra commercium, and so exempt from rating and such charges as private street works expenses (w), but an open space the dedication of which is not irrevocable, or which can be so let or used, is not extra commercium (x).

SECT. 4.—Offences.

999. The statutory offences or prohibitions relating to places of public resort, and offences relating to open spaces and recreation grounds, are dealt with elsewhere (y). Offences and prohibitions.

(p) Development and Road Improvement Funds Act, 1909 (9 Edw. 7, c. 47), s. 19 (1). An "open space" is any land laid out as a public garden or used for the purposes of public recreation, or a disused burial ground (ibid., s. 19 (4); Housing, Town Planning, etc. Act, 1909 (9 Edw. 7, c. 44), s. 73 (4)); compare p. 584, post.

(q) Ibid., s. 73 (1); Development and Road Improvement Funds Act, 1909 (9 Edw. 7, c. 47), s. 19 (1). See, further, titles HIGHWAYS, STREETS, AND BRIDGES, Vol. XVI., pp. 28, 48, 94, 106, 201; PUBLIC HEALTH AND LOCAL ADMINISTRATION. As to the application of the purchase-money for a recreation ground acquired compulsorily, see title COMMONS AND RIGHTS OF COMMON, Vol. IV., pp. 495 et seq.

(r) See titles HIGHWAYS, STREETS, AND BRIDGES, Vol. XVI., p. 94; REVENUE.

(s) Development and Road Improvement Funds Act, 1909 (9 Edw. 7, c. 47), s. 19 (1) (c). As to the Road Board, see titles HIGHWAYS, STREETS, AND BRIDGES, Vol. XVI., pp. 28, 48, 94, 106, 201; REVENUE.

(t) Finance (1909-10) Act, 1910 (10 Edw. 7, c. 8), ss. 16, 17 (3) (a); see, further, title REVENUE.

(u) Finance (1909-10) Act, 1910 (10 Edw. 7, c. 8), s. 17 (3) (d).

(v) Ibid., s. 9.

(w) Great Eastern Rail. Co. v. Hackney Board of Works (1883), 8 App. Cas. 687, per Lord WATSON, at p. 693; Lambeth Overseers v. London County Council, [1897] A. C. 625 (the Brockwell Park case); Liverpool Corporation v. West Derby Union Assessment Committee (1905), 3 L. G. R. 647; London County Council v. Wandsworth Borough Council, [1903] 1 K. B. 797, C. A.; Hampstead Corporation v. Midland Railway, [1905] 1 K. B. 538, C. A. (x) Herne Bay Urban Council v. Payne and Wood, [1907] 2 K. B. 130; Pontefract Assessment Committee v. Pontefract Park Trustees, The Same v. Hartley (1898), 78 L. T. 738, C. A.; Lincoln (Mayor) v. Holmes Common (1867), L. R. 2 Q. B. 482, C. A. See, further, titles HIGHWAYS, STREETS, AND BRIDGES, Vol. XVI., pp. 218, 219; RATES AND RATING.

(y) As to offences against public order, see title CRIMINAL LAW AND Part II.—Establishment, Maintenance, and Regulation.

SECT. 1.

Royal Parks.

Royal parks.

SECT. 1.—Royal Parks.

1000. All Royal parks, gardens and possessions of which the management for the time being is vested in the Commissioners of Works (a) are regulated by statute (b), subject to the rights of the Crown and the Commissioners and any officer or servant appointed by them (c).

They (d) are protected from injury and the public therein secured from annoyance by regulations (e), some of which are to be read with reference to rules made by the ranger of the park or by the Commissioners (f).

Rules and regulations.

1001. The rules must be approved by Parliament (g), and must also comply with the conditions of the Rules Publication Act, 1893 (h). They may contain a power to make further regulations on particular subjects, and such further regulations need not (i) be approved by Parliament, or made or published in accordance with the Rules Publication Act, 1893 (h).

PROCEDURE, Vol. IX., pp. 537 (indecentry), 551 (betting), 553, 554 (drunkenness); as to larceny, see ibid., pp. 637, 638; as to malicious damage, see ibid., pp. 774 et seq., 781 et seq.; as to offences under the Vagrancy Acts, see titles CRIMINAL LAW AND PROCEDURE, Vol. IX., p. 537; POOR LAW; as to poaching, see title GAME, Vol. XV., pp. 228 et seq.; as to diseased persons, see title PUBLIC HEALTH AND LOCAL ADMINISTRATION; as to nuisances, see titles NUISANCE, pp. 503 et seq., ante; PUBLIC HEALTH AND LOCAL ADMINISTRATION; as to dogs, see title ANIMALS, Vol. I., pp. 394 et seq.; as to wild birds protection, see ibid., pp. 405 et seq.; as to the construction of telegraph lines over public recreation grounds, see title TELEGRAPHS AND TELEPHONES; and see note (a), p. 579, ante.

(a) See title CONSTITUTIONAL LAW, Vol. VII., pp. 133, 134, 137. At the date of the Parks Regulation Act, 1872 (35 & 36 Vict. c. 15), the list of parks in the regulation of the Commissioners of Works was varied by the omission of Chelsea Garden, Treasury Garden, Kew, Richmond, and Hampton Court Roads, and by the inclusion of Kennington Park (ibid., preamble, Sched. II.). By Order in Council dated 28th March, 1907, the management of Kew Gardens was transferred to the Board of Agriculture and Fisheries. As to a recent alteration of the boundaries of St. James' Park, see The National Gallery and St. James' Park Act, 1911 (1 & 2 Geo. 5, c. 23), ss. 1—4. As to the leasing of Royal parks for military purposes, see titles CONSTITUTIONAL LAW, Vol. VII., pp. 201, 202; ROYAL FORCES.

(b) Parks Regulation Act, 1872 (35 & 36 Vict. c. 15), s. 2.

(c) Ibid., s. 13. The Act (ibid., s. 11) is not to interfere with rights of way or other rights, nor (ibid., s. 14) with the application of the provisions of the Metropolitan Streets Act, 1867 (30 & 31 Vict. c. 134). By the Metropolitan Streets Act, 1867 (30 & 31 Vict. c. 134), s. 3, all Royal parks within the Metropolitan area under the management for the time being of the Commissioners of Works are public places within that Act; see title STREET AND AERIAL TRAFFIC; and see note (a), supra.

(d) I.e., parks to which the Parks Regulation Act, 1872 (35 & 36 Vict. c. 15), applies.

(e) Ibid., s. 4, Sched. I. The regulations must be put up in the park for the information of persons using the park (ibid., s. 10).

(f) Ibid., Sched. I. (19). The matters to which the rules may relate are set out in ibid., Sched. I. (1)—(4), (7), (8), (11), (12).

(g) Ibid., s. 9. As to the proof of rules, see ibid., Sched. I. (20).

(h) 56 & 57 Vict. c. 66; see title STATUTES.

(i) Musgrave v. Kerrison (1905), 3 L. G. R. 932.

1002. A park-keeper (k) in uniform may arrest persons offending against the park regulations, where such offences are committed in the park and within the view of such keeper, provided he does not know and cannot ascertain the offender's name and address (l). A park-keeper has, in addition (m), within the park, all the powers of a police constable within the district in which the park lies (n). He must obey all lawful commands of the Commissioners (o).

SECT. 1.
Royal
Parks.
Offences.

Penalties, recoverable summarily (p), are provided for breach of the rules (q), and for assaulting a park-keeper in the execution of his duty (r).

1003. Where land situate within a prescribed (s) distance of a Royal palace or park is proposed to be acquired, or included in a scheme, under the Housing, Town Planning, etc. Act, 1909 (t), the Local Government Board (u) must, before sanctioning the scheme or acquisition, communicate with the Commissioners of Works (v) and consider their recommendations (w).

Sanction in special cases.

SECT. 2.—Village Greens.

1004. The expression "village green" (x), or, as it is sometimes called, "town green," has not been defined by Act of Parliament. The essential characteristic is that the inhabitants of the particular locality have an immemorial customary right (a) to use it for exercise and recreation, including the playing of lawful games (b). The custom must be reasonably exercised by those entitled to it (c).

Village
green.

1005. A village green may not be inclosed under the Inclosure

Vesting.

(k) As defined by the Parks Regulation Act, 1872 (35 & 36 Vict. c. 15), s. 3.

(l) Parks Regulation Act, 1872 (35 & 36 Vict. c. 15), s. 5. The penalty for giving a false name and address is a fine not exceeding £5, recoverable summarily (ibid.).

(m) Ibid., s. 12.

(n) Ibid., s. 7. As to these powers, see ibid., s. 8, and title POLICE.

(o) Parks Regulation Act, 1872 (35 & 36 Vict. c. 15), s. 7.

(p) See title MAGISTRATES, Vol. XIX., pp. 589 et seq.

(q) Parks Regulation Act, 1872 (35 & 36 Vict. c. 15), s. 4. The penalty is a fine not exceeding £5 (ibid.).

(r) Ibid., s. 6. The penalty is a fine not exceeding £20. In default of payment, the offender is liable to imprisonment (ibid.).

(s) I.e., prescribed by regulations made by the Local Government Board after consultation with the Commissioners of Works (Housing, Town Planning, etc. Act, 1909 (9 Edw. 7, c. 44), s. 74 (2)).

(t) 9 Edw. 7, c. 44.

(u) Ibid., s. 74; see, further, titles CONSTITUTIONAL LAW, Vol. VII., pp. 103, 104; PUBLIC HEALTH AND LOCAL ADMINISTRATION.

(v) See title CONSTITUTIONAL LAW, Vol. VII., pp. 133, 134.

(w) Housing, Town Planning, etc. Act, 1909 (9 Edw. 7, c. 44), s. 74.

(x) As to the origin and management of village greens, see title COMMONS AND RIGHTS OF COMMON, Vol. IV., pp. 493, 542, 589 et seq.

(a) As to custom generally, see title CUSTOM AND USAGES, Vol. X., pp. 217 et seq.

(b) Warrick v. Queen's College, Oxford (1870), L. R. 10 Eq. 105, 129 (use of green "as a place of pastime by the inhabitants of the parish"); Mounsey v. Ismay (1863), 1 H. & C. 729 (use of piece of land by freemen and citizens of a town for horse races).

(c) Fitch v. Fitch (1797), 2 Esp. 543 (to spoil cut hay in enjoyment of the right is unreasonable).

SECT. 2.

Village Greens.

Act, 1845 (d), but may be vested in the churchwardens and overseers, or, in a rural district, in the parish council (if any), or (if none) the chairman of the parish meeting and the overseers, in trust for use as a recreation ground (e).

Offences.

1006. Persons causing any injury to or nuisance upon or interruption to the use of village greens are liable to penalties under the Inclosure Act, 1857 (f), and the Commons Act, 1876 (g).

Exemptions.

1007. A village green is a common under Part I. of the Commons Act, 1899 (h), and has the same right of partial exemption from compulsory acquisition under housing and town planning schemes and development or road improvement schemes as commons and open spaces (i).

Local
authorities.

1008. A parish council has the same powers over a village green, if it is under the control of the council, as an urban district council has under the Public Health Acts (j) over open spaces and public walks (k), and the Corporation of the City of London has certain powers of acquiring, preserving, and managing village greens (l).

SECT. 3.—Open Spaces under the Open Spaces Act, 1906.

Definition.

1009. An open space under the Open Spaces Act, 1906 (m), is any land, inclosed or not, either not built on or of which not more than one-twentieth part is built on, and the whole or remainder of which is laid out as a garden, or is used for purposes of recreation, or lies waste and unoccupied (n).

Application.

The Open Spaces Act, 1906 (m), has no application (o) to the Royal parks (p) or to land belonging to the Crown or Duchy of Lancaster (q), or to any garden or ornamental ground or land managed by the Commissioners of Works or the Commissioners under the Crown Estate Paving Act, 1851 (r), or to commons under (d) 8 & 9 Vict. c. 118.

(e) Ibid., ss. 15, 73; Inclosure Act, 1852 (15 & 16 Vict. c. 79), s. 14; see also Local Government Act, 1894 (56 & 57 Vict. c. 73), ss. 5(2)(c), 19(3).

(f) 20 & 21 Vict. c. 31, s. 12.

(g) 39 & 40 Vict. c. 56, s. 29.

(h) 62 & 63 Vict. c. 30, s. 15; see title COMMONS AND RIGHTS OF COMMON, Vol. IV., pp. 611 et seq.

(i) Housing, Town Planning, etc. Act, 1909 (9 Edw. 7, c. 44), s. 73(4); Development and Road Improvement Funds Act, 1909 (9 Edw. 7, c. 47), s. 19(4); see pp. 580, 581, ante.

(j) Public Health Act, 1875 (38 & 39 Vict. c. 55), ss. 164, 183—186; Public Health Acts Amendment Act, 1890 (53 & 54 Vict. c. 59), s. 44; see pp. 586 et seq., post.

(k) Local Government Act, 1894 (56 & 57 Vict. c. 73), s. 8.

(l) See p. 601, post.

(m) 6 Edw. 7, c. 25.

(n) Ibid., s. 20; compare note (p), p. 581, ante.

(o) Open Spaces Act, 1906 (6 Edw. 7, c. 25), s. 19.

(p) See pp. 582, 583, ante.

(q) As to which see title CONSTITUTIONAL LAW, Vol. VII., pp. 217 et seq., 273 et seq.

(r) 14 & 15 Vict. c. 95.

the Metropolitan Commons Acts (s), or to land belonging to the Inner Temple or Middle Temple (t).

1010. The trustees or persons charged, by private or local Act of Parliament, with the management of an open space as a garden or open space may (a), for or without consideration, with the consent of certain adjoining owners or occupiers (b), and, in certain cases, of the freeholder (c), signified by special resolution (d), convey (e) or lease (f) the same to the local authority (g), or agree with such authority for the care and management thereof (h), for the enjoyment of the same by the public.

The trustees may admit persons not being adjoining owners or occupiers (i), and have the same powers of making bye-laws as to such admission as the committee of the inhabitants of a square (k).

1011. Such a conveyance, grant, or agreement, if in accordance with the statutory provisions (l), is a good execution of the powers and duties of the trustees, and, if a conveyance of their entire interest or transfer of the entire care and management, is a complete discharge of their trusts, powers, and duties in relation thereto (m).

1012. Any consideration received for the grant or transfer is to be held upon the same trusts as the open space, or to be applied

SECT. 3.

Open Spaces
under the
Open Spaces
Act, 1906.

Conveyance
by statutory trustees.

Effect of conveyance.]

Consideration.

(s) See title COMMONS AND RIGHTS OF COMMON, Vol. IV., pp. 606 et seq.

(t) See title BARRISTERS, Vol. II., pp. 357 et seq.

(a) Open Spaces Act, 1906 (6 Edw. 7, c. 25), s. 2 (1).

(b) An "owner" in relation to an open space (not being a burial ground) is any person in whom the open space is vested for an estate in possession during his life or for any larger estate; and, in relation to a house, includes any person entitled to any term of years in the house. An "occupier" in relation to a house is the person rated to the relief of the poor in respect of the house (ibid., s. 20); see also p. 586, post. For the definitions of "local authorities," "open space," "building," "burial ground," "disused burial ground," and "owner" (in relation to a burial ground), see title BURIAL AND CREMATION, Vol. III., pp. 533, 534, notes (d), (e). As to the effect of the repeal referred to in ibid., note (d), see the Open Spaces Act, 1906 (6 Edw. 7, c. 25), s. 23 (b).

(c) Ibid., s. 2 (2).

(d) As to special resolutions, see ibid., s. 8 (1). As to the meetings of trustees and owners and occupiers, see ibid., s. 8 (2), (5).

(e) Ibid., s. 2 (1) (a).

(f) Open Spaces Act, 1906 (6 Edw. 7, c. 25), s. 2 (1) (b).

(g) As to local authorities in London, see pp. 598 et seq., post.

(h) Open Spaces Act, 1906 (6 Edw. 7, c. 25), s. 2 (1) (c). The powers of local authorities to accept such grants or leases, and to undertake such management, and make bye-laws therefor, and their duties in respect of maintenance, and liability to pay compensation, are the same as in the case of a burial ground; see ibid., ss. 9, 10, 12, 13, 15, 16, and title BURIAL AND CREMATION, Vol. III., pp. 542 et seq. County councils have power to acquire lands for, and to contribute to the maintenance of, public walks or pleasure grounds (Open Spaces Act, 1906 (6 Edw. 7, c. 25), s. 14).

(i) Ibid., s. 2 (1) (d).

(k) Ibid., s. 15 (3), applying the Town Gardens Protection Act, 1863 (26 & 27 Vict. c. 13), s. 4; see p. 594, post. For a series of forms of notices, resolutions, agreements and conveyances prepared for use under the Acts in force prior to the Open Spaces Act, 1906 (6 Edw. 7, c. 25), see Encyclopædia of Forms and Precedents, Vol. IX., pp. 72 et seq.

(l) Open Spaces Act, 1906 (6 Edw. 7, c. 25), s. 2 (3).

(m) Ibid., s. 2 (4).

SECT. 3.

Open Spaces
under the
Open Spaces
Act, 1906.Non-statutory trustees.

to the objects to which any rates previously imposed in respect of the open space were applied (n).

1013. Land held by trustees (not being trustees under a local or private Act of Parliament) upon trusts for public recreation may be transferred to a local authority as a free gift, absolutely or for a term (o). Such land may be held by the local authority (subject to an obligation to use it for public recreation) as an open space (p), and must be held by it on the trusts subject to which the trustees held the same, or on such other agreed trusts as may be approved by the Charity Commissioners (q).

Corporations.

1014. Corporations other than municipal corporations (r) may, subject to any consents made necessary by statute or otherwise, convey open spaces belonging to them to a local authority upon agreed terms (s).

Private
owners.

1015. The owner of an open space, including a person having a term of years or other limited interest therein, subject to rights of user for exercise and recreation by adjoining owners or occupiers, has, subject to their consent, powers of conveying and leasing and entering into agreements for the care and management of the open space similar to those of trustees under an Act of Parliament (t).

Expenses of local authorities.

1016. Expenses incurred by local authorities under the foregoing provisions are to be defrayed as follows:—(1) By county councils out of the county fund (a), or out of money borrowed under the Local Government Act, 1888 (b); (2) by metropolitan borough councils as expenses of the council (c), or out of money borrowed as for the purposes of the Metropolis Management Acts, 1855—1893 (d); (3) by municipal boroughs or urban district councils as (n) Open Spaces Act, 1906 (6 Edw. 7, c. 25), s. 2 (5).

(o) Ibid., s. 3 (1). A special resolution is required (ibid.; and see ibid., s. 8 (1)).

(p) Ibid., s. 3 (2).

(q) Ibid., s. 3 (1).

(r) Ibid., s. 7 (1). The corporation, if itself a local authority, has power to appropriate its land as an open space to the enjoyment of the public (ibid., s. 7 (2)). The above-mentioned power would enable a local authority to appropriate land, which it had acquired for some other purpose and no longer needed for that purpose, as an open space instead of selling it as superfluous land (but see p. 589, post). As to the powers of trustees in whom an open space is vested for charitable purposes, see title COUNTY COURTS, Vol. VIII., p. 672.

(s) Open Spaces Act, 1906 (6 Edw. 7, c. 25), s. 7. A parish council is a local authority for this purpose (ibid., s. 7 (3)).

(t) Ibid., s. 5 (1), (2); see p. 585, ante. Owners of an open space having rights of user of the same for recreation may convey to the local authority like rights for the public (Open Spaces Act, 1906 (6 Edw. 7, c. 25), s. 5 (3)). As to the conveyance of a disused burial ground, see title BURIAL AND CREMATION, Vol. III., p. 533.

(a) Open Spaces Act, 1906 (6 Edw. 7, c. 25), s. 17 (a); see title LOCAL GOVERNMENT, Vol. XIX., p. 358.

(b) 51 & 52 Vict. c. 41; Open Spaces Act, 1906 (6 Edw. 7, c. 25), s. 18; see title LOCAL GOVERNMENT, Vol. XIX., p. 361.

(c) Open Spaces Act, 1906 (6 Edw. 7, c. 25), s. 17 (b); see title METROPOLIS, Vol. XX., p. 451.

(d) Open Spaces Act, 1906 (6 Edw. 7, c. 25), s. 18. As to these Acts, see title METROPOLIS, Vol. XX., pp. 462, note (i), 463 et seq.

general expenses under, or out of money borrowed for the purposes of, the Public Health Acts (e); (4) by rural district councils as special expenses under, or out of money borrowed for the purposes of, the Public Health Acts (f); (5) by parish councils, subject and according to, or out of money borrowed for the purposes of, the Local Government Act, 1894 (g).

A county council may purchase or hire, and may maintain, improve, or support and contribute to the support of public walks or pleasure grounds (h).

SECT. 4.—Public Pleasure Grounds under the Public Health Acts.

1017. The local authorities empowered to provide public walks or pleasure grounds under the Public Health Act, 1875 (i), are primarily borough councils and other urban district councils (k); but rural district councils (l) may be invested with urban powers for that purpose (m). The expression "urban authority," therefore, in this section includes rural authorities so empowered.

SECT. 3.
Open Spaces
under the
Open Spaces
Act, 1906.

Authorities having power to act.

1018. Any urban authority may purchase or take on lease (n), and may maintain (o), improve (p), or support or contribute (q) to the

Powers of
authorities.

(e) Open Spaces Act, 1906 (6 Edw. 7, c. 25), ss. 17 (e), 18. As to the Public Health Acts, see title LOCAL GOVERNMENT, Vol. XIX., p. 282, note (o); and see ibid., pp. 280—282, 317, 319.

(f) Open Spaces Act, 1906 (6 Edw. 7, c. 25), ss. 17 (d), 18. As to the Public Health Acts, see title LOCAL GOVERNMENT, Vol. XIX., p. 282, note (o); and see ibid., pp. 335, 337.

(g) 56 & 57 Vict. c. 73; Open Spaces Act, 1906 (6 Edw. 7, c. 25), ss. 17 (e), 18; see title LOCAL GOVERNMENT, Vol. XIX., pp. 242, 244.

(h) Open Spaces Act, 1906 (6 Edw. 7, c. 25), s. 14.

(i) 38 & 39 Vict. c. 55. This does not include the local authorities in the Metropolis (Public Health Act, 1875 (38 & 39 Vict. c. 55), ss. 2, 4). As to the area excluded under the expression "the metropolis," see title METROPOLIS, Vol. XX., p. 393, note (h). As to public recreation grounds in London, see pp. 598 et seq., post.

(k) See title LOCAL GOVERNMENT, Vol. XIX., pp. 262, 293, 295, note (l).

(l) See title LOCAL GOVERNMENT, Vol. XIX., p. 329. In practice, however, rural district councils seldom act upon these provisions, recreation grounds in rural districts being nearly always the village greens, which are managed by the parish councils (see pp. 583, 584, ante).

(m) Public Health Act, 1875 (38 & 39 Vict. c. 55), s. 276; Local Government Act, 1894 (56 & 57 Vict. c. 73), s. 25; see title LOCAL GOVERNMENT, Vol. XIX., pp. 249, 332. A parish council has in respect of open spaces and public walks the same powers as an urban authority in respect of recreation grounds and public walks under the Public Health Act, 1875 (38 & 39 Vict. c. 55), s. 164, and the Public Health Acts Amendment Act, 1890 (53 & 54 Vict. c. 59), s. 44 (Local Government Act, 1894 (56 & 57 Vict. c. 73), s. 8 (1) (d)); see infra.

(n) For suitable forms of conveyances and leases, see Encyclopædia of Forms and Precedents, Vol. IX., pp. 65, 67.

(o) Where the Public Health Acts Amendment Act, 1890 (53 & 54 Vict. c. 59), Part III., has been adopted (see title LOCAL GOVERNMENT, Vol. XIX., pp. 385, 386), the authority may itself provide, or license any person to provide, pleasure boats for hire on any water in a park or pleasure ground provided by it, and make bye-laws for their regulation (Public Health Acts Amendment Act, 1890 (53 & 54 Vict. c. 59), s. 44 (2)); and where the Public Health Acts Amendment Act, 1907, Part VI. (7 Edw. 7, c. 53), ss. 76, 77, is in force, the authority has further powers in relation to games

(p), (q). For notes (p) and (q), see next page.

SECT. 4.
Public
Pleasure Grounds
under the
Public
Health Acts.

Temporary adaptation of land.

support of public walks or pleasure grounds (r); and it may make bye-laws for the regulation of such grounds and provide for the removal of persons infringing the bye-laws (s). The authority may not use a public pleasure ground provided by it, or permit it to be used for any purpose inconsistent with public recreation (t), subject to certain statutory exceptions (a).

1019. An urban authority may temporarily adapt as a public and recreations, bands of music, chairs and seats, reading and refreshment rooms, and appointment of officers. As to licensing of pleasure boats by local authorities generally under the Public Health Act, 1875 (38 & 39 Vict. c. 55), s. 172, see title PUBLIC HEALTH AND LOCAL ADMINISTRATION.

(p) A.-G. v. Sunderland Corporation (1876), 2 Ch. D. 634, C. A., per MELLISH, L.J., at p. 642; and see also A.-G. v. Leeds Corporation (1880), 24 Sol. Jo. 539, per JESSEL, M.R.; A.-G. v. Bradford Corporation (1911), 75 J.P. 553. See also as to improvements authorised where the Public Health Acts Amendment Act, 1907 (7 Edw. 7, c. 53), is in force, p. 589, post.

(g) Where the Public Health Acts Amendment Act, 1890 (53 & 54 Vict. c. 59), has been adopted the powers of contribution are somewhat wider (ibid., s. 45); as to the power of joint action between local authorities and the National Trust, see also pp. 596 et seq., post.

(r) Public Health Act, 1875 (38 & 39 Vict. c. 55), s. 164. If necessary the ground may be acquired compulsorily (ibid., s. 176); see title COMPULSORY PURCHASE OF LAND AND COMPENSATION, Vol. VI., pp. 1 et seq.

(s) Public Health Act, 1875 (38 & 39 Vict. c. 55), s. 164. As to the powers of local authorities relating to bye-laws and their confirmation by the Local Government Board, and as to bye-laws relating to public places generally, see title PUBLIC HEALTH AND LOCAL ADMINISTRATION. As to the validity of bye-laws generally, see Kruse v. Johnson, [1898] 2 Q. B. 91. As to the reasonableness of bye-laws relating to open spaces, recreation grounds and similar places, see also Torquay Local Board v. Bridle (1882), 47 J. P. 183 (fowls); Harper v. Mitchell (1879), 44 J. P. 378 (bird-catching); Nash v. Manning (1894), 58 J. P. 718 (standing vehicles); Gray v. Sylvester (1897), 46 W. R. 63; 61 J. P. 807; Parker v. Bournemouth Corporation (1902), 66 J. P. 440; Williams v. Weston-super-Mare Urban District Council (1907), 72 J. P. 54; Moorman v. Tordoff (1908), 72 J. P. 142 (hawkers); Parker v. Clegg (1903), 2 L. G. R. 608; Pelham v. Littlehampton Urban District Council (1898), 63 J. P. 88 (bathing machines); Southend-on-Sea Corporation v. Davis (1900), 16 T. L. R. 167 (street music); De Morgan v. Metropolitan Board of Works (1880), 5 Q. B. D. 155 (public speaking); Kitson v. Ashe, [1899] 1 Q. B. 425 (street betting); Nash v. Finlay (1901), 85 L. T. 682; Slee v. Meadows (1911), 75 J. P. 246 (Salvation Army services); Mitcham Common Conservators v. Cox, Same v. Cole, [1911] 2 K. B. 854 (golf). For a set of model bye-laws, see Encyclopædia of Forms and Precedents, Vol. IX., p. 99.

(t) See A.-G. v. Southampton Corporation (1859), 1 Giff. 363 (cattle fair not allowed; see, however, the Public Health Acts Amendment Act, 1890 (53 & 54 Vict. c. 59), s. 44); A.-G. v. Sunderland Corporation (1876), 2 Ch. D. 634, C. A. (erection of town hall and school of art not allowed: a free library, museum and conservatory "bonâ fide intended for the use of persons frequenting its grounds" (ibid., per JAMES, L.J., at p. 642) allowable); A.-G. v. Bray Township Commissioners (1880), 5 L. R. Ir. 254, C. A. (lease of land for the erection of a pavilion and bathing place being part of land acquired "as a public place of recreation and exercise on foot" allowed). See also A.-G. v. Hanwell Urban Council, [1900] 2 Ch. 377, C. A., per COLLINS, L.J., at pp. 386, 387; A.-G. v. Teddington Urban Council, [1898] 1 Ch. 66; A.-G. v. Bradford Corporation (1911), 75 J. P. 553 (street widening).

(a) See the Public Health Acts Amendment Act, 1890 (53 & 54 Vict. c. 59), s. 44 (1); and p. 589, post.

pleasure ground part of a piece of land bought, but not immediately required, for another purpose, instead of selling it as superfluous land (b); such land must not permanently be diverted from the purpose for which it was originally acquired (c), and the acquirement of rights over it inconsistent with such purpose must be prevented (d).

1020. The authority has no general power of charging for admission to (e) or of closing any public walk or pleasure ground (f); but limited powers of closing and charging for admission may be obtained (g). If the ground is an inclosed space which can only be entered by gates, the exclusion of the public at night may be provided for by bye-laws.

Where powers under the Public Health Acts Amendment Act, 1890 (h), have been adopted (i), the authority may on any days, not exceeding twelve in any year nor more than four in succession, and not being Sundays or public holidays, allow a public park or pleasure ground provided by it, or part thereof, to be used by a public charity or institution, or use it, or allow it to be used, for any public purpose, and may charge, or allow a charge to be made, for admission on such days (k).

1021. Where the Public Health Acts Amendment Act, 1907 (l), Part VI., s. 76, is in force, the authority may, subject to any restrictions imposed by the Local Government Board, provide in any public park or pleasure ground established or managed by it, apparatus for games and recreation, chairs or seats, reading rooms or other buildings, and conveniences and refreshment rooms, and may, subject to certain restrictions, charge for the use thereof (m). The authority may also provide, or contribute to providing, a band (n), and may inclose part of the park for the convenience of persons listening thereto (o), and in case of frost may inclose part of the

SECT. 4.
Public
Pleasur Grounds
under the
Public
Health Acts.

Powers of closing and charging for admission.

Power of providing apparatus etc.

(b) A.-G. v. Teddington Urban Council, [1898] 1 Ch. 66. As to superfluous lands, see titles COMPULSORY PURCHASE OF LAND AND COMPENSATION, Vol. VI., pp. 26 et seq.; METROPOLIS, Vol. XX., p. 460; and as to its retention by sanction of the Local Government Board, see title PUBLIC HEALTH AND LOCAL ADMINISTRATION.

(c) A.-G. v. Teddington Urban Council, supra; A.-G. v. Hanwell Urban Council, [1900] 2 Ch. 377, C. A.

(d) A.-G. v. Teddington Urban Council, supra, per ROMER, J., at p. 70; see now, however, the Public Health Acts Amendment Act, 1907 (7 Edw. 7, c. 53), s. 76; title PUBLIC HEALTH AND LOCAL ADMINISTRATION.

(e) A.-G. v. Leeds Corporation (1880), 24 Sol. Jo. 539, where it was held that such a charge could only be justified under a local Act.

(f) "Even for a single day" (A.-G. v. Loughborough Local Board (1881), Times, 31st May, per HALL, V.-C.).

(g) See the Public Health Acts Amendment Acts, 1890 (53 & 54 Vict. c. 59), s. 44 (1), and 1907 (7 Edw. 7, c. 53), s. 76, infra.

(h) 53 & 54 Vict. c. 59.

(i) See title LOCAL GOVERNMENT, Vol. XIX., pp. 385, 386.

(k) Public Health Acts Amendment Act, 1890 (53 & 54 Vict. c. 59), s. 44 (1); see also, as to ibid., ss. 44 (2), 45, pp. 587, 588, ante.

(l) 7 Edw. 7, c. 53.

(m) Ibid., s. 76 (1) (c), (f), (g), (h), (i). They may also, subject to certain conditions, let such things when provided, or let the rights of providing them (ibid.).

(n) Ibid., s. 76 (1) (d).

(o) Ibid., s. 76 (1) (e).

SECT. 4.
Public
Pleasure Grounds
under the
Public Health Acts.

park to protect the ice (p), and may charge for admission to such inclosures (q); or may set apart part of the park for cricket, football, or other games (r). Such powers, however, must not be exercised in contravention of any condition under which the park is held (a).

Provision is made for meeting the expenses incurred under these provisions (b) and for the due observance of regulations made thereunder (c).

Character of
open spaces.

1022. Where the Public Health Acts Amendment Act, 1907 (d), Part VII., s. 81, is in force, a place of public resort or recreation ground (e) is to be deemed "an open and public place" under the Vagrancy Acts (f), and "a street" under the Town Police Clauses Act, 1847 (g).

SECT. 5.—Open Spaces under the Settled Estates and Settled Land Acts.

Settled estates.

1023. Any part of a settled estate may be laid out for open spaces, either to be dedicated to the public or not, subject to certain restrictions as to the meeting of the expenses and maintenance of the open spaces (h).

Settled land.

1024. On or in connection with a sale or grant for building purposes, a building lease, or of settled land, the tenant for life may cause or require any parts to be appropriated and laid out for such spaces, with fencing, paving, or other necessary or proper works for the use of the public or of individuals (i).

SECT. 6.—Recreation Grounds under the Towns Improvement Clauses Act, 1847.

Powers of authority.

1025. Where the necessary provisions of the Towns Improvement Clauses Act, 1847 (k), are in force (l), the local authority (m) may (p) Public Health Acts Amendment Act, 1907 (7 Edw. 7, c. 53), s. 76 (1) (a).

(q) Ibid., s. 76 (1) (a), (e).

(r) Ibid., s. 76 (1) (b).

(a) Ibid., s. 76 (4).

(b) Ibid., s. 76 (2), (3).

(c) Ibid., s. 77.

(d) 7 Edw. 7, c. 53.

(e) Ibid., s. 81.

(f) See titles CRIMINAL LAW AND PROCEDURE, Vol. IX., p. 537; POOR LAW.

(g) 10 & 11 Vict. c. 89, s. 29, and ibid., s. 28, so far as it relates to ferocious dogs, furious riding and driving, offences against public order, discharge of firearms, bonfires, and refuse in streets; see titles PUBLIC HEALTH AND LOCAL ADMINISTRATION; STREET AND AERIAL TRAFFIC.

(h) Settled Estates Act, 1877 (40 & 41 Vict. c. 18), ss. 20—22. As to this and the following power, see title SETTLEMENTS.

(i) Settled Land Act, 1882 (45 & 46 Vict. c. 38), s. 16. As to golf courses, see Re De la Warr's (Lord) Settled Estates (1911), 27 T. L. R. 534. As to the expenses of such appropriation, see title LAND IMPROVEMENT, Vol. XVIII., p. 285; and see ibid., p. 283, note (f), as to the provision of open spaces as "improvements" under the Settled Land Act, 1882 (45 & 46 Vict. c. 38), s. 25 (vii.).

(k) 10 & 11 Vict. c. 34.

(l) See title LOCAL GOVERNMENT, Vol. XIX., pp. 292, 328.

(m) See ibid., and title PUBLIC HEALTH AND LOCAL ADMINISTRATION.

by a special order (n) provide places to be used as pleasure grounds or places of public resort or recreation (o). Subject to the ground being in a situation approved by the inspector of nuisances (p), it may be either within the district or at a reasonable distance therefrom, not exceeding three miles from the centre of the principal market-place (if any), or from the principal office of the council (o).

SECT. 6.
Recreation Grounds
under the Towns Improvement
Clauses
Act, 1847.

SECT. 7.—Recreation Grounds under the Recreation Grounds Act, 1859.

1026. Any lands may be conveyed to trustees by a donor or grantor for any estate of which the latter would, independently of the Recreation Grounds Act, 1859 (q), have power to dispose, and subject to any reservation, restrictions, and conditions by him, to be held as open public recreation grounds or playgrounds (r).

Conveyances.

The grant or conveyance of such lands does not require enrolment (s), it need not be by indenture (t), and it is not invalidated by the death of the donor or grantor within twelve calendar months after the making of the grant (u).

1027. The grant or conveyance of land belonging to a municipal corporation must be made by the body corporate, and the consent of the Treasury is required (v).

Grantors.

The grant or conveyance of parish land must be made by the trustees or feoffees (if any) in pursuance of a special resolution (w) of the parish council or parish meeting (x); if there are no trustees or feoffees, it is to be made by the parish council or parish meeting; in either case the approval of the Local Government Board (y) is required (z).

(n) As to the procedure of incorporation by special Act, see title PUBLIC HEALTH AND LOCAL ADMINISTRATION.

(o) Towns Improvement Clauses Act, 1847 (10 & 11 Vict. c. 34), s. 135. Grounds so provided may be improved (ibid.), and, while they belong to the local authority, are exempt from rates made under that Act or the special Acts (ibid., s. 168).

(p) See title PUBLIC HEALTH AND LOCAL ADMINISTRATION.

(q) 22 Vict. c. 27.

(r) Ibid., s. 1.

(s) It is not clear that this provision applies to such conveyances made under other Acts; see pp. 585, 590, ante.

(t) A statutory form is provided (Recreation Grounds Act, 1859 (22 Vict. c. 27), s. 2. For a fuller form, see Encyclopædia of Forms and Precedents, Vol. IX., p. 60.

(u) Recreation Grounds Act, 1859 (22 Vict. c. 27), s. 2. This provision exempts such conveyances from the provisions of the Mortmain Acts, as to which see p. 580, ante, and title CHARITIES, Vol. IV., pp. 124 et seq.

(v) Recreation Grounds Act, 1859 (22 Vict. c. 27), s. 3.

(w) The resolution is to be "a resolution for that purpose" and must be "passed in meeting assembled for the purpose" (ibid., s. 4). As to such meetings, see title LOCAL GOVERNMENT, Vol. XIX., pp. 244, 254 et seq.

(x) As successors of the churchwardens and overseers and vestry; see Local Government Act, 1894 (56 & 57 Vict. c. 73), ss. 5, 6, 8, 19 (4), (10), and title LOCAL GOVERNMENT, Vol. XIX., pp. 246, 254.

(y) As successors of the Poor Law Board; see Local Government Board Act, 1871 (34 & 35 Vict. c. 70), and title POOR LAW.

(z) Recreation Grounds Act, 1859 (22 Vict. c. 27), s. 4.

SECT. 7.

Recreation Grounds
under the Recreation
Grounds
Act, 1859.

Management.

For the above-mentioned purposes, the lord of any manor or the churchwardens of any parish, or the overseers of the poor of any parish or township, or all or any of such persons to whom lands have been conveyed as above mentioned, are a body corporate (a).

1028. The management and direction of such grounds remain in such persons as may be named in the deed of conveyance thereof (b). If not named, or if there is a failure of such managers and directors, the Charity Commissioners may settle a scheme for the appointment of persons to act as managers and directors (b).

Bye-laws.

1029. The managers and directors may make and enforce bye-laws, orders, and regulations for the management, preservation, disposition and care of the grounds, and for the government of all persons using or frequenting the same (c).

Such bye-laws, orders, and regulations must be in accordance with the conditions of the grant, and they must be approved by the Charity Commissioners, and, if they in any manner restrict the public use or enjoyment of the grounds, they are not valid unless sanctioned with such approbation (d).

Bequests.

1030. Any person may bequeath any personal property, not exceeding £1,000, for the purpose of defraying the expenses of purchasing, preparing, maintaining, and preserving such grounds for the above-mentioned purposes, and of ornamenting such grounds (e).

SECT. 8.—Walks and Playgrounds under the Public Improvements Act, 1860.

Adoption.

1031. The Public Improvements Act, 1860 (f), is now of practical importance only in rural districts (g). The Act (g) apparently is of no force until adopted (h), but it may only be adopted in parishes

(a) Recreation Grounds Act, 1859 (22 Vict. c. 27), s. 5.

(b) Ibid.

(c) Ibid., s. 6. The Act does not say how such bye-laws etc. are to be "enforced," and it is doubtful whether they could be enforced by a penalty, at all events by one recoverable summarily: they can, however, be enforced by indictment (R. v. Hambly (1879), 43 J. P. 495). For a form of bye-laws, see Encyclopædia of Forms and Precedents, Vol. IX., p. 107.

(d) Recreation Grounds Act, 1859 (22 Vict. c. 27), s. 6. It would appear that if the bye-laws etc. do not contain any such restriction, the requirement as to the approbation of the Charity Commissioners is merely directory.

(e) Recreation Grounds Act, 1859 (22 Vict. c. 27), s. 7.

(f) 23 & 24 Vict. c. 30.

(g) It can also be adopted in boroughs (ibid., s. 2) and non-municipal urban districts (see note (i), p. 593, post), but those bodies have more convenient powers under other statutes (see pp. 586 et seq., ante). But many of the powers it confers can only be exercised in rural districts by virtue of its provisions (e.g., those as to seats and shelters from rain).

(h) Public Improvements Act, 1860 (23 & 24 Vict. c. 30), s. 2. Ibid., s. 1, is in terms absolute, but from the language of the remaining sections it appears that the Act is adoptive. Moreover, it is one of the series of Acts called "the adoptive Acts" (see Local Government Act, 1894 (56 & 57 Vict. c. 73), s. 7 (1)). The method of adoption is the same as in the case of the having a population of five hundred or upwards, according to the last census for the time being (i).

1032. Where the Act is adopted, the provisions of the Baths and Washhouses Act, 1846 (k), concerning the following matters, take effect:—

(1) The authority by which and the manner in which the Act is to be carried into execution ;

(2) The mode of providing the expenses of carrying the Act into execution (excluding the provisions for borrowing money for such expenses) ;

(3) The appointment (in the case of a parish) of commissioners, their tenure of office and procedure, and the audit of their accounts ;

(4) The powers of the councils and commissioners for the purposes of the Act (except the power of borrowing money) (l).

1033. The authority for carrying the Act into execution may purchase or lease lands, and accept gifts and grants of land, for any public walk, exercise or play ground, and may levy rates for maintaining the same, and for removing any nuisances or obstruction to the free use and enjoyment thereof, and for improving any open walk or footpath, or placing convenient seats or shelters from rain, and for other purposes of a similar nature (m). Every such rate is to be made by the ratepayers of the parish in meeting assembled (n) ; it is to be a separate rate and called the “ Parish Improvement Rate ” (o) ; it must be agreed to by a majority of at least two-thirds of the ratepayers assembled at the meeting (p) ; and it may not exceed 6*d.* in the pound (q). Before any such rate is imposed, a sum in amount not less than one-half of the estimated cost of the proposed improvement must have been raised, given, or collected by private subscription or donation (r). Corporate bodies have the right to attend all meetings called for the purpose of imposing such rates, and may vote thereat by some person to be deputed by them for that purpose under their corporate seal (s).

SECT. 8.
Walks and Playgrounds
under the Public
Improvements Act, 1860.
—
Effect.

Powers of
authority.

Baths and Washhouses Act, 1846 (9 & 10 Vict. c. 74) (Public Improvements Act, 1860 (23 & 24 Vict. c. 30), s. 2) ; see titles LOCAL GOVERNMENT, Vol. XIX., p. 257 ; PUBLIC HEALTH AND LOCAL ADMINISTRATION.

(i) Public Improvements Act, 1860 (23 & 24 Vict. c. 30), s. 2. Ibid., s. 1, setting out the powers of parishes under the Act, refers to parishes with a population “ which . . . exceeds five hundred persons,” but probably, on a question whether or not the Act could be adopted in a parish with a population of exactly five hundred, such a parish would be held to be included, and that the difference between the limitation in ibid., s. 1, and that in ibid., s. 2, was merely a draughtsman’s error (see, as to such errors in statutes, R. v. Marsham, Ex parte Chamberlain, [1907] 2 K. B. 638 ; and title STATUTES).

(k) 9 & 10 Vict. c. 74.

(l) Public Improvements Act, 1860 (23 & 24 Vict. c. 30), s. 3. As to these powers, see title PUBLIC HEALTH AND LOCAL ADMINISTRATION.

(m) Public Improvements Act, 1860 (23 & 24 Vict. c. 30), s. 1.

(n) See title LOCAL GOVERNMENT, Vol. XIX., p. 257.

(o) Public Improvements Act, 1860 (23 & 24 Vict. c. 30), ss. 1, 4.

(p) Ibid., s. 4 ; Local Government Act, 1894 (56 & 57 Vict. c. 73), s. 89, Sched. II.

(q) Public Improvements Act, 1860 (23 & 24 Vict. c. 30), ss. 1, 7.

(r) Ibid., s. 6.

(s) Ibid., s. 5.

SECT. 9.

The Town
Gardens
Protection Act, 1863.Application of Act.

Bye-laws.

Authorities
having power
to act.SECT. 9.—The Town Gardens Protection Act, 1863.

1034. The Town Gardens Protection Act, 1863 (a), applies to any inclosed garden or ornamental ground in a city or borough set apart, otherwise than by the revocable permission of the owner (b), in any public square, crescent, circus, street, or other public place for the use and enjoyment of the inhabitants thereof (c). There must be a legal right in the inhabitants or some of them to such use and enjoyment, a de facto use and enjoyment not being sufficient (d).

1035. A committee of inhabitants appointed to manage such a garden may make, revoke, and alter bye-laws for the management and preservation thereof (e).

Any inhabitant, or person admitted to the ground by any inhabitant, offending against any such bye-law is liable to a penalty (f).

1036. The authorities for the protection of such grounds (herein after called the corporate authority) are, in the City of London, the Common Council of the City; in the County of London outside the City, the London County Council; and elsewhere the municipal corporation of the city or borough (g).

The authorities in whom such gardens or grounds may, in certain circumstances, be vested, and the authorities required to raise the money necessary for defraying certain expenses incurred by garden committees, are, in the County of London, outside the City, the metropolitan borough councils, and elsewhere the corporate authority (h). If part of the garden or ground is situate in one city

(a) 26 & 27 Vict. c. 13.

(b) As to the meaning of these words, see Tulk v. Metropolitan Board of Works (1868), L. R. 3 Q. B. 94, per COCKBURN, C.J., at pp. 117, 118; affirmed (1868), L. R. 3 Q. B. 682, Ex. Ch.

(c) Town Gardens Protection Act, 1863 (26 & 27 Vict. c. 13), s. 1. The Act does not apply to grounds to which the public have a right of access (see ibid., and the preamble), nor to land belonging to the Crown or Duchy of Lancaster, nor to land under the management of the Commissioners of Works or Commissioners appointed under the Crown Estate Paving Act, 1851 (14 & 15 Vict. c. 95), nor to any ground for the care and protection of which provision has been made by statute (Town Gardens Protection Act, 1863 (26 & 27 Vict. c. 13), s. 7). As to Royal parks, see p. 582, ante; and as to open spaces under local Acts, see pp. 590 et seq., ante.

(d) Tulk v. Metropolitan Board of Works (1868), L. R. 3 Q. B. 682, Ex. Ch.

(e) Town Gardens Protection Act, 1863 (26 & 27 Vict. c. 13), s. 4. The bye-laws do not come into operation until allowed by some judge of one of the superior courts, or by the justices in quarter sessions, who must, on the request of such committee, inquire into any bye-laws tendered to them for that purpose, and allow or disallow the same as they think meet (ibid.). The bye-laws must be entered in a book kept for that purpose, and signed by the chairman of the committee meeting at which the same are passed: the book is evidence of such bye-laws (ibid.).

(f) Ibid. The proceedings for the recovery of the penalty, which may not exceed £5, are to be before a magistrate acting for the district in which the garden is situate (ibid.).

(g) Town Gardens Protection Act, 1863 (26 & 27 Vict. c. 13), ss. 1, 2. As to the Common Council, see title METROPOLIS, Vol. XX., p. 426; as to the London County Council, see ibid., p. 393.

(h) Town Gardens Protection Act, 1863 (26 & 27 Vict. c. 13), s. 1; London Government Act, 1899 (62 & 63 Vict. c. 14), s. 4 (1). As to the corporate authority, see the text, supra.

or borough and part in another, the authority for these purposes is the authority of the city or borough within which the part is situate (i).

1037. Where any person can, in right of any house or other property, require that any such ground be maintained, and he, in writing signed by him, requests the corporate authority to protect such right, the authority may accede to such request (k). Thereupon the rights of such person vest in such corporate authority, and it can, for and in its own name, exercise all the rights of such person in relation thereto, and take legal proceedings therefor (l).

Where any such ground has been neglected, the corporate authority must take charge of the same (m), and if after due inquiry the freehold owner cannot be found, or if it is vested in any person subject to a condition for keeping the same as garden or pleasure ground, or that the same shall not be built upon, the corporate authority must cause any encroachments made therein within the period of twenty years before the 4th May, 1863, to be removed (n), and must, if so requested by the surrounding owners and occupiers, vest it in a committee as a garden or ornamental ground for the use of such inhabitants (o).

If such owners and occupiers do not undertake the charge of the ground, the corporate authority must (p) vest the same in the local authority (q) to be maintained as an open place or street for the advantage of the public, subject to the approval of the corporate authority (r).

1038. Any charge incurred by the London County Council in the execution of any of the foregoing powers is deemed to be expenses for the payment whereof provision is made by the Metropolis Management Acts (s), and the expenses incurred by any other corporate authority, are to be deemed expenses necessarily incurred by it in carrying into execution within and for its city or borough the Municipal Corporations Act, 1882 (t), and any other Act amending the same (a).

SECT. 9.
The Town Gardens
Protection
Act, 1863.

—
Powers of authorities.

Provision for expenses.

(i) Town Gardens Protection Act, 1863 (26 & 27 Vict. c. 13), s. 1.

(k) Ibid., s. 2.

(l) Ibid.

(m) Ibid., s. 1. The authority must put up a notice to that effect (ibid.). This and the following powers are subject, under ibid., s. 1, to all such rights as any person would have enjoyed had this Act not been passed (ibid.).

(n) Town Gardens Protection Act, 1863 (26 & 27 Vict. c. 13), s. 1. The date mentioned is the date when this Act received the Royal assent.

(o) Ibid., s. 1. As to the requirements of the form of the request and composition of the garden committee, see ibid. The expenses of the committee are raised by the local authority (see p. 594, ante) as an additional rate on the surrounding occupiers (Town Gardens Protection Act, 1863 (26 & 27 Vict. c. 13), s. 1).

(p) Within six months after the notice has been put up (see note (m), supra), or within such further time as the corporate authority may think it expedient to allow (Town Gardens Protection Act, 1863 (26 & 27 Vict. c. 13), s. 1).

(q) See p. 594, ante.

(r) Town Gardens Protection Act, 1863 (26 & 27 Vict. c. 13), s. 1.

(s) See title METROPOLIS, Vol. XX., pp. 463 et seq.

(t) 45 & 46 Vict. c. 50.

(a) Town Gardens Protection Act, 1863 (26 & 27 Vict. c. 13), s. 3;

SECT. 9.
The Town
Gardens
Protection
Act, 1863.

Offences.

1039. Any police constable may apprehend any person he sees throwing any rubbish into any such garden, or trespassing therein, or getting over the railings or fence, or stealing or damaging the flowers or plants, or committing any nuisance therein (b).

SECT. 10.—Places of Public Resort under the National Trust Act, 1907.

The National Trust.

1040. Many open spaces and recreation grounds have been provided by private enterprise, both by individuals (c) and by philanthropic bodies (d). But few (if any) private persons have received statutory powers with respect to such matters, and "The National Trust for Places of Historic Interest or National Beauty," or, shortly, "The National Trust" (e), is the only philanthropic body that has, in recent years, received statutory powers exercisable beyond some particular district.

This body (f) has been entrusted with certain powers exercisable anywhere in the United Kingdom for the permanent preservation of lands and buildings of beauty or historic interest: the natural aspect and features of the land and the animal and plant life thereon so far as practicable must be preserved (g).

Municipal Corporations Act, 1882 (45 & 46 Vict. c. 50), s. 242 (1), and Sched. IX., Part I. As to such expenses, see title LOCAL GOVERNMENT, Vol. XIX., pp. 317, 319.

(b) Town Gardens Protection Act, 1863 (26 & 27 Vict. c. 13), s. 5. The offender is triable summarily, and is liable for each offence to a penalty not exceeding 40s., or to imprisonment for not exceeding fourteen days (ibid.). In such proceedings the committee, as owners of the garden, may be described by the name of A. B. and others (ibid.). As to summary procedure, see title MAGISTRATES, Vol. XIX., pp. 589 et seq. The provisions of the Metropolis Management Act, 1855 (18 & 19 Vict. c. 120), ss. 225—228 (see title METROPOLIS, Vol. XX., p. 464), and the Summary Jurisdiction Act, 1848 (11 & 12 Vict. c. 43) (see title MAGISTRATES, Vol. XIX., pp. 571 et seq.), are incorporated in the Town Gardens Protection Act, 1863 (26 & 27 Vict. c. 13), and apply to any penalty, bye-laws, and offences under the Act (ibid., s. 6).

(c) For instance, the museum and pleasure grounds (called the "Larmer Grounds") provided by General Pitt Rivers at Rushmore on the borders of Dorsetshire and Wiltshire. See further, as to these grounds, Re Pitt Rivers, Scott v. Pitt Rivers, [1902] 1 Ch. 403.

(d) Amongst such bodies may be mentioned the following:—The Commons and Footpaths Preservation Society, the Metropolitan Public Gardens Association, and the open spaces branch of the Kyrle Society.

(e) National Trust Act, 1907 (7 Edw. 7, c. cxxxvi.), s. 2.

(f) Its members are: subscribers, who pay an annual subscription; life members, who give a donation; honorary members, who are elected in return for some adequate gift; and local corresponding members, who undertake gratuitously to further the interests of the Trust locally (ibid., s. 14). The liability of members is limited to their annual subscription or other contribution which they have agreed to give (ibid., ss. 15, 16). The governing body consists of a president and fifty councillors, twenty-five of whom are elected annually from among the members, the other twenty-five (each of whom holds office until a substitute is appointed) being nominees of the Trustees of the National Gallery and the British Museum, the Presidents of the Royal Academy of Arts and the Society of Antiquaries of London, and other kindred societies, the Vice-Chancellors of the Universities of Oxford, Cambridge and London, the Senates of the Universities of Edinburgh, Glasgow, St. Andrews and Dublin, the County Councils Association, and others (ibid., s. 18).

(g) Ibid., s. 4 (1).

1041. The National Trust, either alone, or jointly with other bodies or persons (h), may acquire, but not compulsorily, and may hold without licence in mortmain (i), all kinds of property in trust for any public purposes, and may act as trustees of any property devoted to public purposes (k).

They may maintain and manage, either alone or jointly with other bodies or persons (h), open spaces or places of public resort, and buildings for public recreation, resort, or instruction (l), for the convenience of persons using them or resorting thereto (m).

They may, for the comfort or convenience of persons using or resorting to it, improve any property which belongs to them or in which they have any interest, and exercise full powers of ownership over it according to their estate and interest, so long as they do nothing inconsistent with the Trust (n). They may, however, borrow money either by mortgage of their alienable property or by charging the income derivable from any of their properties (o).

1042. The revenue of the Trust must be applied, first, in payment of the expenses incurred in connection with their property, then in payment of the interest on and the instalments of money borrowed by them, and the balance, if any, must either be applied in furthering the objects of the Trust, or invested in trustee investments (p). Their capital is to be applied, subject to any conditions attached to any particular gifts, in the repayment of loans or otherwise in furthering the objects of the Trust (q). Subject to the foregoing requirements, they may do what they deem desirable in furthering the objects of the Trust (r), but they may in no circumstances make any profit for their members in any way whatever (a).

They have, subject to certain restrictions, power to charge for admission (b), and to make bye-laws (c) subject to confirmation by the Home Secretary (d).

SECT. 10.
Places of Public Resort
under the National Trust Act,
1907.

Powers.

Application of revenue.

(h) National Trust Act, 1907 (7 Edw. 7, c. cxxxvi.), s. 31.

(i) As to this licence, see titles CHARITIES, Vol. IV., pp. 134, 137; CORPORATIONS, pp. 367 et seq.

(k) National Trust Act, 1907 (7 Edw. 7, c. cxxxvi.), s. 4 (2).

(l) Ibid., s. 4 (2).

(m) Ibid.

(n) National Trust Act, 1907 (7 Edw. 7, c. cxxxvi.), s. 4 (2). The following properties, however, are inalienable, and may not be charged with their debts and liabilities:—Hindhead, Merton Mill Pond, and Eashing Bridges, Surrey; Burwell and Wicken Fens, Cambridgeshire; the Falkland Monument at Newbury, and Newtown Common, Berkshire; the Old Sanctuary Cross at Sharow, Yorkshire; Barrington Court, Somerset; etc. etc.; Barras Head and "The Old Post Office" at Tintagel, Cornwall; Brandlehow Park and Gowbarrow Deer Park, Cumberland; the "Dinas-oleu" cliff at Barmouth, Merionethshire; and Kanturk Castle, Co. Cork (ibid., s. 21 (1), Sched. I., Part I.). A portion (185 acres) of the land acquired with Barrington Court is, however, declared to be alienable (ibid., Sched. I., Part II.). They may resolve that any property vested in them shall be inalienable (ibid., s. 21 (2)).

(o) Ibid., s. 22.

(p) Ibid., s. 27.

(q) Ibid., s. 28.

(r) Ibid., s. 4 (2).

(a) Ibid., s. 5.

(b) Ibid., s. 30 (1).

(c) Ibid., ss. 32—34.

(d) Ibid., s. 35. Subject thereto, the Public Health Act, 1875 (38 & 39

SECT. 10.

Places of Public Resort
under the National Trust Act,
1907.

Duties.

1043. The Trust must keep commons or commonable lands uninclosed and unbuilt on as open spaces for the public (e). But they may improve such commons, and make temporary inclosures thereon for protecting or renovating turf or protecting trees and plantations (e), and may set aside portions thereof for games and sports, and may charge for admission (e).

Their consent is required before any local authority can enter any common or commonable land, the soil of which is vested in them, for the purpose of obtaining highway materials; and, if such consent is withheld, the local authority must apply for an order of justices, who may prescribe such conditions as to the mode of working and restitution of the surface as they consider expedient (f).

Preservation of existing rights.

1044. All existing rights of common and commonable or other like rights (g), rights of way, and all existing private rights are to be preserved unless otherwise expressly provided (h).

SECT. 11.—*The Metropolis.*SUB-SECT. 1.—General Provisions Applicable in London.

Metropolitan
authorities.

1045. In addition to the powers which, as stated below, are separately possessed by the London County Council (i), the metropolitan borough councils and the Common Council of the City of London, these bodies are all local authorities for the purposes of the Open Spaces Act, 1906 (k).

London
County Council.

1046. The London County Council may, for the purpose only of enlarging or improving any open space, exchange parts of the open space for adjacent land, and may make and receive payments in respect of such exchanges (l).

Vict. c. 55), ss. 182—184, 186, 251 (see title PUBLIC HEALTH AND LOCAL ADMINISTRATION), apply to such bye-laws (National Trust Act, 1907 (7 Edw. 7, c. cxxxvi.), s. 35).

(e) National Trust Act, 1907 (7 Edw. 7, c. cxxxvi.), s. 29.

(f) National Trust Act, 1907 (7 Edw. 7, c. cxxxvi.), s. 36; and, as applied, the Commons Act, 1876 (39 & 40 Vict. c. 56), s. 20.

(g) For the law relating to such rights, see title COMMONS AND RIGHTS OF COMMON, Vol. IV., pp. 441 et seq.

(h) National Trust Act, 1907 (7 Edw. 7, c. cxxxvi.), s. 37.

(i) As to the power of county councils under the Open Spaces Act, 1906 (6 Edw. 7, c. 25), s. 14, see p. 587, ante.

(k) 6 Edw. 7, c. 25, s. 1. For the application of the Act, see pp. 584, et seq., ante. The expression "Common Council of the City of London" means "the mayor, aldermen and commons of the City of London in common council assembled" (ibid., s. 20); see p. 601, post.

(l) London County Council (General Powers) Act, 1905 (5 Edw. 7, c. ccvi.), ss. 30—32. Among the restrictions upon such exchanges is the provision that any money received by the Council must be applied in enlarging or improving an open space (ibid., s. 30). No land acquired by the Council from the Commissioners of Woods may be so exchanged except with the previous consent in writing of such Commissioners to the terms of the exchange (ibid.). Land taken in exchange is to be subject to all bye-laws, rights of common etc., to which the land given was subject (ibid., s. 32 (1)), all private rights are to be extinguished (ibid., s. 32 (3)), and land given in exchange is to be discharged from all common and public rights etc. (ibid., s. 31). As to the powers of the London

SECT. 11.
The Metropolis.

The Council may, subject to certain restrictions (m), make bye-laws for the management and control of the several parks, gardens, heaths, commons, embankments and open spaces in respect of which bye-laws are, by statute (n), authorised to be made by the Council (o).

The Council may authorise in writing any of its officers to enforce bye-laws, and may procure any such officers to be sworn in as constables, and any constable or any officer of the Council so authorised, and any person called to the assistance of such constable or officer, may, without warrant, seize and detain any person committing or having committed any offence against any such bye-law, whose name or residence is unknown to and cannot be ascertained by such constable or officer, and take him to a police station or before a justice to be dealt with according to law (p).

1047. Certain open spaces in London are under the control of Special provisions.

County Council of acquiring and improving open spaces, and providing bands, public lavatories and ambulances therefor, and of acquiring places of historical interest, see, further, title METROPOLIS, Vol. XX., pp. 397, 399, 458, 461. As to alienation of recreation grounds, see ibid., p. 459.

(m) See title METROPOLIS, Vol. XX., pp. 460 et seq. The Metropolitan Board of Works Act, 1877 (40 & 41 Vict. c. viii.), also lays down the formalities to be observed before new bye-laws can come into force, and provides for their effect upon existing bye-laws: a printed copy of the bye-laws, authenticated by the seal of the Council, is evidence of their contents (ibid., ss. 6, 10).

(n) I.e., under the Metropolis Management Act, 1855 (18 & 19 Vict. c. 120), ss. 202, 203; London County Council (General Powers) Act, 1890 (53 & 54 Vict. c. cexliii.), ss. 1—22, Sched. B.

(o) Metropolitan Board of Works Act, 1877 (40 & 41 Vict. c. viii.), ss. 2—4. A further and much longer list of the matters concerning which bye-laws may be made is contained in the schedule to the London County Council (General Powers) Act, 1890 (53 & 54 Vict. c. cexliii.), Sched. B. The Metropolis Management Act, 1855 (18 & 19 Vict. c. 120), and the restrictions imposed thereby (see note (m), supra), apply to the making etc. of bye-laws under the London County Council (General Powers) Act, 1890 (53 & 54 Vict. c. cexliii.), except that the penalty imposed by the latter for each breach of the same may be a sum not exceeding £5 (ibid., s. 19 (1)). A resolution applying all or any of such bye-laws to any park, heath, common etc. has no force unless and until such application be allowed by one of His Majesty's principal Secretaries of State (ibid., s. 19 (2)), and if such a bye-law extends to the prohibition of military drill on any heath or common, it is of no force until it has received the sanction of the Secretary of State for War, and in no case can it restrict any rights or powers of the said Secretary of State over any park, heath, common etc. in any case of national danger or emergency (ibid., s. 16); the application of such bye-laws to such places is not allowed unless similar notices have been given and advertisements published in London (not "in London or Middlesex," as under the Metropolitan Board of Works Act, 1877 (40 & 41 Vict. c. viii.), s. 6 (2)), and copies of the proposed bye-laws have been deposited and put on sale, as prescribed by ibid., s. 6 (3); and printed authenticated copies are to be similarly conclusive (London County Council (General Powers) Act, 1890 (53 & 54 Vict. c. cexliii.), s. 19 (3), (4)).

(p) London County Council (General Powers) Act, 1890 (53 & 54 Vict. c. cexliii.), ss. 17, 18. Any officer of the Council acting under these provisions, and not being a constable in uniform, must have with him a written authority from the Council to act, and must produce the same if required (ibid., s. 18).

SECT. 11.
The Metropolis.

the London County Council by virtue of special Acts and are regulated in accordance with the provisions therein contained (q).

SUB-SECT. 2.—The Metropolitan Borough Councils.

Powers.

1048. The metropolitan borough councils are local authorities for the purposes of the Open Spaces Act, 1906 (r), and have power to take, by agreement or gift, any land or any right or easement in or over land, for any estate or interest therein, and on such terms and conditions as they may think fit, for an open space or a pleasure ground for the public benefit of the inhabitants of their boroughs (s). This enactment, however, does not authorise any expenditure out of rates, except for the purpose of inclosing, maintaining, planting, and otherwise improving the land (s).

Unlike the London County Council and other county councils (a), and urban authorities outside London (b), the metropolitan borough councils have no general powers to purchase or take on lease, lay out, plant, improve and maintain lands as public walks or pleasure grounds, or to support or contribute to the support of such places when provided by any person, though they may obtain such powers by applying to the Local Government Board for an order conferring them (c), or they may have obtained such powers by their being inserted in the scheme for their borough made under the London Government Act, 1899 (d).

Liability for maintenance.

1049. Where on 1st January, 1856, the maintenance or management of any inclosed garden was vested in any body for the benefit (q) For instance, Victoria, Battersea, and Kennington Parks, Bethnal Green Museum Garden, and Chelsea Embankment, were transferred from the Commissioners of Works and Public Buildings by the London Parks and Works Act, 1887 (50 & 51 Vict. c. 34). As to the provision of public lavatories and sanitary conveniences, and street refuges in, on, or under the Victoria Embankment and adjoining land belonging to the London County Council, see the London County Council (General Powers) Act, 1911 (1 & 2 Geo. 5, c. lxxiii.), s. 13; title METROPOLIS, Vol. XX., pp. 395, 396.

(r) 6 Edw. 7, c. 25, s. 1. As to this Act, see pp. 584 et seq., ante.

(s) Metropolis Management Amendment Act, 1856 (19 & 20 Vict. c. 112), s. 11.

(a) See pp. 586, 598, 599, ante.

(b) See pp. 586, 587, ante.

(c) The authority for this statement is derived from the following complicated piece of legislation by reference:—Under the Local Government Act, 1894 (56 & 57 Vict. c. 73), the Local Government Board may, on the application of the council of any urban district, make an order conferring on that council any powers, duties or liabilities of a parish council (see title LOCAL GOVERNMENT, Vol. XIX., pp. 267 et seq.), applying with the necessary modifications the provisions of the Local Government Act, 1894 (56 & 57 Vict. c. 73), with reference thereto (ibid., s. 33 (1)); and the provisions of this enactment respecting councils of urban districts apply to the administrative county of London in like manner (ibid., s. 33 (6)) as if the district of each sanitary authority (now the metropolitan borough councils; see title METROPOLIS, Vol. XX., p. 408) in that county were an urban district and the sanitary authority were the council of that district. As to the powers of metropolitan borough councils under the Open Spaces Act, 1906 (6 Edw. 7, c. 25), see also pp. 584 et seq., ante; and as to the Common Council of the City of London, see p. 601, post.

(d) London Government Act, 1899 (62 & 63 Vict. c. 14), s. 16 (1) (c). As to the alienation of recreation grounds, see title METROPOLIS, Vol. XX., p. 459.

SECT. 11.
The Metropolis.

of the inhabitants of any square or place surrounding or adjoining the same, and the inhabitants were liable to be assessed for the maintenance thereof, and the powers of such body extended beyond such garden and place, and beyond any adjoining street, way, or passage, so far as the same abutted upon any part of any house, building, or tenement in or fronting such square or place (e), then the maintenance of such garden was as from that date transferred to a committee, of not more than nine nor less than three of such inhabitants, appointed by them annually in the first week in June, and the metropolitan borough council must cause to be raised the sums required by such committee for defraying the expenses of such garden or ground, or of such part thereof as is situate within its borough, by an addition to the general rate to be assessed on the occupiers of the houses or buildings, the occupiers whereof are liable to be assessed for the same purpose; but the rate to be levied under this provision may not exceed any limit thereto in force on the 1st January, 1856 (f).

SUB-SECT. 3.—The City Corporation.

1050. In addition to being a local authority for the purposes of the Open Spaces Act, 1906 (g), the Common Council of the City of London is empowered (h) to acquire open spaces (i) not within the Metropolis (k), but within twenty-five miles from the City boundaries, and to make agreements for assisting and preserving rights over such spaces (l). Powers.

The Common Council may also regulate such open spaces by bye-laws, approved by the Commissioners of Works (m), and generally manage and maintain them for the public benefit (n), subject to their remaining uninclosed (o), and unaltered as to natural aspect (p). The Act does not apply to Epping Forest (q), which is dealt with by a separate Act (r). Bye-laws.

(e) If the powers of the body did not so extend, the management remains vested in them as before (Metropolis Management Act, 1855 (18 & 19 Vict. c. 120), s. 239).

(f) Metropolis Management Act, 1855 (18 & 19 Vict. c. 120), ss. 239, 251; London Government Act, 1899 (62 & 63 Vict. c. 14), s. 10 (1). As to the exemptions contained in the Metropolis Management Act, 1855 (18 & 19 Vict. c. 120), ss. 240, 241, see title METROPOLIS, Vol. XX., p. 463.

(g) 6 Edw. 7, c. 25, s. 1. As to this Act, see pp. 584 et seq., ante.

(h) By the Corporation of London (Open Spaces) Act, 1878 (41 & 42 Vict. c. cxxvii.).

(i) The lands which may be dealt with are town and village greens, wastes of forests or manors, and all commons or other land within the Inclosure Act, 1845 (8 & 9 Vict. c. 118), s. 11; see title COMMONS AND RIGHTS OF COMMON, Vol. IVe, pp. 481, 541, 595, 597, 598; Corporation of London (Open Spaces) Act, 1878 (41 & 42 Vict. c. cxxvii.), s. 2.

(k) As defined by the Metropolis Management Act, 1855 (18 & 19 Vict. c. 120), s. 250; as to which, see title METROPOLIS, Vol. XX., pp. 292, 393.

(l) Corporation of London (Open Spaces) Act, 1878 (41 & 42 Vict. c. cxxvii.), s. 4.

(m) Ibid., ss. 12—17.

(n) Ibid., s. 18.

(o) Ibid., s. 6.

(p) Ibid., s. 7.

(q) Ibid., ss. 2, 22.

(r) Epping Forest Act, 1878 (41 & 42 Vict. c. cxxiii.). As to rights of

SECT. 12.

Other Open Spaces and Recreation Grounds.

Places of public resort.

SECT. 12.—Other Open Spaces and Recreation Grounds.

1051. Other open spaces and recreation grounds to which the public are entitled to resort for certain purposes are commons (s), the sea (t), highways (a), public market-places (b), and in some cases inland lakes (c), rivers (d), canals (e), and burial grounds (f).

Part III.—Monuments.

SECT. 1.—Erection.

Power to erect monuments.

1052. Local authorities have no general power with respect to the erection of such structures as monuments; but in some districts (g) the urban authority (h) may authorise the erection of any statue or monument in any street or public place within its district (i).

SECT. 2.—*Protection and Maintenance.*SUB-SECT. 1.—Ancient Monuments Protection Acts.

Definitions.

1053. Ancient monuments under the Ancient Monuments Protection Acts, 1882—1910 (j), are certain specified monuments (k), and common claimed over this forest, see Willingale v. Maitland (1866), L. R. 3 Eq. 103; Chilton v. London Corporation (1878), 7 Ch. D. 562.

(s) See title COMMONS AND RIGHTS OF COMMON, Vol. IV., pp. 441 et seq.

(t) See titles FISHERIES, Vol. XIV., pp. 573 et seq.; WATERS AND WATERCOURSES.

(a) See title HIGHWAYS, STREETS, AND BRIDGES, Vol. XVI., pp. 49 et seq., 151 et seq.

(b) See title MARKETS AND FAIRS, Vol. XX., pp. 1 et seq., 20 et seq.

(c) See titles FERRIES, Vol. XIV., pp. 555 et seq.; FISHERIES, Vol. XIV., p. 573; WATERS AND WATERCOURSES; and see Dixon v. Curwen, [1877] W. N. 4.

(d) See titles FISHERIES, Vol. XIV., pp. 573 et seq.; WATERS AND WATERCOURSES.

(e) See titles RAILWAYS AND CANALS; WATERS AND WATERCOURSES.

(f) See title BURIAL AND CREMATION, Vol. III., pp. 407 et seq., 533 et seq.

(g) That is, where the Public Health Acts Amendment Act, 1890 (53 & 54 Vict. c. 59), Part III., has been adopted. As to the adoption of this Act, see p. 589, ante. As to the erection of statues in the Metropolitan Police District, see title CONSTITUTIONAL LAW, Vol. VII., pp. 135, 136. The cost of erecting and inclosing such statues is to be defrayed "by and out of any moneys appropriated or to be appropriated for that purpose by Parliament" (Public Statues (Metropolis) Act, 1854 (17 & 18 Vict. c. 33), s. 2).

(h) See pp. 586 et seq., ante.

(i) See title HIGHWAYS, STREETS, AND BRIDGES, Vol. XVI., p. 259; Public Health Acts Amendment Act, 1890 (53 & 54 Vict. c. 59), s. 42. As to the meaning of "street," see ibid., s. 11 (3); Public Health Act, 1875 (38 & 39 Vict. c. 55), s. 4; and titles HIGHWAYS, STREETS, AND BRIDGES, Vol. XVI., pp. 16 et seq.; PUBLIC HEALTH AND LOCAL ADMINISTRATION.

(j) 45 & 46 Vict. c. 73; 63 & 64 Vict. c. 34; 10 Edw. 7 & 1 Geo. 5, c. 3.

(k) Ancient Monuments Protection Act, 1882 (45 & 46 Vict. c. 73), Sched. This schedule enumerates some seventy ancient structures in England, Scotland and Ireland to which the Act applies, and has been supplemented by Orders in Council of 7th March, 1887, 3rd May, 1888, 8th February, 1890, 30th June, 1890, 9th May, 1891, and 9th May, 1892.

any others of a like character of which the Commissioners of Works (l), at the request of the owners (m) thereof, may become guardians (n); or any monuments of a like character declared to be ancient monuments by Order in Council (o).

A "monument" is any structure, erection or monument of historic or architectural interest or the remains thereof (p).

SECT. 2.
Protection and Maintenance.

1054. An owner is defined as :—(1) Any person entitled for his own benefit for an estate in fee to the profits of any land which is the site of an ancient monument (q); (2) any person absolutely entitled in possession for his own benefit to a beneficial lease of such land (r); (3) any person entitled under any settlement (s), for his own benefit and for his own life or the life of any other person, to the profits of such land (t); and (4) any body corporate, corporation sole, trustees for charities, and commissioners or trustees for public purposes, entitled to such land (u).

Owner of monuments.

Where the owner is a minor or of unsound mind, or a married woman, the guardian, committee or husband, as the case may be, of such owner is the owner for this purpose, except that a married woman entitled for her separate use, and not restrained from anticipation, is to be treated as not married (x).

Owner under disability.

1055. The Commissioners of Works may, with the consent of the Treasury, and out of moneys provided by Parliament, purchase any Acquisition of ancient monuments.

(l) See title CONSTITUTIONAL LAW, Vol. VII., pp. 132, 136.

(m) See the text, infra.

(n) Ancient Monuments Protection Act, 1882 (45 & 46 Vict. c. 73), s. 11. The expression includes the site of such monument and enough adjoining land necessary for its protection and the means of access to it (ibid.).

(o) Ibid., s. 10.

(p) Ancient Monuments Protection Act, 1900 (63 & 64 Vict. c. 34), s. 6.

(q) Ancient Monuments Protection Act, 1882 (45 & 46 Vict. c. 73), s. 9 (1). The land may be freehold or copyhold, and need not be free from incumbrances (ibid.).

(r) Ibid., s. 9 (2). The land need not be free from incumbrances, but the lease must have at least forty-five years unexpired, and no lease is to be deemed to be a beneficial lease for this purpose if the rent reserved thereon exceeds one-third part of the fixed annual value of the land demised by the lease (ibid.).

(s) "Settlement" here includes any Act of Parliament, will, deed, or other assurance whereby particular estates or particular interests in land are created, with remainders or interests expectant thereon (ibid., s. 11).

(t) Ibid., s. 9 (3). The land may be of any tenure and need not be free from incumbrances, but the estate for the time being subject to the trusts of the settlement must be an estate for lives or years renewable for ever, or one renewable for a term of not less than sixty years, or one for a term of years of which not less than sixty are unexpired, or one greater than any of the foregoing estates (ibid.).

(u) Ibid., s. 9 (4). The land need not be free from incumbrances, but if the land is freehold or copyhold it must be held in fee, and, if leasehold, the lease must be for an unexpired term of not less than sixty years (ibid.).

(x) Ibid., s. 9. As to the law relating to minors, see title INFANTS AND CHILDREN, Vol. XVII., pp. 39 et seq. As to persons of unsound mind, see title LUNATICS AND PERSONS OF UNSOUND MIND, Vol. XIX., pp. 389 et seq. As to married women, see title HUSBAND AND WIFE, Vol. XVI., pp. 265 et seq.

SECT. 2.
Protection
and Maintenance.

Appointment
of guardians.

“ancient monument” (y), and may accept a bequest or gift of any “ancient monument” (a), or any “monument” (b). For these purposes the Commissioners, and such gifts and bequests, are exempt from the provisions of the Mortmain Acts (c).

A county council has a like power of purchasing a “monument” in its own or any adjacent county (d).

The provisions of the Lands Clauses Consolidation Acts (e) as to purchase by agreement apply to such purchases (f).

1056. The owner of any monument (g), or ancient monument (h), may by deed (i) under his hand appoint the Commissioners of Works (k) guardians thereof (l).

The Commissioners of Works may not become guardians of a structure occupied as a dwelling-place by any person other than a caretaker (m).

Save as is otherwise expressly provided (n), the owner of an ancient monument of which the Commissioners are guardians has the same rights therein as though they had not been appointed guardians (o).

The cost of maintenance by the Commissioners is to be defrayed, subject to the approval of the Treasury, from moneys to be provided by Parliament (p). The Commissioners and the council of any county may receive voluntary contributions towards the cost of maintenance and preservation of any monument of which they become the guardians under this Act, and may enter into any agreement with the owner of such monument or with any other person as to such maintenance and preservation and the cost thereof (q).

The council of any county may undertake, or contribute towards, the cost of preserving, maintaining, and managing any such monument, whether it has purchased the same or become the guardian thereof or not (r).

(y) Ancient Monuments Protection Act, 1882 (45 & 46 Vict. c. 73), s. 3.

(a) Ibid., s. 4.

(b) Ancient Monuments Protection Act, 1910 (10 Edw. 7 & 1 Geo. 5, c. 3), s. 1.

(c) Ancient Monuments Protection Act, 1882 (45 & 46 Vict. c. 73), s. 8. As to these provisions, see title CHARITIES, Vol. IV., pp. 124 et seq.

(d) Ancient Monuments Protection Act, 1900 (63 & 64 Vict. c. 34), s. 2 (1).

(e) See title COMPULSORY PURCHASE OF LAND AND COMPENSATION, Vol. VI., pp. 12 et seq.

(f) Ancient Monuments Protection Act, 1882 (45 & 46 Vict. c. 73), ss. 3, 11; Ancient Monuments Protection Act, 1900 (63 & 64 Vict. c. 34), s. 2 (2).

(g) Ibid., s. 1; and see note (i), infra.

(h) Ancient Monuments Protection Act, 1882 (45 & 46 Vict. c. 73), s. 2.

(i) The deed is binding on persons deriving title under the owner, and in the case of certain limited estates under a settlement upon successive owners (ibid., s. 9).

(k) The Commissioners are bound to maintain the monument, or ancient monument, until ordered not to do so by an owner not bound by the deed appointing them guardians (ibid., s. 2).

(l) A county council may similarly be appointed guardian of a monument (Ancient Monuments Protection Act, 1900 (63 & 64 Vict. c. 34), s. 2 (1)).

(m) Ibid., s. 1.

(n) See the text, infra.

(o) Ancient Monuments Protection Act, 1882 (45 & 46 Vict. c. 73), s. 2.

(p) Ibid. As to the provision of moneys by Parliament for this and similar objects, see title PARLIAMENT, p. 769, post.

(q) Ancient Monuments Protection Act, 1900 (63 & 64 Vict. c. 34), s. 3.

(r) Ibid., s. 2 (1).

1057. Any person, including an owner who has constituted the Commissioners of Works or a county council guardians thereof, who injures or defaces any "monument" (s) or "ancient monument" (a) in the ownership or care of the Commissioners or a county council (b), is punishable summarily by a penalty not exceeding £5, and in addition must pay for repairing the damage he has caused or in default may be imprisoned with or without hard labour for not more than a month (c).

SECT. 2.
Protection
and Maintenance.

Injury to
monuments.

1058. The Commissioners of Works and the council of any county may enter into and carry into effect any agreements for the transfer from the Commissioners to the council, or from the council to the Commissioners, of any monument, whether it is in the same or an adjacent county, and whether they are its owners or guardians, but if they are only its guardians, the consent of the owners is necessary (d). Any estate or interest in such a monument, or the guardianship thereof, may also be so transferred (e).

Transfer of ownership.

1059. The public are to have access to any monument, whether ancient or not, of which the Commissioners of Works or any county council are the owners or guardians, but, where such bodies are merely guardians with the consent of the owner of the monument, the public are to have such access at such times and under such regulations as the Commissioners or council may prescribe (f).

Public access.

SUB-SECT. 2.—Housing, Town Planning, etc. Act, 1909.

1060. Nothing in the Housing of the Working Classes Act, 1890 (g), and any amending Acts, is to authorise the acquisition for the purposes of those Acts of any land which is the site of an ancient monument or other object of archaeological interest (h), and the Local Government Board is authorised to make general provisions (i), in connection with town planning schemes under the Act of 1909, for the preservation of objects of historical interest or natural beauty (j).

Housing and town planning schemes.

(s) Ancient Monuments Protection Act, 1910 (10 Edw. 7 & 1 Geo. 5, c. 3), s. 1.

(a) Ancient Monuments Protection Act, 1882 (45 & 46 Vict. c. 73), s. 6. The Summary Jurisdiction Acts apply; appeal is to quarter sessions (ibid., s. 7); see title MAGISTRATES, Vol. XIX., pp. 589, 633 et seq.

(b) Ancient Monuments Protection Act, 1900 (63 & 64 Vict. c. 34), s. 2 (2).

(c) Ancient Monuments Protection Act, 1882 (45 & 46 Vict. c. 73), s. 6. Such offences may also be punished under the Malicious Damage Act, 1861 (24 & 25 Vict. c. 97); see title CRIMINAL LAW AND PROCEDURE, Vol. IX., pp. 787, 788. As to the inspection of ancient monuments and the expense thereof, see Ancient Monuments Protection Act, 1900 (63 & 64 Vict. c. 34), s. 5.

(d) Ancient Monuments Protection Act, 1900 (63 & 64 Vict. c. 34), s. 4.

(e) Ibid.

(f) Ibid., s. 5.

(g) 53 & 54 Vict. c. 70; see title PUBLIC HEALTH AND LOCAL ADMINISTRATION.

(h) Housing, Town Planning, etc. Act, 1909 (9 Edw. 7, c. 44), s. 45.

(i) See pp. 582 et seq., ante.

(j) Housing, Town Planning, etc. Act, 1909 (9 Edw. 7, c. 44), s. 55, Sched. IV.

SECT. 2.

Protection and Maintenance.

Power to maintain statue.

Maintenance of public monuments.

SUB-SECT. 3.—In Particular Districts.

1061. In some districts (k) the urban authority (l) may maintain any statue or monument in any public open space or recreation ground within its district, if the statue or monument was either erected with its authority or erected before the present provisions came into force in the district, and it may remove any statue or monument the erection of which has been authorised by it (m).

1062. The obelisk known as Cleopatra's Needle, and any monument, statue or work on the Victoria, Albert, or Chelsea Embankments, or other lands vested in the London County Council (as the successor of the Metropolitan Board of Works), are subject to the control and management of that Council for the benefit of the public (n).

The London County Council may erect in connection with Cleopatra's Needle any appropriate works of art (o).

All expenses incurred by the Council under these provisions are to be deemed to be expenses incurred by it in the execution of the Metropolis Management Act, 1855 (p), and are to be raised and paid accordingly (q).

(k) That is, where the Public Health Acts Amendment Act, 1890 (53 & 54 Vict. c. 59), Part III., has been adopted; see pp. 587 et seq., ante.

(l) See ibid.

(m) Public Health Acts Amendment Act, 1890 (53 & 54 Vict. c. 59), s. 42.

(n) Monuments (Metropolis) Act, 1878 (41 & 42 Vict. c. 29), ss. 2—4. This description of the words "the said embankments or lands," used in the Act is taken from the preamble, the only place in which those terms are described; and see p. 602, ante. As to offences and the recovery of penalties in connection with these monuments, see titles CRIMINAL LAW AND PROCEDURE, Vol. IX., p. 788, note (i); METROPOLIS, Vol. XX., p. 464; and see ibid., p. 395, note (k).

(o) Monuments (Metropolis) Act, 1878 (41 & 42 Vict. c. 29), s. 3.

(p) 18 & 19 Vict. c. 120.

(q) Monuments (Metropolis) Act, 1878 (41 & 42 Vict. c. 29), s. 5. As to such expenses, see title METROPOLIS, Vol. XX., p. 464.

ORDER AND DISPOSITION.

See BANKRUPTCY AND INSOLVENCY.

ORDER OF DISCHARGE.

See BANKRUPTCY AND INSOLVENCY.

ORDERS OF COURT.

See COUNTY COURTS ; EXECUTION ; JUDGMENTS AND ORDERS ; MAYOR'S COURT, LONDON ; PRACTICE AND PROCEDURE.

ORDINARY.

See ECCLESIASTICAL LAW.

ORDINATION.

See ECCLESIASTICAL LAW.

ORGANIST.

See ECCLESIASTICAL LAW.

OUTLAW.

See CRIMINAL LAW AND PROCEDURE.

OVERDRAFT.

See BANKERS AND BANKING.

OVERSEERS.

See ECCLESIASTICAL LAW; ELECTIONS; POOR LAW; RATES AND RATING.

OXFORD UNIVERSITY.

See EDUCATION.

OYSTERS.

See FISHERIES.

PAINTINGS.

See COPYRIGHT AND LITERARY PROPERTY.

PALATINE COURTS.

See COURTS.

PARAPHERNALIA.

See HUSBAND AND WIFE.

PARDON.

See CONSTITUTIONAL LAW; CRIMINAL LAW AND PROCEDURE.

PARENT AND CHILD.

See EDUCATION; INFANTS AND CHILDREN.

PARISH.

See ECCLESIASTICAL LAW; LOCAL GOVERNMENT.

PARISH CLERK.

See ECCLESIASTICAL LAW.

PARISH COUNCIL.

See LOCAL GOVERNMENT.

PARISHIONER.

See ECCLESIASTICAL LAW.

PARKS.

See CONSTITUTIONAL LAW ; OPEN SPACES AND RECREATION GROUNDS.

PARLIAMENT.

	PAGE
PART I. GENERAL NATURE AND POWERS - - -	616
PART II. THE HOUSE OF LORDS - - -	619
SECT. 1. COMPOSITION - - -	619
Sub-sect. 1. In General - - -	619
Sub-sect. 2. Lords Spiritual - - -	619
Sub-sect. 3. Lords Temporal - - -	622
(i.) In General - - -	622
(ii.) Hereditary Peers of the United Kingdom - - -	622
(iii.) Representative Peers of Scotland and Ireland - - -	624
(1) In General - - -	624
(2) Representative Peers of Scotland - - -	625
(3) Representative Peers of Ireland - - -	626
(iv.) Lords of Appeal in Ordinary - - -	628
SECT. 2. PROCEDURE AND CONDUCT OF BUSINESS - - -	628
Sub-sect. 1. In General - - -	628
Sub-sect. 2. Business Transacted in the House itself - - -	628
Sub-sect. 3. Officers of the House - - -	629
(i.) The Lord Speaker - - -	629
(ii.) The Chairman of Committees - - -	630
(iii.) Permanent Officers - - -	630
Sub-sect. 4. Journals of the House - - -	631
Sub-sect. 5. Minutes of Proceedings - - -	632
Sub-sect. 6. Quorum - - -	632
Sub-sect. 7. Notices and Orders of the Day - - -	632
Sub-sect. 8. Divisions - - -	633
Sub-sect. 9. Protests - - -	634
SECT. 3. SITTINGS OF THE HOUSE - - -	635
SECT. 4. MAINTENANCE OF ORDER AND RULES OF DEBATE - - -	636
SECT. 5. COMMITTEES OF THE HOUSE - - -	637
Sub-sect. 1. Committee of the whole House - - -	637
Sub-sect. 2. Select Committees - - -	637
Sub-sect. 3. Secret Committees - - -	639
Sub-sect. 4. Committees on Private Bills and Provisional Order Confirmation Bills - - -	639
Sub-sect. 5. Joint Committees - - -	639
Sub-sect. 6. Committees to prepare Reasons - - -	640
Sub-sect. 7. Sessional Committees - - -	641
SECT. 6. JUDICIAL FUNCTIONS OF THE HOUSE - - -	643
Sub-sect. 1. Appellate Jurisdiction - - -	643
(i.) In General - - -	643
(ii.) Procedure in Appeals - - -	643
(iii.) Effect of Prorogation or Dissolution of Parliament - - -	647
(iv.) Assistance of Judges of the Supreme Court - - -	647
(v.) Assistance of Nautical Assessors - - -	648
(vi.) Sittings for the Hearing of Causes - - -	649
(vii.) Delivery of Judgment - - -	649

PART II. THE HOUSE OF LORDS—*continued.*SECT. 6. JUDICIAL FUNCTIONS OF THE HOUSE—continued.

Sub-sect. 2. Original Jurisdiction	-	-	-	-	-	650
(i.) Impeachment	-	-	-	-	-	650
(ii.) Trial of a Peer by his Peers	-	-	-	-	-	653

PART III. THE HOUSE OF COMMONS - - - - - 655

SECT. 1. COMPOSITION - - - - - 655

Sub-sect. 1. In General	-	-	-	-	-	655
Sub-sect. 2. Disqualifications for Membership	-	-	-	-	-	655
Sub-sect. 3. Retirement from Membership	-	-	-	-	-	661

SECT. 2. PROCEDURE AND CONDUCT OF BUSINESS - - - - - 663

Sub-sect. 1. In General	-	-	-	-	-	663
Sub-sect. 2. Business Transacted in the House itself	-	-	-	-	-	663
Sub-sect. 3. The Speaker	-	-	-	-	-	663
Sub-sect. 4. Committee of the whole House	-	-	-	-	-	665
(i.) Going into Committee	-	-	-	-	-	665
(ii.) The Chairman of Ways and Means	-	-	-	-	-	666
Sub-sect. 5. Permanent Officers	-	-	-	-	-	667
Sub-sect. 6. Votes and Proceedings	-	-	-	-	-	667
Sub-sect. 7. Journals of the House	-	-	-	-	-	668
Sub-sect. 8. Quorum	-	-	-	-	-	668
Sub-sect. 9. Motions	-	-	-	-	-	668
Sub-sect. 10. Closure	-	-	-	-	-	670
Sub-sect. 11. Divisions	-	-	-	-	-	671

SECT. 3. SITTINGS OF THE HOUSE - - - - - 672

Sub-sect. 1. Attendance of Members	-	-	-	-	-	672
Sub-sect. 2. Sitzings of the House	-	-	-	-	-	673
(i.) Time and Duration of Sitting	-	-	-	-	-	673
(ii.) Government Business	-	-	-	-	-	674
(iii.) Private Members' Business	-	-	-	-	-	674
(iv.) Private Business	-	-	-	-	-	675
(v.) Public Petitions	-	-	-	-	-	675
(vi.) Questions to Members	-	-	-	-	-	676
(vii.) Consideration of Public Business	-	-	-	-	-	677

SECT. 4. MAINTENANCE OF ORDER AND RULES OF DEBATE - - - - - 678

SECT. 5. JURISDICTION OF THE HOUSE - - - - - 681

SECT. 6. COMMITTEES - - - - - 682

Sub-sect. 1. Classification-	-	-	-	-	-	682
Sub-sect. 2. Standing Committees	-	-	-	-	-	682
Sub-sect. 3. Select Committees	-	-	-	-	-	682
(i.) Select Committees on Public Matters or Public Bills	-	-	-	-	-	682
(ii.) Select Committees relating to Public Matters appointed Sessionally or by Standing Order	-	-	-	-	-	684
(iii.) Select Committees appointed under Standing Orders to deal with Matters relating to Private Business	-	-	-	-	-	685
(iv.) Select Committee on Commons	-	-	-	-	-	685
(v.) Select Committees on Private Bills and Provisional Order Confirmation Bills	-	-	-	-	-	686
(vi.) Committee of Privileges	-	-	-	-	-	686
Sub-sect. 4. Committees on Private Bills and Provisional Order Confirmation Bills	-	-	-	-	-	687

	PAGE
PART IV. MEETING, ADJOURNMENT, PROROGATION AND DISSOLUTION OF PARLIAMENT - - - -	687
SECT. 1. MEETING - - - - -	687
Sub-sect. 1. Issue and Return of Writs - - - -	687
Sub-sect. 2. Oath of Allegiance - - - - -	688
Sub-sect. 3. Introduction of Peers - - - - -	689
Sub-sect. 4. Introduction of Members of the House of Commons - - - - -	691
Sub-sect. 5. Preliminary Proceedings when a New Parliament Meets - - - - -	692
Sub-sect. 6. Proceedings at the Opening of Parliament - - - -	695
Sub-sect. 7. Proceedings on a Demise of the Crown - - - -	698
SECT. 2. POWER OF EACH HOUSE TO ADJOURN - - - - -	699
SECT. 3. PROROGATION - - - - -	700
SECT. 4. DISSOLUTION - - - - -	702
PART V. THE LEGISLATIVE WORK OF PARLIAMENT - - - -	702
SECT. 1. CLASSIFICATION OF BILLS - - - - -	702
SECT. 2. DRAFTING OF PUBLIC BILLS - - - - -	703
SECT. 3. PUBLIC BILLS - - - - -	704
Sub-sect. 1. Presentation and First Reading - - - -	704
Sub-sect. 2. Second Reading - - - - -	706
Sub-sect. 3. Committee Stage - - - - -	708
(i.) In the House of Lords - - - - -	708
(ii.) In the House of Commons - - - - -	710
(iii.) Conduct of Business in Committee of the whole House - - - - -	713
Sub-sect. 4. Consideration of a Public Bill by a Select Committee or by a Joint Committee of the two Houses - - - - -	714
Sub-sect. 5. Re-commitment - - - - -	715
Sub-sect. 6. Report Stage - - - - -	716
Sub-sect. 7. Third Reading - - - - -	718
Sub-sect. 8. Consideration of Bills by the Second House - -	720
Sub-sect. 9. Passing into Law of Bills to which the House of Lords has not Agreed - - - - -	722
Sub-sect. 10. Royal Assent - - - - -	723
Sub-sect. 11. Printing and Publication - - - - -	725
SECT. 4. PUBLIC BILLS OF A SPECIAL CHARACTER - - - -	726
Sub-sect. 1. In General - - - - -	726
Sub-sect. 2. Act of Grace - - - - -	726
Sub-sect. 3. Act of Indemnity - - - - -	726
Sub-sect. 4. Act of Attainder - - - - -	727
Sub-sect. 5. Acts for the Reversal of Attainders, or for Restoration of Honours and Lands, or for Restitution of Blood - - - - -	727
SECT. 5. PRIVATE BILLS AND BILLS TO CONFIRM PROVISIONAL ORDERS - - - - -	727
Sub-sect. 1. General Classification of Private Bills - - - -	727
Sub-sect. 2. Parliamentary Agents - - - - -	729
Sub-sect. 3. Preliminary Procedure with regard to Private (Local) Bills - - - - -	729
(i.) Petition - - - - -	729
(ii.) Notice - - - - -	730
(iii.) Plans and Sections - - - - -	732
(iv.) Deposit of Bill and Petition - - - - -	733
(v.) Deposit of Estimates - - - - -	734

PART V. THE LEGISLATIVE WORK OF PARLIAMENT—*continued.*SECT. 5. PRIVATE BILLS AND BILLS TO CONFIRM PROVISIONAL ORDERS—*continued.*Sub-sect. 3. Preliminary Procedure with regard to Private (Local) Bills—continued.

(vi.) Deposit of Money - - - - - 735

(vii.) Bills Promoted for the Purpose of Raising Money by the London County Council - - - - - 737

(viii.) Bills involving Acquisition of Working-Class Houses - - - - - 738

(ix.) Bills Promoted by Companies etc. - - - - - 738

Sub-sect. 4. Proceedings Preliminary to Introduction of Provisional Order Confirmation Bills - - - - - 740

Sub-sect. 5. Examiners - - - - - 740

Sub-sect. 6. Standing Orders Committees - - - - - 743

Sub-sect. 7. Further Proceedings with regard to Private (Local) Bills and Provisional Order Confirmation Bills - - - - - 744

(i.) In General - - - - - 744

(ii.) First Reading - - - - - 746

(iii.) Second Reading - - - - - 746

(1) In the House of Lords - - - - - 746

(2) In the House of Commons - - - - - 747

(iv.) Petitions in Opposition - - - - - 747

(v.) Locus Standi of Petitioners - - - - - 749

(vi.) Committees - - - - - 750

(1) In the House of Lords - - - - - 750

(2) In the House of Commons - - - - - 751

(3) Joint Committees of the two Houses - - - - - 752

(4) Procedure in Committees - - - - - 753

(vii.) Report and Third Reading - - - - - 756

Sub-sect. 8. Personal Bills - - - - - 758

(i.) In General - - - - - 758

(ii.) Procedure - - - - - 759

Sub-sect. 9. Estate Bills - - - - - 759

Sub-sect. 10. Naturalisation Bills - - - - - 761

Sub-sect. 11. Name Bills - - - - - 761

Sub-sect. 12. Divorce Bills - - - - - 761

Sub-sect. 13. Scottish Private Legislation - - - - - 762

PART VI. THE FINANCIAL WORK OF PARLIAMENT - - - - - 766

SECT. 1. INITIATION OF TAXATION AND EXPENDITURE - - - - - 766

SECT. 2. THE CONSOLIDATED FUND - - - - - 767

SECT. 3. PUBLIC EXPENDITURE - - - - - 768

Sub-sect. 1. Classification of Services - - - - - 768

Sub-sect. 2. Estimates and Grants - - - - - 768

(i.) Classification - - - - - 768

(ii.) Procedure - - - - - 771

(1) Speech from the Throne - - - - - 771

(2) Committee of Supply and Committee of Ways and Means - - - - - 771

(3) Procedure in Committee of Supply - - - - - 772

(4) Procedure in Committee of Ways and Means - - - - - 774

(iii.) Consolidated Fund Bills - - - - - 775

(iv.) Finance Bills - - - - - 775

	PAGE
PART VI. THE FINANCIAL WORK OF PARLIAMENT— continued.
SECT. 3. PUBLIC EXPENDITURE— continued.
Sub-sect. 3. Passing into Law of Money Bills to which the House of Lords has not Agreed	776
Sub-sect. 4. Public Accounts	776
(i.) Control of Parliament	776
(ii.) Appropriation Accounts	777
PART VII. PRIVILEGES OF PARLIAMENT	777
SECT. 1. NATURE AND ORIGIN	777
SECT. 2. CLASSIFICATION	779
Sub-sect. 1. In General	779
Sub-sect. 2. Privileges Claimed by both Houses	779
Sub-sect. 3. Privileges Peculiar to the House of Lords	785
Sub-sect. 4. Privileges Peculiar to the House of Commons	787
SECT. 3. PROCEDURE FOR ENFORCEMENT OF PRIVILEGE ETC.	790
PART VIII. RELATIONS BETWEEN THE HOUSES OF PARLIAMENT—
SECT. 1. IN GENERAL	791
SECT. 2. CONTROL OF PUBLIC MONEY	792
SECT. 3. PECUNIARY PENALTIES	797
SECT. 4. ACCEPTANCE OF AMENDMENTS	798
PART IX. COMMUNICATIONS BETWEEN THE CROWN AND PARLIAMENT AND BETWEEN THE HOUSE OF LORDS AND THE HOUSE OF COMMONS	800
SECT. 1. FROM THE CROWN TO PARLIAMENT	800
Sub-sect. 1. In General	800
Sub-sect. 2. Methods of Communication	800
SECT. 2. FROM PARLIAMENT TO THE CROWN	802
Sub-sect. 1. In General	802
Sub-sect. 2. Joint Address	803
Sub-sect. 3. Address from the House of Lords	803
Sub-sect. 4. Address from the House of Commons	804
SECT. 3. BETWEEN THE HOUSES OF PARLIAMENT	804
<hr/>
For Accession of Sovereign	See title CONSTITUTIONAL LAW.
Cabinet	CONSTITUTIONAL LAW.
Coronation	CONSTITUTIONAL LAW.
Crown and Executive	CONSTITUTIONAL LAW.
Crown and Subject	CONSTITUTIONAL LAW.
Customs	REVENUE.
Departments of State	CONSTITUTIONAL LAW.
Elections	ELECTIONS.
Evidence	EVIDENCE.
Excise	REVENUE.
Habeas Corpus	CROWN PRACTICE.
Judgments of Judicial Authorities	JUDGMENTS AND ORDERS.
Juries	JURIES.
Officers of State	CONSTITUTIONAL LAW; PUBLIC AUTHORITIES AND PUBLIC OFFICERS.
Peerage	PEERAGES AND DIGNITIES.
Petition of Right	CROWN PRACTICE.
Royal Family	CONSTITUTIONAL LAW.
Royal Prerogative	CONSTITUTIONAL LAW.
Statutes, Construction of	STATUTES.

NOTE.

It is obviously impossible to do much more in respect of the Parliament Act, 1911 (1 & 2 Geo. 5, c. 13), than give the words of the Act itself.

Many of the matters treated of in the following pages are more or less affected by that Act, and no authority short of Parliament itself can deal with the intention expressed in the Statute to create a new Second Chamber.

Some Statutes are repealed by the Parliament Act, 1911, in effect, though not expressed to be repealed.

The effect of future legislation will be given in a supplementary volume.

HALSBURY.

Part I.—General Nature and Powers.

Composition
of Parliament.

1063. The Parliament of the United Kingdom consists of the Sovereign and the three Estates of the Realm, namely, the Lords Spiritual and the Lords Temporal, who sit together in the House of Lords (a), and the elected representatives of the people, who sit in the House of Commons (b).

Powers of the Crown.

1064. The two Houses of Parliament are summoned, prorogued and dissolved by the Sovereign by the exercise of his Royal Prerogative, and his assent must be given to any Bill passed by the Lords and Commons (c) before it can have the force of law (d).

Supreme legislative authority of Parliament.

1065. Parliament is the supreme legislative authority, not only in the United Kingdom (e), but also throughout the whole British Empire (f), and there is no legal limit to its power of making and unmaking laws (g).

(a) See pp. 619 et seq., post.

(b) See pp. 655 et seq., post.

(c) For the provisions of the Parliament Act, 1911 (1 & 2 Geo. 5, c. 13), ss. 1 (1), 2 (1), by which Bills passed by the House of Commons but not passed by the House of Lords, may receive the Royal Assent and acquire the force of law, see pp. 722, 776, post.

(d) See pp. 723 et seq., post. For the words of enactment to Acts of Parliament, see titles CONSTITUTIONAL LAW, Vol. VI., p. 388; STATUTES; and see p. 723, post. For the nature of the Royal Prerogative generally in relation to Parliament, see title CONSTITUTIONAL LAW, Vol. VI., pp. 388—391.

(e) See 1 Bl. Com. 160, 161; and title CONSTITUTIONAL LAW, Vol. VI., pp. 317, 318.

(f) The colonial possessions of the British Crown, whether they have been granted responsible government or not, are always subject to the control of the Imperial Parliament, and, therefore, not only can the Imperial Parliament legally pass legislation binding on the colonies, but it can also overrule laws passed by subordinate Legislatures within the Empire; see Todd, Parliamentary Government in the British Colonies, 2nd ed., pp. 40, 171, 209—246. For this subject, generally, see titles CONFLICT OF LAWS, Vol. VI., pp. 177 et seq.; CONSTITUTIONAL LAW, Vol. VI., pp. 423, 425; DEPENDENCIES AND COLONIES, Vol. X., pp. 565 et seq.

(g) See title CONSTITUTIONAL LAW, Vol. VI., pp. 317, 318; May, Parliamentary Practice, 11th ed., p. 37. An existing Parliament cannot, however,

PART I.
General
Nature and
Powers.

1066. Even in cases where it delegates to another authority, such as a public department, the power to make rules and regulations or to formulate schemes and draft orders, Parliament usually reserves to itself some measure of control over the exercise of this power by the authority in question (h).

1067. Parliament is not an executive authority, but either directly or indirectly it exercises a dominating control over the action of the Crown and of the Executive Government (i) and the administration of the laws which it has enacted.

Control of Parliament
over rulemaking authorities.

Control of Parliament
over action of Crown and Executive.

Means of control.

This control is effected in various ways, namely :—

(1) By the legal restrictions which prevent the Crown or its Ministers from imposing any charge upon the people or from maintaining a standing army in time of peace without the consent of Parliament ;

(2) By the doctrine of the Constitution by which supply is granted annually by the House of Commons and must receive legislative sanction each year ;

(3) By means of the rule by which supply granted to the Crown bind a succeeding Parliament ; see title CONSTITUTIONAL LAW, Vol. VI., p. 318, note (k).

(h) The control of Parliament in this respect is exercised in various ways. In a great number of cases, any rules etc. framed by an authority in conformity with powers conferred upon it by an Act of Parliament, before they can be acted upon, must be laid before Parliament within a certain time after they have been made, or, if Parliament is not sitting at the time, within a certain period after its next meeting : in other cases, although a department which is authorised to make rules etc. may also be empowered to act upon them forthwith, a provision is often contained in the Act conferring this power upon the department, by which either House of Parliament may render any such rule etc. null and void, if, within a specified time after the rule, etc. has been laid before Parliament, it agrees to a resolution to that effect (e.g., see Factory and Workshop Act, 1901 (1 Edw. 7, c. 22), ss. 84, 126 (3)). An authority may also be required to lay upon the table of each House for a prescribed period of time any rule etc. which it has framed in conformity with powers conferred upon it by an Act of Parliament before it may take any action upon it (e.g., see Elementary Education Act, 1870 (33 & 34 Vict. c. 75), s. 97) ; and, in cases where an Order in Council is required to carry out a scheme formulated by an authority under powers conferred by statute, the Act which confers such powers sometimes provides that the scheme in question shall not be carried into effect until a prescribed period of time has elapsed, during which either House of Parliament, by agreeing to an address hostile to the proposed scheme, can prevent the Order being made (e.g., see Endowed Schools Act, 1873 (36 & 37 Vict. c. 87), s. 15), or until both Houses have agreed to an address to the Crown praying that the required Order may be made (e.g., see Military Manœuvres Act, 1897 (60 & 61 Vict. c. 43), s. 1 (3)). Where a form of objection is not prescribed by statute, the usual method by which either House of Parliament can object to any rule etc. made by an authority is by means of an address to the Crown. For the conditions under which proceedings of objection when prescribed by statute are exempted from interruption under the Standing Orders of the House of Commons, 1911, No. 1, see p. 674, post. As to publication of a proposal to make statutory rules etc., see Rules Publication Act, 1893 (56 & 57 Vict. c. 66), s. 1.

(i) It is a recognised convention of the Constitution that, although the declaration of peace or war or the making of treaties with foreign Powers rests with the Sovereign acting upon the advice of his Ministers, all such acts must conform with the wishes of Parliament, and in certain cases the direct action of Parliament may be required to carry out the obligations incurred by a treaty ; see title CONSTITUTIONAL LAW, Vol. VI., pp. 427, 440—442.

PART I.
General
Nature and
Powers.

must be appropriated to the particular purposes for which it has been granted ; and

(4) By the doctrine of the Constitution by which Ministers of the Crown are held responsible to Parliament for any act done by them in their ministerial capacity or for any advice tendered by them to the Sovereign.

Effect of presence of Ministers in Parliament.

1068. In addition to the above-mentioned methods of parliamentary control, the practice and procedure of both Houses ensures that the action of the Executive shall always be open to the criticism of Parliament. For the Ministers of the Crown are members either of the House of Lords or of the House of Commons, and in either House it is permissible for members to address questions to them with regard to the administration of their departments (j), and in both Houses motions may be made reflecting upon the conduct of a particular Minister or of the Government as a whole (k).

Other means by which Parliament is supplied with information.

1069. Parliament also receives documentary information with regard to many matters which enables it to keep a watchful eye over the administration of the Executive Government and over its policy in general.

By command of the Sovereign both Houses are supplied with reports on the work of various departments of the Government, with reports of, and evidence heard by, Royal Commissions and other commissions of inquiry, with papers, correspondence, and reports dealing with foreign and colonial affairs, and other subjects which have occupied the attention of Ministers (l), and in certain (j) See pp. 628, 632, 674, 675, post.

(k) There is no rule of law which compels a Ministry which has lost the confidence of the House of Commons to resign office. It is usual, however, in ordinary circumstances for a Government to resign or advise the Sovereign to dissolve Parliament when it has been placed in a minority in the House of Commons on a division upon any matter reflecting upon its policy in general or upon any proposal contained in a Bill which it has introduced into Parliament. A Government which has been defeated in the House of Commons on a direct vote of confidence has no alternative but to resign office. When a Government is defeated upon the reduction of a vote in supply, it depends upon the circumstances of the case whether or not it will regard its defeat as a vote of want of confidence. In 1895, the Government of the day was defeated on a vote in committee of supply, and resigned office, but this course was not followed in 1904 or 1905. For the circumstances under which Governments, though defeated in the House of Commons, even upon an amendment to the Address in reply to the Speech from the Throne, have not resigned office, see the statement of the Right Hon. A. J. Balfour, M.P., and the debate on the motion for the adjournment of the House on the 24th July, 1905 (Parliamentary Debates, Vol. CL., Fourth Series, pp. 49 et seq.). When it is proposed in the House of Commons to move a vote of censure upon the Government from the front opposition bench, facilities for the debate thereon are always afforded by the Government.

(l) All such papers, commonly called "Command Papers" (with the exception of the annual estimates (see pp. 768 et seq., post), which are printed by order of the House of Commons) are printed on the authority of the department presenting them. In each House, Command Papers are presented without any formality by being "laid on the table" by a minister representing the department responsible for them. During a recess such papers may be presented to the House of Lords by delivery to the Clerk of the Parliaments; to the House of Commons by delivery to the Librarian of that House; see Standing Orders of cases provision is made by statute to ensure that Parliament is supplied with reports of proceedings taken under the statute in question, or that certain accounts and statistics are laid before both Houses (m).

It is also possible for either House, by means of an Address to the Crown or of an order of the House, to obtain, from any public department (n), information upon any matter of public importance connected with the work or administration of such department (o).

PART I.
General
Nature and
Powers.

Part II.—The House of Lords.

SECT. 1.—Composition.

SUB-SECT. 1.—In General.

1070. The House of Lords is composed of the Lords Spiritual and Temporal, who sit together in one chamber.

Composition of House of Lords.

SUB-SECT. 2.—Lords Spiritual.

1071. The lords spiritual are the archbishops and such of the bishops of the Church of England as have seats in the House of Lords. They are appointed by the Crown, and their right to sit and vote in the House of Lords is established by ancient usage and by statute (a).

The lords spiritual.

the House of Lords (Public Business), No. 111 ; Standing Orders of the House of Commons (Public Business), No. 95.

(m) Papers presented pursuant to statute, or ordered to be laid before either House, are printed, if desired, by order of the House to which they are presented.

(n) In the case of the Privy Council or of departments presided over by a Secretary of State, an address is moved to His Majesty that he will be graciously pleased to give directions that the desired information be supplied ; in the case of other departments, the House orders the information to be laid before it.

(o) In the House of Lords, a motion for papers is often made for the purpose of raising a debate upon a subject of public interest, but in the House of Commons this is seldom done. In the latter House, when a department has signified its willingness to supply the information for which a member has given notice of his intention of moving, the motion may be made before questions, or before the commencement, or at the close of public business. If the motion is not assented to by the Government, it cannot be made before questions or before the commencement of public business. A motion for a return, or for information upon any subject, may be refused if the making of such return, or the giving of such information, is considered to be inadvisable in the public interest, or would involve unreasonable labour or expense ; see May, Parliamentary Practice, 11th ed., p. 539.

(a) For the origin of the right by which the lords spiritual sit in the House of Lords, see May, Parliamentary Practice, 11th ed., p. 6 ; Pike, Constitutional History of the House of Lords, pp. 161—168 ; First Report on the Dignity of a Peer of the Realm, 25th May, 1820, p. 393. When a vacancy occurs in any see a congé d'élire is issued from the Office of the Clerk of the Crown in Chancery to the dean and chapter of the diocese empowering them to elect a new bishop, and also a letter of recommendation stating the name of the individual who has been chosen by the Crown to fill the vacant see. The election is then made formally by the dean and chapter, and afterwards is confirmed by the Crown, after which the new bishop does homage to the Sovereign, who invests him with

SECT. 1.

Composition.

Number of lords spiritual entitled to sit.

Effect of resignation of bishopric by lord spiritual.

Filling of vacancies caused by avoidance of sees.

1072. There are two archbishops and thirty-four diocesan bishops in England and Wales (b), but of these only the two archbishops and twenty-four bishops are entitled to sit in the House of Lords as Lords of Parliament (c).

The number of lords spiritual who receive writs of summons to Parliament has not varied since the year 1847, when the bishopric of Manchester was created (d).

1073. A lord spiritual retains his seat in the House of Lords for life unless he resigns his bishopric, when he ceases to be a lord of Parliament, and his place in the House of Lords is filled up as if he were dead (e).

1074. When a vacancy occurs among the lords spiritual by the avoidance of the sees of Canterbury or York, or of the sees of London, Durham, or Winchester, the vacancy is filled by the issue of a writ of summons to the bishop who is appointed to the vacant see. But if the vacancy is caused by the avoidance of any other see in England or Wales, a writ of summons is issued to the senior bishop who is not already a lord of Parliament (f).

the temporalities of the see. After a bishop has done homage, but not before, he is qualified, whenever the occasion arises, to receive a writ of summons to the House of Lords. In a diocese where there is no dean and chapter, the bishop is appointed by the Crown without the issue of a congé d'élire; see also title ECCLESIASTICAL LAW, Vol. XI., pp. 396—400.

(b) This number does not include the Bishop of Sodor and Man, who has no right to speak or vote in the House of Lords.

(c) At the time of the dissolution of the monasteries in the reign of Henry VIII., twenty-six abbots and two priors appear to have been summoned to Parliament, in addition to the two archbishops and nineteen diocesan bishops, making in all forty-nine spiritual lords of Parliament. After the dissolution of the monasteries, six new bishoprics were created, one of which, Westminster, ceased to exist after a few years. As a result of the Reformation, therefore, twenty-eight abbots and priors were removed from the House of Lords and five new bishops took their places. The number of lords spiritual was reduced consequently to twenty-six. By the Union with Ireland Act, 1800 (39 & 40 Geo. 3, c. 67), art. 4, s. 2, one archbishop and three bishops of the Church of Ireland were given seats in the House of Lords, but the Irish Church Act, 1869 (32 & 33 Vict. c. 42), s. 13, deprived them of their place in Parliament.

(d) See Ecclesiastical Commissioners Act, 1847 (10 & 11 Vict. c. 108), s. 2. In 1847 there were twenty-six lords spiritual belonging to the Church of England sitting in the House of Lords, but the number of bishops to be summoned to Parliament was not increased by the creation of the new see. Since the creation of the see of Manchester various Acts have been passed for the creation of new, or for the re-organisation of old, dioceses, in all of which, however, a stipulation has been made that the number of spiritual lords of Parliament should not be increased thereby (see Bishopric of St. Albans Act, 1875 (38 & 39 Vict. c. 34), s. 7; Bishopric of Truro Act, 1876 (39 & 40 Vict. c. 54), s. 5; Bishoprics Act, 1878 (41 & 42 Vict. c. 68), s. 5; Bishopric of Bristol Act, 1884 (47 & 48 Vict. c. 66), s. 2; Bishoprics of Southwark and Birmingham Act, 1904 (4 Edw. 7, c. 30), s. 1).

(e) Bishops Resignation Act, 1869 (32 & 33 Vict. c. 111), s. 2; and see title ECCLESIASTICAL LAW, Vol. XI., p. 407.

(f) The writ of summons does not issue from the Crown Office until a declaration (made by someone acting on behalf of the bishop who is claiming a seat in the House of Lords, and declared before a commissioner for oaths) has been received by the Lord Chancellor. The declaration must state (1) the date of the consecration of the bishop; (2) the date of the letters patent by which the temporalities of his see were vested in the bishop, and (3) the dates of the 1075. The lords spiritual, who always wear their episcopal robes when they are present in the House of Lords, sit together on the benches immediately on the right of the woolsack (g), and, so far as the two archbishops and the bishops of London, Durham, and Winchester are concerned, adhere strictly to the seating which was settled by the Act "For placing of the Peers" (h).

1076. The lords spiritual, as lords of Parliament, are entitled to all the privileges of Parliament, but, as they are not ennobled in blood, they are not peers and consequently cannot claim "trial by nobility," which is the ancient right of the peers of England (i).

As members of the House of Lords, however, the lords spiritual have the right to be present whenever a peer is tried in full Parliament (k), and they are summoned with the lords temporal to attend any such trial (l), or to be present during the proceedings consequent upon an impeachment of any individual by the House of Commons (m).

But although the lords spiritual are thus present as judges throughout the course of the trial of a peer or of the proceedings upon an impeachment, their position is a peculiar one, for they are forbidden by the canons of the Church to vote in cases of blood, and consequently it is not customary for them to take part in any judgment of the House. When the time arrives for the House to pronounce sentence in any case, the senior lord spiritual present desires the leave of the House for himself and the other lords spiritual to be absent when judgment is given, at the same time "saving to themselves and their successors, all such right in the judicature as they have by law, and of right ought to have" (n).

SECT. 1.
Composition.

Places in the House of lords spiritual.

Privileges of lords spiritual.

death and burial of the previous lord spiritual, a certificate of whose burial must also be furnished. When a bishop, who is already a lord of Parliament, is translated to some other see, he must claim that a new writ of summons may be issued to him, and he must be introduced again into the House of Lords.

(g) A spiritual lord, unless he is a privy councillor, when he is entitled to stand at the table to address the House, must speak from the bishops' benches, but no temporal peer may address the House from these benches; see Companion to the Standing Orders of the House of Lords on Public Business, 1909, p. 50.

(h) Stat. (1539) 31 Hen. 8, c. 10, s. 3. The Archbishop of Canterbury sits in the corner seat immediately above the gangway, between the bishop's benches and the bench occupied by the members of the Government; next to him, "on the same form and side," the Archbishop of York. As to the places of the bishops, see title ECCLESIASTICAL LAW, Vol. XI., p. 404. As to the precedence of the archbishops and bishops, see ibid., pp. 387, 388, 404, 405; title PEERAGES AND DIGNITIES.

(i) Standing Orders of the House of Lords (Public Business), 1902, Nos. 72 73; see p. 653, post; and see title PEERAGES AND DIGNITIES.

(k) For crimes for which a peer is tried by his peers in Parliament or in the Court of the Lord High Steward, and for the procedure upon the trial of a peer whilst Parliament is sitting, see pp. 651—653, post; and see p. 785, post.

(l) The lords spiritual are not summoned to attend the trial of a peer when it takes place in the Court of the Lord High Steward, i.e., when Parliament is not sitting.

(m) For the procedure with regard to an impeachment, see pp. 650 et seq., post.

(n) See the protestation made by the Archbishop of York (Dr. Maclagan) upon the occasion of the trial of Earl Russell, 18th July, 1901, Journals of the House of Lords, Vol. CXXXIII., p. 290.

SECT. 1.

Composition.

Prayers in the House.

1077. It is customary for one of the lords spiritual to read prayers in the House at the beginning of each day's proceedings, and, in the event of the House attending a service in Westminster Abbey, one of the lords spiritual, usually the junior bishop sitting in the House, is requested to preach before the House (o).

SUB-SECT. 3.—Lords Temporal.(i.) In General.

The lords temporal.

1078. The lords temporal include (1) all the hereditary peers of the United Kingdom (p); (2) certain hereditary peers of Scotland and Ireland, who are elected to represent in Parliament the peerages of those two countries (q); and (3) the Lords of Appeal in Ordinary, who are peers for life (r).

(ii.) Hereditary Peers of the United Kingdom.

Mode of creation.

1079. Hereditary peers of the United Kingdom are created by the Crown by the exercise of the Royal Prerogative, and no limit is fixed by statute or otherwise to the number of such peers who may be created. Such peers are ennobled in blood (s), and their dignities can only be lost by attainder or taken away by Act of Parliament (t).

Right to receive writ of summons.

1080. Any person, unless he is an alien (a) or an undischarged bankrupt (b), who succeeds to a peerage of the United Kingdom and

(o) The thanks of the House are given to the preacher on motion, and he is desired to cause his sermon to be printed and published. It has been customary for the House to attend the service in Westminster Abbey, if it sits to transact business on a general fast or thanksgiving day. For the order of proceedings on such an occasion, see Companion to the Standing Orders of the House of Lords on Public Business, pp. 121—123.

(p) At the time of the Union between England and Scotland, all the adult peers of England were entitled to receive writs of summons to the House of Lords. By the Union with Scotland Act, 1706 (6 Anne, c. 11), all the peers of England and Scotland became peers of Great Britain; but such of the peers of Great Britain as were such only as being peers of Scotland did not become hereditary lords of Parliament. By the Union with Ireland Act, 1800 (39 & 40 Geo. 3, c. 67), the peers of Ireland did not become lords of Parliament, but it was provided that all peerages both of Great Britain and Ireland then in existence, or subsequently to be created, should in all other respects be considered as peerages of the United Kingdom.

(q) See pp. 625, 626, post.

(r) See p. 628, post.

(s) See May, Parliamentary Practice, 11th ed., pp. 13, 14; First Report on the Dignity of a Peer of the Realm, 25th May, 1820, p. 393.

(t) See title PEERAGES AND DIGNITIES.

(a) The Crown is prevented, by a provision contained in the Act of Settlement (12 & 13 Will. 3, c. 2), s. 3, from issuing a writ of summons to any peer who is an alien, but this rule does not apply to an alien who has been naturalised by a special Act of Parliament or to whom a certificate of naturalisation has been granted by the Secretary of State, for such a person is entitled to all political and other rights, powers, and privileges within the United Kingdom to which he would be entitled if he were a natural-born British subject (Naturalization Act, 1870 (33 & 34 Vict. c. 14), s. 7); see May, Parliamentary Practice, 11th ed., pp. 28, 29; title ALIENS, Vol. I., p. 314.

(b) A peer who has been adjudged a bankrupt is disqualified for sitting or voting in the House of Lords, or on any committee thereof, or for being elected as a representative peer of Scotland or Ireland (Bankruptcy Act, 1883 (46 & 47 Vict. c. 52), s. 32); see title BANKRUPTCY AND INSOLVENCY, Vol. II., p. 88, proves his right to such peerage (c), and any person who is created (d) a peer of the United Kingdom, or any peer of the United Kingdom who is advanced to a higher dignity in the peerage of the United Kingdom, is entitled, if he has reached the age of twenty-one years (e), to receive, in virtue of such peerage, a writ of summons to sit and vote in the House of Lords.

note (s). If any peer, who has been adjudged a bankrupt, sits or votes, or attempts (while he is still a bankrupt) to sit or vote, in the House of Lords, or on any committee thereof, he is guilty of a breach of privilege and may be dealt with as the House directs (Bankruptcy Disqualification Act, 1871 (34 & 35 Vict. c. 50), s. 6). A peer is deemed to have become a bankrupt, in England, when an order has been made adjudging him a bankrupt; in Scotland, when, on any petition for sequestration, a deliverance has been pronounced awarding sequestration of his estate; and, in Ireland, when, on any petition of bankruptcy, he has been adjudged by the Court of Bankruptcy and Insolvency in Ireland to be a bankrupt, or when he has filed a petition for an arrangement with his creditors under the superintendence of that court (ibid., s. 3; Bankruptcy Act, 1883 (46 & 47 Vict. c. 52), s. 32 (1)). The seat of a representative peer of Scotland or Ireland (see pp. 625, 626, post), unless his bankruptcy is determined within one year, is vacated at the end of the year, and a new election is held to fill the vacancy (Bankruptcy Disqualification Act, 1871 (34 & 35 Vict. c. 50), s. 5). When a peer becomes bankrupt, the court which has jurisdiction in respect of such bankruptcy causes the fact to be certified to the Speaker of the House of Lords, who informs the House that he has received such certificate. The certificate is entered in the Journals of the House (ibid., s. 7). A writ of summons to Parliament is not sent to a peer so long as he is disqualified by reason of bankruptcy (ibid., s. 8); but, when the adjudication of bankruptcy against him is annulled, or when he obtains from the court his discharge, with a certificate to the effect that his bankruptcy was caused by misfortune without any misconduct on his part, he is again entitled to receive a writ of summons to the House of Lords (Bankruptcy Act, 1883 (46 & 47 Vict. c. 52), s. 32). The termination of a peer's bankruptcy is made known to the House in the same way as his bankruptcy was notified to it.

(c) When the eldest son of a deceased peer succeeds his father in the title the following evidence must be supplied to the Lord Chancellor before a writ of summons is issued from the Crown Office, namely: (1) certificates of the marriage and of the death or burial of the late peer; (2) certificate of the birth of the claimant; (3) certificate by the Clerk of the Parliaments that the late peer took his seat (this certificate can be obtained on application at the Journal Office of the House of Lords); and (4) production of the letters patent. A statutory declaration identifying the persons named in the certificates, making the certificates exhibits to declaration, and stating that the claimant is heir to the peerage, must also be made by a near relative and supplied to the Lord Chancellor. In any case in which the claimant to a peerage is not the eldest son of the deceased peer, further evidence may be required, and the declaration should refer to such certificates as may be produced, or supply the necessary evidence if certificates cannot be produced. If the Lord Chancellor is not satisfied as to the evidence of the succession to a peerage, the matter is referred to the Committee for Privileges (see p. 641, post); see evidence of the Clerk of the Crown in Chancery before the Select Committee of the House of Commons on House of Commons (Vacating of Seats), House of Commons Paper, 278, 1894, pp. 18—25.

(d) At the present time an hereditary peer of the United Kingdom is invariably created by letters patent under the Great Seal, by the terms of which a right is conferred upon him and his heirs and successors to "have the name, state, degree, style, dignity, title and honour" of a peer, and to "have, hold and possess a seat, place and voice" in Parliament; see title PEERAGES AND DIGNITIES.

(e) Standing Orders of the House of Lords (Public Business), 1902, Nos. 12, 13. The first of these Orders dates from 1685 and the second from 1663.

SECT. 1.

Composition.

Precedence and place in
House of Lords.

1081. The lords temporal are divided into dukes, marquesses, earls, viscounts, and barons (f), and a definite precedence and place in the House of Lords is assigned to each rank of the peerage (g). Except, however, upon the introduction of a peer (h), or when there is a call of the House (i), no attention is now paid to this order of seating. Peers who support the Government of the day sit on the spiritual side of the House (that is, on the benches below the bishops' benches on the right of the woolsack). Peers who are opposed to the Government sit on the temporal side of the House (that is, on the benches on the left of the woolsack), and peers who do not wish to be identified with any political party sit on the cross benches by the bar (j).

(iii.) Representative Peers of Scotland and Ireland.

(1) In General.

Privileges of representative
peers.

1082. The representative peers of Scotland and Ireland are entitled to all the privileges of Parliament which are enjoyed by the other lords temporal, and are summoned in the same manner as other peers to the trial of a peer in the Court of the Lord High Steward when Parliament is not sitting (k).

(f) See, title PEERAGES AND DIGNITIES.

(g) The order in which the peers were to sit in the House of Lords was first settled by stat. (1539) 31 Hen. 8, c. 10. This statute, after assigning definite places in the House of Lords to peers when holding great offices of state, directed that the peers of each degree were to "sit and be placed after their ancients." At the present time the Lord Chancellor, the Lord President of the Council, and the Lord Privy Seal, if they are peers, take precedence of all dukes, except those of the blood royal; and the Lord Steward and the Lord Chamberlain of His Majesty's household take precedence of all peers of their degree; and see, further, title PEERAGES AND DIGNITIES.

(h) For the proceedings upon the introduction of a newly-created peer, see pp. 689 et seq., post.

(i) When the House appoints a select committee, the lords appointed to serve upon it are named in the order of their rank, beginning with the highest. In the same way, when the House sends managers to a conference with the Commons, the names of the lords who are chosen are called over in order of seniority. When, however, the whole House is called over for any purpose within the House, or for the purpose of forming a procession outside the House, the call begins invariably with the name of the junior baron; and see pp. 652, 654, note (k), post.

(j) An official record is kept of the peers who attend the sittings of the House and is entered in the Journals. At the present time, no action is usually taken to enforce the attendance of peers, but formerly the House used, if it thought fit, to order the peers to be summoned, and peers who did not obey the summons might be fined or imprisoned; see Journals of the House of Lords, 1820, Vol. LIII., p. 364.

(k) Union with Scotland Act, 1706 (6 Anne, c. 11), art. 23; Union with Ireland Act, 1800 (39 & 40 Geo. 3, c. 67), art. 4. Peers of Scotland and peers of Ireland (not being members of the House of Commons) who are not lords of Parliament have the right to be tried by their peers and all other privileges of the peerage, except the right to sit in the House of Lords and the privileges depending thereon, and the right to take part in the trial of a peer. Peers of Scotland whose peerages were in existence at the time of the Union have precedence immediately after the peers of the like orders and degrees in England at that date and before all peers of Great Britain of the like orders and degrees created subsequently. Peers of Ireland whose peerages were in existence at the time of the Union with England have rank and 1083. No peer of Scotland can be elected a member of the House of Commons, but a peer of Ireland, unless he has been previously elected to sit in the House of Lords, may submit himself as a candidate for any county, city, or borough in Great Britain. If, however, he is elected to sit in the House of Commons, he is no longer entitled to his privileges as a peer, nor may he be elected as a representative peer of Ireland or vote at an election of such peer (l).

SECT. 1.
Composition.

Capacity of Irish peers to sit in House of Commons.

(2) Representative Peers of Scotland.

1084. Sixteen of their number, who must be of full age, are elected by the hereditary peers of Scotland to represent them as lords of Parliament in the House of Lords for the duration of each Parliament (m).

Number of representative peers of Scotland.

1085. Every peer of Scotland who holds a peerage which was in existence at the date of the Act of Union, or who can prove his title to such peerage to the satisfaction of the House of Lords, has the right to vote (n) at the election of the representative peers of Scotland.

Qualification to vote at election of representative peers of Scotland.

An authentic list of the peerage of Scotland, as it existed on the 1st May, 1707 (o), was returned to the House of Lords by the Lord Clerk Register of Scotland, pursuant to an order of the House of the 22nd December, 1707, and was entered into the roll of peers by an order of the House of the 12th February, 1708 (p). This list is called over whenever an election takes place, but a title for which no vote has been recorded since the year 1800 may not be called over until a direction with regard to it has been received from the House of Lords (q).

Roll of the Scottish peerage.

1086. The election of the sixteen representative peers of Scotland takes place at a meeting of the Scottish peers held at Holyrood Palace, presided over by the Lord Clerk Register of Scotland, and precedence next and immediately after all persons holding peerages of the like orders and degrees in Great Britain subsisting at the time of the Union. Persons who have been created Irish peers since the Union take precedence as if they had been created peers of the United Kingdom (Union with Ireland Act, 1800 (39 & 40 Geo. 3, c. 67), art. 4).

Mode of election of representative peers of Scotland.

(l) Ibid.

(m) Union with Scotland Act, 1706 (6 Anne, c. 11), art. 22. As to the effect of bankruptcy, see note (b), pp. 622, 623, ante. No Scottish peer may vote at the election of, or be elected, a representative peer who has twice within one year attended Divine Service in any Episcopal place of worship when the King (by name) as well as his heirs or successors and the Royal Family have not been prayed for (Scottish Episcopalians Relief Act, 1792 (32 Geo. 3, c. 63), s. 12; Pike, Constitutional History of the House of Lords, p. 276).

(n) See note (m), supra.

(o) The Roll of the Union is printed in Burke's Peerage; and see title PEERAGES AND DIGNITIES.

(p) Journals of the House of Lords, 1707, 1708, Vol. XVIII., pp. 399, 458.

(q) Representative Peers (Scotland) Act, 1847 (10 & 11 Vict. c. 52), ss. 1, 2. It was further provided by the Representative Peers (Scotland) Act, 1851 (14 & 15 Vict. c. 87), s. 4, that after every meeting of the peers of Scotland assembled for the election of a representative peer, the Lord Clerk Register of Scotland, or the Clerk of Session officiating at such election, should transmit to the Clerk of the Parliaments a list of the titles of any peerages called over at such election for which no vote has been received for fifty years then last past.

SECT. 1.
Composition.

convened by virtue of a Royal proclamation under the Great Seal, which must issue twenty-five days at least before such election takes place.

Voting by proxy is allowed at the election of a representative peer of Scotland, and, therefore, any peer who is unable to be present at the meeting is entitled to send a signed list containing the names of the peers for whom he records his vote, and such list is produced by a peer who is present at the meeting (r).

As soon as the election has been completed, the Lord Clerk Register of Scotland sends a certificate containing the names of the elected peers to the Clerk of the Crown in Chancery, who must deliver it in at the table of the House of Lords on the first day of the first session of the new Parliament (s).

Filling of vacancies among representative peers of Scotland.

1087. In the event of a representative peer of Scotland dying or becoming legally incapable to sit as a lord of Parliament during the course of the Parliament for which he has been elected, another Scottish peer is elected to fill the vacancy. A certificate signed by two other of the representative Scottish peers or by two peers who have voted at an election of the representative peers of Scotland is sufficient evidence of the death or legal incapacity of a representative peer (t). As soon as such a certificate has been received, a proclamation under the Great Seal is issued for the election of a new representative peer (u).

(3) Representative Peers of Ireland.

Number of representative peers of Ireland.

1088. Twenty-eight of their number are elected by the hereditary peers of Ireland (v) to represent them in the House of Lords, and every peer so elected is entitled to receive a writ of summons to Parliament and to sit in the House of Lords for life (w).

Mode of election of representative peers of Ireland.

1089. Whenever a vacancy occurs amongst the representative peers of Ireland by reason of the death or attainder of one of their number, the Lord Chancellor, upon receiving a certificate, under the hand and seal of two peers of the United Kingdom, of the decease of the peer, or on view of the record of his attainder, directs a writ to be issued under the Great Seal to the Lord Chancellor of (r) The minutes of the meeting of Scottish peers, and a return of the names called over at the meeting, is sent by the Lord Clerk Register of Scotland to the Clerk of the Parliaments, and is ordered by the House of Lords to be printed; see Journals of the House of Lords, 1910, Vol. CXLII., p. 11.

(s) Standing Orders of the House of Lords (Public Business), 1902, No. 2.

(t) Union with Scotland Act, 1706 (6 Anne, c. 11), s. 6; Representative Peers (Scotland) Act, 1851 (14 & 15 Vict. c. 87), s. 1. The death or legal incapacity of a peer is to be certified to the Sovereign.

(u) No vacancy is caused amongst the representative peers of Scotland or Ireland when one of their number is created a peer of the United Kingdom; see May, Parliamentary Practice, 11th ed., p. 11.

(v) As to such hereditary peers and the statutory limitation on new creations, see title CONSTITUTIONAL LAW, Vol. VI., p. 456. There are at the present time eighty-six peers of Ireland who are not hereditary lords of Parliament. Only one peerage of Ireland has been created since 1877; see May, Parliamentary Practice, 11th ed., p. 12, n.

(w) Union with Ireland Act, 1800 (39 & 40 Geo. 3, c. 67), art. 4.

SECT. 1.
Composition.

Ireland directing him to cause writs to be issued to all the temporal peers of Ireland authorising them to vote for the election of a new representative peer (a). In obedience to this direction, a writ, together with a form of return, on which there is a blank space for the insertion of the name of the peer elected, is sent by the Clerk of the Crown and Hanaper in Ireland to every peer of Ireland who has proved his right to vote (b).

Every such writ and form of return must be sent back to the Crown Office of Ireland within thirty days of the teste of the writ, and, immediately after the return day of the writs, the name of the elected peer is published in the London and Dublin Gazettes. The writs and returns, with the certificates of the Clerk of the Crown and Hanaper in Ireland annexed thereto, are delivered on oath by that official at the bar of the House of Lords (c).

1090. In the case of an equality of voting at the election of an Irish representative peer, the names of the peers who have received an equal number of votes are delivered on oath by the Clerk of the Crown and Hanaper in Ireland at the bar of the House of Lords. The names of such peers are then written on pieces of paper of similar form and are put into a glass by the Clerk of the Parliaments whilst the House is sitting, and the peer whose name is first drawn out of the glass is declared to be duly elected (d).

Procedure adopted in case of equality of voting.

(a) A person who claims the right to vote at the election of a representative peer of Ireland by virtue of any peerage of Ireland must present a petition to the House of Lords, signed by himself or by some person on his behalf, claiming such right. In this petition the claimant must state the manner in which he derives his title to the peerage in question and must pray the House to acknowledge such right. A petition of this kind is referred by the House to the Lord Chancellor for him to consider and report upon. If the Lord Chancellor is satisfied that the claimant has proved his right to the peerage in question and is thereby entitled to vote, he reports accordingly to the House, and the Clerk of the Parliaments then transmits to the Clerk of the Crown and Hanaper in Ireland a copy of the resolution by which the House admits the claimant's right to vote at the elections of peers of Ireland to sit in the Parliament of the United Kingdom. If, however, the Lord Chancellor is not satisfied as to the claimant's right to vote, he reports to this effect to the House, and the matter is then referred to the Committee for Privileges; see Standing Orders of the House of Lords (Public Business), 1902, Nos. 90, 92, 93. As to this committee see p. 641, post.

(b) No peer of Ireland may make a return to such writ unless he has taken the oath and signed the declaration which is required to be taken and signed by every lord of Parliament before he takes his seat in the House of Lords. Such oath and declaration may be taken and subscribed in the Court of Chancery in Ireland or before one of His Majesty's justices of the peace in Ireland (Union with Ireland Act, 1800 (39 & 40 Geo. 3, c. 67), art. 8 (2)). It was decided, in the case of Lord Curzon of Kedleston, that an Irish peer who had not established his claim to vote at the election of an Irish peer might himself be elected to sit as a lord of Parliament; see Journals of the House of Lords, 1908, Vol. CXL., pp. 5, 6, 19. As to right of Irish peers to sit in the House of Commons, see p. 625, ante. As to the effect of bankruptcy, see note (b), pp. 622, 623, ante.

(c) This is done the first day of a new Parliament in the case of an election occurring since the dissolution of the preceding Parliament.

(d) This procedure was adopted in 1908, when Lord Farnham and Lord Ashtown each had received the same number of votes; see Journals of the House of Lords, 1908, Vol. CXL., p. 381.

SECT. 1.

(iv.) *Lords of Appeal in Ordinary.Composition.

Appointment of lords of appeal in ordinary.

Duration of peerage of a lord of appeal in ordinary.

1091. Four Lords of Appeal in Ordinary are appointed by the Crown to assist the House of Lords in the hearing and determination of appeals (e). They hold office during good behaviour and can only be removed from office on the address of both Houses of Parliament (f).

1092. A Lord of Appeal in Ordinary is created a baron for life by letters patent (g), and, if he resigns his office, is still entitled to receive a writ of summons to sit and vote in the House of Lords (h). If he vacates his office by death, resignation, or otherwise, the Crown may appoint a duly qualified person to succeed him.

SECT. 2.—*Procedure and Conduct of Business.*SUB-SECT. 1.—In General.

Conduct of business.

1093. The business of the House of Lords is transacted (1) in the House itself; (2) in committee of the whole House; (3) in select committees; (4) in sessional committees which are appointed at the beginning of every session to perform certain definite duties connected with the business, administration or procedure of the House (i); (5) in private Bill committees; and (6) in joint committees of the two Houses.

The conduct of business in the House of Lords and the procedure of the House in general is regulated by its Standing Orders on public, private, and judicial business, by a series of resolutions and orders which have been agreed to from time to time, and by the established practice of the House.

SUB-SECT. 2.—Business Transacted in the House itself.

Stages of Bills and other matters considered in the House.

1094. The first, second, and third readings of all Bills take place in the House itself, and all amendments which have been made to any Bill either in committee of the whole House or in any other committee (k), and all reports from select committees, are submitted to the consideration of the House.

Any question which is addressed by a member of the House to a Minister of the Crown, or to any other peer, is asked in the House itself. As a general rule also every motion on which the Lords are called upon to express their opinion with regard to any (e) Appellate Jurisdiction Act, 1876 (39 & 40 Vict. c. 59), ss. 6, 14. As to such appeals, see pp. 643 et seq., post.

(f) Appellate Jurisdiction Act, 1876 (39 & 40 Vict. c. 59), s. 6. For the legal qualifications etc. of persons who may be created Lords of Appeal in Ordinary, see title COURTS, Vol. IX., p. 23.

(g) By the terms of the letters patent a Lord of Appeal in Ordinary is created a baron "to hold the said style of Baron — aforesaid, unto him the said — during his life"; see Journals of the House of Lords, 1910, Vol. CXLII., p. 272. In precedence a Lord of Appeal in Ordinary ranks according to the seniority of his barony, and, although his dignity does not descend to his heir, his wife and children enjoy the precedence of a baron's wife and children by virtue of Royal warrants of the 22nd December, 1876, and the 30th March, 1898.

(h) Appellate Jurisdiction Act, 1887 (50 & 51 Vict. c. 70), s. 2.

(i) For a list of such committees, see pp. 641, 642 et seq., post.

(k) In the case of a public Bill (see p. 702, post), or of a provisional order matter which is thus brought to their notice is made in the House, but it is open to any peer to move that the House do resolve itself into a committee of the whole House to consider a resolution or series of resolutions upon any subject with regard to which it is thought desirable that there should be more detailed discussion than would be possible under the rules of debate which prevail in the House itself (l).

SECT. 2.
Procedure
and Conduct
of Business.

SUB-SECT. 3.—Officers of the House.

(i.) The Lord Speaker.

1095. The Lord Chancellor, or the Lord Keeper of the Great Seal for the time being, is speaker of the House of Lords ex officio (m). He sits on the woolsack and presides over the deliberations of the House, except when it is in committee. He puts the question on all motions which are submitted to the House, but he has no power either to maintain order, or to act in any way as the representative or mouthpiece of the House, unless the House confers the necessary authority upon him (n).

Duties of the Lord Speaker.

1096. The Lord Chancellor is invariably an important member of the Government of the day (o). His position consequently is different from that of the Speaker of the House of Commons (p), for necessarily he takes an active part in the proceedings of the House, even when he is presiding over it as its Speaker. When he intervenes in its debates, however, he always speaks in his capacity as a peer, and, to emphasise this fact, he moves away from the woolsack and stands a few feet on the left hand side of it whilst addressing the House (q).

Contrast between the position of the Lord Chancellor and the Speaker of the House of Commons.

1097. Several lords are usually appointed by the Crown by commission under the Great Seal to act as Speakers of the House of Lords in the absence of the Lord Chancellor (r). In the event of

Temporary
Speakers.

confirmation Bill (see p. 703, post), amendments which have been made in a select committee (see pp. 637, 715, post), or in a committee of the whole House, are considered by the House on report (see p. 716, post); in the case of a private Bill (see p. 750, post), amendments which have been made by the committee on the Bill are considered on third reading (see p. 756, post).

(l) E.g., the House has resolved itself into a committee to consider the best means of reforming its existing organisation etc.; see Journals of the House of Lords, 1910, Vol. CXLII., pp. 55, 58, 59, 63. For procedure in committee of the whole House, see, further, p. 708, post.

(m) Standing Orders of the House of Lords (Public Business), 1902, No. 5. The woolsack is considered to be outside the limits of the House, and, therefore, the Lord Chancellor, or any other person who is appointed by the Crown to act as speaker, may preside over the House of Lords and put the question without being a peer; but, if he is not a peer, he may not vote or take any part in the debates of the House; see Journals of the House of Lords, 1858, Vol. XC., p. 69.

(n) Standing Orders of the House of Lords (Public Business), 1902, No. 20.

(o) For the judicial and political duties of the Lord Chancellor, and the general nature of his office, see titles CONSTITUTIONAL LAW, Vol. VII., pp. 55—64; COURTS, Vol. IX., p. 23.

(p) See pp. 663, 664, post.

(q) When the Lord Chancellor, or any other peer who is sitting as Lord Speaker, takes part in a division (see p. 633, post), he does not leave the woolsack, but gives his vote to the tellers in the House. The same rule applies in the case of the Chairman (see p. 630, post) when the House is in committee.

(r) See Journals of the House of Lords, 1909, Vol. CXLI., p. 65.

SECT. 2.
Procedure
 and Conduct
 of Business.

Chairman of
 Committees.

none of these lords being present, the House may appoint its own Speaker (a).

(ii.) The Chairman of Committees.

1098. At the beginning of every session, or whenever a vacancy occurs in the office, a lord is appointed to fill the office of Chairman of Committees throughout the session (b). The peer who is chosen to hold this office takes the chair in all committees of the whole House, and is also chairman ex-officio of all other committees of the House on private Bills and other matters, unless the House otherwise directs (c). The Chairman of Committees is also the first of the Deputy Speakers, appointed by commission, and, if he is present in the House when the Lord Chancellor is absent, always presides over the House (d).

Absence of
 Chairman of
 Committees.

1099. There is no Deputy Chairman of Committees in the House of Lords, but, in the event of the absence of the Chairman of Committees owing to illness or any other cause, some other peer is appointed by the House to perform his duties, usually upon the motion of the leader of the House (e).

(iii.) Permanent Officers.

Officers in attendance upon the House.

1100. The principal permanent officers of the House of Lords are the Clerk of the Parliaments, the Clerk Assistant of the Parliaments, and the Reading Clerk, who sit at the table during the sittings of the House, and the Gentleman Usher of the Black Rod, and the Serjeant-at-Arms, who also are present whilst the House is sitting.

Clerk of the Parliaments and other clerks.

1101. The Clerk of the Parliaments is the head of the permanent staff of the House of Lords (f). He is appointed under letters patent by the Crown. He must exercise the duties of his office in person and can be removed from office by the Sovereign upon an address of the House of Lords for that purpose (g).

(a) Standing Orders of the House of Lords (Public Business), 1902, No. 5; see Journals of the House of Lords, 1894, Vol. CXXXV., p. 567.

(b) The Chairman of Committees receives a salary of £2,500 a year, and, in addition to his duties in the House, exercises an important supervision and control over all provisional order confirmation Bills and private Bills (see pp. 743, 750 et seq., post). In this work he has the assistance of a legal adviser, who is known as the Counsel to the Chairman of Committees; see note (v), p. 750, post.

(c) When the name of more than one candidate for the office is proposed, the choice of the House is decided by means of a division; see Journals of the House of Lords, 1886, Vol. CXVIII., pp. 180, 181.

(d) The precedence of each of the other Deputy-Speakers is decided by the date of the commission appointing him.

(e) See Journals of the House of Lords, 1906, Vol. CXXXVIII., p. 335.

(f) The office of the Clerk of the Parliaments is divided into five departments, namely, the Committee Office, the Judicial Office, the Public Bill Office, the Private Bill Office, and the Journal Office. According to an arrangement arrived at in 1894, there are seventeen clerks on the establishment; see First Report from the House of Lords Offices Committee, Journals of the House of Lords, 1894, Vol. CXXXVI., pp. 116—122. The clerks in the Parliament Office are appointed on the nomination of the Clerk of the Parliaments, and are removable by him at pleasure (Clerk of Parliaments Act, 1824 (5 Geo. 4, c. 82), s. 5).

(g) Clerk of the Parliaments Act, 1824 (5 Geo. 4, c. 82), s. 2. The House is informed by the Lord Chancellor of the appointment of a new Clerk of the Parliaments, and the letters patent are read at the table of the House. After

The Clerk Assistant and the Reading Clerk are appointed by the Lord Chancellor, subject to the approbation of the House of Lords, and, when so appointed and approved, can be removed from office only by order of the House (h).

SECT. 2.
Procedure
and Conduct
of Business.

1102. The Gentleman Usher of the Black Rod and the Serjeant-at-Arms are appointed by the Crown (i). In addition to his duties connected with the carrying out of the orders of the House with regard to the commitment of offenders for contempt (j), the Gentleman Usher or his deputy, the Yeoman Usher, is present whenever the House sits; supervises the admission of strangers and acts as the messenger of the House whenever the attendance of the Commons is required. He also is present with the other great officers at the introduction of a new peer (k). The Serjeant-at-Arms has no duties in the House itself except to attend upon the Lord Chancellor or the person who is acting as Speaker of the House for the time being. He executes the orders of the House for the attachment of offenders when they are in the country (l).

Gentleman Usher of the Black Rod, and Serjeant-at-Arms.

SUB-SECT. 4.—Journals of the House.

1103. The Journals of the House of Lords, which have always been held to be public records (m), are compiled in the Journal Office (n) from the manuscript minutes and notes of proceedings made by the clerks at the table during the sittings of the House (o).

Journals of
the House.

which, the newly-appointed Clerk of the Parliaments, standing at the table, makes a declaration of allegiance to the Sovereign, and promises to carry out the duties of his office; see Journals of the House of Lords, 1886, Vol. CXVIII., p. 6. In addition to his duties connected with the judicial work of the House (for which see title COURTS, Vol. IX., p. 24), the Clerk of the Parliaments is required to make true entries and records of the things passed in the House and "to keep secret also such matters as shall be treated therein." With the assistance of the Clerk Assistant, he prepares the official Minutes of the Proceedings of the House; he signs all orders and other official communications; he is the custodian of the records and manuscripts preserved at the House; he indorses all Bills which are sent to the House of Commons, and conveys messages between the two Houses; and gives the Royal Assent to all Bills which have been passed.

(h) Clerk of Parliaments Act, 1824 (5 Geo. 4, c. 82), s. 3; Standing Orders of the House of Lords (Public Business), 1902, No. 62. For the procedure with regard to the appointment of a Clerk Assistant, see Journals of the House of Lords, 1890, Vol. CXXII., p. 31. The Reading Clerk reads aloud in the House all prorogation and other commissions, and the patents and writs of summons presented by newly created peers.

(i) The House is informed of the appointment of a new Gentleman Usher of the Black Rod by the Lord Great Chamberlain, who is the hereditary Officer of State to whom the custody and control of the Palace of Westminster is entrusted by the Crown; see Journals of the House of Lords, 1905, Vol. CXXXVII., p. 4.

(j) See title COURTS, Vol. IX., p. 24.

(k) See pp. 689, 690, post.

(l) See May, Parliamentary Practice, 11th ed., p. 199.

(m) Evidence Act, 1845 (8 & 9 Vict. c. 113), s. 3; see title EVIDENCE, Vol. XIII., p. 527.

(n) The Journals of the House of Lords date from 1509. When they are required as evidence in any court, a copy of the passage in question, authenticated by the signature of the Clerk of the Parliaments, may be produced; see May, Parliamentary Practice, 11th ed., p. 202, and see title EVIDENCE, Vol. XIII., p. 527. As to the Journal Office, see note (f), p. 630, ante.

(o) The House, on motion made, may order an entry in the Journals to be

SECT. 2.
Procedure
 and Conduct
 of Business.

Minutes of Proceedings.

The Journal of each session is printed and laid on the table of the House during the course of the following session (p).

SUB-SECT. 5.—Minutes of Proceedings.

1104. The Minutes of the Proceedings of the House, together with a list of the notices and orders of the day which have been put down for the future consideration of the House and a list of all Bills in progress, are drawn up, with the authority of the Clerk of the Parliaments, at the close of each day's sitting, and are printed. The Minutes of Proceedings are issued to all members of the House. The business for each day on which the House sits is also printed on a separate notice paper, which appears before the hour appointed for the House to meet.

SUB-SECT. 6.—Quorum.

Quorum of
 the House and of committee of the whole House.

1105. Three lords constitute a quorum of the House and also of a committee of the whole House, but if, when a division takes place upon any stage of a Bill, it appears that thirty lords are not present in the House, the Lord Chancellor, or, if the House is in committee, the Chairman of Committees, must declare the question to be not decided. The debate is then adjourned (q), and is resumed at the next sitting of the House at the point at which it stood when the division took place.

SUB-SECT. 7.—Notices and Orders of the Day.

Division of business transacted in
 the House.

1106. Business which is transacted in the House (r) is divided into public business and private business (s), and consists of notices and of orders of the day.

Precedence of
 public
 business.

1107. Any peer is entitled to give notice of his intention either to make a motion or to ask a question with regard to any subject.

On Tuesdays and Thursdays, unless the House otherwise orders, notices with regard to public Bills are always given precedence of other notices (t), but, on other days, all notices, whether they relate to proceedings upon public Bills or to other matters, are inserted in the Minutes of Proceedings, and appear upon the notice paper in the order in which they have been received by the authorities of the House.

Orders of the day.

1108. An order of the day is a definite matter, the consideration of which has been fixed by the House for a particular day. A motion, amended, vacated, or altogether expunged, and also may order any resolution, report, letter of thanks or other document to be entered in the Journals.

(p) In pursuance of an order of the 15th May, 1793; see Journals of the House of Lords, 1793, Vol. XXXIX., p. 759; see also p. 642, post.

(q) Standing Orders of the House of Lords (Public Business), 1902, No. 33; see also Journals of the House of Lords, 1889, Vol. CXXI., p. 293; 1900, Vol. CXXXII., p. 265; 1909, Vol. CXLI., p. 210.

(r) See p. 628, ante.

(s) Private business includes the consideration of private Bills and provisional order confirmation Bills (see pp. 727 et seq., 744 et seq., post) and of the standing orders of the House which refer to them.

(t) But a petition relating to any such Bill may be presented immediately before the motion is made to proceed with the consideration of the Bill.

therefore, becomes an order of the day whenever the debate arising upon it has been adjourned by the House to a particular day.

1109. No motion, except the motion which is made for an address in reply to a Speech from the Throne, requires a seconder.

A motion may be opposed either by a direct negative, or by means of an amendment, or by moving the previous question (u).

After it has been submitted to the House, a motion may be withdrawn only by the permission of the House, which must be unanimous.

1110. Every matter with regard to which the House is called upon to give its decision is submitted to its judgment by means of a question from the woolsack, or from the chair if the House is in committee, upon a motion made by some member of the House (a).

SECT. 2.
Procedure
and Conduct
of Business.
Motions.

Matters decided on question.

SUB-SECT. 8.—Divisions.

1111. When the debate upon any question has been brought to a conclusion, the Lord Chancellor, or, if the House is in committee, the Chairman of Committees, proceeds to collect the voices, and announces his decision as to the preponderance of the "contents" or "not-contents" to the House or to the committee, as the case may be.

Procedure on a division.

If his decision is challenged, strangers are ordered to withdraw, and two lords are appointed tellers for each side (b). After the lapse of two minutes from the time when the question was put, the doors of the house are locked and the question is again put. If the challenge is repeated, a division takes place (c). The contents pass into the division lobby by the door on the right of the throne, the (u) In each House the previous question is a method which may be employed to prevent a vote being taken forthwith on a motion that has already been proposed from the woolsack or the chair, as the case may be. The effect of moving the previous question is that a new motion is submitted to the House which compels it to decide, in the first instance, whether or not the original motion is to be voted upon at all before it can determine upon its merits; see May, Parliamentary Practice, 11th ed., pp. 282—284. In the House of Lords the previous question is put in the following manner, namely:—"The original motion was —." "Since this it has been moved that the previous question be put." "The question, therefore, which I have to put to your lordships is, Whether the said original question be now put?" If this question is decided in the affirmative, the original question is put, but, if it is decided in the negative, the original question may not be then proceeded with. In the House of Commons, since the introduction of the closure, the previous question has been put in the form "That the question be not now put?" The previous question may not be moved in committee of the whole House or in a select committee, and in the House itself it may only be moved on a motion and not on an amendment to a motion.

(a) By a standing order, made by the House in 1908, every motion, after it has been moved, must be proposed from the woolsack or the chair before debate arises thereon; see Journals of the House of Lords, 1908, Vol. CXXXIX., p. 217.

(b) Standing Orders of the House of Lords (Public Business), 1902, No. 32. The House and side lobbies are cleared of strangers, but the galleries and the space within the railing round the throne are not cleared, unless a special order is made by the House.

(c) The vote of no peer may be counted unless the peer was present in the House when the question was put.

SECT. 2.
Procedure
 and Conduct
 of Business.

not-contents by the door on the left of the bar. As soon as all the peers who are present have passed through the lobbies (d) and re-entered the House, the result of the division is announced by the Lord Chancellor, or the Chairman of Committees, as the case may be, after which the doors of the House are unlocked and strangers are re-admitted (e). If the same number of votes are recorded on each side in a division, the question is decided in the negative, according to the rule, "Semper præsumitur pro negante" (f), for neither the Lord Chancellor nor the Chairman of Committees has a casting vote.

SUB-SECT. 9.—Protests.

Right to protest.

1112. In addition to voting against any motion, any lord has the right to record his dissent by means of a written protest, in which it is open to him to set out his reasons for objecting to any decision which has been arrived at by the House (g). Every such protest is entered in a book which is kept for that purpose.

According to the usage of the House no lord may enter a protest, or sign such protest, unless he was actually present when the question was put on the motion to which he takes exception, and, if a division took place upon it, voted in such division; a motion, however, may be made in the House to remove this restriction (h).

(d) By the leave of the House a peer is sometimes allowed to give his vote without quitting the House; see Journals of the House of Lords, 1893, Vol. CXXV., p. 432. When proxies are called, the names of peers who vote by proxy and the manner of their voting is recorded by the clerks at the table. The practice of voting by proxy, however, has been practically abolished by Standing Orders of the House of Lords (Public Business), 1902, No. 34; see p. 786, post.

(e) The division lists are printed and circulated with the daily Minutes of Proceedings; see p. 632, ante. They are also printed in the Journals of the House.

(f) The object of this rule is to prevent any change being effected in the existing law or any motion or resolution being carried, unless there is a majority in favour of the change in the law or of the motion or resolution before the House. On motions on abstract resolutions, therefore, or for second readings and third readings of Bills, or for going into committee on Bills, on which the usual question is that the word "now" stand part of the motion (see pp. 707, 710, 719, post), whenever the voting is equal, the resolution is lost, or the Bill is not proceeded with, as the case may be. With regard to an amendment to a Bill or to a motion or resolution, the result of the application of this rule when the voting in a division is equal must depend upon the way in which the question is put to the House; see, with regard to this point, the discussion which arose in 1864 as to the manner in which the Lord Chancellor put the question on the report of the amendments to the Public and Refreshment Houses (Metropolis) Bill; Parliamentary Debates, Third Series, Vol. CLXXVI., pp. 1315—1317; see also report from the Select Committee of the House of Lords on the Standing Orders of the House, 1907, House of Lords Paper (95). Since 1509 there appear to have been only 29 cases of equality of voting in the ordinary proceedings of the House; in only 9 of these could any difference of opinion have arisen owing to the method of putting the question.

(g) Standing Orders of the House of Lords (Public Business), 1902, No. 35. This order states that a protest must be entered, in the book kept for the purpose, before two o'clock the next day on which the House sits, but this rule is not enforced at the present time.

(h) The House has also given leave to a peer to remove his name from a protest which he has signed and to amend a protest after it has been entered on the Journals of the House; see Journals of the House of Lords, 1875, Vol. CVII., p. 255.

SECT. 3.—Sittings of the House.

1113. The House of Lords usually sits for business other than judicial business on Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday in each week throughout the course of the session, but there is no standing order or rule to prevent it from meeting, should occasion require, on any other day of the week.

SECT. 3.
Sittings of
the House.

Days of sitting.

1114. The Lord Chancellor, preceded by the Serjeant-at-Arms carrying the mace, and an attendant carrying the purse, enters the House from below the bar and takes his seat on the woolsack at a quarter-past four o'clock (i). When the House has not met earlier in the day in its judicial capacity, the doors of the House are locked and prayers are read by one of the bishops (k). As soon as prayers are over, the doors of the House are opened and the business of the day begins.

Prayers.

1115. Between a quarter-past four and half-past four o'clock, public petitions may be presented to the House (l), and any business for which no previous notice is required, and any proceedings in connection with private Bills or for the suspension of the standing orders which refer to them (m), may be taken; after half-past four o'clock, the notices and orders of the day are considered in the order in which they appear upon the notice paper, but any notice to suspend the standing orders of the House must be considered first (n).

Order of
business.

1116. The adjournment of the House is effected by means of a motion which may be made by any peer at any time during the course of the sitting. If objection is taken to any such motion, the question is decided by a division.

Adjournment
of the House.

(i) When the House meets earlier in the day for judicial business, prayers are said before the counsel are brought in (see p. 649, post) and are not repeated in the afternoon. The mace and the purse are deposited on the woolsack behind the Lord Chancellor, and remain there throughout the sitting even when the House is in committee. Strangers are not allowed to be present in the House whilst prayers are read.

(k) In the absence of a bishop, prayers are usually read by the Lord Chancellor, but, if a peer in holy orders is present, he is requested to read them. Both Houses of Parliament use the same form of prayers; see May, Parliamentary Practice, 11th ed., p. 159, n.

(l) A peer who presents a petition may address the House upon it, if he wishes, but in such case he should give notice of his intention; and a member of the House of Lords may present a petition on his own behalf. Every petition which is presented to the House must bear the signature of the peer who presents it. No petition with regard to a Bill which is not before the House, or which has been rejected by the House, is received, nor will the House receive any petition for a grant of public money or for compounding a debt to the Crown unless it is recommended by the Crown. As to petitions on private Bills, see pp. 729, 747 et seq., post.

(m) A notice of a motion to amend a standing order with regard to private Bills, unless it is made by the Chairman of Committees, cannot be taken into consideration until half-past four o'clock.

(n) Unless the peer who has given any such notice withdraws the same, or, with the leave of the House, consents to its postponement, or is absent at the appointed time; see Standing Orders of the House of Lords (Public Business), 1902, No. 21. Notice is required for any motion to make a new standing order or to dispense with an existing one.

SECT. 3.
Sittings of
the House.

When the business upon the notice paper has been disposed of, or at any hour which may be determined upon in view of the business before the House (o), it is usual for the leader of the House, or, in the event of his absence, the leading member of the Government who is present, to move the adjournment, stating at the same time the day and hour of the next meeting. After this motion has been put from the woolsack and is agreed to by the House, the Lord Chancellor, preceded by the mace, leaves the House by the bar, and the sitting is at an end.

SECT. 4.—Maintenance of Order and Rules of Debate.

Questions of order determined by the
House.

1117. The Lords are the sole judges of their own procedure, and all questions with regard to the regulation of the proceedings of the House are settled by the House itself.

The rules as to the maintenance of order and the general conduct of debate are either laid down in the Standing Orders of the House or are sanctioned by usage (p).

Preservation of order.

1118. With regard to the actual preservation of order, the House up to the present time has had no occasion to add to, or even to amend, its two Standing Orders upon the subject, which date from the seventeenth century, and which have proved amply sufficient for the purpose for which they were intended. The first of these lays it down that "all personal, sharp, or taxing speeches" are to be forborne, and the second instructs any member of the House who conceives himself affronted or injured by any other member of the House, either in the House itself, or within its precincts, or in any of its committees, "to appeal to the Lords in Parliament for his reparation" (q).

Conduct of
debate.

1119. With regard to the conduct of debate, members of the House may speak upon any question which is before the House, or upon

(o) If a motion is agreed to for the adjournment of a debate upon any subject, or if, when the House is in committee, a motion is agreed to for the House to be resumed, the House may make an order, without notice given, that the business in question shall be taken first at the next sitting or at some subsequent sitting of the House; see Standing Orders of the House of Lords (Public Business), 1902, No. 22.

(p) By Standing Orders of the House of Lords (Public Business), 1902, No. 19, the peers are directed to keep their dignity and order in sitting as much as may be, and not to remove out of their places without just cause, to the disorder of the House. They are also directed when they cross the House to make obeisance to the Cloth of Estate, i.e., the Throne. At the present time this rule is not enforced, but it is out of order for a peer to wear his hat when entering or leaving the House. It is also irregular for a peer to pass between the woolsack or the chair and a member who is addressing the House, or between the woolsack and the table. By Standing Orders of the House of Lords (Public Business), 1902, No. 24, any lord who has occasion to speak with another lord while the House is sitting is directed to retire into the Prince's Chamber, and not to carry on his conversation in the space behind the woolsack, "or else the Lord Speaker is to call them to order, and, if necessary, to stop the business in agitation."

(q) Standing Orders of the House of Lords (Public Business), 1902, Nos. 28, 29; see Journals of the House of Lords, 1871, Vol. CIII., p. 629; 1872, Vol. CIV., p. 381.

any question of order arising out of the debate. They must speak standing and uncovered (r), and must address their speeches to the rest of the lords in general and not to the Lord Chancellor or the Chairman of Committees, as the case may be (s).

Except when the House is in committee, no lord may speak more than once upon the same stage of any Bill or upon the same matter, but the lord who is in charge of a Bill or who is responsible for the motion which is under the consideration of the House is entitled to a reply (t).

In the event of two or more lords rising to speak at the same time, the House decides, if necessary by means of a division, which of them it will hear first (a).

SECT. 4.
Maintenance of Order and Rules of Debate.

SECT. 5.—Committees of the House.

SUB-SECT. 1.—Committee of the whole House.

1120. The House resolves itself into a committee of the whole House by means of an order made on the motion:—"That the House do resolve itself into a committee," either forthwith or on a future day, for the consideration of some Bill (b) or for some other definite purpose (c). When the House goes into committee the Lord Chancellor leaves the woolsack and the Chairman of Committees takes the chair at the table of the House.

Procedure in committee of the whole
House.

As soon as the business for which the committee has been appointed has been disposed of, or whenever it is decided to bring the proceedings of the committee to a conclusion, the House is resumed by means of a question to that effect put from the chair. The Lord Chancellor then returns to the woolsack, and the Chairman of Committees, standing at the table on the Government side of the House, reports the results of the committee's deliberations.

SUB-SECT. 2.—Select Committees.

1121. Select committees may be appointed by the House (1) to inquire into and to report upon any subject with regard to which the House desires a full investigation to be made, and (2) to consider and

Purposes for which select committees
appointed.

(r) Standing Orders of the House of Lords (Public Business), 1902, No. 26. By the leave of the House, a peer may address the House without rising from his seat. A peer may not read his speech. If a peer speaks on a breach of privilege whilst a division is in progress, he must address the House without rising from his seat and must not remove his hat.

(s) Ibid., No. 25.

(t) Ibid., No. 27. Any peer, if he obtains the consent of the House, may speak a second time during the course of the same debate in order to explain himself upon some material point in his previous speech; but he must confine himself to his explanation and not introduce any new matter (ibid.).

(a) See Journals of the House of Lords, 1847, Vol. LXXIX., p. 111.

(b) For the procedure on a public Bill in committee of the whole House, see pp. 708, 713, post.

(c) When the order of the day is read for the House to go into committee, an instruction to the committee may always be moved in order to enable the committee to do something which otherwise it would have no power to do: e.g., to consolidate two Bills into one Bill, or to divide one Bill into two Bills; see Journals of the House of Lords, 1853, Vol. LXXXV., p. 289; 1891, Vol. CXXIII., p. 158.

SECT. 5.

Committees
of the House.Scope of inquiry.

if necessary, to hear evidence with regard to the provisions of any Bill which has been read a second time by the House.

1122. When a select committee is appointed to inquire into and to report to the House upon any given subject, the scope of its inquiry is defined and limited by the order of reference by which it is appointed. But when a Bill is referred to the consideration of a committee, the Bill itself constitutes the order of reference to the committee whose duty it is to examine, and, if necessary, to amend, the provisions of the proposed measure, and then to report it to the House.

Order of reference extended or amended by instruction of
the House.

1123. If, after a select committee has been appointed, it is deemed advisable or found necessary to authorise it to consider matters which were not originally referred to it, any member of the House may move that an instruction be given to the committee either extending or amending the terms of its order of reference (d).

Appointment and meeting.

1124. A select committee is appointed on motion (e), and the peers who are to serve on it (f) are either named by the House, or are proposed by the Committee of Selection (g), or, in special cases, may be appointed by ballot (h).

The date and hour for the first meeting of a select committee are fixed by the House, but its subsequent sittings are appointed by the committee itself (i).

Powers with regard to witnesses.

1125. A select committee may examine witnesses who voluntarily appear before it, but it cannot compel their attendance or examine them upon oath, nor can it order the production of papers or hear counsel, unless it obtains the necessary authority from the House (k).

Procedure.

1126. The procedure in a select committee is practically the same as the procedure in committee of the whole House (l). One of the members of the committee is chosen by the committee at its first

(d) A mandatory instruction may also be moved to compel a select committee to do something which it already has the power to do if it wishes.

(e) Notice of such a motion must be given, and notice is also required of the motion for naming the lords to serve on a committee, or for adding any lord to a committee, or for substituting any other lord for one already appointed to serve on a committee; see Standing Orders of the House of Lords (Public Business), 1902, No. 57.

(f) There is no rule as to the number of members of a select committee. Peers who are not members of a select committee are not excluded from speaking in the committee, but they may not take part in its deliberations or vote; see Standing Orders of the House of Lords (Public Business), 1902, No. 55.

(g) For the constitution and duties of this committee, see note (x), p. 750, post.

(h) See Journals of the House of Lords, 1820, Vol. LIII., p. 118.

(i) A select committee may sit during an adjournment of the House, and may adjourn from time to time without obtaining the leave of the House.

(k) An order of the House is also required to authorise the printing of the evidence which is heard before a select committee. As a rule the proceedings of a select committee are public, but it is always within the power of a committee to exclude strangers; see Standing Orders of the House of Lords (Public Business), 1902, No. 56.

(l) For the procedure in committee of the whole House, see p. 637, ante, and pp. 708, 713, post.

meeting to preside over its deliberations (m). It is the duty of the chairman, when evidence is heard, to conduct the examination-in-chief of the witnesses who appear before the committee. He puts the question on any motion which is submitted for the decision of the committee, and, when the inquiry is concluded, he is generally requested to draw up a draft report for the consideration of the committee (n).

SECT. 5.
Committees of the House.

1127. When a report has been agreed upon by a committee, a member of the committee, usually the chairman, presents it to the House (o). Every such report, as soon as it has been laid upon the table of the House, is ordered to be printed and circulated, and notice must be given of the day upon which it is proposed to take it into consideration (p).

Presentation of report to the House.

SUB-SECT. 3.—Secret Committees.

1128. If it is considered inadvisable in the public interest to disclose the nature or scope of an inquiry which is referred to a committee, the House may appoint a secret committee to consider and report upon any matter which is referred to it. A secret committee is usually appointed by ballot. No record is kept of its proceedings, but its report is ordered to be printed as soon as it has been presented to the House (q).

Secret committees.

SUB-SECT. 4.—Committees on Private Bills and Provisional Order Confirmation Bills.

1129. The appointment, composition, and procedure of committees on private Bills and provisional order confirmation Bills is dealt with elsewhere (r).

Committees on private Bills etc.

SUB-SECT. 5.—Joint Committees.

1130. A joint committee may be appointed, with the concurrence of both Houses, either to consider a Bill or a group of Bills, or to Appointment of joint committees.

(m) The power to appoint its own chairman is usually conferred upon every select committee. If no such power is conferred, the Chairman of Committees (see p. 630, ante) is the chairman of the committee ex officio, even if he has not been appointed to serve upon it.

(n) It is open to any member of a select committee to submit a draft report to the committee. In the event of there being more than one draft report, the committee must decide (if necessary by a division) which report should be considered as the basis of its own report to the House. Every draft report is entered amongst the minutes of the committee.

(o) A member of a select committee who disagrees with the report of the committee is not entitled to present a minority report to the House, but he can signify his disagreement to any paragraph in the report, or to the entire report, either by dividing the committee against the proposals to which he objects, or by moving amendments to them whilst they are under the consideration of the committee. The proceedings of every select and joint committee (see the text, infra, and p. 640, post) are printed and published with the report from such committee.

(p) Standing Orders of the House of Lords (Public Business), 1902, No. 58.

(q) For instances of such committees, and the procedure with regard to them, see Journals of the House of Lords, 1819, Vol. LII., p. 35 (secret committee on the state of the Bank of England); 1820, Vol. LIII., pp. 111, 115, 118, 249, 250 (secret committee as to the proceedings against Queen Caroline); Vol. LXXX., pp. 19, 199 (secret committee on commercial distress).

(r) See pp. 750 et seq., post.

SECT. 5.
Committees
of the House.

Mode of appointment of joint committees.

inquire into some particular subject and to report upon it to the respective Houses (s).

1131. A motion to the effect that it is desirable to appoint a joint committee may be made in either House, and, when it has been agreed to, a message is sent to the other House to inform it of the resolution and to request its concurrence. The consent of the other House to the desirability of the appointment of the joint committee is signified by means of another message. When this message has been received by the House in which the proposal originated, a motion is made for the appointment of a select committee and for the nomination of the members to serve on it. A message is then sent to the other House to acquaint it of the appointment of the committee and of the number of members appointed to serve on it, and to request it to appoint a similar committee, consisting of an equal number of members (t). As soon as this request has been complied with, a day may be fixed for the first meeting of the committee. The committee is empowered to appoint its own chairman (u).

In whichever House the motion for the appointment of a joint committee may have originated, it is always customary for the House of Lords to fix the time and place of meeting, of which the House of Commons is informed by means of a message.

Procedure.

1132. The procedure in a joint committee is entirely governed by the practice of the House of Lords, and is the same as that in a select committee of that House. The chairman, therefore, has no casting vote, and all decisions of the committee are governed by the rule, "Semper præsumitur pro negante" (v). When its inquiry is concluded, the report of the committee is presented to both Houses.

SUB-SECT. 6.—Committees to prepare Reasons.

Purpose of appointment.

1133. Whenever the House of Lords is unwilling to agree to an amendment or to amendments which the House of Commons has

(s) The practice of referring matters to the consideration of joint committees was not uncommon before 1695, but fell into disuse during the eighteenth century. It was revived in 1864 and is now recognised as a convenient and expeditious method of parliamentary procedure. For the method of appointment and procedure of a joint committee set up under the provisions of the Private Legislation Procedure (Scotland) Act, 1899 (62 & 63 Vict. c. 47), see pp. 762—765, post.

(t) Formerly there was a rule that the number of members of the House of Commons on a joint committee should be double that of the House of Lords, but this rule is no longer in force. As to communications between the Houses of Parliament generally, see pp. 804 et seq., post.

(u) If an additional Bill is referred to a joint committee, or if a member is added by either House to its representatives on a joint committee, a message must be sent to the other House acquainting it of the fact, but, in the event of either House nominating a new member to take the place of a member already appointed to serve on a joint committee, no message is necessary, as the names of the members originally nominated are not communicated to the other House.

(v) Each House confers upon a select committee, appointed to join with a committee of the other House, the same powers as it confers upon any other select committee (see p. 638, ante, and p. 715, post). A joint committee, therefore, is enabled to send for persons, papers, and records, and papers and reports of former committees can be referred to it by either House.

made to one of its Bills, it appoints a committee to meet forthwith and prepare reasons for such disagreement. The committee reports the reasons to the House and the House agrees to them, after which they are submitted to the Commons by means of a message (x).

SECT. 5.
Committees
of the
House.

SUB-SECT. 7.—Sessional Committees.

1134. Sessional committees may conveniently be divided into two groups. The first group includes the Committee for Privileges, the Committee for the Journals, and the Appeal Committee. These three committees consist of "all the lords who have been or shall be present" during the session, and are appointed by order of the House without notice given.

List of sessional
committees.

The second group includes the Standing Orders Committee, the Committee of Selection, and the House of Lords Offices Committee, each of which consists of a limited number of members and is appointed by the House as early as possible in each session, usually upon a motion made by the Chairman of Committees, of which notice is required.

1135. The Committee for Privileges is appointed to consider and report upon all matters touching the privileges and customs of the House, the precedence of its members, any other matters which are referred to it by the House, and all claims to peerages (a) or claims to vote at the election of the representative peers of Scotland and Ireland (b).

Committee
for Privileges ;

The committee may examine witnesses on oath, order the production of documents, and hear counsel (c). It meets in the House

(x) A committee for the same purpose is appointed as occasion arises in the House of Commons; see p. 721, post.

(a) See note (c), p. 623, ante; see also titles COURTS, Vol. IX., p. 21; PEERAGES AND DIGNITIES.

(b) The right to settle any questions arising with regard to a contested election of a representative peer of Scotland was conferred upon the House of Lords by the Union with Scotland Act, 1706 (6 Anne, c. 11), and confirmed by subsequent Acts; see title COURTS, Vol. IX., p. 21. By the Union with Ireland Act, 1800 (39 & 40 Geo. 3, c. 67), art. 4, it was enacted that all questions touching the election of the Irish representative peers should be decided by the House of Lords (see Standing Orders of the House of Lords (Public Business), 1902, Nos. 90—99, which refer to the peerage of Ireland). The Committee for Privileges, in a claim to vote at the election of representative peers of Ireland, may admit an entry in their Journals as evidence of limitations in a patent without requiring the production of the patent (Roscommon's (Earl) Claim (1828), 6 Cl. & Fin. 97, H. L.). As to Scottish and Irish representative peers, see pp. 624 et seq., ante.

(c) Every person who claims a title of honour must, within six weeks after his petition has been presented to the House, if Parliament is sitting at the time, and, if not, within six weeks after the next meeting of Parliament, lay his printed case, pedigree, and proofs on the table of the House. The Committee for Privileges will not proceed to the hearing upon any claim until fourteen days after the printed case has been delivered. In all claims of peerage, the House has laid down directions with regard to documents delivered in at the Bar in evidence, and the examination of those documents when printed by order of the House. No original of any record or document in public custody in the United Kingdom may be produced before the Committee for Privileges without a written order for its production, signed by the Lord Chancellor or the chairman of the committee. Such records and documents must be proved

SECT. 5.
Committees
of the House.

itself, and may continue to hold its sittings during a temporary adjournment of the House (d). It is presided over by the Chairman of Committees, and three peers designated Lords of Appeal in the Appellate Jurisdiction Act, 1876 (e), must always be present at its sittings (f).

Committee
for the Journals ;

1136. The Committee for the Journals is appointed "to peruse and perfect" the journals of the current session and of previous sessions (g).

Appeal
Committee ;

1137. The Appeal Committee is appointed to consider and report upon all petitions relating to causes which are, or which formerly were, depending in the House, and upon all matters relating thereto.

The committee, of which three is a quorum, is given the power to appoint its own chairman, and meets as often as it may be necessary in the course of the session (h).

Standing
Orders
Committee ;
Committee of Selection ;

1138. The Standing Orders Committee and the Committee of Selection have certain duties to perform with regard to private Bills and provisional order confirmation Bills. The appointment, composition and functions of these two Committees are dealt with elsewhere (i).

House of Lords Offices
Committee.

1139. The House of Lords Offices Committee consists of the Lord Chancellor, the Lord President of the Council, the Lord Privy Seal (when he is a peer), the Chairman of Committees, and an undefined number of other lords.

by copies as in ordinary legal proceedings, pursuant to the Public Record Office Act, 1838 (1 & 2 Vict. c. 94), and subsequent Acts (see title EVIDENCE, Vol. XIII., pp. 524 et seq.). In the case of documents in private custody, original documents and copies thereof must be delivered in by a witness who is required to swear to the accuracy of the copies. If the claim to a peerage is unopposed, the print is examined against the original documents, or the officially certified copies, by a competent examiner appointed by the Crown Agent. In opposed peerage claims, when the Crown is always represented in the proceedings before the Committee for Privileges, the Crown Agent may appoint a competent examiner for the purpose of the above examination. The costs of such examination are borne by the petitioner adducing the evidence. In all claims of peerage, all the expenses attending the taking and printing of evidence are borne by the claimants, and must be paid whenever the Clerk of the Parliaments delivers in an account of such charges ; see Standing Orders of the House of Lords (Public Business), 1902, Nos. 86, 87, 88. As to the evidence required on a claim to a peerage, see title PEERAGES AND DIGNITIES.

(d) Standing Orders of the House of Lords (Public Business), 1902, No. 85.

(e) 39 & 40 Vict. c. 59. For the legal qualifications which are required for this designation, see p. 643, post. As to the status of Lords of Appeal in Ordinary, see p. 628, ante.

(f) See Order of the House, 31st July, 1882 ; Journals of the House of Lords, 1882, Vol. CXIV., p. 362.

(g) The duties of this committee are purely formal. It usually only makes one report in the course of the session, when it lays on the table of the House the journal of the preceding session and recommends that it should be delivered out ; see p. 632, ante.

(h) Although any peer is at liberty to attend this committee, as a rule only the Lord Chancellor and the Lords of Appeal are present at its meetings. For the functions performed by the committee, see note (a), p. 644, p. 647, post.

(i) See pp. 743, 750, post.

To this committee is entrusted the control of the domestic arrangements of the House. It is presided over by the Chairman of Committees, and meets from time to time during the course of the session and reports to the House with regard to matters relating to (1) the offices of the Clerk of the Parliaments (k), the Gentleman Usher of the Black Rod (l), and the Lord Great Chamberlain (m) ; (2) the receipts and expenditure of the Fee Fund of the House ; and (3) the preparation of the annual estimate of the House of Lords.

SECT. 5.
Committees
of the
House.

SECT. 6.—Judicial Functions of the House.

SUB-SECT. 1.—Appellate Jurisdiction.

(i.) In General.

1140. The House of Lords is the supreme court of appeal in Great Britain and Ireland (n).

The supreme court of appeal.

1141. For the discharge of its functions as a court of appeal, the House of Lords consists of the Lord Chancellor of Great Britain, the four Lords of Appeal in Ordinary, and any peer of Parliament who holds, or has held, any of the following high judicial offices, namely: the office of (1) Lord Chancellor of Great Britain or Ireland ; (2) member of the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council ; (3) Lord of Appeal in Ordinary ; (4) judge of the Supreme Court of England or Ireland or of the Court of Session in Scotland (o).

The constitution of the House as a court of appeal.

(ii.) Procedure in Appeals.

1142. An appeal to the House of Lords must be lodged in the office of the Clerk of the Parliaments within one year from the date of the last decree, order, or interlocutor appealed from (p). It must

Lodgment of appeal etc.

(k) See p. 630, ante.

(l) See p. 631, ante.

(m) See title CONSTITUTIONAL LAW, Vol. VI., pp. 326, 330, Vol. VII., p. 107.

(n) For the courts from which appeals lie, see title COURTS, Vol. IX., p. 22. As to appeals from the Court of Criminal Appeal, see ibid., and title CRIMINAL LAW AND PROCEDURE, Vol. IX., p. 433. Up to the present time there have been only two such appeals, namely, R. v. Ball (William Henry) ; R. v. Ball (Edith Lilian), [1911] A. C. 47 ; see Journals of the House of Lords, 1910, Vol. CXLII., pp. 326, 327.

(o) Appellate Jurisdiction Act, 1876 (39 & 40 Vict. c. 59), ss. 5, 25, as amended by the Appellate Jurisdiction Act, 1887 (50 & 51 Vict. c. 70), s. 5. As to the number of such persons who must be present, and as to the right of any lord of Parliament to take part in the proceedings of the Court, see, further, title COURTS, Vol. IX., pp. 22, 23 ; May, Parliamentary Practice, 11th ed., p. 360.

(p) Standing Orders of the House of Lords (Judicial Business) 1907, No. 1. The time for the lodgment of an appeal is calculated from the last order affecting the subject-matter of the appeal and the House will not extend the time unless the circumstances are exceptional (Phillips v. Fothergill (1886), 11 App. Cas. 466 ; Attwood v. Small (1838), 6 Cl. & Fin. 232, H. L.). If an appeal is competent in point of time, the House under certain conditions can entertain an appeal from a previous order connected with it, although made more than a year before (Concha v. Concha, [1892] A. C. 670, per Lord MACNAGHTEN, at p. 674). An extension of time is allowed in any case in which the person entitled to appeal is under twenty-one years of age, or covert, non compos mentis, imprisoned, or out of the United Kingdom. The maximum limit in such cases is five years. The practice on appeal is governed by the Standing Orders of the House of Lords (Judicial Business), and Directions for Agents issued by the Judicial Office of

SECT. 6.
Judicial Functions of
the House.
Service.

be signed and its reasonableness must be certified by two counsel who have either attended as counsel in the court below or purpose attending as counsel at the hearing (q).

A copy of the appeal must be served upon the respondent in the cause or upon his agent, and a certificate that such service has been made must be written on the last page of the appeal, which cannot be presented to the House until two clear days have elapsed from the date of such service (r).

Order of service etc.

1143. Subject to the foregoing condition, an appeal may be presented forthwith if the House is sitting, and an order is then made by the House calling upon the respondent to lodge a printed case in answer thereto within six weeks from the date of the presentation of the petition of appeal to the House (s). A copy of this order, which is signed by the Clerk of the Parliaments and is known as the order of service, is issued to the appellant, who must return it to the office of the Clerk of the Parliaments, together with an affidavit of due service on the respondent or his agent, within the period named in the order (t).

The appellant within this period must also lodge the printed case and the appendix thereto (a).

the House of Lords; see Yearly Practice of the Supreme Court, 1912, pp. 1799—1824. For form of petition of appeal, see form prefixed to Directions for Agents, issued by the Judicial Office of the House of Lords, pp. 3, 4; Yearly Practice of the Supreme Court, 1912, p. 1797. Statutory appeals must be presented within the period limited by statute (Cleaver v. Cleaver (1884), 9 App. Cas. 631).

(q) Standing Orders of the House of Lords (Judicial Business), 1907, No. 2.

(r) Directions for Agents, paragraph 2.

(s) A respondent incurs no penalty if he does not lodge his printed case within the six weeks prescribed by the order of service; see ibid., paragraph 30.

(t) Standing Orders of the House of Lords (Judicial Business), 1907, No. 3. If this period expires during a recess, prorogation, or dissolution, it may be extended to the third sitting day after the next ensuing meeting of the House; see ibid., No. 7.

(a) Every printed case must be signed by one or more counsel who either attended as counsel in the court below or purpose attending as counsel at the hearing in the House (see ibid., No. 5; see also Price v. Seeley (1843), 10 Cl. & Fin. 28, H. L.). In cross-appeals or in consolidated appeals, it is usual to lodge one case for each party, and one appendix. Leave may also be obtained from the House on petition to lodge one case and appendix applicable to two or more appeals and one appendix applicable to two or more appeals, and to refer in a case lodged in one appeal to an appendix lodged in another cause. Where possible, especially in appeals upon a special case stated in the courts below, a joint case should be lodged. The appendix consists of such documents, or parts thereof, used in evidence in the court below, as may be necessary for reference on the argument of the appeal. Documents, plans etc. which the appellant refuses to include in the appendix may be lodged by the respondent as additional documents, and it is open to either party in an appeal to petition against the admissibility of documents. Questions as to the admissibility of documents are usually reserved (on report from the Appeal Committee) as preliminary questions when the appeal is heard. Shorthand notes of arguments in the courts below must not be printed by either party, but there are two exceptions to this rule—(1) where remarks made by the judge in the course of the argument are relied upon by either party; and (2) when the arguments refer to facts which are admitted by both sides and no evidence has been called as to those facts. For general directions as to the preparation of a case and appendix, see Directions for Agents, paragraphs 23—29. For rules as to the production of original documents and certified copies, see ibid., paragraphs 35—37.

1144. Unless a respondent lodges a printed case, he cannot be heard at the bar of the House. If, therefore, he has not lodged his case within the time specified in the order of service, the cause, on the lodgment of the appellant's case and the appendix, is set down for hearing ex parte. It is open, however, to the respondent to lodge his case at a later date (b).

SECT. 6.
Judicial Functions of
the House.

Effect of failure to lodge case.

When separate cases lodged.

1145. When separate cases are lodged by different respondents, the case first lodged must contain a certificate stating either (1) that an opportunity has been given to the other respondents to join in the case, or (2) that the interests represented in the case are distinct from those of the remaining respondents (c). Any subsequent lodgment of cases by other respondents must be made on petition.

1146. An appellant is required, within one week (d) after the presentation of his appeal to the House, to give security for costs by recognisance to the amount of £500 and a bond for £200 (e). The recognisance is entered into by the appellant in person (f) or by a substitute, who must not be a party to the appeal; the bond is entered into by two sureties, who must not be parties to the appeal.

Security for costs.

1147. It is the duty of the agent for the appellant to supply the agent of the respondent with information which will enable him to ascertain the sufficiency of the proposed substitute and sureties (g).

Sufficiency of sureties.

(b) If a respondent delays to lodge his printed case until a day has been appointed for the hearing of the cause, he must petition the House for leave to do so.

(c) Where the remaining respondents are merely stakeholders, as trustees etc., it is sufficient if their position is explained by a paragraph in the case of the substantial respondents; see Directions for Agents, paragraph 31.

(d) Standing Orders of the House of Lords (Judicial Business), 1907, No. 4. If this period, however, expires during a recess, prorogation, or dissolution, it may be extended to the third sitting day after the next ensuing meeting of the House; see ibid., No. 7.

(e) Ibid., No. 4. In lieu of the bond, payment of £200 may be made into the Security Fund Account of the House of Lords within one week after the presentation of the appeal, and the House, on a special order being made, may also accept £500 in lieu of a recognisance, if such sum is paid within the above period; see Directions for Agents, paragraph 5. For directions as to the disposal of the deposits when an appeal is affirmed, reversed, or dismissed for want of prosecution, see ibid., paragraphs 42—44. The Crown, when it is an appellant, does not enter into a recognisance, but, where the Attorney-General prosecutes at the instance of relators, the relators are required to enter into the recognisance (A.-G. v. Brazen Nose College (1832), Journals of the House of Lords, 1832, Vol. LXIV., p. 320). In a case where a private person is appealing against the Crown, and where, if he is successful, the Crown would not be bound to pay costs, it is questionable whether or not the appellant should be obliged to enter into a recognisance (Lord Advocate v. Dunlop (Lord) (1842), 9 Cl. & Fin. 173, H. L.). In such a case, the appellant, in order to avoid liability, should present a petition to the House praying for the suspension of standing order No. 4 (see Yearly Practice of the Supreme Court, 1912, p. 1819). A party suing in formā pauperis and a respondent in an appeal are not required to enter into a recognisance for payment of costs.

(f) Where there are several appellants, all must enter into the recognisance, unless a petition is presented and the leave of the House obtained for one or more of the appellants to enter into the recognisance on behalf of the remainder.

(g) See Directions for Agents, paragraph 8.

SECT. 6.
Judicial Functions of
the House.

Certificates (h) giving this information are kept for a week in the office of the Clerk of the Parliaments, and, in the event of no objection to the sureties being made by the respondents within this period, the bond and recognisance are issued to the agent of the appellant for execution and must be returned to the same office within one week (i).

If the respondent objects to the sureties who have been proposed, the Clerk of the Parliaments requires a justification (k) from the appellants, and, if such justification appears to him unsatisfactory, he may require the appellant to pay in the sum of £200 and enter into the recognisance in person (l).

Setting down of cause for hearing.

1148. As soon as all the printed cases and the appendix thereto have been lodged by the appellant and the respondent (m), and the necessary security has been given by the appellant, it is optional for either party to the appeal to set down the cause for hearing; but, if the respondent does not lodge a printed case, it is obligatory on the appellant to set down the cause for hearing ex parte within the period specified in the order of service (n).

Incidental
petitions.

1149. Incidental petitions may be presented to the House upon any matter connected with an appeal (o). In the majority of cases, (h) For form of such certificate, see ibid., paragraph 24, Appendix A.

(i) Standing Orders of the House of Lords (Judicial Business), 1907, No. 4.

(k) Justification is made by sworn affidavit, and the respondent may file a counter affidavit.

(l) The appellant is entitled to enter into the recognisance, and an objection to his sufficiency can only be made on petition to the House.

(m) After the lodgment in the office of the Clerk of the Parliaments of their printed cases by the appellant and the respondent, each side must supply the other side with ten copies of its case; see Directions for Agents, paragraph 32.

(n) Standing Orders of the House of Lords (Judicial Business), 1907, No. 5. Cross-appeals must be presented to the House within the same period; see ibid., No. 6. In either case, however, if this period expires during a recess, prorogation, or dissolution, it is extended to the third sitting day of the next ensuing meeting of the House; see ibid., No. 7. During a recess (but not during a prorogation or dissolution) the lodgment of a petition for a further extension of time for lodging cases etc. before the expiration of the extended time prevents the dismissal of the appeal. Thirty copies of the case and appendix must be lodged in the office of the Clerk of the Parliaments before the appeal is set down for hearing, and, after the exchange of cases between the two parties, the appellant must also lodge, for the use of the Lords of Appeal, ten bound copies of the two cases, the original petition of appeal, and the appendix; see Directions for Agents, paragraph 29, Appendix B.

(o) E.g., petitions (1) for extension of time to lodge cases etc. (for form of such petition, see Directions for Agents, Appendix C); (2) for leave to dispense with standing orders; for restoration of an appeal which stands dismissed through non-compliance with a standing order; (3) for revivor of an abated or defective appeal (an appeal abates through death when it becomes necessary to add new parties and becomes defective through bankruptcy; for procedure in such cases, see Standing Orders of the House of Lords (Judicial Business), 1907, No. 8: where such an appeal has been revived on petition, a supplementary case is lodged); (4) for amendment of petition of the case or appendix etc.; (5) as to the competency of an appeal or the admissibility of documents in the appendix; (6) for the review of taxation (the costs of the House are taxed by a taxing officer appointed by the Clerk of the Parliaments; for the taxing fee and directions as to pauper costs, see Yearly Practice of the Supreme Court, 1912, pp. 1821, 1823; for the ordinary fees of the House, petitions, to which the consent of all the parties has been obtained, are ordered as prayed, but any petition to sue in formâ pauperis (p) and all opposed petitions are always referred to the Appeal Committee, if Parliament is sitting (q). During a dissolution, such petitions are read and ordered to lie on the table of the House, and are referred to the Appeal Committee when the new Parliament meets.

SECT. 6.
Judicial Functions of
the House.

(iii.) Effect of Prorogation or Dissolution of Parliament.

1150. The judicial business of the House is not delayed during a prorogation or a dissolution of Parliament. During a prorogation, the Lords of Appeal are empowered by an order of the House to sit for the purpose of hearing and determining appeals (r), and the Crown, by writing under the Sign Manual, may authorise them in the name of the House of Lords to hear and determine appeals during a dissolution of Parliament (s).

No delay caused by prorogation or dissolution.

(iv.) Assistance of Judges of the Supreme Court.

1151. The judges of the Supreme Court of Judicature in England are the assistants of the House of Lords (a), and the House can order

Judges as assistants of
the House.

see Yearly Practice of the Supreme Court, 1912, p. 1821); (7) for amendment of draft judgments (in every appeal, after the House has given judgment, copies of the proposed order are submitted to the parties).

(p) A primâ facie case to sue in formâ pauperis must be established before the Appeal Committee (Appeal (Formâ Pauperis) Act, 1893 (56 & 57 Vict. c. 22); see Directions for Agents, paragraph 16). The House has fixed no rule or practice with regard to the liability of a pauper appellant for costs; see Yearly Practice of the Supreme Court, 1912, p. 1796.

(q) For the constitution of the Appeal Committee, see p. 642, ante. No affidavits may be lodged in incidental petitions, except in a petition to sue in formâ pauperis, when an affidavit of poverty is required. The parties may, however, hand in affidavits at the sitting of the Appeal Committee. While a pauper petition is pending, no steps need be taken for giving security; but if leave to sue in formâ pauperis is refused by the committee, further time in which to give security must be obtained, or the appeal will stand dismissed. Counsel are not heard before the Appeal Committee, unless the circumstances of the case are very unusual (Sackville West v. Holmesdale (Viscount) (1877), Journals of the House of Lords, 1877, Vol. CIX., p. 372; Stubbs, Ltd. v. Russell (1908), Journals of the House of Lords, 1908, Vol. CXL., p. 163). Notice of the meeting of the Appeal Committee is given to solicitors who enter their names in the appearance book kept at the Judicial Office in the House of Lords; see Directions for Agents, paragraph 17. In its reports to the House the Committee simply recommends the admission or rejection of the prayer of the petition referred to it, or submits a special order for the consideration of the House. The report, however, may reserve a point for the consideration of the House upon the hearing of the appeal in an important case affecting competency or the admissibility of evidence (Ford's Hotel Co., Ltd. v. Bartlett (1895), Journals of the House of Lords, 1895, Vol. CXXVII., p. 260). The House can adopt, reject, or modify a report from the Appeal Committee.

(r) A Lord of Appeal in Ordinary may be introduced and take the oath at a time when Parliament is prorogued (Appellate Jurisdiction Act, 1887 (50 & 51 Vict. c. 70), s. 1).

(s) See title COURTS, Vol. IX., p. 22; compare Journals of the House of Lords, 1910, Vol. CXLII., p. 321.

(a) In the early Parliaments of England, when the affairs of the nation were transacted "by the King in his Council in Parliament," the judges used to receive writs of summons to Parliament and formed part of that assembly. But when the original conception of Parliament changed and the council of the

SECT. 6.
Judicial Functions of
the House.

Attendance of judges in the House.

them to be present at the hearing of any cause or for any purpose for which it may require their assistance (b).

1152. When the judges attend the House at the hearing of a cause (c), a question of law, which is prepared by the Lord Chancellor and the lords of appeal, is submitted to them from the woolsack (d). If the judges are agreed upon their answer, they may give it at once, but the more usual practice is for the senior judge present to advance to the table of the House and request that further time may be allowed to the judges for the consideration of the question which has been referred to them. A motion to this effect is then made from the woolsack and agreed to by the House (e). As soon as the judges have prepared their answer or answers, they are again ordered to attend the House. If their opinion is unanimous, one judge attends and delivers the general opinion, but, if their opinions differ, each judge attends in person and delivers his own opinion or concurs in that of one of the other judges, as the case may be (f).

(v.) Assistance of Nautical Assessors.

Attendance of nautical assessors in
the House.

1153. To assist it in the hearing and determination of Admiralty actions (England) and Maritime causes (Scotland), the House of Lords may summon the attendance of one or more nautical assessors whenever it deems it expedient to do so, or when either party in King became distinct from the legislative assembly of the nation, the position of the judges appears also to have changed. Thus, in stat. (1539) 31 Hen. 8, c. 10 (referred to at p. 613, ante), no place is assigned to the judges in the House of Lords, and from this time onwards they became merely the assistants of the House, whose advice could be called for when required. This position was definitely assigned to them by an order of the House of the 4th June, 1660, "That the Lord Chancellor do move His Majesty that he would be pleased to give order for writs to the judges, whereby they may attend the House as assistants"; see Journals of the House of Lords, 1660, Vol. XI., p. 52; see also Pike, Constitutional History of the House of Lords, pp. 247, 248. Such writs are now issued to the judges and also to the Attorney-General and Solicitor-General; see title COURTS, Vol. IX., p. 23.

(b) The House only calls upon the judges for their advice in cases of great public importance and is not bound to accept their advice even when it is unanimous (O'Connell v. R. (1844), 11 Cl. & Fin. 155, 327, H. L.).

(c) For the procedure adopted when the judges attend the House as assistants, see Allen v. Flood and Another (1897), Journals of the House of Lords, 1897, Vol. CXXIX., pp. 174, 208—235.

(d) Questions addressed to the judges may relate either to a preliminary point arising before the appeal to which it refers is heard (Dimes v. Grand Junction Canal Proprietors (1852), 3 H. L. Cas. 759, 784); or to an abstract question of law not having direct regard to the form of an appeal before the House or to the matters raised by it (Bright v. Hutton, Hutton v. Bright (1852), 3 H. L. Cas. 341, 371); or to a question of law not arising out of an appeal actually before the House (M'Naghten's Case (1843), 10 Cl. & Fin. 200, H. L.). The judges may decline to answer any question addressed to them which is not strictly confined to the legal interpretation of an existing Act of Parliament (Re London and Westminster Bank (1834), 2 Cl. & Fin. 191, H. L.).

(e) The consideration of the cause is then adjourned, and an order is made to print the question which has been referred to the judges.

(f) Each judge when he gives his answer to the question addressed to him must state the reasons upon which his opinions are based (R. v. Millis (1844), 10 Cl. & Fin. 534, H. L.).

an appeal applies for the appointment of such assessors in a letter addressed to the Clerk of the Parliaments (g).

SECT. 6.
Judicial Functions of
the House.

(vi.) Sittings for the Hearing of Causes.

1154. When the House sits for the hearing of causes, it usually meets at half-past ten o'clock in the morning, on such days as may be fixed by the Lord Chancellor, and continues sitting in its judicial capacity until a quarter before four o'clock (h). The business of the day begins with prayers, after which the causes are taken in the order in which they are set down for hearing in the minutes of the House (i).

Judicial
sittings of
the House.

(vii.) Delivery of Judgment.

1155. After a cause has been fully heard, judgment is either given forthwith, or its consideration is adjourned sine die or to some specified day (k).

Procedure
with regard to delivery of
judgment.

When the judgment of the House is delivered, the Lord Chancellor, or, in his absence, the Lord Speaker, gives his opinion first, and then the other lords in the order of their precedence (l).

(g) Judicature Act, 1891 (54 & 55 Vict. c. 53), s. 3; Nautical Assessors (Scotland) Act, 1894 (57 & 58 Vict. c. 40), s. 6. The attendance of such assessors, their qualifications, the method of their appointment, and the fees to be paid to them, are regulated by orders of the House made on the 10th and 13th May, 1892, and on the 20th November, 1894; see Journals of the House of Lords, 1892, Vol. CXXIV., pp. 145, 153, and 1894, Vol. CXXVI., p. 339; see also Directions for Agents, paragraph 38.

(h) When the House sits for judicial business, the Lord Chancellor or Lord Speaker, as the case may be, after the mace has been deposited on the woollen sack and prayers have been said, moves to a seat placed in front of a table near the bar, and the Lords of Appeal, who are also provided with tables, sit on the two front benches on each side of the bar. Peers who are counsel may appear and argue before the House (see Re Kinross (Lord), [1905] A. C. 468; and see note (b), p. 754, post). English, Scottish, and Irish counsel have equal audience before the House of Lords. They address the House from the bar. It is a general rule of the House that only two counsel shall be heard on each side (R. v. Millis (1844), 10 Cl. & Fin. 534, H. L.). For the practice of the House with regard to hearing counsel in cases where there are several classes of appellants and respondents, see South Leith Parish v. Allan and Edinburgh Parish (1852), 1 Macq. 93, H. L.; Home v. Pringle and Hunter (1841), 8 Cl. & Fin. 264, H. L. If neither counsel nor agent appear on behalf of one of the parties to an appeal when the cause comes on for hearing, it has been usual for the House to adjourn the hearing after ordering the offending party to pay the costs of the day; in some cases, however, the appeal has been dismissed; see Companion to the Standing Orders of the House of Lords on Public Business, p. 132. On re-argument only one counsel is heard on each side.

(i) When a cause is put down for consideration (i.e., when the House delivers judgment), it is usual to give such cause priority of any cause which stands appointed for hearing.

(k) A draft copy of every judgment of the House is drawn up by the Clerk of the Parliaments and sent out to the agents of the various parties in the appeal, who are given instructions as to alterations and amendments. Any difference of opinion that may arise as to the form of a judgment is settled by the Lord Chancellor. A judgment may be proved by an examination of the Minutes, which can be obtained from the Clerk of the Parliaments; see Directions for Agents, paragraph 41; Yearly Practice of the Supreme Court, 1912, p. 1815. A judgment of the House on a question of law is binding upon the House in future cases; see title JUDGMENTS AND ORDERS, Vol. XVIII., p. 210.

(l) If one of the lords, who was present during the hearing of an appeal in

SECT. 6.
Judicial Functions of
the House.

As soon as the Lord Chancellor, or the Lord Speaker, as the case may be, has delivered his opinion, he goes to the woolsack, and, after the other lords have given their opinion, he puts the question, "That this judgment [interlocutor, decree, or order] be reversed?" (m). If the majority of the lords who have heard the cause have given their opinions in favour of the appellant, this motion is agreed to; but, if the House is equally divided, or if there is a majority against reversing the decision of the court below, the motion is decided in the negative. If a case is decided in favour of the respondent, therefore, the Lord Chancellor puts the further question, "That the appeal be dismissed?" or, if such is the decision of the House, "That the appeal be dismissed with costs?" (n), and the necessary motion is then agreed to by the House.

SUB-SECT. 2.—Original Jurisdiction.

(i) Impeachment.

Impeach-
ment.

1156. An impeachment of any individual by the House of Commons is one of the matters within the original jurisdiction (o) of the House of Lords. It is the most solemn form of trial known to English law (p), and, although of frequent occurrence in the earlier which judgment was reserved, dies before judgment is delivered, it is the practice of the House for his judgment to be read by one of the other lords (Lord Advocate v. Wemyss, [1900] A. C. 48, 59, following Galloway v. Craig (1861), 4 Macq. 267, H. L.). If a lord dies after the hearing of the evidence, but before judgment has been prepared, the House may order the appeal to be re-argued by one counsel on each side (Ruabon Steamship Co. v. London Assurance, [1900] A. C. 6, 9).

(m) The question is put in this way in order to ensure that the rule of the House with regard to an equality of voting, "Semper presumitur pro negante," is carried out, by making it perfectly clear which party in the appeal is the person "negans," i.e., the person who wishes to uphold the decision of the court below; see note (f), p. 634, ante; see also Carr v. Render (Henry), Ltd. (1883), Journals of the House of Lords, 1883, Vol. CXV., p. 461; Paquin, Ltd. v. Beaucherk (formerly Holden), 1906, Journals of the House of Lords, 1906, Vol. CXXXVIII., p. 100; [1906] A. C. 148. Costs are never given in a case where an equality of voting occurs.

(n) The jurisdiction of the House with regard to costs, including costs in the court below, is inherent in the House itself and does not depend upon any statute (Manchester, Sheffield, and Lincolnshire Rail. Co. v. Doncaster Union Guardians, [1897] 1 Q. B. 117, C. A.; West Ham Union Guardians v. St. Matthew, Bethnal Green (Churchwardens, etc.), [1896] A. C. 477; Brocklesby v. Temperance Building Society, [1895] A. C. 173). For the rules as to application for costs etc., and the enforcement of their payment, see Yearly Practice of the Supreme Court, 1912, pp. 1812—1814. In all cases where the House makes an order for the payment of costs, the bill of costs must be certified by the Clerk of the Parliaments or the Clerk Assistant, after it has been taxed by a taxing officer appointed by the Clerk of the Parliaments (Standing Orders of the House of Lords (Judicial Business), 1911, No. 10).

(o) The House of Lords also possesses original jurisdiction (1) as a court of justice for the trial of peers and peeresses in certain cases (see p. 653, post); (2) in claims to peerages (see p. 623, ante; title PEERAGES AND DIGNITIES), and in claims of Scottish or Irish peers to vote at the election of representative peers (see pp. 625, 627, note (a), ante); (3) in enforcing the observance and in punishing any breach of its own privileges (see p. 790, post). For the original jurisdiction of the House of Lords generally, see title COURTS, Vol. IX., pp. 19 et seq.

(p) The proceedings upon an impeachment are not brought to a conclusion either by a prorogation or a dissolution of Parliament; see 4 Hatsell, Precedents of Parliament, ed. 1818, pp. 273, 274, n. In some cases, however, periods of English history, has not been resorted to since the year 1806 (q).

In an impeachment the Commons are the accusers and the Lords are the judges, “exercising at once the functions of a High Court of Justice and of a jury” (r).

1157. By the law of Parliament any person, whether a peer or a commoner, may be impeached by the House of Commons for any crime or misdemeanour (s). No person so accused may plead a pardon under the Great Seal of England in extenuation of the crime or misdemeanour for which he is impeached (t), but, after judgment has been delivered by the Lords, it is lawful for the Crown to pardon or reprieve the guilty person (u).

1158. The right to institute an impeachment belongs exclusively to the House of Commons, and a motion must be made and agreed to in that House before any proceedings with regard to an impeachment can be begun (v).

When a motion for an impeachment has been agreed to by the Commons, the member who made the motion in question is instructed to go to the House of Lords, and at the bar of that House to impeach the offender of high crimes and misdemeanours “in the name of the House of Commons, and of all the Commons of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland,” at the same time acquainting the Lords that the House of Commons “will, in due time, exhibit particular articles against him, and make good the same.”

1159. After this message has been conveyed to the House of Lords, the Commons appoint a committee to draw up the articles of impeachment, which, as soon as they have been agreed to by the House, are sent up to the House of Lords (w), where an order is made for a copy of the articles to be granted to the accused person, to each of which he is directed to put in his answer within a specified time (x).

SECT. 6.
Judicial Functions of
the House.

Liability to impeachment.

Initiation of impeachment.

Articles of impeachment drawn up by
Commons.

special Acts have been passed to provide that an impeachment should not lapse by reason of a prorogation or a dissolution, e.g., in the cases of Warren Hastings and Lord Melville (stat. (1786) 26 Geo. 3, c. 96, and stat. (1805) 45 Geo. 3, c. 125).

(q) The impeachment of Viscount Melville; see note (v), infra.

(r) May, Parliamentary Practice, 11th ed., p. 51. For the position of the lords spiritual in an impeachment, see p. 621, ante.

(s) May, Parliamentary Practice, 11th ed., p. 663; see also 4 Hatsell, Precedents of Parliament, ed. 1818, Appendix No. 10.

(t) Act of Settlement (12 & 13 Will. 3, c. 2), s. 3.

(u) May, Parliamentary Practice, 11th ed., p. 667.

(v) For a full account of the proceedings of the two Houses with regard to an impeachment, see the account of the trial of Viscount Melville (1806), 29 State Tr. 550—606.

(w) When they send up the original articles of impeachment, the Commons always reserve to themselves the liberty of exhibiting any other articles which may afterwards occur to them to be necessary. If such other articles are exhibited, they are conveyed to the House of Lords in the same way as the original articles, and the accused person is given an opportunity of putting in his answers to them.

(x) As soon as the articles of impeachment have been exhibited the accused

SECT. 6.

Judicial Functions of
the House.

Procedure on an impeachment.

Determination and delivery of
judgment.

These answers, when they have been delivered to the House of Lords, are communicated by means of a message to the House of Commons, and that House may put in replications, if it is deemed necessary.

1160. The day for the hearing of an impeachment is fixed by the House of Lords (a). If a peer is being impeached, the trial is presided over by a Lord High Steward, who is specially appointed for the occasion by the Crown (b); but, if the accused person is a commoner, the duty is performed by the Lord Chancellor or the Lord Keeper of the Great Seal for the time being. The Commons attend the trial as a committee of the whole House, and their case is put forward by certain of their members whom the House appoints as its managers to prepare the evidence and conduct the prosecution on its behalf. The accused person is empowered to summon witnesses and may employ counsel in his defence.

1161. When the case has been fully heard, the Lords determine whether the charges against the defendant have been proved. Each article of the impeachment is treated separately, the Lord High Steward, or the Lord Chancellor, as the case may be, asking each peer in turn (beginning with the junior baron) whether the defendant is guilty, or not guilty, of the crime charged therein. In reply to this question, each peer, standing up in his place and laying his right hand upon his breast, answers in the words "guilty [or "not guilty"] upon my honour." As soon as every peer present has given his opinion upon every article of the impeachment, the numbers are cast up, and the result of the trial is then announced by the Lord High Steward, or the Lord Chancellor, as the case may be.

If the accused person is declared to be not guilty, he is informed that he is acquitted, and the proceedings are then at an end (c); if he is declared to be guilty, he may plead matters in arrest of judgment, and in no case is judgment delivered by the Lords until it has been demanded by the Speaker on behalf of the Commons (d).

person may be attached. If he is a peer, he is committed by order of the House of Lords in safe custody to the Gentleman Usher of the Black Rod (see the case of the Earl of Oxford in 1715, Journals of the House of Lords, 1715, Vol. XX., p. 112); if he is a commoner, the House of Commons orders its Serjeant-at-Arms to attach him and to keep him under arrest until the House of Lords orders the Gentleman Usher of the Black Rod to take him into custody (see the case of Dr. Sacheverell, Journals of the House of Commons, 1709, Vol. XVI., p. 242). The Lords may admit any accused person to bail.

(a) The trial of an impeachment may take place in the House of Lords or in Westminster Hall; see case of Viscount Melville, where an address was ordered by the House of Lords praying His Majesty to give directions for the preparation of a place in Westminster Hall for the trial (Parliamentary Debates, First Series, Vol. VI., p. 557).

(b) See May, Parliamentary Practice, 11th ed., p. 665; and see title CRIMINAL LAW AND PROCEDURE, Vol. IX., p. 265. In the case of Viscount Melville, however, the trial was presided over by Lord Erskine, the Lord Chancellor.

(c) After the conclusion of the trial, both the Lords and Commons adjourn to their own Houses. In the House of Lords an order is made for the proceedings in the trial to be printed and published. In the House of Commons a motion is made thanking the managers for their services in the trial.

(d) See the resolution of the Commons on the occasion of the impeachment of (ii.) Trial of a Peer by his Peers.

SECT. 6.

Judicial Functions of
the House.

1162. The right to be tried by the House of Lords if Parliament is sitting, or in the Court of the Lord High Steward if it is not sitting, belongs to any peer or peeress against whom an indictment has been found for treason, misprision of treason, felony or misprision of felony (e).

1163. An indictment is found in the usual way, and the House of Lords is informed of the fact by means of a letter addressed by the judge of the court to the Lord Chancellor, acquainting him that a true bill for the offence committed has been returned into court against the peer or peeress (f). The Lord Chancellor communicates this information to the House, and a committee is appointed to inspect the Journals in order to find out the procedure which has been adopted in former cases, and to consider the proper methods to bring the accused peer or peeress to a speedy trial (g).

This committee is given power to report from time to time to the House, and as soon as it has issued its first report stating a suitable day for the trial to be held, an address to the Sovereign is drawn up informing him of the date which has been fixed, and desiring him to appoint a Lord High Steward to continue during the trial (h).

Right of a peer to be tried by his peers.

Communication of indictment of a peer to Lord Chancellor, and subsequent proceedings in the House.

the Earl of Winton in 1721, "That it is not parliamentary for their lordships to give judgment until the same be first demanded by this House" (Journals of the House of Commons, 1716, Vol. XVIII., p. 405). For the form in which the Commons demand judgment, see 4 Hatsell, Precedents of Parliament, ed. 1818, p. 232, n. Except in the case of a capital offence, it would appear that in an impeachment the House of Lords has the power to inflict any punishment which it deems expedient; see the sentences passed on Viscount St. Alban (Journals of the House of Lords, 1621, Vol. III., pp. 105, 106); on Goudet and others (ibid., 1698, Vol. XVI., pp. 337, 338); on Dr. Sacheverell (ibid., 1709, Vol. XIX., pp. 121, 122); and on Lord Macclesfield (ibid., 1725, Vol. XXII., p. 560).

(e) Standing Orders of the House of Lords (Public Business), 1902, No. 72; and see titles COURTS, Vol. IX., pp. 19, 26; CRIMINAL LAW AND PROCEDURE, Vol. IX., p. 270; PEERAGES AND DIGNITIES. For a misdemeanour, a peer or peeress is tried by a jury in the same way as a commoner; see R. v. Vaux (Lord) (1612), 1 Bulst. 197.

(f) A bill of indictment against a peer or peeress is removed before the House of Lords by means of a motion made by the Lord Chancellor and agreed to by the House, and a writ of certiorari is issued under the Great Seal for the purpose. The clerk of the court in which the indictment has been found attends at the bar with the writ of certiorari; see proceedings in the trial of Earl Russell (Journals of the House of Lords, 1901, Vol. CXXXIII., pp. 224 et seq.; see, further, titles CRIMINAL LAW AND PROCEDURE, Vol. IX., p. 270; CROWN PRACTICE, Vol. X., pp. 157 et seq.

(g) In obedience to an order of the House, the Gentleman Usher of the Black Rod takes the accused person into his custody and brings him to the bar of the House, and the Lord Chancellor then acquaints him of the charge which has been brought against him and asks him whether he has anything to offer to the House. It is then open to the accused person to present a petition praying that the hearing of the case may be postponed until he has had time to prepare his answer to the indictment. It is usual for the House to agree to such a petition and to admit the accused person to bail.

(h) A further address is presented to the Sovereign requesting him to order that a sufficient police force be in attendance to keep clear the approaches to the House during the trial.

SECT. 6.

Judicial Functions of the House.Procedure at hearing.

1164. As soon as the answer of the Sovereign signifying his willingness to appoint a Lord High Steward has been made known to the House, an order is made summoning the accused peer to appear at the bar of the House on the day appointed for the trial in order to answer the indictment which has been brought against him, and the Clerk of the Parliaments is authorised to summon such witnesses as may be desired by the Crown and the accused peer (i).

Upon the day appointed for the trial, the lords, wearing their robes, assemble in the House of Lords, and are called over by the Clerk of the Parliaments (k), after which they adjourn to the place in which it has been arranged for the trial to take place (l).

The commission under the Great Seal appointing a Lord High Steward to preside over the trial is then read by the Clerk of the Crown in Chancery, after which the Lord High Steward is presented with his staff of office by Garter King of Arms and the Gentleman Usher of the Black Rod (m).

Determination and delivery of judgment by the peers.

1165. As soon as the trial has been concluded, the lords (n) adjourn to the House of Lords to consider their judgment. When this has been agreed to, they return to the place in which the trial has been held, and their judgment is delivered by the Lord High Steward, after which he declares that the proceedings are at an end, and directs that proclamation be made for dissolving his commission. When this has been done, he breaks his staff of office in two and declares the commission to be dissolved, and the House then adjourns during pleasure.

(i) The fact that a peer acts as a judge in the trial does not invalidate his competency as a witness; see title EVIDENCE, Vol. XIII., p. 570.

(k) When the House is called over, the name of the junior baron is called first.

(l) The officers, attendants, judges, and lords proceed to the appointed place under the direction of Garter King of Arms. No one is allowed to be covered at the trial except the lords. The accused peer or peeress is allowed a seat within the bar, but must be uncovered and without robes.

(m) Although the Lord High Steward presides over the trial, the lords are the judges (see titles COURTS, Vol. IX., p. 22; CRIMINAL LAW AND PROCEDURE, Vol. IX., p. 270), and all persons who may have occasion to speak to the court must address themselves to the lords in general and not to the Lord High Steward. Any proclamation which is made during the course of the trial must be made in the name of the Sovereign. As to the position of the Lord High Steward in his own court, see title COURTS, Vol. IX., p. 26.

(n) Every lord, when he gives his judgment, does so in the manner described in an impeachment; see p. 652, ante. For the position of the lords spiritual in the trial of a peer, see p. 621, ante.

Part III.—The House of Commons.

SECT. 1.—*Composition.*SUB-SECT. 1.—In General.

1166. The House of Commons consists of 670 members, 495 of whom are elected as representatives of England and Wales, 72 of Scotland, and 103 of Ireland (o).

Members of the House of Commons who are not in receipt of salaries as ministers of the Crown, as officers of the House itself, or as officers of His Majesty's household, are paid a salary of £400 a year (p).

SUB-SECT. 2.—Disqualifications for Membership.

1167. Certain persons are disqualified either at common law or by statute for sitting or voting in the House of Commons (q). If it is alleged that any candidate who has been elected to be a member of Parliament is thus disqualified, his right to sit and vote in the House of Commons must be decided by the House itself, or, if the alleged disqualification has been raised in a petition under the Parliamentary Elections Act, 1868 (r), by the judges appointed to try such petitions (s).

1168. It is clear at common law that a woman cannot be elected to serve in Parliament (a).

SECT. 1.
Composition.Composition of House of Commons.Salaries of members.Disqualifications for sitting or voting in the House of Commons.

Women.

(o) Redistribution of Seats Act, 1885 (48 & 49 Vict. c. 23). Seats in the House of Commons are distributed as follows, namely:—

	Counties.	Boroughs.	Universities.
England and Wales	253	237	5
Scotland	39	31	2
Ireland	85	16	2
	377	284	9

As to the election of members, see title ELECTIONS, Vol. XII., pp. 139 et seq., 257 et seq.

(p) Appropriation Act, 1911 (1 & 2 Geo. 5, c. 15).

(q) If an objection is raised as to the qualification of a candidate when he is nominated it is not the duty of the returning officer to determine the question of the candidate's qualification, unless the nomination is obviously an abuse of the right of nomination (2 Rogers on Elections, 18th ed., pp. 96, 97). Notice may be given of a candidate's disqualification at any time before the close of the poll. The effect of such a notice is that all votes which are given to a disqualified candidate after the publication of the notice may be treated as if they had not been given. If the disqualified candidate is elected, therefore, and a petition is brought against his return, the candidate next on the poll may be declared elected if, after taking away the votes given to the successful candidate after the publication of the notice of his disqualification, the latter is found to be in a minority to the other candidate. If no notice of a successful candidate's disqualification is given before the close of the poll and he is unseated on petition, the candidate next on the poll is not entitled to the seat, and a fresh election must take place.

(r) 31 & 32 Vict. c. 125.

(s) For the practice of the House of Commons with regard to controverted elections, see pp. 787 et seq., post.

(a) See 1 Whitelocke on the King's Writ, p. 475.

SECT. 1.

Composition.

Infants.

1169. It would appear that infants have always been debarred by the law of Parliament from sitting and voting in the House of Commons (b), but before the reign of William III. infancy was not a statutory disability, although it was subsequently provided by Act of Parliament that no person under the age of twenty-one years should vote at an election of a member of the House of Commons, or be elected as a member of that House (c).

Aliens.

1170. An alien is disqualified for sitting in Parliament unless he becomes a naturalised British citizen, either by means of a private Act of Parliament (d) or by obtaining a certificate of naturalisation from the Secretary of State (e), when he becomes entitled to all the political and other rights, powers, and privileges to which a natural-born British subject is entitled.

Lunatics.

1171. Mental imbecility disqualifies a person for sitting and voting in the House of Commons (f). If a member after his election to the House is received, or committed into, or detained in any asylum or other place as a lunatic, it is the duty of the court, judge, magistrate, or other person upon whose certificate or order the member has been thus dealt with, to send a certificate to the Speaker acquainting him of the fact. The case is then dealt with under prescribed statutory provisions and, if the member is certified to be insane by the Commissioners in Lunacy, he is no longer capable of sitting or voting in the House (g).

Peers.

1172. Every peer of the United Kingdom or Scotland, whether he is a lord of Parliament or not (h), and every representative

(b) See 2 Hatsell, Precedents of Parliament, ed. 1818, pp. 9—11. For the definition of "infant," see title INFANTS AND CHILDREN, Vol. XVII., pp. 43 et seq.

(c) Stat. (1696) 7 & 8 Will. 3, c. 25, s. 7. The same rule was applied to Scotland by the Union with Scotland Act, 1706 (6 Anne, c. 11), s. 6, and to Ireland by the Parliamentary Elections (Ireland) Act, 1823 (4 Geo. 4, c. 55), s. 74. After the passing of these Acts, minors sat in the House of Commons, but they have not done so since the passing of the Representation of the People Act, 1832 (2 & 3 Will. 4, c. 45); see 1 Anson, Law and Custom of the Constitution, 4th ed., p. 78.

(d) For the procedure with regard to a naturalisation Bill, see title ALIENS, Vol. I., pp. 315, 316, and see p. 761, post.

(e) Naturalization Act, 1870 (33 & 34 Vict. c. 14), s. 7; see title ALIENS, Vol. I., pp. 313 et seq.

(f) D'Ewes, Journals of all the Parliaments in the reign of Queen Elizabeth, ed. 1566, p. 126. For the general law relating to lunatics and idiots, see title LUNATICS AND PERSONS OF UNSOUND MIND, Vol. XIX., pp. 389 et seq.

(g) Lunacy (Vacating of Seats) Act, 1886 (49 & 50 Vict. c. 16), s. 2. For the procedure adopted in such cases, see pp. 788, 789, post.

(h) The fact of his succession to a peerage of the United Kingdom disables the person so succeeding from being elected to, or from sitting or voting in, the House of Commons. When a member of the House succeeds to a peerage which entitles him to receive a writ of summons to the House of Lords, it is not the practice of the House of Commons to declare his seat vacant until the issue of such writ of summons from the Crown. But in the case of a member succeeding to a Scottish peerage, the possession of which does not entitle its holder to receive a writ of summons to the House of Lords, the House of Commons declares his seat vacant upon such evidence of the death of his predecessor and of his succession to the title as it considers fit and sufficient. If a member who has succeeded to a peerage which entitles him to receive a writ of summons to peer of Ireland, is disqualified for sitting in the House of Commons (i).

SECT. 1.

Composition.

Clergy.

1173. It would appear that the clergy of the Church of England from an early date have been held incapable by law of sitting in the House of Commons (k). No statute upon the subject existed, however, until 1801, when it was provided that any person who had been ordained a priest or deacon, or who was a minister of the Church of Scotland, was incapable of being elected a member of the House of Commons; and, further, that if any person, after his election to the House of Commons, was ordained to the office of priest or deacon, or became a minister of the Church of Scotland, he should vacate his seat, a penalty of £500 for every day in which such person continued to sit or vote in the House of Commons being imposed (l).

Any person in holy orders in the Church of Rome is incapable of being elected to sit in Parliament, and, if any person who has been elected to the House of Commons afterwards takes or receives such holy orders, he must vacate his seat, and, if he presumes to sit or vote in the House, renders himself liable to the penalty already mentioned (m).

1174. Persons who have been convicted of treason or felony (n), or who have been found guilty of corrupt or illegal practices at

Felons
and other
offenders.

the House of Lords delays or refuses to apply for such writ, the House of Commons is entitled to ascertain the fact of his succession by such inquiry and upon such evidence as it considers appropriate to the case; see Report from the Select Committee of the House of Commons on House of Commons (Vacating of Seats), 1895, House of Commons Paper, 272; and Report from the Select Committee of the House of Commons on the Earldom of Selborne, 1895, House of Commons Paper, 302.

(i) For the position of Irish peers, see pp. 624, 626, 627, ante.

(k) See 1 Bl. Com. 175; 2 Hatsell, Precedents of Parliament, ed. 1818, pp. 12—17.

(l) House of Commons (Clergy Disqualification) Act, 1801 (41 Geo. 3, c. 53), s. 2. A priest or deacon of the Church of England who relinquishes his orders is no longer disqualified for sitting in the House of Commons; see title ECCLESIASTICAL LAW, Vol. XI., pp. 557, 559.

(m) Roman Catholic Relief Act, 1829 (10 Geo. 4, c. 7), s. 9; and see title ECCLESIASTICAL LAW, Vol. XI., pp. 804, 805. Ministers of Protestant nonconformist religious bodies are capable of being elected to membership of the House of Commons; see title ECCLESIASTICAL LAW, Vol. XI., pp. 811, 813. As to Quakers, Unitarians, and Jews, see ibid., pp. 822, 824.

(n) See Forfeiture Act, 1870 (33 & 34 Vict. c. 23), s. 2; title CRIMINAL LAW AND PROCEDURE, Vol. IX., pp. 428, 429. Before the passing of this Act it was clearly established at common law that a person attainted or adjudged guilty of treason or felony could not be elected to the House of Commons before the expiration of his sentence (see the case of John Mitchel, 18th February, 1875., Journals of the House of Commons, 1875, Vol. CXXX., p. 52; Parliamentary Debates, Third Series, Vol. CCXXII., p. 511; May, Parliamentary Practice, 11th ed., p. 34, n.; for a later case, see that of Alfred Arthur Lynch, 2nd March, 1903, Journals of the House of Commons, 1903, Vol. CLVIII., p. 40). A person who has been convicted of a misdemeanour and sentenced to a shorter period of imprisonment than twelve months without hard labour is not disqualified from being elected a member of the House of Commons. If a person who has been thus sentenced is already a member of the House and is expelled from the House, he may be again elected, therefore, to sit in Parliament.

SECT. 1.
Composition.

Bankrupts.

parliamentary elections (o), are subject to certain disqualifications.

1175. A person who has been adjudged bankrupt is incapable of being elected as a member of the House of Commons, or, if he is already a member, of sitting or voting in that House or of serving upon any of its committees. The seat of any member who has been adjudged bankrupt falls vacant six months after the date of the adjudication, unless within that period the adjudication against him is annulled or he obtains his discharge from the court with a certificate stating that his bankruptcy was due to no misconduct upon his part (p).

Persons holding pensions from
the Crown.

1176. Any person who holds a pension from the Crown either during pleasure, or for a term of years, whether such pension is held by the person himself or by another in trust for him, and any person who receives a sum of money as of royal bounty more than once in three years, is disqualified for being elected to, or for sitting or voting in, the House of Commons (a).

This disqualification no longer exists in the case of any person who holds a pension granted for service rendered in the Civil Service or the Diplomatic Service (b).

Government contractors.

1177. Any person who, directly or indirectly, holds for his own

(o) See title ELECTIONS, Vol. XII., pp. 257—303, 483, 484.

(p) Bankruptcy Act, 1883 (46 & 47 Vict. c. 52), ss. 32, 33; see title BANKRUPTCY AND INSOLVENCY, Vol. II., p. 88. A member incurs no penalty by continuing to sit or vote in the House of Commons after he has been adjudged bankrupt. He can continue, therefore, to discharge his duties as a member of Parliament for a period of six months, unless notice is taken of his presence in the House and an order is made by the House for him to withdraw (see Journals of the House of Commons, 1858, Vol. CXIII., p. 229; for the procedure when a member is adjudged bankrupt during a prorogation, see pp. 789, 790, post). The Bankruptcy Act, 1890 (53 & 54 Vict. c. 71), s. 9, provides that no disqualification which arises under the Bankruptcy Act, 1883 (46 & 47 Vict. c. 52), s. 32, shall exceed a period of five years from the date of a discharge granted under the provisions of either Act. These provisions apply only to England. In Scotland the disqualifications above referred to have been made to apply, with certain modifications; see Bankruptcy Frauds and Disabilities (Scotland) Act, 1884 (47 & 48 Vict. c. 16), ss. 5, 6. In Ireland the law is different. A person who has been adjudged bankrupt in England or Scotland may not be elected to represent any constituency in the United Kingdom, but a person who has been adjudged bankrupt in Ireland may be elected to represent an English or Scottish constituency, and a member of the House who represents an Irish constituency does not vacate his seat until a period of one year has elapsed after he has been adjudged bankrupt; see Bankruptcy (Ireland) Amendment Act, 1872 (35 & 36 Vict. c. 58), ss. 41, 42.

(a) Succession to Crown Act, 1707 (6 Anne, c. 41), s. 24; Crown Pensioners Disqualification Act, 1715 (1 Geo. 1, stat. 2, c. 56); Civil List and Secret Service Money Act, 1782 (22 Geo. 3, c. 82), s. 30. By the Succession to the Crown Act, 1707 (6 Anne, c. 41), s. 28 (which applies to pensioners during pleasure), a penalty of £500 can be recovered from any person so disqualified who sits or votes in the House of Commons; but under the Crown Pensioners Disqualification Act, 1715 (1 Geo. 1, stat. 2, c. 56), s. 2 (which applies to pensioners for a term of years) a fine of £20 may be recovered for every day on which the disqualified person sits or votes.

(b) Pensioners Civil Disabilities Relief Act, 1869 (32 & 33 Vict. c. 15), s. 1; Diplomatic Salaries, etc. Act, 1869 (32 & 33 Vict. c. 43), s. 17.

use or benefit, in the whole or in part, any contract with any person or persons, for or on account of the public service, is incapable of being elected to, or of sitting or voting in, the House of Commons (c).

SECT. 1.
Composition.

1178. The holding of certain offices either (1) altogether disqualifies the holders for being elected as members of the House of Commons, or, if already elected, for continuing to sit or vote in that assembly; or (2) necessitates the vacation of their seats by members appointed to fill them, without, however, preventing their re-election.

Holders of office.

The disability to sit in the House of Commons which attaches to the holding of office in almost every case has been created by statute (d), although in respect of some offices a disability has always existed by the law of Parliament (e).

1179. Any person who accepts an office of profit under the Crown, created since the 25th October, 1705, is incapable of being elected to, or, if already elected, of continuing to sit or vote in, the House of Commons (f), unless a statutory exception has been made

Offices of profit under
the Crown.

(c) House of Commons (Disqualification) Act, 1782 (22 Geo. 3, c. 45), ss. 1, 2. The Act imposes a penalty of £500 in the case of any disqualified person who sits or votes in the House (ibid., s. 9). The Act does not extend to incorporated trading companies where the contract is made for the general benefit of the company (ibid., s. 3); see 2 Rogers on Elections, 18th ed., pp. 27—29. The provisions of the Act were extended to Ireland by the House of Commons Disqualifications Act, 1801 (41 Geo. 3, c. 52), s. 4.

(d) The legislation upon this subject dates from the period immediately following the Revolution of 1688, when the House of Commons was extremely jealous of any interference in its proceedings upon the part of the Crown. During the reign of William III. two Acts were passed disqualifying commissioners of stamps and excise for sitting in the House of Commons, and a stringent provision was inserted in the Act of Settlement (12 & 13 Will. 3, c. 2), s. 3, to make any person who held an office or place of profit under the Crown incapable of serving as a member of the House of Commons. This provision was repealed in 1705 (see stat. (1705) 4 & 5 Anne, c. 20, ss. 27, 28), and two years later the Succession to the Crown Act, 1707 (6 Anne, c. 41), was passed, the provisions of which form the basis of the present law with regard to disqualification incurred by the holding of offices; see 1 Anson, Law and Custom of the Constitution, 4th ed., p. 83.

(e) With the exception of the Master of the Rolls, who became disqualified by virtue of the Judicature Act, 1875 (38 & 39 Vict. c. 77), s. 5, the judges have always been excluded from the House of Commons by the law of Parliament for the reason that they were the assistants of the other House; see Yearly Practice of the Supreme Court, 1912, p. 1325. The Attorney-General used formerly to be excluded for the same reason, although apparently the Solicitor-General has always been allowed to sit in the House of Commons; see 2 Hatsell, Precedents of Parliament, ed. 1818, pp. 26—29. Sheriffs used formerly to be disqualified altogether for sitting in the House of Commons, although eventually the disqualification of a sheriff appears to have been limited to an incapacity to be elected for his own county; but that considerable uncertainty existed with regard to this matter is proved by a resolution of the House of Commons in 1789 declaring that the nomination of any of its members as a sheriff was a breach of the privileges of the House; see ibid., pp. 30—34; and see title SHERIFFS AND BAILIFFS.

(f) Succession to the Crown Act, 1707 (6 Anne, c. 41), s. 24, which has been held to apply not only to new offices accepted directly from the Crown, but also to new offices the appointment to which is vested in some authority under the Crown, and also to new offices created by Parliament for the service of the exempting the office in question from the provisions of the Act passed in that year (g); and any member of the House who accepts an office of profit under the Crown, which was in existence before that date, must thereupon resign his seat and again submit himself for election (h).

SECT. 1.
Composition.

Other administrative and official posts.

1180. In addition to the statutory disqualifications referred to in the preceding paragraphs (i) and to the other disqualifications to which allusion has already been made (k), the holders of many offices have been definitely excluded by Parliament from sitting in the House of Commons. Such incapacity generally attaches to persons

State the appointment to which is vested in the Crown. (For a list of new offices created since the 25th October, 1705, to which this provision applies, see 2 Rogers on Elections, 18th ed., pp. 15—17.) In Ireland, any person who accepts a new office under the Lord Lieutenant created since the passing of an Act of the Irish Parliament (stat. (1793) 33 Geo. 3, c. 41 (Irish)) is made incapable of sitting or voting in the House of Commons by the House of Commons (Disqualifications) Act, 1801 (41 Geo. 3, c. 52), s. 5. Any member of Parliament who sits or votes in the House of Commons after becoming disqualified under the provisions of the Succession to the Crown Act, 1707 (6 Anne, c. 41), or the House of Commons (Disqualifications) Act, 1801 (41 Geo. 3, c. 52), renders himself liable to a fine of £500 for every day he sits or votes. Examples of offices created since the 25th October, 1705, which have been held by the House of Commons from time to time to come within the provisions of the Act, can best be found in the Journals of the House; see General Index to the Journals under title Elections, Writs (Warrants for New Writs) Ordered, in the room of members who have accepted offices or employments.

(g) The Succession to the Crown Act, 1707 (6 Anne, c. 41), s. 27, expressly excludes any member of the House, being an officer of the navy or army, who receives a new commission in the navy or army, from the provisions of ibid., s. 24 (see note (f), supra), but the House has determined upon more than one occasion that a member who receives a commission in the navy or army for the first time thereby vacates his seat. For a complete list of the statutes which have been passed from time to time excepting certain offices from the provisions of the Succession to the Crown Act, 1707 (6 Anne, c. 41), s. 24, see 2 Chronological Table and Index of the Statutes, 26th ed., pp. 628—629, under title "House of Commons, Members, (b) Persons not disqualified." Among such offices may be cited those of Postmaster-General, President of the Board of Trade, President of the Local Government Board, President of the Board of Agriculture, and President of the Board of Education, Paymaster-General, First Commissioner of Works and Buildings, four Secretaries of State, Commissioner of the Treasury, Secretary for Scotland, and Governor, Deputy Governor, Director, or any member of the Bank of England. Acceptance of certain of these offices necessitates the resignation of his seat by a member, but his appointment is no bar to his re-election.

(h) Succession to the Crown Act, 1707 (6 Anne, c. 41), s. 25. The practice of the House has been to interpret the meaning of this provision to apply only to old offices in existence before the passing of the Act, which are accepted direct from the Crown and not from some authority under the Crown; see 2 Hatsell, Precedents of Parliament, ed. 1818, pp. 51, 61; see also 2 Rogers on Elections, 18th ed., pp. 46—54. For a list of the offices to which this provision refers, see 2 Chronological Table and Index of the Statutes, 26th ed., pp. 628—629. A member of the House of Commons who is returned to the House after accepting any one of certain specified offices from the Crown is not required again to vacate his seat if he accepts another of such specified offices (Representation of the People Act, 1867 (30 & 31 Vict. c. 102), s. 52). For a list of such offices, see ibid., Schedule (H); title CONSTITUTIONAL LAW, Vol. VII., p. 40, note (e). For the procedure upon the vacation of a seat in the House of Commons, see p. 652, post.

(i) See the text, supra.

(k) See pp. 656 et seq., ante.

who are connected with the administration of justice or the police (l); who are employed in connection with the collection or audit of public money, or in the administration of property for public purposes (m); or who are appointed to represent the Crown or to hold offices at Court or in the Government departments (n).

SECT. 1.
Composition.
—

SUB-SECT. 3.—Retirement from Membership.

1181. A member who has been elected to sit in the House of Commons cannot resign his seat (o), and can only cease to

Methods of retirement from the House of Commons.

(l) E.g., judges of the High Court and Court of Appeal in England (Judicature Act, 1875 (38 & 39 Vict. c. 77), s. 5); judges of the Court of Session etc. in Scotland (Parliamentary Elections (Scotland) Act, 1733 (7 Geo. 2, c. 16), s. 4); judges of the High Court and Court of Appeal in Ireland (Supreme Court of Judicature (Ireland) Act, 1877 (40 & 41 Vict. c. 57), s. 13); recorder of a borough in England for the borough of which he is recorder (Municipal Corporations Act, 1882 (45 & 46 Vict. c. 50), s. 163 (6)); county court judges in England (County Courts Act, 1888 (51 & 52 Vict. c. 43), s. 8); justices and police officers in Dublin (Dublin Police Act, 1836 (6 & 7 Will. 4, c. 29), s. 19); Commissioners etc. of Metropolitan Police (Metropolitan Police Acts, 1829 (10 Geo. 4, c. 44), s. 18, 1836 (19 & 20 Vict. c. 2), s. 9); magistrates and inspectors of constabulary in Ireland (Constabulary (Ireland) Act, 1836 (6 & 7 Will. 4, c. 13), s. 18); sheriff and salaried sheriff-substitute in Scotland (Sheriff Courts (Scotland) Act, 1907 (7 Edw. 7, c. 51), s. 21); revising barrister in England for the county or borough for which he is appointed (Parliamentary Voters Registration Act, 1843 (6 & 7 Vict. c. 18), s. 28); corrupt practices commissioner (Election Commissioners Act, 1852 (15 & 16 Vict. c. 57), s. 1); paid chairman or deputy-chairman of London Quarter Sessions (Local Government Act, 1888 (51 & 52 Vict. c. 41), s. 42 (4)); assistant barrister (chairman of quarter sessions), Ireland (Civil Bill Courts (Ireland) Act, 1851 (14 & 15 Vict. c. 57), s. 2); registrars and other officers in bankruptcy (Bankruptcy Act, 1883 (46 & 47 Vict. c. 52), s. 116); barrister appointed to try a municipal election petition (Municipal Corporations Act, 1882 (45 & 46 Vict. c. 50), s. 92); commissioners etc. under the Land Commission in Ireland (Land Law (Ireland) Act, 1881 (44 & 45 Vict. c. 49), s. 54); stipendiary magistrates (under the various Acts by which they are appointed).

(m) E.g., Auditor of the Civil List (Civil List Audit Act, 1816 (56 Geo. 3, c. 46), s. 8); Collector-General of Rates etc. in Dublin (stat. (1849), 12 & 13 Vict. c. 91, s. 24); Commissioners of Woods and Forests, with the exception of the President of the Board of Agriculture and Fisheries (Crown Lands Act, 1851 (14 & 15 Vict. c. 42), s. 10); paid Charity Commissioners, secretary and inspectors (Charitable Trusts Act, 1853 (16 & 17 Vict. c. 137), s. 5); Comptroller and Auditor-General and his assistant (Exchequer and Audit Departments Act, 1866 (29 & 30 Vict. c. 39), s. 3); paid officers of county councils permanently employed, in England and Ireland (Local Government Act, 1888 (51 & 52 Vict. c. 41), s. 83 (13), and Local Government (Ireland) Act, 1898 (61 & 62 Vict. c. 37), s. 83 (10)); commissioners and officers of excise (Excise Management Act, 1827 (7 & 8 Geo. 4, c. 53), s. 8).

(n) E.g., clerks in the Treasury, Admiralty, and in the departments of the Secretaries of State, and other officials (House of Commons Disqualification Act, 1741 (15 Geo. 2, c. 22), preamble, and House of Commons (Disqualifications) Act, 1801 (41 Geo. 3, c. 52), s. 4); members of the Council of India and governors and deputy-governors in India (Government of India Act, 1858 (21 & 22 Vict. c. 106), ss. 12, 64; fifth Under Secretary of State, when four Under Secretaries are already sitting in the House (Government of India Act, 1858 (21 & 22 Vict. c. 106), s. 4, and House of Commons (Vacation of Seats) Act, 1864 (27 & 28 Vict. c. 34); Court appointments enumerated in the Civil List and Secret Service Money Act, 1782 (22 Geo. 3, c. 82); Commissioners of Public Works in Ireland (Public Works (Ireland) Act, 1831 (1 & 2 Will. 4, c. 33), s. 11).

(o) See resolution of the House of Commons upon this subject, 2nd March, 1623; compare 2 Hatsell, Precedents of Parliament, ed. 1818, pp. 78—80.

SECT. 1.
Composition.

represent his constituency in Parliament (1) by reason of his death ; (2) by being expelled from the House of Commons by an order of the House (p) ; (3) by the dissolution of the Parliament to which he has been elected ; (4) by disqualifying himself for continuing any longer to sit or vote in the House of Commons ; or (5) by the establishment against him of some legal disqualification for sitting and voting.

Acceptance of office of profit under
the Crown.

1182. If a member, therefore, wishes to retire from Parliament, or is anxious to resign the seat for which he has been elected in order to stand for some other constituency or to discover whether he still possesses the confidence of his constituents, the practice of Parliament is for him to apply to be appointed to some office under the Crown the possession of which (q) disqualifies its holder for sitting or voting in the House of Commons (a).

A member is appointed to the office of Steward of the Chiltern Hundreds, or other similar office, by means of a warrant which is signed, in the presence of a witness, by the Chancellor of the Exchequer (b). As soon as the warrant has been signed, the person who has been appointed to the office in question ceases to be the member of Parliament for the constituency for which he is sitting (c) at the time, although he is not disqualified for re-election to Parliament (d).

(p) As to the powers of the House with regard to the expulsion of members, see pp. 787 et seq., post.

(q) Under the provisions already referred to ; see p. 659, ante, and see p. 789, post.

(a) At the present time the offices for which application is usually made are those of Steward of the Chiltern Hundreds, co. Bucks, and of the Manor of Northstead, co. Yorks ; see May, Parliamentary Practice, 11th ed., p. 643. There are numerous other offices of the same kind, however, for which a member of the House of Commons can apply and the appointment to which vacates his seat in Parliament. All such offices are now nominal. Appointments to the offices of Steward of the Chiltern Hundreds and of the Manor of Northstead are made by the Chancellor of the Exchequer, whose duty it is to grant any application for either of the offices, unless there is some lawful reason to the contrary ; see statement of Sir William Harcourt, as Chancellor of the Exchequer in 1893, Parliamentary Debates, Fourth Series, Vol. VIII., p. 50. The offices are now in no sense offices of profit under the Crown, but, as formerly they used to carry with them certain emoluments, it has been found convenient, as a matter of parliamentary practice, to retain in the warrants of appointment to them words entitling their holders to all wages, fees, allowances etc. which used formerly to belong to them, and the insertion of these words has always been held to necessitate the immediate vacation of their seats by the holders of such offices ; see Report from the Select Committee of the House of Commons on House of Commons (Vacating of Seats), 1894, House of Commons Paper (278), Appendix. It is possible for a member who has not taken the oath to apply for the Chiltern Hundreds ; see case of Mr. Bradlaugh, Journals of the House of Commons, 1884, Vol. CXXXIX., p. 46.

(b) All appointments to these offices are published in the London Gazette, and the warrants of appointment are registered at the Treasury.

(c) If the appointment is made during the course of the session, notice of a motion for the issue of a new writ to fill the vacancy thereby caused may be made immediately the warrant of appointment has been signed ; but, if the appointment is made during a recess, the Speaker has no power to issue a writ to fill the vacancy ; and see p. 789, post.

(d) The person appointed to hold one of these nominal offices holds it until someone else is appointed to take his place.

SECT. 2.—*Procedure and Conduct of Business.*SUB-SECT. 1.—In General.

1183. The business of the House of Commons is transacted (1) in the House itself; (2) in committees of the whole House; (3) in four standing committees, appointed for the consideration of Bills; (4) in select committees and joint committees of the two Houses, appointed to consider Bills or other matters; (5) in various other committees, appointed under the standing orders of the House every session for certain purposes; and (6) in private Bill committees.

The conduct of business in the House of Commons and the procedure of the House on public and private business are fixed and regulated by the standing orders of the House, by numerous resolutions and orders which have been agreed to from time to time and have continued to be acted upon by the House, and by a series of precedents and customs which are based partly upon the traditions of the House and partly upon the rulings given from time to time by successive Speakers on questions of practice and points of order.

SUB-SECT. 2.—Business Transacted in the House itself.

1184. In the House of Commons, the business which is transacted in the House itself is similar to that which is transacted in the House of Lords (e). It is divided into public business and private business. The former consists of all the stages of public Bills except the committee stage, of other orders of the day (f), and of notices and motions (g). The latter includes the first, second, and third readings, and the report stage of private Bills and provisional order confirmation Bills as well as the consideration of the standing orders which relate to such Bills.

SUB-SECT. 3.—The Speaker.

1185. The deliberations of the House of Commons, except when the House is in committee (h), are presided over by a Speaker, who is chosen by the House at the beginning of every new Parliament (i). He is the guardian of the privileges of the House, and its spokesman and representative upon all occasions.

SECT. 2.
Procedure
and Conduct
of Business.

Conduct
of business.

Stages of Bills and other matters considered in
the House.

The Speaker.

(e) See pp. 628, 629, ante.

(f) See p. 632, ante.

(g) By the practice of the House notice of a substantive motion—i.e., notice of the intention of a member to call the attention of the House to some particular subject which does not arise out of the orders of the day, or to move a resolution, or to ask for a return—must be printed on the notice paper; see May, Parliamentary Practice, 11th ed., p. 238. (As to the notice paper, see note (n), p. 670, post). In the case of a matter of privilege immediately or presently arising, as no notice of the matter in question could have been given, a motion, arising out of the alleged breach of privilege, may be made without notice. To an adjourned debate on such a question precedence is given over the orders of the day.

(h) See p. 665, post.

(i) For the procedure with regard to the election of the Speaker and the confirmation of his election by the Crown, see pp. 692 et seq., post. The Speaker receives a salary of £5,000 per annum, which is charged upon the Consolidated

SECT. 2.

Procedure
and Conduct
of Business.

Guardian
of the privileges of
the House.

1186. As the guardian of the privileges of the House, the Speaker, immediately after the confirmation of his election has been announced to him by the Lord Chancellor, demands from the Crown the rights and privileges of the Commons, and, throughout the duration of the Parliament, he is responsible for the preservation of the dignity, the maintenance of the privileges, and the due enforcement of the rights of the House of Commons.

To the Speaker, therefore, belongs the duty of executing all the orders of the House, and accordingly he issues warrants for the commitment of persons who have incurred the displeasure of the House, for the attendance of witnesses in custody, and for the issue of writs for filling seats in the House which become vacant during the course of a Parliament.

It is also the duty of the Speaker to draw the attention of the House to, and to express his views with regard to, any amendments proposed by the Lords to a Bill sent up to them by the Commons, which, in his opinion, infringe the privilege claimed by the House of Commons to the sole control in matters of finance.

Spokesman and representative of
the House.

1187. As the spokesman of the House, the Speaker communicates its resolutions and orders, conveys its thanks, and expresses its censures and warnings, to those concerned; and to him, as the official representative of the House, are addressed any communications from outside which are sent to the House of Commons.

Presiding officer of the House.

1188. As the presiding officer of the House, the Speaker is the interpreter of its rules and procedure, and is invested with the power to control and regulate the course of debate and to maintain order. He puts the question on every motion and declares the decision of the House with regard to it, but he will not submit any motion to the House which infringes any standing order or rule of procedure, and he is the sole judge of the admissibility or propriety of a question which any member proposes to ask a minister or other member in the House.

Duties under Parliament
Act, 1911.

1189. In addition to these various functions, the Speaker is empowered to perform certain specified duties with regard to Bills

Fund (House of Commons Officers Act, 1834 (4 & 5 Will. 4, c. 70), s. 1). During a dissolution of Parliament the Speaker of the late House of Commons, for certain purposes laid down in the regulation of offices in the House of Commons (Offices) Act, 1812 (52 Geo. 3, c. 11), is deemed to be the Speaker until a Speaker is chosen by the new House (House of Commons Offices Act, 1846 (9 & 10 Vict. c. 77), s. 5). The precedence of the Speaker is fixed indirectly by stat. (1868) 1 Will. & Mar. c. 21, s. 1, which enacts that the Lords Commissioners of the Great Seal, not being peers, "shall have and take place next after the peers of this realm, and the Speaker of the House of Commons"; see 2 Hatsell, Precedents of Parliament, ed. 1818, p. 249, n. Since the passing of this statute, however, definite precedence immediately after the Archbishop of York has been given by Royal warrant, dated December, 1905, to the Prime Minister, whether peer or commoner, and presumably, therefore, he takes precedence of the Speaker except in the House of Commons. Upon his resignation of office the Speaker is usually created a peer, and it is customary also for Parliament to confer upon him a pension of £4,000 during his natural life; see Mr. Speaker's Retirement Acts, 1895 (58 & 59 Vict. c. 10), and 1905 (5 Edw. 7, c. 5).

defined as “money Bills” in the Parliament Act, 1911 (j), and also with regard to Bills, other than money Bills so defined, which, having been passed by the House of Commons, have not been passed by the other House (k).

SECT. 2.
Procedure and Conduct of Business.

1190. The House will allow the conduct of the Speaker to be questioned only by means of a substantive motion, and will not tolerate a reflection upon his conduct to be made in any other way by one of its members either inside or outside the precincts of the House of Commons. Nor may any notice of a question to the Speaker be given by any member in the House. If, however, an appeal is made to him by a member with regard to a question of order or a matter affecting the privilege of the House or of one of its members, the Speaker will state his opinion upon the point in question.

Attitude of House with regard to criticism of the Speaker.

SUB-SECT. 4.—Committee of the whole House.

(i.) Going into Committee.

1191. The House resolves itself into a committee of the whole House (1) to consider a public Bill after it has been read a second time, or any Bill which is re-committed after it has been reported from a select committee, or any Bill which has been specially re-committed (l); (2) to consider supply and ways and means (m); and (3) to consider any other matter which the House is required by its rules, or which it thinks fit, to discuss therein.

Purposes for which House goes into committee.

1192. A committee of the whole House consists of all the members present, and meets either forthwith or on some future day. In the case of a matter imposing a charge upon the people or affecting the public expenditure, the committee must always be fixed for some future day.

Appointment and constitution of committee of the whole House.

1193. When the order of the day is read for the House to resolve itself into committee, the Speaker leaves the chair without question put (n), except in the following cases, when the question “That Mr. Speaker do now leave the chair?” must be proposed, namely:—(1) when the committee is one to consider a message from the Crown (o); (2) when the House is moved to resolve itself into a committee on the East India Revenue Accounts; or (3) when, upon the first occasion of considering in committee of supply the navy, army, or civil service estimates or any vote of credit, an amendment is moved or a question raised relating to the estimates or vote of credit proposed to be taken in committee of supply (p).

When the Speaker leaves the chair without question put.

(j) 1 & 2 Geo. 5, c. 13; see note (i), p. 776, post.

(k) Parliament Act, 1911 (1 & 2 Geo. 5, c. 13), ss. 1 (3), 2 (2), (4); see pp. 723, 776, post.

(l) See pp. 710, 715, post.

(m) See pp. 772, 774, post.

(n) Standing Orders of the House of Commons (Public Business), 1911, No. 51; see p. 712, post.

(o) See p. 802, post.

(p) Standing Orders of the House of Commons (Public Business), 1911, No. 17; see p. 772, post.

SECT. 2.

Procedure
and Conduct
of Business.

The Speaker also remains in the chair when the order of the day for committee on a Bill is read, if notice has been given by any member of his intention to move an instruction to the committee, until such instruction has been disposed of by the House (q).

(ii.) The Chairman of Ways and Means.

Chairman of Ways and Means.

1194. Committees of the whole House are presided over by a member of the House, chosen by the House for that duty upon the motion (r) of the leader of the House or of some prominent member of the Government (s).

The member who is thus appointed is known as the Chairman of Ways and Means, and holds office for the duration of the Parliament (t). In addition to taking the chair in all committees of the whole House, the Chairman of Ways and Means is empowered to act as Deputy Speaker, and, when the unavoidable absence of the Speaker has been announced, may exercise the authority and perform the duties of Speaker (u).

Deputy Chairman.

1195. A Deputy Chairman is also appointed by the House in a similar manner, who, in the absence of the Chairman of Ways and Means, presides over any committee of the whole House, and, if necessary, may also act as Deputy Speaker (v).

Temporary Chairmen.

1196. In addition to the Chairman of Ways and Means and the Deputy Chairman, the Speaker is empowered to nominate five members at the beginning of every session, any one of whom may act as Temporary Chairman of any committee of the whole House, upon the request of the Chairman of Ways and Means (w).

(q) Standing Orders of the House of Commons (Public Business), 1911, No. 51. In the House of Commons a general instruction is given to committees of the whole House to make any relevant amendments to the Bills which are referred to them (ibid., No. 34). The object of an instruction to a committee of the whole House, or to a standing committee, is to enable the committee to do something which it could not do under its general powers. An instruction to a committee of the whole House, or to a standing committee, must not be mandatory, or such as to alter the character of the Bill which is before the committee. For the principles which guide and limit the system of instructions, see May, Parliamentary Practice, 11th ed., pp. 478, 935.

(r) This motion is made when the House goes into committee of supply for the first time in a new Parliament, or the first day of the session after the usual sessional orders have been agreed to, and before the Speech from the Throne (see p. 696, post) is reported to the House by the Speaker, or on a subsequent day before the commencement of public business.

(s) For the procedure with regard to the transaction of business in committee of the whole House, see p. 713, post, and for the procedure in Committee of Supply and Committee of Ways and Means, see pp. 772, 774, post.

(t) The Chairman of Ways and Means receives a salary of £2,500 per annum. For the duties of the Chairman with regard to private Bills, in which he is assisted by a legal adviser who is known as Counsel to the Speaker, see pp. 750 et seq., post.

(u) Standing Orders of the House of Commons (Public Business), 1911, Nos. 1, (9), 81 (1).

(v) Ibid., No. 81 (2). The Deputy Chairman receives a salary of £1,000 per annum.

(w) Ibid., No. 1 (9); see Journals of the House of Commons, 1910, Vol. CLXV., p. 28.

SUB-SECT. 5.—Permanent Officers.

SECT. 2.

1197. The principal permanent officers of the House are the Clerk of the House of Commons and the two Clerks Assistant, who sit at the table during the sittings of the House, and the Serjeant-at-Arms, who is also present in the House.

Procedure and Conduct of Business.

Officers in attendance.

1198. The Clerk of the House is the head of the permanent staff of the House of Commons (x). He is appointed under letters patent by the Crown to be "Under Clerk of the Parliaments to attend upon the Commons" (y). The Clerks Assistant are appointed by the Crown under the Sign Manual to assist him in carrying out his duties upon the nomination of the Speaker (z).

Clerk of the House and other clerks.

1199. The Serjeant-at-Arms is appointed by the Crown "to attend upon His Majesty's person when there is no Parliament; and, at the time of every Parliament, to attend upon the Speaker of the House of Commons." He can only be removed from his office by the Crown upon the presentation of an address from the House of Commons for that purpose (a).

Serjeant-at-Arms.

SUB-SECT. 6.—Votes and Proceedings.

1200. A record of the previous day's proceedings in the House is issued each morning during the session, under the title of "The Votes and Proceedings" (b). This record is compiled from the minute books kept by the clerks at the table, and, after Votes and proceedings.

(x) The office of the Clerk of the House of Commons is divided into four departments, namely, the Private Bill Office, the Public Bill Office, the Journal Office, and the Committee Office. There are thirty-two clerks on the establishment, who are appointed on the nomination of the Clerk of the House of Commons. A clerk in the House of Commons can be removed or suspended if, after an inquiry, it appears to the Speaker that he has been guilty of misconduct or is unfit to hold his situation (House of Commons (Offices) Act, 1812 (52 Geo. 3, c. 11), s. 16).

(y) For the duties which are performed by the Clerk of the House of Commons, see title COURTS, Vol. IX., p. 25. In addition to the duties there mentioned, the Clerk of the House of Commons has certain other duties entrusted to him by the House and by statute. He indorses all Bills which are sent to the Lords, carries messages between the two Houses, is responsible for the printing of the Journals, and lays certain papers on the table of the House. When the office of Speaker is vacant and there is no Deputy Speaker, he performs certain duties assigned to the Speaker with regard to election petitions; see Parliamentary Elections Act, 1868 (31 & 32 Vict. c. 125), s. 4.

(z) The Clerks Assistant are removable only by the Sovereign upon an address of the House of Commons for that purpose (House of Commons Offices Act, 1856 (19 & 20 Vict. c. 1), s. 1).

(a) For the duties of the Serjeant-at-Arms with regard to the arrest of persons for breach of privilege, see title COURTS, Vol. IX., p. 26. In addition to these duties, he is the executive officer who carries out the rules of the House and the orders of the Speaker with regard to the maintenance of order in the House. He is entrusted by the Lord Great Chamberlain with the custody of all parts of the palace of Westminster occupied by the House of Commons and its officers during the session. He appoints all officers, messengers and other persons attendant upon the House (House of Commons (Offices) Act, 1812 (52 Geo. 3, c. 11), s. 15; compare May, Parliamentary Practice, 11th ed., pp. 204, 205).

(b) The Votes and Proceedings of the House have been issued with some interruptions since the year 1680; see May, Parliamentary Practice, 11th ed., p. 201.

SECT. 2.
Procedure
 and Conduct
 of Business.
Journals.

"being first perused by Mr. Speaker," is printed by some person authorised by him.

SUB-SECT. 7.—Journals of the House.

1201. The Journals are compiled in the Journal Office of the House from the Votes and Proceedings of the House. The Journal of each session, together with an index, is issued as soon as possible after the session has been brought to a close, and is printed by a person licensed by the Speaker (c).

SUB-SECT. 8.—Quorum.

Quorum of
 the House and of committee of the whole
 House.

1202. The quorum of the House of Commons, and of a committee of the whole House, consists of forty members, which number includes the Speaker or the Chairman, as the case may be (d).

Count of the House.

1203. Any time during a sitting of the House, except between a quarter past eight and a quarter past nine o'clock p.m. (e), any member may take notice that forty members are not present, and may call the attention of the Speaker to the fact (f). Strangers are then ordered to withdraw, and if, within two minutes after this order has been given, the Speaker finds that forty members are not present, and it is then after four o'clock in the afternoon (g), he adjourns the House, and thereupon the House stands adjourned until the day appointed for its next sitting (h).

SUB-SECT. 9.—Motions.

Matters decided on question.

1204. Every matter with regard to which the House or any committee of the House is called upon to give a decision is submitted to its judgment by means of a question put from the chair on a motion which has been made by some member of the House or of the committee.

Motions
 requiring a seconder.

1205. In the House itself every motion, unless it is of a purely formal character, must be seconded before it is proposed from the (c) The Journals of the House of Commons, which date from the year 1547, have not been regarded as public records, but at the present time they are accepted as evidence in any court of law in England or Ireland (Evidence Act, 1845 (8 & 9 Vict. c. 113), s. 3; see title EVIDENCE, Vol. XIII., p. 527; compare note (n), p. 631, ante). When a cause is tried in London and a Journal of the House is required in evidence, it is usual for an officer of the House to attend at the court with the necessary volume: in other cases a certified copy of the required entries in the Journals can be obtained from the Journal Office of the House; see May, Parliamentary Practice, 11th ed., p. 202.

(d) Forty members need not be present when a message is received from the Sovereign, or when a request is sent by the Lords Commissioners for the attendance of the Commons in the House of Lords; see p. 694, post.

(e) Standing Orders of the House of Commons (Public Business), 1911, No. 25.

(f) The fact that there are not forty members present may also be brought to the notice of the Speaker or the Chairman by the report of the tellers in a division. A division in which less than forty members take part is invalid.

(g) If it is proved, on a count before four o'clock, that forty members are not present, the Speaker leaves the chair until a quorum is present, or until four o'clock, when the House may be counted out.

(h) The same rules with regard to a count out apply when the House is in committee. The House is resumed, and the Chairman reports to the Speaker the fact that forty members are not present. The Speaker, after again counting the House, adjourns it if forty members are not then present.

chair, but an order of the day or a motion made in committee does not require a seconder (i).

SECT. 2.

Procedure
and Conduct
of Business.

Irregular
motions.

1206. A motion is irregular and out of order (1) which is substantially the same as a question which the House has decided, either in the affirmative or the negative, during the same session (j); (2) which anticipates a matter already appointed by the House for its consideration (k); or (3) which anticipates a motion for leave to bring in a Bill, or a notice to present a Bill, upon the same subject as that proposed to be dealt with in the motion (l).

A motion which embodies a personal charge is not in order unless it be drawn in a direct and substantive form, and a motion which deals with a matter which is still under judicial consideration is also out of order.

1207. A subject with regard to which notice of a motion has been given cannot be anticipated in debate upon some other matter, and the same rule applies to a debate upon a motion for the adjournment of the House, (1) whether for the purpose of discussing a definite matter of urgent public importance or for the holidays, or (2) which is moved at the end of, or between, the orders of the day (m).

Rules with regard to anticipation in debate.

In the same way, it is out of order to anticipate the discussion of a motion standing upon the notice paper or the order book by means of an amendment moved to the address or to some other motion.

1208. As a general rule, notice is required of every motion with regard to any matter upon which the House is asked to arrive at a decision.

Notices of motions.

Such notices must be handed in by members to the clerk at the

(i) In the case of a motion made by a member of the Government, the rule as to a seconder is usually dispensed with, but otherwise, if a motion for which a seconder is required is not seconded, it is not entered on the proceedings; see Ilbert, Manual of Procedure in the Public Business of the House of Commons, 2nd ed., p. 106.

(j) See Resolutions of the House, 8th May, 1606, 1st June, 1610 (Journals of the House of Commons, Vol. I., pp. 306, 434).

(k) A matter appointed for consideration by the House includes a Bill which has been introduced, or an adjourned debate upon a motion which has thus become an order of the day. The rules against anticipation were explained at length by the Speaker on the 10th July, 1908; see Parliamentary Debates, Fourth Series, Vol. CXCI., pp. 228—231.

(l) See May, Parliamentary Practice, 11th ed., p. 279.

(m) The object of these rules is to prevent a member from forestalling unfairly the discussion of a matter which another member has already given notice of his intention of bringing before the House. In practice, however, it has been found that motions have been put down in order to prevent the discussion by the House of a particular matter; see Report from the Select Committee of the House of Commons on Procedure (Anticipatory Motions), 1907, House of Commons Paper (264). On the 27th March, 1907, the House resolved "That to put a motion on the order paper of this House, or to introduce a Bill, so as to prevent discussion in this House of motions for which precedence has been obtained in the ballot, or of definite matters of urgent public importance, is hurtful to the usefulness of this House and an infringement of the rights of its members"; see Journals of the House of Commons, 1907, Vol. CLXII., p. 96.

SECT. 2.
Procedure
 and Conduct
 of Business.

table during the sitting of the House, and are then printed and sent out with the Votes and Proceedings (n).

A member may also give oral notice in the House of any motion which he intends to move (o), but, in order to obtain precedence for such motion, he must not fail to hand in at the table on the same day the terms of his motion in writing.

SUB-SECT. 10.—Closure.

Closure of
 debate.

1209. After a question has been proposed either in the House or in committee of the whole House, or in a standing committee (p), it is permissible for a member to rise in his place and claim to move "That the question be now put." When such a motion is made, unless he is of opinion that it is an abuse of the rules of the House or an infringement of the rights of the minority, the Speaker or the Chairman, as the case may be, immediately puts the question "That the question be now put?" which must be decided by the House or the committee, without amendment or debate (q). As soon as a motion of this kind has been carried, the question upon which it was moved is put from the chair, and, unless the assent of the Speaker or the Chairman, as the case may be, is withheld, any further motion may be made which may be necessary to obtain the decision of the House, or of the committee, upon any question which has already been proposed from the chair.

When a clause of a Bill is under consideration either in committee or on the report stage (r), unless the assent of the chair is withheld, a motion may be made that the question, that certain (n) As to Votes and Proceedings, see pp. 667, 668, ante. In addition to the notices of motions, and of questions handed in the previous day, a notice paper (known as the "Blue Paper"), showing the agenda for the day, is circulated with the Votes and Proceedings; see p. 667, ante. A reprint of the Blue Paper (known as the "White Paper") is issued before the meeting of the House, on which the business of the day is set out in the order in which it will be taken. With the agenda of each day there are also circulated the printed answers to questions. Another paper (known as the "Order Book of the House of Commons") is also issued every afternoon throughout the session. On this paper appears every order of the day and notice of motion that has been set down for any day in the session, as well as every notice of motion for which no day has been fixed. On Saturdays, in addition to the agenda for the next sitting day, the Order Book for the remainder of the session, commencing with the next sitting day but one, is circulated to members.

(o) Oral notice of a motion is effective during the day on which it is given.

(p) Standing Orders of the House of Commons (Public Business), 1911, No. 26. In the House itself a motion for the closure may be put in force only when the Speaker, or, if his unavoidable absence has been announced, the Deputy Speaker, is in the chair; in a committee of the whole House, only when the Chairman of Ways and Means or the Deputy Chairman is in the chair.

(q) In the House, or in a committee of the whole House, a motion for the closure of debate can be decided in the affirmative only when it appears by the numbers declared from the chair, after a decision has been taken, that not less than one hundred members voted in the majority in support of the motion; see Standing Orders of the House of Commons (Public Business), 1911, No. 27. In a standing committee the majority must be not less than twenty; see ibid., No. 47 (5).

(r) See pp. 713, 714, 717, post.

words of the clause or schedule under consideration stand part of the clause or schedule, or that the entire clause or schedule stand part of or be added to the Bill, as the case may be, be now put (s).

SECT. 2.
Procedure
and Conduct
of Business.

In both the above cases the question which is put to the House, or to the committee, is that for the closure, and, if it is carried, the subsequent question must be decided forthwith and without amendment or debate.

1210. In addition to the forms of closure already described, another form of closure may also be employed, unless the assent of the chair is withheld. A motion may be made stating that, with regard to certain specified words in any motion, or clause, or schedule of a Bill, which is under the consideration of the House or a committee of the whole House (t), the chair be empowered to select the amendments to be proposed. If a motion of this kind, which is put forthwith and decided without amendment or debate, is carried, the Speaker or the Chairman, as the case may be, is thereby authorised to exercise the power of selecting which of the amendments proposed to the words covered by the motion shall be submitted to the consideration of the House or the committee (u).

Motion empowering chair to select amendments.

SUB-SECT. 11.—Divisions.

1211. When the decision of the Speaker or the Chairman as to the preponderance of voices upon a question which has been put from the chair is challenged, the Speaker or the Chairman, as the case may be, immediately orders the lobby to be cleared, and, after an interval of two minutes, he again puts the question. If his decision is again challenged, and in his opinion the challenge is a genuine one (v), he directs the "ayes" to go into the right lobby and the "noes" into the left, and nominates two tellers for each side (a). The division then begins without any further delay. The members who take part in it pass through one or other of the lobbies, give their names to the clerks who stand at the turnstiles, and are counted by the tellers as they re-enter the House (b).

Procedure on
a division.

(s) This question may be put (1) to the exclusion of amendments of which notice has been given; (2) although no amendments have been proposed to the clause; and (3) although closure has not been moved on the question last proposed from the chair; see Ilbert, Manual of Procedure in the Public Business of the House of Commons, 2nd ed., p. 116.

(t) A motion of this kind cannot be made in a standing committee. As to standing committees, see p. 711, post.

(u) To enable the Speaker or the Chairman to form his opinion, he is empowered to ask a member to explain the object of any amendment which he wishes to propose.

(v) See Standing Orders of the House of Commons (Public Business), 1911, No. 26 (3). If the Speaker or the Chairman is of opinion that a division has been vexatiously or frivolously claimed, he may take the vote of the House by calling upon the members who support his decision and those who challenge it to rise in their places. He may then determine, as he thinks fit, whether or not the division is to take place; see Standing Orders of the House of Commons (Public Business), 1911, No. 30.

(a) No division may take place unless there are two tellers on each side. In the House of Commons the tellers do not vote.

(b) If a member votes upon a matter in which he has a direct pecuniary

SECT. 2.
Procedure
 and Conduct
 of Business.

After six minutes have elapsed from the time when the question was put from the chair for the first time, the doors which lead from the House into the division lobbies are locked, but the doors into the lobby of the House are left open, and members may remain in the House whilst a division is in progress (c).

As soon as all the members who wish to record their votes have passed through the lobbies, the four tellers go to the table of the House and report the numbers of the division, which are then announced from the chair (d).

The vote of the Speaker or Chairman.

1212. In the House of Commons the member who occupies the chair, either in the House itself or in committee, does not take part in a division, but, in the event of any division resulting in a tie, the Speaker or the Chairman, as the case may be, is required to give his vote (e).

SECT. 3.—Sittings of the House.

SUB-SECT. 1.—Attendance of Members.

Attendance
 of members.

1213. Members of the House of Commons are under a constitutional obligation to attend the sittings of the House, although their attendance is not enforced and no official record is kept of their attendance (f).

Places of members in
 the House.

1214. No member is entitled as of right to any particular seat in the House, but, by the custom and usage of the House, the front bench on the right of the Speaker's chair, which is known as the Treasury Bench, is always occupied by the members of the Government (g), and the front bench on the opposite side of the table by the leading members of the official opposition.

interest, his vote may, on motion, be disallowed; see May, Parliamentary Practice, 11th ed., p. 373.

(c) The present method of recording divisions in the House of Commons was adopted after the Whitsuntide adjournment in 1906; see May, Parliamentary Practice, 11th ed., Appendix VI., p. 953.

(d) Lists containing the names of the members and recording the manner in which they voted in all divisions are printed and sent out with the Votes and Proceedings each day; see p. 667, ante.

(e) When the Speaker has been called upon to record his vote, he has recorded it, if it has been possible, in such a manner as to give to the House a further opportunity of arriving at a decision in the matter with regard to which an equality of voting has occurred. If the Speaker or Chairman gives reasons for his vote, they are entered in the Journal.

(f) The duty of members to attend the House of Commons is laid down in two unrevoked statutes (stat. (1382) 5 Rich. 2, stat. 2, c. 4, and stat. (1514-5) 6 Hen. 8, c. 16), and the absence of members, without the leave of the House or the licence of the Speaker, was formerly punished by loss of wages and other penalties. Orders for the summoning of absent members and calls of the House were not uncommon in the past, but, although motions for a call of the House have occasionally been made, no such call has been enforced since 1836.

(g) No member may take possession of a seat in the House by affixing his card to it before the hour of prayers, but a member who secures a seat at prayers is entitled to retain it until the rising of the House; see Standing Orders of the House of Commons (Public Business), 1911, Nos. 82, 83. The first day of a new Parliament the members for the City of London claim the right to sit on the Treasury Bench—a right which they usually exercise.

SUB-SECT. 2.—Sittings of the House.(i.) Time and Duration of Sitting.

1215. The House usually meets five days a week throughout the session. On Mondays, Tuesdays, Wednesdays, and Thursdays, unless the House otherwise orders, the Speaker takes the chair at a quarter to three o'clock, and the House adjourns, without question put, at half-past eleven o'clock, unless exempted business is then under consideration (h). On Fridays the Speaker takes the chair at noon, and the House adjourns, without question put, at half-past five o'clock, or before that hour if the orders of the day and notices of motions have been disposed of.

1216. At five o'clock on Fridays, and at eleven o'clock on ordinary sitting days, an interruption takes place in the business of the House, and any debate which happens to be in progress, or any proceedings upon which the House is engaged at the time, stands adjourned (i). No opposed business may be taken after the interruption of business, but at the moment of interruption the closure may be moved (j).

1217. At the time appointed for the meeting of the House, the Speaker enters the chamber by the door below the bar (k), preceded by the Serjeant-at-Arms carrying the mace and accompanied by his chaplain. Upon entering the House the Speaker and the chaplain proceed to the table on which the mace is laid by the Serjeant-at-Arms. Prayers are then said by the chaplain, after which the Speaker takes his seat in the chair (l). The Speaker leaves the House at its adjournment by the door behind the chair, and the mace, which is removed from the table by the Serjeant-at-Arms as soon as the House is adjourned, is carried before him.

SECT. 3.

Sittings of the House.

Days and hours of meeting and adjournment of the House.

Interruption of business.

Meeting of the House.

(h) See p. 674, post.

(i) Standing Orders of the House of Commons (Public Business), 1911 No. 1 (3). If a division is in progress at eleven o'clock or five o'clock, as the case may be, the interruption of business takes place after the result of the division is announced. A member who is in charge of any business which is not disposed of on the day upon which it has been appointed to be taken may fix some other day for it to be taken, and the business in question is then set down in the Order-Book (see note (n), p. 670, ante) as an order of the day for the day which he has chosen.

(j) Standing Orders of the House of Commons (Public Business), 1911, No. 1 (4), (5). A motion to commit a public Bill (other than a Bill for imposing taxation, or a consolidated fund Bill, or an appropriation Bill, or a provisional order confirmation Bill) to a committee of the whole House, or to a select committee, or to a joint committee, if made immediately after the Bill has been read a second time, may be decided, although the motion is opposed, after the expiration of the time for opposed business; see Standing Orders of the House of Commons (Public Business), 1911, No. 46 (1), which applies to any sitting of the House; see, further, note (n), p. 674, post. For the rules as to closure of debate, see p. 670, ante.

(k) When the Speaker is unable to attend a meeting of the House the mace is laid on the table by the Serjeant-at-Arms, and the Clerk of the House in his place at the table announces the fact of the Speaker's absence. The Chairman of Ways and Means, or, if the absence of the Chairman of Ways and Means has been announced, the Deputy Chairman (see p. 666, ante), then proceeds to the table from behind the Speaker's chair and prayers are read.

(l) In the absence of the chaplain, prayers are read by the Speaker himself; see May, Parliamentary Practice, 11th ed., p. 159, n. It is the duty of the Serjeant-at-Arms to give notice to all committees when the House is going to

SECT. 3.
Sittings of
the House.

Business exempt from interruption.

1218. A Bill which originates in Committee of Ways and Means and proceedings which are made in pursuance of an Act of Parliament or standing order (m) are exempted from interruption at eleven o'clock, or at half-past eleven o'clock, when the House usually adjourns, if they are then under consideration.

The House, by means of a motion (which is not open to amendment or debate) (n), made by a Minister of the Crown at the commencement of public business, may exempt from interruption at eleven o'clock that night any specified business if it is under discussion at that hour, and may also, by means of a similar motion, provide for the resumption, after the interruption of business, of any specified business if it should be under discussion when business is postponed at a quarter-past eight o'clock, for the consideration of a motion for the adjournment of the House to discuss a definite matter of urgent public importance, or for the consideration of opposed private business set down by direction of the Chairman of Ways and Means (o).

(ii.) Government Business.

Precedence of Government
business.

1219. Unless the House otherwise orders, Government business up to Easter has precedence of any other public business at every sitting, except on Fridays and after a quarter-past eight o'clock on Tuesdays and Wednesdays (p). After Easter, the Government are also allowed precedence for their business during the entire day on Tuesdays (q), and, after Whitsuntide, until Michaelmas, at all the sittings of the House, except on the third and fourth Fridays after Whit Sunday (r).

(iii.) Private Members' Business.

Precedence of private members'
business.

1220. Under the present rules of the House very little time is allowed to private members either to introduce Bills or to bring forward motions, as their business is allowed precedence of prayers, and, after such notice has been given, the subsequent proceedings of all committees are null and void, unless they be otherwise empowered to sit after prayers; see Standing Orders of the House of Commons (Public Business), 1911, No. 64.

(m) Standing Orders of the House of Commons (Public Business), 1911, No. 1 (2). Such proceedings principally relate to draft Orders in Council, statutory rules and administrative schemes and orders which are required by statute to be laid before Parliament, and in the case of which proceedings are prescribed by the statute for the purpose of giving effect to, or of invalidating, the rule, order, or scheme; e.g., Endowed Schools Act, 1873 (36 & 37 Vict. c. 87), s. 15; Military Manœuvres Act, 1897 (60 & 61 Vict. c. 43), s. 1 (3); Factory and Workshop Act, 1907 (7 Edw. 7, c. 39), s. 5 (2) (a); see also note (h), p. 617, ante.

(n) Standing Orders of the House of Commons (Public Business), 1911, No. 1 (7). A motion to exempt business from interruption at more than one sitting, or to exempt business from interruption at five or half-past five o'clock on a Friday, or to exempt business from interruption at eleven or half-past eleven o'clock under ibid., No. 1 (see p. 674, ante, and the text, supra), and also to allow it to be entered upon after eleven o'clock, although opposed, may be debated.

(o) Standing Orders of the House of Commons (Public Business), 1911, Nos. 4, 8, 10.

(p) Ibid., No. 4 (a). On days when Government business has precedence of other business, Ministers may arrange their business in such order as they may think fit; see ibid., No. 5.

(q) Ibid., No. 4 (c).

(r) Ibid., No. 4 (d).

Government business only at and during the excepted times referred to in the preceding paragraph.

1221. In order to expedite as far as possible the business of private members, a ballot is held at the beginning of every session to decide the precedence of the Bills which private members propose to introduce, and of the motions which they propose to make on the first four days on which private members' notices of motions have precedence of other business. No Bill, other than a Government Bill, may be introduced in anticipation of this ballot (s). After Whitsuntide, Bills which have been introduced by private members are arranged upon the Order Paper so as to give priority to those which are most advanced (t), and it is always open to the Government, if they think it advisable, to grant special facilities to a private member's Bill, or to treat it as a Government measure.

SECT. 3.
Sittings of
the House.

Ballot for Bills and notices of motions.

(iv.) Private Business.

1222. In the House of Commons, precedence over opposed private business is always given to unopposed private business (a), and no opposed private business of any kind may be taken on Fridays (b). On any sitting day, the consideration of private business is entered upon immediately after the Speaker takes the chair, and, if the private business which is before the House on Mondays, Tuesdays, Wednesdays, or Thursdays has not been disposed of by three o'clock, it must be postponed until such time as the Chairman of Ways and Means may determine. It is then taken at a quarter-past eight o'clock, or as soon after that hour as possible, on Mondays, Tuesdays, Wednesdays, and Thursdays (c).

When
unopposed and opposed private business is taken.

(v.) Public Petitions.

1223. After private business has been disposed of (d), any member of the House may rise in his place and present a public

Presentation of public
petitions.

(s) The ballot is held on the third day of the session in obedience to an order of the House. A member who is successful in the ballot may choose whether he will give notice of his intention to bring forward a motion on one of the first four occasions on which private members' notices of motions have precedence or to introduce a Bill. Further ballots are held to decide the precedence of private members' notices of motions as each notice day becomes open. These subsequent ballots for notices of motions are rendered necessary by the rule which prevents a notice of motion being given for a day beyond the period which includes the next four days on which notices of motions are entitled to precedence; see Standing Orders of the House of Commons (Public Business), 1911, No. 7.

(t) Ibid., No. 6. The Bills are arranged as follows, namely: (1) Bills which have been returned with amendments by the House of Lords; (2) Bills which are to be read a third time; (3) consideration on report of Bills as amended in committee; (4) Bills in committee; (5) Bills appointed for committee; and (6) Bills which are to be read a second time.

(a) Ibid., No. 8 (5).

(b) Ibid., No. 8 (1).

(c) Ibid., No. 8 (2), (3). No opposed private business (other than that which is under the consideration of the House at the time) may be taken after half-past nine o'clock (ibid., No. 8 (4)). Between Easter and Whitsuntide no opposed private business may be taken at a quarter past eight o'clock on Wednesdays (ibid., No. 8 (1)). As to the effect of a motion for the adjournment of the House on a question of urgent public importance, see p. 677, post.

(d) A motion for the issue of a new writ is usually made immediately after

SECT. 3.
Sittings of
the House.

petition (e). The only other persons entitled to present petitions personally to the House of Commons are the official representatives of the corporations of London and Dublin, who are allowed to present petitions at the bar of the House (f).

As soon as a public petition has been presented it is ordered to lie on the table, and is then referred to the Committee on Public Petitions (g).

Restriction of speech on presentation
of petition.

1224. A member who presents a public petition orally (h) must confine his remarks to a brief statement of the allegations which are contained in the petition and of the number of persons who have signed it. No debate is allowed to arise upon a petition unless it refers to a breach of privilege, or to some personal grievance which calls for immediate remedy (i).

A member may require a petition to be read by the clerk at the table.

(vi.) Questions to Members.

When questions are put.

1225. Every Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday, and Thursday throughout the session, after the conclusion of private business, or at any rate not later than three o'clock, members are called upon to address the questions (j), of which they have given notice, either the conclusion of private business. Various other kinds of non-contentious motions may also be made at this period in the proceedings, if time permits, before questions are taken, e.g., motions to set up committees for the purpose of authorising public expenditure under Standing Orders of the House of Commons (Public Business), 1911, Nos. 66—71, and motions for the consideration of amendments made to Bills by the House of Lords, when they raise no question of principle.

(e) The Speaker does not present petitions to the House. No petition may be presented the first day of the session, or in a new Parliament until the Speaker has been chosen and his election approved by the Crown. Every petition which is presented must be indorsed with the name of the member who presents it. There are strict rules with regard to the form in which the petition must be presented to the House; see Ilbert, Manual of Procedure in the Public Business of the House of Commons, 2nd ed. pp. 51—53. A copy of the rules with regard to the form and presentation of petitions is supplied to members at the beginning of each session. As to the prohibition of the tumultuous gathering of persons upon the pretence of presenting a petition to Parliament, and as to the meeting of more than fifty persons within a mile of Westminster Hall for the purpose of considering a petition to Parliament any day when either House is sitting being an unlawful assembly, see Pankhurst v. Jarvis (1909), 26 T. L. R. 118; see also title CRIMINAL LAW AND PROCEDURE, Vol. IX., pp. 470, 471.

(f) See May, Parliamentary Practice, 11th ed., pp. 529, 530. A member cannot be compelled by any person to present a petition to the House (Chaffers v. Goldsmid, [1894] 1 Q. B. 186).

(g) For the composition and functions of this committee, see p. 685, post.

(h) The more usual method of presenting a public petition is for the member who is responsible for it to place it in a bag which is kept for the purpose behind the Speaker's chair. He may do this any time during a sitting of the House.

(i) Standing Orders of the House of Commons (Public Business), 1911, Nos. 76—78.

(j) Notice of any question must be given in writing to the clerk at the table, and no question may be read vivâ voce in the House, unless the consent of the Speaker has been previously obtained (Standing Orders of the House of Commons (Public Business), 1911, No. 9 (1)). For the rules with regard to the to Ministers with regard to matters connected with the administration of the various departments of the Government, or to private members with regard to matters connected with the business of the House for which they may happen to be responsible (k).

SECT. 3.
Sittings of
the House.

Notices of questions are printed and sent out with the notice paper (l) each day. Unless a question is marked with an asterisk, in which case notice must be given so that the question may appear on the notice paper at latest the day before that on which an answer is required, the Minister to whom it is addressed does not reply orally, but causes a printed answer to be sent out with the Votes and Proceedings (m).

Notices of questions.

(vii.) Consideration of Public Business.

1226. As soon as questions have been disposed of, the House proceeds to the consideration of the public business which is on the order paper for the day (n).

Consideration of orders of the day.

1227. Before this is entered upon, however, a member may ask the leave of the House to move the adjournment for the purpose of discussing a definite matter of urgent public importance (o). If the leave of the House is refused to him, a member can still make the motion in question if he obtains the support of not less than forty members, who, when called upon by the Speaker, must rise in their places to signify their assent to the proposed motion.

Motion for adjournment on matter of urgent public importance.

A motion for adjournment for which the leave of the House has been signified stands over until a quarter-past eight o'clock, when the business then before the House is postponed in order that the motion may be moved (p), and any private business set down for a quarter past eight o'clock by direction of the Chairman of Ways and Means is not taken until the motion for the adjournment of the House is disposed of.

form and contents of questions, which are strictly enforced by the Speaker, see Ilbert, Manual of Procedure in the Public Business of the House of Commons, 2nd ed. pp. 61, 62.

(k) No question may be taken after a quarter before four o'clock, except a question of an urgent character with regard to a matter of public importance or to the arrangement of the business of the House, or a question addressed during question time to a member of the Government who was not present in his place at the time when the question was called (Standing Orders of the House of Commons (Public Business), 1911, No. 9 (3)).

(l) As to the notice paper, see note (n), p. 670, ante.

(m) Standing Orders of the House of Commons (Public Business), 1911, No. 9 (4), (5).

(n) A new member is generally introduced and takes the oath immediately after the expiration of the time allotted for questions; see ibid., No. 84.

(o) Ibid., No. 10. Such a motion must not raise a question of privilege, nor may it revive the discussion of a subject which has already occupied the attention of the House in the same session, nor may it anticipate a matter which has been previously appointed for consideration, or notice of which has been given; see p. 669, ante.

(p) If a motion of this kind is supported by fewer than forty members, but by not less than ten, the Speaker puts the question as to whether leave should be given to make the motion, and a division takes place. If this is carried in the affirmative, the motion is brought before the House at a quarter past eight o'clock.

SECT. 3.
Sittings of
the House.

Motions at commencement of public
business.

1228. At the beginning of public business, before the House proceeds to the consideration of the orders of the day, a member may present a Bill without obtaining the leave of the House, or he may move for leave to bring in a Bill (q), or for the nomination of a select committee (r), and a Minister of the Crown is permitted to make a motion with regard to the business of the House.

As soon as any such motion has been disposed of, or, if there is no such motion, immediately after the time allotted to questions has elapsed or questions have been disposed of, the Speaker directs the Clerk of the House to read the orders of the day. These are taken by the House in the order in which they are arranged upon the order paper (s).

SECT. 4.—Maintenance of Order and Rules of Debate.

Rules as to addressing
the House.

1229. A member of the House of Commons who wishes to speak (t), whether in the House itself or in a committee of the whole House or in a standing committee, must rise in his place uncovered (a). When his name has been called by the Speaker or the Chairman (b), as the case may be, he must address himself not to the House or to the committee, but to the Speaker or to the Chairman (c).

Relevance in debate.

1230. A debate arises as soon as the question before the House or the committee has been proposed by the Speaker or the Chairman, as the case may be. Such debate must be strictly relevant to the subject or question which is submitted to the consideration of the House, or to an amendment to the question which the member speaking proposes to move.

It is the duty of the Speaker, or of the Chairman, to call to order (q) Standing Orders of the House of Commons (Public Business), Nos. 11, 31; see pp. 705 et seq., post.

(r) A private member may only make a motion for leave to bring in a Bill, or for the nomination of a select committee, on Tuesdays and Wednesdays; a member of the Government may do so on Mondays and Thursdays as well. If such a motion is opposed, the Speaker, after a short statement from the mover, and also from an opponent, of the motion, may either put the question thereon, or the question that the debate be adjourned (Standing Orders of the House of Commons (Public Business), 1911, No. 11).

(s) Ibid., Nos. 12, 13. The right, however, is reserved to the Government of placing their orders or motions at the head of the list on the days when their business has precedence (ibid., No. 13).

(t) A member must speak in English, and is not allowed to read his speech. It is also out of order for a member to read from any book or document the report of a debate in the House held during the same session; see May, Parliamentary Practice, 11th ed., p. 310.

(a) When a member is so much incapacitated by illness that he cannot stand, it is customary for the House to give him leave to retain his seat whilst speaking.

(b) When several members rise to address the House at the same time, it rests with the Speaker or the Chairman, as the case may be, to decide which member he will call upon.

(c) When a member speaks on a point of order in the House or in a committee of the whole House whilst a division is actually in progress (see p. 671, ante), he does not rise in his place, but speaks sitting, and retains his hat.

any member whose speech, in his opinion, transgresses this rule (d).

If a motion is made during the course of any debate for the adjournment of the House, or of the debate which is in progress, or if, when the House is in committee, a motion is made that the Chairman do report progress or do leave the chair, the debate must be strictly confined to the particular matter to which it relates (e).

SECT. 4.
Maintenance of Order and Rules of Debate.

1231. A member is not allowed to speak upon the same question more than once in the same debate (f), unless he has moved a substantive motion, when he is entitled to a right of reply (g). A member who has already taken part in a debate, by leave of the House, may speak a second time on the same question, if he wishes to explain some material point in his first speech which has been misunderstood, or desires to make a personal explanation.

Occasions when a second speech is permissible.

1232. In the House of Commons strict rules are laid down for the maintenance of order in debate, to a breach of any of which it is permissible for a member to call the attention of the Speaker or the Chairman, as the case may be (h), whose duty it is to call the offending member or members to order.

Order in debate.

A breach of order is committed by any member (1) who mentions disrespectfully the name of the Sovereign, or who casts a reflection upon the conduct of the Sovereign or of certain high (d) Standing Orders of the House of Commons (Public Business), 1911, No. 19. This order empowers the Speaker or the Chairman, as the case may be, after calling the attention of the House or of the committee to the conduct of a member who persists in irrelevance or in tedious repetition, to direct such member to discontinue his speech. The same power is given to the chairmen of the standing committees by ibid., No. 47 (5); compare May, Parliamentary Practice, 11th ed., pp. 314—316. In spite of the rule against irrelevancy, a member may rise at any time during the course of a debate to speak on a point of order or a matter of privilege which suddenly arises. By the indulgence of the House a member is also allowed, before the commencement of public business, to make a personal explanation. In such a case, as there is no question before the House, no debate should be allowed to arise; see ibid., p. 319.

(e) Standing Orders of the House of Commons (Public Business), 1911, No. 22. A member who moves or seconds a motion of this kind may not move or second a similar motion during the same debate (ibid.).

(f) This rule does not apply when the House is in committee (see pp. 710 et seq., 751 et seq., post), nor does it apply, on the report stage of a Bill which has been referred to a standing committee (see p. 717, post), in the case of the member who is in charge of such Bill; or in the case of any member who moves a new clause or amendment to such Bill in respect of such new clause or amendment; see Standing Orders of the House of Commons (Public Business), 1911, No. 46 (3); see also note (p), p. 716, post.

(g) If, when an order of the day is read, the member who is responsible for the matter in question merely raises his hat when he makes the motion, he is entitled to address the House later in the debate, and the same rule applies in the case of a member who seconds a substantive motion in this formal way; see May, Parliamentary Practice, 11th ed., pp. 321, 322.

(h) Any ordinary breach of order is repressed immediately by the Speaker or the Chairman without the intervention of any other member. When a member draws the attention of the Speaker, or of the Chairman, if the House is in committee, to a breach of order, he must do so at the time when the offence is committed, and must confine himself in his remarks to pointing out the breach of order which has occurred.

SECT. 4.
Maintenan of Order and Rules of
Debate.

officials (i), or who gives utterance to treasonable or seditious words, or who introduces the name of the Sovereign to influence debate; (2) who brings a personal charge against another member, or who refers to another member by name; (3) who expresses an opinion with regard to any matter with regard to which a decision is still pending in the courts; (4) who refers in an offensive manner to the proceedings of either House of Parliament; (5) who uses his right of addressing the House merely for the purpose of obstructing its business; or (6) who attempts to speak on any question which has been fully put either by the Speaker or the Chairman, as the case may be. It is also out of order for any member to refer to any debate in the House of Lords, or to any debate which has taken place in the House itself during the same session; and it is not permissible for a member to cast any reflection upon a decision already arrived at by the House, unless a motion has been made to rescind such decision.

Behaviour
in the House.

1233. In addition to these rules (j), which must be observed by any member who takes part in a debate, there are certain rules of etiquette and behaviour which regulate the conduct of members whilst a debate is proceeding, and which are interpreted and put in force when necessary by the Speaker or the Chairman, as the case may be (k).

A member must keep his seat and not walk about the House whilst a debate is proceeding (l). He must not interrupt in a disorderly manner another member who is addressing the House (m), nor may he read a newspaper or book whilst a debate is proceeding.

(i) E.g., the Viceroy of India, the Lord Lieutenant of Ireland, the Speaker, or the Chairman of Ways and Means. It is also out of order to allude in disrespectful terms to the Sovereign of a friendly State. The conduct of the Sovereign himself, and of any official whose conduct may not be discussed otherwise, may be brought to the notice of the House by means of a substantive motion, which can be dealt with by amendment or by a distinct vote of the House; see May, Parliamentary Practice, 11th ed., pp. 277, 278.

(j) See p. 679, ante, and the text, supra.

(k) See May, Parliamentary Practice, 11th ed., pp. 343—345. Thus, a member must enter and leave the House uncovered, and should bow to the chair when he goes to or leaves his seat. A member is not permitted to cross between the chair and another member who is speaking, nor may he cross the House between the table and the chair, or between the chair and the mace when the Serjeant-at-Arms removes it from the table.

(l) See Orders of the House upon this subject, 10th February, 1698-9, and 16th February, 1720-1; Journals of the House of Commons, 1698-9, Vol. XII., p. 496; 1720-1, Vol. XIX., p. 425. The rule is not strictly enforced at the present time; but the Speaker may order members who are standing at the bar to take their places, and, if they disobey, may instruct the Serjeant-at-Arms to clear the gangway.

(m) It is left to the Speaker or to the Chairman, as the case may be, to decide when any interruption comes within this rule. By a resolution of the House of the 5th May, 1641, the Speaker is instructed to present to the House the name of any member who whispers or stirs out of his place to the disturbance of the House whilst any message or business of importance is being discussed (Journals of the House of Commons, 1641, Vol. II., p. 135). At the present time the Speaker or the Chairman, as the case may be, calls the House or the committee to order whenever the conversation is loud enough to disturb the debate.

1234. Whenever any member is guilty of gross disorder, the Speaker or the Chairman, as the case may be, is empowered to order him to withdraw immediately from the House for the remainder of the sitting (n).

If, upon any occasion, the Speaker, or the Chairman, if the House is in committee, considers that his power to order a member to withdraw is inadequate, he may name the member who has disregarded his authority or who has abused the rules of the House. In such a case, if the offence has been committed in the House itself, a motion is made, usually by the leader of the House, for the offending member to be suspended from the service of the House, upon which the Speaker puts the question forthwith, as no amendment, adjournment or debate of a motion of this kind is allowed. If the offence has been committed whilst the House is in committee of the whole House, the Chairman immediately suspends the proceedings of the committee, the Speaker returns to the chair, and the Chairman reports the circumstance to him. A motion is then made similar to that already described (o).

1235. If a grave disorder arises, the Speaker may adjourn the House without question put or suspend any sitting for a time to be named by him (p).

SECT. 4.

Maintenance of Order and Rules of Debate.

Withdrawal of member.

Suspension of member.

Adjournment
of House in case of grave
disorder.

SECT. 5.—Jurisdiction of the House.

1236. Although the House of Commons together with the House of Lords forms the High Court of Parliament, it is not strictly speaking a judicial body, and its jurisdiction, except in respect of the authority which it exercises over its own members and its own composition, and the powers which it possesses to punish persons for committing any breach of the privileges of the House or of any Limits to its jurisdiction.

(n) Standing Orders of the House of Commons (Public Business), 1911, No. 20. In such case the Serjeant-at-Arms is directed to carry out such orders as may be given to him from the chair. A member who receives an order of this kind to withdraw from the precincts of the House must continue to serve upon any private Bill committee of which he happens at the time to be a member. As to the power of the House to expel members, see p. 787, post.

(o) Standing Orders of the House of Commons (Public Business), 1911, No. 18. Suspension under this order used formerly to continue in force for one week for the first offence, for a fortnight for the second, and for one month for the third or any subsequent offence. On the 13th February, 1902, the standing order upon this subject was amended and the words defining the different periods of suspension were left out without any others being inserted. As a result of this amendment, therefore, the period of suspension now extends to the end of the session or until the order of the House by which it is enforced is rescinded. A member who is suspended must immediately leave the precincts of the House, and, if he refuses to do so, the Speaker may call the attention of the House to his refusal, and he may then be forcibly ejected. The standing order provides that a member who is thus ejected is suspended from the service of the House for the remainder of the session without further question put. A member after being suspended must continue to serve on any private Bill committee to which he has been appointed at the time of his suspension. If several members have jointly disregarded the authority of the chair, they may be named together, but otherwise not more than one member may be named at the same time (ibid.).

(p) Ibid., No. 21.

SECT. 5.
Jurisdiction
of the
House.

of its members (q), is of a legislative character and is practically confined to the share that the House takes in passing Bills in which Parliament is exercising judicial or quasi-judicial functions (r).

SECT. 6.—Committees.

SUB-SECT. 1.—Classification.

Classification of committees.

1237. The committees of the House, other than committees of the whole House and committees appointed to prepare reasons for disagreeing with the Lords' amendments to Bills (s), may be divided into three main classes, which differ in respect of the method in which they are appointed and nominated, namely:—Standing committees on public Bills, select committees, and committees on private Bills and provisional order confirmation Bills (t).

SUB-SECT. 2.—Standing Committees.

Standing
committees.

1238. The appointment, constitution, and functions of standing committees are dealt with elsewhere (u).

SUB-SECT. 3.—Select Committees.

(i.) Select Committees on Public Matters or Public Bills.

Scope of inquiry by a select
committee.

1239. A select committee (v) may be appointed either to inquire into and report upon any subject with regard to which the House requires information (w), or to consider a public Bill (a).

Number of members.

1240. The number of members of a select committee varies, but, as a general rule, not more than fifteen members are nominated to serve upon any such committee, of whom five, or in some cases three, form a quorum (b).

(q) The jurisdiction of the House of Commons over these matters is dealt with amongst the privileges of the House; see pp. 787 et seq., post.

(r) E.g., Bills of Attainder or Bills of Pains and Penalties, and Divorce Bills; see pp. 727, 761, 762, post; see also title COURTS, Vol. IX., p. 24.

(s) See p. 721, post.

(t) See pp. 711, 712, 714, 715, 751, post, and the text, infra.

(u) See pp. 711, 712, post.

(v) Select committees of the House of Commons are usually appointed and nominated by the House, but certain of these committees are almost invariably nominated partly by the House and partly by the committee of selection, and certain others which sit sessionally are appointed under standing orders.

(w) A member who intends to move for the appointment of a select committee, one day before the nomination of such committee, must place on the notices the names of the members who it is proposed should serve on the committee; see Standing Orders of the House of Commons (Public Business), 1911, No. 57.

(a) When a select committee is appointed to inquire into any matter, the scope of its inquiry is defined in the order of reference given to it by the House. If a Bill is referred to a select committee, the Bill itself is the order of reference, and the committee must report it with or without amendment to the House. The House can extend the scope of the inquiry of a select committee either by means of an instruction or by committing an additional Bill to the committee.

(b) Standing Orders of the House of Commons (Public Business), 1911, No. 55. If no quorum is fixed by the order of reference appointing the committee, all the members of the committee must attend its sittings. If the quorum of a 1241. A select committee chooses its own chairman (c), and almost invariably is given power by the House to send for persons, papers and records—a power which enables it to summon and examine witnesses (d). Counsel may only be heard before a select committee by order of the House, made either originally by the House itself or as the result of a special report made by the committee to the House.

SECT. 6.
Committees.
—
Powers.

1242. All select committees and other committees of the House, with the exception of standing committees, may continue to sit whilst the House itself is sitting, except during the time while the House is at prayers, and they may also sit during an adjournment of the House (e), but no committee may sit without leave on any day over which the House has adjourned.

Sittings.

1243. A select committee may always forbid the presence of strangers at its sittings, but, as a rule, strangers are admitted whilst evidence is being taken (f).

Presence of strangers.

1244. As soon as the hearing of evidence is concluded, the committee meets to consider its report, or to go through the provisions of the Bill, as the case may be (g). It is open to any of its members to prepare a draft report, and every such draft report is brought up by its author and read a first time. A motion is then made proposing that one of the reports, usually that which has been submitted by the chairman, be read a second time. As soon as the committee has decided, if necessary by means of a division, which draft report of report.

Consideration

committee has been fixed by the House, the chairman must suspend the sitting of the committee until the necessary quorum is present; see Standing Orders of the House of Commons (Public Business), 1911, No. 62.

(c) The chairman of a select committee only votes when there is an equality of voices in the committee. A member of a select committee is not entitled to vote in any division in the committee, unless he is present when the question is put. A record of the attendance of members and of all divisions which take place in a committee must be kept in the minutes of its proceedings; see Standing Orders of the House of Commons (Public Business), 1911, Nos. 60, 61.

(d) If any witness who has been summoned to appear before a select committee refuses to attend, the chairman of the committee reports the fact to the House and moves that an order be made for his attendance. A select committee of the House of Commons has the power to administer the oath to witnesses examined before it (Parliamentary Witnesses Oaths Act, 1871 (34 & 35 Vict. c. 83), s. 1). When a committee decides to exercise this power it usually passes a resolution, "That the evidence of all witnesses examined before the committee (except those who shall be exempted by special resolution) shall be taken on oath."

(e) Standing Orders of the House of Commons (Public Business), 1911, No. 54. Standing committees are excepted from this rule; see ibid., No. 47 (1). The Serjeant-at-Arms is instructed to give notice to committees from time to time when the House is going to prayers; see ibid., No. 64, and note (l), p. 673, ante.

(f) Any member of a select committee has the right to require the room to be cleared at any time if he desires to take the opinion of the committee upon any matter.

(g) The procedure with regard to the consideration of a Bill in a select committee is practically the same as that adopted in committee of the whole House; see pp. 665 et seq., ante, and pp. 710, 713, post. In dealing with money clauses a select committee is bound by the same rules as a standing committee; see p. 712, post. A select committee may alter the title of a Bill which has been referred to it, but, if it does so, it must report the fact to the House. Acting upon an instruction from the House, it is permissible for a select committee to

SECT. 6.
Committees.

it will take as the basis of its report, this draft report is read a second time and taken into consideration paragraph by paragraph (h).

Upon the conclusion of the consideration of a draft report the chairman puts the question, "That this report [or this report as amended] be the report of the committee to the House?" (i). In the case of a Bill, as soon as the measure has been agreed to by the committee, the chairman puts the question, "That I do report this Bill as amended [or without amendment] to the House?"

Select committees on hybrid Bills.

1245. After it has been read a second time, a hybrid Bill (k) is referred to a select committee, the members of which are nominated, as a general rule, partly by the House and partly by the committee of selection. The proceedings in a select committee on a hybrid Bill are the same as in a committee on a private Bill (l), except that, as the committee is a select committee, the standing orders which apply definitely to committees on private Bills are not applicable (m).

(ii.) Select Committees relating to Public Matters appointed Sessionally or by Standing Order.

Public Accounts Committee.

1246. In compliance with a standing order of the House (n), the Public Accounts Committee is appointed annually for the examination of the accounts showing the appropriation of the sums granted by Parliament to meet the public expenditure (o). It consists of fifteen members, nominated by the House at the beginning of every session (p), of whom five form a quorum.

The committee examines the accounts for the financial year ending on the 31st March in the previous year, inquires into the causes which have led any department to exceed the money granted to it by Parliament and into the application of savings on grants made to the Admiralty and War Office (q). Its meetings are attended by the Comptroller and Auditor-General and a representative of the Treasury, who assist it during the taking of evidence. It is not the practice of the committee to admit the public to its sittings.

consolidate two or more Bills which have been referred to its consideration, and, with the leave of the House, it may divide a single Bill into two or more Bills.

(h) Amendments may be made to any paragraph, and new paragraphs may be added.

(i) Any select committee having power to send for persons, papers and records, may present its opinion and observations and also the evidence which has been given before it to the House without previously obtaining the leave of the House. A committee of this kind may also make a special report to the House with regard to any matters which it thinks fit to bring to the notice of the House; see Standing Orders of the House of Commons (Public Business), 1911, No. 63. If a select committee on a Bill is of opinion that the measure should not be allowed to proceed, it reports it to the House without amendment, and also makes a special report to the House, stating the reasons against proceeding further with the Bill.

(k) See p. 703, post.

(l) See pp. 753 et seq., post.

(m) Namely, Standing Orders of the House of Commons (Private Business), 1911, Nos. 115–124, 126.

(n) Standing Orders of the House of Commons (Public Business), 1911, No. 75.

(o) See Journals of the House of Commons, 1910, Vol. CLXV., p. 36.

(p) When the committee was first appointed, in 1862, it consisted of nine members, but from time to time its number has been increased.

(q) See note (e), p. 770, post.

The committee makes reports to the House from time to time during the session.

SECT. 6.

Committees.

1247. To the Public Petitions Committee, which is appointed by an order of the House at the beginning of every session, are referred all petitions presented to the House which do not relate to private Bills (r). The function of the committee is to classify and prepare abstracts of all such petitions, and to convey to the House all requisite information respecting their contents (s).

Public
Petitions
Committee.

The committee usually consists of fourteen members, of whom three form a quorum.

1248. The Kitchen and Refreshment Rooms Committee is appointed by the House at the beginning of every session to control the arrangements for the kitchen and refreshment rooms in the department of the Serjeant-at-Arms, and consists of seventeen members, of whom three form a quorum. It appoints several sub-committees to transact the necessary executive work, and meets once a week throughout the session to confirm the proceedings of these sub-committees. At the end of the session the committee issues a statement of its accounts and a balance sheet, which it reports to the House (a).

Kitchen and Refreshment Rooms
Committee.

(iii.) Select Committees appointed under Standing Orders to deal with Matters relating to Private Business.

1249. The Select Committee on Standing Orders, the Committee of Selection, and the General Committee on Railway and Canal Bills have certain duties to perform with regard to private and provisional order confirmation Bills, which are described elsewhere (b).

Select
committees dealing with private business.

(iv.) Select Committee on Commons.

1250. The Select Committee on Commons is appointed, by an order of the House at the beginning of every session, to consider and report to the House with regard to every report made by the Board of Agriculture and Fisheries under the Commons Act, 1876 (c), certifying the expediency of any provisional order for the inclosure or regulation of a common, before a Bill for its confirmation by Parliament is brought into the House.

Select Committee on
Commons.

The committee consists of seven members, partly nominated by the House and partly by the Committee of Selection, of whom five form a quorum (d).

(r) Standing Orders of the House of Commons (Public Business), 1911, No. 79. The members of the committee are nominated by the House. For the method in which public petitions are presented to the House of Commons, see pp. 675, 676, ante. As to petitions in opposition to private Bills, see pp. 747 et seq., post.

(s) See sessional order of appointment of the committee, Journals of the House of Commons, 1910, Vol. CLXV., p. 92. All public petitions (unless they are informal, when they are returned to the members who have presented them) are entered in the Votes and Proceedings; see p. 667, ante. The committee may authorise the printing of any petition if it considers it advisable, and issues a report containing a list of all other petitions with the number of signatures attached thereto.

(a) See Journals of the House of Commons, 1910, Vol. CLXV., pp. 46, 310.

(b) See pp. 743, 751, post.

(c) 39 & 40 Vict. c. 56.

(d) See Journals of the House of Commons, 1910, Vol. CLXV., p. 110; and SECT. 6. (v.) Select Committees on Private Bills and Provisional Order Confirmation Bills.

Committees.

Specially constituted committees on private Bills.

1251. An ordinary private Bill introduced on petition, if it is considered expedient for any reason, may be referred like a hybrid Bill to a select committee, nominated partly by the House and partly by the Committee of Selection, instead of to an ordinary private Bill committee(e). The procedure in a committee of this kind is practically the same as in a private Bill committee(f), but the quorum of the committee is fixed by the House, and the chairman, who may only vote when there is an equality of voices, is chosen by the committee itself(g). The committee is given power to send for persons, papers and records, and may, therefore, make a special report to the House without obtaining leave to do so.

Local Legislation
Committee and Select Committee on Divorce Bills.

1252. The appointment, constitution, and functions of the Select Committee on Divorce Bills and the Local Legislation Committee are dealt with elsewhere(h).

(vi.) Committee of Privileges.

Committee of Privileges.

1253. This committee is appointed by an order of the House at the beginning of every session(i). Since 1904, it has been usual to nominate seven members, of whom five form a quorum, to serve on see title COMMONS AND RIGHTS OF COMMON, Vol. IV., p. 547. Objectors to any scheme contained in an order may present petitions to the House, which are referred to the committee (see Journals of the House of Commons, 1879, Vol. CXXXIV., p. 163). The committee also requires the Board of Agriculture and Fisheries to publish, in the locality of the common proposed to be dealt with, notices of the day fixed by the committee for the consideration of the case, and directing any person who objects to the scheme to send a statement to the committee setting forth his objections. When the case is heard the Board of Agriculture and Fisheries calls witnesses in support of its proposals, and opponents are also heard. The committee has no power to hear counsel. On the conclusion of the evidence, the committee proceeds to consider its decision, and reports upon each scheme which has been submitted to it, either recommending that the order ought to be confirmed with or without modifications, or that it ought not to be confirmed. If the committee recommends that an order should be modified, it is referred to the Board of Agriculture and Fisheries, to be modified in accordance with the recommendations of the committee. An order which is so modified must again be submitted to the consideration of the committee; see First and Third Reports from the Select Committee on Commons, 1911, House of Commons Papers (128), (222).

(e) The Belfast Corporation Bill, 1896; the Fishguard and Rosslare etc. Bill, 1899; the London County Council (Electric Supply) Bills, 1906 and 1907, are examples of Bills which were referred to specially constituted committees of this kind.

(f) See pp. 751 et seq., post.

(g) Members who serve on these committees are not bound to attend every sitting, nor to sign the declarations as prescribed by Standing Orders of the House of Commons (Private Business), 1911, No. 117. Such committees may also adjourn over a day on which the House sits without making the report prescribed by Standing Orders of the House of Commons (Private Business), No. 126. The evidence heard by these committees is usually printed by the promoters as in the case of an ordinary private Bill committee (see note (s), p. 754, post), but occasionally the House has made a special order with regard to the printing of evidence; see Journals of the House of Commons, Vol. CLXII., p. 162. Private Bills which have been considered by a specially constituted committee are exempted from the committee stage in the House itself.

(h) See pp. 752, 762, post.

(i) See Journals of the House of Commons, 1910, Vol. CLXV., p. 6.

the committee. The committee is given power to send for persons, papers and records (j).

SECT. 6.
Committees.

SUB-SECT. 4.—Committees on Private Bills and Provisional Order Confirmation Bills.

1254. The appointment, constitution, and functions of committees on private Bills and provisional order confirmation Bills appointed under the standing order relating to private business are dealt with elsewhere (k).

Committees on private Bills and provisional order confirmation Bills.

Part IV.—Meeting, Adjournment, Prorogation and Dissolution of Parliament.

SECT. 1.—Meeting.

SUB-SECT. 1.—Issue and Return of Writs.

1255. A new Parliament can be called together for the transaction of business only by the Crown (l). It is summoned by means of the King's writ, issued by the direction of the Lord Chancellor from the office of the Clerk of the Crown in Chancery (m) with the advice of the Privy Council and in pursuance of a Royal proclamation.

Parliament summoned by the Crown.

A period of not less than thirty-five days must elapse between the date of the proclamation summoning a new Parliament and the date fixed for its assembling (n).

(j) It has been the practice of the House from an early date to appoint a Committee of Privileges. In former times the committee used to consist of all "the knights for shires, gentlemen of the long robe and merchants in the House"; see Journals of the House of Commons, 1837, Vol. XCII., p. 16. This committee did not meet between 1847 and 1909, but the House occasionally appointed select committees to deal with particular matters of privilege as they occurred, e.g., a committee was appointed to inquire into a petition containing a libel on a member in 1857 (see Journals of the House of Commons, 1858, Vol. CXIII., pp. 68, 77); and a committee was appointed to inquire into the commitment of a member in 1874 (see Journals of the House of Commons, 1874, Vol. CXXIX., pp. 28, 61, 71). In 1909 the Committee of Privileges itself was ordered by the House to inquire into an alleged intervention by the Duke of Norfolk in an election in the High Peak division of Derbyshire. For the report from the committee on this occasion, see House of Commons Paper, 1909 (281). For the privileges of the House of Commons in general, see pp. 777, 787 et seq., post.

(k) See pp. 751 et seq., post

(l) See title CONSTITUTIONAL LAW, Vol. VI., p. 389. For the reasons which make the annual meeting of Parliament necessary, see ibid., pp. 383, 419; see also pp. 768, 770, post.

(m) As to this official, see title CONSTITUTIONAL LAW, Vol. VII., p. 12.

(n) Meeting of Parliament Act, 1852 (15 & 16 Vict. c. 23). During a recess, the Crown, acting upon the advice of the Privy Council, by Royal proclamation has power to prorogue Parliament from the day to which it shall then stand summoned or prorogued to any further day being not less than fourteen days from the date thereof (Prorogation Act, 1867 (30 & 31 Vict. c. 81), s. 1). The Crown may also issue a proclamation summoning Parliament to meet for the dispatch of business on a date earlier than that on which it had been originally summoned (Meeting of Parliament Act, 1797 (37 Geo. 3, c. 127),

SECT. 1.

Meeting.

Writs of summons to peers.

1256. At the beginning of each new Parliament, a writ of summons, on which is stated the day and place of meeting of Parliament (o), is issued from the office of the Clerk of the Crown in Chancery by the direction of the Lord Chancellor to every peer of the United Kingdom who has proved his right to his peerage, to each representative peer of Ireland (p), to each lord spiritual who is entitled to sit in the House of Lords (q), and to each of the four Lords of Appeal in Ordinary (r).

Writs for election of members of
House of Commons.

1257. Writs for the election of the members of the House of Commons are sent to the returning officers in each constituency directing the election of a member or members, as the case may be, to serve for that constituency in Parliament. In Great Britain, the writs are sent out by the Clerk of the Crown in Chancery; in Ireland, by the Clerk of the Crown and Hanaper (s).

SUB-SECT. 2.—Oath of Allegiance.

Oath of allegiance or affirmation.

1258. The members of both Houses of Parliament must make and subscribe the oath of allegiance, or make a solemn affirmation or declaration in lieu thereof, before they are entitled to take their seats.

The form of oath or affirmation, which must be solemnly and publicly made by members in their respective Houses (t), is fixed by statute (u), and any lord temporal or lord spiritual who votes by as amended by the Meeting of Parliament Act, 1870 (33 & 34 Vict. c. 81)); and see p. 699, post.

(o) Since the reign of Charles II., Parliament has always met at Westminster, but there is no constitutional objection to Parliament being summoned by the Sovereign to meet in any other place.

(p) As to such peers, see p. 626, ante. Writs are not sent to the representative peers of Scotland.

(q) As to the lords spiritual, see pp. 619 et seq., ante.

(r) As to the Lords of Appeal in Ordinary, see pp. 628, 643, ante. The judges of the Supreme Court receive writs of summons to Parliament; see p. 647, ante. See also Report from the Joint Committee on the Presence of the Sovereign in Parliament, 1901, p. vii.; House of Commons Paper (212).

(s) As to the form of writ, see Ballot Act, 1872 (35 & 36 Vict. c. 33), Sched. II.; and see title ELECTIONS, Vol. XII., p. 258. As to the duties of returning officers with regard to returns, see ibid., pp. 331—333. When a member is elected at a bye-election, the Clerk of the Crown sends a certificate of his election to the Public Bill Office in the House of Commons, and the new member, before he can take his seat, must obtain a certificate at that office stating that the certificate from the Crown Office has been duly received.

(t) Parliamentary Oaths Act, 1866 (29 & 30 Vict. c. 19), s. 3.

(u) The following is the prescribed form of oath: "I, —, do swear that I will be faithful and bear true allegiance to His Majesty King George, his heirs and successors, according to law. So help me God" (Promissory Oaths Act, 1868 (31 & 32 Vict. c. 72), ss. 1, 8). The oath may also be taken in the manner prescribed by the Oaths Act, 1909 (9 Edw. 7, c. 39), s. 2 (1); or in the manner in which an oath is usually administered in Scotland (Oaths Act, 1888 (51 & 52 Vict. c. 46), s. 5). Any peer or member of the House of Commons who objects to taking an oath either because he has no religious belief, or because taking an oath is contrary to his religious belief, is permitted to make the following affirmation, namely: "I, —, do solemnly, sincerely, and truly, declare and affirm that I will be faithful and bear true allegiance to His Majesty King George, his heirs and successors, according to law" (Oaths Act, 1888 (51 & 52 Vict. c. 46), ss. 1, 2). For a historical survey of the Parliamentary oath; see May, Parliamentary Practice, 11th ed., pp. 159—170; and, as himself or his proxy, or who sits as a peer during any debate in the House of Lords, and any member who votes or who sits as a member in the House of Commons, during any debate after the Speaker has been chosen, without taking the oath or making such affirmation, is liable to a fine of £500 for each offence (v).

SECT. 1.
Meeting.

SUB-SECT. 3.—Introduction of Peers.

1259. A peer who succeeds to his peerage by descent, and is of age, has the right, as soon as he has proved his title and received his writ of summons (a), to come to the House of Lords and take his seat without any formal introduction (b).

Manner in which an hereditary peer or a representative peer takes his seat.

A representative peer of Scotland (c) or of Ireland (d) is not introduced, but takes his seat in the same way as an hereditary peer of the United Kingdom, as soon as his election has been notified to the House (e).

1260. A newly-created peer, or the successor of a newly-created peer who never took his seat, or a peer who has succeeded to his peerage under a special limitation (f), must be introduced (g) with

Introduction of a newly created peer.

to administering the oath to a person of no religious belief, see title CONSTITUTIONAL LAW, Vol. VI., p. 343. As to oaths generally, see title EVIDENCE, Vol. XIII., pp. 590 et seq.

(v) Parliamentary Oaths Act, 1866 (29 & 30 Vict. c. 19), s. 5. The pecuniary penalty can be sued for only by the Crown (Bradlaugh v. Clarke (1883), 52 L. J. (Q. B.) 505, H. L.). In addition to the pecuniary penalty, the seat of a member of the House of Commons who transgresses this rule is vacated as if he were dead (Parliamentary Oaths Act, 1866 (29 & 30 Vict. c. 19), s. 5). The penal sections of the Parliamentary Oaths Act, 1866 (29 & 30 Vict. c. 19), were not repealed by the Statute Law Revision Act, 1875 (38 & 39 Vict. c. 66); see Clarke v. Bradlaugh (1881), 8 Q. B. D. 63, C. A.

(a) As to what is required before a writ can be issued, see p. 623, ante.

(b) Standing Orders of the House of Lords (Public Business), 1902, No. 13. Any day on which the House sits, as soon as prayers have been said and before public business has begun, the new peer may go to the table of the House and present his writ of summons to the clerk, who then administers the oath to him, after which the peer signs the roll and shakes hands with the Lord Chancellor. As to the peerage, see title PEERAGES AND DIGNITIES.

(c) A representative peer of Scotland does not bring a writ of summons to the House, but merely takes the oath and signs the roll. As to such peers, see p. 625, ante.

(d) If a representative peer of Ireland is, subsequent to his election, advanced to a higher degree in the peerage of Ireland, the letters patent by which such advancement is made must be produced and read in the House; see Standing Orders of the House of Lords (Public Business), 1902, No. 99. As to such peers, see p. 626, ante.

(e) The names of the peers elected to represent the peers of Scotland are communicated to the Lord Chancellor by the Lord Clerk Register of Scotland at the beginning of every new Parliament; see p. 626, ante. The same procedure is adopted in the case of an election taking place during the course of a Parliament. As to notifying the election of an Irish representative peer, see p. 627, ante.

(f) Standing Orders of the House of Lords (Public Business), 1902, No. 14.

(g) Ibid., No. 15. When a newly-created peer is introduced, he enters the House by the bar. He is preceded by the Gentleman Usher of the Black Rod, the Earl Marshal, the Lord Great Chamberlain, and Garter King of Arms, or their deputies, and is supported by two peers of his own degree. The new peer carries his writ of summons, and both he and his supporters, and also the Earl Marshal and the Lord Great

SECT. 1.
Meeting.

Introduction
of the Lord
Chancellor.

certain formalities before he may sit and vote in the House of Lords and his patent and writ of summons are entered in full upon the Journals of the House (h).

1261. When a commoner who has been appointed Lord Chancellor is created a peer, or when a Lord Chancellor has been advanced a rank in peerage, the leader of the House announces the fact in the House (i). The Lord Chancellor then leaves the House by the bar and returns wearing his peer's robes and accompanied by two supporters and the Officers of State (k). The ceremony of introduction is the same as that already described in the case of a newly-created peer (l), except that the Lord Chancellor, after receiving his patent from Garter King of Arms, kneels and lays it upon the Throne, and from thence takes it and delivers it with his writ of summons to the Reading Clerk. After he has taken the oath and signed the roll, the Lord Chancellor is first placed between his two supporters at the lower end of the bench on which his rank in the peerage entitles him to sit. From this position the three peers salute the Throne by rising and uncovering three times. The Lord

Chamberlain, wear their peers' robes. The Gentleman Usher of the Black Rod and Garter King of Arms wear their official uniforms, and the latter carries the new peer's patent of creation. After bowing to the Throne as they enter the House, the new peer and his escort advance up the House on the temporal side (see p. 624, ante) to the woolsack, making a second bow as they pass the table, and a third when they reach the woolsack. Garter King of Arms then hands his patent to the new peer, who, kneeling on one knee, presents it and also his writ of summons to the Lord Chancellor, who hands them to the Reading Clerk. The new peer, with his two supporters, then proceeds to the table of the House, whilst the Earl Marshal and the other officers station themselves between the first cross bench and the table facing the Lord Chancellor. The Reading Clerk, who has meanwhile returned to the table, reads aloud both the patent and the writ of summons, and then administers the oath to the new peer, who signs the roll. The procession is then re-formed in the original order and crosses the House, passing between the first cross bench and the table. It then turns and again crosses the House between the lowest cross bench and the bar. The Earl Marshal and the other officers remain standing by the cross benches whilst Garter King of Arms conducts the new peer to the bench upon which he is entitled to sit. The new peer then takes his seat between his two supporters, and they all three put on their cocked hats and bow three times to the Lord Chancellor, rising and uncovering each time. The Lord Chancellor returns their salutations by taking off his hat, but he does not rise. As soon as this ceremonious greeting has been exchanged, the procession is once again re-formed and again moves up the House, a proceeding which enables the new peer as he passes the woolsack to shake hands with the Lord Chancellor before leaving the House to unrobe. Two or more peers of the same degree may be introduced together. On such occasions each patent and writ of summons is read in succession, each peer taking the oath as soon as his own have been read. When all the patents and writs of summons have been read, the new peers are conducted to the proper bench, from which they salute the Lord Chancellor simultaneously; see Journals of the House of Lords, 1906, Vol. CXXXVIII., pp. 18 et seq.

(h) See note (c), p. 623, ante.

(i) Journals of the House of Lords, 1898, Vol. CXXX., p. 6; 1906, Vol. CXXXVIII., p. 5.

(k) If the Lord Chancellor has been created a peer before the opening of the session, he may perform the duties of his office at the opening of Parliament, but he is not introduced until after the delivery of the Speech from the Throne (see p. 696, post) and prayers have been said.

(l) See note (g), p. 689, ante.

Chancellor, accompanied by his supporters, then moves and takes his seat alone at the upper end of the Earls' bench, to which position in the House he is entitled in virtue of his office. From this position he again salutes the Throne, after which he rises, uncovers, and returns to the woolsack. The House then adjourns during pleasure to enable the Lord Chancellor to unrobe.

SECT. 1.
Meeting.

1262. When the Prince of Wales is introduced, he does not kneel when he presents his patent to the Lord Chancellor, and, after his patent and writ of summons have been read and he has taken the oath and signed the roll, he is conducted to his chair on the right of the Throne. He then receives the congratulations of the Lord Chancellor, after which he retires to unrobe (m). A peer of the Blood Royal also presents his patent to the Lord Chancellor standing, and, after he has taken the oath and signed the roll, he takes his seat on a chair placed on the left of the Throne (n).

Introduction of a peer of the Blood Royal.

1263. The ceremony upon the introduction of a lord spiritual (o) is practically the same as that upon the introduction of a lord temporal, except that as a bishop has not been created a peer he has no patent, and, therefore, only presents his writ of summons to the Lord Chancellor. When he takes his seat in the House of Lords, a lord spiritual is supported by two other lords spiritual, and is not accompanied by the Earl Marshal and the other Officers of State.

Introduction of a lord spiritual.

SUB-SECT. 4.—Introduction of Members of the House of Commons.

1264. There is no formal introduction of members of the House of Commons at the beginning of the first session of a new Parliament. The return book, which is delivered in by the Clerk of the Crown in Chancery, is the only evidence which is required of each member's election (p).

Manner in which a member of the House of Commons takes his seat.

When a member is elected to fill a vacancy in the House caused by a bye-election (q), during the course of a Parliament, he must be formally introduced (r).

(m) For the ceremony upon the introduction of His late Majesty King Edward VII., as Prince of Wales, on the 5th February, 1863, see Journals of the House of Lords, 1863, Vol. XCV., p. 6.

(n) By stat. (1539) 31 Hen. 8, c. 10, s. 1, only the children of the Sovereign are entitled to sit on either side of the Throne in the House of Lords. When Prince Albert Victor of Wales was created Duke of Clarence and Avondale, and again when His present Majesty was created Duke of York, Queen Victoria sent a message to the House of Lords recommending the House to consider of the place His Royal Highness should occupy in the House. The matter was referred to the Committee for Privileges, which, upon each occasion, recommended that His Royal Highness should sit on the left hand of the Throne, in the place usually reserved for younger sons of the reigning Sovereign.

(o) As to the lords spiritual, see pp. 619 et seq., ante.

(p) See title ELECTIONS, Vol. XII., pp. 331—333.

(q) For the causes which necessitate the vacation of their seats by members, see pp. 656, 658 et seq., ante, and see pp. 787, 789, post.

(r) See Resolution of the House of the 23rd February, 1688-9 (Journals of the House of Commons, Vol. X., p. 34). Any day the House sits, immediately after questions are disposed of, or after the conclusion of public business, the Speaker invites the new member, who is standing at the bar between two other members, to take his seat. In reply to this invitation, the new member, between his two supporters, advances up the floor of the House

SECT. 1.

Meeting.

Proceedings on the first day of a new Parliament.

SUB-SECT. 5.—Preliminary Proceedings when a New Parliament Meets.

1265. On the day when a new Parliament is appointed to meet for the transaction of business, the Lord Chancellor and four other lords, who must be members of the Privy Council (s), take their seats on a form which is placed between the woolsack and the Throne (t). The Lord Chancellor then directs the Gentleman Usher of the Black Rod, or his deputy, to let the Commons know that the Lords Commissioners desire their attendance in the House of Lords to hear the commission read.

As soon as the members of the House of Commons appear at the bar, the Lord Chancellor informs them that he and the other Lords Commissioners have been empowered by letters patent under the Great Seal "to do all things in His Majesty's name which are to be done on his part in this Parliament, as by the letters patent will more fully appear." The letters patent are then read aloud by the Reading Clerk, after which the Lord Chancellor informs both Houses that, as soon as the members of the two Houses have taken the oath, the causes of His Majesty calling the Parliament will be declared to them, and he further informs the Commons that it is the King's pleasure that they should repair to the place where they are to sit, and there proceed to the choice of some proper person to be their Speaker, and that they should present such person, when they have chosen him, for His Majesty's approbation. The Commons then retire to their own House to choose a Speaker, and the House of Lords is adjourned during pleasure (u).

Proceedings in the House of Lords subsequent to the reading of the commission for the election of Speaker.

1266. In the House of Lords, when the House has been resumed and prayers have been said, the Lord Chancellor takes the oath. He goes alone to the table of the House, repeats the oath of allegiance, and signs the roll, after which he returns to the woolsack, and any lords who are present take the oath or make the affirmation prescribed by statute. Each lord presents his writ of summons to the clerk, signs the roll, and shakes hands with the Lord Chancellor (v).

On the first day of a new Parliament, and also of each of its succeeding sessions, Garter King of Arms delivers at the table of the House a complete list of the lords temporal sitting in Parliament (a).

to the table, where he presents the certificate of his election to the clerk. He then takes the oath or makes his affirmation in the prescribed form, signs the roll, and shakes hands with the Speaker, to whom he is presented by the clerk.

(s) See title CONSTITUTIONAL LAW, Vol. VII., pp. 51 et seq.

(t) The Lord Chancellor and the other Lords Commissioners wear their peers' robes. The former wears a three-cornered hat, and the other peers wear cocked hats.

(u) When the House is adjourned during pleasure, the mace is left on the woolsack, and the Lord Chancellor leaves the House by the door which opens into the Prince's Chamber. When the House is resumed, he returns by the same way.

(v) A peer of the Blood Royal takes the oath singly.

(a) The Clerk of the Parliaments also prepares a roll of the lords spiritual and temporal, which he lays on the table of the House on the third sitting day. As to notifying the House of Lords of the election of Scottish and Irish representative peers, see pp. 626, 627, ante, and note (e), p. 689, ante. As to Garter King of Arms, see title PEERAGES AND DIGNITIES.

1267. In the House of Commons, the first and only business of the day is to carry out the instruction of the Sovereign to choose a Speaker. As soon, therefore, as the members have returned from hearing the commission read in the House of Lords, the Clerk of the House rises in his place and points with his finger to the member who is to propose the name of the Speaker (b). The member thus designated then moves that some other member who is present “do take the chair of this House as Speaker,” and this motion is seconded by another member. If no other candidate is proposed, the motion is agreed to without any question being put. The member who has been chosen to be Speaker then rises in his place, expresses his sense of the honour proposed to be conferred upon him, and submits himself to the House, after which his proposer and seconder conduct him to the Speaker’s chair. Standing upon the upper step leading to the chair, the Speaker-elect returns his humble acknowledgments to the House for the great honour which it has conferred upon him, after which he sits down in the chair, and the mace, which has hitherto lain under the table, is placed upon the table of the House. The Speaker-elect is then congratulated by the leader of the House and the leader of the opposition, or by two other members acting on their behalf, and also by the leaders of other recognised groups of members in the House. As soon as these speeches have been delivered, the leader of the House moves the adjournment, the Speaker-elect puts the question, and the proceedings are brought to a close (c).

If there is more than one candidate for the Speakership, the procedure is somewhat different (d).

SECT. 1.
Meeting.

Election of Speaker
by the
Commons.

(b) The duty of proposing and seconding the name of the Speaker is usually entrusted to two old and influential members of the House who are not at the time Ministers of the Crown, and one of whom represents a borough and the other a county constituency. When there is no contest for the office, the proposer and the seconder are generally chosen from different political parties to signify the united opinion of the House.

(c) See Journals of the House of Commons, 1910, Vol. CLXV., p. 5. The Speaker is elected for the duration of the Parliament. If, owing to his death or resignation during the course of the Parliament, a vacancy occurs in the office, it is customary for a Minister of the Crown in the Commons to acquaint the House that the Sovereign “gives leave to the House to proceed forthwith to the choice of a new Speaker”; see Journals of the House of Commons, 1905, Vol. CLX., p. 249. (The proceedings with regard to the election of a new Speaker during the course of a session are the same as those described in the text, supra.) As soon as the choice of the House has been made, a Minister of the Crown acquaints the House that “he has it in command from his Majesty that the House should present their Speaker (on a certain day) in the House of Peers for his Majesty’s Royal approbation.” The approval of the Crown to the choice of the Commons is signified by the Royal Commissioners in the same way as at the beginning of a new Parliament (see p. 694, post), except that the new Speaker does not claim the privileges of the House which have already been accorded to it upon the request of his predecessor. When a Speaker retires during the course of the session, it is customary for the House, on the motion of its leader, which is seconded by the leader of the opposition and supported by other prominent members, to pass a Resolution expressing its appreciation of the services of the retiring Speaker, and an order is made for this Resolution to be entered in the Journals of the House; see Journals of the House of Commons, 1895, Vol. CL., p. 147.

(d) The candidates, after they have been proposed and seconded, address themselves to the House, and a debate thereupon ensues. The decision of the

SECT. 1.

Meeting.

Confirmation
by the Crown of election of Speaker.

1268. The second day of the first session of a new Parliament, the Lord Chancellor and the four other Lords Commissioners again take their seats on the form in front of the Throne, and send the Gentleman Usher of the Black Rod to the Commons to desire their immediate attendance in the House of Lords. In reply to this request, the Speaker-elect, accompanied by the Gentleman Usher of the Black Rod, attended by his Chaplain, the Serjeant-at-Arms of the House of Commons, and the Clerk of that House, and followed by the Commons, comes to the bar of the House of Lords. After exchanging greetings with the Lords Commissioners, the Speaker-elect informs them that, in obedience to His Majesty's commands, His Majesty's faithful Commons, in the exercise of their undoubted rights and privileges, have proceeded to the election of a Speaker, and, as the object of their choice, submits himself with all humility for His Majesty's gracious approbation. The Lord Chancellor intimates the approval of the Crown, and confirms the election of the Speaker, who then proceeds, in the name and on behalf of the Commons of the United Kingdom, to lay claim "to their ancient and undoubted rights and privileges, and especially to freedom from arrest and molestation for their persons, servants and estates, to freedom of speech in debate, and to free access to His Majesty whenever occasion may require it, and to the most favourable construction of all their proceedings" (e). He also prays, on his own account, that whatever error may occur in the discharge of his duty may be imputed to him alone, and not to His Majesty's faithful Commons. In answer to this speech the Lord Chancellor informs the Speaker "that His Majesty most readily confirms all the rights and privileges which have ever been granted to or conferred upon the Commons by His Majesty or any of His Royal Predecessors," and assures him that His Majesty will always put the most favourable construction on his words and actions.

Proceedings
in the House
of Commons
subsequent to the confirmation by the Crown of the Speaker's
election.

1269. As soon as this ceremony has been concluded, the Speaker returns to the House of Commons and reports to the House that his election has been approved by the Sovereign, and also that the privileges of the House have been confirmed. He again thanks the House for the honour which it has conferred upon him, reminds members that it is incumbent upon them to take the oath prescribed by law, and himself takes the oath, standing upon the upper step below the Speaker's chair. Other members who are present then come to the table of the House and either take the oath or make the affirmation in the manner prescribed by statute (f), after which they sign the roll and shake hands with the Speaker. As soon

House is determined upon the question, "That Mr. — (the member who has been first proposed) do take the chair of this House as Speaker?" and a division is taken, if necessary. If this question is decided in the affirmative, the elected candidate is at once conducted to the chair by his proposer and seconder; if the question, however, is decided in the negative, a similar question is put upon the name of the second candidate who has been proposed. The subsequent proceedings after the election of a Speaker has been decided in this way are the same as those already described; see Journals of the House of Commons, 1895, Vol. CL., pp. 149, 693, ante, and the text, supra.

(e) See pp. 777 et seq., post.

(f) See p. 688, ante.

as the majority of members of both Houses have taken the oath (g), the causes for the summoning of Parliament are communicated to the two Houses in a Speech from the Throne (h).

SECT. 1.
Meeting.

SUB-SECT. 6.—Proceedings at the Opening of Parliament.

1270. When the Sovereign opens the session in person, the Lord Chancellor, who wears his peer's robes, enters the House of Lords by the bar and takes his seat on the woolsack. As soon as he is informed that the King is approaching, he goes to meet him at the foot of the staircase in the Victoria Tower and then takes his place in the Royal procession, which proceeds from the King's Robing Room through the Royal Gallery and the Prince's Chamber to the House of Lords (i).

Opening of Parliament by Sovereign in person.

Before the Royal procession reaches the House of Lords, the members of the Royal Family, the lords spiritual and temporal, wearing their robes, peeresses (j), the judges, and the members of the Corps Diplomatique, take their places in the House.

Upon the arrival of the Royal procession all persons present in the House of Lords rise and remain standing until the King is seated on the Throne and directs them to be seated (k). His Majesty

(g) On the occasion of the meeting of a new Parliament, when a change of Ministry has taken place since the general election, after the election of the Speaker has been confirmed in the manner already described (see p. 694, ante), the Commons are requested to come to the House of Lords, and are informed by the Lord Chancellor, on behalf of the Lords Commissioners, that he is directed by His Majesty to acquaint them that since the date when His Majesty deemed it right to call them together for the consideration of many grave and important matters, several vacancies have occurred in the House of Commons, owing to the acceptance of office from the Crown by members of that House (see p. 659, ante), and that it is His Majesty's pleasure that an opportunity may now be given to issue writs for supplying the vacancies thus occasioned, and that after a suitable recess Parliament may proceed to the consideration of such matters as may be laid before it. Parliament then adjourns to a future day, when the Speech from the Throne is submitted to it and business proceeds as usual.

(h) Every session, after the first one of a new Parliament, as there is no election of a Speaker in the House of Commons, or any general swearing in of members in either House, the Speech from the Throne is delivered the first day of the session without any preliminary proceedings.

(i) The procession is headed by the pursuivants and heralds, and the officers of the Royal Household, Norroy King of Arms, the Lord President of the Council, the Lord Chancellor, the Gentleman Usher of the Black Rod, Garter King of Arms, the Earl Marshal, and the Lord Great Chamberlain. The peers who carry the Sword of State, the Imperial Crown and the Cap of Maintenance walk immediately in front of the Sovereign.

(j) As far as possible, peeresses are provided with seats in the House, but it appears that they can claim no right to be present; see Report from the Joint Committee on the Presence of the Sovereign in Parliament, pp. vi., vii., 1901, House of Commons Paper (212). Admission to the House of Lords at ceremonies of State is regulated by the Lord Great Chamberlain.

(k) When the Sovereign takes his seat on the Throne, the peer who carries the Cap of Maintenance stands on the steps of the Throne on the right, and the peer bearing the Sword of State on the left. The Lord Chancellor, the Lord President of the Council, and the Earl Marshal stand on the right of the Sovereign, and the Lord Great Chamberlain stands on the steps of the Throne on the left of the Sovereign to receive the Royal commands. The officers of the Royal Household (see title CONSTITUTIONAL LAW, Vol. VII., pp. 106, 107) arrange themselves on each side of the steps of the Throne, in the rear of the

SECT. 1.
Meeting.

then commands the Gentleman Usher of the Black Rod to let the Commons know that "It is His Majesty's pleasure that they attend him immediately in this House."

Meanwhile the House of Commons has met and prayers have been read. As soon, therefore, as the Gentleman Usher of the Black Rod has announced the King's command, the Speaker leaves the chair and proceeds to the House of Lords, followed by the members of the House.

When he reaches the bar of the House of Lords, the Speaker bows three times to the King, who acknowledges his salutation by raising his hat. The Lord Chancellor then hands a copy of the Royal Speech to His Majesty, who reads it aloud. The King then retires from the House and returns to the Robing Room, and the Speaker and the members of the House of Commons withdraw to their own Chamber.

Opening of Parliament
when Sovereign not present in person.

1271. When the Sovereign is not present in person to open the session, the task is deputed to the Lord Chancellor and four other Lords Commissioners, who are appointed by letters patent as already described (l). The Lord Chancellor reads the Speech from the Throne, and, except that there is no procession and that the Lords Commissioners request, instead of commanding, the attendance of the Commons, the proceedings are the same as when the King is present in person (m).

After the delivery of the Speech from the Throne, both Houses adjourn during pleasure until later in the afternoon of the same day.

Proceedings
in the House of Lords subsequent to the opening of Parliament.

1272. The House of Lords usually resumes its sitting at a quarter-past four o'clock, when the Lord Chancellor enters the House by the bar and takes his seat on the woolsack. Prayers are then read. At half-past four o'clock, the hour at which public business begins, the leader of the House moves that a Bill, usually a Bill for the regulation of select vestries, be read a first time. This is purely a formal proceeding, but until it has taken place no other business should be done, and no business should intervene between the first reading of the Bill and the report of the King's Speech (n). As soon as the first reading of this Bill has been agreed to, the Lord Chancellor reports the Speech from the Throne to the House (o), and an address thanking His Majesty for his most gracious Speech is moved and seconded by two lords to whom the duty has been entrusted by the Government (p). A debate follows, great Officers of State. When the Sovereign retires, the procession returns to the Robing Room in the same order as it came.

(l) See p. 692, ante.

(m) See p. 695, ante, and the text, supra.

(n) See Companion to the Standing Orders on Public Business of the House of Lords, ed. 1909, p. 16.

(o) The Lord Chancellor, standing in his place at the woolsack, reads the Speech without any prefatory words. Whilst the Speech is read, all the lords present remain uncovered.

(p) It is customary for the lords to whom this duty is entrusted to appear in levée dress or uniform.

but it is unusual for an amendment to be moved to the address in the House of Lords (q). It is generally agreed to nemine dissentiente, and is then ordered to be presented to the Sovereign by the Lords with White Staves (r).

SECT. 1.
Meeting.

1273. The House of Commons resumes its sitting at four o'clock, but, unlike the other House, it does not immediately proceed to the consideration of the address in reply to the Speech from the Throne. Before this subject is entered upon, the Speaker informs the House of any new writs which may have been issued since the previous session, and of any other event which it may be his duty to communicate to the House; matters affecting the privileges of the Commons may also be raised (s), and various sessional orders and regulations are made (t); after which the Clerk of the House reads

Proceedings
in the House
of Commons
subsequent to the opening of Parliament.

(q) The last occasion upon which an amendment was moved to the address in the House of Lords was in 1878 with regard to the Afghan War; see Journals of the House of Lords, 1878, Vol. CXI., p. 6. The form of the address in answer to a speech from the Throne is always the same, namely, "Most Gracious Sovereign, We Your Majesty's most dutiful and loyal subjects, the Lords Spiritual and Temporal of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland in Parliament assembled, beg leave to thank Your Majesty for the most gracious Speech which Your Majesty has addressed to both Houses of Parliament." Occasionally, if the circumstances demand it, an additional paragraph may be added; see the allusions to the death of the Duke of Clarence and Avondale in the address in 1892, and to the death of Prince Henry of Battenburg in 1896; Journals of the House of Lords, 1892, Vol. CXXIV., p. 7; 1896, Vol. CXXVIII., p. 16.

(r) See p. 803, post. There is usually no other public business on the first day of the session, but, before the House adjourns, it is customary to appoint a lord to be Chairman of Committees for the session (see p. 630, ante). Three Committees, namely, the Committee for Privileges, the Committee for the Journals, and the Appeal Committee (see pp. 641, 642, ante) are also appointed, and an order is made to prevent stoppages in the streets whilst the House is sitting.

(s) See Journals of the House of Commons, 1911, Vol. CLXVI., p. 6.

(t) Orders are made to the following effect, namely:—(1) That a member who has been elected for two constituencies must make election for which he will serve within one week after it shall appear that there is no question upon the return for that place; (2) that if any question is raised with regard to the return of any member, he must withdraw whilst the matter is in debate; (3) that all members returned upon double returns must withdraw until their returns are determined; (4) that the commissioners of the metropolitan police must see that the passages through the streets leading to the House are kept open during the session, and that the members of the House suffer no obstruction in getting to the House; (5) that the Votes and Proceedings of the House (see p. 667, ante) be perused by the Speaker and printed by his authority; (6) that a Committee of Privileges be appointed; (7) that the Journal of the House (see p. 668, ante) of the previous session be printed under the direction of the Clerk of the House, and by some person appointed by the Speaker. Resolutions are made stating (1) that no peer of the Realm, other than an Irish peer who is a member of the House of Commons, has any right to give his vote in the election of any member to serve in Parliament; (2) that it is a high infringement of the liberties and privileges of the Commons for any lord-lieutenant or governor of any county to avail himself of any authority derived from his commission to influence the election of any member to serve in the House of Commons; (3) that if it appears that any member has been elected by means of bribery, the House will treat with the utmost severity any person who has been wilfully concerned in such bribery or corrupt practices; (4) that the House will treat with the utmost severity any person who tampers with any witness in respect of evidence to be given

SECT. I.
Meeting.

the short title of some Bill of a formal character, usually a Bill for the more effectual preventing clandestine outlawries, which is ordered to be read a second time. The Speaker then reports to the House that he has been to the House of Lords to hear the Speech from the Throne, which he proceeds to read to the House. Two members who have been entrusted with the task by the Government then move and second an address of thanks to the Sovereign (u). Upon this motion a debate may ensue, for as soon as the Speaker has put the question for the address it is possible for members to hand in amendments to it at the table (x). Such amendments invariably raise questions of public policy, criticising the action of the Government and their programme as disclosed in the Speech from the Throne (a). As soon as the address has been agreed to by the House, an order is made for it to be presented to His Majesty by "such members of the House as are of His Majesty's most honourable Privy Council, or of His Majesty's Household" (b).

SUB-SECT. 7.—Proceedings on a Demise of the Crown.

Effect on Parliament of a demise of the Crown.

1274. A demise of the Crown does not affect the duration of Parliament (c). In the event of the death of the reigning Sovereign, the two Houses of Parliament are required by statute to meet as soon as possible. If Parliament is sitting, therefore, when a demise of the Crown takes place, it must immediately proceed to act without any formal summons, and, if it is prorogued or adjourned at the time, it must meet and sit with the least possible delay (d).

Meeting of Parliament
after a demise of the Crown.

1275. As soon as each House meets after a demise of the Crown, its members proceed immediately to take the oath of allegiance to the new Sovereign. After a certain time has been allowed for this purpose, a message under the Sign Manual is sent to each House, in which the Sovereign acquaints the Lords and Commons of the death of his predecessor and states such other matters as may be necessary in the circumstances.

before the House or one of its committees, and against any witness who gives false evidence before the House or one of its committees.

(u) It is usual for the Government to appoint for this duty one member representing a county constituency, and the other a borough constituency. It is customary for the members who move and second the address to appear in levée dress or uniform.

(x) The King's Speech is printed and can be obtained by members of either House of Parliament immediately after it has been delivered.

(a) If an amendment to the address is carried, it is usually treated as a vote of want of confidence in the Government; see note (k), p. 618, ante.

(b) The form of the address in answer to the Speech from the Throne is the same as that in the House of Lords; see note (q), p. 697, ante.

(c) Representation of the People Act, 1867 (30 & 31 Vict. c. 102), s. 51; see title CONSTITUTIONAL LAW, Vol. VI., p. 384.

(d) See Journals of the House of Lords, 1910, Vol. CXLII., p. 121; Journals of the House of Commons, 1910, Vol. CLXV., p. 147. If Parliament is prorogued or adjourned when the Sovereign dies, there is no obligation on the authorities to issue an official summons. It is the duty of members of both Houses to proceed immediately to Westminster in order to take the oath of allegiance to the new Sovereign.

Each House votes an address condoling with the Sovereign upon the death of his predecessor and congratulating him upon his accession to the Crown. If the demise of the Crown has taken place in the course of a session, business is then resumed and proceeds as usual; but, if it occurred during a period of adjournment or prorogation, both Houses adjourn for a short period as soon as the addresses have been presented to the new Sovereign (e).

SECT. 1.
Meeting.
Address to the Sovereign.

SECT. 2.—Power of Each House to Adjourn.

1276. Each House of Parliament has the power to adjourn its sittings for any period of time to be determined by an order of the House.

Power of each House to adjourn.

1277. The Crown has occasionally signified its pleasure that both Houses should adjourn, but the practice is unusual, and there is no instance of an adjournment of this kind since 1814 (f). The Crown, however, has statutory power during any adjournment or prorogation of Parliament to issue a proclamation, with the advice of the Privy Council, declaring that the two Houses shall meet on a day named in the proclamation, but not less than six days from the day of the date of such proclamation. In such cases, any order which has been made by either House with regard to the date of its reassembling after an adjournment is cancelled, and the House meets upon the day appointed by the Crown (g).

Power of Crown to adjourn and to summon Parliament during an adjournment or proroga-
tion.

If Parliament is adjourned or stands prorogued for a longer period than ten days, there is also a statutory obligation placed upon the Crown to issue a proclamation summoning both Houses to meet within ten days, whenever, in consequence of the calling out of the first class of the army reserve, directions are required to be given for embodying the Territorial Force (h).

(e) As to the case of a demise after a dissolution and before the day appointed for the meeting of the new Parliament, see title CONSTITUTIONAL LAW, Vol. VI., p. 384; Meeting of Parliament Act, 1797 (37 Geo. 3, c. 127), s. 3. This Act further provides for the continuance in existence of the old Parliament for a further period of six months in the event of a Sovereign dying within six months of his succession to the Throne, and enacts that, in the case of a demise of the Crown on the day appointed for calling a new Parliament, or any day thereafter before its meeting, the new Parliament shall immediately meet and sit for a period of six months unless prorogued or dissolved within that period.

(f) See Journals of the House of Lords, 1814, Vol. XLIX., p. 747; Journals of the House of Commons, 1814, Vol. LXIX., p. 132; compare May, Parliamentary Practice, 11th ed., pp. 46, 47.

(g) Meeting of Parliament Act, 1870 (33 & 34 Vict. c. 81), s. 2.

(h) Territorial and Reserve Forces Act, 1907 (7 Edw. 7, c. 9), s. 17 (2). Previous to the passing of this Act, the same statutory obligation to summon Parliament during a prorogation or adjournment was imposed upon the Crown by the Reserve Forces Act, 1882 (45 & 46 Vict. c. 48), s. 13 (amended by the Reserve Forces and Militia Act, 1898 (61 & 62 Vict. c. 9), and still unrepealed), whenever it might be found necessary to call out the army reserve and militia reserve on permanent service, and by the Militia Act, 1882 (45 & 46 Vict. c. 49), s. 19 (still unrepealed), whenever the militia was embodied; and see title ROYAL FORCES. In 1899, a proclamation was issued on the 7th October summoning Parliament, which was prorogued until the 27th October, to meet on the 17th of that month; see Journals of the House of Commons, 1899, Vol. CLIV., p. 428.

SECT. 3.

Prorogation.

Prorogation of Parliament only effected by exercise of the Royal Prerogative.

1278. A session of Parliament can only be brought to an end by the exercise of the Royal Prerogative. Parliament is prorogued at the end of a session either by the Sovereign in person or by a commission appointed for the purpose by letters patent under the Great Seal. It is always prorogued to a definite day on which its next meeting is appointed to take place. If it is decided afterwards to postpone the reassembling of Parliament to a later date than that which has been originally fixed, the further prorogation can be effected by means of a Royal proclamation, issued with the advice of the Privy Council, without any subsequent writ or commission under the Great Seal (i).

Prorogation of Parliament by Sovereign in person.

1279. When the Sovereign comes in person to prorogue Parliament, the procedure is much the same as when he is present to open Parliament (j). As soon as the King is seated on the Throne in the House of Lords, the Commons are summoned. When the Speaker arrives at the bar of the House of Lords, he makes a short speech in which he informs the King of the work of the session, after which he hands the Appropriation Bill to the Clerk of the Parliaments, who goes to the bar to receive it.

Speech from the Throne.

1280. After the Royal Assent to this and other Bills has been signified in the usual manner (k), the Sovereign reads the Speech from the Throne. As soon as the Speech has been delivered, the Lord Chancellor advances to the steps of the Throne and, kneeling, receives His Majesty's directions with regard to the prorogation of Parliament. He then retires to the right of the Throne and informs both Houses that "it is His Majesty's Royal will and pleasure that this Parliament be prorogued" (to some specified future date) "to be then here holden, and this Parliament is accordingly prorogued" to the day previously mentioned.

Prorogation of Parliament by Lords Commissioners.

1281. When the Sovereign himself does not come to prorogue Parliament, the duty is performed by the Lord Chancellor and four other lords who are appointed commissioners by letters patent under the Great Seal. As soon as the Lords Commissioners have taken their seats on a form placed in front of the Throne, the Gentleman Usher of the Black Rod is sent to request the attendance of the Commons. Except that the Speaker does not make a speech, the subsequent proceedings are much the same as when the Sovereign is present in person (l). The Royal Assent is given in the usual manner to any Bills which there may be, after which the Lord Chancellor reads the Speech from the Throne (m), and then “in His Majesty’s name, and in obedience to his commands” prorogues Parliament (n).

(i) Prorogation Act, 1867 (30 & 31 Vict. c. 81), s. 1.

(j) When the Sovereign prorogues Parliament in person, it is the duty of the Clerk of the Parliaments to attend him in the Robing Room and inform him of the Bills which are waiting to receive the Royal Assent. The Clerk of the Parliaments reads the short titles of the Bills and His Majesty replies that he assents to the Bills; after which the Clerk of the Parliaments withdraws and returns to the House. It is now, however, customary for Parliament to be prorogued by commission. The Sovereign has not prorogued Parliament in person since 1854; see Journals of the House of Lords, 1854, Vol. LXXXVI., p. 521.

(k) See pp. 723, 724, post.

SECT. 3.
Prorogation.

1282. It is a recognised rule of parliamentary procedure that, in addition to bringing a session of Parliament to a conclusion, a prorogation puts an end to all business which is under the consideration of either House at the time of such prorogation (o). In both Houses, therefore, any proceedings either in the House or in any committee of the House lapse with the session, and any Bill which does not receive the Royal Assent before Parliament is prorogued must be reintroduced as a new Bill in a subsequent session (p).

Effect of prorogation upon proceedings in Parliament.

It is also a rule in both Houses that no Bill of the same substance may be introduced twice in the same session (q), and consequently it has occasionally been found necessary to prorogue Parliament for the special purpose of reintroducing in the new session, and passing into law, a Bill which has been thrown out in the previous session (r).

(l) See p. 700, ante.

(m) There is not always a Speech from the Throne on the occasion of a prorogation of Parliament; see Journals of the House of Lords, 1892, Vol. CXXIV., p. 413; 1895, Vol. CXXVII., p. 273.

(n) The Reading Clerk used formerly to read aloud the commission for proroguing Parliament, but this is no longer the practice.

(o) There are two exceptions to this rule. The House of Lords has been given power to sit as a Court of Appeal whilst Parliament is prorogued or after it has been dissolved (see p. 647, ante), and the proceedings upon an impeachment by the Commons may be carried on from one session to another and also from one Parliament to another (see note (p), p. 650, ante).

(p) The proceedings on private Bills and provisional order confirmation bills (see pp. 729, 744, et seq., post) are sometimes suspended over a prorogation or dissolution. In any such case, a special order is made by each House enabling the Bill in question to be reintroduced if a declaration is deposited to prove its identity with the Bill of the previous session. The stages through which the Bill may have already passed are then taken formally, after which its remaining stages proceed in the ordinary manner; see the case of the Leeds Corporation (Consolidation) Bill, 1904, Journals of the House of Lords, 1904, Vol. CXXXVI., p. 330; Journals of the House of Commons, 1904, Vol. CLIX., p. 403; see also the order for the suspension of private Bills and provisional order confirmation Bills in 1910, Journals of the House of Lords, 1910, Vol. CXLII., p. 307; Journals of the House of Commons, 1910, Vol. CLXV., p. 307. As to the release of the monetary deposit made by the promoters of a private Bill when the Bill is suspended, see note (w), p. 740, post. A suspending procedure similar to that already described was adopted in the case of the Port of London Bill in 1903. This was a hybrid Bill (see p. 703, post), and an order was made for it to be suspended after it had been reported from a joint committee; see Journals of the House of Commons, 1903, Vol. CLVIII., p. 421. In the following session the House of Commons agreed to an order renewing the Bill, but the proceedings went no further; see Journals of the House of Commons, 1904, Vol. CLIX., p. 181.

(q) See resolution of the House of Commons upon this subject, Journals of the House of Commons, 1610, Vol. I., p. 434; and see p. 669, ante.

(r) In 1831, Parliament was prorogued from the 20th October to the 6th December, to enable the Reform Bill, which the Lords had rejected, to be reintroduced; see May, Parliamentary Practice, 11th ed., p. 308.

SECT. 4.

Dissolution.

Duration of Parliament.

Manner of dissolving
Parliament.

SECT. 4.—Dissolution.

1283. Parliament can be dissolved at any time by the Crown by the exercise of the Royal Prerogative, but its duration is limited by statute to a period of five years from the day on which by the writ of summons it was appointed to meet (s).

1284. Just as Parliament can be prorogued, so it can be dissolved, by the Sovereign in person, but this method of dissolution has not been adopted since the reign of George III. When it has been decided to dissolve Parliament, the usual practice is for the Sovereign to prorogue it to a definite date, and then, with the advice of the Privy Council, to issue a proclamation under the Great Seal dissolving Parliament, and announcing at the same time that he has ordered the Lord Chancellor and the Lord Chancellor of Ireland to issue out writs in due form for summoning a new Parliament.

Part V.—The Legislative Work of Parliament.

SECT. 1.—Classification of Bills.

Public and
private Bills.

1285. All legislative proposals which are submitted to Parliament are divided into two classes and are described either as public or private Bills (t).

Differences in procedure on public and
private Bills.

1286. Parliament deals with each of these two classes of Bills in a different manner. A public Bill may be introduced by any member in either House (u), but a private Bill may only be laid before Parliament upon a petition presented by the parties interested; and the procedure which is adopted to pass a public Bill into law is not the same in all respects as that which is adopted with regard to a private Bill.

Distinction between subject-matter dealt with in public and
private Bills.

1287. The boundary line which divides the subjects which should be submitted to Parliament by means of a public Bill, and those which should be submitted to it by means of a private Bill is extremely difficult to draw (v), but, as a general rule, it may be laid down that any measure the object of which is to alter the (s) Septennial Act, 1715 (1 Geo. 1, stat. 2, c. 38), as amended by the Parliament Act, 1911 (1 & 2 Geo. 5, c. 13), s. 7.

(t) As to hybrid Bills, see p. 703, post.

(u) Each House has the right to originate and pass any public Bill, but Bills of supply and Bills which impose or appropriate charges on the people originate in the House of Commons (see pp. 766, 792, post), and Bills for restitution of honours, or of blood, should originate in the House of Lords (see p. 727, post) (3 Hatsell, Precedents of Parliament, ed. 1818, pp. 67—70; May, Parliamentary Practice, 11th ed., pp. 459—461). As a matter of courtesy, any Bill which concerns the constitution or privileges of one House should not originate in the other House.

(v) For the distinction between private and public Bills, see May, Parliamentary Practice, 11th ed., pp. 672—682; Ilbert, Legislative Methods and Forms, ed. 1901, pp. 19—35.

general law, except for local purposes or for the benefit of particular persons or bodies of persons, or which deals in any way with the public revenue, with the general administration of justice, or with the constitution or election of local governing bodies, should be introduced as a public Bill; whilst any measure which affects only private interests, or refers to a particular locality, should be introduced as a private Bill (a).

SECT. 1.
Classification of
Bills.

1288. There are, however, many Bills which, although introduced into Parliament as public Bills, are found to affect private interests. Bills of this kind are subject partly to the rules of procedure which govern private Bills (b) and partly to those which govern public Bills (c), and are known as hybrid Bills (d).

Hybrid Bills.

1289. Provisional order confirmation Bills (e) are measures introduced by various Government departments in order to obtain legislative sanction for an order, or series of orders, which they have made under powers conferred upon them by Parliament, and which they are empowered to embody in a Bill and submit to Parliament for confirmation in that form. These Bills in their progress through Parliament are treated partly as public Bills and partly as private Bills.

Provisional order confirmation Bills.

SECT. 2.—Drafting of Public Bills.

1290. The Parliamentary Counsel to the Treasury (f) is directly responsible to the Treasury and receives instructions from that Parliamentary Counsel to the Treasury.

(a) See p. 727, post.

(b) See pp. 729, 744, post.

(c) See pp. 704, et seq., post.

(d) A Bill relating to Crown property, or a Bill introduced by the Government, even if it affects private interests, must be introduced as a public Bill and not as a private Bill, because the Crown cannot petition Parliament. Such a Bill, however, is treated as a quasi-public or hybrid Bill, and, in order that private interests may be protected after a Bill of this kind has been read a first time in either House, it is referred to the Examiners; see p. 740, post. In the House of Lords, a hybrid Bill, when it has been read a second time, is referred, if opposed, to an opposed private Bill committee (see p. 750, post); if unopposed, to the committee on unopposed Bills (see p. 750, post). The proceedings in both these committees are the same as if the measure were a private Bill. In the House of Commons, a hybrid Bill is referred to a select committee (see p. 682, ante). In both Houses, when a hybrid Bill has been reported by the committee to which it has been referred, it is re-committed to a committee of the whole House, and its remaining stages are the same as those of any other public Bill (see pp. 715, 718, post).

(e) See, further, pp. 727 et seq., post.

(f) Before 1869, each Government department was responsible for the drafting of any public Bill which its parliamentary chief submitted to the consideration of Parliament. For a historical survey with regard to the preparation of Acts of Parliament before this date, see Ilbert, Legislative Methods and Forms, ed. 1901, pp. 77—84. In 1869, with the object of effecting a financial saving and also of securing as far as possible uniformity and accuracy in legislation, the office of Parliamentary Counsel to the Treasury was constituted. The office, which was established by Mr. Lowe, afterwards Lord Sherbrooke, was constituted temporarily by a Treasury Minute, dated 8th February, 1869. It was finally established on its present footing by a second Treasury Minute, dated 31st January, 1871. Its staff consists of two barristers, whose whole time is devoted to the work of the office, and who are paid a fixed salary. But, in

SECT. 2.
Drafting of
Public Bills.

Drafting a Government
Bill.

department with regard to the departmental and other Bills which he will be required to draft for the Government (g).

1291. As soon as any Government department has decided to bring in any Bill, the Parliamentary Counsel receives instructions from the Treasury to put himself into communication with the Minister who will be responsible for the Bill in Parliament. When the provisions of the proposed measure have been discussed between the Minister, the Parliamentary Counsel, and the officials of the department or departments concerned, the Parliamentary Counsel prepares a draft of the Bill, which, as soon as it has been agreed upon by the Minister, is circulated to the Cabinet before it is presented to Parliament.

Duty of Parliamentary Counsel
during progress of Government
Bills.

1292. During the progress of Government Bills through the two Houses, the Parliamentary Counsel keeps careful watch over them. It is his duty to prepare explanatory notes for the information of Ministers, to draft amendments on behalf of the Government, and to point out the effect upon a Bill of amendments which are proposed from other quarters of the House (h).

Supervision over public Bills presented by private members.

1293. It is not the duty of the Parliamentary Counsel to criticise or to keep watch over public Bills which are presented by private members in either House of Parliament, unless he is especially instructed by the Treasury to do so. With regard to such Bills, there is, indeed, no kind of systematic supervision on behalf of the Government, but, as a rule, the department which would be affected if a Bill became law keeps a close watch upon the measure and opposes any of its provisions if it considers them to be unworkable or ill-advised.

SECT. 3.—Public Bills.

SUB-SECT. 1.—Presentation and First Reading.

Introduction
and first reading of Bill in House of Lords.

1294. Any lord spiritual or lord temporal has the right, any day on which the House sits, to introduce a Bill in the House of Lords addition to the Parliamentary Counsel to the Treasury and his assistant, provision is made for the employment of additional barristers, of whom two attend regularly at the office and are paid by fees in accordance with the amount of work which they perform, and other barristers unconnected with the office are also employed if their services are required.

(g) The Parliamentary Counsel does not draft Scottish Bills, nor, as a rule, Irish Bills. The former are drafted in the office of the Lord Advocate, the latter in the Irish Office. Many of the principal measures referring to Ireland, owing to their political and financial importance, have been prepared in the office of the Parliamentary Counsel—e.g., the Irish Church Bill, 1869; the Government of Ireland Bills, 1886 and 1893; the Local Government (Ireland) Bills, 1892 and 1898; and the Irish Land Bill, 1903. When it is intended that an English Bill should be made to apply to Scotland and Ireland, the necessary clauses are left blank and are afterwards inserted by the draftsmen employed by the Scottish and Irish Offices.

(h) In the House of Lords, the Parliamentary Counsel attends during the debate on a Bill at the gangway on the right of the Throne; in the House of Commons, in the seats which are provided for officials behind the Speaker's chair on the Government side of the House. As to the "sides" of the House, see p. 624, ante.

without either moving for leave or giving previous notice to the House of his intention to bring it in (i). Any Bill which is presented to the House of Lords is almost invariably read a first time without discussion as a matter of courtesy (j), and, therefore, as a general rule, no opposition is offered to the motion "That this Bill be read a first time?" As soon as this motion has been agreed to, an order is made for the Bill to be printed, and the lord who is in charge of the Bill either personally informs the House, or gives notice to the clerk at the table, of the day upon which he proposes to take the second reading (k).

SECT. 3.
Public Bills.

1295. In the House of Commons, until 1902, a member might only introduce a Bill after having first obtained an order of the House made upon a motion for leave to bring in the Bill (l).

Introduction
of Bill in
House of Commons.

It is now, however, permissible (m) for a member, after having given notice of his intention, either to adopt the old procedure or

(i) A Bill may be presented in "dummy" (see note (n), p. 706, post). If a Bill is of special interest to the House or of great public importance, the lord in charge of it occasionally gives notice in the House of his intention to introduce it upon some future day. But in a case of this kind the more usual, and probably the more convenient, course would be for him to place a notice on the Minutes of Proceedings* (see pp. 667, 669, ante), stating his intention to call attention to the law relating to the subject in question and to present a Bill.

(j) Standing Orders of the House of Lords (Public Business), 1902, No. 37. Debates, however, may arise before the first reading not only of a Bill which is introduced in the Lords, but also of a Bill that has been brought up from the Commons. Bills, in fact, may be opposed at any stage during their passage through the House, and there are instances upon record in which the House has refused to allow a Bill to be read even a first time.

(k) The name of the lord who moves the second reading of any public Bill is entered on the Journals of the House of Lords, and the name of the lord who presents any public Bill in the House, and the name of the lord who gives notice of his intention to move the second reading of any public Bill brought up from the Commons, is printed in the Minutes of Proceedings (Standing Orders of the House of Lords (Public Business), 1902, No. 37). With regard to Bills sent up from the House of Commons, the rule of the House of Lords is that unless, within twelve sitting days after a Bill has been brought from the House of Commons, notice is given by any lord of his intention to move its second reading, it shall no longer appear among the list of Bills before the House. When a Bill has been allowed to lapse in this way, no further proceedings may be taken with regard to it during the same session, unless some lord takes it up and gives eight days' notice of the second reading before the second day of August; see Standing Orders of the House of Lords (Public Business), 1902, No. 38.

(l) When a member has obtained the leave of the House to bring in a Bill, the Speaker asks who will prepare the measure and bring it in. The member who is responsible for the proposed Bill then states the names of the other members who act with him in bringing it in, after which he leaves his seat and goes to the bar of the House. The Speaker then calls him by name and the member walks up to the table of the House and hands the Bill to the clerk, who reads its short title. The Bill is then considered to have been received by the House.

(m) Standing Orders of the House of Commons (Public Business), 1911, No. 31 (2). The new procedure was copied from that of the House of Lords (see Parliamentary Debates, Fourth Series, Vol. CIII., pp. 267--294). It is now the procedure usually employed by private members when presenting Bills and by members of the Government in charge of departmental Bills of a non-contentious character.

SECT. 3. simply to present his Bill at the table (n) without an order of the Public Bills. House (o).

Introduction of Bills at the commencement of public business.

1296. An additional facility for the introduction of Bills in the House of Commons is afforded to the Government by the rule that enables a member of the Government to move for leave to bring in a Bill at the commencement of public business on Mondays, Tuesdays, Wednesdays and Thursdays, whereas a private member may only make such a motion on Tuesdays and Wednesdays (p).

In the event of such motion, moved at this period in the proceedings of the House, being opposed, the Speaker, if he thinks fit, may allow the member who wishes to bring in the Bill and a member who objects to its introduction to make short explanatory statements; after which, without further debate, he must put the question thereon, or the question that the debate be now adjourned.

First reading.

1297. A Bill which is presented in pursuance of an order of the House, or which has been brought from the House of Lords, is read a first time and ordered to be printed without amendment or debate (q). When a Bill is presented without an order of the House, its title is read by the clerk at the table, and it is then deemed to have been read a first time; and is ordered to be printed.

SUB-SECT. 2.—Second Reading.

Second reading.

1298. The second reading is the stage at which the House, which is considering the measure, is called upon either to affirm or to reject the principle upon which the Bill is based (r). In both Houses it is irregular for members to discuss the details of clauses during a second reading debate (s).

(n) A member who presents a Bill, without the leave of the House having been first obtained, does not go to the bar, but, on being called by the Speaker, brings his Bill to the table, when the short title of the measure and the day for its second reading are announced by the clerk. It is not necessary for a member when introducing a Bill to lay the actual text of the measure before the House. It is sufficient if he presents a "dummy" (obtained from the Public Bill Office in the House of Commons), upon which is written the short title of the Bill and the names of the members who support it. The number of names on the back of a Bill must not exceed twelve.

(o) The rules for the introduction of a Bill the main object of which is to appropriate money for the public service or to impose a charge upon the public revenue of the United Kingdom or of India are not the same as for other Bills; see pp. 766, 771, post.

(p) As to the precedence of Government business, see p. 674, ante.

(q) Standing Orders of the House of Commons (Public Business), 1911, No. 31. When a Lords' Bill reaches the House of Commons, the member who takes charge of it notifies to the clerk at the table his wish for its first reading and printing; he also fixes a day for the second reading, and the Bill is set down accordingly.

(r) At this stage of a public Bill, counsel may be heard at the bar in either House. At the present time such a proceeding would be unusual, but in the past the practice was not uncommon in the case of a Bill which affected private interests in a manner distinct from the general interests of the country; see May, Parliamentary Practice, 11th ed., pp. 476, 477.

(s) It is irregular also during a second reading debate on one Bill to discuss the principle of any other Bill which is also before the House, even if the other Bill deals with the same subject.

1299. The procedure with regard to the second reading of a Bill is practically identical in both Houses. When the order of the day for the second reading of the Bill is read by the clerk at the table, the member who is in charge of the measure moves that the Bill be now read a second time (t). He takes this opportunity of explaining the main provisions of the Bill and of recommending it to the House, after which a debate ensues in which the opponents of the measure have an opportunity of expressing their objections to the principles which underlie the Bill.

SECT. 3
Public Bills.

Procedure on second reading.

1300. If the motion for the second reading is not opposed, the question is put from the woolsack in the House of Lords and from the chair in the House of Commons, "That the Bill be now read a second time?" (a). But it is open to any member who wishes to prevent the Bill from passing into law to challenge the question by moving an amendment to the effect that the second reading shall not take place for a definite period of time, usually three months or six months. The object of an amendment of this kind is to ensure that the Bill shall not be considered further during the course of the session (b). If such an amendment is carried, the result is to postpone the second reading stage until after the prorogation of Parliament, and so to prevent the Bill from becoming law in the same session (c).

Methods of opposing a Bill on its second reading.

A member may also oppose the motion for the second reading of a Bill by moving, as an amendment to the original question, a resolution stating definite reasons why the House should not proceed further with the consideration of the Bill (d). In the (t) If, when the order of the day is read, no motion is made either to read the Bill a second time or to postpone it, the order lapses and a fresh order must be made before the second reading may be taken.

(a) It is possible in both Houses for the opponents of a Bill to vote against the motion for the second reading. But, if such a motion is negatived, the actual effect is not to throw out the Bill, but merely to postpone its second reading; and the Bill, therefore, is still before the House; see May, Parliamentary Practice, 11th ed., p. 471. As to moving a resolution stating why the House should not proceed with the consideration of the Bill, see the text, infra.

(b) The usual method of proposing an amendment of this kind is to move to leave out the word "now" which stands in the original question: "That the Bill be now read a second time?" and to add the words "upon this day three months" or "upon this day six months," as the case may be, at the end of the question. The question proposed to the House, therefore, for its decision is "That the word 'now' stand part of the question?"

(c) A Bill, against the second reading of which an amendment of this nature has been carried, is removed from the list of Bills in progress in the House of Lords and from the order book in the House of Commons.

(d) The principle of relevancy which applies to an amendment governs any such resolution. It must relate strictly to the Bill before the House, and should be one that if carried, would give clearly the reason which had induced the House not to read the Bill a second time. Such a resolution, therefore, should declare some principle adverse to, or differing from, the principles of the Bill; or should state definite grounds upon which it would be inexpedient for the House to proceed further with the Bill; or should demand that further information with regard to the matters dealt with in the Bill should be supplied to Parliament either by means of an inquiry by a Royal Commission or by a select committee of the House, before the House is asked to pass the second reading; see May, Parliamentary Practice, 11th ed., pp. 472, 473; see also

SECT. 3.
Public Bills.

event of such a resolution being carried (e), the Bill technically is not rejected, because the House has only signified its refusal to read it a second time on that particular day. The Bill, therefore, remains amongst those Bills which may still be considered by the House in which it may happen to have been introduced, and it is open to the member who is in charge of it again to bring forward a motion for its second reading. As a general rule, however, a Bill is dropped for the session when an adverse resolution of this kind is successful, unless the resolution refers merely to some matter to which effect can be given by means of an amendment in the Bill at a later stage without frustrating the main principle of the measure.

SUB-SECT. 3.—Committee Stage.

(i.) In the House of Lords.

Commitment.

1301. In the House of Lords, as soon as a public Bill has been read a second time, the ordinary practice is to commit it to a committee of the whole House (f), but occasionally, if for any reason it is desired to expedite the passage of a Bill through the House, the motion for its commitment is negatived and an order is made for the third reading of the Bill, usually upon the next day the House sits for public business.

If it is considered desirable in order to hear evidence, or for any other reason, a public Bill may also be referred to a select committee of the House or to a joint committee of the two Houses before it is considered in committee of the whole House (g).

Notice of day for committee of the whole
House.

1302. When a Bill has been committed to a committee of the whole House, unless the day on which the committee is to meet is fixed by the order of the House appointing the committee, it is customary for the lord who is in charge of the Bill to give notice in the Minutes of Proceedings of the day upon which he proposes to Report from the Select Committee of the House of Commons on Public and Private Business of the House, 1837, House of Commons Paper (517).

(e) In the House of Lords, a resolution protesting against the second reading of a Bill may be moved before the motion is put for the second reading of the Bill (e.g., the resolution moved by the Duke of Richmond protesting against the Army Regulation Bill, on the 31st July, 1871; Journals of the House of Lords, 1871, Vol. CIII., p. 609); in the House of Commons, it would be out of order to move a resolution of this kind, except as an amendment to the question for the second reading of the Bill.

(f) No two stages of a Bill may be taken the same day in the House of Lords (Standing Orders of the House of Lords (Public Business), 1902, No. 39). A motion must be made and carried, therefore, suspending this standing order whenever it is desired to take the second reading and committee stages, or indeed any two stages, of a Bill on the same day. Notice must be given in the orders of the day by a lord who proposes to ask the permission of the House to suspend any standing orders. As to such notices, see p. 632, ante. In the House of Commons there is no standing order to prevent all the stages of a Bill being taken the same day. For an instance of a Bill being carried through both Houses in a single day, see the proceedings on the Explosive Substances Bill in 1883, Journals of the House of Lords, 1883, Vol. CXV., p. 76; Journals of the House of Commons, 1883, Vol. CXXXVIII., p. 126.

(g) For the procedure in a select or joint committee on a public Bill, see pp. 714, 715, post. As to select committees of the House of Lords, see pp. 637, 638, ante.

take the committee stage. This practice is essential for the convenience of the House, for it enables peers who are anxious to amend the Bill to prepare their amendments before the appointed day, and it gives to the supporters of the measure and the departments of the Government which may be interested in its provisions an opportunity of seeing the amendments, which are printed and circulated, before the House actually goes into committee (h).

SECT. 3.
Public Bills.

1303. Upon the order of the day being read for the House to be put into committee, the lord who is in charge of the measure (i) moves, "That the House do now resolve itself into a committee upon the Bill?" (k). This motion is then put from the woolsack, but, before it is agreed to by the House, it is possible for any lord to move that an instruction (l) be given to the committee, or to bring forward an amendment either proposing to put off the committee for a definite period of time, or asking the House to agree to a resolution stating the grounds upon which it is unwilling to resolve itself into committee. If an amendment or a resolution of this character is carried, the order for the House to be put into committee is discharged, and no further progress can be made with the Bill until a fresh order is obtained for the House to be put into committee.

Motion for going into committee of the whole House.

1304. As soon as the motion to go into committee has been agreed to by the House, the Lord Chancellor leaves the woolsack, and the Chairman of Committees takes his seat at the table opposite to the clerks, and presides over the committee. The title and preamble of the Bill, if there is one, are usually postponed (m), and Procedure in committee of the whole House.

(h) Amendments may be handed in at the table of the House, or sent to the Clerk of the Parliaments, as soon as a Bill has been read a second time. Each amendment, or series of amendments, proposed by any lord is printed and circulated as soon as possible after it has been received. If the amendments to a Bill are at all numerous, they are arranged or marshalled in order in the office of the Clerk of Public Bills before the committee stage is taken. There are certain definite rules with regard to the order in which amendments are taken. An amendment to insert words when it occurs in the same place in a clause or schedule where there is an amendment to leave out words takes precedence. All amendments to a sub-section, or to a clause, are considered before an amendment to leave out the entire sub-section, or the clause itself, is taken into consideration. Amendments to a proposed new clause are always considered before the clause itself is proposed to the committee. When two lords propose a similar amendment, the lord who first handed in his amendment has precedence in moving the amendment.

(i) In the event of the absence of the lord in whose name an amendment stands, it is permissible for some other lord to move the amendment upon his behalf.

(k) Before the House agrees to this motion, it is possible for any lord to initiate a discussion of the same character as a debate on second reading, a practice which is sometimes resorted to in order to enable lords who have not had an opportunity of speaking at the second reading stage to state their views with regard to the principle of the measure more fully than they would be able to do during the discussion in committee.

(l) The object in moving that an instruction be given to the committee is to enable the committee to do something which otherwise it would not have the power to do, e.g., to consolidate two Bills into one, or to divide one Bill into two, or to extend the scope of a Bill which only refers to England, to Scotland or to Ireland; see Companion to the Standing Orders of the House of Lords on Public Business, pp. 61, 62.

(m) The Chairman of Committees puts the two questions separately: "That

SECT. 3.
Public Bills. each clause is then considered separately. As soon as the clauses have been disposed of, the schedules to the Bill, if there are any, are considered in the same manner, after which the Chairman of Committees puts the questions, "That this be the preamble of the Bill?" and "That this be the title of the Bill?" (n) If these questions are agreed to by the committee, he puts the further questions, "That I report this Bill without amendment [or with amendments] to the House?" and "That this House be resumed?" If these questions are agreed to, the Lord Chancellor resumes his seat on the woolsack, and the Chairman of Committees, standing at the table on the Government side of the House, reports the Bill to the House, either with or without amendments, as the case may be.

Motions on
the House being resumed.

1305. If the Bill has not been amended in committee, the lord who is in charge of it moves that the report of the committee "be now received," and at the same time usually fixes a day for the third reading (o). If, on the contrary, the Bill has been amended in committee, an order is made for it to be printed as amended, and the report stage is fixed for a subsequent day.

(ii.) In the House of Commons.

Commitment. 1306. In the House of Commons, as soon as a public Bill has been read a second time, it may be committed either to a committee of the whole House (p), or to one of the standing committees (q), or to a select committee (r), or to a joint committee of the two Houses (s). Unless, however, the House on motion to be decided without amendment or debate, otherwise order (t), every public Bill, except an Appropriation Bill, a Bill to impose taxes, a Consolidated Fund Bill, or a Bill to confirm a provisional order, stands committed to one or other of the standing committees as soon as it has been read a second time (u).

the title of the Bill be postponed?" and "That the preamble of the Bill be postponed?" It is open, therefore, to the House to amend or to negative both motions, but such a procedure would be unusual in the House of Lords. The ordinary practice is to amend the title of a Bill, if necessary, after the consideration of the clauses is concluded. As a rule, at the present time, there is no preamble to a public Bill. For the conduct of business in committee of the whole House on a Bill, see pp. 713 et seq., post.

(n) If the committee is unable to conclude the consideration of a Bill in one sitting, the House is resumed and the Chairman of Committees reports the progress that has been made, and an order is made for the House to be again in committee either on the following or some subsequent day. "Progress" is the term applied in both Houses to the stage occupied by the consideration of a Bill in committee.

(o) As to the third reading, see p. 718, post.

(p) For the conduct of business in committee of the whole House, see pp. 713 et seq., post.

(q) As to standing committees, see p. 711, post.

(r) As to select committees, see pp. 682 et seq., ante, and p. 714, post.

(s) As to such joint committees, see pp. 639, 640, ante. As to procedure therein, see p. 715, post.

(t) Standing Orders of the House of Commons (Public Business), 1911, No. 46. A motion of this kind, for which notice is not required, must be made immediately after the second reading of the Bill, and may be decided after the time has expired for opposed business.

(u) A member who is in charge of a Bill may, if he thinks fit, move that some 1307. Four standing committees for the consideration of public Bills are appointed every session (v), of which three consist of not less than sixty nor more than eighty members nominated by the Committee of Selection (w). When nominating such members, the Committee of Selection must have regard to the classes of Bills referred to the committees, to the composition of the House, and to the qualifications of the members selected (x).

SECT. 3.
Public Bills.
Constitution of standing
committees.

The fourth standing committee is appointed for the consideration of Bills which refer exclusively to Scotland, and is composed of all the members who represent Scottish constituencies, together with not more than fifteen other members who are nominated by the Committee of Selection to serve on the committee in respect of any Bill (a).

1308. The Committee of Selection also nominates a panel of not less than four nor more than eight members to act as chairmen of the standing committees, and it is the duty of this panel to appoint a chairman of each standing committee (b).

Panel of chairmen of standing
committees.

1309. Bills, other than Scottish Bills, are distributed amongst the standing committees by the Speaker (c).

Distribution of Bills.

1310. The procedure which is adopted in the standing committees in most respects is the same as that in select committees (d), but the chairman of a standing committee is given the same power to check irrelevance and repetition in debate as is allowed to the Chairman in committee of the whole House (e), and debate may be closed if not less than twenty members of the committee vote in the majority in support of a motion for the closure (f). In all but one of the standing committees, Bills which have been introduced by the Government have precedence of other Bills (g).

Procedure in standing
committees.

of its provisions be submitted to a standing committee and the remainder to a committee of the whole House (Standing Orders of the House of Commons (Public Business, 1911), No. 46 (2)).

(v) Ibid., No. 47 (1). The quorum of a standing committee is twenty (ibid.).

(w) Ibid., No. 47 (2).

(x) Ibid., No. 48. The Committee of Selection has power to discharge members of a standing committee for non-attendance, and to appoint others in their place. It also has power to add not more than fifteen members to serve on a standing committee (except the standing committee on Scottish Bills) in respect of any Bill referred to such committee.

(a) Ibid., No. 47 (2). If a Bill relates entirely to Wales and Monmouthshire, the standing committee which considers it must comprise all the members sitting for constituencies in Wales and Monmouthshire; see ibid., No. 48.

(b) Ibid., No. 49. The quorum of the chairmen's panel is three.

(c) Ibid., No. 47 (3).

(d) Ibid., No. 47 (1). Strangers are admitted to standing committees, but they may be ordered to withdraw. Standing committees may not continue their sittings after four o'clock without an order of the House (ibid.). As to select committees, see pp. 682, 683, ante.

(e) The power to select amendments which is exercised by the Chairman of Ways and Means, under Standing Orders of the House of Commons (Public Business), 1911, No. 26 (3), is not conferred on the chairman of a standing committee; see p. 671, ante.

(f) Standing Orders of the House of Commons (Public Business), 1911, No. 47 (5).

(g) Ibid., No. 47 (4).

SECT. 3.
Public Bills.

Powers of standing committees with regard to financial provisions.

Committee
of the whole
House.

1311. A standing committee may consider any clause or provision in a Bill which imposes a financial charge upon the people, but no such clause or provision may be taken into consideration by the standing committee on the Bill, unless and until a resolution of a committee of the whole House authorising the proposed expenditure has been agreed to by the House (h).

1312. When the order of the day is read for the House to go into committee on a Bill which has been committed to a committee of the whole House and the Speaker has left the chair (i), the Chairman of Ways and Means (j) takes his seat at the table in the place usually occupied by the Clerk of the House (k), and the consideration of the Bill is begun forthwith. The title and preamble stand postponed, and the clauses and schedules of the Bill are then considered (l). When the committee is unable to conclude the consideration of a Bill before the hour arrives for the interruption of business (m), the Chairman leaves the chair, without question put, to report progress. The Speaker then returns to his chair, and the Chairman informs him that the committee have made progress with the Bill and asks for leave to sit again (n). The member who is in charge of the Bill, in reply to a question from the Speaker, then fixes the day when the committee is to sit again. On the day appointed for the resumption of the consideration of a Bill in committee of the whole House, the Speaker leaves the chair without question put as soon as the order of the day has been read.

Conclusion of consideration
of Bill in
committee.

1313. When the consideration of a Bill in committee of the whole House has been concluded, the Chairman puts the question, "That I do report this Bill without amendment [or with amendments] to the House?" As soon as this question has been decided, he leaves

(h) See pp. 766 et seq., post.

(i) For the procedure in the event of a motion being made for an instruction to be given to the committee, see p. 666, ante.

(j) See p. 666, ante.

(k) When the Speaker leaves the chair, and the House goes into committee, the Serjeant-at-Arms removes the mace from the table of the House and places it on rests which are attached to the front of the table facing the bar.

(l) See pp. 713, 714, post. Amendments of which notice has been given are printed on the order paper of the House, and are arranged by the officers of the House in the order in which they ought to be taken; when two or more amendments raise the same question at the same place in a clause, precedence is given to the amendment which has been first handed in, but, if the member who is in charge of the Bill is responsible for one of such amendments, he is given precedence of the other members. Amendments may be handed in as soon as a Bill has been read a second time.

(m) As to interruption of business, see pp. 673, 674, ante.

(n) If it is wished to stop the consideration of a Bill in committee of the whole House, the usual practice adopted is to bring forward a motion to report progress. If such a motion is carried, the Chairman leaves the chair and the House is resumed in the manner described in the text, supra. When for any reason further progress with a Bill is not desired, a motion may be made that the Chairman do leave the chair. If such a motion is carried, the Chairman forthwith leaves the chair and does not report progress. The Bill then becomes a dropped order, and no longer appears on the Order Paper of the House; see May, Parliamentary Practice, 11th ed., p. 390.

the chair without question put (o) and reports the Bill to the Speaker, who has meanwhile returned to his chair (p).

SECT. 3.
Public Bills.

1314. If a Bill is reported from the committee of the whole House without amendment, an order is made for it to be read the third time either forthwith or on some subsequent day. If a Bill has been amended by the committee, the amendments may be considered immediately after the report has been received, but, as a general rule, a future day for the consideration of such amendments is fixed by the member who is in charge of the Bill, and an order is made by the House for the Bill to be reprinted as amended in committee of the whole House.

Motions in House subsequent to report of Bill from committee of the whole House.

(iii.) Conduct of Business in Committee of the whole House.

1315. The actual procedure with regard to the consideration of the clauses and schedules of a Bill in committee of the whole House is practically the same in both Houses (q), except that in the House of Commons the practice with regard to amendments is more precisely defined than it is in the House of Lords, and that the Chairman is entrusted with powers to control the proceedings of the committee which are not possessed by the Chairman of Committees in the other House (r).

Procedure similar in both Houses.

1316. In both Houses, the Chairman (s) calls the number of each clause in order, and, if no amendment is moved to any clause, he puts the question "That this clause stand part of the Bill?" If it is proposed to amend a clause, he calls upon the member by name who has given notice of, or who has expressed his intention of, moving an amendment. As soon as the member who has been thus called upon has moved his amendment, the Chairman reads out the terms of the proposed amendment (t) to the committee and proposes the question thereon. It is then permissible for any other member to move an amendment to this amendment. In such a case, the original amendment is treated as if it were the original question, and any amendment to it must be decided before the amendment to the clause itself is proposed to the committee (a).

Amendments to clauses.

(o) Standing Orders of the House of Commons (Public Business), 1911, No. 52.

(p) Ibid., No. 39.

(q) In the House of Commons, it used to be the practice in former times to read a Bill a first and a second time in committee of the whole House. This practice is no longer in force; see ibid., No. 36.

(r) The Chairman, in committee of the whole House in the Commons, is not only entrusted with the duty of maintaining order in the debates of the committee, but he is also empowered to decide whether or not amendments are in order, to determine the place in a Bill where an amendment ought to be moved, and to refuse to propose to the committee any amendment which, in his opinion, is frivolous. As to the Chairman's power to select amendments, see p. 671, ante.

(s) In the House of Commons, in committee of the whole House, the preamble stands postponed without question put; see Standing Orders of the House of Commons (Public Business), 1911, No. 35, and p. 712, ante.

(t) In neither House is it absolutely necessary to give notice of amendments, but, in the case of important amendments, it is obviously for the convenience of the committee that members should give notice as soon as possible of any alterations which they are anxious to make in a Bill.

(a) The method in which the Chairman puts the question to the committee

SECT. 3.
Public Bills.

Consideration of clauses as amended.

Consideration of new clauses and new schedules.

Commitment of a Bill to a select or joint committee.

1317. When all the amendments to a clause have been disposed of, the question is put from the chair "That this clause, as amended, stand part of the Bill?" (b). Any subsequent consideration of a clause which has been agreed to by the committee is out of order, but it is possible, upon motion, for the committee to postpone the consideration of a clause (c).

1318. In the House of Lords, a new clause or a new schedule is treated as an ordinary amendment, and may be proposed when the committee reaches the place in the Bill where it is desired to insert it; in the House of Commons, new clauses and schedules are proposed and taken into consideration after the clauses and schedules respectively in the Bill as it is printed have been disposed of by the committee (d).

SUB-SECT. 4.—Consideration of a Public Bill by a Select Committee or by a Joint Committee of the two Houses.

1319. In either House, a public Bill, after it has been read a second time (e), may be committed to a select committee, or to a depends upon the nature of the amendment which is proposed. Before putting any question to the committee, the Chairman states the amendment. If the amendment is to leave out certain words which stand in the clause, the question is "That the words proposed to be left out [or, if the rejection of all the words contained in the proposed amendment would prejudice the moving of a subsequent amendment, that certain specified words], stand part of the clause?" If the amendment is to insert words, the question is "That the proposed words be there inserted?" If the amendment is to leave out words in order to insert other words, two questions may be necessary. In such a case, the first question proposed by the Chairman is "That the words proposed to be left out stand part of the clause?" If this is agreed to, no further question is needed, as the committee has decided that the words in the Bill shall stand; but if the question is negatived, a further question is necessary, "That those words [i.e., the words proposed by the amendment] be there inserted?"

(b) In both Houses there are certain rules with regard to amendments. An amendment must be relevant to the subject-matter of the Bill and of the clause to which it is proposed. An amendment must not be inconsistent with a previous decision given by the committee on the same question. An amendment must not be such as to make the clause in which it is intended to insert it unintelligible, nor be of a frivolous nature. For other amendments which are irregular, see Ilbert, Manual of Procedure in the Public Business of the House of Commons, 2nd ed., pp. 151, 152. In both Houses, when once an amendment has been moved, it may not be withdrawn except by leave of the committee.

(c) In the House of Commons, a clause may not be postponed if it has been amended. There is no such rule in the House of Lords. For procedure as to postponed clauses generally, see May, Parliamentary Practice, 11th ed., p. 488.

(d) In the House of Commons, when a new clause is proposed, its principle must be affirmed before its details are considered by the committee. The Chairman, therefore, puts the question "That this clause be read a second time?" If this is agreed to, amendments may be moved to the clause in the ordinary way. As soon as the amendments to the clause have been disposed of by the committee, the Chairman puts the question "That this clause [or this clause as amended] be added to the Bill?" The same procedure is adopted with regard to new schedules as with new clauses.

(e) A Bill which has only been read a first time has sometimes been referred to a select committee. In such a case, the Bill is treated as a document, upon which the committee to which it is referred is ordered to report; see Order of the House of Commons, Journals of the House of Commons, 1899, Vol. CLIV., pp. 151, 152.

joint committee of the two Houses, if a motion to that effect is made and agreed to by the House.

SECT. 3.
Public Bills.

1320. A select committee or a joint committee to consider a Bill is nominated by each House in the same way as a select committee or a joint committee nominated to inquire into a public matter, and the rules which regulate its proceedings are the same (f).

Nomination of select and joint committees.

1321. A select committee or a joint committee considers the Bill which has been referred to it clause by clause (g) in the same manner as a committee of the whole House (h), and then reports it, with or without amendments, to the House, or to both Houses, as the case may be (i); but it is open to any select or joint committee, if it wishes to express its views upon the matters dealt with in the Bill, also to present a special report, which is drawn up and agreed to by the committee in the same way as a report by a select committee or a joint committee on a public matter (j).

Procedure in
committee.

1322. When a public Bill has been reported from a select committee or a joint committee, it is re-committed to a committee of the whole House (k). The Bill, as amended, is then considered, and further amendments may be made.

Procedure on report of a Bill from a select or joint
committee.

SUB-SECT. 5.—Re-commitment.

1323. In both Houses, it is permissible, on motion made, to re-commit a public Bill to a committee of the whole House (l). Such a form of procedure is adopted when it is considered for any reason that the provisions of a Bill require further amendment or investigation than they have already received (m).

Re-commitment of Bill.

(f) See pp. 637, 639, 640, 682, ante.

(g) In a joint committee on a public Bill, the procedure of the House of Lords is adopted as in other joint committees; see pp. 638, 640, ante.

(h) See p. 713, ante. In considering clauses in a Bill which involve charges on the public funds, a select committee of the House of Commons is governed by precisely the same limitations as a standing committee of that House; see p. 712, ante.

(i) In the House of Lords, the decision of a joint committee with regard to any Bill which has been referred to it is reported to the House, whether the Bill is in the House of Lords or is in the other House; but, when a Bill which has been considered by a joint committee is not in the House of Commons, the Bill is not reported from the committee to that House, but a report is presented "in respect of the Bill" pending in the House of Lords.

(j) See pp. 639, 640, 683, ante.

(k) In the House of Lords, a motion is made in committee of the whole House to consider the amendments which have been made by a select committee or a joint committee, and it is then permissible for a member to move an amendment either postponing the report stage of the Bill for a definite period of time, or advancing some reason which should influence the House not to proceed any further with the measure.

(l) In the House of Lords, after a Bill has been considered in a committee of the whole House, it may be referred to a select committee. In such a case, the Bill, on being reported by the select committee, must be re-committed to a committee of the whole House. In both Houses a Bill which has been reported from a select committee may be re-committed to the same committee before it is considered in committee of the whole House.

(m) In the House of Commons, it is possible to re-commit certain provisions

SECT. 3.
Public Bills.

Procedure for and on re-commitment.

1324. A motion for the re-commitment of a Bill may be made in both Houses, either when it stands for consideration as amended in committee of the whole House, or when the motion is made for it to be read a third time (n). In both Houses the procedure on the re-commitment of a Bill is the same as in committee of the whole House (o). If further amendments are made at this stage, they must be reported to the House, and the Bill is considered on report before it can be read a third time.

SUB-SECT. 6.—Report Stage.

Consideration of Bill
on report.

1325. In both Houses, when a public Bill has been amended in committee of the whole House, it must be considered by the House before it is read a third time (p), and in the House of Commons any Bill, which has been referred to one or other of the standing committees, instead of being committed to a committee of the whole House, must receive the consideration of the House before its third reading, whether it has been amended or not (q).

Procedure in
House of Lords.

1326. In the House of Lords, on the day which has been previously appointed by the House for the report of amendments, in a Bill and not the whole measure. In such a case, the committee of the whole House to which such provisions are committed, or the select committee to which they are referred, must only take into consideration the provisions which are submitted to them, and not the Bill as a whole.

(n) In the House of Lords, if it is thought desirable that a Bill should be materially modified before it is considered in detail in committee of the whole House, the practice is sometimes adopted of not amending it on the committee stage. In such a case, the necessary amendments are made immediately after the report from the committee has been received by the House, and the Bill is then re-committed to a committee of the whole House; see Companion to the Standing Orders of the House of Lords on Public Business, pp. 66, 67. In the House of Commons, the practice is for the House to go into committee pro forma when such amendments are made; and the Bill, on its being reported, is re-committed. For the procedure on the report stage, see the text, infra, and pp. 717, 718, post, and on third reading, see pp. 718, 719, post.

(o) See p. 713, ante.

(p) In both Houses, on the report stage of a Bill which has been amended in committee of the whole House, a member is only allowed to speak once on an amendment. In the House of Commons, however, this rule has been relaxed in the case of Bills which have been considered in one of the standing committees. On the report stage of any such Bill the member who is in charge of the Bill may speak more than once, and the same permission is accorded to a member who moves a new clause or amendment in respect of the new clause or amendment; see Standing Orders of the House of Commons (Public Business), 1911, No. 46 (3).

(q) In the House of Lords, until recently, every public Bill, after passing through committee of the whole House, was re-committed to a standing committee which was appointed at the beginning of each session. In 1910, however, a select committee was appointed by the House to inquire into this practice, and it reported that it was not expedient to continue the standing committee; see Report from the Select Committee on the Standing Orders relating to the Standing Committee, 1910, House of Lords Paper (56). A motion to carry into effect the report of the select committee was agreed to by the House, and Standing Orders of the House of Lords (Public Business), 1902, Nos. 45—53, which deal with the appointment and functions of the standing committee, were accordingly vacated; see Journals of the House of Lords, 1910, Vol. CXLII., p. 159.

the lord who is in charge of the Bill moves "That this report be now received?" The question is then put by the Lord Chancellor from the woolsack. As soon as this question has been agreed to, it is possible for any lord to move a new clause or other amendment to the Bill (r). Such amendments may be handed in as soon as the Bill has been agreed to in committee of the whole House, and they are printed and circulated in the same way as amendments moved on the committee stage (s).

On the report stage, the Bill is considered as a whole, and not clause by clause. The Lord Chancellor, therefore, does not propose any question to the House when the consideration of each clause is concluded, and when he puts the question on any amendment by which it is proposed to leave out certain words, he expresses it in the form "That these words stand part of the Bill?"

1327. In the House of Commons, as soon as the order of the day for the consideration of a Bill which has been amended in committee of the whole House, or which has been reported with, or without, amendments from one or other of the standing committees, has been read, the House proceeds to consider the same without question put (t). The Bill as a whole is considered by the House on the report stage. It is permissible, therefore, for members to propose new clauses or amendments to the Bill as it is laid before them.

Procedure in
House of Commons.

1328. There are certain restrictions, however, with regard to such clauses and amendments, in addition to the general rules with regard to amendments which have already been described (u). No new clause may be proposed unless notice of it has been given (v), and even then it may only be proposed by the member in whose name it stands. No amendment of any kind may be proposed on report which could not have been proposed in committee of the whole House without instruction from the House having been first obtained (w), and no amendment may be submitted to the consideration of the House which would create a charge of any kind on the people (x).

Rules and restrictions as to insertion of amendments on report.

(r) If such amendments are of no great importance, or merely of a drafting character, they are usually proposed to the House en bloc in one question: "That these amendments be agreed to?" Frequently, however, amendments which it is proposed to introduce at this stage of the Bill are numerous and important; in such cases they are dealt with seriatim.

(s) See note (h), p. 709, ante.

(t) Unless the member who is in charge of the Bill proposes to postpone its consideration, or a motion is made to re-commit it; see Standing Orders of the House of Commons (Public Business), 1911, Nos. 40, 50.

(u) See pp. 709, 713, ante.

(v) Standing Orders of the House of Commons (Public Business), 1911, No. 38.

(w) Prior to 1888, amendments which were wholly irrelevant in their character were often moved on the report stage of a Bill. In that year Standing Order of the House of Commons (Public Business), 1911, No. 41, was passed to prevent this practice; see May, Parliamentary Practice, 11th ed., p. 495.

(x) But an amendment to leave out any such charge contained in the Bill would be in order.

SECT. 3.
Public Bills.

On the report stage also, the procedure with regard to the consideration of amendments is not the same as in committee of the whole House. New clauses and new schedules are not postponed until the clauses and schedules in the Bill have been considered, but are proposed to the House before any amendments may be proposed to the clauses and schedules as they appear in the Bill (a). A motion to postpone the consideration of a clause is not permissible on the report stage (b). If an amendment is proposed to leave out the preamble of the Bill, or a clause or schedule, the Speaker puts the question "That the preamble [or the clause or schedule] stand part of the Bill?" (c).

Conclusion of report stage in either
House.

1329. As soon as the report stage of a Bill is concluded in either House, an order is made for it to be read a third time, and, if it is considered necessary, a further order is made for the Bill to be reprinted.

SUB-SECT. 7.—Third Reading.

Procedure in
House of Lords.

1330. In the House of Lords, upon the order of the day for the third reading being read, the lord who is in charge of the Bill moves "That the Bill be now read a third time" (d). If this motion is unopposed, the Lord Chancellor proposes the question "That the Bill be now read a third time?" and amendments may then be submitted to the consideration of the House (e). As soon as such amendments, if any, have been disposed of, any amendments which may be necessary to avoid infringing the privileges of the House of Commons with regard to the control of public money (f) are laid before the House by the Lord Chancellor, who does not state them, but simply proposes the question "That the privilege amendment [or amendments] be

(a) Compare p. 714, ante. In the consideration of new clauses, priority is given to those proposed by the member who is in charge of the Bill. A new clause is read a first time without question put, and the member who proposes it usually explains its provisions at this stage in the proceedings. The question is then proposed from the chair "That the clause be read a second time?" Opponents of the clause then state their objections to it, and the member who has proposed it has a further opportunity of addressing the House. If the second reading of the clause is agreed to, amendments may be proposed. When the consideration of the clause is concluded, the Speaker puts the question, "That this clause [or this clause as amended] be added to the Bill?"; see May, Parliamentary Practice, 11th ed., p. 496.

(b) Compare note (c), p. 714, ante.

(c) Or, if necessary in order to save later amendments, the question is framed differently, and only the words of the amendment down to the first word of the next amendment are put to the House.

(d) When this question is proposed to the House, and also when the question "That the Bill do pass?" (see p. 719, post) is proposed, it is permissible for any lord either to move an amendment of the same kind as has been described on previous stages of the Bill for the purpose of postponing its consideration by the House (see pp. 707, 716, ante), or to move the rejection of the measure.

(e) Notice should be given of amendments to be moved on third reading. They should be handed in at the table or sent to the Clerk of the Parliaments as soon as possible after the report stage is concluded. They are then printed and circulated in the manner which has already been described; see note (h), p. 709, ante; and see p. 632, ante.

(f) See p. 792, post.

agreed to?" When this motion has been agreed to, the lord who is in charge of the Bill then moves "That the Bill do pass?" (g).

SECT. 3.
Public Bills.

1331. Unless a Bill is heavily amended on third reading, it is unusual for the House to order it to be reprinted for circulation (h). A new House copy of the Bill in its final shape is prepared in the Public Bill Office, which is printed and is then signed and indorsed with the words "Soit baillé aux Communes" by the Clerk of the Parliaments, who then carries it down to the bar of the House of Commons with a message from the Lords stating that they have passed the Bill and desire the concurrence of the other House to it.

Bill sent to House of Commons.

1332. In the House of Commons, a motion may be made by the member who is in charge of the Bill for the third reading of any public Bill, either forthwith or on some subsequent day, as soon as the consideration of amendments on report has been completed (i).

Procedure in
House of
Commons

As soon as the motion for the third reading of a Bill has been made, the Speaker proposes the question "That the Bill be now read the third time?" (j). When important Bills are under consideration, lengthy debates usually take place before this question is voted upon by the House, but no amendments, except of a verbal character, may be made to a Bill at this stage (k).

1333. When the third reading of a Bill has been agreed to by the House, a new House copy of the Bill is prepared in the Public Bill Office. When this has been printed, it is signed and indorsed with the words "Soit baillé aux Seigneurs" by the Clerk of the House, who then carries it to the bar of the House of Lords, with a

Bill sent to House of Lords.

(g) This motion has occasionally been postponed until a later day, and it has also been negatived by the House. Bills may be withdrawn by the lords who have presented them, even after they have been read a third time, provided that the leave of the House has been obtained. Amendments are also made occasionally to Bills by order of the House after the third reading has been agreed to.

(h) In 1883 an order was made that Bills amended on third reading should always be reprinted as amended. This order, however, is no longer observed.

(i) When a Bill has not been amended in committee of the whole House, the third reading may be taken immediately after the report of the committee has been received. The facilities for taking more than one stage of a Bill on one day are not extended to Bills originating on the agreement by the House to a resolution reported from a committee of the whole House based upon the recommendation of the Crown.

(j) Upon this question, a member may move an amendment of the same nature as it is permissible to move on the second reading (see p. 707, ante), either postponing the third reading for a definite period of time or stating reasons which should induce the House to refuse to read the Bill the third time. It is also permissible at this stage for a member to propose that the Bill, or some of its provisions, be re-committed to a committee of the whole House; see p. 716, ante. The question "That this Bill do pass?" which is proposed in the House of Lords after the third reading has been agreed to (see the text, supra), is not put in the House of Commons.

(k) Standing Orders of the House of Commons (Public Business), 1911, No. 42. After a Bill has been read the third time, the title may be amended if any alteration in it is required to make it conform with the provisions of the Bill; see Ilbert, Manual of Procedure in the Public Business of the House of Commons, 2nd ed., p. 162.

SECT. 3. message from the Commons stating that they have passed the Bill Public Bills. and desire the concurrence of the Lords to it.

SUB-SECT. 8.—Consideration of Bills by the Second House.

Stages of a Bill in second
House.

1334. In order that a Bill passed by one House may secure the concurrence of the other House, it must pass through the same stages in the second House as it has already passed through in the House in which it originated, and is similarly open to amendment.

Bills not amended by second House.

1335. If the House of Commons does not amend a Bill which has been sent down to it by the House of Lords, the Bill is returned to the Lords after it has been indorsed by the Clerk of the House of Commons with the words "A ceste Bille les Communes sont assentus," and it is then ready to receive the Royal Assent. If the House of Lords makes no amendment to a Commons Bill, a message is sent to the House of Commons informing that House that the Lords have agreed to the Bill without amendment, and the Bill itself, unless it is a Bill for granting aids and supplies to the Crown (l), is retained in the House of Lords and added to those which are waiting to receive the Royal Assent.

Bills amended in second
House.

1336. If a Lords Bill is amended by the House of Commons, it is returned to the House of Lords after it has been indorsed by the Clerk of the House of Commons with the words "A ceste Bille avecque des amendemens [or avecque une amendement] les Communes sont assentus." In the same way, a Commons Bill when it is amended by the Lords, is returned to the House of Commons after it has been indorsed by the Clerk of the Parliaments with the words "A ceste Bill avecque des amendemens [or avecque une amendement] les Seigneurs sont assentus."

Consideration
by first
House of amendments to a Bill made by second
House.

1337. The procedure in each House of Parliament with regard to the consideration of amendments which have been made in one of its Bills by the other House is practically the same. If the amendments are not of a material character, a motion may be made for them to be considered forthwith without notice (m), but, if the amendments are material, the more usual practice is for the House which is considering the amendments to order them to be printed, and then to fix a day for their consideration (n). If the amendments are agreed to, a message is sent by the House in which the Bill originated to inform the other House that it accepts the amendments (o). The Bill is then ready to receive the Royal Assent.

(l) For the procedure with regard to such Bills, see p. 775, post.

(m) In both Houses, a motion for the consideration of amendments made by the other House is usually made by the member who is in charge of the Bill.

(n) Standing Orders of the House of Commons (Public Business), 1911, No. 43. There is no standing order on the subject in the House of Lords, but the almost invariable practice adopted by the House is not to consider the Commons' amendments to one of its Bills the day they are received. In the House of Commons, if the Speaker is satisfied that the amendments which have been made by the Lords are not material, he will put the question upon a motion for their consideration, made without notice, before questions to members are taken (see p. 676, ante), or before the commencement or at the close of public business the day the amended Bill is received or a subsequent day.

If, however, any of the amendments are of a contentious character, and such that the House in which the Bill originated is not prepared to accept, the procedure may become more complicated (p). In such a case, when the order of the day is read in either House of Parliament for the consideration of the amendments which have been made in any Bill by the other House, a motion is made for their consideration to which an amendment may be proposed that the consideration of such amendments be postponed "until this day three months" or "until this day six months," or that the amendments be laid aside (q). If an amendment of this nature is agreed to, no further proceedings are taken on the Bill, which accordingly drops for the session. But, if the original question is agreed to, the amendments are considered in turn, and motions may be made in respect of each amendment either to agree with it, or to disagree with it, or to amend it (r).

SECT. 3.
Public Bills.

1338. Whenever either House has agreed to a motion to disagree with an amendment to one of its Bills made by the other House, it appoints a committee to prepare a reason or reasons for such disagreement. This committee meets as soon as the consideration of the amendments to the Bill has been concluded in the House, and proceeds to draw up the necessary reason or reasons, which it reports forthwith to the House. A report from a committee appointed for this purpose is agreed to in either House without discussion, after which the Bill, together with the reason or reasons for disagreement, as well as any amendments which may have been made to the amendments made by the other House, and any consequential amendment to the Bill which may have been rendered necessary by any such amendment, is then sent back to the other House (s).

Committee to prepare reasons for disagreeing with amendments to a Bill.

(o) Thus, if the Bill is a Commons Bill, it is returned to the Lords with a message, after having been indorsed with the words "A ces amendemens les Communes sont assentus."

(p) For this procedure, see the Rules, Orders etc. of the House of Commons, dated 4th June, 1891, No. 267. The order is set out in May, Parliamentary Practice, 11th ed., Appendix vii., p. 954.

(q) Ilbert, Manual of Procedure in the Public Business of the House of Commons, 2nd ed., pp. 163, 164. Fresh amendments may also be made in the Bill itself, but any such amendments must be consequential on an amendment which has been inserted in the Bill by the other House (ibid.).

(r) In 1906 the House of Commons rejected en bloc the whole of the amendments made by the House of Lords to the Education (England and Wales) Bill without assigning, in the case of any amendment, a specific reason for its rejection, and a resolution was carried in the House of Lords protesting against this procedure as an innovation in constitutional procedure; see Journals of the House of Lords, 1906, Vol. CXXXVIII., p. 495.

(s) The reasons are written out on a sheet of paper containing the amendments which are disagreed with. This paper is attached to the Bill. The Bill, if it is a House of Lords Bill, is indorsed by the Clerk of the Parliaments with the words "Ceste Bille est remise aux Communes avecque des Raisons [or une Raison]"; if it is a House of Commons Bill, it is indorsed by the Clerk of the House of Commons with the same words, except that "Seigneurs" is substituted for "Communes." After this, no further indorsement is made on a Bill, however often it may pass between the two Houses.

SECT. 3.
Public Bills.

Consideration
by second House of its amendments disagreed with by first
House.

1339. Several courses are thereupon open to the House which made the amendments in the first instance. The first course is to insist upon its amendment or amendments to which the other House has disagreed; the second is to agree not to insist upon such amendment or amendments; and the third is to amend its own amendments, or propose new amendments to meet the objections which have been taken to its original amendments by the other House.

If the House which made the amendment or amendments in the first instance adopts the first course, the Bill drops, unless the House in which the Bill originated gives way and does not insist upon its disagreement, in which case it is still open to it to amend the amendments which have been made by the other House, and to which it originally objected. In this event, it is again left to the House which made the amendments in the first instance to accept, amend, or refuse the amendments to its amendments.

If the House adopts the second course, the Bill is complete so far as the particular points in dispute with regard to such amendment or amendments are concerned.

If the House adopts the third course, it returns the Bill to the other House with such amended or new amendment or amendments. It then remains for that House to decide whether it will accept, amend, or refuse the new proposals.

It is, therefore, possible for a Bill to pass and repass between the two Houses for an indefinite number of times, until an agreement has been arrived at, or until one or other of the Houses insists finally upon some amendment to which the other House disagrees, in which case the Bill drops.

SUB-SECT. 9.—Passing into Law of Bills to which the House of Lords has not Agreed.

Application
of Parliament Act, 1911, to Bills other than money
Bills etc.

1340. Bills which have been passed by the House of Commons, but which have not been agreed to by the House of Lords, may, under certain circumstances, become law (t).

If any public Bill, other than a "money Bill" (u), or a Bill for extending the maximum duration of Parliament beyond five years, or a Bill for confirming a provisional order (a), is passed by the House of Commons in three successive sessions, whether of the same Parliament or not (b), and, having been sent up to the House of Lords at least one month before the end of the session in each of those sessions, is rejected by that House, or is not passed either without amendment, or with such amendments only as the House of Commons is prepared to accept (c), it is, upon its rejection for the (t) Parliament Act, 1911 (1 & 2 Geo. 5, c. 13), s. 2 (1).

(u) As defined in ibid., s. 1 (2). For the procedure with regard to a money Bill, see p. 776, post.

(a) Parliament Act, 1911 (1 & 2 Geo. 5, c. 13), s. 5.

(b) Two years must elapse between the second reading of a Bill in the first of these sessions by the House of Commons, and its passing by that House in the third session (ibid., s. 2 (1)).

(c) A Bill is deemed to be rejected by the House of Lords unless these two conditions are complied with (ibid., s. 2 (3)).

third time by the House of Lords, and unless the House of Commons direct to the contrary, to be presented to His Majesty for the Royal Assent, and, upon the Royal Assent being signified, is to become an Act of Parliament as if it had been passed in the usual manner by both Houses of Parliament (d).

SECT. 3.
Public Bills.

Upon any Bill, which is thus presented to His Majesty for the Royal Assent, must be indorsed a certificate signed by the Speaker, stating that the provisions of the Parliament Act, 1911 (e), have been duly complied with (f).

1341. A Bill is to be deemed the same Bill as a former Bill sent up to the House of Lords by the House of Commons in a preceding session: (1) when it is identical with the former Bill, or contains only such alterations as are rendered necessary by the lapse of time since its first introduction; or (2) when it contains amendments made by the House of Lords in the preceding session, which have been agreed to by the other House (g). In the case of any such Bill, the Speaker is required to certify either that the alterations are necessary on account of the lapse of time, or that the amendments have been agreed to by both Houses (h).

Provisions of Parliament Act, 1911, as to amendments made to a Bill during second and third sessions.

Amendments which are made by the House of Lords in a Bill which is sent up to it for the third time, and to which the House of Commons agrees, may also be inserted in the Bill before it receives the Royal Assent, if the Speaker certifies that they have been agreed to by both Houses (i).

SUB-SECT. 10.—Royal Assent.

1342. When a Bill has been passed by both Houses of Parliament, or has been passed by the House of Commons in the manner provided by the Parliament Act, 1911 (k), it is ready to receive the Royal Assent (l).

Royal Assent
to Bills.

(d) For the words of enactment to a Bill passed under the provisions of the Parliament Act, 1911 (1 & 2 Geo. 5, c. 13), see title STATUTES.

(e) 1 & 2 Geo. 5, c. 13.

(f) Parliament Act, 1911 (1 & 2 Geo. 5, c. 13), s. 2(2). Ibid., s. 3, provides that any certificate of the Speaker given under the Act shall be conclusive for all purposes, and shall not be questioned in any court of law.

(g) Ibid., s. 2 (4).

(h) Ibid.

(i) Ibid. The House of Commons may suggest amendments to a Bill in the second or third session. Such amendments are to be considered by the House of Lords, and, if agreed to by that House, are to be treated as if they were amendments proposed by the House of Lords, and agreed to by the House of Commons (ibid.).

(k) 1 & 2 Geo. 5, c. 13.

(l) It is sometimes necessary that a Bill (usually a Consolidated Fund Bill or the Army (Annual) Bill) should become law before a certain date either to meet the exigencies of the public service or to comply with the provisions of a statute. In such a case a commission to notify the Royal Assent is held as soon as possible after the Bill is ready to receive it. As a general rule, however, a commission is not held until a reasonable number of Bills are waiting to receive the Royal Assent. Bills which are ready for the Royal Assent, with the exception of Bills imposing a financial burden on the people which are returned to the House of Commons, are in the custody of the Clerk of the Parliaments; see p. 720, ante.

SECT. 3.
Public Bills.

Proceedings on giving Royal Assent
to Bills.

Mode of signifying Royal Assent
to Bills.

1343. Unless the Sovereign is present in person, the Royal Assent is signified by Lords Commissioners appointed for the purpose (m). The ceremony takes place in the House of Lords, and the procedure is practically the same whether the Sovereign himself is present on the occasion or is represented by Commissioners (a).

At the time which has been appointed for holding a commission (b) the Lord Chancellor, accompanied by two or four other Lords Commissioners, takes his seat on a form placed in front of the Throne, and the Gentleman Usher of the Black Rod is directed to request the attendance of the Commons in the manner which has already been described.

As soon as the Speaker, accompanied by the Commons, has arrived at the bar of the House of Lords, the Lord Chancellor acquaints the two Houses with the commission (c).

The Reading Clerk then reads the commission, after which the Lord Chancellor declares and notifies the Royal Assent to the Acts which are mentioned in the commission and directs (d) the clerks to pass the same in the usual form and words.

1344. It is the duty of the Clerk of the Crown to read out the titles of the Acts, to each of which in succession the Clerk of the (m) The Sovereign does not now attend to give his assent to Bills except when he prorogues Parliament in person. It used to be customary for the Sovereign to be present in person to give his assent to Bills for making provision for the honours and dignity of the Crown, even when such Bills were passed during the course and not at the conclusion of a session, but this practice was not adhered to either in 1901 or 1910; compare May, Parliamentary Practice, 11th ed., p. 514.

(a) See p. 692, ante.

(b) The forms of commissions for declaring the Royal Assent are prescribed by Rules made by Order in Council, pursuant to the Crown Office Act, 1877 (40 & 41 Vict. c. 41), amended by the Crown Office Act, 1890 (53 & 54 Vict. c. 2). Such commissions are prepared in the Crown Office by the Clerk of the Crown in Chancery, and are then sent by the Lord Chancellor, through the Secretary of State for the Home Department, to the Sovereign to receive his approval and signature. As soon as the commission has been signed by the Sovereign, it is returned to the Lord Chancellor. The wafer Great Seal is then attached to it, and it is placed on the table of the House of Lords. The authority for the Bills which are ready to receive the Royal Assent is supplied to the Crown Office by the Clerk of the Parliaments, who sends to the Clerk of the Crown a list of the Bills which are to appear in the commission. He also sends another copy of this list to the Lord Chancellor, who sends it to the Sovereign with the commission. Bills which are to receive the Royal Assent are arranged in a definite order, namely:—(1) Bills which grant aids or supplies to the Crown, (2) public Bills, (3) hybrid Bills, (4) Bills to confirm provisional orders, (5) private Bills of a local or personal character, and (6) strictly private Bills.

(c) The Lord Chancellor informs the two Houses that "His Majesty, not thinking fit to be personally present, has been pleased to cause a commission to be issued under the Great Seal, and thereby given his Royal Assent to certain Acts which have been agreed upon by both Houses of Parliament the titles whereof are particularly mentioned, and by the said commission has commanded us to declare and notify his Royal Assent to the said Acts in the presence of you the Lords and Commons assembled for that purpose."

(d) In obedience to this direction, the Clerk of the Crown in Chancery, who, on this occasion, takes the seat at the table of the House which is usually occupied by the Clerk Assistant, and the Clerk of the Parliaments rise from their places, and, after bowing to the Throne, stand one on each side of the table for the remainder of the proceedings.

Parliaments signifies the Royal Assent in Norman French (e). In the case of an ordinary public or private Act, the assent of the Crown is signified in the words "Le Roi le veut"; in the case of a Finance Act or of an Act making a grant of public money or imposing a charge upon the public revenue, in the words "Le Roi remercie ses bons sujets, accepte leur benevolence, et ainsi le veut"; and, in the case of a strictly private Act, in the words "Soit fait comme il est désiré" (f).

As soon as all the Acts mentioned in the commission have received the Royal Assent, the ceremony is at an end, and the Speaker, after exchanging salutations with the Lords Commissioners, returns to the House of Commons.

SUB-SECT. 11.—Printing and Publication.

1345. After a public Act has received the Royal Assent (g) it is printed (h). Two vellum copies of the Act are signed by the Clerk of the Parliaments or his deputy, one of which is preserved in the Victoria Tower at Westminster, the other in the Public Record Office.

SECT. 3.
Public Bills.

Printing of public Acts of Parliament.

1346. The legislation of each year is divided into two main groups: the first includes the public general Acts, which are printed and issued separately (i); the second, the local and private Acts and the public Acts of a local character, which are printed together.

Division of statutes.

1347. The public general Acts are published in one volume as soon as possible after the end of the year in which they have been passed into law. In addition to the public general Acts, this volume contains (1) a table of the titles of the public general Acts arranged according to chapter; (2) a table of the titles of the local and private Acts (including the public Acts of a local character), arranged alphabetically; (3) a table showing the effect of the year's legislation on public general Acts; (4) a table of the local

Method of publication of public Act of Parliament.

(e) When the title of each Bill is read, the Clerk of the Parliaments and the Clerk of the Crown bow to the Throne. The former then turns round and faces the Speaker at the bar before signifying the Royal Assent.

(f) If the Royal Assent is refused to a Bill, the intention of the Crown is signified in the words "Le Roi s'avisera." The Royal Assent has not been withheld since 1707, when Queen Anne refused her assent to a Bill for settling the militia of that part of Great Britain called Scotland; see Journals of the House of Lords, 1707-8, Vol. XVIII., p. 506.

(g) The printed copy of an Act of Parliament bears the date on which it received the Royal Assent. In the absence of any direction to the contrary contained in the Act itself, the Act comes into operation from the date it receives the Royal Assent; see Commencement of Acts of Parliament Act, 1792 (33 Geo. 3, c. 13), and title STATUTES.

(h) A proof is sent to the Clerk of Public Bills in the House of Lords, who examines it with the House copy of the Act. As soon as the proof has been examined, the Clerk of Public Bills returns it with his certificate to the printers, and at the same time requests the Controller of His Majesty's Stationery Office to give instructions for the Act to be issued with as little delay as possible.

(i) An Act which has been treated as a public Bill during its passage through Parliament is not necessarily printed amongst the public general Acts. If the measure is of a local character, it is usually published amongst the public Acts of a local character.

SECT. 3. and private Acts arranged in classes; and (5) an index to the public Public Bills. general Acts (j).

The public Acts of a local character are also published together in a subsequent volume.

SECT. 4.—Public Bills of a Special Character.

SUB-SECT. 1.—In General.

Private Bills
involving special
procedure.

1348. In addition to the ordinary public Bill (k), Parliament is sometimes called upon to deal with certain other public Bills which must be briefly noticed, either because they are introduced for a special purpose or because the procedure with regard to them is of a peculiar character.

SUB-SECT. 2.—Act of Grace.

Act of Grace.

1349. An Act of Grace, which is an Act for a general pardon, originates with the Crown (l). The Bill is introduced into the House of Lords by a Minister in obedience to a command of the Sovereign, and, as soon as it has been read a first time, a motion is made that it be humbly accepted and passed. This motion is agreed to nemine contradicente, and the Bill is then sent to the House of Commons, where the same procedure is adopted. The Bill receives the Royal Assent in the usual form and manner (m).

SUB-SECT. 3.—Act of Indemnity.

Act of Indemnity.

1350. An Act of Indemnity is an Act passed to relieve any person from disabilities and penalties which he has incurred by having contravened the law.

A Bill for this purpose is presented to Parliament by a Minister in obedience to a command of the Sovereign, and is then proceeded with in the same way as an ordinary public Bill. It is passed through both Houses with as much dispatch as possible, all its stages generally being taken on the same day, and then receives the Royal Assent in the usual form and manner (n).

(j) Each category of Acts is numbered in a different way. Public general Acts are numbered in Arabic characters; private local Acts and public Acts of a local character in small Roman numerals; personal Acts, if printed, in italicised Arabic figures.

(k) As to the passage into law of ordinary public Bills, see pp. 723 et seq., ante.

(l) For an example of an Act of Grace, see "An Act for the King and Queens most Gracious, Generall and Free Pardon" (stat. (1690) 2 Will. & Mar. c. 10); and for the procedure with regard to it, see Journals of the House of Lords, 1690, Vol. XIV., pp. 502, 503; Journals of the House of Commons, 1690, Vol. X., p. 423.

(m) To an Act of Grace, to which the consent of the Crown must be given before it is considered by Parliament, the form of assent in former times used to be, "Les prelats, seigneurs et communes, en ce present parlement assemblez, au nom de tous vos autres sujets, remercient tres humblement vostre majesté, et prient à Dieu vous donner en santé bonne vie et longue." In more recent times, however, the Royal Assent to a Bill of this kind has been given in the same form as to an ordinary public Bill; see Journals of the House of Lords, 1717, Vol. XX., p. 546; 1747, Vol. XXVII., p. 137; compare May, Parliamentary Practice, 11th ed., p. 513.

(n) For the procedure on a Bill of Indemnity, see the proceedings on SUB-SECT. 4.—Act of Attainder.

SECT. 4.

Public Bills of a Special Character.Act of Attainder.

1351. An Act of Attainder, although it is a legislative enactment, is the highest form of parliamentary judicature, because an individual for whose punishment a Bill of this kind is introduced is tried by both Houses of Parliament, and can only be condemned with the assent of the Crown (o).

A Bill of Attainder has been usually, although not invariably, introduced in the House of Lords (p), and the procedure upon it in both Houses of Parliament is the same as upon an ordinary public Bill, except that, as the measure is one of a judicial character, the accused person is allowed to produce evidence and employ counsel in his defence (q).

SUB-SECT. 5.—Acts for the Reversal of Attainders, or for Restoration of Honours and Lands, or for Restitution of Blood.

1352. Bills which are introduced for the purpose of reversing attainders, or for the restoration of honours and lands, or for the restitution of blood, cannot be laid before Parliament unless they are signed by the Sovereign.

Acts for the reversal of attainders
etc.

Such Bills are introduced in the House of Lords (r) in the same way as an Act of Grace, but are then dealt with as ordinary public Bills. In the House of Commons, the consent of the Crown must be signified before a Bill of this kind is read the first time. After it has been read the second time, it is committed to a select committee which is specially nominated by the House (s).

SECT. 5.—*Private Bills and Bills to Confirm Provisional Orders.*SUB-SECT. 1.—General Classification of Private Bills.

1353. Private Bills, although they deal with almost every class of subject, are divided into two main groups, namely:—

Division of
private Bills.

(1) Local Bills, which are commonly referred to as private Bills, are Bills promoted by particular corporations, companies, and other

Lord Byron's Indemnity Bill, 1880 (Journals of the House of Lords, 1880, Vol. CXII., pp. 266, 274; Journals of the House of Commons, 1880, Vol. CXXXV., p. 306).

(o) May, Parliamentary Practice, 11th ed., pp. 669—671; see title COURTS, Vol. IX., p. 20.

(p) The lords spiritual, acting in their capacity as lords of Parliament, vote upon any stage of a Bill of Attainder. For their position in impeachments, see p. 621, ante.

(q) The procedure upon a Bill of Pains and Penalties, which is also an exercise of the judicial power of Parliament in a legislative form, is the same as that upon a Bill of Attainder; see 4 Hatsell, Precedents of Parliament, ed. 1818, pp. 331—346.

(r) The Lords have always claimed that Bills of this description should originate in their House; see the declaration of the House in the case of Sir C. Stanley's Bill in 1664—65 (Journals of the House of Lords, 1664—65, Vol. XI., p. 674), and the Report from the Select Committee of the House appointed to consider the subject in 1702, on the occasion of a Bill to reverse the attainders against Lord Bophin and Lord Carlingford being introduced in the Commons (see Journals of the House of Lords, 1702, Vol. XVII., pp. 118, 119). Compare House of Lords Manuscripts, Vol. V. (New Series), Introduction, p. xlii.; 3 Hatsell, Precedents of Parliament, ed. 1818, pp. 67, 69.

(s) May, Parliamentary Practice, 11th ed., p. 862.

SECT. 5.
Private Bills
and Bills
to Confirm
Provisional
Orders.

parties, who require parliamentary powers for the object or undertaking which they have in view, and therefore include Bills in relation to specified railways, harbours, piers, roads or tramways, supply of gas, water or electricity, improvements, sanitary or police matters in local districts. A general Bill dealing with any of these subjects would be a public Bill; but where it is desired to apply or extend a general law in the case of a locality, or to give exemption from it, this is done by a private Bill (t).

(2) Personal Bills, which affect only the interests or property of the individuals to whom they relate (u).

The practice and procedure with regard to private Bills is laid down in a series of standing orders which are almost identical in both Houses, although each House has a few orders peculiar to itself.

(t) See also p. 702, ante. In the Standing Orders of the two Houses, all such Bills are divided into two classes, according to the subjects to which they relate, namely: 1ST CLASS.—Burial ground (making, maintaining or altering); charters and corporations (enlarging or altering powers of); church or chapel (building, enlarging, repairing or maintaining); city or town (paving, lighting, watching, cleansing or improving); company (incorporating, regulating, or giving powers to); county rate; county or shire hall, courthouse; Crown, Church or corporation property, or property held in trust for public or charitable purposes; electricity supply; ferry, where no work is to be executed; fishery (making, maintaining or improving); gaol or house of correction; gas work; improvement charge, unless proposed in connection with a second class work to be authorised by the bill; land (inclosing, draining or improving); letters patent; local court (constituting); market or market-place (erecting, improving, repairing, maintaining or regulating); pilotage; police; poor (maintaining or employing); poor rate; powers to sue and be sued (conferring); stipendiary magistrate, or any public officer (payment of); trolley vehicle system; and continuing or amending an Act passed for any of the purposes included in this or the second class, where no further work than such as was authorised by a former Act is proposed to be made. 2ND CLASS.—Making, maintaining, varying, extending or enlarging any aqueduct, archway, bridge, canal, cut, dock, drainage (where it is not provided in the Bill that the cut shall not be more than eleven feet wide at the bottom), embankment for reclaiming land from the sea or any tidal river, ferry (where any work is to be executed), harbour, motor road, navigation, pier, port, public carriage road, railway, reservoir, sewer, street, subway, tramway, tramroad, tunnel, waterwork. (The lists differ in the two Houses, e.g., the House of Lords list commences the 1st Class with "Arbitration in respect of the affairs of any Company, Corporation, or person," and "City or town" reads "City, Borough, Town, or district." It is sometimes a matter of considerable difficulty to decide in which of these two classes a Bill should be placed, because the subjects dealt with in each class are merely specified by name, and it is not clearly stated that certain Bills are to be included in one class and all others in the other class. In any doubtful case, however, the Examiner (see p. 740, post) to whom the matter is referred decides in which class the Bill is to be placed. For forms of Bills and clauses in Bills, see Encyclopædia of Forms and Precedents, Vol. IX., pp. 240—248, 251—287; for forms of procedure under the Borough Funds Acts, 1872 (35 & 36 Vict. c. 91), and 1903 (3 Edw. 7, c. 14), see Encyclopædia of Forms and Precedents, Vol. IX., pp. 169—180; for forms relating specifically to electric lighting and power, see ibid., pp. 213, 242, 264; gasworks, ibid., p. 187; local government, ibid., pp. 200, 201, 240, 293, 298, 308, 322; railways, ibid., pp. 181, 185, 189, 191, 199, 208, 241, 249, 287; tramways, ibid., pp. 181, 184, 185, 189, 322; water and watercourses, ibid., pp. 186, 293, 298.

(u) Personal Bills (see p. 758, post) include all estate Bills, divorce Bills, naturalisation Bills, and name Bills; see Standing Orders of the House of Lords, 1911 (Private Business), No. 149.

SUB-SECT. 2.—Parliamentary Agents.

1354. The work connected with the promotion of private Bills, and also with the opposition to all legislation of this kind, is performed by parliamentary agents, who in each House are held personally responsible for the due observance of the rules and orders of the House which have been drawn up for their guidance and for the regulation and management of private business (w).

1355. In neither House may any person act as a parliamentary agent until he has subscribed a declaration before one of the clerks in the Private Bill Office, engaging to observe and obey the rules, regulations, orders, and practice of the House, and also to pay and discharge all fees and charges due and payable in respect of any petition or Bill upon which he may appear as agent. In addition to subscribing this declaration, he must enter into a recognisance or bond, if required, in the penal sum of £500, with two sureties of £250 each, to observe the said declaration (x).

SUB-SECT. 3.—Preliminary Procedure with regard to Private (Local) Bills.(i.) Petition.

1356. A petition must be presented to the House of Commons by the promoters of any private Bill for leave to introduce their Bill into Parliament (a). But, before such a petition is presented, intending applicants to Parliament must comply with various rules and formalities which are laid down in the standing orders of the two Houses as necessary preliminaries before the introduction of any such Bill (b).

(w) In either House, a parliamentary agent who wilfully acts in violation of the rules and practice of Parliament, or of any rules prescribed for his guidance, or is guilty of professional misconduct, may be suspended either absolutely or temporarily from acting as a parliamentary agent. No person who has been suspended or prohibited from practising as a parliamentary agent, or who has been struck off the roll of solicitors or disbarred by any of the Inns of Court, may be registered as a parliamentary agent without the express authority of the Lord Chairman of Committees in the House of Lords or of the Speaker in the House of Commons. As to barristers generally, see title BARRISTERS, Vol. II., pp. 357 et seq. As to solicitors, see title SOLICITORS.

(x) In each House, the name of every person who has qualified himself to act as a parliamentary agent is entered in a register kept for the purpose. It is only necessary for one member of a firm to subscribe the required declaration, but the names of the other members of the firm must be entered in the register. If a person, who is not a qualified solicitor or writer to the signet, wishes to act as a parliamentary agent, he must make application in writing and must produce a certificate of his respectability.

(a) Standing Orders of the House of Commons (Private Business), 1911, Nos. 32, 193. For forms, see Encyclopædia of Forms and Precedents, Vol. IX., pp. 199, 200. The petition, signed by some of the promoters, and with a printed copy of the proposed Bill annexed to it, must be deposited at the Private Bill Office in the House of Commons on or before the 17th December (Standing Orders of the House of Commons (Private Business), 1911, No. 32). No Bill for which a petition has not been presented to the House of Commons may be brought into the House of Lords, unless a petition is first presented to that House (Standing Orders of the House of Lords (Private Business), 1911, No. 86). The presentation of a petition before a private Bill may be presented to Parliament emphasises the distinction between it and a public Bill; see p. 702, ante.

(b) The examination of such petitions by the Examiners (see p. 740, post)

SECT. 5.

Private Bills
and Bills
to Confirm Provisional
Orders.

Work of parliamentary agents.

Qualifications of parliamentary agent.

Preliminaries to presentation of petition.

SECT. 5.

(ii.) Notice.

Private Bills
and Bills
to Confirm
Provisional
Orders.Notice in the Gazette etc.

1357. In all cases where it is proposed to bring in a private Bill, the promoters, either in the month of October or before the 27th November previous to their intended application to Parliament, must publish in the London, Edinburgh, or Dublin Gazette, as the case may be, a notice stating the objects of the proposed Bill.

Where a Bill relates to any particular city, borough, town, or urban or rural district, or is to authorise the construction of works or the taking or compulsory user of land in any county, or to extend the time fixed by a previous Act of Parliament for such purposes, notices must also be inserted, upon two separate occasions in two consecutive weeks, in a newspaper published in the town or locality to which the provisions of the proposed Bill refer (c).

Notice to owner, lessee, or occupier.

1358. In addition to the notice published in the Gazette and local newspapers, the promoters must send, before the 15th December, an application in writing to the owner, lessee, or occupier of any land which they propose to acquire compulsorily for the purposes of their Bill, inquiring whether he assents, dissents, or is neuter in respect of such application (d).

Consent of local authority to tramway Bills.

1359. Promoters of a Bill to authorise the laying down of a tramway must obtain the consent of the local authority of the district or districts through which it is proposed to construct the tramway, and, if in any district there is a road authority other than the local authority and it is proposed to break up the road, they must also obtain the consent of such road authority (e).

enables the two Houses to find out whether the promoters of the proposed Bill have obeyed the regulations contained in the standing orders with regard to it.

(c) Standing Orders of the House of Lords (Private Business), 1911, Nos. 3—9; Standing Orders of the House of Commons (Private Business), 1911, Nos. 3—9. As to bills involving the compulsory purchase of land, generally, see title COMPULSORY PURCHASE OF LAND AND COMPENSATION, Vol. VI., pp. 6 et seq. In the case of any tramway or underground railway or trolley vehicle system Bill, which necessitates the alteration or disturbance of any street or road, in addition to the published notices, a notice must be posted for fourteen consecutive days in any such street or road; see Standing Orders of the House of Lords (Private Business), 1911, No. 10; Standing Orders of the House of Commons (Private Business), 1911, No. 10.

(d) Standing Orders of the House of Lords (Private Business), 1911, Nos. 11, 12; Standing Orders of the House of Commons (Private Business), 1911, Nos. 11, 12. This application should be as nearly as possible in the form which is set forth in Appendix (A) to the Standing Orders of each House (ibid.). For forms of notice to owners etc., see Encyclopædia of Forms and Precedents, Vol. IX., pp. 181—189.

(e) Standing Orders of the House of Lords (Private Business), 1911, No. 22; Standing Orders of the House of Commons (Private Business), 1911, No. 22. The order further provides that where it is proposed to lay down a tramway in two or more districts, the consents of the local and road authorities having jurisdiction over two-thirds in length of the streets and roads required for the purpose shall be deemed sufficient. If the consent required to be given under this order is refused, the refusal constitutes an absolute bar to the construction of the proposed tramway, unless the standing order committees of both Houses decide to dispense with the standing order. For form of consent, see Encyclopædia of Forms and Precedents, Vol. IX., p. 189.

1360. The promoters of a Bill to authorise the laying down of a tramway must also send notices in writing before the 15th December (1) to all owners, lessees, or occupiers (f) of premises which front the new tramway line, in cases where it is intended that a less space than 9 feet 6 inches shall intervene between the outside of the foot-path on either side of the road and the nearest rail of the tramway, and (2) to the owners or lessees of any railway, tramway, or canal the interests of which would be affected or interfered with by the proposed new tramway (g).

SECT. 5.
Private Bills
and Bills
to Confirm Provisional
Orders.

Notices in case of a tramway
Bill.

1361. In the same way (1) the promoters of any Bill by which it is proposed to abstract water from any stream for the purpose of supplying any cut, canal, reservoir, aqueduct, navigation or water-work, must give notice in writing to the owner, lessee, or occupier of any mill, manufactory, or other work, who makes use of the water of the stream for a distance of twenty miles below the point at which it is intended to take the water for the purposes of the Bill (h); and (2) the promoters of any Bill for constructing gas-works or sewage works or a sewage farm, or for erecting a station for generating electrical energy or for other purposes calculated to affect injuriously the amenities of the neighbourhood, must serve a notice upon the owner, lessee, or occupier of any dwelling-house within 300 yards of the site to be used for the purposes of the proposed Bill (i).

Notices in case of waterworks,
gasworks,
sewage works and electric power Bills.

1362. The promoters of any Bill by which it is intended to relinquish works the construction of which has been already authorised by Parliament must give notice, before the 15th December, to any owner, lessee, or occupier of property who would be affected by the provisions of the proposed Bill (j).

Notice of abandonment
of works.

(f) The standing orders of the House of Lords do not insist upon a notice being sent to occupiers in this case or in the cases mentioned in the two following paragraphs; see the text, infra.

(g) Standing Orders of the House of Lords (Private Business), 1911, Nos. 13, 13a; Standing Orders of the House of Commons (Private Business), 1911, Nos. 13, 13a. (For a form, see Encyclopædia of Forms and Precedents, Vol. IX., p. 184.) Under the second of these standing orders, the promoters of a Bill to provide trolley vehicles are also required to give similar notice to the owner or reputed owner, or lessee or reputed lessee, of any railway, tramway, or canal which their undertaking may affect or interfere with. As to tramways, see title TRAMWAYS AND LIGHT RAILWAYS. As to railways and canals, see title RAILWAYS AND CANALS.

(h) Standing Orders of the House of Lords (Private Business), 1911, No. 14; Standing Orders of the House of Commons (Private Business), 1911, No. 14. As to water supply, see title WATER SUPPLY.

(i) Standing Orders of the House of Lords (Private Business), 1911, No. 15; Standing Orders of the House of Commons (Private Business), 1911, No. 15. As to the grant of statutory powers to construct gasworks, see title GAS, Vol. XV., p. 311. As to sewage works, see title SEWERS AND DRAINS. As to electric power Acts, see title ELECTRIC LIGHTING AND POWER, Vol. XII., pp. 627 et seq. For forms of notice, see Encyclopædia of Forms and Precedents, Vol. IX., pp. 186, 187, and compare, ibid., p. 213.

(j) Standing Orders of the House of Lords (Private Business), 1911, No. 16; Standing Orders of the House of Commons (Private Business), 1911, No. 16; see Encyclopædia of Forms and Precedents, Vol. IX., pp. 187, 398; for form of Bill, see ibid., p. 249. Notice in writing must be given before the 21st December to owners etc. of property when it is proposed to repeal or alter

SECT. 5.

Private Bills
and Bills
to Confirm
Provisional
Orders.Service of applications and notices.Preparation of plans, sections and book of reference.

1363. The promoters of a Bill are required to serve any application which they make and any notice which they send in conformity with a standing order of either House of Parliament, either by delivering it personally to the party entitled to receive it, or by leaving it at his usual place of abode if he is resident within the United Kingdom, or with his agent if he is abroad, or by sending it to him by post in a registered envelope and in conformity with such regulations as from time to time may be drawn up by the Postmaster-General (k).

(iii.) Plans and Sections.

1364. The promoters of a private Bill are required to prepare a plan and section of any works which they propose to construct, and, in the event of any land being required for the purposes of the Bill, they must also prepare a book of reference, containing a description of the property to which allusion is made on the plan, the county and the parish or township in which it is situated, and the names of the owners, lessees, and occupiers of the required land (l).

any statutory provisions which are already in existence for their protection, and to any railway company over whose line it is proposed to take compulsory running powers; see Standing Orders of the House of Lords (Private Business), 1911, Nos. 17, 18; Standing Orders of the House of Commons (Private Business), 1911, Nos. 17, 18; see also Encyclopædia of Forms and Precedents, Vol. IX., pp. 188, 189. When it is intended to introduce a Bill to alter or repeal any statutory provision relating to nuisance arising on any land, notice in writing must also be given, before the same date, to the owner and lessee of every dwelling-house situated within 300 yards of the land; see Standing Orders of the House of Lords (Private Business), 1911, No. 17*a*; Standing Orders of the House of Commons (Private Business), 1911, No. 17*a*.

(k) Standing Orders of the House of Lords (Private Business), 1911, No. 19; Standing Orders of the House of Commons (Private Business), 1911, No. 19. Evidence of the application having been made, or of the notice having been sent, is furnished either by the written acknowledgment of the party interested, or by the production of the post office receipt if the application was made or the notice sent in a registered letter. A notice served or application made on a Sunday, Christmas Day, Good Friday, or Easter Monday, or before 8 o'clock in the forenoon, or after 8 o'clock in the afternoon on any day, is deemed invalid, except in the case of the delivery of letters by post; see Standing Orders of the House of Lords (Private Business), 1911, Nos. 20 and 21; Standing Orders of the House of Commons (Private Business), 1911, Nos. 20 and 21.

(l) The method in which plans and sections should be prepared, and the particulars which should be contained in books of reference, are set out in the standing orders of the two Houses; see Standing Orders of the House of Lords (Private Business), 1911, Nos. 40—55; Standing Orders of the House of Commons (Private Business), 1911, Nos. 40—55; Encyclopædia of Forms and Precedents, Vol. IX., p. 218. A plan and also a duplicate thereof, with a book of reference, and a section and also a duplicate thereof, in respect of every local Bill of the second class (see note (é), p. 728, ante), and a plan and also a duplicate thereof, with a book of reference, in respect of a local Bill of the first class in which it is proposed to take or use any lands compulsorily, or of any Bill in which it is proposed to impose a charge upon any lands or houses, must be deposited by the promoters for public inspection, on or before the 30th November, at the office of the clerk of the peace for every county, riding, or division in England or Ireland, or in the office of the principal sheriff clerk of every county in Scotland, which is affected by the proposed Bill; see Standing Orders of the House of Lords (Private Business), 1911, No. 24; Standing Orders of the House of Commons (Private Business), 1911, No. 24.

1365. A copy of every such plan, section, and book of reference, together with a copy of the Gazette notice, in respect of any petition for any Bill to be introduced in the ensuing session of Parliament, must be deposited at the office of the Clerk of the Parliaments and at the Private Bill Office of the House of Commons on or before the 30th November (m).

SECT. 5.
Private Bills
and Bills
to Confirm
Provisional
Orders.

In addition to depositing copies of their plans etc. in the two Houses of Parliament, in certain cases the promoters of a Bill must deposit, on or before the 30th November, duplicate copies of such plans etc. at various Government offices, and also with the local authorities of the cities, boroughs, or districts to which the provisions of their proposed Bill refer (n).

Deposit of plans etc.

(iv.) Deposit of Bill and Petition.

1366. A printed copy of every private Bill which it is proposed to introduce into Parliament in the following session must be deposited in the office of the Clerk of the Parliaments, and in the

Deposit of printed copies of Bill and
of petition.

(m) Standing Orders of the House of Lords (Private Business), 1911, Nos. 25, 31; Standing Orders of the House of Commons (Private Business), 1911, Nos. 25, 31. In addition to a plan, section, and book of reference, the promoters of a railway Bill must also deposit a copy of the ordnance map with their line of railway delineated thereon. The promoters of a tramway or trolley vehicle system are required to deposit an ordnance map of the district through which they propose to run their tramway or trolley vehicles on a scale of not less than 6 inches to the mile; see Standing Orders of the House of Lords (Private Business), Nos. 25, 25*a*; Standing Orders of the House of Commons (Private Business), Nos. 25, 25*a*. In cases of railway, tramway, and trolley vehicle system Bills, and Bills for the supply of electrical energy, and Bills which would affect tidal lands, the promoters must supply the Board of Trade with marked copies of the ordnance map on or before the 30th November. In cases where the provisions of a Bill affect the banks, foreshore or bed of a river, a copy of so much of the plans and sections which refer to the river, and also a map, must be supplied by the promoters to the conservators of the river, if there are any, and to the Board of Agriculture and Fisheries if the river is in England, to the Secretary for Scotland if the river is in Scotland, and to the Chief Secretary to the Lord-Lieutenant if the river is in Ireland; see Standing Orders of the House of Lords (Private Business), 1911, No. 26*b*; Standing Orders of the House of Commons (Private Business), 1911, No. 26*b*. In the case of any Bill by which it is intended to take, collect or impound water for the purpose of water supply, the promoters must deposit at the office of the Clerk of the Parliaments and at the Local Government Board a marked copy of the ordnance map; see Standing Orders of the House of Lords (Private Business), 1911, No. 25*c*.

(n) Plans etc. with regard to any railway, tramway or canal Bill must be deposited at the Board of Trade; with regard to any Bill which seeks power to take any churchyard, burial ground, or cemetery, at the Home Office; and with regard to any Bill by which it is proposed to take any common land, at the Board of Agriculture and Fisheries; see Standing Orders of the House of Lords (Private Business), 1911, Nos. 27, 30; Standing Orders of the House of Commons (Private Business), 1911, Nos. 27, 30. Where a Bill refers to works which will be situated in London, the plans etc. must be deposited at the office of the London County Council, and, in every case, where it is proposed in any Bill to make, maintain, vary, extend or enlarge any work, or take any land or houses compulsorily, or to impose any improvement charge, the plans etc. must be deposited with the local authority of the city, borough, or district to which the Bill refers; see Standing Orders of the House of Lords (Private Business), 1911, Nos. 28, 29; Standing Orders of the House of Commons (Private Business), 1911, Nos. 28, 29.

SECT. 5.
Private Bills
and Bills
to Confirm Provisional
Orders.

Deposit
at Government offices and with local authorities.

Private Bill Office of the House of Commons; on or before the 17th December in any year (o), and every petition for a private Bill, with a signed declaration by the agents for the proposed Bill, must also be deposited in the Private Bill Office of the House of Commons on or before the same date (p).

1367. A printed copy of every Bill must also be deposited at His Majesty's Treasury and the General Post Office; a printed copy of every Bill relating to England at the Home Office and also at the Local Government Board; and a printed copy of every Bill relating to Scotland or to Ireland at the office of the Secretary for Scotland or at the Irish Office, as the case may be.

A printed copy of any Bill, the provisions of which relate to Crown property or to matters over which any Government department exercises a particular jurisdiction or control, must be deposited at that department (q).

A printed copy of any Bill belonging to the second class of local Bills (r), when it relates to London, must be deposited at the office of the London County Council, and a printed copy of any Bill belonging to the first class of such Bills (r) by which it is proposed to break up, or to interfere with, any road must be deposited with the road authority of the place or district in question (s).

(v.) Deposit of Estimates.

Deposit of estimates by promoters.

1368. The promoters of any Bill belonging to the second class of local Bills (t) must make and sign an estimate of the expense of the undertaking proposed in their Bill, and such estimate must be deposited in the office of the Clerk of the Parliaments and in the Private Bill Office of the House of Commons on or before the 31st December (u).

(o) Standing Orders of the House of Lords (Private Business), 1911, No. 32; Standing Orders of the House of Commons (Private Business), 1911, No. 32.

(p) The petition must be headed by a short title descriptive of the objects proposed in the Bill, and the declaration of the agents must state to which of the two classes of local Bills the measure belongs, and also the powers for which the promoters are seeking the sanction of Parliament. The petition and declaration are open to the inspection of all parties. For form of declaration, see Encyclopædia of Forms and Precedents, Vol. IX., pp. 197, 198.

(q) Standing Orders of the House of Lords (Private Business), 1911, No. 33; Standing Orders of the House of Commons (Private Business), 1911, No. 33. The order of the House of Lords states that the copy of the Bill must be deposited on or before the 21st December; that of the House of Commons states that the deposit must be made on or before the 18th December. In other respects the orders are practically identical, except that by the order of the House of Commons a copy of a Bill affecting charities or charitable trusts must be deposited at the office of the Charity Commission and at the office of the Board of Education. The order of the House of Lords does not contain this direction.

(r) See note (t), p. 728, ante.

(s) Standing Orders of the House of Lords (Private Business), 1911, Nos. 34, 34a; Standing Orders of the House of Commons (Private Business), 1911, Nos. 34, 34a.

(t) See note (t), p. 728, ante.

(u) Standing Orders of the House of Lords (Private Business), 1911, Nos. 35,

In the case of a Bill by means of which any local authority in England or Wales is seeking to obtain powers to construct works of a permanent character, the estimate of the expense of the proposed undertaking must also be deposited at the Board of Trade or the Local Government Board, as the case may be (v).

SECT. 5.
Private Bills
and Bills
to Confirm Provisional
Orders.

(vi.) Deposit of Money.

1369. The promoters of all Bills (other than the promoters of railway and tramway Bills who have complied with the conditions set out in the next paragraph), are required, before the 15th January, to make a deposit of not less than 4 per cent. upon the amount of the estimate of expense with the Paymaster-General for and on behalf of the Supreme Court of Judicature in England, if the work is to be done in England or Wales, or for and on behalf of the Court of Exchequer in Scotland, if the work is to be done in Scotland; or with the Accountant-General of the Supreme Court of Judicature in Ireland, if the work is to be done in Ireland.

Deposit of money by promoters in case of ordinary private
Bill.

1370. In the case of a railway or tramway Bill authorising the construction of works by a company which is not incorporated by Act of Parliament, or which does not possess a railway or tramway already opened for public traffic, or which has not during the preceding year paid dividends on its ordinary share capital, or which proposes under the Bill to raise a capital greater than its existing authorised capital, the promoters must deposit a sum of not less than 5 per cent. upon the amount of the estimate of expense of the undertaking (v).

Deposit of money by promoters in case of railway or tramway Bill.

36, 56; Standing Orders of the House of Commons (Private Business), 1911, Nos. 35, 36, 56.

(v) Standing Orders of the House of Lords (Private Business), 1911, No. 36*a*; Standing Orders of the House of Commons (Private Business), 1911, No. 36*a*. Together with the said estimates, a statement must be deposited showing the following particulars with respect to the district of the local authority, that is to say: (a) area of the district; (b) population according to the last census; (c) rateable and assessable value according to the last valuation list; (d) rates made in the district during the last preceding financial year; (e) the sum of the balances of outstanding loans contracted by the local authority; and (f) the amount of the outstanding loans to which the limitation of the Public Health Act, 1875 (38 & 39 Vict. c. 55), s. 234, applies. The form in which estimates should be drawn up is set out in the standing orders; see Encyclopædia of Forms and Precedents, Vol. IX., pp. 190, 191.

(w) Standing Orders of the House of Lords (Private Business), 1911, No. 57; Standing Orders of the House of Commons (Private Business), 1911, No. 57. The payment, investment, and repayment of all deposits made in pursuance of the standing orders is regulated by statute (Parliamentary Deposits Act, 1846 (9 & 10 Vict. c. 20); Parliamentary Deposits and Bonds Act, 1892 (55 & 56 Vict. c. 27)). In cases (1) where the proposed work is to be made wholly or partly out of money to be raised upon the credit of present surplus revenue belonging to any society or company, or under the control of directors, trustees, or commissioners of any public work, such parties, if they are promoting the Bill and comply with certain regulations, are entitled to make a declaration instead of making a deposit of money, and (2) where the promoters of a Bill do not propose to obtain any private or personal pecuniary profit or advantage by the proposed measure, and where the work is to be made out of money to be raised upon the security of the rates, duties, or revenue under their control, they are allowed to deposit a declaration and estimate of the amount of rates required instead of depositing money; see Standing Orders of the House of Lords (Private Business), 1911, Nos. 58, 59;

SECT. 5.
Private Bills
and Bills
to Confirm Provisional
Orders.

Objects sought in requiring deposits of money by promoters of Bills.

1371. The monetary deposit required to be made by the promoters of a Bill constitutes a fund out of which a person injuriously

Standing Orders of the House of Commons (Private Business), 1911, Nos. 58, 59. For forms, see Encyclopædia of Forms and Precedents, Vol. IX., pp. 192—194. The deposit is repayable at the end of the session, or when the petition or Bill is rejected or withdrawn (Parliamentary Deposits Act, 1846 (9 & 10 Vict. c. 20), s. 5). In the latter case, the certificate of the Chairman of Committees of the House of Lords or the Speaker of the House of Commons is required (ibid., s. 5). The certificate of the Deputy Speaker has been accepted (Ex parte Stockbridge Railway Bill (1866), L. R. 2 Eq. 364). The provisions of the Parliamentary Deposits Act, 1846 (9 & 10 Vict. c. 20), as to the repayment of deposits are superseded in the case of any railway, tramway or subway Bills by which the construction of a new line is authorised, or the time allowed for the construction of an authorised line is extended, by the insertion in every such Bill of a clause providing that, if the railway etc. is not opened for public traffic within the period of time allowed by the Bill, the deposit shall not be repaid, but shall be available for compensation to landowners or other persons whose property has been interfered with, for the recoupment of road authorities for certain defined purposes, and for meeting the claims of creditors of the company (see Standing Orders of the House of Lords (Private Business), 1911, No. 115; Standing Orders of the House of Commons (Private Business), 1911, No. 158a; Parliamentary Deposits and Bonds Act, 1892 (55 & 56 Vict. c. 27), s. 1 (1), (2), (3)). Under the Parliamentary Costs Act, 1865 (28 & 29 Vict. c. 27), s. 8, the deposit is available, in the case of a Bill the preamble of which has not been proved, for meeting the costs of the Bill and any sums payable under that Act. The deposit may be made with borrowed funds (Scott v. Oakeley (1864), 33 L. J. (CH.) 612, C. A.), but an agreement for its repayment in full, if the Bill failed to pass, was not upheld (Clements v. Bowes (1858), 1 Eq. Rep. 553). As to the funds in which the deposit may be invested, see Re Manchester, Huddersfield and Great Grimsby Rail. Co. (1846), 4 Ry. & Can. Cas. 204; Ex parte Newport, Abergavenny and Hereford Rail. Co. (1847), 11 Jur. 160; Ex parte South Eastern Rail. Co. (1845), 9 Jur. 650; Re Southwold Rail. Co.'s Bill, Ex parte Depositors (1876), 1 Ch. D. 697; Ex parte Great Northern Railway (1870), L. R. 9 Eq. 274. As to investment by a private broker, see Ex parte Bolton Junction Rail. Co. (1876), 24 W. R. 451; Ex parte West Riding of Yorkshire Rail. Co. (1876), 34 L. T. 168. As to the meaning of creditors, see Ex parte Bradford and District Tramways Co., [1893] 3 Ch. 463; Re Manchester, Middleton and District Tramways Co., [1893] 2 Ch. 638. The jurisdiction of the court with respect to the release of the deposit does not arise until the expiration of the period of time allowed for completion of the work (Ex parte Chambers, [1893] 1 Ch. 47). As to the jurisdiction to restrain an attempt to charge the deposit, see Beecham v. Lastingham and Rosedale Light Rail. Co., [1907] W. N. 101. As to the persons to whom the deposit may be paid, see Ex parte Boston and Sheffield Rail. Co. (1846), 4 Ry. & Can. Cas. 230; Goodman v. De Beauvoir (1846), 10 Jur. 938; Re London and Portsmouth Direct Rail. Co., Ex parte Wilkinson (1845), 4 Ry. & Can. Cas. 78; Bryson v. Warwick and Birmingham Canal Co. (1853), 4 De G. M. & G. 711, C. A.; Re Birmingham and Lichfield Junction Rail. Co. (1885), 1 T. L. R. 241; Re Manchester, Middleton and District Tramways Co., supra; Ex parte Bradford and District Tramways Co., supra; Re Peckham, East Dulwich and Crystal Palace Tramways Bill, [1910] 2 Ch. 1, C. A.; Re Enniskillen and Bundoran Rail. Co. (1890), 25 L. R. Ir. 472; Re Manchester and Milford Rail. Co. (1881), 45 L. T. 129; Re Bradford Tramways Co. (1876), 4 Ch. D. 18, C. A.; Re Uxbridge and Rickmansworth Rail. Co. (1890), 43 Ch. D. 536, C. A.; Guest v. Poole and Bournemouth Rail. Co. (1870), L. R. 5 C. P. 553; Re Ennis and West Clare Rail. Co. (1885), 15 L. R. Ir. 180; Re Brompton and Longtown Rail. Co. (1870), L. R. 10 Eq. 613. As to the release of stock or money included in deposit when further progress of a Bill is suspended by order of Parliament till the following session, see Re Central London Railway Bill (1901), [1901] W. N. 177; and when further progress is impossible according to the rules of either House, see Re Wilnes Rail. Co. (1872), L. R. 15 Eq. 108. An application for the repayment of deposit is Long Vacation business (Re Wigan Junction Railway Act, 1875 (1875), 10 Ch. App. 541).

affected by the Bill may receive compensation, and is intended also to act as a check on the speculative promotion of Bills, by affording some security that the promoters genuinely intend to carry out the objects for which they are demanding parliamentary powers (a).

SECT. 5.
Private Bills
and Bills
to Confirm Provisional
Orders.

(vii.) Bills Promoted for the Purpose of Raising Money by the London County Council.

1372. In both Houses there are special standing orders with regard to Bills promoted by the London County Council for the purpose of raising money either by the creation of stock or upon loan (b).

A Bill of this kind must be introduced as a public Bill, unless the county council only seeks parliamentary powers to borrow money: (1) for the special purposes recited in the preamble of its Bill for the execution or extension of the powers conferred by the Bill, or already sanctioned by Parliament (c); (2) for a period ending on the 30th September, after the expiration of the then financial year of the Council; (3) to be repaid within a period fixed by the Bill or by the Local Government Board (d).

Special
procedure in case of a Bill promoted for raising money
by the London
County Council.

The petition for a Bill to raise money which is promoted by the London County Council and complies with the requirements of the standing orders, together with the declaration of the agents for the Bill and a printed copy of the Bill, must be deposited in the Private Bill Office of the House of Commons on or before the 14th April, or the first day on which the House meets after the recess at Easter (e).

(a) See 2 Clifford, Private Bill Legislation, pp. 777 et seq.; see also Re Birmingham and Lichfield Junction Rail. Co. (1885), 28 Ch. D. 652, per CHITTY, J., at p. 660. For a case where an owner was held not to be entitled to claim compensation out of the deposit on the ground that, by reason of abandonment of the works, his property was not rendered less valuable, see Re Southport and Lytham Tramroads Act, 1900, Ex parte Hesketh, [1911] 1 Ch. 120, C. A., applying Re Ruthin and Cerrig-y-Druiddion Railway Act (1886), 32 Ch. D. 438, C. A.

(b) Standing Orders of the House of Lords (Private Business), 1911, Nos. 69—69*d*; Standing Orders of the House of Commons (Private Business), 1911, Nos. 194—194*d*. See, further, title METROPOLIS, Vol. XX., pp. 445, 446.

(c) A Bill may authorise the borrowing of money, for which an estimate is not recited in the preamble, if the maximum sum to be borrowed is fixed, or if a provision is inserted requiring that the sanction of the Local Government Board shall be obtained for every borrowing.

(d) Standing Orders of the House of Lords (Private Business), 1911, No. 69 (1), (2), (3); Standing Orders of the House of Commons (Private Business), 1911, No. 194 (1), (2), (3). In the case of a Bill to confer or to extend any power involving the expenditure of money after the financial period, the standing orders do not require that it shall be introduced as a public Bill if the estimates recited in the preamble show the total amount of money which is required, as well as the particular amount to be borrowed and expended during the financial period; see Standing Orders of the House of Lords (Private Business), 1911, No. 69 (4); Standing Orders of the House of Commons, (Private Business), 1911, No. 194 (4).

(e) Standing Orders of the House of Lords (Private Business), 1911, No. 69*b*; Standing Orders of the House of Commons (Private Business), 1911, No. 194*b*. No Bill promoted by the London County Council may authorise any alteration of the Consolidated Loans Fund, or of borrowing by the council, unless a report from the Treasury dealing with the subject is presented to the House; see Standing Orders of the House of Lords (Private Business), 1911, No. 69*c*;

SECT. 5.
Private Bills
and Bills
to Confirm Provisional
Orders.

Deposit of information regarding working-class houses proposed to be acquired compulsorily.

Proof of consents in case of Bills promoted by companies.

Copies of the Bill must also be deposited in the office of the Clerk of the Parliaments, at His Majesty's Treasury, and at the Local Government Board (f).

(viii.) Bills involving Acquisition of Working-Class Houses.

1373. If the promoters of any private Bill propose to acquire land compulsorily which involves the taking of houses occupied either wholly or partially by thirty or more persons of the working class, they must deposit, before the 21st December, in the office of the Clerk of the Parliaments, in the Private Bill Office of the House of Commons, and also with the Local Government Board, or with the Secretary for Scotland, or with the Local Government Board for Ireland, as the case may be, full information with regard to such houses and a copy of so much of their deposited plans as refer to them (g).

(ix.) Bills Promoted by Companies etc.

1374. In addition to the standing orders already referred to, there are further standing orders proof of compliance with which must be given by the promoters in the case of any private Bill promoted: (1) by a company already constituted by Act of Parliament; (2) by any company, society, association, or co-partnership formed or registered under the Companies Act, 1862 (h), or the Companies (Consolidation) Act, 1908 (i); and (3) by any company, society, association, or co-partnership constituted otherwise than by Act of Parliament (k).

Standing Orders of the House of Commons (Private Business), 1911, Nos. 194c, 194d.

(f) Standing Orders of the House of Lords (Private Business), 1911, No. 69b (2), (3); Standing Orders of the House of Commons (Private Business), 1911, No. 194b (2), (3). The notice for the Bill must be published either in February or March, and the Council is permitted to prepare such plans and specifications as it thinks fit.

(g) Standing Orders of the House of Lords (Private Business), 1911, No. 38; Standing Orders of the House of Commons (Private Business), 1911, No. 38. The houses to which these orders refer must be situated in a local area, which, as respects London, is defined as "the Administrative County of London"; see title METROPOLIS, Vol. XX., pp. 392, 393; as respects England and Wales (outside London), as "any borough or other urban district," and elsewhere than in a borough or other urban district, as "any parish"; as respects Scotland, as "any district within the meaning of the Public Health (Scotland) Act, 1897"; and as respects Ireland, as "any urban district" (ibid.); see, further, title PUBLIC HEALTH and LOCAL ADMINISTRATION. As to provisional order confirmation Bills, see p. 740, post.

(h) 25 & 26 Vict. c. 89; see title COMPANIES, Vol. V., pp. 1 et seq.

(i) 8 Edw. 7, c. 69; see title COMPANIES, Vol. V., pp. 1 et seq.

(k) Standing Orders of the House of Lords (Private Business), 1911, Nos. 62—67; Standing Orders of the House of Commons (Private Business), 1911, Nos. 62—67. In the House of Lords, proof of compliance with these orders must be given before the second reading of the Bill, whether it originates in the House of Lords or the House of Commons. In the House of Commons, in the case of a Bill originating in that House, proof of compliance with the orders must be given within five weeks of the date on which the petition for the Bill was indorsed by the Examiner (see pp. 740, 741, post); in the case of a Bill brought from the Lords, no period is laid down within which the Examiner is

In the first of these cases, Parliament requires that the promoters of the Bill should submit the measure, as introduced or proposed to be introduced into Parliament, to the proprietors of the company at a meeting held specially for the purpose, and that the Bill should be approved by the proprietors present in person or by proxy at such meeting, and holding at least three-fourths of the paid-up capital of the company (l).

In the second case, the promoters of the Bill are required by Parliament to obtain a special resolution of the company approving of the measure as introduced or proposed to be introduced into Parliament (m).

In the third case, Parliament requires that the Bill, as introduced or proposed to be introduced into Parliament, should be consented to by a majority of three-fourths in number, and (where applicable) in value, of the members of the company, society, association, or co-partnership, present in person or by proxy, at a meeting specially convened for the purpose (n).

1375. In the case of a Bill introduced by a company incorporated by Act of Parliament, which contains a provision authorising the company or any class of holders of share or loan capital in the company to guarantee or to raise any money in aid of the undertaking of another company, the promoters are required by Parliament to furnish proof that the company or the class of holders of share or loan capital so authorised has consented to such subscription (o).

SECT. 5.
Private Bills
and Bills
to confirm Provisional
Orders.

Proofs of consents to subscriptions in aid of other companies.

required to report as to the compliance or non-compliance with the orders. For the forms required under the standing orders, see Encyclopædia of Forms and Precedents, Vol. IX., pp. 287—292; and for a form of declaration as to share capital, see ibid., p. 190.

(l) Such meeting must be advertised in some newspaper published in London, Edinburgh, or Dublin, as the case may be, and also in some newspaper published in the county in which the principal office of the company is situated, and a notice, enclosing a form of proxy, must be sent to each proprietor on the register of the company. Any proprietor present at the meeting may demand a poll, and, in the event of a poll being taken, a statement giving the number of votes recorded must be deposited in the office of the Clerk of the Parliaments and in the Private Bill Office of the House of Commons; see Standing Orders of the House of Lords (Private Business), 1911, No. 62; Standing Orders of the House of Commons (Private Business), 1911, No. 62. As to forms, see note (k), supra.

(m) Standing Orders of the House of Lords (Private Business), 1911, No. 63; Standing Orders of the House of Commons (Private Business), 1911, No. 63.

(n) A poll may be demanded by any member present at such meeting. A copy of the resolution of the meeting approving the Bill, and, if a poll is taken, a statement of the number of votes recorded, must be deposited in the office of the Clerk of the Parliaments and in the Private Bill Office of the House of Commons; see Standing Orders of the House of Lords (Private Business), 1911, No. 63; Standing Orders of the House of Commons (Private Business), 1911, No. 63. As to forms, see note (k), supra.

(o) Standing Orders of the House of Lords (Private Business), 1911, No. 66; Standing Orders of the House of Commons (Private Business), 1911, No. 66. Such proof must be given to the Examiner before the second reading of the Bill in the House of Lords; in the House of Commons, within five weeks of the date on which the petition for the Bill was indorsed by the Examiner (see p. 741, post). The consent of the company or of the holders of share or loan capital, as the case may be, is obtained in the same way as in the case of a Bill introduced by a company already constituted by Parliament; see the text, supra.

SECT. 5.
Private Bills
and Bills
to Confirm Provisional
Orders.

Procedure preliminary to introduction of provisional order confirmation
Bills.

SUB-SECT. 4.—Proceedings Preliminary to Introduction of Provisional Order Confirmation Bills.

1376. The procedure preliminary to the introduction of a provisional order confirmation Bill is subject to rules and regulations drawn up and enforced by the Government department which is responsible for the Bill, and consequently the majority of the standing orders of the two Houses which are applicable in the case of a private Bill before it may be submitted to Parliament do not apply in the case of a provisional order confirmation Bill (p). Where it is proposed, however, by any order to take compulsorily any land upon which there are houses occupied wholly or partially by thirty or more persons of the working class, a statement must be deposited in the office of the Clerk of the Parliaments and in the Private Bill Office of the House of Commons in the same way as in the case of a private Bill (q), and where a plan, section, or book of reference is prepared for the purposes of any order, a duplicate of such plan, section, or book of reference must be deposited, on or before the 30th November, in the office of the Clerk of the Parliaments and in the Private Bill Office of the House of Commons (r).

SUB-SECT. 5.—Examiners.

The Examiners.

1377. In each House of Parliament there is an official whose duty it is to examine all petitions for private Bills, and to certify whether the standing orders of the House have been complied with by the promoters. In the House of Lords, this official is called the Examiner of Standing Orders, and is appointed by the House, on the nomination of the Chairman of Committees (s); in the House of Commons, he is called the Examiner of Petitions for Private Bills, and is appointed by the Speaker (t). The two Examiners

(p) In some cases, the Act of Parliament under the powers conferred by which a department grants an order, in other cases, the instructions issued by the department, provide (1) that an advertisement shall be published stating the objects for which it is intended to obtain an order, and (2) that a preliminary local inquiry, at which opponents of the scheme may be heard, shall be held by an official appointed to inquire into the merits of the proposed undertaking. By these means the interests of individuals are safeguarded in the same way as they are safeguarded in the case of a private Bill; see May, Parliamentary Practice, 11th ed., pp. 863, 864; compare Report from the Select Committee on Private Business, 1902, House of Commons Paper, 378, Appendix, No. 10, pp. 183—188. For forms relating to the procedure in connection with provisional order confirmation bills, see Encyclopædia of Forms and Precedents, Vol. IX., pp. 325—334 (electric lighting); 337—345 (gas and water); 346—356 (harbours); 358—390 (light railways); 397 (tramways). For forms of provisional orders, see ibid., pp. 334, 363, 386, 389.

(g) Standing Orders of the House of Lords (Private Business), No. 38; Standing Orders of the House of Commons (Private Business), No. 38; see pp. 733, 734, ante.

(r) Standing Orders of the House of Lords (Private Business), 1911, Nos. 38, 39; Standing Orders of the House of Commons (Private Business), 1911, Nos. 38, 39.

(s) Standing Orders of the House of Lords (Private Business), 1911, No. 2; Journals of the House of Lords, 1890, Vol. CXXII., p. 493.

(t) Standing Orders of the House of Commons (Private Business), 1911, No. 2. For the duties of the Examiners with regard to provisional order confirmation and hybrid Bills, see note (d), p. 703, ante, and p. 741, post.

are, however, officers of both Houses, and consequently may act for each House.

1378. On the 18th January every year, the two Examiners begin the examination of all petitions for private Bills which have been duly deposited in the Private Bill Office of the House of Commons (u). The petitioners and their agents appear before one or other of the Examiners in order to prove that the requirements of the standing orders of the two Houses have been complied with; and any parties, upon the presentation of a memorial complaining that any standing order has not been complied with by the promoters, are entitled to appear before the Examiner either personally or by their agents, in support of their contention, provided that the matter of which they complain is specifically stated in the memorial (v).

1379. It is the duty of one or other of the Examiners to certify by indorsement upon each petition whether or not the standing orders have been complied with (w). In the event of the standing orders not having been complied with, the Examiner must draw up a report stating the particulars in which the promoters of the Bill have failed to carry out the rules prescribed by Parliament, and he must also state any special circumstances in the case (x).

1380. If the necessary standing orders precedent and incidental to a petition for a Bill have been complied with, the Bill may be presented to the House of Parliament in which it has been decided that it is to originate. If, however, the Examiner reports that the promoters have not complied with the standing orders, the petition for the Bill, together with the Examiner's report with regard to it, is referred in the House of Lords to the Standing Orders Committee, in the House of Commons to the Select Committee on Standing Orders (y).

SECT. 5.

Private Bills
and Bills
to Confirm Provisional
Orders.

Examination of petitions.

Certificate and report of Examiner.

Effect of compliance or non-compliance with standing
orders.

(u) Standing Orders of the House of Lords (Private Business), 1911, No. 70; Standing Orders of the House of Commons (Private Business), 1911, No. 69. The Examiner must give at least seven clear days' notice of the day upon which he proposes to examine each petition; see Standing Orders of the House of Commons (Private Business) 1911, No. 70.

(v) Standing Orders of the House of Commons (Private Business), 1911, No. 74. The memorial must be signed by the person or persons who propose to appear before the Examiner, and must be deposited in the Private Bill Office of the House of Commons. For forms, see Encyclopædia of Forms and Precedents, Vol. IX., pp. 196, 219, 292.

(w) Standing Orders of the House of Commons (Private Business), 1911, No. 71.

(x) Standing Orders of the House of Lords (Private Business), 1911, No. 76; Standing Orders of the House of Commons (Private Business), 1911, No. 71. The Examiners certify every case of compliance or non-compliance to the House of Lords, whether the Bill originates in that House or in the House of Commons. Every such certificate is laid upon the table of the House by the Clerk of the Parliaments, and the Lord Chancellor acquaints the House of the fact; see Standing Orders of the House of Lords (Private Business), 1911, No. 79. The Examiners report to the House of Commons every case of non-compliance with the standing orders, but they report cases of compliance only in respect of Bills which originate in the House of Lords, as the indorsement on the petition (see the text, supra) is considered equivalent to a report when the Bill originates in the House of Commons. Reports from the Examiners are laid upon the table of the House by the Speaker.

(y) The Examiner's certificate and report as to non-compliance with standing

SECT. 5.
Private Bills
and Bills
to Confirm Provisional
Orders.

Examination of petition for additional provisions in a Bill, and of certain Bills before second reading.

In certain cases, if the Examiner feels any doubt as to the due construction of any standing order, he is required to make a special report of the facts without deciding whether or not the standing orders in question have been complied with (a).

1381. In each House, in addition to the original petition for a private Bill, every petition for the insertion of an additional provision in a Bill which has already been introduced is referred to the Examiner (b), and every private Bill, promoted by a company, to which the standing orders require the consent of the proprietors to be signified, is referred to the Examiner after it has been read a first time (c).

In each House also any railway Bill by which the payment of any moneys is directly or contingently charged upon the poor rate or any other local rate in Ireland (d), and any Bill, originating in the other House, for the purpose of establishing a company for carrying on any work or undertaking, in which any person is specified as manager, director, or proprietor (e), and any public Bill, to which it appears that any standing orders applicable to a private Bill might apply, is referred to the Examiner before it is read a second time (f).

orders is referred to the committee in each House immediately. In this way the promoters of a Bill are spared the risk of having their Bill thrown out in the second House on the ground of non-compliance with standing orders after they have gone to the expense of carrying it through the first House, in which their non-compliance with standing orders may have been condoned.

(a) Standing Orders of the House of Lords (Private Business), 1911, No. 78; Standing Orders of the House of Commons (Private Business), 1911, No. 78. Such special reports, which are very rare, are referred to the Standing Orders Committee in the House of Lords and to the Select Committee on Standing Orders in the House of Commons. As to these committees, see p. 743, post.

(b) Standing Orders of the House of Lords (Private Business), 1911, No. 71; Standing Orders of the House of Commons (Private Business), 1911, No. 72.

(c) See pp. 738, 739, ante.

(d) Standing Orders of the House of Lords (Private Business), 1911, No. 67; Standing Orders of the House of Commons (Private Business), 1911, No. 67. In the House of Lords, the order states that the Bill must be referred to the Examiner before its second reading; in the House of Commons, that it must be referred to him again within five weeks of the date on which the petition for the Bill was indorsed by him. In a Bill of this kind, the promoters are required by Parliament to submit their proposed Bill to the county council or local authority empowered to make such rate, and to give notice of their intention of submitting it once in each of two consecutive weeks in a newspaper published in Dublin. The Bill must be approved by a majority of the members present at the meeting of the council which considers it, and the resolution of the council approving the Bill must be deposited in the office of the Clerk of the Parliaments and in the Private Bill Office of the House of Commons.

(e) Standing Orders of the House of Lords (Private Business), 1911, No. 68; Standing Orders of the House of Commons (Private Business), 1911, No. 68. Proof must be given to the Examiner that the person in question subscribed his name to the petition for the Bill, or to a printed copy of the Bill as brought into the House.

(f) See pp. 703, 740, ante. In a case of this kind, the Examiner, to whom the Bill is referred, assumes that any orders applicable to a private Bill may apply to the said Bill, and inquires which orders are applicable and whether they have been complied with.

Every private Bill, and also every provisional order confirmation Bill, which has been passed by one House is referred to the Examiners by the other House before it can be read a second time, in order that they may report whether any further compliance with standing orders is necessary (g).

SECT. 5.
Private Bills
and Bills
to Confirm Provisional
Orders.

SUB-SECT. 6.—Standing Orders Committees.

1382. The Standing Orders Committee of the House of Lords consists of the Chairman of Committees and forty other peers who are appointed by the House, upon the motion of the Chairman of Committees, at the beginning of every session (h).

Of the House
of Lords.

1383. The Select Committee on Standing Orders of the House of Commons is composed of eleven members who are nominated by the House at the beginning of every session (i).

Of the House
of Commons.

1384. The duty of each of these committees is to take into consideration the Examiner's certificates of non-compliance with the standing orders (j), and to report to the House whether or not the standing orders with which the promoters of a Bill have not complied should be dispensed with (k).

Duties

(g) Standing Orders of the House of Lords (Private Business), 1911, Nos. 71A, 87, 88; Standing Orders of the House of Commons (Private Business), 1911, No. 72. One of the Examiners is required to give two clear days' notice of the day on which any private Bill referred to them after its first reading or any additional provision is to be examined; in the case of a provisional order confirmation Bill, such notice is not to be given until the Bill has been printed and circulated; see Standing Orders of the House of Lords (Private Business), 1911, No. 72; Standing Orders of the House of Commons (Private Business), 1911, No. 73.

(h) Standing Orders of the House of Lords (Private Business), 1911, No. 80; and see p. 642, ante. As to the Chairman of Committees, see p. 630, ante.

(i) Standing Orders of the House of Commons (Private Business), 1911, No. 91; and, as to procedure, see pp. 746 et seq., post.

(j) In the House of Commons, the committee also considers and reports to the House with regard to cases of non-compliance with the standing orders in respect of petitions against Bills. In the House of Lords, a petitioner against a Bill who has not complied with the standing orders must obtain the permission of the Chairman of Committees before the House will allow him to present his petition.

(k) In both Houses, the reports of the Examiner are held to be conclusive on the question of any non-compliance with standing orders reported therein, and, in any case where the Examiner has made a special report setting forth a statement of facts without deciding whether the standing orders have, or have not, been complied with, the report is held to be conclusive as to the facts so set forth. In the House of Lords, three clear days' notice must be given before the meeting of the Standing Orders Committee. The promoters of any Bill which has been referred to its consideration must deposit in the office of the Clerk of the Parliaments a printed statement setting forth the reasons on account of which the standing orders with which they have not complied ought to be dispensed with, and, in the event of there being any opposition, the opponents must deposit, before 3 o'clock in the afternoon on the second day after the order for the meeting of the committee has been fixed, a printed statement embodying their reasons against any dispensing with the standing orders. If there is no opposition, the Chairman of Committees conducts the proceedings of the committee alone; if there is any opposition, the whole committee is summoned, but three lords, with the Chairman of Committees, constitute a quorum. The agents for the Bill and the agents for the opponents

SECT. 5.
Private Bills
and Bills
to Confirm Provisional
Orders.

Refusal to dispense with standing
orders.

Allocation of Bills between the two Houses.

Procedure in second House.

1385. If the committee in either House refuses to dispense with the standing orders, the promoters cannot proceed any further with their Bill or that part of it which does not comply with the standing orders.

SUB-SECT. 7.—Further Proceedings with regard to Private (Local) Bills and Provisional Order Confirmation Bills.

(i.) In General.

1386. A private Bill may originate in either House of Parliament (l). A meeting is held on or before the 28th January every year between the Chairman of Committees in the House of Lords or his Counsel and the Chairman of Ways and Means or the Counsel to the Speaker, when it is decided which Bills are to be introduced in each House (m).

1387. When a private Bill or a provisional order confirmation Bill has passed through all its stages in one House, it is sent to the other House, where the procedure is the same as if it had been introduced in that House. If amendments are made, the Bill is returned, as amended, to the House in which it originated. If the amendments which have been made to the Bill are agreed to, the measure is ready to receive the Royal Assent (n).

appear in support of their respective statements, which are submitted to the consideration of the committee (see Standing Orders of the House of Lords (Private Business), 1911, Nos. 80—85). For forms, see Encyclopædia of Forms and Precedents, Vol. IX., pp. 196, 219, 292. In the House of Commons, the agents for the Bill, as a general rule, do not appear before the Select Committee on Standing Orders, but, if the committee desires to hear arguments, it can summon parties to appear. The full committee is summoned whether there is opposition or not, and parties are required to deliver in their statements. The agents are required, in all cases where statements are to be delivered in to the committee, to deposit them at the residence of each member of the committee, in the Committee Office of the House of Commons, and with the agents for other parties, not later than 1 o'clock in the afternoon on the day preceding the meeting of the committee; see Standing Orders of the House of Commons (Private Business), 1911, Nos. 91—97, and also the resolutions of the House with reference to the proceedings of the Select Committee on Standing Orders.

(l) A personal Bill is usually introduced in the House of Lords; see p. 758, post.

(m) In the House of Commons, a report is made by the Chairman of Ways and Means of the Bills which are to originate in the House of Lords; see Standing Orders of the House of Commons (Private Business), 1911, No. 79. A provisional order confirmation Bill may also originate in either House.

(n) See p. 723, ante. As soon as a private Bill is ready to receive the Royal Assent, a correct signed copy of the Bill is supplied by the agents for the Bill to the officials in the office of the Clerk of the Parliaments. From this copy a proof of the Act is prepared, which is carefully compared with the House copy of the Bill. The House copy of every provisional order confirmation Bill is also carefully examined in the Parliament Office in order to see whether any amendments which have been made since the introduction of the Bill have been inserted. Two vellum copies of every private Act and provisional order confirmation Act are printed and are then signed by the Clerk of the Parliaments or his deputy. One of these copies is preserved in the Victoria Tower, the other in the Record Office. As to public Bills, see p. 725, ante.

1388. There are certain fees and charges incidental to the preparation, bringing in, and carrying through Parliament of any private Bill or provisional order confirmation Bill, and certain fees must also be paid by any person who presents a petition either in favour of or against any such Bill. A list of such fees and charges is drawn up, in the House of Lords, by the Clerk of the Parliaments; in the House of Commons, by the Speaker (o).

SECT. 5.
Private Bills
and Bills
to Confirm Provisional
Orders.

Fees and charges.
Taxation of costs.

1389. Costs, which in each House are taxed by an officer appointed for the purpose, are taxed either under statutory authority (p), or upon a requisition of one of His Majesty's principal Secretaries of State, or of a Government department, or of any court in England, Scotland, or Ireland, or in his own discretion at the request of the parties interested in the same.

1390. The duty of the taxing officer in each House (q) is to allow the authorised fees and to award costs of such taxation against either party thereto in such proportion as he may think fit (r). In the House of Lords the taxing officer reports his taxation to the Clerk of the Parliaments; in the House of Commons, to the Speaker.

Duty of taxing officer.

1391. If either party to a taxation is aggrieved by the decision contained in the report of the taxing officer, he may deposit a memorial addressed to the Clerk of the Parliaments, or to the Speaker, as the case may be, complaining of such report, and the Clerk of the Parliaments, or the Speaker, may then require the taxing officer to make a further report. If no memorial is presented against a report from the taxing officer, or, if such a memorial has been presented, as soon as the matters complained of have been disposed of, the Clerk of the Parliaments, or the Speaker, as the case may be, may issue a certificate of the amount found due, and such certificate has the effect of a warrant to confess judgment (s).

Memorial against report of taxing officer.

(o) House of Commons Costs Taxation Act, 1847 (10 & 11 Vict. c. 69), s. 4.; House of Lords Costs Taxation Act, 1849 (12 & 13 Vict. c. 78), s. 4. The schedule of fees to be charged in the House of Lords with regard to local, personal, and provisional order confirmation Bills, and the general fees and fees on taxation, is printed in the Appendix to the Standing Orders of the House relative to private Bills, 1911. A table of the fees to be charged in the House of Commons upon the same subjects appears in the Appendix to the Standing Orders of the House relative to Private Bills, 1911.

(p) House of Commons Costs Taxation Act, 1847 (10 & 11 Vict. c. 69); House of Lords Costs Taxation Act, 1849 (12 & 13 Vict. c. 78); Parliamentary Costs Act, 1865 (28 & 29 Vict. c. 27).

(q) In the House of Lords this officer is appointed by the Clerk of the Parliaments (House of Lords Costs Taxation Act, 1849 (12 & 13 Vict. c. 78), s. 3; in the House of Commons, by the Speaker (House of Commons Costs Taxation Act, 1847 (10 & 11 Vict. c. 69), s. 3).

(r) Under ibid. (both Acts), ss. 5 and 6, the taxing officer is empowered to examine parties and witnesses on oath, and to call for books and papers.

(s) Ibid. (both Acts), ss. 8 and 9. In a case where costs are awarded by a private Bill committee (see note (g), p. 756, post), the certificate of the taxing officer in each House is conclusive evidence as well of the amount of the demand as of the title of the party therein named to recover the same from the party stated to be liable to pay (Parliamentary Costs Act, 1865 (28 & 29 Vict. c. 27) s. 3).

SECT. 5.

Private Bills
and Bills
to Confirm Provisional
Orders.

First reading.

(ii.) First Reading.

1392. In both Houses the first reading of a private Bill is a purely formal matter. The Bill is laid upon the table of the House in which it is to be introduced, and is deemed to have been read a first time (t).

In the House of Lords, the first reading of a provisional order confirmation Bill is also a formal matter, but the Bill is presented to the House by a Minister representing the department of the Government which is responsible for it, who moves that it be read a first time. In the House of Commons, notice must be given before such a Bill may be presented.

(iii.) Second Reading.(1) *In the House of Lords.*Interval of time between first and second reading in the
House of Lords.

1393. In the House of Lords, a private Bill which originates in that House, unless the standing orders have not been complied with (a), or unless it is a Bill which has to be referred to the Examiners after first reading (b), must be set down for second reading not earlier than the fourth day or later than the seventh day after it has been read a first time (c).

(t) In both Houses, a House copy of every provisional order confirmation Bill and every private Bill is prepared in the same shape and style as in the case of a public Bill; see p. 706, ante. Every private Bill (except a name Bill, which usually is not printed) must also be printed at the cost of the promoters, and must be obtainable by peers and members of the House of Commons; see Standing Orders of the House of Commons (Private Business), Nos. 201, 203. Every printed copy of a private Bill which is presented to the House of Commons must be indorsed with the names of two members of the House. Every private Bill which originates in the House of Lords must be read a first time not later than three clear days after the Examiner's certificate has been laid on the table of the House; see Standing Orders of the House of Lords (Private Business), 1911, No. 86a. In the House of Commons, every private Bill which originates in that House must be presented not later than one clear day after the Examiner has indorsed the petition for the Bill "Standing Orders complied with"; or, if the House is not sitting when such indorsement is made, not later than one clear day after the next sitting of the House. If the standing orders with regard to a Bill have not been complied with, the Bill must be presented not later than one clear day after the House, acting upon a report from the Select Committee on Standing Orders (see p. 743, ante) dispensing with the standing orders in question, has given leave for the Bill to proceed; see Standing Orders of the House of Commons (Private Business), 1911, No. 196.

(a) In the case of a Bill with regard to which the standing orders have not been complied with, the second reading must take place not later than the second sitting day after the report dispensing with the standing orders has been received from the Standing Orders Committee; see Standing Orders of the House of Lords (Private Business), 1911, No. 91.

(b) As to such Bills, see pp. 703, note (d), 742, ante. In the case of a Bill which must be referred to the Examiner after first reading, the second reading must take place not later than the fourteenth day after the first reading; in the event of the standing orders not having been complied with, the time allowed for the second reading is extended; see Standing Orders of the House of Lords (Private Business), 1911, No. 91.

(c) Ibid. Notice must be given in the Minutes of Proceedings of the day upon which the second reading of a Bill is going to be taken. To meet the convenience of the promoters, who sometimes find it difficult to comply with the requirements of the standing order, it has become the practice to put down

The motion to read a Bill a second time is occasionally opposed. In such case it is usual for the peer who wishes to prevent the further progress of the measure to move that it be read a second time this day three months.

(2) In the House of Commons.

1394. In the House of Commons, not less than three or more than seven clear days are allowed to elapse between the date of the first reading of a provisional order confirmation Bill or of a private Bill and the date on which it is set down for second reading. A Bill which has been referred to the Examiner after its first reading must be set down for the second reading not later than seven clear days after the Examiner's report, or, in case the standing orders have not been complied with, the report from the Select Committee on Standing Orders, has been laid before the House (d).

If the motion for the second reading of a private Bill is opposed, the second reading must be postponed until the next day upon which the House sits (e). It is open to any member to move the rejection of a private Bill; in such event, the usual motion is that the Bill may be read a second time this day three or six months (f), but a reasoned amendment against the question for the second reading of the Bill may also be moved.

(iv.) Petitions in Opposition.

1395. Opponents of a private Bill or of any order which is included in a provisional order confirmation Bill may present petitions to Parliament praying to be heard by counsel against any such Bill or order (g), and all such petitions, if they have been

SECT. 5.
Private Bills
and Bills
to Confirm Provisional
Orders.

Interval of time between first and second reading in the House of Commons.

Petitions against private Bills and provisional order confirmation
Bills.

the notice for the second reading, by order of the House, for a later day than the last day on which, according to the standing order, it could be taken. In these cases an order of the House is held to override the standing order, although in words the standing order is not formally suspended.

(d) Standing Orders of the House of Commons (Private Business), 1911, No. 204. In the House of Commons, three clear days' notice of the day proposed for the second reading of any private Bill must be given to the clerks in the Private Bill Office in whose custody the Bill is kept; see Standing Orders of the House of Commons (Private Business), 1911, Nos. 233—235. If the period of seven days mentioned in the text, supra, should expire during an adjournment of the House (other than an adjournment from Friday to the following Monday), notice for the second reading of a private Bill may be given for the day on which the House meets after such adjournment; see Standing Orders of the House of Commons (Private Business), 1911, No. 224*a*.

(e) Standing Orders of the House of Commons (Private Business), 1911, No. 207. This order also applies when a private Bill is opposed on consideration or on third reading.

(f) In neither House is it possible to say, as can be said in the case of a public Bill, that the principle of a private Bill is either affirmed or rejected by the House on the second reading stage; see p. 706, ante. The House only agrees to the second reading of a private Bill upon the understanding that the reasons for passing the Bill into law are proved to the satisfaction of the committee which is appointed to inquire into its merits. For a statement on the merits, see Encyclopædia of Forms and Precedents, Vol. IX., p. 239.

(g) In the House of Lords, all petitions against a private Bill, or an order in a provisional order confirmation Bill, are referred to the committee appointed to

SECT. 5.
Private Bills
and Bills
to Confirm Provisional
Orders.

Deposit of petitions in
House of Lords.

Deposit of petitions in
House of Commons.

deposited in accordance with the standing orders, are referred in each House to the committee appointed to consider the Bill (h).

Petitioners who pray to be heard against a private Bill, or against any order in a provisional order confirmation Bill, must specify distinctly in their petitions the grounds of their opposition to the proposed measure (i).

1396. In the House of Lords, a petition against a private Bill originating in that House must be deposited before 3 o'clock in the afternoon, on or before the 19th February, and, against a late private Bill (j), or an order in a provisional order confirmation Bill originating in that House, on or before the seventh day after the day on which the Bill has been read a second time (k). Petitions against a private Bill or against an order contained in a provisional order confirmation Bill which is brought up from the House of Commons must be deposited before 3 o'clock in the afternoon on or before the seventh day after the day on which such Bill has been read a first time (l).

1397. In the House of Commons, petitions against private Bills originating in that House must be deposited on or before the 12th consider the Bill in question by the order of the House appointing the committee. In the House of Commons, all such petitions stand referred to the committee appointed to consider the opposed Bill as soon as they have been deposited in the Private Bill Office of the House; see Standing Orders of the House of Commons (Private Business), 1911, No. 210. For forms of petition, see Encyclopædia of Forms and Precedents, Vol. IX., pp. 293—312, 322, 356. For an agreement withdrawing opposition, see ibid., pp. 224, 231; and for a form of withdrawal, see ibid., p. 197.

(h) It is also open to any person or persons, who are interested in a private Bill or order in a provisional order confirmation Bill which is opposed, to present a petition against the alteration of the measure as it is presented to the committee appointed to consider the Bill.

(i) Standing Orders of the House of Commons (Private Business), 1911, No. 127. Petitions to the House of Lords should be superscribed, "To the Right Honourable the Lords Spiritual and Temporal in Parliament assembled"; to the House of Commons, "To the Honourable the Commons of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland in Parliament assembled." A general designation of the parties to the petition should follow. "The humble petition of [names and designations of petitioners] sheweth." The general allegations of the petitioners should then be set forth, followed by the prayer in which they humbly pray the House not to allow the Bill to pass into law. To the petition are added the words, "And your petitioners will ever pray etc.," followed by the signatures of the petitioners. In the House of Lords, a petition may be written or printed, or lithographed either on parchment or paper. In the House of Commons, a printed or lithographed petition is not received. At least one signature must be upon the same sheet or skin upon which the petition is written. The signatures must not be pasted on. Petitions of corporations should be under their common seal.

(j) A late private Bill is a Bill the petition for the introduction of which has not been presented to the House of Commons in the usual manner, and for which, therefore, a petition must be presented to the House of Lords before it may be introduced. The permission of the Chairman of Committees must be obtained before such a petition will be received by the House.

(k) Standing Orders of the House of Lords (Private Business), 1911, No. 92.

(l) Ibid., No. 93. If the period laid down by the standing orders for the deposit of petitions will expire during a recess, an order is made by the House, before such recess, suspending the standing orders in question and extending the time for the deposit of petitions to the first day on which the House shall sit again after the recess.

February, and, against an order in a provisional order confirmation Bill originating in that House, not later than seven clear days after the notice has been given of the day on which the Bill is to be considered by the Examiner. But petitions against any Bill sent down from the House of Lords, or any Bill as to which compliance with the standing order as to the time for depositing the Bill has been dispensed with, or any Bill promoted by the London County Council for the purpose of raising money by the creation of stock or on loan (m), may be deposited at any time not later than ten clear days after the Bill has been read a first time (n).

SECT. 5.
Private Bills
and Bills
to Confirm Provisional
Orders.

(v.) Locus Standi of Petitioners.

1398. In both Houses there are standing orders which give to certain classes of petitioners a definite locus standi or right to appear in opposition against any Bill the provisions of which may affect them injuriously (o). These standing orders, however, do not cover by any means all the cases in which an individual or body of individuals may be permitted to ask a committee on a private Bill in either House of Parliament to refuse to sanction or to amend it.

Standing
orders conferring locus standi.

The right of any petitioner whose claim to be heard in opposition to a private Bill is not definitely recognised in the standing orders must depend upon the merits of his individual case, and, as a general principle, therefore, it may be stated that any person or body of persons whose interests or property are or may be affected adversely by a provision in any private Bill, or in any order contained in a provisional order confirmation Bill, will be allowed to oppose the proposed measure in both Houses of Parliament.

1399. In the event of the locus standi of any petitioner to be heard before a committee on a private Bill being disputed by the promoters of the Bill (p), the procedure in the two Houses is different.

Cases where locus standi of petitioners against a Bill is objected to.

In the House of Lords, in such cases, it is left to the committee to which the Bill is committed to decide, after hearing arguments on both sides, whether or not the petitioner has sufficient grounds of complaint to justify his being heard in opposition to the proposed measure (q).

In the House of Commons, if the locus standi of any petitioner against a private Bill, or an order in a provisional order

(m) See p. 737, ante.

(n) Standing Orders of the House of Commons (Private Business), 1911, No. 128. If this period expires during an adjournment (other than an adjournment from Friday to the following Monday), the period for depositing such petitions is extended to the first day on which the House sits again after such adjournment; see Standing Orders of the House of Commons, 1911 (Private Business), No. 224a.

(o) Standing Orders of the House of Lords (Private Business) 1911, Nos. 105, 105a—100d; Standing Orders of the House of Commons (Private Business) 1911, Nos. 75, 131, 132, 134a, 134c, 135.

(p) For forms of notice of objections to locus standi, see Encyclopædia of Forms and Precedents, Vol. IX., pp. 316, 318, 320.

(q) There are no rules in the House of Lords on the subject of locus standi; each case as it arises is dealt with on its merits.

SECT. 5.
Private Bills
and Bills
to Confirm
Provisional
Orders.

confirmation Bill, which has been presented to the House, is objected to by the promoters within eight days after the petition in question has been lodged, the matter must be submitted to the consideration of the Referees on private Bills. This body, which has the assistance of the Counsel to the Speaker, consists of the Chairman of Ways and Means, the Deputy Chairman, and seven other members of the House appointed by the Speaker (r). It is the duty of the Referees, after hearing arguments from not more than one counsel on each side, to decide whether or not or to what extent the petitioner is to be allowed to appear before the committee to which the Bill is to be referred (s).

(vi.) Committees.

(1) In the House of Lords.

Commitment.

1400. In the House of Lords, every unopposed private Bill (with the exception of a Divorce Bill (t)) and every unopposed order in a provisional order confirmation Bill (u) is referred to the Committee on unopposed private Bills, that is, to the Chairman of Committees (v); every private Bill and every order in a provisional order confirmation Bill which is opposed is referred to a committee of five lords (w) nominated by the Committee of Selection (x).

(r) Standing Orders of the House of Commons (Private Business), 1911, No. 87. As to the Chairman of Ways and Means, and the Deputy Chairman, see p. 666, ante.

(s) The duties of the Referees are laid down by the House; see Standing Orders of the House of Commons (Private Business), 1911, No. 89. Their practice and procedure are regulated by the Chairman of Ways and Means in accordance with ibid., No. 88. The rules made by him are printed and can be obtained upon application at the office of the Referees. The procedure before the court of Referees is much the same as that before a committee on a private Bill in the House of Commons; see p. 753, post. The court of Referees is empowered to administer oaths to witnesses, and award costs in certain cases (Parliamentary Costs Act, 1867 (30 & 31 Vict. c. 136), ss. 1, 3).

(t) For the procedure on a Divorce Bill, see p. 762, post.

(u) Standing Orders of the House of Lords (Private Business), 1911, No. 102*b*. In the House of Lords, if a provisional order confirmation Bill contains some orders which are opposed and some which are not, the Bill is divided during the committee stage. The opposed orders are referred to a committee of five lords, and those which are unopposed to the Chairman of Committees in the Committee on unopposed private Bills (see the text, infra). The orders may be reported separately to the House, but, as soon as all the orders contained in the Bill have been reported, the Bill is reunited and is then recommitted as a whole to a committee of the whole House. As to committees of the whole House, see p. 713, ante.

(v) The Chairman of Committees (see p. 630, ante) is assisted by his Counsel. The agents or solicitors for the Bill appear before him to answer any inquiries which he may make with regard to any of its provisions, or to any alterations which have been made to it since it was presented to the House. Witnesses are also called to prove the accuracy of the statements in the preamble, and any other statements in the Bill which may require confirmation. As soon as the Chairman of Committees is satisfied that the provisions of the Bill conform to the requirements of the House and embody any suggestions which he may have made to the promoters prior to the committee stage, he reports the Bill to the House either with or without amendments, as the case may be.

(w) Standing Orders of the House of Lords (Private Business), 1911, No. 96.

(x) The Committee of Selection consists of the Chairman of Committees

(2) In the House of Commons.

SECT. 5.

Private Bills
and Bills
to Confirm Provisional
Orders.

Commitment.

1401. In the House of Commons, all private Bills (with the exception of divorce Bills (y)), and all provisional order confirmation Bills (a), after they have been committed, stand referred either to the Committee of Selection (b), or to the General Committee on Railway and Canal Bills (c), and are then referred by these committees either to the consideration of the Committee on unopposed Bills (d) or, if opposed, to that of a committee constituted in accordance with the standing orders of the House relating to private Bills (e).

and such other lords as the House may appoint (usually about seventeen in number). The committee is appointed early in each session; see Standing Orders of the House of Lords (Private Business), 1911, No. 97. Its principal duties are to propose to the House the names of lords to serve on committees on private Bills, to appoint the chairmen of such committees, to fix the day for the first meeting of each committee, and to settle the Bills which are to be referred to its consideration. As to committees of the House of Lords generally, see pp. 637 et seq., ante.

(y) Divorce Bills are committed to a committee specially appointed to consider them; see p. 762, post. In exceptional circumstances a private Bill may be committed to a specially constituted committee; see p. 686, ante. As to committees of the House of Commons generally, see pp. 682, et seq., ante.

(a) In the House of Commons, if any order in a provisional order confirmation Bill is opposed, the Bill as a whole is referred to a private Bill committee, which considers all the orders contained in it, whether opposed or unopposed. It is open to the committee, however, if it deems it expedient, to divide the Bill into two Bills, the one containing the opposed and the other the unopposed orders, and to report each Bill separately to the House; see Standing Orders of the House of Commons (Private Business), 1911, No. 208; compare, as to procedure in the House of Lords, note (u), p. 750, ante.

(b) The Committee of Selection is nominated by the House at the beginning of every session. It consists of eleven members, three of whom constitute a quorum. Copies of all private bills, not being railway and canal Bills, are laid before this committee, whose duty it is to form groups of such Bills when they are opposed, and to decide the order in which they are to be considered by the select committee to which they are referred; see Standing Orders of the House of Commons (Private Business), 1911, Nos. 98—103, 105—114, 116, 136, 208, 209.

(c) The General Committee on Railway and Canal Bills is nominated every session by the Committee of Selection, which has also the power of appointing the chairman and of discharging members and substituting new ones. Copies of all railway and canal Bills are laid before this committee, and its duties with regard to them are practically the same as those of the Committee of Selection with regard to other private Bills; see Standing Orders of the House of Commons (Private Business), 1911, Nos. 99, 106, 208, 209, 236, note (b), supra, and see note (d), infra.

(d) The Committee on unopposed Bills is composed of five members, namely, the Chairman of Ways and Means, who is ex officio chairman of the committee; the Deputy Chairman of Ways and Means, two members of the House selected by the Chairman of Ways and Means, from a panel appointed by the Committee of Selection, and the Counsel to the Speaker; see Standing Orders of the House of Commons (Private Business), 1911, No. 109. No member of the committee who is locally or otherwise interested in a Bill may vote on any question which may arise; see Standing Orders of the House of Commons (Private Business), No. 138. A committee on a group of railway and canal Bills consists of four members. The chairman of such a committee is appointed by the General Committee on Railway and Canal Bills (see note (c), supra), and the other members are appointed by the Committee of Selection; see Standing Orders of the House of Commons (Private Business), 1911, No. 115.

(e) Standing Orders of the House of Commons (Private Business), 1911,

SECT. 5.

Private Bills
and Bills
to Confirm
Provisional
Orders.Local Legislation
Committee.

1402. In conformity with an order of the House which is made at the beginning of every session (f), the Committee of Selection nominates a select committee, not exceeding fifteen members, which is called the Local Legislation Committee (g), to which are committed all private Bills promoted by municipal and other local authorities, by which it is proposed to create powers relating to police, sanitary, and other local government regulations in conflict with, deviation from or excess of, the provisions of the general law (h).

This committee, of which four is a quorum, elects its own chairman, and may divide itself into two committees if it thinks it advisable (i).

(3) *Joint Committees of the Two Houses.*Appointment of joint
committees.

1403. A private Bill and also a provisional order confirmation Bill, after it has been read a second time in either House, may be referred to a joint committee of Lords and Commons.

If it is thought desirable to adopt this procedure (k), the House in which the Bill is under consideration sends a message to the other House, stating that it has agreed to a resolution that it is advisable that the Bill in question should be referred to a joint committee and asking for the concurrence of the other House.

Nos. 108, 115. A committee on opposed private Bills other than railway and canal Bills is composed of four members who are appointed by the Committee of Selection; see Standing Orders of the House of Commons (Private Business), 1911, No. 116.

(f) See Journals of the House of Commons, 1909, Vol. CLXIV., p. 43.

(g) This committee was first appointed in 1882, and has been appointed every year since 1884, except in 1901 and 1902, when its work was performed by two ordinary private Bill committees and the Committee on unopposed Bills. Until 1909 the committee was called the Police and Sanitary Committee; in that year the order of reference was extended to include local government provisions, and the title of the committee was changed to the present one.

(h) At the beginning of the session, the Speaker's Counsel makes out a list of all Bills containing such regulations, and all such Bills are referred to the committee, and any other Bill may be added if, in the opinion of the Committee of Selection, it is one which should be considered in conjunction with any Bill that has been referred to the Local Legislation Committee. Portions also of a Bill which is being considered by a private Bill committee may be referred to the Local Legislation Committee.

(i) The procedure in the Local Legislation Committee is practically the same as in a private Bill committee (see p. 753, post), but as it is a select committee, Standing Orders of the House of Commons (Private Business), 1911, Nos. 115—124 and 126, which refer to private Bill committees, do not apply; see p. 684, ante. The legal adviser of the Local Government Board usually acts as the official adviser of the committee, and makes out a report on all clauses in the Bills referred to it which are covered by its terms of reference. It is customary for the committee to make a sessional report to the House giving a general survey of its work during the year.

(k) The object of referring a private Bill of unusual importance, either because of the large interests which it involves or because of the matters with which it deals, or a group of such Bills, to the consideration of a joint committee, is to economise the time of Parliament and to save, as far as possible, expense to the parties interested. The practice of referring private Bills to a joint committee dates from 1873, when the Railway etc. (Transfer and Amalgamation) Bills of that session were committed to a joint committee after being read a second time in the House of Commons, and since that date both private Bills and also provisional order confirmation Bills have not infrequently been referred by both Houses to the consideration of joint committees.

When a message has, been sent agreeing to this proposal, the Bill is committed, each House appoints a committee and nominates the members who are to serve upon it. The day and hour for the first meeting of the committee is fixed by the House of Lords (l), and the procedure in a joint committee on a private Bill is the same as that adopted in a committee on a private Bill in that House (m). When the consideration of a Bill before a joint committee has been concluded, a report is made to each House, and the Bill is then proceeded with in the House in which it originated (n).

SECT. 5.
Private Bills
and Bills
to Confirm Provisional
Orders.

(4) Procedure in Committees.

1404. Neither peers nor members of the House of Commons who are interested, either locally or otherwise, in any Bill may serve upon the committee which is appointed to consider it (o).

Constitution of committees.

All peers or members who are appointed to serve upon any committee on opposed private Bills and provisional order confirmation Bills are required to attend every sitting of the committee (p). Such committees sit from day to day until they have disposed of all the Bills in the group which has been referred to them (q). In both Houses, these committees usually meet at eleven o'clock in the morning and adjourn, in the House of Lords, at four o'clock, and in the House of Commons, at three o'clock, in the afternoon (r).

(l) The number of members appointed by each House to serve on a joint committee is the same, and is fixed by the House which sends the message suggesting the desirability of appointing the committee. In both Houses, although a joint committee on a private Bill is usually nominated by the Committee of Selection, the committee is empowered to choose its own chairman from among the members who are named. A joint committee on a private Bill has the same powers as are possessed by a committee on opposed private Bills in the two Houses; see pp. 750, 751, ante, the text, infra, and pp. 754, 755, post. The fees which are incurred by the promoters of a Bill before a joint committee, and by the petitioners against it, are paid to the House in which the Bill originates.

(m) See the text, infra, and pp. 754, 755, post.

(n) A private Bill or a provisional order confirmation Bill is reported from a joint committee in the same way as a public Bill; see p. 716, ante. Its subsequent stages in the House in which it originates are the same as those of any other private Bill or provisional order confirmation Bill. In the second House, after the Bill in question has been read a second time, an order is made dispensing with the committee stage, and the Bill is ordered to be read a third time, or to be considered as if it had been reported from a committee.

(o) Standing Orders of the House of Lords (Private Business), 1911, No. 98; Standing Orders of the House of Commons (Private Business), 1911, No. 117. In the House of Commons, every member who is appointed to serve on a private Bill committee must sign a declaration to the effect that his constituents have no local, and that he has no personal, interest in the Bills to be considered by the committee.

(p) Standing Orders of the House of Lords (Private Business), 1911, No. 100; Standing Orders of the House of Commons (Private Business), 1911, No. 119. The standing orders of both Houses, however, allow committees to continue to sit in the absence of one of their members. In the House of Lords, this practice is only permitted if the promoters and opponents of the Bill under consideration raise no objection (Standing Orders of the House of Lords (Private Business), 1911, No. 101). In both Houses, the absence of a member of a committee must be reported to the House (ibid.; Standing Orders of the House of Commons (Private Business), 1911, No. 122).

(q) See note (b), p. 751, ante. In each House, the Bills in a group should be considered in the order in which they are arranged.

(r) Standing Orders of the House of Lords (Private Business), 1911, No. 99.

SECT. 5.

Private Bills
and Bills
to Confirm
Provisional
Orders.Proceedings in committees.

1405. The actual procedure adopted in these committees is much the same in each House (s). The first day of meeting of the committee the agents for the Bill must provide each member of the committee with a filled up copy of the Bill containing all the amendments and alterations in it proposed since its introduction in the House (t). Any report from a Government department dealing with the Bill is also laid before the committee (a). Counsel (b) are then heard on behalf both of the promoters and also of any opponents who have petitioned in due form to be heard

In the House of Lords, a private Bill committee is forbidden to sit after four o'clock without obtaining the leave of the House or reporting the matter to the House. In the House of Commons, such committees may continue to sit, except whilst the House is at prayers; see Standing Orders of the House of Commons (Public Business), 1911, No. 54. Committees in both Houses usually adjourn for half an hour for luncheon.

(s) The official minutes of the proceedings of the committee are kept by the clerk of the committee, and a verbatim report of the evidence is drawn up by an official shorthand writer. In cases where the committee lasts for more than one day, the evidence is printed at the expense of the promoters for the use of the committee and of the parties. In the House of Commons, the standing orders state that a record is to be kept by the clerk of the members of the committee who are present and of the manner in which they vote, and also that the minutes of proceedings shall be laid before the House; see Standing Orders of the House of Commons (Private Business), 1911, Nos. 139, 152. In neither House is it the function of a private Bill committee to inquire into the compliance of the promoters with standing orders required to be proved before the Examiners; see Standing Orders of the House of Lords (Private Business), 1911, No. 103; Standing Orders of the House of Commons (Private Business), 1911, No. 140.

(t) Standing Orders of the House of Commons (Private Business), 1911, No. 137. In both Houses, there is also a standing order which provides that a copy of any Bill, as it is proposed to be submitted to the consideration of a committee, must be laid before the Chairman of Committees or the Chairman of Ways and Means, as the case may be, two clear days before the meeting of the committee; see Standing Orders of the House of Lords (Private Business), 1911, No. 140b; Standing Orders of the House of Commons (Private Business), 1911, No. 82. The object of this order is to enable the Chairman of Committees or Chairman of Ways and Means, as the case may be, to draw the attention of the committee to any points in the Bill which may require elucidation or particular attention; see Standing Orders of the House of Commons (Private Business), 1911, No. 80.

(a) Standing Orders of the House of Lords (Private Business), 1911, Nos. 89, 106, 106a, 113, 175a; Standing Orders of the House of Commons (Private Business), 1911, Nos. 154—157, 212. In certain cases committees of the House of Commons are directed to report specially to the House with regard to such reports; see Standing Orders of the House of Commons (Private Business), 1911, Nos. 150, 154—158b.

(b) Peers are not allowed to appear as counsel before parliamentary committees, although it has been decided that they may appear in that capacity on an appeal at the bar of the House; see report from the Committee for Privileges with regard to this matter, 6th July, 1905, Journals of the House of Lords, 1905, Vol. CXXXVII., p. 230. Members of the House of Commons are debarred by various resolutions of the House from appearing as counsel before parliamentary committees, or from engaging either by themselves or by their partners in the conduct of any private Bill; see Journals of the House of Commons, 1666, Vol. VIII., p. 646; 1830, Vol. LXXXV., p. 107; 1858, Vol. CXIII., p. 247. Formerly, it used to be necessary for a member to obtain the leave of the House before appearing as counsel at the bar of the House of Lords: this is no longer the case. See, further, title BARRISTERS, Vol. II., pp. 370 et seq.

by counsel against the proposed measure (c), and witnesses on both sides may be called and examined (d). As soon as the case both for and against the principles of the Bill which are set out in the preamble has been fully heard, the committee decides whether or not the Bill is to be allowed to proceed (e). In either House, if a committee refuses to sanction the preamble of a Bill, it must report the fact to the House, and no further proceedings can be taken with regard to the proposed measure during the same session of Parliament, unless an order for the re-commitment of the Bill is made by the House (f). If the committee approves the preamble, the clauses of the Bill are then severally considered, and, if any of them are opposed, counsel are again heard for the promoters and the opponents before the committee comes to a decision with regard to the clause in question (g).

SECT. 5.
Private Bills
and Bills
to Confirm
Provisional
Orders.

(c) Before any person may appear or be heard before a committee, he or his agent must enter an appearance in the Private Bill Office of the House in which the Bill is being considered, and a certificate of such appearance must be handed to the clerk of the committee. The name of the agent and of the counsel who appear for the petitioner must be entered on this certificate.

(d) Witnesses before committees on private Bills are examined upon oath, but, if any witness objects to taking the oath, he may affirm; see May, Parliamentary Practice, 11th ed., pp. 825, 848. In either House, if it is found necessary to compel the attendance of a witness before a private Bill committee, an order of the House must be obtained. An official witness, i.e., a representative of any Government department, when called to give evidence before a private Bill committee, used formerly to be exempt from cross-examination by counsel. At the present time, however, an official witness is subject to cross-examination, except when he is called upon to speak as to the practice and policy and parliamentary precedent of his department; see ibid., p. 815, note 2.

(e) When the time has arrived for the committee to give its decision upon any point, the room is usually cleared. In a private Bill committee, as in any other committee of either House (see p. 713, ante), all questions are decided by a majority. In the case of an equality of voting, the chairman of a private Bill committee in the House of Commons has a second or casting vote; see Standing Orders of the House of Commons (Private Business), 1911, No. 124. In the House of Lords, the chairman has no second vote, but a case of equal voting in a private Bill committee cannot occur, as such a committee consists of five members; see p. 750, ante.

(f) In the House of Commons, it is the duty of the chairman of a committee to sign a printed copy of every Bill which is approved by the committee; see Standing Orders of the House of Commons (Private Business), 1911, No. 147. In both Houses, it is the duty of the clerk of the committee to see that all the amendments which have been made in a Bill by the committee are inserted upon a copy of the Bill known as "the committee Bill."

(g) In both Houses, committees must report Bills which have been referred to them in all cases to the House. When, therefore, the promoters of a Bill inform the committee that they do not propose to proceed further with the measure, the committee to which it is referred must report the fact to the House; see Standing Orders of the House of Commons (Private Business), 1911, No. 149. In both Houses also, the standing orders further provide that, with regard to certain Bills in certain cases, committees should make special reports to the House; see Standing Orders of the House of Lords (Private Business), 1911, Nos. 108, 113; Standing Orders of the House of Commons (Private Business), 1911, Nos. 159, 167, 171, 173*a*, 188*a*. In the House of Lords, when no parties appear in opposition to a private Bill which has been referred to a committee on opposed Bills, the committee reports the Bill to the House, and it is re-committed to the Committee on unopposed Bills (Standing Orders of the House of Lords (Private Business), 1911, No. 102). In the House of Commons, a Bill to which no parties appear in opposition is referred back by the committee

SECT. 5.
Private Bills
and Bills
to Confirm Provisional
Orders.

Procedure in the House of Lords subsequent to committee
stage.

As soon as the consideration of the Bill is concluded by the committee, it must be reported to the House, either with or without amendments, as the case may be (h).

(vii.) Report and Third Reading.

1406. In the House of Lords, after a private Bill has been reported from the committee to which it has been referred (i), an order is usually made for it to be read a third time (k). A Bill may to the Committee of Selection, or, if the Bill is a railway or canal Bill, to the General Committee on Railway and Canal Bills; see p. 751, ante. The Bill is then dealt with as an unopposed Bill; see Standing Orders of the House of Commons (Private Business), 1911, No. 136. If a committee of either House reports unanimously that a petitioner against a private Bill or an order in a provisional order confirmation Bill has been unreasonably and vexatiously subjected to expense in defending his rights against the promoters of the Bill, or that the promoters of a Bill have been vexatiously subjected to expense by the opposition of any petitioner, it may award costs to such petitioner or such promoters, as the case may be. In the first case, the petitioner is entitled to recover from the promoters such costs as the committee may think fit, or the committee itself may award such sum for costs as it thinks fit, with the consent of the parties affected. In the second case, the promoters are entitled to recover from the petitioner such portion of the costs of the promotion of the Bill as the committee may think fit, or such sum as the committee itself may determine, with the consent of the parties affected. A committee cannot award costs against a person not appearing as a petitioner even if he is the real petitioner (see Mallet v. Hanly (2) (1887), 18 Q. B. D. 787, C. A.). All costs awarded by a committee are taxed by the taxing officer of the House in which the proceedings take place; and see p. 745, ante. No landowner, who bonâ fide at his own sole risk and charge opposes a Bill by which it is proposed to take any portion of his land, is liable to any costs in respect of his opposition to the measure (Parliamentary Costs Act, 1865 (28 & 29 Vict. c. 27), ss. 1, 2; Parliamentary Costs Act, 1871 (34 & 35 Vict. c. 3), s. 2). An injunction to restrain proceedings being taken upon the taxing officer's certificate of costs awarded by a committee will be refused (see Hanly and Fisher v. Mallet (1886), 3 T. L. R. 71). A plaintiff who has been awarded costs can obtain summary jurisdiction as of course under the Parliamentary Costs Act, 1865 (28 & 29 Vict. c. 27), but the defendant may move to set aside the judgment on the ground that the certificate of the taxing officer is invalid inasmuch as the committee has exceeded its powers in awarding the costs (see Mallett v. Hanly (1886), 18 Q. B. D. 303, C. A., per Lord ESHER, M.R., at pp. 308—310).

(h) If two or more Bills which contain competitive schemes are under consideration, the committee usually reserves its decision until it has heard the case for each Bill.

(i) When a Bill has been amended in a committee, the amendments which have been made by the committee are entered in the House copy of the Bill by the clerk of the committee (see also note (s), p. 754, ante), and the Bill, as amended, must be reprinted by the agents, who must deposit copies of it in the Committee Office of the House of Lords before the day appointed for the third reading. The committee copy of every opposed Bill, as soon as it has been reported from a committee, is always examined by the Counsel to the Chairman of Committees, and the Bill is not reported to the House until his sanction has been obtained. A copy of any Bill which has been amended in committee must be deposited at every office at which it was deposited under standing orders Nos. 33 and 34 (see p. 734, ante) three days before it is read a third time. Proof of compliance with this order is given by means of a certificate deposited in the office of the Clerk of the Parliaments; see Standing Orders of the House of Lords (Private Business), 1911, No. 143.

(k) A Bill may be re-committed by the House either to a committee of the whole House on a motion made by the Chairman of Committees (see Standing Orders of the House of Lords (Private Business), 1911, No. 142), or to the Committee on unopposed Bills, or to the same committee which has already be amended further on third reading, but no amendments may be moved at this stage, unless they have been first submitted to the Chairman of Committees and copies of them deposited in the office of the Clerk of the Parliaments one clear day at least before the Bill is to be read a third time (l).

In the House of Lords, as soon as a provisional order confirmation Bill has been reported to the House from the committee to which it has been referred or from the Committee on unopposed Bills, it is re-committed to a committee of the whole House, and the procedure with regard to it during its remaining stages through the House is the same as that with regard to a public Bill (m).

1407. In the House of Commons, after a provisional order confirmation Bill or any private Bill, except a railway or canal Bill, has been reported to the House without amendments from a private Bill committee or from the Committee on unopposed Bills, it is ordered to be read a third time (n).

The procedure is different in the case of a railway or canal Bill, or of a provisional order confirmation Bill or private Bill to which amendments have been made in the committee to which it has been referred (o). In such cases, the report from the committee is

SECT. 5.
Private Bills
and Bills
to Confirm Provisional
Orders.

Procedure in
House of Commons subsequent to committee stage.

considered it (see Standing Orders of the House of Lords (Private Business), 1911, No. 141). A Bill may be re-committed for the purpose of taking further proofs and for the insertion of consequential amendments, or to enable certain agreed amendments to be inserted in the Bill, if, in the opinion of the committee, they are desirable, or simply for the further consideration of the measure. A motion may also be made for the re-commitment of a Bill with regard to which the committee has reported that it is inexpedient to proceed; see cases of the Rochdale Corporation Water Bill in 1898, and the London County Council (Spitalfields Market) Bill in 1900 (Journals of the House of Lords, 1898, Vol. CXXX., p. 226; 1900, Vol. CXXXII., pp. 261, 300). When a Bill has been re-committed, further amendments may be made, which must be reported to the House before the Bill can be read a third time.

(l) In the case of any private Bill which affects Crown lands or lands belonging to the Duchy of Cornwall, the consent of the Sovereign or of the Prince of Wales, as the case may be, must be signified in the House before the Bill may be read a third time.

(m) In the House of Commons, as in the House of Lords, a private Bill or a provisional order confirmation Bill, after it has been reported from a committee, may be re-committed either to the committee which has already considered it, or to a specially constituted committee, or even to a committee of the whole House. The order of the House for the re-commitment of a Bill is usually accompanied by an instruction. A Bill may be re-committed either generally or for the purpose of re-considering a negatived preamble or for some special purpose, such as the insertion of a new clause; see case of the Dublin and Central Ireland Electric Power Bill, 1908 (Journals of the House of Commons, 1908, Vol. CLXIII., p. 201).

(n) Standing Orders of the House of Commons (Private Business), 1911, No. 213. When a Bill has been amended in committee, a copy of it must be deposited at every office at which it was deposited under Standing Orders Nos. 33 and 34 (see p. 734, ante) at least three days before it is read a third time; see Standing Orders of the House of Commons (Private Business), 1911, No. 84.

(o) A correct copy of any Bill which has been amended by a private Bill committee in the House of Commons is supplied by the clerk of the committee to the clerks in the Private Bill Office of the House, whose duty it is to see that the Bill, as reprinted by the agents after the committee stage, compares accurately with the Bill delivered to them by the committee clerk; see Standing Orders of the House of Commons, 1911, Nos. 240, 241; and see note (i), p. 756, ante.

SECT. 5.
Private Bills
and Bills
to Confirm
Provisional
Orders.

ordered to lie on the table. A provisional order confirmation Bill is ordered to be considered, as amended, on the following or some subsequent day, but, in the case of a private Bill, three clear days must elapse before the House can consider the Bill (p). Amendments of substance may be made in the House upon the consideration of any private Bill, and verbal amendments may be moved on the third reading (q), but, in neither case, may any amendments be offered unless the Chairman of Ways and Means is satisfied that they are amendments which should be entertained by the House without first referring them to the Select Committee on Standing Orders (r).

SUB-SECT. 8.—Personal Bills.

(i.) In General.

Personal Bills introduced in House of Lords.

1408. It is customary for all private Bills of a personal character—that is, estate Bills, naturalisation Bills, name Bills, divorce Bills, and other Bills which do not belong to either class of local Bills (s)—to originate in the House of Lords. The standing orders of that House provide that the promoters of any such Bill must present a signed petition (to which a printed copy of the proposed Bill must be annexed) praying for the leave of the House to introduce the measure (t). A copy of the Bill must also be delivered to all persons who may be affected by its provisions before the second reading takes place (u).

The promoters are not called upon to present a further petition when the Bill reaches the House of Commons, and the proofs and evidence which they have produced in the House of Lords are accepted by the other House.

(p) One clear day's notice of the intention to move any amendment to a Bill which is ordered to lie on the table, or which is to be read a third time, must be given in the Private Bill Office, and the agents must also give one clear day's notice in writing to the same office of the day upon which it is proposed to take the third reading of any Bill; see standing orders of the House of Commons (Private Business), 1911, Nos. 242, 243.

(q) A private Bill may not be considered by the House, unless the Chairman of Ways and Means has signified in writing to the Speaker that the Bill contains the several provisions required by the standing orders; see Standing Orders of the House of Commons (Private Business), 1911, No. 215.

(r) Standing Orders of the House of Commons (Private Business), 1911, No. 216. Such amendments must be printed, unless the Chairman of Ways and Means considers that it is unnecessary to print them; see Standing Orders of the House of Commons (Private Business), 1911, No. 217. If it is thought desirable to refer any amendment to the Select Committee on Standing Orders (see p. 743, ante), no further proceedings on the Bill may be taken until the report from that committee has been brought up; see Standing Orders of the House of Commons (Private Business), 1911, No. 218.

(s) See note (t), p. 728, ante; and as to these various classes of Bills, see pp. 759 et seq., post.

(t) Standing Orders of the House of Lords (Private Business), 1911, Nos. 150, 151.

(u) Standing Orders of the House of Lords (Private Business), 1911, No. 152. Notice of an estate Bill must also be given to every mortgagee on the estate before the second reading of the Bill; see Standing Orders of the House of Lords (Private Business), 1911, No. 157.

(ii.) Procedure.

1409. The actual procedure in both Houses in respect of personal Bills, other than divorce Bills (v), after their introduction, is practically the same as that which has already been described in respect of local Bills.

In neither House is there a standing order prescribing any definite time between the first and second reading. In the House of Lords ten clear days must elapse between the second reading of an estate Bill and the committee stage (a). There is no standing order on this point with regard to other personal Bills. In the House of Commons the standing orders provide that three clear days, and not six clear days as in the case of a local Bill, must elapse between the second reading and the committee stage of a personal Bill (b).

As a rule, personal Bills are not opposed, and in each House, therefore, are referred, after they have been read a second time, to the Committee on unopposed Bills (c).

SUB-SECT. 9.—Estate Bills.

1410. An estate Bill is a measure relating to the real or personal estates of private persons, so as to effect arrangements which are deemed to be beneficial to all interests concerned and cannot be effected under the instruments affecting the property or by application to the court (d).

1411. As soon as a petition for an estate Bill has been presented to the House of Lords, it is referred to two judges (e). If the Bill refers to estates in land in England, the judges are required to report to the House whether, in their opinion, the provisions of the proposed Bill will effect the objects for which the measure is intended and whether amendments are desirable (f). If the Bill is one

SECT. 5.

Private Bills
and Bills
to Confirm Provisional
Orders.

Procedure in both Houses
with regard to personal Bills other than divorce
Bills.

Estate Bills.

Bill referred to judges.

(v) See p. 761, post.

(a) Standing Orders of the House of Lords (Private Business), 1911, No. 158.

(b) Standing Orders of the House of Commons (Private Business), 1911, No. 211. Six clear days must elapse, however, between the second reading and the committee stage of an estate Bill which relates to Crown, church, or corporation property, or to property held in trust for charitable or public purposes.

(c) In the event of an estate Bill being opposed, petitions against it may be presented at such times and such proceedings may be had thereon as the Chairman of Committees in each case may direct; see Standing Orders of the House of Lords (Private Business), 1911, No. 159.

(d) A common case is that of spendthrift tenants for life or heirs of entail, where the Bill in effect makes a re-settlement on terms which may save the estate from sale or enables funds to be raised to meet an emergency. Another case is that of wills which are so ill-drawn as to render the estate incapable of administration except at the risk of heavy litigation; here Parliament in effect amends the will, following as nearly as may be the intentions of the testator. See, further, titles SETTLEMENTS; WILLS.

(e) This refers to petitions for English and Scottish estate Bills; petitions for Irish estate Bills are only referred to the judges if the petitioners desire it and the Chairman of Committees so determines; see Standing Orders of the House of Lords (Private Business), 1911, No. 155.

(f) Standing Orders of the House of Lords (Private Business), 1911, No. 153. If the Bill refers to an estate in England or Wales, it is referred to two

SECT. 5.
Private Bills
and Bills
to Confirm
Provisional
Orders.

concerning estates in land in Scotland or Ireland, the judges are required to summon before them all parties whose interests may be affected by the Bill. They are also required to take such proofs of the allegations contained in the Bill and such consents and acceptances of trust as may be tendered to them, and are then to report to the House the state of the case and their opinion with regard to the proposed measure.

No estate Bill may be read a first time until the report of the judges (g) with regard to it has been received by the Chairman of Committees (h).

Appearance of consenting parties before committee on an estate
Bill.

1412. When an estate Bill is under the consideration of a committee, any person concerned in the settlement or will affected by it must be present to give his consent to the Bill (i), and a trustee who is appointed by the Bill must also be present in person to signify his acceptance of the trust imposed upon him (k).

No notice may be taken of a consent to an estate Bill, or of an acceptance of a trust under its provisions, unless the consenting party appears in person before the committee, except when it is proved to the satisfaction of the committee that the party in question is unable to attend. In such case, the evidence of two credible witnesses is required to prove that the necessary consent has been given, and a copy of the Bill signed by the consenting party must be laid before the committee (l).

Procedure in
House of Commons.

1413. In the House of Commons, as soon as an estate Bill has been read the first time, it is sent to the Examiners (m). The committee to which the Bill is referred, after the Examiner has made his report to the House, is required to make a special report to the House if the measure contains provisions extending either the term or the area of any settlement of land (n).

judges of the High Court; if in Scotland, to two judges of the Court of Session; if in Ireland, to two judges of the High Court of Justice in Ireland (Standing Orders of the House of Lords (Private Business), 1911, Nos. 154, 155).

(g) Ibid., Nos. 154, 155, 169—173.

(h) Ibid., No. 156.

(i) Ibid., No. 163. Every infant interested in the consequences of an estate Bill must be represented by a guardian or protector appointed by the Lord Chancellor; see ibid.. In cases where the petitioners for, and the consenting parties to, the Bill are together competent to bar the entail, the consent of persons entitled in remainder is not required; see ibid., No. 162. All persons whose interests are affected by the Bill are named in the Bill, and they are the only persons bound by its provisions.

(k) Ibid., No. 168. The personal consent of an existing trustee is required in any case where the Bill provides that money is to pass through his hands; see ibid., No. 165.

(l) Ibid., No. 166. This rule does not apply in the case of a trustee for a charity whose consent may be proved by one credible witness and the production of a copy of the Bill signed by the consenting trustee; see ibid., No. 167. The same rules with regard to the personal attendance of consenting parties apply in Scotland and Ireland when the consents are proved before the judges (ibid., Nos. 169—173).

(m) Standing Orders of the House of Commons (Private Business), 1911, No. 72.

(n) Ibid., No. 188a. Amendments are sometimes inserted in the House

SUB-SECT. 10.—Naturalisation Bills.

1414. A naturalisation Bill (o) is a Bill to grant^r to and confer upon an alien all the rights, privileges, and capacities of a natural-born British subject. The procedure with regard to a Bill of this kind is referred to elsewhere (p).

SUB-SECT. 11.—Name Bills.

1415. A name Bill, which is a Bill to enable an individual to assume a new name (q) with the authority of Parliament, is brought into the House of Lords on petition, and the standing orders of that House with regard to personal Bills must be complied with, so far as they are applicable to such a Bill (r). In the House of Commons a name Bill is not printed, nor is it referred to the Examiners.

SUB-SECT. 12.—Divorce Bills.

1416. The standing orders of the House of Lords provide (s) (1) that no petition praying for leave to bring in a divorce Bill may be presented to the House, unless an official copy of the previous proceedings with regard to the case are delivered in upon oath at the bar at the same time as the petition is presented (a); (2) that no Bill grounded upon a petition to dissolve a marriage for the cause of adultery, and to enable the petitioner to marry again, may be introduced which does not contain a clause making it unlawful for the person whose marriage with the petitioner is to be dissolved to marry the person with whom he or she has committed adultery (b); and (3) that in any case in which a trial at nisi prius has been had, or in which a writ of inquiry has been executed, within the United Kingdom wherein the petitioner for the Bill has been a party, a report of the proceedings in such trial or inquiry

SECT. 5.
Private Bills
and Bills
to Confirm Provisional
Orders.

Naturalisation Bills.
Name Bills

Requirements precedent to introduction of divorce
Bill.

of Commons which necessitate the giving of further consents. In any such case, when the Bill is returned to the House of Lords, it is referred to a committee to take such consents.

(o) Since the passing of the Naturalization Act, 1870 (33 & 34 Vict. c. 14), and subsequent Acts (as to which see title ALIENS, Vol. I., pp. 313—315), the necessity for applying for personal naturalisation Acts no longer exists, and consequently Bills for this purpose are rare; see May, Parliamentary Practice, 11th ed., pp. 860, 861.

(p) See title ALIENS, Vol. I., p. 316; Standing Orders of the House of Lords (Private Business), 1911, Nos. 179, 180.

(q) See also title NAME AND ARMS, CHANGE OF, p. 352, ante.

(r) The House of Lords sometimes refers a petition for leave to bring in a name Bill to the judges for them to report whether a Bill is necessary for the purposes desired in the petition; see Journals of the House of Lords, 1865, Vol. XCVII., p. 65.

(s) The standing orders of the two Houses relate to divorce Bills generally, but since the passing of the Matrimonial Causes Act, 1857 (20 & 21 Vict. c. 85), and subsequent Acts, and of the Indian Divorce Act (Act No. IV. of 1869), s. 7, in India, applications for such Bills at the present time come principally from Ireland, where the High Court of Justice may grant a divorce a mensâ et thoro, but cannot dissolve a marriage and enable the parties to marry again; see title COURTS, Vol. IX., p. 20; May, Parliamentary Practice, 11th ed., pp. 858—860. As to matrimonial causes in England, see title HUSBAND AND WIFE, Vol. XVI., pp. 462 et seq.

(a) Standing Orders of the House of Lords (Private Business), 1911, No. 175.

(b) Ibid., No. 176. This clause is always struck out in committee.

SECT. 5.
Private Bills
and Bills
to Confirm Provisional
Orders.

Procedure in House
of Lords.

must be laid on the table of the House before the second reading of the Bill (c).

1417. The procedure in respect of a divorce Bill is judicial in character, and differs entirely from that in respect of any other private Bill. The Bill is presented by the Lord Chancellor, and not by the Chairman of Committees. Counsel may be heard and witnesses examined both at the time when the petition is presented and also on the second reading of the Bill. The Bill is not referred to a private Bill committee, and any amendments which may be necessary are made in committee of the whole House.

Procedure
in House of Commons.

1418. When a divorce Bill reaches the House of Commons, a message is sent to the House of Lords to request that the minutes of evidence taken before that House, together with the proceedings and the documents in the case, may be sent to the House of Commons (d).

As soon as the Bill has been read a second time it stands referred to the Select Committee on Divorce Bills (e), whose duty it is to obtain evidence that an action for damages has been brought by the petitioner in the proper court, or to receive an explanation if no such action has been brought, and to report the Bill to the House (f).

SUB-SECT. 13.—Scottish Private Legislation.

Private Legislation
Procedure
(Scotland).

1419. In Scotland, any public authority or any persons who desire to obtain legislative powers for any object affecting public or private interests in that country, for which they would be entitled to apply to Parliament for leave to bring in a private Bill, are required to present a petition to the Secretary for Scotland praying him to issue a provisional order in accordance with the terms of a draft order submitted to him or with such modifications as may be necessary (g).

Regulation of
procedure.

1420. The Chairman of Committees in the House of Lords and the Chairman of Ways and Means, acting jointly with the Secretary for Scotland, are empowered to draw up, and from time

(c) Standing Orders of the House of Lords (Private Business), 1911, No. 177.

(d) As soon as the Bill has passed the House of Commons, these documents are returned to the House of Lords.

(e) Standing Orders of the House of Commons (Private Business), 1911, No. 208. The Select Committee on Divorce Bills is nominated at the beginning of every session. The committee consists of nine members, of whom three constitute a quorum; see ibid., No. 189. In 1896 the committee was ordered to consist of ten members.

(f) Standing Orders of the House of Commons (Private Business), 1911, Nos. 190, 192. If the petitioner has appeared in person before the House of Lords on the second reading of the Bill, he must also attend the select committee in the House of Commons; see ibid., No. 191.

(g) Private Legislation Procedure (Scotland) Act, 1899 (62 & 63 Vict. c. 47), s. 1 (1). The Act does not apply to estate Bills as defined in the standing orders of the two Houses, nor does anything contained in it confer upon the Secretary for Scotland power to make provisional orders to authorise and regulate the supply of electricity for lighting and other purposes, or affect the right of any other Government department to make orders under powers conferred upon it by Parliament; see ibid., s. 16 (2), (3).

to time to vary, if they think fit, general orders for the regulation of the procedure to be adopted (h). Every such general order must be laid before both Houses of Parliament, and ceases to have any force if either House agrees to a resolution to that effect (i).

SECT. 5.
Private Bills
and Bills
to Confirm Provisional
Orders.

Deposit of draft order.

1421. A copy of every draft order which is submitted to the Secretary for Scotland must be deposited in the office of the Clerk of the Parliaments and in the Private Bill Office of the House of Commons (k), and the Secretary for Scotland must inform the Chairman of Committees and the Chairman of Ways and Means of any opposition to any such order (l).

The two Chairmen report upon all such draft orders and, if it appears from their report that either of the Chairmen is of opinion that the matters to which any draft order refers ought not to be dealt with by means of a provisional order, or do not refer wholly or mainly to Scotland, the Secretary for Scotland must, without further inquiry, refuse to issue the provisional order (m).

1422. The promoters of any draft order, which the Chairmen consider should not be issued by the Secretary for Scotland, if they wish, may introduce a private Bill (n) after giving notice of their intention to the opponents of the draft order (o). In such case the notices which were published, served, and made for the draft order are deemed to have been published, served, and made for the substituted Bill, and the petition to the Secretary for Scotland for the provisional order is deemed and taken to be the petition for the Bill (p).

Introduction
of private Bill in lieu of draft
order.

(h) Private Legislation Procedure (Scotland) Act, 1899 (62 & 63 Vict. c. 47), s. 15 (1). These general orders, which are based on the standing orders on private business of the two Houses, are published by the authority of the Secretary for Scotland. In the event of the Examiner reporting that the promoters of a draft order have not complied with the general orders, the matter is referred to the two Chairmen, and they must report to their respective Houses whether or not the general orders may be dispensed with; see Private Legislation Procedure (Scotland) Act, 1899 (62 & 63 Vict. c. 47), s. 3 (2).

(i) Ibid., s. 15 (3).

(k) Ibid., s. 1 (2).

(l) Ibid., s. 2 (1).

(m) Ibid., s. 2 (2); Standing Orders of the House of Lords (Private Business), 1911, Nos. 183, 184; Standing Orders of the House of Commons (Private Business), 1911, Nos. 251, 252. A copy of every such report is laid upon the table in each House.

(n) Private Legislation Procedure (Scotland) Act, 1899 (62 & 63 Vict. c. 47), s. 2 (2); Standing Orders of the House of Lords (Private Business), 1911, No. 187; Standing Orders of the House of Commons (Private Business), 1911, No. 255. The promoters are not obliged to insert all the provisions which were contained in the draft order in the substituted Bill, but they may not add any new provisions to the Bill; see Standing Orders of the House of Lords (Private Business), 1911, No. 189; Standing Orders of the House of Commons (Private Business), 1911, No. 257.

(o) The service of such notices must be proved before the Examiner; see Standing Orders of the House of Lords (Private Business), 1911, No. 188; Standing Orders of the House of Commons (Private Business), 1911, No. 256.

(p) Private Legislation Procedure (Scotland) Act, 1899 (62 & 63 Vict. c. 47), s. 2 (4); Standing Orders of the House of Lords (Private Business), 1911, No. 188; Standing Orders of the House of Commons (Private Business), 1911, No. 256. All petitions in favour of or against a draft order which have been deposited at the office of the Secretary for Scotland pursuant to general orders

SECT. 5.

Private Bills
and Bills
to Confirm Provisional
Orders.

Issue of order and confirmation by Parliament.

On or before the seventh day after the Secretary for Scotland has refused to issue a provisional order, the promoters must deposit a copy of any substituted Bill which they intend to introduce in every public office where a copy of the draft order was deposited (q).

1423. If the two Chairmen raise no objection to the draft order and if there is no opposition to it, the Secretary for Scotland either issues the order as it has been submitted to him or with such modifications as may be necessary to meet recommendations made by the two Chairmen or objections raised by any public department affected by the provisions contained in the order (r).

No provisional order, however, which is issued by the Secretary for Scotland has any validity until it has been confirmed by Parliament (s). A Bill to confirm any such order or orders must, therefore, be introduced by the Secretary for Scotland either in the House of Lords or in the House of Commons. As soon as a Bill of this kind has been presented in either House, it is deemed to have passed through all its stages up to and including committee.

Inquiry by commissioners.

1424. If there is opposition to any draft order which the two Chairmen have allowed to proceed, or if the Secretary for Scotland for any reason considers that an inquiry is necessary, he directs that an inquiry shall be held by four commissioners as to the propriety of assenting to the prayer contained in the petition for the order (t).

Appointment of commissioners.

1425. All of these commissioners should be members either of the House of Lords or of the House of Commons; but if at any inquiry it is impossible to procure the attendance of any, or of the requisite number of, parliamentary commissioners, other commissioners, who are qualified by experience to act as commissioners, may be appointed to hold the inquiry.

The parliamentary commissioners are appointed by the two Chairmen (a); the extra-parliamentary commissioners are appointed by the Secretary for Scotland from a panel of twenty persons qualified by experience of affairs to act as commissioners and nominated by him and the two Chairmen to act as commissioners for a period of five years.

are treated as if they had been deposited in favour of or against the substituted Bill; see Standing Orders of the House of Lords (Private Business), 1911, No. 189*a*; Standing Orders of the House of Commons (Private Business), 1911, No. 259.

(q) Standing Orders of the House of Lords (Private Business), 1911, No. 187; Standing Orders of the House of Commons (Private Business), 1911, No. 255.

(r) Private Legislation Procedure (Scotland) Act, 1899 (62 & 63 Viet. c. 47), s. 7. By ibid., ss. 7 (2), 8 (1), it is provided that if any modifications are made in a draft order, a copy of the amended order must be deposited in every public office in which the order was originally deposited.

(s) Ibid., s. 7 (2).

(t) Ibid., ss. 3 (1), 5 (1).

(a) Ibid., s. 5 (3), (4), (5). In each House, the standing orders provide that fifteen members shall be selected, from whom the commissioners to go to Scotland shall be proposed to the House; see Standing Orders of the House of Lords (Private Business), 1911, No. 185; Standing Orders of the House of Commons (Private Business), 1911, No. 253.

1426. It is the duty of the commissioners thus appointed to hold an inquiry, and, after hearing evidence, to report to the Secretary for Scotland whether in their opinion the proposed provisional order should be issued as prayed for or with modifications, or should be refused. If the commissioners report that a provisional order ought not to be issued, the Secretary for Scotland refuses to issue such order (b); but if they recommend that a provisional order should be issued, the Secretary for Scotland issues such order, without any modification, or with such modifications as may be deemed expedient, and then submits to Parliament the necessary confirming Bill (c).

SECT. 5.
Private Bills
and Bills
to Confirm Provisional
Orders.

Report of commissioners.

1427. In whichever House the necessary confirming Bill is introduced, a period of seven days must elapse between its first and second reading, during which period a petition may be presented against an order which it contains (d). If such a petition is presented, any member may give notice of his intention to move for the committal of the Bill to a joint committee of the two Houses (e). Such a motion must be made immediately after the Bill has been read a second time, and, if it is carried, the Bill stands committed to a joint committee composed of three members of each House (f).

Procedure on a confirming Bill in the House in which it is introduced.

If no petition is presented against the Bill, or if no motion is carried for committing it to a joint committee, the Bill is deemed to have passed the stage of committee and is ordered to be considered as if it had been reported from a committee. It is then ordered for third reading (g).

1428. When a Bill which has been committed to a joint committee, or against which a petition has been presented, and no motion for its committal to a joint committee has been made or such motion has been negatived, reaches the second House, it is deemed to have passed the committee stage as soon as it has been read a second time (h).

Procedure in the second
House.

(b) Private Legislation Procedure (Scotland) Act, 1899 (62 & 63 Vict. c. 47), s. 8 (1).

(c) Ibid., s. 8.

(d) Ibid., s. 9 (1).

(e) It has been held that if no petition against an order is presented in the House in which the confirming Bill originated, the Private Legislation Procedure (Scotland) Act, 1899 (62 & 63 Vict. c. 47), gives no power to an opponent to present a petition when the Bill reaches the second House.

(f) A message is sent by the House in which the Bill is being considered to inform the other House that the Bill has been referred to a joint committee. Up to the present time the Leith Corporation Tramways Order Confirmation Bill, 1904, is the only Bill which has been referred to a joint committee under the Private Legislation Procedure (Scotland) Act, 1899 (62 & 63 Vict. c. 47), s. 9. The proceedings before a joint committee appointed to consider a Bill of this kind are the same as those which have already been described before a joint committee on any other provisional order confirmation Bill or private Bill; see p. 752, ante.

(g) Private Legislation Procedure (Scotland) Act, 1899 (62 & 63 Vict. c. 47), s. 9.

(h) Standing Orders of the House of Lords (Private Business), 1911, No. 186; Standing Orders of the House of Commons (Private Business), 1911, No. 254.

Part VI.—The Financial Work of Parliament.

SECT. 1.

Initiation of Taxation and Expen- diture.

Statutory authority essential.

Recommendation of Crown to grants of public money or charges.

Procedure
upon Bill creating charge upon public revenue.

SECT. 1.—Initiation of Taxation and Expenditure.

1429. No tax may be levied or financial burden of any kind imposed upon the people, unless it has been agreed to by their representatives in the House of Commons and has received statutory sanction (i). All the supplies for the public service, therefore, and any sum or sums of money out of the public revenue which may be required for any purpose by the executive Government, must be authorised by statute (j).

1430. It is the function of the House of Commons to grant money to the Crown; but the House will not receive a petition for any sum relating to the public service, or proceed upon any motion for a grant or charge of any kind upon the revenue of the United Kingdom or of India, unless it has been recommended by the Crown (k). Nor will the House make any such grant, or consider any such petition, or proceed upon any motion for an address to the Crown praying for the issue of public money (l), except in a committee of the whole House, to which the proposed grant or petition or motion for an address must be referred (m).

1431. Whenever it is proposed, therefore, to introduce a Bill, the main object of which is to create a charge upon the public revenue, the same procedure is adopted. The expenditure proposed in the Bill must first be sanctioned in committee of the whole House. A committee of the whole House for this purpose is appointed on motion to meet on a future day to consider the matter specified in

(i) See title CONSTITUTIONAL LAW, Vol. VI., pp. 379, 380. As to the right to initiate financial legislation, see ibid., p. 390, and pp. 795 et seq., post.

(j) A Bill for this purpose may acquire the force of law without being passed by the House of Lords (Parliament Act, 1911 (1 & 2 Geo. 5, c. 13), s. 1 (1)); see p. 776, post.

(k) Standing Orders of the House of Commons (Public Business), 1911, Nos. 66, 70; see title REVENUE.

(l) There is an exception to the rule that the House of Commons will not consider any proposal for the expenditure of public money unless it has been recommended by the Crown. It is open to any member of the House to move for the appointment of a committee of the whole House to consider a resolution for an address to the Crown praying for the issue of a sum of money for the purpose specified in the address and ending with an assurance "that this House will make good the same"; see May, Parliamentary Practice, 11th ed., p. 571. This method of obtaining money has generally been adopted when Parliament has decided to erect a statue in memory of a deceased statesman, e.g., in the case of Mr. Gladstone in 1898 (Journals of the House of Commons, 1898, Vol. CLIII., p. 224), the Marquess of Salisbury in 1904 (Journals of the House of Commons, 1904, Vol. CLIX., p. 198), and Sir Henry Campbell-Bannerman in 1908 (Journals of the House of Commons, 1908, Vol. CLXIII., p. 191).

(m) Standing Orders of the House of Commons (Public Business), 1911, Nos. 67, 69. If, therefore, any motion is made in the House of Commons which would involve a new charge of any kind on the public revenue, the debate must be adjourned, and the matter must be referred to a committee of the whole House before the House itself will take the matter into its consideration; see ibid., No. 71. As to committees of the whole House, see pp. 710, 713, ante.

the motion. As soon as the question upon a motion of this kind has been proposed from the chair, a Minister of the Crown intimates that the motion is recommended by the Crown. In the committee a resolution (which must be within the terms of the motion recommended by the Crown upon which the committee was appointed) is proposed and, when agreed to, is ordered to be reported to the House. Upon such resolution, when agreed to by the House, a Bill is ordered to be brought in (n).

SECT. 1.
Initiation of Taxation and Expenditure.

1432. But although the House of Commons by its standing orders thus puts a check upon its own power of adding to the charges upon the public revenue, it does not apply the same rules to a financial proposal which is submitted to its consideration when such a proposal is not a new and distinct charge involving a fresh burden upon the people. In cases, therefore, where it is proposed to authorise advances on the security of public works out of moneys which have been already set apart by Parliament for such purposes (o), or where, although a Bill proposes to intercept money which would otherwise be paid into the Consolidated Fund, yet it does not impose any new charge upon that fund, or where a proposal is made to vary the proceeds of an existing charge upon the public revenue without creating a new charge, no recommendation from the Crown is deemed to be necessary.

Circumstances in which recommendation of Crown unnecessary.

SECT. 2.—The Consolidated Fund.

1433. At the present time practically the entire public revenue is paid into one general account called the Consolidated Fund or the Exchequer Account, out of which the whole of the public expenditure is paid. This account is kept at the Bank of England and the Bank of Ireland and is under the control of a permanent official known as the Comptroller and Auditor-General (p).

Consolidated
Fund and Exchequer
Account.

(n) When the financial provisions of a Bill are subsidiary to its principal objects the Bill is introduced without a preliminary committee, but, before the financial clauses are considered in the committee on the Bill, they must have been sanctioned by a resolution of a committee of the whole House, appointed upon the Royal recommendation, and agreed to by the House on report; see May, Parliamentary Practice, 11th ed., p. 560.

(o) The National Debt and Local Loans Act, 1887 (50 & 51 Vict. c. 16), empowers the National Debt Commissioners to issue to the various commissioners mentioned in the Act sums required for local loans to an amount not exceeding that authorised by Parliament. The Act also created a Local Loans Fund, which was placed under the control of the National Debt Commissioners, and made the Consolidated Fund a security in case of any deficiency. The resolution by which this liability was imposed upon the Consolidated Fund was voted in committee of the whole House, and the standing orders of the House were thus complied with. This compliance is held applicable to all public works loans Bills which are introduced to carry out the purposes of the National Debt and Local Loans Act, 1887 (50 & 51 Vict. c. 16), because the particular mode of application of the sums advanced by the National Debt Commissioners does not increase the total amount available for loans, and all such Bills, therefore, are introduced without preliminary recommendation by the Crown; see May, Parliamentary Practice, 11th ed., pp. 568, 569.

(p) See title REVENUE.

SECT. 3.

Public
Expenditure.

Distinction between fixed and annual charges on Consolidated
Fund.

SECT. 3.—*Public Expenditure.*SUB-SECT. 1.—Classification of Services

1434. The ordinary public expenditure for the year is divided into two categories. The first category includes the Consolidated Fund services fixed charges, that is to say, charges which do not require the annual sanction of Parliament (q). These are charges for more than the term of one year which have already been authorised by the Legislature, and constitute a permanent and first charge on the Consolidated Fund. They are accordingly paid out of the Consolidated Fund each year until the expiration of the period for which Parliament has sanctioned them, or until the repeal of the statute which created them. The second category includes the ordinary charges of the navy, army, civil services, and revenue departments (r). These charges are known as the Supply services, and are granted annually (s).

SUB-SECT. 2.—Estimates and Grants.(i.) Classification.

Estimates of expenditure.

1435. Each year estimates to meet the demands of the public service are submitted by the Government to the consideration of the House of Commons. These estimates are grouped under three different heads, namely: (1) the navy estimates; (2) the army estimates, which include the ordnance factories estimates; and (3) the civil services and revenue departments' estimates.

The estimates for the navy, the army, and the ordnance factories are prepared by the finance departments in the Admiralty and War Office, and are then submitted to the Treasury to receive the approval of that department before they are presented to the House of Commons (t). The estimates for the civil services and revenue departments, namely, the Customs and Excise, the Inland Revenue, and the Post Office, are framed by the Treasury.

Division of estimates into votes.

1436. The army and navy estimates are divided into a series of votes, each of which deals with a definite branch of expenditure. Each of these votes, as well as the vote stating the number of (q) For a list of the fixed charges on the Consolidated Fund, see title REVENUE.

(r) Prior to 1854 the charges for collecting the revenue were deducted by each department from the gross sums collected, and estimates were not presented in respect of the revenue departments.

(s) The financial year terminates on the 31st March (Public Revenue and Consolidated Fund Charges Act, 1854 (17 & 18 Vict. c. 94), s. 2), and on the evening of that day the books of the Exchequer are closed for the year. Before 1854 the financial year ended on the 5th January. The date was altered in order to make the financial year correspond with the period for which supplies were taken.

(t) For the control which is exercised by the Treasury over the Admiralty and War Office, see Report from the Select Committee of the House of Commons on National Expenditure, 1902, House of Commons Paper, 387, Appendix No. 3; see also title REVENUE. For the method in which the annual estimates are prepared and the form in which they are arranged, see ibid., Appendix No. 1.

men to be maintained for each service, is submitted separately to the committee of supply (u).

The civil services estimates are divided into classes according to the character of the expenditure for which provision has to be made (a). Each class contains a series of votes showing the sum required for each department or service specified in the title of the vote. Each civil service vote is submitted separately to the committee of supply (b).

SECT. 3.
Public
Expenditure.

1437. Each vote in the estimates which are laid before the committee of supply contains: (1) an estimate of the amount required to be granted by Parliament for the purposes of the service to which the vote relates; (2) a list of the sub-heads under which the vote is to be accounted for by the department that is responsible for it; and (3) the details of each sub-head.

Form of vote.

1438. In addition to the ordinary estimates, which are submitted to the House of Commons as early as possible in each session, the various departments are often compelled to present further estimates for expenditure which was not foreseen at the time when the original estimates were prepared. Such supplementary or additional estimates, as the case may be, are presented to the House of Commons as soon as possible (c). If the original estimate for the department in question has not been already disposed of in committee of supply, the supplementary sum is incorporated with the sum remaining to be voted for that department; if, however, the original vote has been agreed to, the additional money required is voted separately. In either case, the sum voted for the purposes of the supplementary estimate is included with the other estimates in the Appropriation Act (d).

Supplementary estimates.

1439. Owing to the fact that the financial year ends on the 31st March, it is obviously impossible for the House of Commons, which usually does not meet until the middle of January or the beginning of February, to grant the whole of the annual supplies for the ensuing year before the 1st April. At the same time Ministers of the Votes on account.

(u) For the appointment and functions of this committee, see pp. 771, 772, post.

(a) The estimates for civil services for the year ending the 31st March, 1912, were divided into seven classes, namely, (1) public works and buildings; (2) salaries and expenses of civil departments; (3) law and justice; (4) education, science and art; (5) foreign and colonial services; (6) non-effective and charitable services; (7) miscellaneous.

(b) The amount which Parliament is asked to vote is the total estimated expenditure of the year, less the estimated amount of the appropriations in aid. These are sums of money which are received annually by various departments, either by the sale of publications, or of old or surplus stores, or by fees, fines etc. The amount estimated to be received for such appropriations in aid is stated in the estimate.

(c) Towards the close of the financial year circumstances generally arise which render it necessary for one or other of the Government departments to submit further supplementary estimates to Parliament. Such additional supplementary estimates are laid before the House of Commons as soon as it meets, and must receive the sanction of Parliament before the end of the financial year.

(d) See p. 775, post.

SECT. 3.
Public
Expenditure.

Crown must be supplied with money for the purpose of carrying on the government of the country. As a matter of practice, therefore, Parliament is obliged every year to grant in advance some of the money which is demanded by the Crown for the expenses of the various departments before the whole of the estimates for the year have been agreed to by the House of Commons. The ordinary procedure is for the House of Commons to grant the votes stating the number of men to be employed in the navy and the army, and one or two other votes on the estimates for each of these services, and a vote on account of each of the civil services and revenue departments' votes (e).

Excess grants.

1440. If a department exceeds in any year the amount of money which Parliament has allowed it to spend, it must obtain a vote of the House of Commons for such extra expenditure. This is obtained by means of an additional grant, called an excess grant, which should be sanctioned by Parliament as soon as possible after the excess of expenditure has been ascertained (f).

Votes of credit.

1441. Besides the supply grants of the session (g), Parliament is sometimes called upon to make other grants to the Crown. Occasions may arise when the Government may suddenly require money to meet an unlooked-for demand caused by some national emergency. In such cases, Ministers must obtain the necessary

(e) As a matter of practice in the early part of the year, the Admiralty and the War Office apply the money which has been granted to them in this way by the House of Commons to any navy or army service, and not necessarily to the particular vote, or votes, in their estimates for which the expenditure has been sanctioned; and see title REVENUE. The same practice is not applicable to the various departments of the civil service. Money which is granted on the vote for one civil service department is not available for another department of the civil service. A vote on account is necessary, therefore, for the maintenance of each of these departments during the first part of each financial year. In the event of a dissolution of Parliament before the business of supply has been completed, grants on account may be necessary for all the departments of the Government, including the Admiralty and the War Office, to enable them to carry on until the meeting of the new Parliament. The Admiralty and the War Office, after obtaining the sanction of the Treasury, have also the privilege of applying any savings which they may have effected upon certain votes towards making good any surplus expenditure that they may have incurred upon other votes, provided always that the total expenditure which has been sanctioned by Parliament for the navy or army services, as the case may be, is not exceeded. The application of these savings by the two departments is also subject to parliamentary control, because it must be sanctioned by a committee of the House of Commons which is specially set up for the purpose, and, after being agreed to by the House on report, receives legislative authority by a provision in the Appropriation Act; see p. 775, post.

(f) An excess grant must be voted in Committee of Supply; but, before the estimate for such a grant is presented to the House of Commons, the demand for the excess grant must be brought before the Public Accounts Committee (see p. 684, ante, and p. 777, post) and receive its sanction. In consequence of the privilege of using savings effected upon certain votes to defray surplus expenditure incurred upon other votes, which is enjoyed by the Admiralty and the War Office (see note (e), supra), an excess grant is seldom required by these two departments. If, however, the expenditure of either of these departments in the course of the year exceeds the total amount granted by Parliament, an excess vote to sanction such increased expenditure must be obtained.

(g) See pp. 768, 769, ante, and the text, supra.

funds from the House of Commons, but at the time it may be impossible to give any detailed estimate of the proposed expenditure. They are obliged, therefore, to ask the House to grant them a vote of credit for the total sum of money of which they are in need (h).

SECT. 3.
Public
Expenditure.

1442. The Crown also finds it necessary from time to time to demand from Parliament a definite sum of money for some particular purpose, either to meet the cost of some great national or Imperial undertaking which does not form part of the ordinary expenditure of the year (i), or to reward the services of some distinguished servant of the State (k), or to maintain the dignity and well-being of the Sovereign or a member of the Royal Family (l). In such cases the House of Commons is asked to make an exceptional or special grant to satisfy the object for which the money is required (m).

Exceptional or special grants.

(ii.) Procedure.

(1) Speech from the Throne.

1443. In the Speech from the Throne at the opening of each session of Parliament the Sovereign refers the estimates for the ensuing year to the consideration of the House of Commons, and it is the duty of that House to examine them and to grant the money which is required to carry on the government of the country.

Crown's demand for supplies in the Speech from the Throne.

(2) Committee of Supply and Committee of Ways and Means.

1444. As soon as the debate on the address in answer to the Speech from the Throne has been brought to a conclusion in the

Committees to deal with financial proposals.

(h) The last occasions when the Government of the day found it necessary to ask the House of Commons for votes of credit were in 1882, when Mr. Gladstone obtained £2,300,000 for the purpose of strengthening the forces in the Mediterranean (see Journals of the House of Commons, 1882, Vol. CXXXVII., p. 407); and in 1885, when the same Minister obtained a vote of credit for £11,000,000 at the time of the threatened trouble with Russia with regard to the Penjdeh incident (see Journals of the House of Commons, 1885, Vol. CXL., pp. 180, 200).

(i) E.g., the purchase of the Suez Canal shares by Mr. Disraeli's Government in 1875 (see Journals of the House of Commons, 1876, Vol. CXXXI., p. 53).

(k) E.g., the grants to Earl Roberts in 1901; to Viscount Kitchener in 1902; and to the Earl of Cromer in 1907 (see Journals of the House of Commons, 1901, Vol. CLVI., p. 352; 1902, Vol. CLVII., p. 261; 1905, Vol. CLXII., pp. 353—354).

(l) E.g., grant to the Prince of Wales in 1863 (see Journals of the House of Commons, 1863, Vol. CXVIII., p. 69).

(m) Demands for exceptional grants are brought to the notice of Parliament by means of a message from the Crown under the Sign Manual, which is conveyed to each House by a Cabinet Minister. In the House of Lords, an address is moved in reply to the gracious message stating the willingness of the House to concur in such measures as may be suitable to the occasion. In the House of Commons, no address is made in reply to the Royal message, but the demand for an exceptional grant is brought before the House either by a resolution proposed in a committee of the whole House appointed to sit on a future day, or by the presentation of an estimate in Committee of Supply. In some cases, an exceptional grant has been considered partly in a committee of the whole House set up for the purpose and partly in Committee of Supply. Grants voted in Committee of Supply are dealt with in the Appropriation Bill of the year (see p. 775, post); grants voted in a committee of the whole House, appointed for the purpose, are dealt with in a separate Bill; see May, Parliamentary Practice, 11th ed., pp. 555, 556.

SECT. 3.
Public
Expenditure.

House of Commons, two committees of the whole House are appointed to deal with the financial proposals of the year. The first of these committees is known as the Committee of Supply "to consider of the supply to be granted to His Majesty" (n); the second is called the Committee of Ways and Means "to consider of the ways and means for raising the supply to be granted to His Majesty" (o). Both of these committees are kept open until all the financial business of the session is brought to a conclusion (p).

Days appointed for Committees of Supply and Ways and Means.

1445. The Committee of Supply and the Committee of Ways and Means are appointed to sit on Mondays, Wednesdays and Thursdays, but either of the committees may also be appointed for any other day upon which the House meets for the dispatch of business. On Thursdays, unless the House otherwise orders upon a motion made by a Minister of the Crown, the business of supply is always the first order of the day.

Number of days in session allotted to business of supply.

1446. Twenty days before the 5th August in each session are now set apart for the consideration of the ordinary naval, military and civil services estimates for the year; but three more days may be allotted either before or after the 5th August (q).

(3) Procedure in Committee of Supply.

Motion for Committee
of Supply.

1447. Before the House goes into supply for the first time in any session either upon the estimates for the navy, the army, or the civil services, or for a vote of credit, the question must be proposed "That Mr. Speaker do now leave the chair?" to which an amendment may be proposed and a debate may be initiated upon the estimates for the service which it is proposed to consider in committee of supply. After the House, however, has once resolved itself into Committee of Supply upon any particular group of estimates, on any subsequent occasion when that group of estimates is to be taken in Committee of Supply, the Speaker leaves the chair upon the order of the day being read, without putting any question to the House (r).

(n) The work of the Committee of Supply is to consider the estimates for the year, which are submitted to it by the Ministers who represent the various departments of the Government in the House of Commons, and to vote the necessary money.

(o) Standing Orders of the House of Commons (Public Business), 1911, No. 14.

(p) If the Committee of Supply has been closed and subsequently it is found necessary by the Government to ask for further grants, it can only be re-opened by means of a second Speech from the Throne, or by a Royal message making a demand for further supplies, or by the presentation of an additional estimate.

(q) Standing Orders of the House of Commons (Public Business), 1911, No. 15. The days allotted do not include any day upon which the question has to be put that the Speaker do leave the chair, nor any day upon which the business of supply does not appear as the first order of the day. Days upon which estimates supplementary to those of a previous session are considered, or upon which any vote of credit or any financial proposal of the Government not forming part of the ordinary estimates, is taken, are not included amongst the twenty days.

(r) Standing Orders of the House of Commons (Public Business), 1911, No. 17; see May, Parliamentary Practice, 11th ed., p. 608; and see p. 665, ante.

1448. Discussion in Committee of Supply is subject to the same rules of debate as in any other committee of the whole House(s), and the general procedure of the Committee, except with regard to the manner in which amendments are put from the chair, is the same as that which is adopted in the House itself.

SECT. 3.
Public
Expenditure.

Debate.

1449. Notice of the estimates, and of the particular votes in the estimates which it is proposed to take in Committee of Supply, must be placed on the orders of the day, but otherwise the Government decide the order in which they will take the various estimates and the particular votes which they will submit to the consideration of the Committee (t).

Notice of estimates to be considered.

1450. Each vote of supply which is laid before the Committee is moved in the form of a resolution for a grant of money to the Sovereign, and must state both the amount which is demanded and the object for which it is required. When the question is proposed from the chair with regard to any such resolution, it is open to any member of the Committee to move an amendment either to reduce the amount of the whole grant or to leave out or to reduce any of the items which the estimate for it contains. It is not in order, however, for a member to propose an amendment which, if carried, would either increase in amount the sum which has been demanded or would alter the object for which it is intended.

Resolutions
in Committee
of Supply.

1451. When the sitting of the Committee of Supply is concluded either by the interruption of business under the standing orders (u), or by a motion to report progress, the Chairman leaves the chair and reports any resolutions to which the Committee has come, or reports progress (v). If the supply for the year is not concluded, he also asks that the Committee may have the leave of the House to sit again. Orders are then made appointing a day upon which the House will receive the report of any resolutions agreed to in the Committee and fixing a day for the next sitting of the Committee (w).

Interruption
of business
in Committee.

1452. The proceedings of the Committee of Supply are brought to a conclusion on the last day but one of the days allotted to supply. At 10 o'clock on that day the Chairman proceeds to put forthwith any questions necessary to dispose of the vote then under discussion in the Committee, after which he puts a series of questions for granting to the Crown the sums necessary to defray any charges outstanding (that is, not yet voted) in each class of the estimates for the civil services (x), and of the estimates for the navy and army (x), the revenue departments (x), and any special vote. In these

Close of sittings in Committee
of Supply.

(s) See pp. 710, 713, ante.

(t) In practice, the votes to be taken in committee are selected by the various parties in opposition for the time being.

(u) See p. 673, ante.

(v) See pp. 712, 713, ante.

(w) The agreement of the House with a resolution of the Committee of Supply is secured by means of a motion "That this House doth agree with the Committee in the said resolution?" A motion of this kind is made after the resolution in question has been read a second time and any amendments thereto in regard to the amount specified in the resolution have been disposed of.

(x) See p. 768, ante.

SECT. 3.
Public
Expenditure.

questions any supplementary sum or new service still not voted by the Committee is included.

On the last day allotted for supply, the Speaker at 10 o'clock first puts the questions necessary to dispose of the report of the resolution of the Committee of Supply then under discussion by the House, and then puts a series of questions by which the House is asked to agree with any outstanding reports from the Committee.

(4) Procedure in Committee of Ways and Means.

Function of
Committee.

1453. The effect of resolutions which have been passed by the Committee of Supply when they have been agreed to by the House is to authorise the expenditure proposed by the Government (y), but the task of making grants of money out of the Consolidated Fund (z) to meet the expenditure which has been sanctioned belongs to the Committee of Ways and Means.

When the House has resolved itself into Committee of Ways and Means, resolutions are brought forward by a Minister of the Crown asking the Committee to authorise the issue of the necessary grants of money out of the Consolidated Fund (z) to make good the supply which has been granted to the Crown.

As soon as these resolutions have been agreed to in the Committee of Ways and Means, they are reported to the House (a), and must be considered by the House on a subsequent day. After the resolutions have been agreed to by the House, an order is made for a Bill to be brought in to give legislative effect to them.

Budget.

1454. In addition to authorising grants out of the Consolidated Fund, it is the function of the Committee of Ways and Means to take into consideration and vote any taxes not already permanently imposed which the Government propose to provide for the necessary expenditure of the year. It is usually in this Committee, therefore, that the Chancellor of the Exchequer, as early as possible in each financial year, opens his Budget (b).

In his speech upon this occasion, the Chancellor of the Exchequer informs the Committee with regard to the financial results of the previous year, makes an estimate of the probable income and expenditure of the coming year, explains the intentions of the Government with regard to the continuance, the increase or the reduction, of existing taxes, and sets forth their proposals if they find it necessary to impose new taxes.

(y) Public Accounts and Charges Act, 1891 (54 & 55 Vict. c. 24), s. 2 (1).

(z) See pp. 767, 768, ante; and title REVENUE.

(a) If any resolutions of the Committee of Supply have been reduced by the House, or have not been agreed to, on report, when the resolution of the Committee of Ways and Means, based upon them, comes up for consideration by the House, a motion to amend the resolution of the Committee of Ways and Means must be made in order that the resolution, as finally agreed to by the House, may not exceed in amount the resolutions of the Committee of Supply to which the House has agreed.

(b) The word "Budget" is derived from the French "bougette" and Latin bulga (a small bag), used for the purpose of carrying papers or accounts. A statement, in the nature of the present Budget, has been made annually in the House of Commons since the Revolution of 1688.

1455. The financial proposals of the Government are carried in the form of resolutions moved by the Chancellor of the Exchequer or some other Minister in the Committee of Ways and Means. These resolutions require confirmation by an Act of Parliament and the assent of the Crown before they have the force of law, but, in order to safeguard the revenue and to prevent forestalment, any resolution for the imposition of a new tax or the renewal of an old one, or for the increase of a duty, is acted upon as soon as it has been agreed to by the Committee of Ways and Means (c).

SECT. 3.
Public
Expenditure.

Budget
resolutions.

(iii.) Consolidated Fund Bills.

1456. A Bill which has been introduced to give effect to resolutions of the Committee of Ways and Means (d) authorising the issue of money out of the Consolidated Fund is known as a Consolidated Fund Bill. One such Bill must be passed before the close of the financial year to authorise the necessary issues of money for the opening period of the ensuing financial year, and to make good any supplementary sums for the expiring financial year. Other Consolidated Fund Bills are passed from time to time during the course of the year if required by the exigencies of the public service.

Consolidated
Fund Bills.

As soon as a Consolidated Fund Bill has received the Royal Assent, the money which it authorises to be expended for the public service may be issued out of the Consolidated Fund (e).

1457. When all the supplies for the service of the financial year have been granted in Committee of Supply, and the necessary resolutions in Committee of Ways and Means have been agreed to by the House, a further Consolidated Fund Bill to authorise the issue from the Consolidated Fund of the sums still required and to appropriate all the supply granted during the session is passed, and is known as the Appropriation Act (f).

Appropriation
Bill.

(iv.) Finance Bills.

1458. When all the resolutions proposed by the Government for the imposition or alteration of taxes have been agreed to by the Committee of Ways and Means, they are reported to the House, and, when they have been agreed to by the House, an order is made for a Bill embodying them to be brought in.

Finance Bills.

The annual Finance Bill, which is introduced by the Chancellor of the Exchequer in pursuance of this order, contains practically all the financial arrangements of the year (g). In both Houses, the various stages of the Finance Bill are the same as those of any other public Bill, but, in the House of Commons, as the Bill is

(c) As to this practice, see, further, title REVENUE.

(d) See p. 774, ante.

(e) See, further, title REVENUE.

(f) In it are set out all the services for which grants have been agreed to by the House of Commons, and the amounts of such grants which are thus appropriated to them by the authority of Parliament, and also the sum of money authorised to be issued out of the Consolidated Fund; see, further, title REVENUE.

(g) This practice dates from 1861; see note (a), p. 793, post.

SECT. 3.
Public
Expenditure.

brought in upon a resolution agreed to in a committee for the grant of public money, no two stages of it may be taken on the same day, and it is not permissible for any member to propose an amendment on report or third reading, which, if carried, would augment the charges which have been agreed to in Committee of Ways and Means (h).

SUB-SECT. 3.—Passing into Law of Money Bills to which the House of Lords has not Agreed.

Power of the
House of Lords as to money Bills.

1459. If a money Bill (i), which has been passed by the House of Commons and sent up to the House of Lords at least one month before the end of the session, is not passed without amendment by that House within one month after it has received it, the Bill, unless the House of Commons directs to the contrary, is to be presented to the Sovereign for the Royal Assent, and is to become an Act of Parliament as soon as such Assent has been signified, notwithstanding the fact that it has not been agreed to by the House of Lords (k).

Speaker's certificate required to money Bills.

1460. Every money Bill when it is sent up to the House of Lords, and also when it is presented for the Royal Assent, must be indorsed with a certificate signed by the Speaker stating that the measure is in his opinion a money Bill (l). Before giving this certificate, the Speaker is required, if practicable, to consult two members of the House of Commons, who are nominated for the purpose from the Chairmen's panel (m) by the Committee of Selection (n) at the beginning of each session (o).

SUB-SECT. 4.—Public Accounts.

(i.) Control of Parliament.

Audit and examination of public accounts.

1461. The control of Parliament over the national finances does not cease when it has given its sanction in a legislative form to any expenditure of public money. The accounts of all the departments of the Government which are entrusted with the (h) See pp. 717, 719, ante.

(i) A "money Bill" is defined as a public Bill which, in the opinion of the Speaker of the House of Commons, contains only provisions dealing with all or any of the following subjects, namely:—the imposition, repeal, remission, alteration, or regulation of taxation; the imposition for the payment of debt or other financial purposes of charges on the Consolidated Fund, or on money provided by Parliament, or the variation or repeal of any such charges; supply; the appropriation, receipt, custody, issue or audit of accounts of public money; the raising or guarantee of any loan or the repayment thereof; or subordinate matters incidental to those subjects or any of them. The expressions "taxation," "public money," and "loan" respectively in this definition do not include any taxation, money, or loan raised by local authorities or bodies for local purposes (Parliament Act, 1911 (1 & 2 Geo. 5, c. 13), s. 1 (2)).

(k) Ibid., s. 1 (1). For the words of enactment in such a case, see ibid., s. 41 (1); and see title STATUTES.

(l) Parliament Act, 1911 (1 & 2 Geo. 5, c. 13), s. 1 (3).

(m) Compare note (d), p. 751, ante.

(n) See note (b), p. 751, ante.

(o) Parliament Act, 1911 (1 & 2 Geo. 5, c. 13), s. 1 (3).

spending of money must be audited and examined by the Comptroller and Auditor-General, whose duty it is to see that any money which has been granted by Parliament has been used for the purposes for which it was intended (p).

SECT. 3.

Public Expenditure.(ii.) Appropriation Accounts.

1462. Accounts showing the expenditure of the various departments for each financial year (called the Appropriation Accounts) must be submitted to the Comptroller and Auditor-General before the 30th November following the expiration of that financial year (q). That officer then draws up a report upon the accounts of each department, in which he calls attention to any irregularity which may have occurred.

Submission to Comptroller and Auditor-
General.

1463. When Parliament meets in the following January or February, these reports are presented to the House of Commons together with the Appropriation Accounts, and are then considered by a sessional committee called the Committee of Public Accounts, whose duty it is to examine the accounts and to report upon them to the House (r). It is also the duty of the Committee to consider proposed changes in the customary form of the estimates (s).

Submission of accounts to Public Accounts
Committee.

Part VII.—Privileges of Parliament.

SECT. 1.—Nature and Origin.

1464. The House of Lords and the House of Commons, which together constitute the High Court of Parliament, claim for their members, both collectively and individually, certain rights and privileges without which it would be impossible for either House to maintain its independence of action or the dignity of its position (t).

Necessity for claim to rights and privileges.

(p) As to the functions of the Comptroller and Auditor-General, see title REVENUE.

(q) As the account of the Exchequer issues for the year includes only the issues actually made in the year, so the appropriation account of a vote for any department for the year is charged only with the payments ordered within the year. Thus, if a salary is due or a purchase is made on or before the 31st March, but payment for it is not ordered until or after the 1st April, the service in question, although it belongs to the expired year, is charged to the new year.

(r) Standing Orders of the House of Commons (Public Business), 1911, No. 75. For the constitution and procedure of this committee, see p. 682, ante, and see title REVENUE.

(s) See the first Report from the Committee in 1867, House of Commons Paper (333), and the third Report in 1881, House of Commons Paper (350). Alterations in the form of the estimates should be restricted, therefore, to such re-arrangement as involves no question of principle, unless the committee is previously consulted; see the third Report from the Committee in 1888, House of Commons Paper (405), and also the first Report in 1890, House of Commons Paper (71).

(t) In the past, both Houses of Parliament have insisted upon privileges

SECT. 1.
Nature and Origin.

Nature of claim.

Origin.

1465. Each House is the guardian of its own privileges, and claims (1) to be the sole judge of any matter that may arise which in any way infringes upon them (u), and (2), if it deems it advisable, to punish, either by imprisonment or reprimand, any person whom it considers to be guilty of contempt (v).

1466. The privileges of Parliament are based partly upon custom and precedents which are to be found in the Rolls of Parliament and the Journals of the two Houses and partly upon certain statutes which have been passed from time to time for the purpose of making clear particular matters wherein the privileges claimed which they have now ceased to claim or of which they have been deprived by Act of Parliament, and each House has frequently asserted its privileges in a manner which has led to disputes with the other House. The action of the House of Commons in asserting its privileges has also constantly brought that House into collision with the courts of law. No attempt is made here to examine the rulings of the courts or to inquire into the arguments used either in favour of or against the claims of the Commons in the various leading cases dealing with this subject, except in so far as they help to throw light upon the privileges of Parliament as they exist at the present time. Although the position and extent of parliamentary privilege is difficult to define and its application must depend upon each case as it arises, the result of past cases may be summed up as establishing the following general principles, namely:—(1) that neither House of Parliament, in order to assert its privileges, has the right to do anything or cause anything to be done which is in contravention of the law of the land (see judgment of the House of Lords on a writ of error in Ashby v. White in 1704, Journals of the House of Lords, 1704, Vol. XVII., p. 369, also reported (1704), 3 Ld. Raym. 320, 1 Smith, L. C. 11th ed., 240; 1 Bro. Parl. Cas. 45, reversing S. C. (1703), 2 Ld. Raym. 938; see also Stockdale v. Hansard (1839), 9 Ad. & El. 1); (2) that the courts of law will not interfere in the interpretation of a statute by either House of Parliament so far as the regulation of its own proceedings within its own walls is concerned (see Bradlaugh v. Gossett (1884), 12 Q. B. D. 271, 281); and (3) that the courts of law will not admit any person to bail or inquire into the reasons for which he has been adjudged guilty of contempt and committed by either House, when the order or warrant upon which he has been arrested does not state the causes of his arrest; for in any such case it is presumed that the order or warrant has been duly issued, unless the contrary appears on the face of it (see Burdett v. Abbot (1811), 14 East, 150; Ex parte Van Sandau (1846), 1 Ph. 605).

(u) It is obviously impossible to give a complete or accurate list of offences which would be considered by either House of Parliament to constitute breaches of its privileges, but such offences may be summed up under the following heads, namely:—(1) Any act of disrespect to the House itself on the part of one of its members or by some person who is not a member; (2) an act of disrespect to, or an assault upon, an individual member of the House, or a reflection upon his character; (3) any interference with the procedure of the House or one of its committees; (4) any interference with an officer of the House, or other person employed by the House, in the performance of his duties; (5) a refusal to obey an order of the House or of one of its committees; or (6) an attempt to induce or procure another person to commit any such act.

(v) The power of the House of Lords to commit any person who is guilty of a breach of its privileges was questioned in the case of the Earl of Shaftesbury in 1675 and again in the case of Flower in 1779, but has always been admitted by the courts. The claim of the House of Commons to a similar power was expressly admitted by the House of Lords in a conference with the Commons in 1704, in Ashby v. White, supra; see Journals of the House of Lords, 1704, Vol. XVII., p. 714. Since then the right of the Commons has been established beyond dispute by usage and custom; see May, Parliamentary Practice, 11th ed., p. 64. As to procedure for enforcement of privilege, see pp. 790 et seq., post.

by either House of Parliament have come in contact either with the prerogatives of the Crown or with the rights of individuals (w).

SECT. 1.
Nature and Origin.

SECT. 2.—Classification.

SUB-SECT. 1.—In General.

1467. The privileges of Parliament may be conveniently treated under two main headings—(1) privileges which are common to both Houses, and (2) privileges which are peculiar either to the House of Lords or to the House of Commons. In general.

SUB-SECT. 2.—Privileges Claimed by both Houses.

1468. Whilst Parliament is sitting, and during the time within which the privilege of Parliament extends (x), no peer (y) or member Freedom from arrest.

(w) It is customary for the Speaker at the beginning of every Parliament to demand on behalf of the House of Commons the confirmation by the Crown of certain of its privileges, which the Sovereign, through the Lord Chancellor, formally confirms (see p. 694, ante; for the origin of this practice, see May, Parliamentary Practice, 11th ed., p. 60). The House of Lords appears to have enjoyed its privileges from the earliest times upon the ground that the lords "have place and voice in Parliament," and consequently the House does not demand the confirmation of its privileges by the Crown at the beginning of each Parliament. Neither House of Parliament has power to create a new privilege "not warranted by the known laws and customs of Parliament"; see the resolution of the Lords in 1704 upon this point, to which the Commons agreed (Journals of the House of Lords, 1704, Vol. XVII., p. 677; Journals of the House of Commons, 1704, Vol. XIV., pp. 555, 560). In the House of Lords, there are also various standing orders which limit and regulate the rights of peers to claim their privilege in certain cases; see Standing Orders of the House of Lords, Nos. 65, 66, 68, 69, 76, 77, 78, 79, 82, 83. As to the effect upon privilege of the commission of an act of bankruptcy, see title CONTEMPT OF COURT, ATTACHMENT, AND COMMITTAL, Vol. VII., p. 321.

(x) There is no statutory definition of the period during which the privilege of Parliament extends. By the privilege of the peerage (see title PEERAGES AND DIGNITIES), which rests upon ancient custom and has been recognised by various Acts of Parliament, the person of a peer "is for ever sacred and inviolable"; but, in addition to their privileges as peers, members of the House of Lords claim a special immunity from arrest as lords of Parliament. By Standing Orders of the House of Lords (Public Business), 1902, No. 64, this immunity extends whilst Parliament is sitting or within the usual times of privilege of Parliament. By Standing Orders of the House of Lords (Public Business), 1902, No. 67, in which the House of Lords claims the same immunity from arrest for the servants of peers, the period during which the privilege is to extend is declared to begin twenty days before the return of the writ of summons in the beginning of every Parliament and to continue twenty days before and after every session of Parliament, except in cases where Parliament has otherwise provided. In the case of the House of Commons, it has been held that a member cannot be arrested for a period of forty days before and after the meeting of Parliament (Goudy v. Duncombe (1847), 1 Exch. 430). It has also been held that a member is immune from arrest for a period of forty days even after the dissolution of the Parliament of which he was a member (see the case of Mr. Fortescue Harrison, M.P., Re Anglo-French Co-operative Society (1880), Times, 16th April, per HALL, V.-C.; compare May, Parliamentary Practice, 11th ed., p. 123). A member who is in custody at the time of his election to Parliament is liberated upon his election, in virtue of his privilege, unless he is undergoing a term of imprisonment for an indictable offence or for a criminal contempt of court; see Journals of the House of Commons, 1819, Vol. LXXIV., p. 44; 1820, Vol. LXXV., p. 230 (Phillips v. Wellesley (1830), 1 Dowl. 9).

(y) Privilege of Parliament is not allowed to peers whilst they are minors, or to noblewomen or widows of peers, but all such persons are entitled to the

SECT. 2.
 Classification.

Exemption from service on juries.

of the House of Commons may be imprisoned or restrained without the order or sentence of the House of Lords or House of Commons, as the case may be, unless it be for treason or felony, or for refusing to give security for the peace (a).

1469. Both Houses have always claimed that their members are exempt from serving upon juries (b), and a statutory exemption from such service has been definitely conferred upon peers and members privilege of peerage, except in the case of a widow of a peer who has married a commoner; see Standing Orders of the House of Lords (Public Business), 1902, No. 65. A peer is not entitled to the privilege of Parliament in a case in which he is acting as a trustee; see ibid., No. 66. Peers of Scotland and Ireland, even if they are not lords of Parliament, are entitled to the same privileges as lords of Parliament under the provisions of the Acts of Union; see note (k), p. 624, ante. A person who is under arrest at the time he succeeds to a peerage may claim his discharge on the plea of privilege. A peer who has not taken the oath, and is consequently disqualified for sitting or voting in the House of Lords, may claim his privilege from arrest; but see Journals of the House of Lords, 1720, Vol. XXI., p. 327. It would appear that the same rule applies in the case of a member of the other House; see European and American Finance Corporation v. M.P. (1865), 13 L. T. 447.

(a) Standing Orders of the House of Lords (Public Business), 1902, No. 79, directs that no peer or lord of Parliament has privilege against obedience to a writ of habeas corpus directed to him, and neither House of Parliament claims, or ever has claimed, freedom from arrest for any of its members who is charged with a criminal offence. In 1626 the Lords agreed to a resolution, which is now a standing order of the House, "That the privilege of this House is, that no peer of Parliament, sitting in Parliament, is to be imprisoned or restrained without sentence or order of the House, unless it be for treason or felony, or for refusing to give surety of the peace" (Journals of the House of Lords, 1626, Vol. III., p. 562). In 1675 the Commons agreed to a resolution of a similar character (Journals of the House of Commons, 1675, Vol. IX., p. 342); and in 1697 agreed to a further resolution "That no member of this House has any privilege in case of breach of the peace, or forcible entries, or forcible detainers" (Journals of the House of Commons, 1697, Vol. XI., p. 784). In 1763 both Houses agreed to a resolution "That privilege of Parliament does not extend to the case of writing and publishing seditious libels, nor ought to be allowed to obstruct the ordinary course of laws in the speedy and effectual prosecution of so heinous and dangerous an offence" (Journals of the House of Commons, 1763, Vol. XXIX., p. 689). A peer or member of the House of Commons may be committed for an offence under the Bankruptcy Act, 1883 (46 & 47 Vict. c. 52), s. 124, in spite of the privilege of Parliament (Re Armstrong, Ex parte Lindsay, [1892] 1 Q. B. 327; see also pp. 622, 658, ante), and may also be committed for a criminal or quasi-criminal contempt of court (Wellesley v. Beaufort (Duke), Long Wellesley's Case (1831), 2 Russ. & M. 639; see May, Parliamentary Practice, 11th ed., pp. 119—123; see title CONTEMPT OF COURT, ATTACHMENT, AND COMMITTAL, Vol. VII., pp. 320, 321). In any case, however, in which a member of either House has been arrested upon a criminal charge, the House of which he is a member should be informed of his arrest. This information is supplied to the House of Lords by means of a letter addressed by the magistrate by whom the member has been remanded in custody or committed. When a true bill for any felony or misprision of felony has been returned against a peer, information of the fact is supplied by the judge of the court in which such bill has been returned. As to the trial of a peer by his peers, see p. 653, ante. The House of Commons is similarly informed of the arrest of one of its members by means of a letter addressed to the Speaker. In the event of the condemnation of one of its members, the House is also informed in the same manner of the nature of his offence, and the duration of the sentence which has been imposed upon him; and see p. 657, ante, and pp. 787, note (s), p. 791, post.

(b) See 1 Hatsell, Precedents of Parliament, ed. 1818, pp. 112, 171, 174; see also the action taken by the House in the cases of Mr. Holford and Mr. Ellice, in 1826, Journals of the House of Commons, 1826, Vol. LXXXI., pp. 82, 87.

of the House of Commons and the officers of the two Houses of Parliament (c).

1470. Witnesses who appear to give evidence before either House of Parliament, or before any Parliamentary committee (d), and also counsel, solicitors, agents, and others who are engaged upon the business of Parliament (e), are protected from arrest or from any other form of molestation by the House upon whose business they are engaged (f).

SECT. 2.
Classification.

Protection of witnesses and others.

(c) Juries Act, 1870 (33 & 34 Vict. c. 77), s. 9, Sched.; see also title JURIES, Vol. XVIII., pp. 230, 231. Neither House any longer maintains for a member the privilege of refusing to obey a subpoena to appear as a witness in the courts of law; see 1 Hatsell, Precedents of Parliament, ed. 1818, pp. 96, 97, 169; compare May, Parliamentary Practice, 11th ed., p. 114. Each House, however, is careful to preserve its privilege upon this point in any case in which one of its members is required to give evidence before the other House of Parliament. In the House of Lords, there is a standing order which forbids any peer to go down to the House of Commons or send his answer in writing, or appear by counsel to answer any accusation there, upon penalty of being committed to the custody of the Black Rod or to the Tower; see Standing Orders of the House of Lords (Public Business), 1902, No. 71. The House has also maintained that a peer who is not a lord of Parliament need not obey a summons to attend the House of Commons; see Resolution of the House of Lords in the case of Lord Teignmouth, Journals of the House of Lords, 1806, Vol. XLV., p. 812. At the present time, when one House desires the attendance of a member of the other House as a witness either before the House itself or before one of its committees, the practice is to send a message requesting the House to which the member belongs to give leave to the member in question to give evidence. If the member is willing, leave is given to him to give evidence, and a message is sent to inform the other House of the fact. If either House desires an officer of the other House to appear as a witness before it, the same procedure is adopted, except that in such case the message which is returned by the House to which the officer belongs merely states that leave has been given to the officer in question to obey the wishes of the other House.

(d) Both Houses have the power to compel, if necessary, the attendance of witnesses (Gosset v. Howard (1847), 10 Q. B. 359, 411, Ex. Ch.). In the House of Lords a witness is summoned by means of an order signed by the Clerk of the Parliaments; in the House of Commons, by an order signed by the Clerk of the House. For the method of serving such an order and the proceedings which are taken in the event of a witness refusing to obey the order of either House, see May, Parliamentary Practice, 11th ed., pp. 424, 425.

(e) An officer of either House is protected from arrest within the precincts of the House to which he belongs. He is also protected when engaged upon the service of the House, and any interference with him when thus engaged will be punished as a breach of privilege. Nor will either House permit one of its officers to be served with a subpoena by any court to give evidence with regard to any proceedings in Parliament; or to be compelled to produce documents which are in the custody of the House until he has received its permission. Formerly, the privilege of Parliament used to attach to the personal servants of peers and of members of the House of Commons, and also to other persons acting as their agents or upon their behalf, and, consequently, no such persons might be arrested or otherwise molested whilst Parliament was sitting or during the time when the privilege of Parliament was in operation. This privilege was tacitly surrendered by the House of Commons in 1770, when an Act was passed to prevent any stay or delay in the prosecution of suits against peers, members of Parliament or their servants, by or under colour or pretence of any privilege of Parliament. A provision was inserted in this Act to the effect that the measure was not to subject the person of any member of the House of Commons to be arrested or imprisoned upon any suit or proceeding, but no such exception was made for the servants of members (Parliamentary Privilege Act, 1770 (10 Geo. 3, c. 50), s. 2).

(f) There is a sessional order of the House of Commons declaring that it is

SECT. 2.
Classification.

Freedom of speech.

Each House will also treat it as a breach of its privileges if legal proceedings are commenced or other action is taken against any person upon account of anything which he may have said, or evidence which he may have given, in the course of any proceedings in the House itself or before one of its committees (g).

1471. The privilege claimed by both Houses with regard to the freedom of speech in Parliament (h) is referred to elsewhere (i).

a high crime and misdemeanour for any person to tamper with a witness in respect of his evidence to be given before the House, and stating that the House will proceed with the utmost severity against any such offender. A further sessional order states that any witness who has given false evidence in any case before the House will be punished with the utmost severity. Every person also who threatens or in any way punishes, damnifies, or injures, or attempts to punish, damnify, or injure, any person who gives evidence before either House, unless such evidence was given in bad faith, is guilty of a misdemeanour under the Witnesses (Public Inquiries) Protection Act, 1892 (55 & 56 Vict. c. 64), s. 2. An action for libel will not lie against a person in respect of evidence given by him before either House of Parliament or before a committee of either House; see Goffin v. Donnelly (1881), 6 Q. B. D. 307; title LIBEL AND SLANDER, Vol. XVIII., pp. 678 et seq.

(g) See resolution of the House of Commons upon this subject in 1818 (Journals of the House of Commons, 1818, Vol. LXXXIII., p. 389).

(h) The freedom of the debates in the House of Lords from external interference or control has never been questioned. The Commons, as early as the reign of Henry IV., obtained a recognition from the Crown of the freedom of the proceedings in their House, when they succeeded in inducing that Sovereign to annul the judgment which had been passed in the previous reign against one of their number, named Haxey, who had been condemned as a traitor for introducing a Bill condemning the excessive expenditure incurred by Richard II. upon the Royal Household; see Rotuli Parliamentorum, Vol. III., s. 430. In the reign of Henry VIII., an Act of Parliament (stat. (1512) 4 Hen. 8, c. 8) was passed to declare null and void a judgment of the Stannary Court given against a member of the House of Commons named Strode, who had brought forward a Bill to regulate the tin industry in Cornwall and had been fined and imprisoned in consequence. Despite these successful assertions of the freedom of its proceedings, the privilege of the House in this respect was constantly attacked by the Tudor and Stuart kings, who chose to regard stat. (1512) 4 Hen. 8, c. 8, as a particular and not a general statute. The attitude of the Crown during this period was defined by the Lord Keeper in 1593, when, in confirming on behalf of Queen Elizabeth the Speaker's usual request for the privileges of the House, he said: "Liberty of speech is granted you, but you must know what privilege you have; not to speak everyone what he listeth, or what cometh in his brain to utter; but your privilege is 'aye' or 'no'"; see Parliamentary History, Vol. I., p. 862. In 1621 the Commons passed a resolution affirming "That every member hath freedom from all impeachment, imprisonment, or molestation, other than by censure of the House itself, for or concerning any Bill, speaking, reasoning, or declaring of any matter or matters touching the Parliament or Parliament business," but, in spite of this assertion of their privilege, the Crown continued to take notice of the proceedings in the House and to punish members for speeches which they had delivered in Parliament. After the Restoration, in 1667, the Commons carried a resolution declaring that stat. (1512) 4 Hen. 8, c. 8, was a general law extending to all members of both Houses of Parliament, and that it was "a declaratory law of the ancient and necessary rights and privileges of Parliament" (Journals of the House of Commons, 1667, Vol. IX., p. 19); and, by the Bill of Rights (1 Will. & Mar., sess. 2, c. 2, art. 9), they obtained a statutory guarantee that their debates and proceedings should not be questioned in any court or place outside Parliament. Subsequent to the

(i) For note (i) see next page.

SECT. 2.

Classification.Control over publication of
proceedings.

1472. It is within the power of either House of Parliament, should it deem it expedient, to prohibit the publication of its proceedings (k).

In the House of Lords, it is a breach of privilege (l) for any person to print or publish anything relating to the proceedings of the House without its permission.

The House of Commons, upon many occasions, has declared the publication of its proceedings without the authority of the House to be a breach of privilege, and the House has never formally rescinded the orders which, from time to time it has made with regard to this subject (m).

passing of the Bill of Rights, there were a few instances during the eighteenth century in which the privilege of the House of Commons with regard to freedom of speech was infringed, notably in the cases of the elder Pitt, who was dismissed from his cornetcy of horse in 1735, and of General Conway and Colonel Barré, who were deprived of their commands in 1764 for speeches delivered in the House of Commons against the Government of the day.

(i) See titles CRIMINAL LAW AND PROCEDURE, Vol. IX., p. 461; LIBEL AND SLANDER, Vol. XVIII., p. 683.

(k) The standing order of the House of Lords upon this subject dates from 1698; see Journals of the House of Lords, 1698-9, Vol. XVI., p. 391. The jealousy of the House of Commons with regard to the privacy of its proceedings dates from the Long Parliament, and was due to the antagonism which existed between that assembly and the King: The object of the House at that time was to prevent its own members or officers from supplying the King with information which might incriminate its members; see Resolutions of the House of Commons of the 13th July, 1641 (Journals of the House of Commons, 1641, Vol. II., p. 209). It was not until after the Revolution of 1689 that the House came in contact with unofficial reporters who furnished, for the news letters of the day, reports, often prejudiced and generally inaccurate, of the proceedings of the Commons. In 1738 the House passed a resolution stating that it was "an high indignity to, and a notorious breach of privilege of, this House, for any news writer, in letters or other papers (as minutes, or under any other denomination), or for any printer or publisher of any printed newspaper of any denomination to insert in the said letters or papers, or to give therein any account of the debates or other proceedings of this House or any committee thereof, as well during the recess, as the sitting of Parliament; and that this House will proceed with the utmost severity against such offenders" (Journals of the House of Commons, 1738, Vol. XXIII., p. 148; Parliamentary History, Vol. X., pp. 799-811). This resolution was repeated in 1753 and 1762; see Journals of the House of Commons, 1753, Vol. XXVI., p. 754; 1762, Vol. XXIX., pp. 206, 207. But, in spite of the attitude of the House, unofficial reports of the proceedings of the House of Commons were still published, and in 1771, during the disturbances caused by John Wilkes, the claim of the House to forbid the publication of its debates led to a struggle between the Commons and the City of London which, although it resulted in the committal to prison of the Lord Mayor and two aldermen, practically put an end to the attempts of the House of Commons to prevent the publication of its debates. For a historical summary with regard to the publication of debates, see Redlich, Procedure of the House of Commons, Vol. II., pp. 36-38.

(l) Standing Orders of the House of Lords (Public Business), 1902, No. 80. There has been a reporters' gallery in the House of Lords since the 15th October, 1831; see May, Parliamentary Practice, 11th ed., p. 73, n. Since 1889, an official reporter has been accommodated with a seat in the House itself immediately behind the clerks at the table. Since 1908 the official reporter has been employed in the direct service of the House; see Journals of the House of Lords, 1908, Vol. CXL., p. 285.

(m) Although, since 1835, when a gallery of the House was set apart for the use of the Press, it has tacitly permitted the presence of unofficial reporters at its debates; see May, Parliamentary Practice, 11th ed., p. 73, n. Since 1908 the debates of the House of Commons, like those of the other House, have

SECT. 2.
Classification.

At the present time, however, neither House will consider a report of its proceedings in a newspaper or other publication to be a breach of its privileges, unless such report is manifestly inaccurate or untrue (n).

Each House regards a report from any one of its committees as being strictly privileged, and will punish any person who publishes or causes to be published, any such report before it has been presented to the House (o).

Power to exclude strangers.

1473. Both Houses used to exercise a rigorous control with regard to the admission of strangers, and, by the custom of Parliament, no stranger is supposed to be present during the sittings of either House.

In the House of Lords, there is a standing order which prohibits any persons but those who have a right to be in the House to be present whilst the House is sitting (p); but this order is practically obsolete, as the House recognises the presence of strangers in another standing order, by which it permits them to remain in the galleries and the space within the rails of the Throne, even whilst a division is in progress (q).

The House of Commons also, as a rule, no longer attempts to prevent strangers from being present at its sittings. But the House is careful to preserve its privilege of maintaining the privacy of its debates, by empowering the Speaker or the Chairman if the House is in Committee, when he is in the chair, at any time to order the removal of strangers from any part of the House, and it is also open to any member of the House, during a sitting of the House or when the House is in committee, to take notice that strangers are present. In such a case the Speaker or the Chairman, as the case may be, must put the question "That strangers be been reported by reporters in the direct service of the House. The proceedings of each day are published on the following day.

(n) The proprietor of a newspaper is not liable for publishing a faithful report of a debate in Parliament in his newspaper; see Wason v. Walter (1868), L. R. 4 Q. B. 73, 89; title LIBEL AND SLANDER, Vol. XVIII., p. 698.

(o) See resolution of the House of Commons on this subject (Journals of the House of Commons, 1837, Vol. XCII., p. 282; compare May, Parliamentary Practice, 11th ed., pp. 74, 75, 416). All reports and proceedings of either House are also privileged in another way, inasmuch as any civil or criminal proceedings which have been commenced against any person for publishing any papers printed by order of either House of Parliament must be stayed upon the delivery of a certificate and affidavit to the effect that such publication was by order of either House of Parliament (Parliamentary Papers Act, 1840 (3 & 4 Vict. c. 9), s. 1; see title LIBEL AND SLANDER, Vol. XVIII., p. 683). It has been held that a person who without malice publishes an extract from a command paper (see note (l), p. 618, ante) presented to Parliament is protected by the Parliamentary Papers Act, 1840 (3 & 4 Vict., c. 9), against any action for libel in respect of such extract; see Mangena v. Wright, [1909] 2 K. B., 958.

(p) Standing Orders of the House of Lords (Public Business), 1902, No. 8. There are further standing orders which prohibit any doorkeeper attending the House from presuming to come or stay within the doors of the House while it is sitting, unless particularly ordered to do so, and forbidding any person, unless a nobleman or attendant of the House, from coming into the lobby or a committee room; see Standing Orders of the House of Lords (Public Business), 1902, Nos. 9, 10.

(q) Ibid., No. 32.

ordered to withdraw?" without permitting any debate or amendment (r). Strangers are allowed to remain in the galleries of the House whilst a division is taking place, but are required to withdraw from below the bar.

SECT. 2.
Classification.

1474. Every peer is an hereditary counsellor of the Sovereign, and as such may claim the right of individual access to the person of the Sovereign (s).

Right of access to the Sovereign.

The privilege of access to the Sovereign which is claimed for the House of Commons by the Speaker at the beginning of every Parliament (a) is a collective right, and enables the House as a body to accompany the Speaker whenever an address is presented to the Sovereign by the whole House (b), but does not enable an individual member to claim access to the Sovereign (c).

SUB-SECT. 3.—Privileges Peculiar to the House of Lords.

1475. Members of the House of Lords are entitled, either as lords of Parliament, or as peers of the realm, to certain privileges, namely:—

Privileges of peers.

(1) It is the right of peers to be tried in full Parliament, or, in case Parliament is not sitting, in the Court of the Lord High Steward, upon any charge of treason, felony, misprision of treason, or misprision of felony (d).

(2) The House claims that peers and lords of Parliament, whether they be plaintiffs or defendants, are to answer and be examined in all courts upon protestation of honour only, and not upon the common oath (e).

(3) No oath is to be imposed, by any Bill or otherwise, upon

(r) Standing Orders of the House of Commons (Public Business), 1911, No. 90. In 1908 the Speaker, in consequence of disturbances, caused the strangers' gallery and the ladies' gallery to be closed to the public, and these galleries were not reopened until the following year. Members are forbidden to introduce strangers into any part of the House or gallery appropriated to members of the House whilst the House or a committee of the whole House is sitting, and the Serjeant-at-Arms is empowered to take into his custody any stranger who is in any part of the House appropriated to members, or who misconducts himself in any part of the House to which he has been admitted, or refuses to withdraw when ordered to do so; see Standing Orders of the House of Commons (Public Business), 1911, Nos. 88, 89. For a summary of the attitude which has been adopted by the House of Commons with regard to the admission of strangers, see Redlich, Procedure of the House of Commons, Vol. II., pp. 34, 35.

(s) See First Report on the Dignity of a Peer of the Realm, 25th May, 1820, p. 14; see also Pike, Constitutional History of the House of Lords, pp. 251—254; see title CONSTITUTIONAL LAW, Vol. VI., p. 391.

(a) See p. 694, ante.

(b) See p. 694, ante, and p. 804, post.

(c) Individual members of the House of Commons have access to the person of the Sovereign, if they happen to be Privy Councillors or members of the Royal Household.

(d) Standing Orders of the House of Lords (Public Business), 1902, No. 72; see pp. 653, 654, ante; titles CONSTITUTIONAL LAW, Vol. VI., pp. 352, 354; COURTS, Vol. IX., pp. 19, 26; CRIMINAL LAW AND PROCEDURE, Vol. IX., p. 270.

(e) Standing Orders of the House of Lords (Public Business), 1902, No. 74; see p. 652, ante; but see title EVIDENCE, Vol. XIII., p. 592.

SECT. 2.
Classification.

Privileges of the House of Lords.

Voting by proxy.

peers the refusal to take which entails the loss of their places or votes in Parliament, or curtails the liberty of debate in the House of Lords (f).

1476. The House of Lords has successfully proved its right to insist upon a writ of summons being sent to any peer who is qualified to receive it (g), and the House has also established its right to decide, if it deems it advisable, whether or not a newly-created peer is entitled to sit and vote in the House of Lords (h); this latter privilege, however, does not empower the House to decide upon the validity of the claim of any person to a peerage which is already in existence or to a peerage which is in abeyance, unless such claim is referred to it by the Crown (i). The House of Lords has also power to decide various matters with regard to Scottish and Irish peerages (k).

1477. The privilege of voting in a division by proxy, of which in the past use was constantly made both by lords spiritual and lords temporal (l), although it has never been surrendered by the House of Lords, has not been exercised since 1868, when the House, acting upon the report of a committee appointed in the previous year, agreed to the adoption of a standing order by which the practice of calling for proxies on a division was discontinued (m).

(f) Standing Orders of the House of Lords (Public Business), 1902, No. 75.

(g) See the case of the Earl of Bristol in 1626, Journals of the House of Lords, 1626, Vol. III., p. 537. As to the right by which a peer receives a writ of summons to sit and vote in the House of Lords, see title PEERAGES AND DIGNITIES. As to the modern practice by which a peer proves his right to receive such a writ, see p. 623, ante.

(h) The House of Lords successfully asserted its privilege upon this point in 1856, when it refused to allow Sir James Parke, who had been created Baron Wensleydale "for and during the term of his natural life," to sit in the House of Lords. Upon this occasion, the letters patent creating the new peer were referred by the House to the Committee for Privileges, which reported "that neither the said letters patent, nor the said letters patent with the usual writ of summons, enable the grantee to sit and vote in Parliament." This report was agreed to by the House, after the Government of the day had intimated that they would not oppose its confirmation; see Journals of the House of Lords, 1856, Vol. LXXXVIII., pp. 38, 39; see also Parliamentary Debates (Third Series), Vol. CXL., pp. 1289—1311.

(i) A claim to a peerage or a request for the determination of a peerage in abeyance must be presented by means of a petition through the Secretary of State for the Home Department to the Crown. Any such claim, together with a report from the Attorney-General thereon, is usually presented by command of the Crown to the House of Lords. It is then referred by the House to the Committee for Privileges, which reports to the House whether or not the claim has been established; see p. 641, ante; see also Journals of the House of Lords, 1892, Vol. CXXIV., pp. 124, 141, 188; 207; 1900, Vol. CXXXII., pp. 387—389; see titles CONSTITUTIONAL LAW, Vol. VI., p. 457; PEERAGES AND DIGNITIES.

(k) See pp. 624, 626, ante.

(l) For a short account of the origin and history of voting by proxy, see Pike, Constitutional History of the House of Lords, pp. 243—245.

(m) Standing Orders of the House of Lords (Public Business), 1902, No. 34. The order provides that two days' notice shall be given of any motion for its suspension. Various standing orders are still in existence for the regulation and limitation of the use of proxies; see ibid., Nos. 104—110.

SUB-SECT. 4.—Privileges Peculiar to the House of Commons.

SECT. 2.

Classification.

Privilege of the Commons in relation to the constitution of their own body.

Power of expulsion.

1478. In addition to possessing a complete control over the regulation of its own proceedings and the conduct of its members (n), the House of Commons claims the exclusive right of providing, as it may deem fit, for its own proper constitution (o).

1479. Although the House of Commons has resigned its right to be the judge in controverted elections (p), it retains its right to decide upon the qualifications of any of its members to sit and vote in Parliament.

If in the opinion of the House, therefore, a member has conducted himself in a manner which renders him unfit to serve as a member of Parliament, he may be expelled from the House (q); but, unless the cause of his expulsion by the House constitutes in itself a disqualification to sit and vote in the House of Commons, it is open to his constituency to re-elect him (r).

The expulsion of a member from the House of Commons is effected by means of a resolution, submitted to the House by means of a motion upon which the question is proposed from the chair in the usual way (s).

(n) See Bradlaugh v. Gosset (1883), 12 Q. B. D. 271; Burdett v. Abbot (1811), 14 East, 1, 148; Bradlaugh v. Erskine (1883), 47 L. T. 618. For the rules which regulate the procedure of debate and for the powers which the House confers upon the Speaker and the Chairman, as the case may be, to maintain order in the House or in a committee of the whole House, see pp. 678—681, ante. For the privileges claimed by the House of Commons with regard to the control of taxation and public expenditure generally, see pp. 792—794, post.

(o) Formerly, the House used to claim an exclusive right to decide all matters touching the election of its own members, and used itself to be the judge in all controverted elections, but, in 1868, it delegated its authority in these matters to the courts of law. A petition against the return of a member to the House of Commons is presented to the High Court of Justice, and the case is tried in the borough or county in which the election took place, in England by two judges of the High Court, in Scotland by two judges of the Court of Session, and in Ireland by two judges of the High Court; see Parliamentary Elections Act, 1868 (31 & 32 Vict. c. 125), as amended by the Parliamentary Elections and Corrupt Practices Act, 1879 (42 & 43 Vict. c. 75), s. 2; Corrupt and Illegal Practices Prevention Act, 1883 (46 & 47 Vict. c. 51), s. 70, and the Expiring Laws Continuance Acts (see Expiring Laws Continuance Act, 1911 (1 & 2 Geo. 5, c. 22)). For the method of procedure, see title ELECTIONS, Vol. XII., pp. 408—483. With respect to the rota of judges, see also Judicature Act, 1881 (44 & 45 Vict. c. 68), s. 13.

(p) See note (o), supra.

(q) Members have been expelled from the House of Commons upon various grounds, e.g., as being rebels, or as having been guilty of forgery, of perjury, of misappropriation of public money, of corruption in the administration of justice or in public offices, or in the execution of their duties as members of the House, or of contempts and other offences against the House itself; see May, Parliamentary Practice, 11th ed., pp. 56—58.

(r) See the case of John Wilkes in 1769, Journals of the House of Commons, 1769, Vol. XXXII., pp. 228, 229. Compare also the case of Mr. Bradlaugh in 1882, when no question as to the validity of his election was raised upon his re-election to the House by the electors of Northampton after his expulsion from the House of Commons; see Journals of the House of Commons, 1882, Vol. CXXXVII., p. 62.

(s) In a case in which a member has been tried and convicted for a misdemeanour in a court of law, the judge who presided at the trial and gave

SECT. 2.

Classification.Power to fill vacant seat.Power to fill vacancy caused by member becoming insane.

1480. When, during the course of a session, a seat in the House of Commons becomes vacant by reason of the death (t) or expulsion (u) from the House of one of its members, or of his accession to the peerage, or of his acceptance of an office of profit under the Crown (v) or other office which disqualifies him from continuing to sit or vote in the House of Commons, the House, upon motion made (w), orders the Speaker to issue his warrant empowering the Clerk of the Crown in Chancery, or the Clerk of the Crown and Hanaper in Ireland, as the case may be, to make out a new writ to fill the vacancy (x).

1481. When a vacancy is caused owing to a member of the House being placed in a lunatic asylum, the Speaker, as soon as he receives the usual certificate informing him of the fact (y), sends it to the Commissioners in Lunacy (a), whose duty it is to furnish him with two reports as to the mental condition of the member in question, the first at the date of the receipt of the certificate by the Speaker, the second after the lapse of six months.

If the second of these reports is to the effect that the member is still of unsound mind, it is the duty of the Speaker to lay it upon the table of the House and to issue his warrant directing the Clerk of the Crown in Chancery, or the Clerk of the Crown and Hanaper sentence informs the Speaker by letter of the offence for which the member has been convicted, and of the term of imprisonment to which he has been sentenced. The Speaker, as soon as possible, informs the House of the receipt of this letter, and a motion is then made that an humble address be presented to His Majesty praying him to give directions for a copy of the record of the trial to be laid before the House. On some subsequent day the letter addressed to the Speaker by the judge is taken into consideration by the House, after which a motion is made for the expulsion of the convicted member. As to informing the House of the arrest of a member, see note (a), p. 780, ante.

(t) See p. 662, ante.

(u) See p. 787, ante.

(v) See p. 662, ante.

(w) A motion of this kind is usually made by one of the whips of the party to which the late member belonged. No notice in ordinary cases is required for such a motion, which may be made immediately after prayers on any sitting day, or as soon as private business has been disposed of, or at the conclusion of questions to members; as to these stages, see pp. 673—677, ante. If the vacancy has been caused, however, as a result of a report from the judges appointed to try an election petition (see note (o), p. 787, ante), notice of a motion to move for the issue of a new writ has usually been required, a sessional order being made for the purpose; and, in cases where notorious bribery and corruption have been shown to exist, the issue of a new writ has constantly been suspended by the House to enable the institution of further inquiries and, if necessary, the disfranchisement of the constituency; see May, Parliamentary Practice, 11th ed., pp. 660—662. The investigation of corrupt practices in an election is entrusted to a commission of inquiry which is appointed by the Crown upon an address from both Houses of Parliament (Election Commissioners Act, 1852 (15 & 16 Vict. c. 57), s. 1; see title ELECTIONS, Vol. XII., pp. 463—472).

(x) See title ELECTIONS, Vol. XII., pp. 257 et seq. At the beginning of every new session, the Speaker is required to appoint, for the duration of the Parliament, certain members of the House to execute his duties with regard to the issue of writs in the event of his death, vacation of seat, or absence from the country. The members thus appointed must not exceed seven nor be fewer than three in number (Recess Elections Act, 1784 (24 Geo. 3, sess. 2, c. 26), s. 5).

(y) See p. 656, ante.

(a) For the Commissioners in Lunacy, see title LUNATICS AND PERSONS OF UNSOUND MIND, Vol. XIX., pp. 466, 467.

in Ireland, as the case may be, to issue a writ for the election of a new member (b).

SECT. 2.
Classification.

1482. During a prorogation or adjournment of the House the Speaker may issue his warrant empowering the Clerk of the Crown in Chancery, or the Clerk of the Crown and Hanaper in Ireland, as the case may be, to make out a writ for the election of a new member in the following circumstances (c):—

Power to fill vacant seat during prorogation or adjournment.

When a vacancy is caused by the death of a member, or by his accession to the peerage, or by his acceptance of an office which necessitates his resignation of his seat in the House of Commons (d), during a prorogation or an adjournment, the fact is brought to the notice of the Speaker by means of a certificate, signed by two members of the House and sent to the Speaker, requesting him to issue his warrant authorising the making out of a writ for the election of a new member.

Upon the receipt of a certificate of this kind, the Speaker may issue the necessary warrant, subject to the following restrictions and conditions, namely: (1) the warrant must not be issued until six days after the Speaker has caused notice of the receipt of the certificate to be published in the London Gazette; (2) the return of the writ of the late member must have been brought into the office of the Clerk of the Crown in Chancery at least fifteen days before the end of the last preceding sitting day of the House; (3) sufficient time must be allowed by the applicants for the issue of a new writ to allow of its being issued before the day appointed for the next meeting of the House; (4) the Speaker's warrant must not be issued if a petition was pending against the election of the late member at the time when the House was adjourned or prorogued; and (5) in the case of a vacancy caused by the acceptance of office, the member who accepts such office must notify his acceptance thereof to the Speaker either in writing under his hand or by countersigning the certificate which is sent to the Speaker.

When, during a prorogation or an adjournment, a vacancy is caused by reason of a member being adjudged a bankrupt, the usual certificate is sent to the Speaker by the court (e), upon the receipt of which the Speaker must cause notice of it to be published in the London Gazette, and, after six days from the date of such publication, unless the House meets before the expiration of (b) Lunacy (Vacating of Seats) Act, 1886 (49 & 50 Vict. c. 16). It would appear that the Speaker can only issue his warrant for the making out of a new writ under the provisions of this Act whilst the House is sitting; see May, Parliamentary Practice, 11th ed., pp. 637, 638).

(c) Recess Elections Act, 1784 (24 Geo. 3, sess. 2, c. 26); Election of Members during Recess Act, 1858 (21 & 22 Vict. c. 110), as amended by the Elections in Recess Act, 1863 (26 & 27 Vict. c. 20); and see the text, infra.

(d) A new writ cannot be issued during a recess, if a member vacates his seat during such recess by reason of his acceptance of any one of the following offices, namely, the office of steward or bailiff of His Majesty's three Chiltern Hundreds of Stoke Desborough and Burnham, or of the manor of East Hendred, or of the manor of Northstead, or of the manor of Hempholme, or of escheator of Munster (Election of Members during Recess Act, 1858 (21 & 22 Vict. c. 110), s. 4).

(e) See title BANKRUPTCY AND INSOLVENCY, Vol. II. p. 88, note (s).

SECT. 2.
Classification.

this period, he may issue his warrant for the making out of a new writ (f).

SECT. 3.—Procedure for Enforcement of Privilege etc.

In general.

1483. The procedure with which the two Houses enforce a due observance of their privileges and punish any breach of them is practically the same (g).

When any alleged breach of its privileges is reported to either House, it is the practice of the House whose privileges have been attacked to send for the offender to answer the charge of contempt.

Procedure
in the House
of Lords.

1484. In the House of Lords, an order is usually made by the House for the person charged with the breach of privilege to attend at the bar of the House (h). If he refuses to attend, a further order is made for him to be attached by the Gentleman Usher of the Black Rod (i) and to be kept in that officer's custody until the House makes a further order with regard to him. When the offender is brought to the bar, he is examined by the Lord Chancellor and is dealt with as the House may direct. He may be either committed to the custody of the Gentleman Usher of the Black Rod (k) or reprimanded and discharged upon payment of fees.

Procedure in
the House
of Commons.

1485. In the House of Commons, an order is made by the House for the offender to attend at the bar of the House to answer the charge of contempt (l). If he refuses to obey, a further order is made empowering the Speaker to issue a warrant to the Serjeant-at-Arms giving authority to him to bring the offender in (f) Bankruptcy Act, 1883 (46 & 47 Vict. c. 52), s. 33; Bankruptcy Frauds and Disabilities (Scotland) Act, 1884 (47 & 48 Vict. c. 16), s. 6; Bankruptcy (Ireland) Amendment Act, 1872 (35 & 36 Vict. c. 58), ss. 42, 43, 44.

(g) As to such punishment, see title CONTEMPT OF COURT, ATTACHMENT, AND COMMITTAL, Vol. VII., pp. 318 et seq.; see also May, Parliamentary Practice, 11th ed., p. 63.

(h) The order, which is signed by the Clerk of the Parliaments, is merely a summons to the offender, and does not state the nature of the breach of privilege which he has committed.

(i) The House of Lords may commit an offender either for a definite or indefinite period, and, in neither case, is a prisoner who has been committed by the House released by a prorogation of Parliament; see 1 Anson, Law and Custom of the Constitution, 4th ed., p. 232. The courts will not discharge a person, who has been imprisoned by the House of Lords, by a writ of habeas corpus (R. v. Flower (1799), 8 Term Rep. 314; see title CROWN PRACTICE, Vol. X., pp. 48, 52). Both Houses used formerly to impose fines upon offenders in addition to committing them to prison; see May, Parliamentary Practice, 11th ed., pp. 91–93. The last instance in which the Commons imposed a fine was in the case of Thomas White in 1666; see Journals of the House of Commons, 1666–7, Vol. VIII., p. 690.

(k) The House of Lords will not allow any interference with its officers or other persons entrusted with the carrying out of its orders, and upon several occasions has punished for contempt persons who have attempted to do so, or who have taken action against an agent of the House for the performance of duties entrusted to him by the House; see Journals of the House of Lords, 1827, Vol. LIX., pp. 199, 206.

(l) If the person whose conduct has been complained of is a member of the House, he is ordered to attend in his place.

custody to the bar (m). When the offender appears at the bar he is examined by the Speaker and is dealt with as the House may direct (n). He may be either sent to prison (o) or discharged after receiving a reprimand or admonition from the Speaker (p).

SECT. 3.
Procedure
for Enforcement of Privilege
etc.

Part VIII.—Relations between the Houses of Parliament.

SECT. 1.—In General.

1486. Under any Constitution which recognises two independent Houses of Parliament, each enjoying distinct powers and privileges, circumstances sometimes must arise to cause disagreement between the two branches of the Legislature. Without attempting to inquire into the political and social causes which from time to time have led to disputes between the House of Lords and the House of Commons, and have materially affected the relative positions of the two Houses (q), it is sufficient here to deal with the principal matter

Differences of opinion between the two Houses.

(m) Under the Speaker's warrant a house may be broken open in order to effect an arrest (Burdett v. Abbot (1817), 5 Dow, 165, H. L.), but the officers of the House acting upon such warrant have no right to remain in a house after they have searched it (Howard v. Gossett (1842), Car. & M. 380). Any resistance to the Serjeant-at-Arms in the execution of his duties is treated by the House as a breach of its privileges, and the person who resists may be punished for contempt. The civil authorities must assist the Serjeant-at-Arms when he is entrusted with the Speaker's warrant to take any person into custody; see May, Parliamentary Practice, 11th ed., pp. 66, 67. If an action is brought against the Serjeant-at-Arms for any act which he may have done by order of the House, the matter is reported to the House, and an order is usually made giving the Serjeant-at-Arms leave to plead and defend the action; see Lines v. Russell (Lord C.) (1852), 19 L. T. (o. s.) 364, Journals of the House of Commons, 1852, Vol. CVII., pp. 64, 68, and Bradlaugh v. Gosset (1884), 12 Q. B. D. 271; Journals of the House of Commons, 1883, Vol. CXXXVIII., pp. 364, 370.

(n) If the offence is a slight one, the House sometimes resolves to proceed no further in the matter: in such a case, the resolution of the House is communicated to the offender by the Speaker, and he is discharged from further attendance without receiving a reprimand.

(o) During the session the courts will not discharge, by a writ of habeas corpus, a member or any other person who has been committed by the House for a breach of privilege (Brass Crosby's Case (1771), 2 Wm. Bl. 754; R. v. Hobhouse (1820), 2 Chit. 207); nor can the courts bail any person who has been thus committed (Murray's Case (1751), 1 Wils. 299). When a person is sent to prison by the House of Commons as a punishment for contempt, no period of imprisonment is fixed by the House. As a rule, the offender is kept in prison until he presents a petition praying for his release and expressing his regret for his behaviour to the House. He is then brought to the bar of the House, and discharged after receiving an admonition from the Speaker. A prorogation of Parliament has the effect of releasing immediately any person who has been imprisoned upon an order of the House of Commons. At the present time, no order is made by the House for the payment of fees by an offending person, unless the circumstances of the case are exceptional.

(p) In former times, the offender used to kneel whilst receiving a reprimand from either House, but this is no longer the practice.

(q) See Redlich, Procedure of the House of Commons, Vol. II., pp. 79—88; May, Parliamentary Practice, 11th ed., pp. 436—443.

SECT. 1.
In General.

which has led to differences of opinion between the two branches of the Legislature, and has largely influenced the procedure of Parliament namely, the control of public money.

The Parliament Act, 1911 (r), has considerably altered the position of equality in matters of legislation which previously existed between the two Houses, by furnishing a statutory remedy in favour of the House of Commons in cases of disagreement with the other House. But although that Act (r) has made it possible in certain circumstances for a Bill which has been passed by the House of Commons to become law in the course of a single Parliament without having been agreed to by the other House, yet, it must be borne in mind that the Act only affects the established procedure of Parliament in cases where an absolute deadlock has occurred between the two Houses, and expressly states that none of its provisions shall diminish or qualify the existing rights and privileges of the House of Commons (s).

The following paragraphs, therefore, state the privileges to which reference is made, and explain the attitude of the House of Lords and the practice of Parliament with regard to them (t).

SECT. 2.—Control of Public Money.

Editorial
note.

1487. [NOTE.—It would be inappropriate to the purpose of this Work to enter controversially into the political and historical question of the right of the House of Lords to deal with finance in any way whatever. Until the preamble of the Parliament Act, 1911 (r), is acted upon, one must wait to see whether the interference of the House of Lords may be authorised in any way.—HALSBURY.]

Privileges claimed by
House of Commons
with regard to control of public money.

1488. The privileges which the House of Commons claims with regard to the control of public money may be summed up under the following heads, namely :—

(1) That the Commons grant demands for money made by the Crown, and consequently that all Bills for granting aids and supplies to the Crown must originate in the House of Commons (u) ;

(r) 1 & 2 Geo. 5, c. 13; as to the provisions of which with regard to the curtailment of the powers of the House of Lords, see pp. 722, 776, ante.

(s) Parliament Act, 1911 (1 & 2 Geo. 5, c. 13), s. 6.

(t) See the text, infra, and pp. 793, 794, post.

(u) In the early days of parliamentary government, each estate of the realm used to make its own grant when an aid was demanded by the Crown (see 3 Hatsell, Precedents of Parliament, ed. 1818, pp. 95—97). The clergy continued to tax themselves in convocation until 1664, but from an early date the Lords and Commons appear to have made their grants jointly, and in the reign of Richard II. grants made to the King are already described as grants made by the Commons with the assent of the Lords (see Pike, Constitutional History of the House of Lords, p. 339). In the following reign, as a result of a dispute between the Lords and Commons, the doctrine that supplies should be granted to the Crown by the Commons with the assent of the Lords was definitely agreed to by the King (see the document entitled Indemnity of the Lords and Commons, 1407, Rotuli Parliamentorum, Vol. III., p. 611). From this time onwards the Commons constantly asserted that the right to grant supplies to

(2) That it is the sole right of the Commons to impose and remit taxes, and to frame Bills of supply in such a way as to secure their right to grant aids and supplies to the Crown in such manner, measure and time, as may seem advisable to them ; and consequently that the Lords ought not to amend or alter any grant which has been made by the Commons (a) ;

SECT. 2.
Control of Public
Money.

the Crown was their privilege. As early as 1581 the Journals of the House show that the Commons claimed that a subsidy Bill was on a different footing to any other Bill, and that it was their privilege that a Bill of this description should be sent back to the House of Commons after it had been passed by the Lords in order that it might be brought up by the Speaker to receive the Royal Assent (see Journals of the House of Commons, 1581, Vol. I., p. 136). In 1628 the Commons succeeded in establishing a distinction between the preamble of such Bills and other Bills, which has continued ever since. In that year the House of Commons appointed a committee to draw up the preamble to a Bill for granting a subsidy to the King, and the words "Most Gracious Sovereign, we your Majesty's most faithful Commons have given and granted to your Majesty" were agreed upon by the House. The Lords took exception to this form of preamble, and a conference upon the subject was held between the two Houses, but eventually the House of Lords passed the Bill without altering the preamble (see Journals of the House of Lords, 1628, Vol. III., pp. 858, 860, 862, 879; Journals of the House of Commons, 1628, Vol. I., pp. 910, 914, 919). Immediately after the Restoration, the Commons took the earliest opportunity of reasserting their privilege in this matter (see Journals of the House of Commons, 1660, Vol. VIII., pp. 98, 101).

(a) During the course of the seventeenth and eighteenth centuries there are numerous instances of disputes between the two Houses with regard to amendments made by the Lords to Bills of supply and Bills imposing taxes upon the people. (For a summary of the Bills which were the subjects of such disputes, see Report from the Select Committee of the House of Commons on Tax Bills, 1860, Appendix, Part I., sect. A, pp. 4—38, House of Commons Paper (414)). With few exceptions, it would appear that the Commons invariably insisted upon reserving to themselves an exclusive power over such Bills by not admitting the right of the Lords either to amend in any way, or to alter the mode of collecting, any charge agreed upon by the House of Commons. Thus, in 1671, when the Lords amended a Bill for placing an imposition on foreign commodities, the Commons refused to accept the amendments and unanimously resolved that in all aids given to the Crown by the Commons the rate or tax ought not to be altered by the Lords (see Journals of the House of Commons, 1671, Vol. IX., p. 235). Again, in 1678, when the Lords inserted some amendments in a supply Bill for disbanding the forces, the Commons carried three resolutions which, after reasserting their claims that all aids and supplies to the Crown were the sole gift of the House of Commons and that all Bills for granting such aids and supplies should originate in that House, declared that no grant made by the Commons ought to be changed or altered by the House of Lords (see Journals of the House of Commons, 1678, Vol. IX., p. 509). In 1689 the Lords altered a Bill for collecting a duty upon coffee and chocolate by inserting an amendment for the abatement of the proposed duty, but the Commons refused to accept the amendment and resolved "that they had always taken it for their undoubted privilege (of which they have ever been jealous and tender) that in all aids given to the King by the Commons the rate or tax ought not to be in any way altered by the Lords" (see Journals of the House of Commons, 1689, Vol. X., pp. 236, 238, 239, 242). The Commons insisted upon the application of the same rule in 1693, when the Lords amended a land tax Bill by inserting a provision that the rates or taxes to which peers were liable under the Bill should be received by collectors nominated by themselves. The Commons disagreed to the amendment upon the ground that, as it was their privilege not only to grant supplies to the Crown, but also to limit any grant they might make in such way as they deemed fit, the action of the Lords in amending a tax Bill was a manifest invasion of their rights (see Journals of the House of Commons, 1692-3, Vol. X.,

SECT. 2.
Control of Public
Money.

Attitude of the House of Lords with regard to measures of finance.

(3) That no public Bill containing provisions which would involve the imposition of a charge upon the people by way of taxes or rates should be introduced in the House of Lords (b) ; and

(4) That the Lords ought not to amend or alter any legislative proposal which is contained in any public Bill sent up for their concurrence by the Commons in such a way as to alter the amount of any charge upon the people, or the mode of levying it, or its duration, distribution, management, or collection (c).

1489. At the present time, the House of Lords in practice tacitly admits the privilege claimed by the House of Commons with regard

p. 780). Finally, in 1860, after the Lords had rejected the Paper Duties Repeal Bill, the Commons agreed to resolutions in which they again asserted their privileges with regard to the initiation and framing of Bills dealing with taxation and supply (see Journals of the House of Commons, 1860, Vol. CXV., p. 360). In 1861 the Commons adopted the practice, which has since been invariably followed, of presenting the whole of the financial proposals for the year in one Bill instead of in several measures, thus rendering it extremely difficult for the Lords to amend the financial arrangements agreed to by the Commons without rejecting the whole Budget for the year; see p. 795, ante.

(b) In the reign of Charles II., whilst the controversy with regard to Bills of supply and Bills to impose taxation was in progress between the two Houses, the question was first raised whether other Bills which did not fall strictly into either of the above categories, but some of the provisions of which would impose a charge upon the people, could originate in the House of Lords. Thus, in 1661, the Commons laid aside a Bill for paving, repairing or amending the streets and highways of Westminster, which was sent to them by the Lords, because the Bill would lay a charge upon the people, and they conceived that it was their privilege that a Bill of that nature ought to originate in their House (see Journals of the House of Commons, 1661, Vol. VIII., p. 311). Again, in 1665, the Commons adopted a similar course with regard to a Bill for regulating and ordering of buildings and for amending of highways in towns, stating as their reason for so doing that as the Bill was to impose and continue a tax upon the people it ought to have begun in their House (see Journals of the House of Commons, 1664-5, Vol. VIII., p. 602). From this time onwards the Commons have always maintained that all Bills which would operate as a charge upon the people ought, like Bills of supply, to originate in their House. Their practice, therefore, has been to lay aside such Bills, though, in cases where the Bills have appeared to them desirable, they have often ordered a Bill similar to the one they laid aside to be introduced in their House. With regard to private Bills, however, the Commons have defined by standing orders certain cases in which they will not insist upon their privileges; see p. 798, post.

(c) Whilst admitting the right of the Lords to amend any provision in a public Bill, although the measure in question may incidentally impose a charge upon the people, when such provision does not refer to such charge, the Commons have consistently denied to the Lords the right of altering or amending any provision in such Bill when it actually refers to the charge, or to the mode of levying it, or to its duration or distribution, or to the management or collection of it. The right of the Lords to reject a Bill (see pp. 795, 796, post) which they cannot amend without infringing the privileges of the Commons would appear also to enable them to reject the financial provisions in a Bill, if such provisions are rejected as a whole; see remarks of Earl Grey and Viscount Eversley on this point, the 30th July, 1867 (Parliamentary Debates, Vol. CLXXXIX., Third Series, pp. 415—417). For a summary of Bills with regard to which the question of the right of the Lords to amend financial provisions was raised, see Report from the Select Committee of the House of Commons on Tax Bills, 1860, Appendix, Part II., sect. A, pp. 49—59, House of Commons Paper (414).

SECT. 2.
Control of Public
Money.

to the control of public money so far as it relates to the right of that House to initiate and settle the provisions of Bills which impose charges upon the people or make grants of public money—that is to say, Bills of supply, or Bills to impose or remit taxes, or Bills for the appropriation of supplies (d)—and no such Bills, therefore, are introduced in the House of Lords or amended by that assembly.

The House, however, can reject or postpone (e) any such Bill

(d) In the seventeenth and eighteenth centuries there were frequent disputes between the two Houses with regard to the exclusive control claimed by the House of Commons over the granting and appropriation of supply. The House of Lords claimed, and adduced precedents to prove, its right to a share in the control of the national finances. In the year 1628, when the Lords complained that the Commons had altered the form of the preamble to a subsidy Bill (see note (u), p. 793, ante), they requested that the old form of preamble should be used, because “as the Commons give their subsidies for themselves, and for the representative body of the kingdom, so the Lords have the disposition of their own” (see Journals of the House of Lords, 1628, Vol. III., p. 860), and, although they subsequently passed the Bill without altering the preamble, they appear to have asserted their privilege with regard to it by not returning it to the Commons to be carried up to receive the Royal Assent by the Speaker, to which much exception was taken by the Commons (see Journals of the House of Commons, 1628, Vol. I., p. 919), but the Speaker presented it to the King (see Journals of the House of Lords, 1628, Vol. III., p. 879). After the Restoration the Lords do not seem to have raised any objection to the altered form of preamble, but they continued to assert their right to amend and alter Bills of supply and Bills to impose and remit taxes. Thus, in 1671, in answer to the Commons’ reasons for disagreeing to their amendments to a Bill for placing an imposition on foreign commodities, the Lords resolved that the power to make such amendments was their undoubted right from which they could not depart; and they assigned reasons and adduced a series of precedents dating from the days of Edward I. to prove that they had always taken their share in granting aids to the Crown (see Journals of the House of Lords, 1671, Vol. XII., pp. 503—505). In 1692 a dispute arose between the two Houses with regard to amendments made by the Lords to a Bill for appointing and enabling commissioners to examine, take, and state the public accounts of the kingdom. The Commons denied the right of the Lords to touch the Bill because “the disposition, as well as granting money by Act of Parliament, has ever been in the House of Commons.” The Lords, in the reasons which they submitted for insisting on their amendments, refused to admit the claim of the other House (see Journals of the House of Commons, 1691-2, Vol. X., pp. 646, 653). In 1693 the Lords, although they did not insist upon certain amendments which they had made to the land tax Bill (see note (a), p. 793, ante) to which the Commons had objected, resolved “That the making of amendments and abatements of rates of Bills of supply sent up from the House of Commons is a fundamental, inherent, and undoubted right of the House of Peers from which their Lordships can never depart” (see Journals of the House of Lords, 1692-3, Vol. XV., p. 191). Numerous other instances might be cited to show that during the seventeenth and eighteenth centuries the Lords never admitted the absolute control claimed by the Commons over Bills of supply etc., and constantly asserted their right to amend such Bills. In some of these cases the Lords did not insist upon their amendments; in others, the disagreement between the two Houses, or a timely prorogation, resulted in the loss of the Bill in dispute; but this was not invariably the case, as a practice arose by which the Commons, whilst dropping the actual measure which the Lords had amended, immediately introduced a new Bill incorporating the alterations made by the Lords or omitting the provisions to which they had objected.

(e) For the alterations in the powers of the House of Lords with regard to the permanent rejection of public Bills and of Bills certified as money Bills by the Speaker, effected by the Parliament Act, 1911 (1 & 2 Geo. 5, c. 13), see pp. 722, 776, ante.

SECT. 2.
Control of Public
Money.

Attitude of
House of Lords with regard to measures not purely financial.

which is submitted to its consideration (f), and does not fail to regard it as a breach of its privileges if the Commons attempt to annex or tack to a Bill of this kind any clause or clauses the matter of which is foreign to and different from the matter of the said Bill (g).

1490. With regard to public Bills involving the expenditure of public money other than those to which allusion has been made (h), the attitude of the House of Lords is different, for the House claims the right to alter or amend in such way as it deems advisable the provisions of any Bill which effects a change in public policy, when such Bill has not been introduced as a measure of finance pure and simple, even when the provisions in question impose or remit a charge upon the people (i).

(f) The right of the House of Lords to reject or postpone a Bill, whether dealing with supplies or levying or remitting a charge upon the people, has not been taken away by the Parliament Act, 1911 (1 & 2 Geo. 5, c. 13), but if the House were to exercise its right and reject or postpone a Bill which had been certified by the Speaker as a money Bill within the meaning of that Act, the measure could become law notwithstanding its rejection or postponement by the House of Lords (see p. 776, ante). In the past the House of Lords has made use comparatively seldom of its power to reject or postpone Bills of a financial character. Thus, between 1708 and 1859, the House appears to have rejected or postponed seventeen Bills of supply or Bills for the imposition of taxes (see Report from the Select Committee of the House of Commons on Tax Bills, 1860, Appendix, Part I., sect. B., p. 39, House of Commons Paper (414)), and subsequently it has exercised its power only upon two occasions, namely, in 1860, when it threw out the Paper Duty Repeal Bill (see Journals of the House of Lords, 1860, Vol. XCII., p. 348), and in 1909, when it refused to pass the Finance Bill of the year until the measure had been submitted to the judgment of the country (see ibid., 1909, Vol. CXLII., p. 451).

(g) Standing Orders of the House of Lords (Public Business), 1902, No. 59. The first occasion upon which the Lords appear to have taken exception to the practice of tacking was in 1700, when the Commons inserted, in a Bill for granting an aid to His Majesty by sale of the forfeited and other estates and interests in Ireland, and by a land tax in England, provisions dealing with other matters. The Lords refused to agree to these provisions on the ground that "the joining together in a money Bill things so totally foreign to the methods of raising money, and to the quantity or qualifications of the sums to be raised, is wholly destructive of the freedom of debates, dangerous to the privileges of the Lords, and to the prerogative of the Crown. For, by this means, things of the last ill consequence to the nation may be brought into Money Bills; and yet neither the Lords, nor the Crown, be able to give their negative to them, without hazarding the public peace and security" (see Journals of the House of Commons, 1700, Vol. XIII., p. 321). When the Lords have considered it advisable to reject a Bill on the ground of tacking, the practice of the House has been for a motion to be made that the standing order upon the subject be now read. As soon as this has been done, the further progress of the Bill is negatived (see the procedure on the Malt Duties Bill and the Customs Fees (Ireland) Bill in 1807, Journals of the House of Lords, 1807, Vol. XLVI., pp. 32, 342). Henceforward the probability of tacking must be affected to some extent by the provision of the Parliament Act, 1911 (1 & 2 Geo. 5, c. 13), s. 1 (3), defining the Bills which the Speaker can certify as money Bills.

(h) See p. 795, ante.

(i) The attitude of the House of Lords with regard to its right to amend a Bill in such a way as to affect its financial proposals, where a matter of public policy is concerned, is set forth in the resolution agreed to by the House with regard to its amendments to the Old Age Pensions Bill in 1908. Upon that occasion the House, although not insisting upon its amendments to which the 1491. It is obvious that if the Commons invariably insisted upon a strict interpretation of their privileges with regard to the control of public money, the Lords would be practically excluded from taking any effective part in legislation, for scarcely any public Bill of importance can be introduced into Parliament some of the provisions of which do not raise either directly or indirectly questions of a financial character. The object of both Houses consequently has been to devise a method of procedure which should prevent as far as possible disputes arising between them, and which, whilst doing nothing to curtail the financial privileges of the House of Commons, should allow to the House of Lords its fair share in legislation.

This object has been very largely effected by the practical recognition upon the part of the House of Lords of the functions with regard to finance peculiar to the other House (k), and by the relinquishment upon the part of the House of Commons of certain of the privileges which it formerly claimed, and by the practice by which that House does not insist in many cases upon a rigid observance of its privileges with regard to amendments made by the Lords (l).

SECT. 2.
Control of Public Money.

Effect of strict insistence upon its privileges
by the
Commons.

SECT. 3.—Pecuniary Penalties.

1492. The House of Commons formerly maintained that it was its sole right in all cases to appoint in any Bill the amount and the distribution of all pecuniary penalties or forfeitures (m); but it

Relinquish-
ment of privilege as to pecuniary penalties.

Commons had disagreed upon the score of privilege, refused to consent to the Commons reasons, because in the opinion of the House, the Bill was not one to grant aids and supplies to the Crown and involved questions of policy in which both Houses were concerned, and with which the House of Lords had in the past been accustomed to deal; see Journals of the House of Lords, 1908, Vol. CXL., p. 345. Previously, in 1906, the Lords, whilst not insisting upon certain of their amendments to the Labourers (Ireland) Bill, to which the Commons had disagreed, agreed to a resolution stating that the House maintained its right to legislate with regard to the principles of valuation upon which property might be taken for public purposes; see Journals of the House of Lords, 1906, Vol. CXXXVIII., p. 336.

(k) Although, as a general rule, the Lords confine themselves to concurring with the financial arrangements made by the Commons, they do not fail in debates and by resolutions of the House, and by means of inquiries by select committees, to express their opinion with regard to the expenditure of public money and the methods of taxation proposed by the Government of the day.

(l) The Commons do not claim an exclusive control over Bills dealing with funds set apart for purposes of general but not of public utility, e.g., Bills dealing with the property and land revenues of the Crown, the proceeds of which are not consigned by statute to the Consolidated Fund; Bills applying for various purposes the fund created by the Irish Church Act, 1869 (32 & 33 Vict. c. 42); or Bills comprising charges upon the property or revenues of the Church; see May, Parliamentary Practice, 11th ed., pp. 582, 583.

(m) See reasons assigned by the Commons for disagreeing to the Lords' amendments to the Punishing Mutiny and Desertion Bill in 1691 (Journals of the House of Commons, 1621-2, Vol. X., p. 693). The Lords, although in some cases they gave way with regard to particular Bills, always maintained that they were entitled to alter any pecuniary penalties imposed by the Commons; see the reasons given by the Lords for insisting upon their amendments to the India Silks Bill in 1696 (Journals of the House of Commons, 1697,

SECT. 3.
Pecuniary
Penalties.

no longer insists upon the observance of this privilege in the case of any Bill, whether public or private, originating in the House of Lords or amended by that House, whereby any pecuniary penalty, forfeiture, or fee is authorised, imposed, appropriated, regulated, varied, or extinguished (1) where the object of such pecuniary penalty or forfeiture is to secure the execution of the Act or the punishment or prevention of offences; and (2) where such fees are imposed in respect of benefit taken or service rendered under the Act and in order to the execution of the Act, and are not made payable into the Treasury or Exchequer or in aid of the public revenue (n).

The House of Commons also no longer insists upon its privilege in the case of any private Bill or provisional order confirmation Bill sent down from the Lords which refers to tolls and charges for services performed and are not in the nature of a tax, or which refers to rates assessed and levied by local authorities for local purposes (o).

SECT. 4.—Acceptance of Amendments.

Relinquish-
ment of privilege as to amendments.

1493. In addition to relinquishing its privileges in the cases already mentioned (a), the House of Commons usually accepts amendments made by the House of Lords if they do not materially infringe the rights of the House and are not otherwise objectionable. In any such case, however, the Speaker usually gives directions for a special entry to be made in the Journals of the House explaining the grounds which have led the House to waive its privilege upon the occasion in question (b).

Expedients to avoid infringement
of Commons'
privileges.

1494. In order also to facilitate legislation and to enable Bills containing any provisions which would operate as a charge upon the people, and so might be held by the House of Commons to infringe upon its privileges, to be introduced into the House of Lords, a practice has arisen by which every public Bill which originates in the House of Lords is examined by the officers of the two Houses with a view to ascertaining whether any of its provisions appear likely to constitute a breach of the privileges of the House of Commons. If it is considered that the Commons might take exception, on the score of privilege, to any clause or words in the Bill, amendments are drawn up proposing the omission of such clause or words, and are then proposed by the lord in charge of the Bill as soon as the measure has been read a third time (c).

Vol. XI., p. 739; see also the dispute between the two Houses which occurred in 1702 with regard to the alterations made by the Lords in the clause dealing with penalties proposed by the Commons in the Occasional Conformity Bill, Journals of the House of Lords, 1702-3, Vol. XVII., pp. 192, 195, 206-231, 257, 262; Journals of the House of Commons, 1702-3, Vol. XIV., pp. 78, 80, 83, 86, 183; compare House of Lords Historical Manuscripts, Vol. V. (New Series), pp. 157-159).

(n) Standing Orders of the House of Commons (Public Business), 1911, No. 44.

(o) Ibid. (Private Business), 1911, No. 226.

(a) See p. 797, ante, and the text, supra.

(b) See May, Parliamentary Practice, 11th ed., pp. 576-578.

(c) The effect of the insertion of these amendments by the House is to take out of the Bill any provisions to which the Commons might have objected, for

The Bill as it has been agreed to by the Lords is submitted to the consideration of the Commons, who can then reinsert any provisions which have been left out by means of the privilege amendments.

In the case of a Bill which has originated in the House of Commons, when the Lords find it necessary to insert an amendment of such a nature that it might be held to be an infringement of the Commons' privileges, an attempt is sometimes made to avoid raising the question of privilege by means of the insertion of another amendment which negatives or renders ineffective the amendment to which objection might be taken. If the Commons are agreeable to the proposal made by the Lords, they agree to the first amendment, but disagree to the second amendment. In a case of this kind the original amendment made by the Lords stands part of the Bill, but the second amendment is left out, as the Lords do not insist upon its retention when the Bill is returned to them.

SECT. 4.
Acceptance of Amendments.

1495. When the House of Commons decides, upon the ground of privilege, not to accept an amendment made to one of its Bills by the House of Lords, it is customary for the House, in the message in which it communicates its disagreement to the Lords, after explaining that the amendment interferes in some way either with the public revenue or with the application of taxes or local rates, as the case may be, and consequently infringes upon the privileges of the House, to inform the Lords that the Commons consider it is unnecessary upon their part to offer any further reason for their disagreement, hoping that the reason, which they have given will be deemed sufficient by the Lords.

Message communicating disagreement of Commons to Lords' amendments infringing privilege.

Upon the receipt of a message of this kind, the House of Lords as a rule does not insist upon the amendment to which objection has been taken, but, if it insists, it returns a message to the other House informing it of the fact, and the practice of the Commons then is to order either that the Lords' amendments to the Bill be laid aside or that they be considered after the lapse of a period of six months, either of which courses results in the loss of the Bill.

Effect of message on insistence on amendment.

the provisions in question do not appear in the official House copy of the measure which is sent down to the House of Commons. In the copies of the Bill, however, which are printed by order of the House of Commons for the use of its members, the privilege amendments, as they are termed, are printed within brackets and with a line under them. See, further, p. 718, ante.

Part IX.—Communications between the Crown and Parliament and between the House of Lords and the House of Commons.

SECT. 1.

From the Crown to Parliament.

Necessity for communications between the Sovereign and the two Houses.

SECT. 1.—From the Crown to Parliament.

SUB-SECT. 1.—In General.

1496. Except when he comes to the House of Lords for the purpose of opening or proroguing Parliament, it is no longer customary for the Sovereign to be present in person in Parliament (d). But, in addition to the Speech from the Throne which is usually delivered upon these occasions (e), circumstances arise from time to time which necessitate direct communications being sent from the Crown to one or other of the Houses of Parliament or to both Houses.

SUB-SECT. 2.—Methods of Communication.

Methods of communication.

1497. There are several ways by which such communications may be made, any one of which may be sent in conformance with the established usage of Parliament, and is recognised by both Houses as a constitutional declaration of the wishes of the Sovereign, acting upon the advice of his Ministers (f).

Written or verbal message.

1498. The most usual method by which the Sovereign makes a communication to Parliament is by means of a written message under the Royal Sign Manual (g), although in certain cases a verbal message is sometimes sent (h). A message under the Royal Sign Manual or a verbal message is usually sent to both Houses, and, if (d) In legal theory, the Sovereign is always supposed to be present in the High Court of Parliament, and in earlier times the Kings of England used constantly to be present during the sittings of the House of Lords; see Journals of the House of Lords, 1670, 1671, Vol. XII., pp. 317, 413. Queen Anne, however, was the last Sovereign who attended a debate in the House of Lords, for the practice was discontinued upon the accession of George I.

(e) See pp. 695, 700, ante.

(f) See May, Parliamentary Practice, 11th ed., p. 450.

(g) A message of this kind is sent when it is necessary to announce an event of public importance which requires the attention of Parliament, or to inform the two Houses when some sudden emergency necessitates the calling out of the army reserve, or to request Parliament to make financial provision for some member of the Royal Family, or to grant a pecuniary reward to some eminent public servant.

(h) A verbal message must be delivered in either House by a Minister of the Crown. This form of message is employed in the case of the election of a Speaker during the course of a session; see Journals of the House of Commons, 1905, Vol. CLX., p. 249; see also note (c), p. 693, ante. It would also be used in the event of a peer or a member of the House of Commons being arrested and held in custody in order to his being tried by military court-martial; see Journals of the House of Commons, 1815, Vol. LXX., p. 70; compare May, Parliamentary Practice, 11th ed., pp. 451, 452.

possible, on the same day (i), and is delivered in each House by a Minister of the Crown (j).

In the House of Lords, the peer who is entrusted with the Royal message comes to the table of the House and announces that he has a message under the Royal Sign Manual which His Majesty has commanded him to deliver to their lordships. He then hands the message to the Lord Chancellor, who reads it to the House, all the lords present uncovering whilst it is being read (k).

In the House of Commons, the member entrusted with the Royal message stands at the bar of the House and informs the Speaker that he has a message from the King to the House signed by the King himself. The Speaker desires him to bring the message to the chair, and the member then advances up the floor of the House and hands the message to the Speaker, who reads it to the House, all the members present remaining uncovered whilst it is being read (l).

1499. In each House it is customary to reply to a message under the Royal Sign Manual by means of an address (m) humbly thanking His Majesty for his gracious message, and assuring him of the readiness of the House to carry out his recommendations or request (n).

1500. In addition to written and verbal messages, the Sovereign makes known his wishes to the two Houses of Parliament in various other ways, namely:—

(1) "The pleasure of the Crown" is signified by the Lord Chancellor (i) at the beginning of every Parliament, when he directs the Commons to choose a Speaker, and also when he informs the Speaker-elect of His Majesty's approbation and confirmation of his election (o); and (ii.) whenever, in virtue of the powers

SECT. 1.
From the Crown to Parliament.

Reply to message.

Additional methods of communicating
Sovereign's
message.

(i) A message, when it is accompanied by original papers, is occasionally sent to one House and not to the other. If one House does not happen to be sitting on the day when it has been found necessary to deliver a message from the Sovereign to the other House, the message is delivered to it the day it reassembles.

(j) In neither House does the Minister who is the bearer of a message under the Royal Sign Manual or a verbal message from the Sovereign appear in uniform. In the House of Commons, the member of the Royal Household entrusted with the Sovereign's unsigned answer to an address appears in uniform. The Lords with White Staves, namely, the Lord Steward and the Lord Chamberlain of His Majesty's Household, who perform the same duty in the House of Lords, used also to appear in uniform; but this practice has been discontinued lately.

(k) A message under the Royal Sign Manual may be taken into consideration forthwith; but the more usual course is for the House to appoint a day for its consideration.

(l) See Journals of the House of Commons, 1882, Vol. CXXXVII., p. 112.

(m) An address from the House of Lords is usually presented to the Sovereign by the Lords with White Staves, although occasionally certain peers are specially nominated by the House for this duty. An address from the House of Commons is presented by members of the House being Privy Councillors or members of the Royal Household.

(n) It is not the practice of the House of Commons to present an address to the Sovereign in answer to a message for any kind of pecuniary aid or exceptional provision or grant, the prompt attention by the House to the matter in question being considered a sufficient answer to the demand made by the Crown.

(o) See pp. 692, 694, ante.

SECT. 1.
From the Crown to Parliament.

conferred upon him by a Royal commission, he opens or prorogues Parliament (p).

(2) The consent of the Sovereign is signified in either House by a Minister of the Crown (q) to any Bill (i) which affects in any way the hereditary revenues or personal property of the Crown (r); or (ii) which touches any of the Royal prerogatives (s).

(3) The recommendation from the Crown (t) which is required by the House of Commons before the House will receive a petition for any sum relating to public service or creating a charge upon the revenues of India, or before it will proceed upon any motion for a grant or charge upon the public revenue, not included in the annual estimates, whether payable out of the Consolidated Fund or out of money to be provided by Parliament, or upon the revenues of India, is signified by a Minister of the Crown (u).

SECT. 2.—From Parliament to the Crown.

SUB-SECT. 1.—In General.

Communication from Parliament to
the Crown.

1501. A communication from the two Houses of Parliament to the Crown (v) is usually made by means of an address (a), which may be either (1) a joint address from the two Houses, or (2) an address from either House singly (b).

(p) See pp. 692, 700, ante.

(q) In the House of Commons, the consent of the Crown in a case of this kind may also be signified by a member who is a Privy Councillor, when the authority of the responsible department has been obtained.

(r) In the case of a Bill which affects the property of the Duchy of Cornwall, the consent of the Prince of Wales, as Duke of Cornwall (or of the Crown, if the Prince is not of age), is signified in the same way.

(s) It would appear that the Royal consent may be given at any stage of a Bill during its progress through either House; see second Report from the Select Committee of the House of Lords appointed to search for precedents upon this point in 1844, Journals of the House of Lords, 1844, Vol. LXXVI., p. 478. In the case of the House of Lords Reconstitution Bill, in the session of 1911, however, the House of Lords decided that it was more in accordance with the usage of Parliament for the consent of the Crown to be signified before the introduction of any Bill affecting its prerogative; see Parliamentary Debates, Fifth Series, House of Lords, Vol. VII., pp. 764—780.

(t) See p. 766, ante.

(u) Standing Orders of the House of Commons (Public Business), 1911, Nos. 66, 70.

(v) An address is only presented to the reigning Sovereign or the regent. Both Houses, however, send messages usually of congratulation or condolence to other members of the Royal Family. Such messages are entrusted in each House to members specially deputed for the purpose, who make known to the House replies which they receive.

(a) Resolutions of the House of Commons have sometimes been presented to the Crown not in the form of an address. The procedure with regard to the presentation of such resolutions and to the reply of the Sovereign is the same as that adopted with regard to an address.

(b) A joint address or an address to the Sovereign from either House may be presented upon almost any subject connected with the administration or well-being of the country at home or abroad, or may be used as a means of expressing the congratulations or the condolences of Parliament. It is not in accordance with Parliamentary usage, however, for an address to refer to a Bill at the time under the consideration of either House of Parliament; see May, Parliamentary Practice, 11th ed., p. 454.

SUB-SECT. 2.—Joint Address.

SECT. 2.

From Parliament
to the Crown.

Procedure in voting a joint address.

1502. A joint address originates in a resolution, or series of resolutions, which may be made in either House. When a motion for an address of this kind has been agreed to by one House, it is communicated to the other House by means of a message setting out the resolution or resolutions, and desiring the concurrence of the other House to the presentation of a joint address (c).

If the second House agrees to the proposal of the first House, it sends a message expressing its agreement, and an order is then made by each House with regard to the manner in which the address is to be presented (d).

1503. An address from both Houses of Parliament may be presented by the Lords and Commons in a body (e), or by a deputation usually consisting of two lords and four members of the House of Commons, or by the Lord Chancellor and the Speaker, acting on behalf of their respective Houses (f).

Presentation.

SUB-SECT. 3.—Address from the House of Lords.

1504. An address from the House of Lords is agreed to by the House on motion, and an order is then made for its presentation to the Sovereign by the whole House (g), or by the Lords with White Staves (h), or by certain lords specially nominated for the purpose (i).

Procedure.

1505. On the day when the address is to be presented the House adjourns during pleasure and proceeds to the place

(c) The form of the address is settled by the two Houses. In the message a blank is left for the insertion of the title of the second House, the necessary words being inserted in the message by which that House signifies its willingness to join in the address.

(d) It is customary for the House of Lords, whether the address has originated in that House or not, to ascertain the time and place at which the Sovereign will be pleased to receive the address. As soon as the Lords with White Staves have declared His Majesty's pleasure on these points, a message is sent to acquaint the House of Commons.

(e) When an address is presented by the two Houses as a body, the Lord Chancellor and the Speaker advance towards the Sovereign side by side, but the Lord Chancellor reads the address and receives the King's answer.

(f) For other methods of presenting joint addresses, see May, Parliamentary Practice, 11th ed., p. 453.

(g) See Journals of the House of Lords, 1897, Vol. CXXIX., p. 255. If the address is to be presented by the whole House, the Lords with White Staves are ordered to wait on the Sovereign to find out when he will be graciously pleased to receive the address.

(h) This is the usual method employed for the presentation of an address. When the House has made an order for an address to be thus presented, a copy of the address, signed by the Clerk of the Parliaments, is sent to the Lord Steward or Lord Chamberlain, as the case may be, together with a copy of the order of the House, also signed by the Clerk of the Parliaments. As soon as he has presented the address and received the King's answer, the Lord Steward or the Lord Chamberlain, as the case may be, reports the answer to the House on the first convenient occasion. The Sovereign's answer to an address may be reported any sitting day before any public business is taken; and see p. 677, ante.

(i) See Journals of the House of Lords, 1882, Vol. CXIV., p. 58.

SECT. 2.
From Parliament
to the Crown.

Presentation.

appointed by the Sovereign. The address is read by the Lord Chancellor, who then kneels and delivers it to the Sovereign. After a reply to the address has been read by the Sovereign and handed to the Lord Chancellor, the lords retire. At the next meeting of the House, the Lord Chancellor reports that the House has waited on His Majesty with the address, and reads the King's answer to the House (k).

SUB-SECT. 4.—Address from the House of Commons.

Procedure.

1506. An address from the House of Commons is agreed to by the House on motion made in the House itself, or in a committee of the whole House and afterwards agreed to by the House, and is then ordered to be presented to the Sovereign either by the whole House (l), or by members of the House being Privy Councillors or members of the Royal Household (m), or by certain members specially nominated for the purpose by the House (n).

Presentation.

1507. The proceedings upon the presentation of an address by the House of Commons as a body are the same as those which have already been described in the case of the presentation of an address by the other House (o). The Speaker reads the address and receives the answer from the Sovereign, which, upon his return to the House of Commons, he reads to the House.

SECT. 3.—Between the Houses of Parliament.

Communications between the Houses.

1508. As the two Houses of Parliament are entirely distinct and independent bodies, it is necessary that there should be frequent communications between them with regard to the ordinary legislative and other business of the session.

Three methods of formal communication.

1509. According to the practice of Parliament, direct communication between the House of Lords and House of Commons can be effected either by means of written messages or by means of meetings between representatives appointed by each House which are known as conferences (p) or free conferences (q). Written messages have (k) When the Lord Chancellor attends the Sovereign to deliver an address of the House of Lords, he wears his state robes, and the peers who accompany him wear levée dress.

(l) See Journals of the House of Commons, 1897, Vol. CLII., p. 299.

(m) This is the usual method employed for the presentation of an address from the House of Commons. The address is generally presented by the Vice-Chamberlain or Treasurer of the Household, who, as soon as possible after receiving the Sovereign's answer, appears at the bar of the House and is called by the Speaker. He then comes to the table and there reads the King's answer and hands it in. The proceedings of the House may be interrupted (see p. 673, ante) in order that an answer to an address may be read; see Journals of the House of Commons, 1879, Vol. CXXXIV., p. 23.

(n) See Journals of the House of Commons, 1882, Vol. CXXXVII., p. 94.

(o) See the text, supra. Members of the House of Commons who go with the Speaker to present an address to the Sovereign are not required to wear levée dress; see 2 Hatsell, Precedents of Parliament, ed. 1818, p. 390, n.

(p) At a conference, the managers (see note (s), infra), who are appointed by each House respectively to conduct the proceedings on its behalf, act simply as messengers, and their duty is merely to deliver or receive resolutions or, in the case of a conference with regard to a disagreement as to a Bill, to return superseded (r) both the other modes of communication, and are employed upon all occasions when direct intercourse between the two Houses is rendered necessary (s).

SECT. 3.
Between the Houses of Parliament.

or to receive the Bill with the reason or reasons for disagreement. They have no authority given to them to discuss with each other the resolutions of which they may be the bearers, or to attempt to arrive at an agreement between the two Houses with regard to a Bill.

(q) A free conference differs from a conference in one important respect, namely, that the managers are the agents and not merely the messengers of their respective Houses. As such they are empowered to discuss with each other and, if possible, to arrive at some agreement with regard to the matters in dispute between the two Houses; compare note (p), supra. A free conference can be demanded in the first instance or after the failure of a conference or of two conferences.

(r) Since 1851, when the two Houses decided that, unless for any reason a conference were preferred, written messages should be employed by either House as a means of informing the other House of its reasons for disagreeing with amendments made to its Bills or for insisting upon amendments which it had itself made to Bills; see resolutions proposed by the Lords and agreed to by the Commons after conferences between the two Houses, Journals of the House of Lords, 1851, Vol. LXXXIII., pp. 158, 159, 177, 178; Journals of the House of Commons, 1851, Vol. CVI., pp. 210, 217, 223.

(s) Since this agreement was arrived at, there has been only one instance of a conference being held in a case where a message would have been admissible, namely, on the occasion of a difference of opinion arising between the two Houses with regard to the Oaths Bill in 1858. But although the practice of holding conferences has thus fallen into desuetude, it would still be possible for one House to demand a conference or a free conference with the other House, not only for the purpose of submitting reasons for disagreeing to a Bill, but also to communicate a resolution or an address to which the concurrence of the other House is desired, or to discuss the privileges of Parliament, or to require or to communicate a statement of the facts upon which a Bill has been passed by the other House; see May, Parliamentary Practice, 11th ed., p. 437. The method employed for the appointment of, and the procedure adopted in, a conference or a free conference is practically the same. When the Commons demand a conference, they send a message to the Lords desiring a conference and stating the subject-matter of the conference. A motion is then made in the House of Lords "That this House do agree to a conference as desired by the Commons and do appoint the same presently [or at some fixed time] in the [matter mentioned by the Commons]." When this motion has been agreed to, the Commons are informed, by means of a message, of the Lords' willingness to hold a conference. Each House then appoints managers, usually seven in number, to conduct the proceedings on its behalf. It is always the privilege of the Lords to fix the hour and name the place of meeting for the conference, and during the actual proceedings of a conference it has been customary for the Lords present to wear their hats and remain seated, and for the Commons to be uncovered and stand. As soon as a conference is finished, the managers return to their respective Houses (which have adjourned during pleasure whilst the conference has been in progress), and the senior manager in each House reports what has taken place at the conference. In both Houses a report from the managers of a conference or of a free conference may be considered forthwith or a subsequent day may be appointed for its consideration. If the conference has taken place in respect of a Bill, the Bill itself with the amendments, together with the reasons on account of which the House in which the Bill originated refuses to accept them, are left, after a conference, in the possession of the House which made the amendments. If this House does not insist upon its amendments, it sends a message to inform the other House of the fact and there are no further proceedings. But, if the House is unwilling to withdraw all or some of its amendments, a further conference can be held, at which it communicates its reasons for insisting. The Bill is then once again in the possession of the House in which it originated, and it remains for that House to

SECT. 3.
Between the Houses of Parliament.
Messages.

1510. It is the practice for one House to send a message to the other House—

(1) To inform it (i.) that it has passed a Bill and desires the concurrence of the other House to the proposed measure; (ii.) that it agrees to a Bill which has been sent to it by the other House; (iii.) that it insists, or does not insist, upon its amendments to a Bill, in case the other House objects to them; (iv.) that it proposes new amendments in lieu of those to which the other House has disagreed; (v.) that it cannot agree to the amendments made to one of its Bills by the other House (t):

(2) To request the attendance of members or officials of the other House as witnesses, or the interchange of documents, reports, or evidence (a):

(3) To suggest the appointment of a joint committee (b), or to make proposals with regard to any matter connected with the business or procedure of Parliament to which the assent of both Houses is required (c).

Procedure.

1511. A message, together with the Bills or other documents to which it refers, is carried from one House to the other by one of the clerks at the table (d). The delivery of a message is a purely formal matter which is attended by no ceremony, and, therefore, as a rule, causes no interruption to a debate in either House if one happens to be in progress at the time of its arrival. The clerk who is the bearer of the message, when he reaches the bar of the other House, hands the message to the clerk of that House who comes to the bar to receive it.

In the House of Lords a message is read at the table by the Clerk of the Parliaments as soon as conveniently may be after it has been received; in the House of Commons a message is usually decide whether or not it will give way. If it is still not prepared to accept the amendments, but is anxious to save the Bill, it may demand a free conference, for by the accepted usage of Parliament it is not permissible to hold a third conference. If, after a free conference has been held, neither House is willing to give way, there are no further communications between them, and the Bill with regard to which the dispute has arisen drops; but, if concessions are made upon either side, further free conferences can be held until a compromise is effected or until it has been made apparent that no satisfactory solution of the points at issue can be arrived at.

(t) For procedure when differences arise between the two Houses with regard to amendments on public Bills, see pp. 721, 722, ante.

(a) See also note (c) and (e), p. 781, ante.

(b) See pp. 640, 752, ante.

(c) E.g., a joint address from the two Houses to the Sovereign; see p. 803, ante.

(d) Before 1855 the Lords used to employ the masters in Chancery, or, on special occasions, the judges, to carry their messages to the Commons, whilst messages from the House of Commons used to be brought up to the Lords by a member deputed for the purpose by the Commons. In 1855 the Lords agreed to a resolution that in addition to the then existing practice with regard to messages between the two Houses, one of the clerks of either House might be the bearer of a message from one House to the other. This resolution was communicated to the Commons at a conference and agreed to by that House; see Journals of the House of Lords, 1855, Vol. LXXXVII., pp. 159, 165, 169; Journals of the House of Commons, 1855, Vol. CX., pp. 253, 254; Standing Orders of the House of Lords (Public Business), 1902, No. 100.

recorded as having been communicated to the House by the Speaker, but if proceedings thereon are to be taken forthwith it is communicated formally to the House by the Speaker (e).

SECT. 3.
Between the Houses of Parliament.

(e) See Journals of the House of Commons, 1907, Vol. CLXII., p. 461.

PARLIAMENTARY AGENTS.

See PARLIAMENT.

PARLIAMENTARY ELECTIONS.

See ELECTIONS.

PAROCHIAL CHAPEL.

See ECCLESIASTICAL LAW.

PAROCHIAL CHARITIES.

See ALLOTMENTS; CHARITIES.

PAROL EVIDENCE.

See CONTRACT; EVIDENCE.

PARSONS AND PARSONAGES.

See ECCLESIASTICAL LAW.

PART PERFORMANCE.

See CONTRACT; EQUITY; SPECIFIC PERFORMANCE.

PARTICULAR ESTATE.

See REAL PROPERTY AND CHATELS REAL; SETTLEMENTS.

PARTICULARS.

See COUNTY COURTS; PLEADING; PRACTICE AND PROCEDURE; SET-OFF AND COUNTERCLAIM.

PARTICULARS OF SALE.

See AUCTION AND AUCTIONEERS; SALE OF GOODS; SALE OF LAND.

PARTIES.

See BILLS OF SALE; CONTRACT; FAMILY ARRANGEMENTS; LANDLORD AND TENANT; MORTGAGE; PRACTICE AND PROCEDURE; SALE OF LAND; SETTLEMENTS.

PARTITION.

	PAGE
PART I. DEFINITION AND NATURE - - - - -	810
SECT. 1. DEFINITION AND DESCRIPTION - - - - -	810
SECT. 2. MODES OF EFFECTING PARTITION - - - - -	812
 PART II. PARTITION BY AGREEMENT BETWEEN THE PARTIES	813
SECT. 1. PARTIES NECESSARY AND COMPETENT - - - - -	813
Sub-sect. 1. In General - - - - -	813
Sub-sect. 2. Parties Sui Juris - - - - -	813
Sub-sect. 3. Persons and Bodies acting under Statutory Powers - - - - -	815
Sub-sect. 4. Donees of Express Powers - - - - -	820
SECT. 2. PROPERTY WHICH MAY BE PARTITIONED BY AGREEMENT -	822
SECT. 3. FORMALITIES - - - - -	823
 PART III. PARTITION BY ORDER OF THE BOARD OF AGRI- CULTURE AND FISHERIES - - - - -	824
SECT. 1. JURISDICTION OF THE BOARD - - - - -	824
SECT. 2. PROPERTY WHICH MAY BE PARTITIONED BY ORDER -	825
SECT. 3. PERSONS WHO MAY APPLY - - - - -	826
SECT. 4. EQUALITY OF PARTITION - - - - -	828
SECT. 5. PRACTICE AND PROCEDURE - - - - -	829
SECT. 6. EFFECT OF THE ORDER - - - - -	832
SECT. 7. COLLATERAL ARRANGEMENTS - - - - -	833
 PART IV. PARTITION, AND SALE IN LIEU OF PARTITION, BY ORDER OF COURT - - - - -	834
SECT. 1. COURTS HAVING JURISDICTION - - - - -	834
SECT. 2. PROPERTY WHICH MAY BE DEALT WITH - - - - -	836
SECT. 3. PERSONS WHO MAY OBTAIN PARTITION OR SALE - - -	839
SECT. 4. JURISDICTION TO ORDER SALE - - - - -	842
SECT. 5. GENERAL PRACTICE - - - - -	846
Sub-sect. 1. Initial Stages - - - - -	846
Sub-sect. 2. Judgment and Interlocutory Orders - - -	848
Sub-sect. 3. Service of Notice of Judgment - - - - -	852
Sub-sect. 4. Vesting Orders - - - - -	853
Sub-sect. 5. Costs - - - - -	854
SECT. 6. PRACTICE ON JUDGMENT FOR PARTITION - - - - -	856
Sub-sect. 1. General Considerations - - - - -	856
Sub-sect. 2. Methods of Effecting Partition - - - - -	857
Sub-sect. 3. Conveyance - - - - -	860
Sub-sect. 4. Title Deeds on Partition - - - - -	861

	PAGE
PART IV. PARTITION, AND SALE IN LIEU OF PARTITION, BY ORDER OF COURT— continued.
SECT. 7. PRACTICE ON JUDGMENT FOR SALE - - - -	861
Sub-sect. 1. Request for Sale - - - -	861
Sub-sect. 2. Mode and Conduct of Sale - - - -	863
Sub-sect. 3. Application and Distribution of Proceeds of Sale - - - -	865

For Board of Agriculture and
Fisheries - - -	See title AGRICULTURE ; CONSTITUTIONAL LAW.
Boundaries - - -	BOUNDARIES, FENCES AND PARTY WALLS.
Commons - - -	COMMONS AND RIGHTS OF COMMON.
Copyholds - - -	COPYHOLDS.
Easements - - -	EASEMENTS AND PROFITS A PRENDRE.
Foreshore - - -	CONSTITUTIONAL LAW ; FISHERIES ; WATERS AND WATERCOURSES.
Open Spaces - - -	OPEN SPACES AND RECREATION GROUNDS.
Parliamentary Procedure - - -	PARLIAMENT.
Real Estate - - -	REAL PROPERTY AND CHATELS REAL.
Sale of Land - - -	SALE OF LAND.
Settled Estates - - -	SETTLEMENTS.
Tithes - - -	ECCLESIASTICAL LAW.

Part I.—Definition and Nature.

SECT. 1.—Definition and Description.

Definition.

1512. The legal term “partition” (a) is applied to the division of lands, tenements and hereditaments belonging to co-owners (b), and the allotment among them of the parts (c), so as to put an end to community of ownership between some or all of them (d).

(a) Besides this meaning of “partition” the term was at one time applied to the severance of a joint tenancy (see Co. Litt. 167 b, and Hargrave’s note thereto), and to the agreements for alternate enjoyment of property referred to in Co. Litt. 164 b, 165 a ; see also title EQUITY, Vol. XIII., p. 40. For joint tenancy and its severance, see title REAL PROPERTY AND CHATELS REAL.

(b) The co-owners may be joint tenants, tenants in common or coparceners ; as to the creation and incidents of these forms of co-ownership, see title REAL PROPERTY AND CHATELS REAL. They must be co-owners in one of these senses, and not owners of separate parts the boundaries between which have been lost ; see O’Hara v. Strange (1847), 11 I. Eq. R. 262 ; in the latter case the proper course is some method of ascertaining boundaries ; see title BOUNDARIES, FENCES AND PARTY WALLS, Vol. III., pp. 107 et seq.

(c) Thus if three persons are co-owners, tenants in fee simple, of Blackacre, Whiteacre, and Greenacre, the transaction by which one of them becomes sole owner tenant in fee simple of Blackacre, another of Whiteacre, and the third of Greenacre, is a partition.

(d) Thus in the example given in note (c), supra, a transaction by which 1513. A strict partition must involve a division of the property into portions which are aliquot parts of the whole. In some cases, however, the partition may be made to suit the convenience of the property and of the co-owners by a division into unequal parts, not necessarily aliquot parts of the whole, those owners who take a larger share than their due making compensation in money or other property to those who take less than their due (e). This compensation is called money or compensation for equality of partition (f).

SECT. 1.
Definition
and Description.

Equal and unequal
partition.

1514. Partition can be effected though the estates of the co-owners are not the same, for example, where one co-owner is lessee for years of one share and another tenant in fee simple of another share (g), or between tenants for life and in fee simple (h). In such a case the partition will be limited to the period of the lesser estate.

Parties
between whom partition may be effected.

No partition, however, can be effected unless the parties are interested in ascertainable shares (i).

1515. The property must be divisible; if it is not, in order to divide their interests, the owners must either agree to exercise their rights in turns, or must obtain a sale (k): an agreement for the exercise of rights in turns has no effect on the community of ownership, which remains undivided (l), except in the statutory case of an advowson (m).

Indivisible
property.

1516. The right to partition may be lost by agreement between the parties for disposal of the property in a different manner (n), or

Right to
partition
lost.

one person becomes sole owner of Blackacre, while the other two remain co-owners of Whiteacre and Greenacre, is a good partition. This can only be by agreement of those persons between whom a community of ownership is left subsisting (Hobson v. Sherwood (1841), 4 Beav. 184; Peers v. Needham (1854), 19 Beav. 316; Richardson v. Feary (1888), 39 Ch. D. 45).

(e) The extent to which this kind of partition can be effected in any case depends on the mode of obtaining partition adopted, the nature of the property, and the parties entitled: it is strictly partition plus sale (Porter v. Lopes (1877), 7 Ch. D. 358, per JESSEL, M.R., at p. 366). The power of giving compensation for equality of partition conferred on the Board of Agriculture and Fisheries is limited (see p. 828, post), and in other cases there may be difficulty in raising the sum required; see Rowe v. Gray (1876), 5 Ch. D. 263, per HALL, V.-C., at p. 265.

(f) The expression "owelty of partition" formerly in use is now obsolete.

(g) Baring v. Nash (1813), 1 Ves. & B. 551.

(h) Wills v. Slade (1801), 6 Ves. 498.

(i) Agar v. Fairfax, Agar v. Holdsworth (1811), 17 Ves. 533; Miles v. Jarvis (No. 2) (1883), 50 L. T. 48.

(k) As to sale by order of the court, see p. 834, post.

(l) Corbet's Case (1600), 1 Co. Rep. 83 b, 87 a, b, per WALMESLEY, J., and note (z) thereto. Actions to protect the property must therefore be brought in the names of all parties.

(m) Advowsons Act, 1708 (7 Anne, c. 18).

(n) Peck v. Cardwell (1839), 2 Beav. 137. A partnership may be such an agreement (ibid.; Dale v. Hamilton (1846), 5 Hare, 369, 389; Redwood v. Redwood (1908), 28 New Zealand Law Reports, 260). In Dimsdale v. Robertson (1844), 7 L. Eq. R. 536, the parties had agreed to partition the property in unequal shares, appropriating other lands for equality of partition; on the latter proving insufficient for the purpose, the court refused to set aside the agreement or order a different partition.

SECT. 1. by the title of the co-owner claiming partition being barred by the Statutes of Limitations (o).

Definition and Description. 1517. A partition does not imply any condition relating to the title of the parties (p).

No implied condition.

SECT. 2.—Modes of Effecting Partition.

1518. There are four modes of obtaining partition:—

By agreement.

First, if all the parties are sui juris or have power conferred on them by law or by act of a predecessor in title, they may make a partition by agreement between themselves (q).

By Board of Agriculture and Fisheries.

Secondly, partition may be made by the Board of Agriculture and Fisheries; in some cases partition by this method is compulsory, at the instance of the co-owners desiring partition against those who do not desire it (r).

By the court.

Thirdly, partition may be made by the court in an action commenced by any party for that purpose (s); this is a method in which partition is compulsory at the instance of any co-owner in all cases, subject to the powers of the court under the Partition Acts (a) to order sale instead (b).

By Act of Parliament.

Fourthly, an Act of Parliament may be obtained (c); this method is employed if none of the above methods is available, or if the transaction is complicated by features not appertaining to partition which cannot be otherwise carried into effect (d).

(o) Thornton v. France, [1897] 2 Q. B. 143, 158; see Corea v. Appuhamy, [1912] A. C. 230, P.C.; Real Property Limitation Act, 1833 (3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 27), s. 24; title LIMITATION OF ACTIONS, Vol. XIX., pp. 137, 138.

(p) Real Property Act, 1845 (8 & 9 Vict. c. 106), s. 4. As to the condition and warranty implied in partitions made before 1st October, 1845, the date mentioned in this Act, see Preston, Shep. Touch. ed. Preston, 186; 4 Barton's Elements of Conveyancing, 200; Co. Litt. 174 a; 4 Bythewood and Jarman, Precedents in Conveyancing, 4th ed., 128.

(q) See pp. 813 et seq., post.

(r) See pp. 824 et seq., post.

(s) See p. 834, post.

(a) Partition Acts, 1868 (31 & 32 Vict. c. 40), and 1876 (39 & 40 Vict. c. 17).

(b) See p. 842, post.

(c) The procedure in this method follows the ordinary course of private Bills dealing with estates; see title PARLIAMENT, p. 759, ante. Since the Partition Acts there have been few such Bills.

(d) Thus an Act must be obtained where the limitations of a settled share do not allow a partition under the other methods; see, e.g., the Private Act (1769), 9 Geo. 3, c. 16, and Private Act (1825), 6 Geo. 4, c. 42; or where certain interests are to be cancelled or charges shifted, see the Private Act (1845), 8 & 9 Vict. c. 28; and Brandon's Estate Act (1860), 23 & 24 Vict. c. 3. Where charges are shifted, or charged on one allotment, it is important that the Act should accurately define the charges; see A.-G. v. West (1858), 27 L. J. (CH.) 789, C. A., as to the Private Act (1819), 59 Geo. 3, c. 4. Similarly, an Act may be necessary if new interests are to be created in persons not previously interested; see Lloyd's Estates (Partition) Act (1866), 29 & 30 Vict. c. 10. If there are no such complications, and the only difficulty is that there is no person able to effect partition as to one or more shares, the modern practice is for the private Act to confer a power of partition on a body of trustees either generally or by reference to the powers of a tenant for life under the Settled Land Acts (see note (r), p. 818, post, and title SETTLEMENTS); see the Scarisbrick Estate Act (1877), 40 & 41 Vict. c. 6, and the De

Part II.—Partition by Agreement between the Parties.

SECT. 1.—Parties Necessary and Competent.

SUB-SECT. 1.—In General.

1519. Partition may be made by agreement where all the parties are either sui juris or have power conferred on them, either by statute or by any instrument. The parties are such as would be necessary to make an assurance inter vivos of each share of the property (e).

No other interest in the property than that held in common is affected unless the parties have power to determine it (f) or the persons entitled thereto concur (g).

SECT. 1.
Parties
Necessary
and Competent.
General rule.

Interests bound by the
partition.

SUB-SECT. 2.—Parties Sui Juris.

1520. Parties sui juris are limited in their powers of partition only by the nature of the property (h). An agreement between Validity.

Trafford Estate Act, 1904 (4 Edw. 7, c. 3). A private Act enacting a specific partition operates as a conveyance of the legal estate, and no other instrument is then necessary (5 Davidson, Precedents in Conveyancing, 2nd ed., 474). Where the Act merely confers the power to effect partition, the partition must be completed by instruments accordingly. (e) Anon. in Chancery (1742), 3 Swan. 139, n. (ed. 1827); 6 English Reports, 807. The competent parties are dealt with in the text, infra, and on pp. 815 et seq., post.

(f) Thus, to bind the issue in tail, the entail must be effectually barred (Oakeley v. Smith (1759), 1 Eden, 261; and as to the method of barring entail, see title REAL PROPERTY AND CHATELS REAL), and though Sir Edward Coke speaks of a partition made by coparceners of lands entailed as binding their issues if it be equal (Co. Litt. 166 a), and Littleton's Tenures, s. 257, speaks of an allotment of lands of equal yearly value by way of partition between the husbands of coparceners as not being capable of being defeated afterwards (see Co. Litt. 171 a), this must be understood as meaning that the court will not, at the suit of remaindermen, disturb an equal partition, because it cannot make a better. To this effect would appear to be the decisions in Burton v. Jeux and Rose v. Rose (both undated), cited in Thomas v. Gyles (1691), 2 Vern. 232. If the statements in Coke and Littleton are to be understood in any wider sense, the decision of Lord HARDWICKE, L.C., in Ireland v. Rittle (1739), 1 Atk. 541, is, as pointed out by the reporter in his note to that case, directly contrary; see, however, the note thereon in Co. Litt. 171 a (Butler's ed.). It is on this principle, namely, that no better partition can be made, that the court binds the interest of unborn children in an action for partition by a tenant for life or other limited owner (Gaskell v. Gaskell (1836), 6 Sim. 643; compare Hobson v. Sherwood (1841), 4 Beav. 184). Where the parties can put an end to a trust for sale and elect to take the property unconverted, the trust is no objection to a partition (Pearson v. Lane (1809), 17 Ves. 101).

(g) Thus a lessee of an undivided share, without the concurrence of his lessor, can obtain partition to take effect only during his term (Baring v. Nash (1813), 1 Ves. & B. 551). Similarly an incumbrancer on the share must concur unless provided for.

(h) As to the indivisibility of certain kinds of property, see p. 823, post.

SECT. I.

Parties
Necessary
and Competent.

Exceptions.

Modes of obtaining division.Order of choice.Award of person chosen by the
parties.

such persons for partition is mutually enforceable by and against the parties and persons deriving title under them by action for specific performance (i).

An exception, reservation, or grant may be made, whether of easements (k), mines or minerals (l), or other rights, not merely dependent on ownership (m).

1521. The division of the property into parts may be effected either by the co-owners themselves (n), or by a third party nominated by all (o); and in either case the allotment of the parts among the co-owners may be determined either by the choice of the parties (p), the award of the third party (q), or by lot (r).

In the case of coparceners, in the absence of agreement to the contrary, the right of first choice among the parts, or of drawing the first lot, devolves in order of seniority (s). The privilege is not available after the death of a coparcener in favour of her issue, husband (tenant by the curtesy) or assignee (t), except in case of an advowson (a). A coparcener chooses last of all where she is the person chosen to divide and allot the property (b).

1522. Where the division is by a third party nominated for the purpose he must be impartial, and consider the interests of all parties to the partition (c). His award alone does not complete

(i) Knollys v. Alcock (1800), 5 Ves. 648; Pearson v. Lane (1809), 17 Ves. 101; Heaton v. Dearden (1852), 16 Beav. 147; Paine v. Ryder (1857), 24 Beav. 151. The agreement is enforceable although the court has no jurisdiction to make partition (Bolton v. Ward (1845), 4 Hare, 530 (copyholds, a case before the statutory power (see p. 836, post) was conferred); Paine v. Ryder, supra). Where the assurance, though intended as a partition agreement, is ineffectual to bar an entail, those claiming under the entail will not be bound specifically to perform the agreement (Oakeley v. Smith (1759), 1 Eden, 261). But in the case of a parol agreement for partition, in the nature of a family arrangement, the parties may be compelled to give effect to it by barring the entail (Neale v. Neale (1837), 1 Keen, 672); compare Fines and Recoveries Act, 1833 (3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 74); title REAL PROPERTY AND CHATTELS REAL. As to specific performance generally, see title SPECIFIC PERFORMANCE.

(k) Compare Bro. Abr. (1586), tit. Particion, pl. 7, where it is stated that a deed is not necessary between co-parceners; compare note (f), p. 813, ante.

(l) As in Darvill v. Roper (1855), 3 Drew. 294.

(m) Charlesworth v. Gartsed (1863), 3 New Rep. 54, per KNIGHT BRUCE, L.J., at p. 55.

(n) Littleton's Tenures, s. 243.

(o) Ibid., 244. An agreement for partition according to this method will be found in Encyclopædia of Forms and Precedents, Vol. IX., p. 425.

(p) Littleton's Tenures, s. 243.

(q) Ibid., s. 244.

(r) Ibid., s. 246.

(s) Ibid., ss. 244, 245; the part of the eldest (eigne or eisne) was called emitha pars.

(t) Co. Litt. 166 b.

(a) Ibid.; Harris and Haies v. Nichols (1583), Cro. Eliz. 19, by a majority of the judges, ANDERSON, C.J., confining the rule to the tenant by the curtesy.

(b) Littleton's Tenures, s. 245.

(c) Co. Litt. 166 b; this being the ground of the rule that the eldest coparcener, when she is the person chosen to make the partition, must the partition, conveyances being necessary in pursuance of the award (d): these conveyances may be directed by the award (e).

1523. Compensation for equality of partition may be given in any form agreed upon (f). If it is a lump sum, the rights and liabilities as to payment devolve as for unpaid purchase-money on a sale (g).

SECT. 1.
Parties
Necessary
and Competent.

Equality of
partition.

SUB-SECT. 3.—Persons and Bodies acting under Statutory Powers.

1524. A married woman is subject in respect of partition to the same disability, if any, as she is under in respect of sale or other disposition of her property (h); and accordingly, where neither the marriage took place nor the title to the property accrued on or after the 1st January, 1883, and the property is not settled to her separate use, she can only partition her real and personal estate by deed acknowledged with the concurrence of her husband (i), while her husband has an absolute power of partition of her leasehold property (j). Where, however, either the marriage took place or the title to the property accrued on or after 1st January, 1883, she holds her real and personal estate as her separate property and can dispose of it by way of partition as a feme sole (k).

Married woman absolutely entitled.

Married woman tenant for life.

Where the interest of a married woman is such as would have choose last instead of first. The person chosen should generally be a surveyor: his duties are similar to those of commissioners under a commission of partition (see p. 858, post). He should consider all the circumstances of the parties and their property, and the best interests of the family, if that relationship exists.

(d) 1 Roll. Abr., tit. Arbitrament (A.), 3.

(e) Knight v. Burton (1704), 6 Mod. Rep. 231; Johnson v. Wilson (1741), Willes, 248; where awards of partition were held defective for want of directing conveyances; both cases, however, were at law; see now, note (i), p. 814, ante.

(f) In Ireland v. Rittle (1739), 1 Atk. 541, the owner of one part agreed to pay the taxes on both parts. A rentcharge is often granted. The rule that such a grant can be made between coparceners without a deed (Co. Litt. 169 a, b) is abrogated by the Statute of Frauds (29 Car. 2, c. 3).

(g) Hulbert v. Hart (1683), 1 Vern. 133. In that case the compensation was an annuity payable under a bond to the grantee, his executors or administrators: it was held that the executor had the benefit of the bond. As to rights and liabilities in respect of purchase-money on sale of land generally, see title SALE OF LAND.

(h) See title HUSBAND AND WIFE, Vol. XVI., pp. 359 et seq. Where the property is settled for the separate use of a woman, married before the commencement of the Married Women's Property Act, 1882 (45 & 46 Vict. c. 75), i.e., 1st January, 1883, she should be described as entitled thereto "for her separate use"; where she is entitled by virtue of the Married Women's Property Act, 1882 (45 & 46 Vict. c. 75), she should be described as entitled thereto "as her separate property" (Broad v. Askham, [1909] W. N. 236); and where there is no such settlement, and the marriage took place before 1st January, 1883, the description should be, "A. B. (husband) and C. D. (wife) entitled in fee simple in right of the said C. D." (Barrett v. Watts, [1909] W. N. 237).

(i) Fines and Recoveries Act, 1833 (3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 74), s. 77; see title HUSBAND AND WIFE, Vol. XVI., p. 381.

(j) See title HUSBAND AND WIFE, Vol. XVI., pp. 323 et seq.

(k) Married Women's Property Act, 1882 (45 & 46 Vict. c. 75), ss. 2, 5; see title HUSBAND AND WIFE, Vol. XVI., p. 348.

SECT. 1.
Parties
Necessary
and Competent.

Infants absolutely entitled.

Infant tenants for life.

Lunatics absolutely entitled.

conferred on an unmarried owner the powers of a tenant for life under the Settled Land Acts (l), then if she is entitled for her separate use or for her separate property, or as a feme sole (m), she alone without her husband, or, if she is entitled otherwise than as aforesaid, she and her husband together (n), may exercise the power of partition under the Acts (l), whether she is restrained from anticipation or not (o).

1525. Where an infant (p) in his own right is seised of or entitled in possession to land, then the land is settled land for the purposes of the Settled Land Acts (l), and the infant is deemed tenant for life thereof (q). Where a tenant for life, or the person having the powers of a tenant for life under the Settled Land Acts (l), is an infant, or an infant would, if he were of age, be a tenant for life, or have the powers of a tenant for life under the Acts (l), such powers may be exercised on his behalf by the trustees of the settlement, or, if there are none, by such persons and in such manner as the court, on the application of the infant's guardian or next friend, either generally or in a particular instance orders (r).

1526. On behalf of a lunatic, whether so found by inquisition or not, a partition may be made of any property in which he is

(l) See note (r), p. 818, post, and title SETTLEMENTS.

(m) Settled Land Act, 1882 (45 & 46 Vict. c. 38), s. 61 (2).

(n) Ibid., s. 61 (3).

(o) Ibid., s. 61 (6); see p. 818, post, and title SETTLEMENTS. A married woman entitled absolutely subject to a restraint on anticipation, not being a tenant for life under the Settled Land Acts (see note (l), supra), cannot exercise the statutory power of partition (Bates v. Kesterton, [1896] 1 Ch. 159). But to effect a partition where it appears to be for her benefit, her interest may, by order of the court, be bound for the purpose under the Conveyancing Act, 1911 (1 & 2 Geo. 5, c. 37), s. 7 (Re Currey, Gibson v. Way (1887), 56 L. T. 80); and see title HUSBAND AND WIFE, Vol. XVI., p. 372.

(p) As regards partition of an infant's land independently of the Settled Land Acts (see note (l), supra). Sir Edward Coke says, in Co. Litt. 171 a, that in the case of an infant, if the partition be equal at the time of allotment, it shall bind him for ever, because he is compellable by law to make partition, and he shall not plead infancy in an action for partition; and even when the infant has an unequal share in the partition, yet the partition is not void but voidable, and if he affirms the partition after coming of age the partition is made good for ever. To the same effect, see Bac. Abr., tit. Guardian (G.), where it is stated that a guardian or next friend may bind an infant by partition if it be equal, because the division of the infant's part from the others, so far from being a prejudice to the infant, is really for his benefit and advantage. So in Whaley v. Dawson (1805), 2 Sch. & Lef. 367, the court refused to disturb a partition by parol made by the guardian of an infant which had been affirmed by the infant after he had attained twenty-one, but directed conveyances to be executed to carry out the parol partition. Guardianship in socage, to which Bacon refers (see Bac. Abr., tit. Guardian (G.)), is now practically obsolete (see title INFANTS AND CHILDREN, Vol. XVII., p. 121), and in view of the provisions in the Settled Land Acts (see the text, infra) and the extended powers of the court to order partition so as to bind infants, no prudent man would rely upon a partition by a guardian of an infant at the peril of its being set aside if it is shown to be unequal.

(q) Settled Land Act, 1882 (45 & 46 Vict. c. 38), s. 59; see title INFANTS AND CHILDREN, Vol. XVII., p. 94. As to partition of settled land, see p. 818, post.

(r) Settled Land Act, 1882 (45 & 46 Vict. c. 38), s. 60.

SECT. 1.
Parties
Necessary
and Competent.

interested as absolute owner by order of the Judge in Lunacy (s). The power is exercised, in case of a lunatic so found, by the committee of the estate, and in case of a lunatic not so found, by a person appointed by the judge (t).

A contract for partition entered into before lunacy may be ordered to be performed (u).

The transaction takes effect subject to any prior charge affecting the property at the date of the order (a).

Money for equality of partition may by order of court be given or received (b), and may be raised by mortgage (c). Money so received devolves, as between the real and personal representatives of the lunatic, in the same way as the property partitioned (d).

If a tenant for life or the person having the powers of a tenant for life under the Settled Land Acts (e) is a lunatic, the committee of the estate under an order in lunacy, if the lunatic be so found (f), or the person appointed by the court, if the lunatic be not so found (g), may exercise the power of partition under the Settled Land Acts (e) on his behalf.

Lunatic tenants for life.

1527. The trustees of a charity, subject to the jurisdiction of the Charity Commissioners (h), may with the authority of the Commissioners make partition (i), and for equality of partition apply any funds belonging to the charity for that purpose, or raise the amount by mortgage of any land acquired on the partition (k). The expenses of and incident to applying for and procuring an order of the Commissioners are paid, as the Commissioners may direct,

Charities.

(s) Lunacy Act, 1890 (53 & 54 Vict. c. 5), s. 120 (b), as to lunatics so found, made applicable to lunatics within the meaning of ibid., s. 116, by the Lunacy Act, 1908 (8 Edw. 7, c. 47), s. 1; see title LUNATICS AND PERSONS OF UNSOUND MIND, Vol. XIX., p. 445.

(t) As to the practice in obtaining the order, see title LUNATICS AND PERSONS OF UNSOUND MIND, Vol. XIX., pp. 452, 456. Powers to execute assurances and carry the order into effect are given under the Lunacy Act, 1890 (53 & 54 Vict. c. 5), s. 124; and the order generally gives directions accordingly (Re Bloomar, Singleton v. Hopkins, Basford v. Hopkins (1857), 2 De G. & J. 88, C. A.). Authority will be given to execute a disentailing deed; see Re Sherard, Lowther v. Cuffe (1863), 1 De G. J. & Sm. 421, C. A.; Re Pares, Lillingston v. Pares (1879), 12 Ch. D. 333, C. A.

(u) Lunacy Act, 1890 (53 & 54 Vict. c. 5), s. 120 (i).

(a) Lunacy Act, 1890 (53 & 54 Vict. c. 5), s. 124.

(b) Ibid., s. 120 (b).

(c) Ibid., ss. 117, 118 (1).

(d) Ibid., s. 123; see title LUNATICS AND PERSONS OF UNSOUND MIND, Vol. XIX., p. 449.

(e) For a list of the Settled Land Acts, see note (r), p. 818, post, and title SETTLEMENTS. As to partition of settled land, see p. 818, post.

(f) Settled Land Act, 1882 (45 & 46 Vict. c. 38), s. 62; and see p. 862, post.

(g) Lunacy Act, 1908 (8 Edw. 7, c. 47), s. 1, which renders obsolete the decisions in Re Baggs (a Person of alleged Unsound Mind) (1893), [1894] 2 Ch. 416, n., C. A.; Re S. S. B. (a Person of Unsound Mind not so found by Inquisition), [1906] 1 Ch. 712, C. A., and Re De Moleyns' and Harris's Contract, [1908] 1 Ch. 110; and see p. 822, post.

(h) See title CHARITIES, Vol. IV., p. 303.

(i) Charitable Trusts Amendment Act, 1855 (18 & 19 Vict. c. 124), s. 38. No express authority is given by the statute, but this section validates partitions made with the consent of the Commissioners; see, further, title CHARITIES, Vol. IV., p. 233.

(k) Charitable Trusts Amendment Act, 1855 (18 & 19 Vict. c. 124), s. 32.

SECT. 1.
Parties
Necessary
and Competent.

Ecclesiastical Commissioners.

by the trustees of the charity or the other parties to the transaction (l). Money received for equality may, with the consent of the Commissioners, be invested in the purchase of land without any licence in mortmain (n).

1528. The Ecclesiastical Commissioners have power to convey by way of partition any lands vested in them, and to borrow the amount payable for equality of partition on mortgage; and where a trustee with power of sale and the Commissioners hold land in undivided shares, they are empowered to concur in a partition of the lands (n).

Ecclesiastical
corporations.

1529. Any ecclesiastical corporation, aggregate or sole, except any college or corporation of vicars choral, priest vicars, senior vicars, custos and vicars, or minor canons, and except any ecclesiastical hospital or the master thereof (o), has power to convey by way of partition any lands belonging to the ecclesiastical corporation (p), with the consent, in the case of an incumbent of a benefice, of the patron (q), and with the approval in all cases of the Ecclesiastical Commissioners testified by deed under their common seal (p), where it appears to them to be for the permanent advantage of the estate or endowments of the corporation.

Tenants for life.

1530. Tenants for life or persons who have the powers of tenants for life under the Settled Land Acts (r) may partition (s) the settled land (a). The power is exercisable in cases of disability of the tenant for life, as already shown (b). In cases where the same person is tenant for life of one undivided share, and as regards the other undivided share or shares is either absolute owner or tenant for life under a different settlement, the power is exercisable (c) by the trustees of the settlement for the purposes of the Acts (d).

(l) Charitable Trusts Amendment Act, 1855 (18 & 19 Vict. c. 124), s. 34.

(m) Ibid., s. 35.

(n) Ecclesiastical Commissioners Act, 1860 (23 & 24 Vict. c. 124), s. 32. As to the Ecclesiastical Commissioners generally, see title ECCLESIASTICAL LAW, Vol. XI., pp. 794 et seq.

(o) Ecclesiastical Leasing Act, 1842 (5 & 6 Vict. c. 108), s. 1; see title ECCLESIASTICAL LAW, Vol. XI., p. 793.

(p) Ecclesiastical Leasing Act, 1858 (21 & 22 Vict. c. 57), s. 1.

(q) Ibid. In case of copyholds no consent of the lord of the manor is required, as under the Ecclesiastical Leasing Act, 1842 (5 & 6 Vict. c. 108), s. 20.

(r) Settled Land Acts, 1882—1890 (45 & 46 Vict. c. 38; 47 & 48 Vict. c. 18; 50 & 51 Vict. c. 30; 52 & 53 Vict. c. 36; 53 & 54 Vict. c. 69). The tenant for life is defined by the Settled Land Act, 1882 (45 & 46 Vict. c. 38), s. 2 (5), (6), (7), and the persons having the powers of tenants for life by ibid., s. 58; see, generally, as to the exercise of the powers of a tenant for life, title SETTLEMENTS.

(s) Settled Land Act, 1882 (45 & 46 Vict. c. 38), s. 3 (iv.).

(a) Defined by the Settled Land Act, 1882 (45 & 46 Vict. c. 38), s. 2 (3), as land and any estate or interest in land which is the subject of a settlement. "Settlement" is defined by ibid., s. 2 (1), as any instrument etc. under which land stands limited to or in trust for any persons by way of succession.

(b) See pp. 815, 816, ante.

(c) Settled Land Act, 1890 (53 & 54 Vict. c. 69), s. 12.

(d) Defined by the Settled Land Act, 1882 (45 & 46 Vict. c. 38), s. 2 (8),

Prior to the making of any partition, statutory notices of his intention must be given by the tenant for life (e).

The tenant for life may enter into a preliminary agreement for partition (f).

The partition need not be equal, and money may be received or paid for equality (g). The consideration, whether land alone, or land and money, must be the best that can reasonably be obtained (h). Money received for equality will be capital money, and is capital money arising under the Settled Land Acts (i), and must accordingly be paid to the trustees of the settlement or into court at the option of the tenant for life (k); it is considered of the nature of land, and devolves as the land partitioned (l). Money paid for equality may be raised out of capital moneys (m) arising under the Settled Land Acts (i), or out of money paid into court under any Act, and liable to be laid out in the purchase of land to be made subject to the settlement (a), or out of moneys in the hands of the trustees liable to be so laid out (b), or by mortgage of the settled land or any part thereof by way of conveyance or creation of a term of years or otherwise (c).

The surface and the mines and minerals may be dealt with apart from each other, and thereupon powers of working, wayleaves, and other privileges connected with mining purposes may be granted (d). Where they are not dealt with apart from each other,

SECT. 1.
Parties
Necessary
and Competent.

Notice to trustees.
Preliminary agreement.
Equality of
partition.
Consideration.

Mines and
minerals.

and the Settled Land Act, 1890 (53 & 54 Vict. c. 69), s. 16; see title SETTLEMENTS.

(e) Settled Land Act, 1882 (45 & 46 Vict. c. 38), s. 45; Settled Land Act, 1884 (47 & 48 Vict. c. 18), s. 5. For precedents of notices which may be adapted to meet any case, see Encyclopædia of Forms and Precedents, Vol. XIII., p. 711.

(f) Settled Land Act, 1882 (45 & 46 Vict. c. 38), s. 31; see ibid., s. 4 (5); Settled Land Act, 1890 (53 & 54 Vict. c. 69), s. 6. In the Encyclopædia of Forms and Precedents, Vol. XVI., p. 447, the general editor of that work expresses with hesitation the opinion that there is no power for the tenant for life to agree to the property being partitioned by the award of an independent person, on the ground that it is a delegation of the power; see Peters v. Lewes and East Grinstead Rail. Co. (1881), 18 Ch. D. 429, 436, 437, C. A.; Re Wilton's (Earl) Settled Estates, [1907] 1 Ch. 50; and note (a), p. 820, post.

(g) Settled Land Act, 1882 (45 & 46 Vict. c. 38), s. 3 (iv.).

(h) Ibid., s. 4 (2).

(i) As to the Settled Land Acts, see note (r), p. 818, ante; title SETTLEMENTS.

(k) Settled Land Act, 1882 (45 & 46 Vict. c. 38), s. 22 (1). Where the tenant for life is an infant and persons are appointed to exercise the powers (see p. 816, ante), and there are no trustees, the order should direct payment into court; see Re Dudley's (Countess) Contract (1887), 35 Ch. D. 338.

(l) Settled Land Act, 1882 (45 & 46 Vict. c. 38), s. 22.

(m) Ibid., s. 21 (iv.).

(a) Ibid., s. 32.

(b) Ibid., s. 33.

(c) Ibid., s. 18. For a form of such a mortgage, see Encyclopædia of Forms and Precedents, Vol. VIII., p. 578, and for a form of mortgage of copyholds, ibid., p. 623.

(d) Settled Land Act, 1882 (45 & 46 Vict. c. 38), s. 17. As to mining rights generally, see title MINES, MINERALS, AND QUARRIES, Vol. XX., pp. 497, 510 et seq.

SECT. 1.
Parties
Necessary
and Competent.

Restrictions and easements.

Shifting
incumbrances.

The assurance.

Effect upon the land acquired.

any restriction or reservation may be made with respect to mines and minerals, or for the more beneficial working of them (e).

Any restriction or reservation for such purpose, or with regard to building on land or other user of land, may be made binding on the tenant for life, and the settled land or any part thereof, or on the other co-owners, and the land given on partition to them, as far as the law permits (e). Any easements, rights, and privileges of any kind may also be reserved or granted (f).

If there is an incumbrance affecting the particular land given by the tenant for life on partition, he may, with the consent of the incumbrancer, charge the incumbrance on any other part of the settled land in exoneration of that particular land (g).

The tenant for life may execute a deed conveying or creating the estates and interests, rights and privileges in the manner requisite to give effect to the partition (h).

Land acquired on a partition is conveyed so as to become subject to the settlement (i); it may be made a substituted security for money, actually raised and remaining unpaid, which was a charge on the settled land before partition and was released in order to complete the partition (k), but it is not to be subjected to any charge not charged previous to partition on the part of the settled land partitioned (l). The person conveying by the direction of the tenant for life, so as to subject the land to a charge, is not concerned to inquire as to the propriety of making the land so subject (m).

SUB-SECT. 4.—Donees of Express Powers.

Powers
authorising
partition.

1531. A power of, or trust for, sale in the usual form, involving as it does a monetary consideration, does not authorise a partition, but a power of exchange does authorise a partition, at all events where there are not more than two co-owners (a).

(e) Settled Land Act, 1882 (45 & 46 Vict. c. 38), s. 4 (6).

(f) Settled Land Act, 1890 (53 & 54 Vict. c. 69), s. 5.

(g) Settled Land Act, 1882 (45 & 46 Vict. c. 38), s. 5.

(h) Ibid., ss. 20 (1), 55 (2). As to the effect of such an assurance, see the Settled Land Act, 1882 (45 & 46 Vict. c. 38), s. 20 (2), and title SETTLEMENTS. As to copyholds, see title COPYHOLDS, Vol. VIII., p. 108.

(i) Settled Land Act, 1882 (45 & 46 Vict. c. 38), s. 24 (2), (3); see Encyclopædia of Forms and Precedents, Vol. IX., pp. 419, 436, 440, 447, 450.

(k) Settled Land Act, 1882 (45 & 46 Vict. c. 38), s. 24 (4).

(l) Ibid., s. 24 (5).

(m) Ibid., s. 24 (6).

(a) The much debated question whether powers of sale and exchange authorise partition is now, in view of the very wide statutory powers of partition conferred on tenants for life and other limited owners (see p. 815, ante), of little more than academic interest; for, where there is any doubt as to the extent of the powers conferred on the trustees, partition can be effected by their cestuis que trust or the persons empowered to act for them when under disability. The statement in the text, supra, is the effect of the decisions in M'Queen v. Farquhar (1805), 11 Ves. 467, and Re Frith and Osborne (1876), 3 Ch. D. 618. In Re Frith and Osborne, supra, JESSEL, M.R., reviewed the earlier authorities and following Doe d. Knight v. Spencer (1848), 2 Exch. 752, came to the conclusion that a power of exchange authorised a partition between two co-owners, and 1532. In cases where a power of partition, conferred on a trustee or other person, does not in any way authorise a partition of the surface and minerals separately (b), the High Court (c), and, within their respective jurisdictions, the palatine and county courts (d), may sanction a partition of the land with an exception or reservation of any minerals, with or without rights and powers of or incidental to the working, getting, or carrying away the minerals, or a partition of the minerals separately from the surface (e).

SECT. 1.
Parties
Necessary
and Competent.

Surface and minerals separated.

intimated his opinion (see Re Frith and Osborne (1876), 3 Ch. D. 618, 629) that it also authorised a partition between any number of co-owners. In New South Wales it has been decided accordingly; see Re Thompson's Trusts, Perpetual Trustee Co., Ltd. v. Thompson (1908), 9 New South Wales State Reports, 38, in which case it was said that the opinions expressed to the contrary in Doe d. Knight v. Spencer (1848), 2 Exch. 752, 769, were founded on a misapprehension of Eton College (Provost) v. Winchester (Bishop) (1774), 3 Wils. 468, 497. In A.-G. v. Hamilton (1816), 1 Madd. 214, a title depending on the question whether a power of exchange authorised partition was held too doubtful to be forced on a purchaser; and compare Brassey v. Chalmers, Seacombe v. Holme (1853), 4 De G. M. & G. 528, C. A.; though in Abell v. Heathcote (1793), 4 Bro. C. C. 278, and Bradshaw v. Fane (1856), 2 Jur. (N. S.) 247, powers of sale and exchange in somewhat special form were held to authorise a partition. Of course where a power of sale includes the acceptance of a consideration other than monetary the result may be to authorise a partition; and similarly where there is a power of sale and a power to reinvest the proceeds in land, the same result as a partition may be attained by selling the undivided moiety proposed to be allotted to the other co-owner and purchasing the moiety proposed to be taken in exchange. In the Encyclopædia of Forms and Precedents, Vol. XVI., p. 447, the general editor of that work expresses the opinion that (in the absence of express power, and notwithstanding the Trustee Act, 1893 (56 & 57 Vict. c. 53), s. 21) trustees with an express power of partition cannot agree to partition by means of an award of a third person (see p. 814, ante), on the ground that it would be a delegation of the power; and as to such delegation, see title TRUSTS AND TRUSTEES. The partition in Brassey v. Chalmers, Seacombe v. Holme, supra, was effected in this manner, but was attacked on another ground, and the point was not argued. In the United States such a partition is certainly valid where not prohibited by statute or otherwise (Phelps v. Harris (1879), 101 United States Reports, 370, 383). Partition by trustees under a power appears to differ from the exercise of a discretionary power, in that partition may be compulsory on them at the suit of their co-owners.

(b) E.g., as in Buckley v. Howell (1861), 29 Beav. 546, following Cholmeley v. Paxton (1825), 3 Bing. 207. If the minerals are already partly leased or disposed of separately, the case may be different, as in that case it appears that such a power is implied (Rowbotham v. Wilson (1860), 6 Jur. (N. S.) 965, H. L.; and see Re Rutland's (Duke) Settled Estates, Rutland (Duke) v. Bristol (Marquis), [1900] 2 Ch. 206, per BYRNE, J., at p. 210 (a case of a power to lease under a settlement), following Re Gladstone, Gladstone v. Gladstone, [1900] 2 Ch. 101, C. A. (a case of the powers of leasing under the Settled Land Acts).

(c) Trustee Act, 1893 (56 & 57 Vict. c. 53), s. 44 (1), re-enacting the Confirmation of Sales Act, 1862 (25 & 26 Vict. c. 108), and amended by the Trustee Act, 1893, Amendment Act, 1894 (57 & 58 Vict. c. 10), s. 3.

(d) Trustee Act, 1893 (56 & 57 Vict. c. 53), s. 46; see titles COUNTY COURTS, Vol. VIII., p. 691; COURTS, Vol. IX., pp. 122, 126.

(e) The application in the High Court and Chancery of Lancaster is made by petition by the trustee or donee of the power (R. S. C., Ord. 54B, rr. 2, 3; Chancery of Lancaster (Trustee Act) Rules, 1893, rr. 1, 2). The petition should be served on beneficiaries, including remaindermen (Re Hardstaff, [1899] W. N. 256, following Re Woodcock's Trustees (1893), 37

SECT. 1.
Parties
Necessary
and Competent.

Consent of tenant for life.

Lunatics.

Afterwards the trustee or other person may from time to time partition any such land or minerals without any further application to the court, unless forbidden by the instrument creating the trust or power (f).

The consent of the tenant for life under the Settled Land Acts (g), if any, is necessary in all cases, except where the settlement is by way of trust for sale (h); but the consent of one of several persons constituting the tenant for life is sufficient (i).

1533. A power of partition may be exercised, or consent to the exercise thereof may be given, on behalf of a donee or tenant for life who is of unsound mind, whether so found or not, by order of the Court in Lunacy (j).

SECT. 2.—Property which may be Partitioned by Agreement.

Corporeal heredita-
ments.

1534. Land of any tenure (k), and all kinds of corporeal hereditaments and any estate therein (l), may be partitioned by agreement.

Incorporeal
heredita-
ments.

1535. Certain incorporeal hereditaments, in respect of which one of several owners has remedies to enforce his rights independently of the others, may be partitioned by agreement, for example, rent-

Sol. Jo. 250; and see Re Brown's Trust Estate (1862), 11 W. R. 19; Re Palmer's Will (1872), L. R. 13 Eq. 408. In Re Wadsworth's Trust (1890), 63 L. T. 217, and Re Skinner, [1896] W. N. 68, service on certain beneficiaries was dispensed with; and in Re Pryse's Estates (1870), L. R. 10 Eq. 531, followed in Re Nagle's Trusts (1877), 6 Ch. D. 104, service on remaindermen was held unnecessary.

(f) Trustee Act, 1893 (56 & 57 Vict. c. 53), s. 44 (2). The order of court may give a general sanction, i.e., without regard to any proposed partition; see Re Wynn's Devised Estates (1873), L. R. 16 Eq. 237; Re Stamford and Warrington's (Earl) Trusts (1896), 40 Sol. Jo. 771.

(g) As to the Settled Land Acts, see note (r), p. 818, ante, and title SETTLEMENTS.

(h) Settled Land Act, 1882 (45 & 46 Vict. c. 38), s. 56 (2); Settled Land Act, 1884 (47 & 48 Vict. c. 18), s. 6 (1).

(i) Settled Land Act, 1884 (47 & 48 Vict. c. 18), s. 6 (2); but where the shares in the land are settled separately, the tenants for life do not constitute together the tenants for life of the whole within this provision, and accordingly all their consents are necessary (Re Osborne and Bright's, Ltd., [1902] 1 Ch. 335); and see title SETTLEMENTS.

(j) Lunacy Act, 1890 (53 & 54 Vict. c. 5), s. 120 (l) (lunatics so found); Lunacy Act, 1908 (8 Edw. 7, c. 47), s. 1 (lunatics not so found); see title LUNATICS AND PERSONS OF UNSOUND MIND, Vol. XIX., p. 448; and see p. 817, ante.

(k) Leaseholds may be thus partitioned even in a case where the court would refuse to make partition (North v. Guinan (1829), Beat. 342). For a form of apportionment of rent between part owners of leaseholds, compare Encyclopædia of Forms and Precedents, Vol. II., p. 12. The exceptions, under this head, of castles necessary for the defence of the realm and villeins, mentioned in Co. Litt. 164 b, 165 c, and land held for services abroad (Bracton's Note Book, pl. 703) are of mere antiquarian interest.

(l) E.g., estates in reversion and remainder in corporeal hereditaments (Oakeley v. Smith (1759), 1 Eden, 261). Agreements for the partition of mere expectancies were enforced in Beckley v. Newland (1723), 2 P. Wms. 182; Wethered v. Wethered (1828), 2 Sim. 183. As to partition of lands subject to leases, see title LANDLORD AND TENANT, Vol. XVIII., p. 590.

charges (m). So easements, where the tenement in respect of which they are enjoyed is partitioned, may usually be exercised by the separate owners (n). Advowsons also may be partitioned (o). Other incorporeal hereditaments cannot be partitioned (p). The co-owners of such hereditaments may agree to exercise their rights in turns (q), or in any other manner to secure equality (r); but the only way to obtain severance of the co-ownership is for one owner to purchase the rights of the other co-owners (s).

SECT. 2.
Property which may be Partitioned by Agreement.

SECT. 3.—Formalities.

1536. The formalities are the same as for an assurance on sale (t), and a deed is necessary to effectuate the partition in the case of land and hereditaments, other than copyholds (a). In practice a preliminary agreement is usually made, providing for the method of making partition (b), and for other matters of title and adjustment of rights between the parties (c).

Preliminary agreement and assurance.

(m) Co. Litt. 164 b. The land is subject to separate distresses for each part of the rent (Rivis v. Watson (1839), 5 M. & W. 255). For forms, see Encyclopædia of Forms and Precedents, Vol. II., pp. 16, 18; and as to rentcharges generally, see title RENTCHARGES AND ANNUITIES.

(n) Newcomen v. Coulson (1877), 5 Ch. D. 133, C. A., per JESSEL, M.R., at p. 141; see title EASEMENTS AND PROFITS À PRENDRE, Vol. XI., pp. 253, 274. As against the owner of the servient tenement, the usual rule will apply, that no greater or more extended right can be enjoyed than if the whole remained undivided; see Menzies v. Macdonald (1856), 2 Jur. (N. S.) 575, H. L. In Morland v. Cook (1868), L. R. 6 Eq. 252, explained in Austerberry v. Oldham Corporation (1885), 29 Ch. D. 750, 774, C. A., an obligation to maintain a sea wall was imposed on the owners of aliquot shares of land after partition, and secured by a charge on the shares.

(o) By alternate presentations (Advowsons Act, 1707 (7 Anne, c. 18)); see title ECCLESIASTICAL LAW, Vol. XI., p. 572.

(p) E.g., profits à prendre of uncertain character, fisheries etc., franchises of ferry, market etc., fealty, the seignories of manors and inheritances of honour and dignity (Co. Litt. 164 b).

(q) Co. Litt. 165 a.

(r) E.g., by taking equal quantities of the produce (Co. Litt. 164 b, 165 a). This was done in Re Trimmer, Crundwell v. Trimmer (1904), 91 L. T. 26 (shares in the New River Company).

(s) Co. Litt. 164 b, 165 a.

(t) See title SALE OF LAND.

(a) Real Property Act, 1845 (8 & 9 Vict. c. 106), s. 3. For forms, see Encyclopædia of Forms and Precedents, Vol. IX., pp. 419 et seq. As to the effect of a conveyance by a tenant for life under the Settled Land Act, 1882 (45 & 46 Vict. c. 38), s. 20, see title SETTLEMENTS.

(b) According to the methods mentioned in p. 814, ante.

(c) For a form of such an agreement, see Encyclopædia of Forms and Precedents, Vol. IX., p. 425, and the modifications thereof, ibid., Vol. XVI., p. 447, where trustees or tenants for life are concerned (see note (a), p. 820, ante). In making such a preliminary agreement, the considerations applicable to a family arrangement will often arise; see title FAMILY ARRANGEMENTS, Vol. XIV., pp. 539 et seq. The liability to pay the costs of completion of the assurance, as between the specific devisees and the general personal estate of a co-owner who dies before completion, and in the absence of direction by him, falls on the devisees (Re Tann, Tann v. Tann, Gravatt v. Tann (1) (1869), L. R. 7 Eq. 434). As to the division of easements on partition apart from express provision, see Newcomen v. Coulson (1877), 5 Ch. D. 133, C. A., per JESSEL, M.R., at p. 141.

- SECT. 3. 1537. In the case of copyholds (d) a partition, as a rule, is only complete on surrender and admittance (e), which may, it seems, be compelled as against the lord of the manor (f).
- Formalities. 1538. With regard to any part of the land which is situated in a district in which registration under the Land Transfer Acts, 1875 and 1897 (g), is compulsory on sale, the instrument should be in the official form if the land is already registered (h); if the land is not already registered, it does not appear to be compulsory to bring the land on to the register (i).
- Copyholds.
- Land in registration district.
- Stamp duties. 1539. The stamp duty chargeable on the partition, where no consideration for equality of partition is paid or where the consideration for equality does not exceed £100 in amount or value, is 10s. (k), and where such consideration does exceed that amount or value, is charged ad valorem on that consideration as on a sale (l).
- Increment value duty. A partition is not, however, a sale (m) within the meaning of the Stamp Acts (n), and accordingly increment value duty does not appear to be payable (o).

Part III.—Partition by Order of the Board of Agriculture and Fisheries.

SECT. 1.—Jurisdiction of the Board.

- Jurisdiction. 1540. The Board of Agriculture and Fisheries (hereinafter called "the Board"), upon which the powers of the Inclosure Commissioners for England and Wales have devolved (p), has power to (d) As to deeds executed by a tenant for life, see title COPYHOLDS, Vol. VIII., p. 108.

(e) Oakeley v. Smith (1759), 1 Eden, 261, per CLARKE, M.R., at p. 265; Elton, Copyholds, 2nd ed., p. 117.

(f) See Bolton v. Ward (1845), 4 Hare, 530.

(g) 38 & 39 Vict. c. 87; 60 & 61 Vict. c. 65; see title REAL PROPERTY AND CHATTELS REAL.

(h) Land Transfer Rules, 1903, r. 156, and Sched. I., Form 43; Encyclopædia of Forms and Precedents, Vol. XI., p. 389.

(i) See Encyclopædia of Forms and Precedents, Vol. IX., p. 420.

(k) Stamp Act, 1891 (54 & 55 Vict. c. 39), Sched.

(l) Ibid., s. 73; see ibid., Sched., as altered by the Finance (1909-10) Act, 1910 (10 Edw. 7, c. 8), s. 73; title SALE OF LAND.

(m) Henniker v. Henniker (1852), 1 E. & B. 54.

(n) See, generally, title REVENUE.

(o) For increment value duty generally, see titles REVENUE; SALE OF LAND.

(p) See title COMMONS AND RIGHTS OF COMMON, Vol. IV., pp. 535, 536. As to the constitution of the Board, see titles AGRICULTURE, Vol. I., p. 297; CONSTITUTIONAL LAW, Vol. VII., p. 104.

make an order of partition of any land (q) vested in persons interested in undivided shares or as joint tenants, coparceners, or tenants in common upon their request in writing (r), the costs being borne by the persons interested who apply for partition in such proportions as may be ordered (s). Land allotted on partition is held for the same estates, uses, and trusts as the undivided shares were held (t), and is subject to the same tenures, customs and services (a).

SECT. 1.
Jurisdiction of the Board.

1541. Partition by the Board does not determine any question of title, and any defects of title in the undivided shares are transferred to the land allotted in severalty. Further, unless the applicants for partition are persons entitled to apply, the Board has no jurisdiction, and a partition made confers no title (b).

Title.

1542. An order may be made on the application of the owners of two-thirds in value of the property, or, in the case of a partition under an inclosure award, on the application of any party interested, notwithstanding the opposition of the other parties interested (c).

Compulsory process.

1543. The Board may also confirm a partition agreed upon but not completed, if the parties are in possession under such agreement (d).

Confirmation of uncompleted partition.

SECT. 2.—Property which may be Partitioned by Order.

1544. The Board may make orders for partition of the following:—Messuages, lands, and corporeal tenements and hereditaments (e);

Property.

(g) The Inclosure Act, 1845 (8 & 9 Vict. c. 118), s. 90, was confined to land to be inclosed under the Act. The Inclosure Act, 1848 (11 & 12 Vict. c. 99), extended the powers of the Inclosure Commissioners as regards partition to land not subject to be inclosed under the Act, and to land liable to be so inclosed as to which no proceedings for inclosure were pending (Inclosure Act, 1848 (11 & 12 Vict. c. 99), s. 13). The Inclosure Act, 1854 (17 & 18 Vict. c. 97), extended all the provisions of the previous Acts as regards partition to land subject to be inclosed under the Acts as to which proceedings for inclosure were pending (ibid., s. 1), and extended the meaning of the word “land” to incorporeal hereditaments (ibid., s. 3; see p. 826, post), and also extended the range of persons who could apply for partition under the Acts (Inclosure Act, 1854 (17 & 18 Vict. c. 97), ss. 4, 5; see p. 826, post). The Commons Act, 1876 (39 & 40 Vict. c. 56), s. 33, made the Inclosure Act, 1845 (8 & 9 Vict. c. 118), s. 105, applicable to partition orders carried out by separate orders and not included in an inclosure award.

(r) Inclosure Act, 1845 (8 & 9 Vict. c. 118), s. 90.

(s) Ibid., s. 91; and see p. 854, post.

(t) Inclosure Act, 1845 (8 & 9 Vict. c. 118), s. 93.

(a) Ibid., s. 94.

(b) Jacomb v. Turner, [1892] 1 Q. B. 47, 51. In consequence possibly of these considerations and of the fact that there is no power to award money for equality of partition (see p. 828, post), the powers of the Board have been but seldom resorted to in the past.

(c) Inclosure Act, 1849 (12 & 13 Vict. c. 83), s. 7; Inclosure Act, 1859 (22 & 23 Vict. c. 43), s. 11; Doe d. Knight v. Spencer (1848), 2 Exch. 752, 767 (a case under the Inclosure (Consolidation) Act, 1801 (41 Geo. 3, c. 109)).

(d) Inclosure Act, 1854 (17 & 18 Vict. c. 97), s. 5.

(e) Inclosure Act, 1845 (8 & 9 Vict. c. 118), s. 167, defining “land” under that Act.

SECT. 2.
Property which may be Partitioned.

copyholds and customary freeholds, subject to the consent of the lord of the manor (f); cattle gates or other gates; any rights of common, whether defined by numbers or stints (g) or otherwise; rights of fishing, manorial and other rights, and all easements over any land; quit-rents, chief rents, heriots, tithes and rentcharges (h); and other incorporeal hereditaments (i).

SECT. 3.—Persons who may Apply.

Applicants.

1545. The persons interested, as defined in the following provisions, may apply (k); if two-thirds in value of them apply, that is deemed to be the application of all persons interested or having any estate in the property (l).

In the case of land subject to be inclosed under the Inclosure Acts (m), as to which proceedings for inclosure are pending, any of the persons so interested in allotments made under the inclosure may apply, the partition being specified in the inclosure award (n).

Persons
interested.

The term "persons interested" means (o):—

(1) The persons in the actual possession or enjoyment of the property, or in the actual receipt of the rents and profits, without regard to the real amount of interest of such persons (p).

Reversioners.

(2) Where the land is subject to a lease or agreement for a lease for life or lives or years at a rent of not less than two-thirds of the clear yearly value, or for years not exceeding fourteen from the commencement of the term, or to a tenancy from year to year or at will or sufferance, the reversioner immediately expectant on the term or

(f) Inclosure Act, 1846 (9 & 10 Vict. c. 70), s. 9, which relates to exchanges, and is applied to partitions by the Inclosure Act, 1848 (11 & 12 Vict. c. 99) s. 14.

(g) Inclosure Act, 1846 (9 & 10 Vict. c. 70), s. 11, which relates to exchanges, and is applied to partitions by the Inclosure Act, 1848 (11 & 12 Vict. c. 99), s. 14.

(h) Inclosure Act, 1849 (12 & 13 Vict. c. 83), s. 7.

(i) Inclosure Act, 1854 (17 & 18 Vict. c. 97), s. 3.

(k) Inclosure Act, 1848 (11 & 12 Vict. c. 99), s. 13, which does not say "any persons interested," as in case of applications for inclosure generally (Inclosure Act, 1845 (8 & 9 Vict. c. 118), s. 25), or for partition of lands to be inclosed under the Acts (ibid., s. 90); see Doe d. Knight v. Spencer (1848), 2 Exch. 752. As to the application of the Inclosure Act, 1848 (11 & 12 Vict. c. 99), s. 13, see note (q), p. 825, ante.

(l) Inclosure Act, 1849 (12 & 13 Vict. c. 83), s. 7; compare Inclosure Act, 1859 (22 & 23 Vict. c. 43), s. 11; and see pp. 830, 831, post.

(m) See title COMMONS AND RIGHTS OF COMMON, Vol. IV., pp. 535 et seq.

(n) Inclosure Act, 1845 (8 & 9 Vict. c. 118), s. 90; see Inclosure Act, 1854 (17 & 18 Vict. c. 97), s. 1.

(o) Inclosure Act, 1845 (8 & 9 Vict. c. 118), s. 16.

(p) The parties are only entitled to partition of such lands as they are interested in (Inclosure Act, 1848 (11 & 12 Vict. c. 99), s. 13), and therefore, although the statutory definition extends to persons so interested in the lands "or any part thereof," these words are only applicable to partition with the necessary modification. The parties, therefore, must comprise the persons interested in the whole of the lands to be partitioned (Jacomb v. Turner, [1892] 1 Q. B. 47, 53).

the person for the time being entitled to the land subject to the tenancy is the person interested (q).

(3) Where the land is subject to a lease or agreement for a lease for life or lives, or for years exceeding fourteen from the commencement of the term, at a rent less than two-thirds of the clear yearly value, the tenant jointly with the person in actual receipt of the rent is the person interested (r). But it is not necessary in such a case that any lessee should join in the application by a reversioner (s).

Where the term was originally for over a hundred years, and it is proved that no rent or acknowledgment has been paid or given for twenty years, or that the person entitled to the rent cannot upon reasonable inquiry be ascertained, such tenant alone is the person interested (t).

(4) Where any person is in possession or enjoyment or receipt of rents and profits under any sequestration, extent, elegit or other writ of execution (a), or as a receiver under any order of court (b), such person, and the person who but for such writ or order would have been in possession, enjoyment or receipt of rents and profits, are jointly the persons interested (c).

(5) Where any person interested is an infant, lunatic, or idiot, or is a married woman to whom the provisions of the Married Women's Property Acts (d) do not apply, or is under any other legal disability or beyond the seas, the guardian, trustee, committee of the estate (e), husband (f) or attorney respectively, or, in default thereof, a person nominated for that purpose by the Board, is substituted for the person interested (g).

1546. Where litigation is pending concerning the title, then the consent of both parties to the litigation is equivalent to the consent

SECT. 3.

Persons who may Apply.

Tenants and persons in receipt of rent.

Sequestrators
etc.

Persons under disability.

Litigated
title.

(q) Inclosure Act, 1845 (8 & 9 Vict. c. 118), s. 16.

(r) Ibid.

(s) Inclosure Act, 1859 (22 & 23 Vict. c. 43), s. 10. The exceptions only operate to prevent certain lessees themselves applying for partition, except with the concurrence of their reversioners. The lessees in such cases cannot give notice of dissent; see p. 830, post.

(t) Inclosure Act, 1854 (17 & 18 Vict. c. 97), s. 4. This case is the only one in which proof of title can be required by the Board; in other cases they have no jurisdiction to inquire into the title (Inclosure Act, 1845 (8 & 9 Vict. c. 118), s. 49).

(a) See title EXECUTION, Vol. XIV., pp. 37 et seq.

(b) The statutory expression is "a Court of Equity"; the instructions of the Board confine this case to the High Court of Justice, but there seems no doubt that it extends to all courts exercising the equity jurisdiction, including county courts and palatine courts; see title RECEIVERS.

(c) Inclosure Act, 1845 (8 & 9 Vict. c. 118), s. 16.

(d) See title HUSBAND AND WIFE, Vol. XVI., p. 348. In other cases the married woman alone applies.

(e) In the case of a lunatic not so found by inquisition it would appear that the application can be made by a quasi-committee appointed under the Lunacy Act, 1890 (53 & 54 Vict. c. 5), s. 116 (Lunacy Act, 1908 (8 Edw. 7, c. 47), s. 1).

(f) It is the practice of the Board to require the consent of both husband and wife.

(g) Inclosure Act, 1845 (8 & 9 Vict. c. 118), s. 20.

SECT. 3.
Persons
who may Apply.

of the actual owner (h), and if, according to the claim of any party to the litigation, more than one person would be or become interested in the property, the consent or (as the case may require) non-signification of dissent by such persons as would have been sufficient to give an effective consent as persons interested if the claim had been established, is equivalent to the consent of the claimant under this rule (i).

Shares held under separate titles.

Any person interested in more than one undivided share, held under separate titles or for distinct interests or subject to separate charges or incumbrances, may effect partition as if different persons had been interested therein (k).

Agent.

1547. Any person interested may appoint an agent for the purpose of obtaining partition by the Board (l); such agent has statutory power to sign, concur in, and execute any application or act and to signify consent or dissent, and to bind his principal thereby.

Uncompleted
partition.

1548. Where persons are in possession of land under an agreement for partition not legally completed, they may apply as if they were the persons interested (m).

SECT. 4.—Equality of Partition.

Equality of
partition.

1549. A partition cannot be authorised where the deficiency in value of any land or hereditaments, for which compensation is required under a proposed partition, exceeds, in the opinion of the Board, one-eighth of the value thereof (n).

Compensation
by means of rentcharge.

1550. The Board is only authorised to give compensation by means of a perpetual rentcharge or perpetual rentcharges of such amount as in the opinion of the Board (or the Board's valuer in case of a partition under an inclosure award) is just (o). Such a rentcharge is charged on the whole or part of the lands for the excess in value of which the rentcharge is an equivalent (p). The amount of any such rentcharge and the lands to be charged are to be determined by the order of the Board or the inclosure award as the case may require (q).

(h) Inclosure Act, 1847 (10 & 11 Vict. c. 111), s. 1; applied by the Inclosure Act, 1848 (11 & 12 Vict. c. 99), s. 14.

(i) Inclosure Act, 1847 (10 & 11 Vict. c. 111), s. 2, similarly applied.

(k) Inclosure Act, 1852 (15 & 16 Vict. c. 79), s. 31.

(l) Inclosure Act, 1845 (8 & 9 Vict. c. 118), s. 21. A simple form of power of attorney is provided, but is not compulsory; the power of attorney is free from stamp duty (ibid., s. 163). As to stamp duty generally, see title REVENUE.

(m) Inclosure Act, 1854 (17 & 18 Vict. c. 97), s. 5.

(n) Inclosure Act, 1857 (20 & 21 Vict. c. 31), s. 8.

(o) Ibid., s. 7. The Board does not recommend these rentcharges, as they are inconvenient in practice.

(p) Ibid., s. 7.

(q) Ibid., s. 9.

Such a rentcharge has priority over all charges other than tithe rentcharge, land tax, local rates and taxes, quit-rents or chief rents incidental to tenure, and charges created or to be created under Drainage or Improvement Acts (r), and is recoverable in the same manner as tithe rentcharge (s).

To such a rentcharge there attach the uses, trusts, conditions, charges and incumbrances attached to the land for the deficiency in value of which it is compensation (t).

SECT. 4.
Equality of Partition.

Priority and devolution of rentcharges.

SECT. 5.—Practice and Procedure (a).

1551. An application in writing (b) is first made by the persons interested (c), accompanied by a plan (d) and a valuation made by a competent valuer. Both application and valuation are first submitted to the Board in draft before signature, in order that all necessary alterations may be made before execution and completion. Where the lands to be partitioned are in more than one parish, the lands of each parish should be kept distinct.

Draft
application.

1552. The valuer should be chosen by the parties applying; he should be competent (e) and not the agent of, or connected with, any of the parties. The parties may each choose a separate valuer, however, in which case a joint valuation should be made by the valuers. The valuation should contain all necessary information Valuation.

(r) See title LAND IMPROVEMENT, Vol. XVIII., pp. 275 et seq.

(s) Inclosure Act, 1857 (20 & 21 Vict. c. 31), s. 10. As to the recovery of tithe rentcharge, see title ECCLESIASTICAL LAW, Vol. XI., pp. 748, 749.

(t) Inclosure Act, 1857 (20 & 21 Vict. c. 31), s. 11.

(a) The Board's Instructions, Form B $\frac{30}{A}$, should be obtained by persons intending to apply: they relate also to exchanges and divisions of intermixed lands; the provisions essential to partition appear in the text, infra, and pp. 830—832, post, and in the notes thereto.

(b) Inclosure Act, 1848 (11 & 12 Vict. c. 99), s. 13.

(c) As to these persons, see p. 826, ante. For a form of application, see Encyclopædia of Forms and Precedents, Vol. IX., p. 432; forms are supplied by the Board free of charge.

(d) The Board requires the plan to be of a scale large enough to enable the boundaries and areas to be ascertained with accuracy, and to show details clearly; and suggests the use of the Ordnance Survey maps, latest editions, on the 1/2500 scale in rural districts, and on the 1/500 or 1/1056 scale in towns, with the necessary manuscript revisions. Boundaries not shown on the published maps should be fixed by distances measured on the ground from the nearest convenient features shown on those maps; and all boundaries of the lands referred to in each schedule should be edged with an appropriate colour, red for the first schedule, green for the second etc. The names of the owners of the lands immediately adjoining those to be partitioned should be written on the plan.

(e) The Board requires the valuer's name and residence to be submitted to them for approval before he begins to act; a valuer with experience of like matters is preferred, and if he has not acted in a similar capacity on a previous partition there should be given the names and addresses of two gentlemen who are competent to testify to his trustworthiness and ability as a valuer. As to valuers generally, see title VALUERS AND APPRAISERS.

SECT. 5. for the use of the Board (f), and a certificate to the prescribed Practice and effect (g).
Procedure.

Inquiries by Board.

1553. The Board has power to direct inquiries whether the proposed partition will be beneficial to the owners of the undivided shares; and no order for partition will be made unless the Board is of opinion that the partition would be beneficial and that its terms are just and reasonable (h).

Formal application.

1554. The draft application and valuation having been approved formal signature takes place, the valuation is stamped (i), and the application and valuation are sent to the Board.

Notice.

Notice is then given (k) by advertisement for two successive weeks in a local newspaper circulating in the county where the lands are situated (l).

Dissent.

1555. One month is allowed to elapse from the publication of the last of the advertisements. During the month any person entitled to any estate in or any charge upon any land included in such proposed partition may give notice in writing to the Board of his dissent. Where land or other subject-matter of partition is held under a lease at one entire rent, the lessee has no power of giving notice of dissent (m). If the application for partition is made by two-thirds in value of the persons interested no notice of dissent can be given by any other person (n).

The Board cannot confirm any order for partition of the land unless the dissent is withdrawn, or it is shown to the Board that the estate or charge of the party dissenting has ceased (o), or is not (f) Compare Inclosure Act, 1845 (8 & 9 Vict. c. 118), s. 24 (now repealed), as to inclosures. The Board requires various particulars to be stated: thus each separate field or hereditament should be mentioned separately, and its annual rental value, fee simple value, and the number of years' purchase giving that value, should be specified, with reasons for any variations in the value per acre and the number of years' purchase from those of any other portions, or from the number of years' purchase usually adopted in the district. The nature of the soil and buildings, the value of the timber and minerals, if any, and the outgoing (tithe rentcharge, land tax, chief rents etc.), and whether payable by owner or occupier, the objects of the partition, and the circumstances which render it desirable, should all be stated, and if any lot has any special value or accommodation value to the estate to which it will be attached, the particulars should be given; see Encyclopædia of Forms and Precedents, Vol. V., p. 604.

(g) See ibid., p. 607.

(h) Inclosure Act, 1848 (11 & 12 Vict. c. 99), s. 13.

(i) Otherwise the Board cannot proceed (Inclosure, etc. Expenses Act, 1868 (31 & 32 Vict. c. 89), s. 2). As to stamp duty on valuations, see title VALUERS AND APPRAISERS. As to stamp duty generally, see title REVENUE.

(k) Inclosure Act, 1845 (8 & 9 Vict. c. 118), s. 150, applied by the Inclosure Act, 1848 (11 & 12 Vict. c. 99), s. 14, and amended by the Commons Act, 1899 (62 & 63 Vict. c. 30), s. 19.

(l) Inclosure Act, 1845 (8 & 9 Vict. c. 118), s. 162.

(m) Inclosure Act, 1859 (22 & 23 Vict. c. 43), s. 10.

(n) Ibid., s. 11; see Inclosure Act, 1849 (12 & 13 Vict. c. 83), s. 7, and p. 826, ante.

(o) Inclosure Act, 1845 (8 & 9 Vict. c. 118), s. 150, applied by the Inclosure Act, 1848 (11 & 12 Vict. c. 99), s. 14.

more than one-third in value of the entirety of the property to be partitioned.

SECT. 5.
Practice and Procedure.
—
Draft order.

1556. On the expiration of the month, if no notice of dissent effectual to put an end to the proceedings has been received, the Board prepares a draft of the proposed order (p), and the necessary plans showing the lands allotted in severalty to each of the persons interested in respect of their respective undivided shares (q).

1557. The draft order and plans are sent to the parties for approval, with a note of the costs incurred, which must be paid before confirmation of the order. These costs include the fees (r) and expenses (s) of the Board and the stamp duty on the order (t). The valuer's charges are paid by the parties direct (a). Payment of costs.

Except in the case of a partition comprised in an inclosure award (b), there is no provision for compelling any dissentient who is bound by the proposed order to pay his share of costs, and the whole of the costs must therefore fall on the persons making the application and on persons agreeing to share the costs with them (c). In case of any difference as to the amount of costs payable by any person, the Board may certify the amount (d), which is recoverable, on default in payment, by order of distress, to be made by two justices on the production of the certificate (e).

1558. The draft order and plans having been returned to the Board approved by the parties, and the costs having been paid (f), Confirmation of order.

(p) For a form, see Encyclopædia of Forms and Precedents, Vol. IX., p. 455.

(q) Inclosure Act, 1848 (11 & 12 Vict. c. 99), s. 13.

(r) Inclosure, etc. Expenses Act, 1868 (31 & 32 Vict. c. 89), s. 6; these fees are at present:—where the aggregate value of the land or other property dealt with does not exceed £100, £1; where that value exceeds £100 and does not exceed £200, £2; for every further £100 or fraction of £100 not exceeding £5,000, 5s.; and for every £100 or fraction of £100 exceeding £5,000, 2s. 6d.; but in no case does the fee exceed £50. The fee on the amendment of any confirmed order is £2.

(s) These expenses include the Board's costs of advertising, of preparation of plans to be attached to the order, and of engrossment of the order, besides the expenses of the inquiries, if any; see Inclosure Act, 1845 (8 & 9 Vict. c. 118), s. 147.

(t) The stamp duty is payable according to the Stamp Act, 1891 (54 & 55 Vict. c. 39), s. 73, and Schedule; see p. 224, ante, and titles REVENUE; SALE OF LAND.

(a) The Board recommends an arrangement with the valuer as to his remuneration before his valuation is undertaken.

(b) In partitions under an inclosure award the costs are to be borne by the several proprietors or persons interested in such manner and proportion as the valuer orders, and in case of non-payment are recovered as directed for the recovery of penalties and forfeitures (Inclosure Act, 1845 (8 & 9 Vict. c. 118), s. 91), namely, before two magistrates for the county, the decision being enforceable by distress (ibid., s. 159).

(c) In the case of partitions not made under an inclosure award, the provisions of the Inclosure Act, 1845 (8 & 9 Vict. c. 118), s. 147, that expenses are to be paid by the persons on whose application the order is made, are incorporated by the Inclosure Act, 1848 (11 & 12 Vict. c. 99), s. 14.

(d) Inclosure Act, 1845 (8 & 9 Vict. c. 118), s. 151.

(e) Ibid., ss. 151, 160.

(f) The Inclosure Act, 1848 (11 & 12 Vict. c. 99), s. 13, provides that

SECT. 5.
Practice and
Procedure.

Custody and delivery of copies of order.

Land in registration
district.

Correction of errors.

Effect of the
order.

the order is then engrossed and confirmed by the Board, and the plans annexed thereto.

The original order and plans are deposited with the Board, and copies of the order under the seal of the Board are delivered to each of the parties applying, or to their authorised agents (g). Where it appears to the Board, from the number of the persons interested, or the nature of their interests, that this obligation to deliver copies is inapplicable, the Board may order copies to be deposited, one with the clerk of the peace of the county, and another with the church or chapel wardens of the parish containing the lands concerned (h). In that case any person interested may inspect and obtain copies or extracts of the order, and such copies authenticated by the signature of the clerk of the peace, or his deputy, are receivable in evidence (i). The Board will, however, at the request and cost of any person on whose application the order was made, furnish him with a sealed copy (j).

1559. No further deed or act is necessary, except where the property is registered in a district in which registration under the Land Transfer Acts, 1875 and 1897 (k), is compulsory, when the order or a sealed copy should be produced at the Land Registry together with the land certificate (l).

1560. In case of any fraudulent or other error or omission in the order, the Board may make the correction by an order, either indorsed on the original order, or separate and deposited with the original order. The expenses are payable by the party requesting the correction (m).

SECT. 6.—Effect of the Order.

1561. The confirmation of the order is conclusive evidence that all the statutory directions have been complied with, and the order is not to be impeached by reason of mistake or informality in the order or any of the proceedings, or by want of statutory notices or consents, but the partition effected thereby is binding and conclusive on all persons whomsoever (n). The order is not conclusive, however, when made without jurisdiction; and if the parties the order shall be framed and confirmed on the Commissioners being of opinion that the partition would be beneficial and that its terms are just and reasonable.

(g) Inclosure Act, 1845 (8 & 9 Vict. c. 118), s. 147, applied to partition by the Inclosure Act, 1848 (11 & 12 Vict. c. 99), s. 14.

(h) Inclosure Act, 1852 (15 & 16 Vict. c. 79), s. 17, applying the provisions of the Inclosure Act, 1845 (8 & 9 Vict. c. 118), s. 146.

(i) Inclosure Act, 1845 (8 & 9 Vict. c. 118), s. 146. Fees for inspection, 2s. 6d.; copies, 3d. per folio (ibid.).

(j) Inclosure Act, 1852 (15 & 16 Vict. c. 79), s. 17.

(k) 38 & 39 Vict. c. 87; 60 & 61 Vict. c. 65: see title REAL PROPERTY AND CHATTELS REAL.

(l) Land Transfer Rules, 1903, r. 156, incorporating the practice under ibid., r. 155, as to exchanges.

(m) Inclosure Act, 1852 (15 & 16 Vict. c. 79), s. 29.

(n) Commons Act, 1876 (39 & 40 Vict. c. 56), s. 33, applying the provisions of the Inclosure Act, 1845 (8 & 9 Vict. c. 118), s. 105, relating to inclosure awards.

interested have no interest at all in some of the lands comprised in the partition the order is to that extent invalid (o).

SECT. 6.
Effect of the Order.

The uses, trusts and incumbrances of each undivided share are attached to the land allotted in severalty in respect of such share (p).

SECT. 7.—Collateral Arrangements.

1562. An exchange as well as partition may be effected where the parties are interested in undivided shares in one property, and also interested in the entireties of other lands (q). The matter rests in the first place in the agreement of the parties concerned: the procedure is then the same as already indicated (r), including the provisions as to dissent. The effect of the order is that the land allotted under the partition is held to the same uses, and on the same trusts, and subject to the same conditions, charges, and incumbrances as the undivided share of the party concerned, and the land taken in exchange is held similarly to the land given in exchange by the party concerned.

Exchange.

1563. In the case of copyholds or customary freeholds, with the consent of the lord of the manor, and of the parties taking the land on partition, the Board may declare the lands to be held as of freehold tenure on such terms and conditions as may be agreed upon, and as they deem just (s).

Enfranchise-
ment.

1564. The order may make, in accordance with the application, an exception or reservation of all or any of the mines or minerals under all or any part of the land, together with rights and easements incidental to working; and rights of way and other easements, as the parties to the application may have agreed on, may also be granted and reserved (t).

Mines and
minerals.

1565. Where any land or other subject-matter of the partition is held by one entire rent, the order of partition should apportion the rent to be paid to each of the persons to whom any part may be allotted in severalty (u); and, after confirmation of the order, the rents and services are payable accordingly.

Apportionment of rent.

(o) Jacomb v. Turner, [1892] 1 Q. B. 47. As to the effect of the order upon title, see p. 825, ante.

(p) Inclosure Act, 1848 (11 & 12 Vict. c. 99), s. 13; and, as to partitions in an inclosure award, Inclosure Act, 1845 (8 & 9 Vict. c. 118), ss. 90, 93.

(q) Inclosure Act, 1852 (15 & 16 Vict. c. 79), s. 32.

(r) See pp. 829 et seq., ante.

(s) Inclosure Act, 1847 (10 & 11 Vict. c. 111), s. 6, which expressly referred to partitions under an inclosure award, and was applied to other partitioned lands by the Inclosure Act, 1848 (11 & 12 Vict. c. 99), s. 14.

(t) Inclosure Act, 1847 (10 & 11 Vict. c. 111), s. 4, applied to partitions by the Inclosure Act, 1848 (11 & 12 Vict. c. 99), s. 14. As to mining rights, see title MINES, MINERALS, AND QUARRIES, Vol. XX., pp. 520 et seq. As to easements generally, see title EASEMENTS AND PROFITS À PRENDRE, Vol. XI., pp. 233 et seq.

(u) Inclosure Act, 1859 (22 & 23 Vict. c. 43), s. 10.

Part IV.—Partition, and Sale in Lieu of Partition, by Order of Court.

SECT. 1.

Courts having Jurisdiction.

Courts.

SECT. 1.—Courts having Jurisdiction.

1566. The courts having jurisdiction (v) to entertain actions for partition, or sale in lieu of partition, are (1) the Chancery Division

(v) By the common law, in the absence of agreement between the parties interested, the only method by which partition could be compelled was by the writ de partitione faciendâ (Fitz. Nat. Brev. 62). The writ was, according to Littleton, the origin of the name “coparceners” (Littleton’s Tenures, s. 241; Co. Litt. 164 b), and was confined to freehold hereditaments held in coparcenary (Co. Litt. 167 a). This remedy was extended by the Statute of Partition (1539), 31 Hen. 8, c. 1, to the case of all joint tenants and tenants in common in their own right or in the right of their wives, and by the Statute of Partition (1540), 32 Hen. 8, c. 32, to the case of joint tenants and tenants in common for a term of life or years, and where one of the joint tenants or tenants in common held for life or for years. The writ of partition was an extremely cumbersome and difficult process (see Lord ELDON, L.C., in Agar v. Fairfax, Agar v. Holdsworth (1811), 17 Ves. 533, 553; 1 Fonblanque, Treatise of Equity, 5th ed., p. 18; and Allnatt, Law of Partition, pp. 48 et seq.). After some attempt to simplify the process by stat. (1697) 8 & 9 Will. 3, c. 31, the writ was abolished by the Real Property Limitation Act, 1833 (3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 27), s. 36. In his note to Co. Litt. 169 a, Mr. Hargrave mentions two other writs of livery and partition applicable to lands holden in capite descended to coparceners. Owing to the extreme difficulty attending the process of partition at law, especially where the title was complicated and where discovery was necessary, the Court of Chancery assumed jurisdiction to decree partition, in proceedings instituted by bill, at a very early period (Norse v. Ludlow (1590), Toth. 155; Long v. Miller (1594), Toth. 155; Mundy v. Mundy (1793), 2 Ves. 122, 124); see also Selden Society Publications, Vol. X., p. 129, where is recorded a petition, in 1432—1443, to Stafford, Chancellor of England, asking for partition in a case where no remedy at law was available; cases even earlier are mentioned in (1311), Year Book, Maynard, Vol. I., p. 133; (1341), Y. B. 15 Edw. 3, Pasch. pl. 42 (Rolls Series, p. 103); and (1342), Y. B. 16 Edw. 3, Hil. pl. 44 (Rolls Series, I., p. 132). This distinction is to be noted between the common law judgment and the decree in equity, that while the former vested the legal estate, the latter had no such effect, but directed the parties themselves to execute the conveyances necessary to pass the legal estate. Although the Court of Chancery would decree specific performance of an agreement to partition copyholds (Bolton v. Ward (1845), 4 Hare, 530), or direct a partition of freeholds and copyholds so as to give the entire copyholds to one party (Dodson v. Dodson (1795), Allnatt, Law of Partition, p. 94; Dillon v. Coppin (1833), 6 Beav. 217, n.; Bowles v. Rump (1861), 9 W. R. 370), yet it had no jurisdiction prior to the Copyhold Act, 1841 (4 & 5 Vict. c. 35), s. 85 (see now Copyhold Act, 1894 (57 & 58 Vict. c. 46), s. 87), to direct a partition of copyholds or customary freeholds (Joze v. Morshead (1843), 6 Beav. 213). Prior to the passing of the Partition Act, 1868 (31 & 32 Vict. c. 40), partition was a matter of right, and the court had no discretion to refuse partition or to order sale in lieu thereof (Warner v. Baynes (1750), Amb. 589; Parker v. Gerard (1754), Amb. 236). This state of the law produced numerous inconveniences and absurdities. In Turner v. Morgan (1803), 8 Ves. 143, Lord ELDON, L.C., decreed partition of a single house, and Mr. Romilly in argument cited a case of a house at Cockermouth which was partitioned by actually building a wall up the middle. This state of the law led to the passing of the Partition Acts, 1868 (31 & 32 Vict. c. 40) and 1876 (39 & 40 Vict. c. 17), under which the court

SECT. 1.
Courts
having Jurisdiction.

of the High Court of Justice (a); (2) the Courts of Chancery of the Counties Palatine of Lancaster and Durham, as regards property within their respective jurisdictions (b); (3) the county court, when the property to which the suit relates does not exceed in value £500 (c); and (4) other Courts exercising equitable jurisdiction (d). Where the plaintiff dwells or carries on business within the district of one of the metropolitan county courts, and the defendant also dwells and carries on business within the district of one of such courts, the county court of the district in which either plaintiff or defendant dwells or carries on business has jurisdiction; in any other case the court having jurisdiction is that within the district of which the property is situate (e).

1567. Such an action may be maintained although there are questions of title between the parties; and the court may decide title.

Litigated

has wide powers to order a sale in lieu of partition where the nature of the property or the interest of the parties makes that more convenient. See, further, title EQUIT, Vol. XIII., p. 40.

(a) By the Judicature Act, 1873 (36 & 37 Vict. c. 66), s. 34 (3), all actions for sale or partition in the High Court are assigned to the Chancery Division, which now has exclusive jurisdiction in such matters.

(b) The jurisdiction in the County Palatine of Lancaster is conferred by the Partition Act, 1868 (31 & 32 Vict. c. 40), s. 2; see also the Chancery of Lancaster Act, 1890 (53 & 54 Vict. c. 23), s. 3. By the Palatine Court of Durham Act, 1889 (52 & 53 Vict. c. 47), s. 10, the term "the court" in the Partition Act, 1868 (31 & 32 Vict. c. 40), was extended so as to include the Court of Chancery of the County Palatine of Durham. For the jurisdiction of the Palatine Court of Lancaster, see title COURTS, Vol. IX., p. 121; for that of the Palatine Court of Durham, see ibid., p. 125. The jurisdiction of the Chancery Division is concurrent with that of these courts; Birkin v. Smith, [1909] 2 K. B. 112, C. A., was a partition action in the County Palatine of Durham.

(c) Partition Act, 1868 (31 & 32 Vict. c. 40), s. 12. The jurisdiction in such cases of the Chancery Division and the county court is concurrent. When an action is brought in the High Court which might have been commenced in the county court, it can, by order of the judge to whom it is assigned, and with or without the application of any party to the action, be transferred to the proper county court (County Courts Act, 1888 (51 & 52 Vict. c. 43), s. 69). The masters of the Chancery Division have, however, much greater facilities for conducting the inquiries which are usually necessary in partition actions, and more experience, than the registrars of county courts, and transfers from the High Court to the county court are not common, and some special reason must be shown before the court will order a transfer (Picard v. Hine (1868), 18 L. T. 705; Sykes v. Firth (1877), 46 L. J. (CH.) 627). Since the jurisdiction is concurrent, the fact that the plaintiff elects to proceed in the High Court is no ground for depriving him of the usual costs (Brown v. Rye (1874), L. R. 17 Eq. 343; Scotto v. Heritage (1866), L. R. 3 Eq. 212; Grandin v. Haines, [1873] W. N. 12). Simons v. McAdam (1868), L. R. 6 Eq. 324, is difficult to reconcile with the reasoning of JESSEL, M. R., in Brown v. Rye, supra. The County Courts Act, 1888 (51 & 52 Vict. c. 43), s. 116, does not apply to an action for partition which is not an action founded on contract, or on tort, within the meaning of that provision. For a fuller discussion of this subject, see title COUNTY COURTS, Vol. VIII., pp. 586, 675.

(d) As to the Mayor's Court of London, see title MAYOR'S COURT, LONDON, Vol. XX., p. 286.

(e) This is the result of the County Courts Act, 1888 (51 & 52 Vict. c. 43), ss. 75 (2), 84, as interpreted in R. v. Bloomsbury County Court Judge (1890), 24 Q. B. D. 309; and see title COUNTY COURTS, Vol. VIII., p. 452.

SECT. 1.
Courts
having Jurisdiction.

such questions in the same action (f). Other relief besides partition may therefore be claimed (g), including the determination of such questions (h).

Property.

SECT. 2.—Property which may be Dealt With.

Freeholds,
copyholds,
and lease-holds.

1568. All lands, tenements, and hereditaments of whatever kind, whether corporeal or incorporeal, may be partitioned by the court, except those which are in their nature incapable of physical division, and even as regards these latter the court can in many cases effect the same result, either by giving the enjoyment of the indivisible hereditament to the parties interested alternately, or by giving the indivisible hereditament to one party and its equivalent in kind or money to the others (i).

Accordingly, freeholds and lands of copyhold or customary tenure are partitionable (k). Leaseholds are partitionable, but where (f) Judicature Act, 1873 (36 & 37 Vict. c. 66), s. 24 (7); Waite v. Bingley (1882), 21 Ch. D. 674 (question of title); Mayfair Property Co. v. Johnston, [1894] 1 Ch. 508 (action for damages for trespass). The Court of Chancery Act, 1852 (15 & 16 Vict. c. 86), s. 62; the Chancery Amendment Act, 1858 (21 & 22 Vict. c. 27), and the Chancery Regulation Act, 1862 (25 & 26 Vict. c. 42), s. 1, contained similar enactments, but were ineffectual; see Bolton v. Bolton (1868), L. R. 7 Eq. 298, n., C. A.; Slade v. Barlow (1869), L. R. 7 Eq. 296; Giffard v. Williams (1870), 5 Ch. App. 546; Burt v. Hellyar (1872), L. R. 14 Eq. 160. The court does not, however, entertain an incidental probate matter although it has jurisdiction to do so (Pinney v. Hunt (1877), 6 Ch. D. 98).

(g) As to the joinder of causes of action, see title PRACTICE AND PROCEDURE. A claim by the owner of a share against his own mortgagee for redemption cannot be joined with a claim for partition against another defendant (Sinclair v. James, [1894] 3 Ch. 554, 557). In Davenport v. King (1883), 49 L. T. 92, the prior mortgagees, who were defendants, consented; and see Watkins v. Williams, Haverd v. Davis (1851), 21 L. J. (CH.) 601. In Davies v. Davies (1860), 6 Jur. (N. S.) 1320, a mortgagee of the entirety, who was also entitled to a share of the property, obtained a decree for foreclosure, and, in the event of redemption, for partition.

(h) See Gledhill v. Hunter (1880), 14 Ch. D. 492, which shows that even possession may be claimed. For a precedent of particulars in a county court, see County Court Forms, 1903, No. 324. In Moore v. Kempston (1870), 18 W. R. 803, the claim for partition was subsidiary, and under the old rule that questions of title could not be entertained in a partition action (see the cases referred to in note (f), supra), the action was dismissed: the decision would now be otherwise.

(i) Sir Edward Coke (Co. Litt. 164 b, 165 a) gives a number of instances of hereditaments which in their nature are indivisible (see note (p), p. 823, ante), and states how they are partitionable. In no case, however, is a severance of the ownership effected. Many of the cases given are now of antiquarian rather than practical interest, and in view of the power of the court to order a sale in lieu of partition, under the Partition Act, 1868 (31 & 32 Vict. c. 40), it would not nowadays be necessary to resort to some of the shifts to which recourse was had when partition was a matter of right irrespective of the inconvenience and impracticability of reasonable division.

(k) Copyholds were at an early date held not to be within the Statutes of Partition (1539) 31 Hen. 8, c. 1; (1540) 32 Hen. 8, c. 32), the reason alleged being that partition would interfere with the rights of the lord in his absence by dividing his tenements, altering the accustomed rents and services, and forcing upon him a different tenant (Joze v. Morshhead (1843), 6 Beav. 213; Co. Litt. 187 a, note 2; Scott v. Fawcett partition would involve waste or breach of covenant, or render any of the co-owners liable to ejectment at the suit of the lessor, the court can, if requested to do so, order a sale in lieu of partition (l).

Adwosons are partitioned by decreeing presentation by turns. In the case of coparceners the elder has the prior right of presentation (m). In the case of tenants in common or joint tenants the order of presentation, in the absence of agreement, is determined by lot (n), unless the predecessor in title of one of the parties had the

SECT. 2.
Property
which may be Dealt With.

Adwosons.

(1757), 1 Dick. 299; Dillon v. Coppin (1833), 6 Beav. 217; note to Jope v. Morshead (1843), 6 Beav. 213; Co. Litt. 187 a; Horncastle v. Charlesworth (1840), 11 Sim. 315). The right to decree partition of lands of copyhold or customary tenure was conferred on courts of equity by the Copyhold Act, 1841 (4 & 5 Vict. c. 35), s. 85, which was repealed by the Copyhold Act, 1894 (57 & 58 Vict. c. 46), a consolidating statute which enacts (ibid., s. 87) that in an action for the partition of lands of copyhold or customary tenure the like order may be made as with respect to land of freehold tenure; see note (v), p. 834, ante. In Baker v. Daniel (1815), 6 Taunt. 193, and Williams v. Williams (1862), 19 W. R. 609, decrees were made for partition of lands of gavelkind tenure, and in Osborn v. Osborn (1868), L. R. 6 Eq. 338, an order for sale of lands of that tenure was made; and see Robinson, Gavelkind, 5th ed., p. 113.

(l) Leaseholds were made partitionable by stat. (1540) 32 Hen. 8, c. 32; but the statute provided that no partition thereunder should prejudice any person other than the parties to the partition. Under this Act the court has frequently ordered partition of leaseholds in the absence of the reversioner (Baring v. Nash (1813), 1 Ves. & B. 551; Heaton v. Dearden (1852), 16 Beav. 147; Ames v. Comyns (1867), 16 W. R. 74). In all these cases the property was held under one demise, but there is nothing in the reports to show that the landlord's rights would be adversely affected. In North v. Guinan (1829), Beat. 342, HART, L.C., refused to decree partition of a house held for a term on the ground that partition would involve waste and breach of covenant, and could be restrained by injunction at the suit of the landlord. Since the Partition Act, 1868 (31 & 32 Vict. c. 40), the court would no doubt order a sale in lieu of a partition; it is a plausible argument, however, that inasmuch as the Partition Act, 1868 (31 & 32 Vict. c. 40), only enables the court to order a sale in cases where previously it could have ordered a partition, there is no jurisdiction to order a sale where a landlord's rights would be affected by a partition; see also Rowe v. Gray (1876), 5 Ch. D. 263. Further, the Judicature Act, 1873 (36 & 37 Vict. c. 66), s. 34 (3), which assigns to the Chancery Division all actions for partition or sale of real estate, does not in terms include chattels real, though the corresponding Judicature Act (Ireland), 1877 (40 & 41 Vict. c. 57), s. 36 (5), mentions chattels real. As pointed out in note (v), p. 834, ante, the Court of Chancery has exercised jurisdiction in partition, at least since 1590. It exercised exclusive jurisdiction since the abolition of the common law writ of partition by the Real Property Limitation Act, 1833 (3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 27), s. 36, and among other matters assigned to the Chancery Division by the Judicature Act, 1873 (36 & 37 Vict. c. 66), s. 34 (2), are "all causes or matters under any Act of Parliament by which exclusive jurisdiction in respect of such causes or matters has been given to the Court of Chancery." Actions for partition or sale of leasehold property have, in fact, been entertained by the Chancery Division ever since the passing of the Judicature Act, 1873 (36 & 37 Vict. c. 66) (Rowe v. Gray, supra).

(m) 2 Roll. Abr., p. 346; Co. Litt. 166 b, 186 b; Harris and Haies v. Nichols (1583), Cro. Eliz. 19; though the elder has no prior right of selection in the case of partition by commissioners (Canning v. Canning (1854), 2 Drew. 434, 437); and see title ECCLESIASTICAL LAW, Vol. XI., p. 572.

(n) Seymour v. Bennet (1742), 2 Atk. 482, per Lord HARDWICKE, L.C., at

SECT. 2.
Property
which may be Dealt
With.

Manors.

Tithes and rentcharges.

Walls.

Property outside the jurisdiction.

last presentation, in which case the other will present on the first occasion after the partition on which the living becomes vacant (o).

Manors may be partitioned by the court (p), and in such case each person to whom a share of the manor is allotted is entitled to hold a separate court in respect of that share (q). As regards the incidents of the manor which are indivisible, the profits of the whole will be divided, or alternate enjoyment decreed, or compensation given for the allotment of the entirety to one of the parties (r).

Tithes (s) and rentcharges (t) can both be partitioned by the court. In the case of rentcharges each separate owner, after the partition, has a separate remedy for enforcing the rentcharge. The same is true of an ordinary rent severed from the reversion (u).

A wall separating the gardens of two adjoining houses has been partitioned vertically (a).

1569. The property to be partitioned must be within the jurisdiction of the court. The Chancery Division has no jurisdiction to order partition of immovable property outside the jurisdiction (b).

p. 483; in this case Lord Hardwicke ordered persons, who were entitled to fill up an office but could not agree as to the person to be appointed, to draw lots to decide who should have the first appointment; see also Johnstone v. Baber (1856), 6 De G. M. & G. 439; Salisbury (Bishop) v. Philips (1700), 1 Ld. Raym. 535.

(o) Bodicoate v. Steers (1737), 1 Dick. 69; Matthews v. Bath and Wells (Bishop) (1785), 2 Dick. 652. In Young v. Young (1870), L. R. 13 Eq. 175, n., a sale of an advowson was ordered in a partition action. By the Advowsons Act, 1708 (7 Anne, c. 18), where partition to present by turns is made, each co-owner is to be deemed severally seised of his proportionate part of the advowson; see title ECCLESIASTICAL LAW, Vol. XI., p. 572.

(p) Hanbury v. Hussey (1851), 14 Beav. 152, following Sparrow v. Fiend (1761), 1 Dick. 348, and Ley v. Cox (1772), quoted in 14 Beav. 156, n., where the decree is given. Manors are expressly mentioned in stat. (1539) 31 Hen. 8, c. 1.

(q) Cattley v. Arnold (1858), 4 K. & J. 595, per PAGE WOOD, V.-C., at p. 600, quoting 16 Vin. Abr. 224 (2nd ed.), the case of the County Palatine of Wexford (1611), Dav. Ir. (ed. 1762) 159, 167, and Anon. (1534), Y. B. 26 Hen. 8, Trin. Ca. 15. In the case of partition by act of the parties without the aid of the court there are numerous decisions to this effect (Harris and Haies v. Nichols (1583), Cro. Eliz. 19; Morris v. Smith and Paget (1585), Cro. Eliz. 38; Melwich v. Luther (1588), Cro. Eliz. 102; Finch's (Sir Moyle) Case (1606), 6 Co. Rep. 63 a). In Heath v. Deane, [1905] 2 Ch. 86, there had apparently been a partition between the freehold and copyhold parts of the manor.

(r) Moor and Brown v. Onslow (1600), Cro. Eliz. 759. In Agar v. Fairfax, Agar v. Holdsworth (1811), 17 Ves. 533, an order was made for partition of an uninclosed moor, formerly part of a manor, over which rights of common existed.

(s) Baxter v. Knollys (1750), 1 Ves. Sen. 494, where Lord HARDWICKE, L.C., said that the Court of Chancery could partition many things that could not be partitioned at law.

(t) Rivis v. Watson (1839), 5 M. & W. 255, quoting Colborne v. Wright (1679), 2 Lev. 239; these were both cases of partition by act of the party.

(u) Ards v. Watkin (1599), Cro. Eliz. 637, 651.

(a) Mayfair Property Co. v. Johnston, [1894] 1 Ch. 508.

(b) Cartwright v. Pettus (1676), 2 Cas. in Ch. 214, more fully reported sub nom. Carleret v. Petty, 2 Swan. 323, n. Where there is some contract or equity between the parties the court may enforce the contract or equity, as in Penn v. Baltimore (Lord) (1750), 1 Ves. Sen. 444, and the notes thereto, 1 White & Tud. L. C., 8th ed., 800, 814; and see title EQUIT, Vol. XIII.,

SECT. 3.—Persons who may Obtain Partition or Sale.

SECT. 3.
Persons
who may Obtain
Partition
or Sale.

1570. An action for partition, or sale in lieu of partition, may be maintained by coparceners (c), tenants in common, and joint tenants (d). Any co-owner may be a lessee for lives or for years (e), tenant in tail (f), tenant for life (g), tenant for life determinable on marriage (h), tenant by the curtesy (i), tenant in fee subject to an Parties.

p. 75. In 2 Seton, Judgments and Orders, 6th ed., p. 1885, is given an order made in Galloway v. Mackersey (1861), for partition by commission of land in Jamaica: the land was devised by will, and the order may have been made in consequence of some equity or trust between the parties, otherwise it is not easy to see under what jurisdiction it was made. In Tulloch v. Hartley (1841), 1 Y. & C. Ch. Cas. 114, where at the suit of legatees and annuitants the court made a decree to settle boundaries in Jamaica, the order may have been made for the purpose of administration. See also title CONFLICT OF LAWS, Vol. VI., p. 199.

(c) By the common law, coparceners alone had the right to compel partition (Co. Litt. 167 a). The old common law writ, de partitione faciendâ (see note (v), p. 834, ante), was only applicable to the case of coparceners. The persons at the present day entitled to bring the action must be among those holding the property, in the words of this old writ, “insimul et pro indiviso”; see Taylor v. Sayer (1600), Cro. Eliz. 742; Moor and Brown v. Onslow (1600), Cro. Eliz. 759; Co. Litt. 167 a. Thus it has been held in Ontario that the executor of a will is not entitled to partition the land of his testator among the devisees (Keefer v. McKay (1881), 29 Grant, 162; and compare Lowe v. Franks (1828), 1 Mol. 137 (where the defendant was trustee for plaintiffs; the decree for partition was made, however, by consent)). A party may claim as co-owner by possessory title (Ward v. Ward (1870), 21 L. T. 699).

(d) Stat. (1539) 31 Hen. 8, c. 1.

(e) Stat. (1540) 32 Hen. 8, c. 32. Accordingly, in Baring v. Nash (1813), 1 Ves. & B. 551, a lessee for a term of 500 years in one undivided tenth part of the property obtained a decree for partition without joining his reversioners, and in Heaton v. Dearden (1852), 16 Beav. 147, a person entitled to the benefit of an agreement for a lease of minerals from the owner of an undivided moiety, obtained a decree for specific performance and partition in the same action. In Pyne v. Matthew (1669), 3 Rep. Ch. 17 [29], and Mason v. Keays (1898), 78 L. T. 33, the sole defendant was the lessee of an undivided share. See also Cornish v. Gest (1788), 2 Cox, Eq. Cas. 27.

(f) Burton v. Jeux (undated), and Rose v. Rose (undated), cited in Thomas v. Gyles (1691), 2 Vern. 232 (where it was said the decree bound the issue); Brook (Lord) v. Hertford (Lord) (1729), 2 P. Wms. 518 (where the plaintiff was an infant, and the execution of the necessary conveyances was delayed until he came of age; see now, however, Trustee Act, 1893 (56 & 57 Vict. c. 53), s. 31; and p. 853, post); Tuckfield v. Buller (1753), Amb. 197; A.-G. v. Hamilton (1816), 1 Madd. 214; Re Sherard, Lowther v. Cuffe (1863), 1 De G. J. & Sm. 421, C. A.; Re Pares, Lillingston v. Pares (1879), 12 Ch. D. 332, C. A. In Wills v. Slade (1801), 6 Ves. 498, there was a possibility of other tenants in tail coming into existence, but this was not considered an objection to the decree.

(g) Gaskell v. Gaskell (1836), 6 Sim. 643 (where a tenant for life, with remainder to his first and other sons successively in tail, successfully maintained an action for partition though no issue were in existence; the agreement for partition being referred to the master to inquire whether it was for the benefit of the future issue, if any); Wills v. Slade, supra; Williams v. Williams (1899), 81 L. T. 163.

(h) Hobson v. Sherwood (1841), 4 Beav. 184.

(i) Co. Litt. 175 b; Stanley v. Wrigley (1855), 3 Sm. & G. 18; Gibbs v. Haydon (1882), 47 L. T. 184.

SECT. 3.

Persons who may Obtain
Partition or Sale.Incum-brancers.Persons under disability.

Reversioners.

executory gift over (k), or any person claiming under them by assignment or otherwise (l).

1571. The rights of a mortgagee (m) or other incumbrancer (n) of the entirety cannot without his consent be affected in the action, and he is not a necessary party thereto. An owner of an undivided share, subject to a mortgage, cannot maintain the action without the concurrence of his mortgagee or on the terms of paying off the mortgage (o). A mortgagee of a share can sue without the concurrence of his mortgagor (p).

1572. A person of unsound mind not so found by inquisition or an infant may sue by his next friend (q). In the case of a person of unsound mind so found the action should be brought by the committee, and the sanction of the Judge in Lunacy should be obtained before it is commenced (r).

Partition may be ordered though a defendant is a lunatic not so found or an infant (s).

1573. The action cannot be maintained by a reversioner alone. The plaintiff must have an estate in possession (t), but it is no objection to the action that the plaintiff or defendant is entitled to exclusive possession or receipt of the rents and profits of the entirety

(k) Greenwood v. Percy (1859), 26 Beav. 572; Hurry v. Hurry (1870), L. R. 10 Eq. 346; Groves v. Carbert (1873), 29 L. T. 129.

(l) Story v. Johnson (1837), 2 Y. & C. (EX.) 586 (assignee); Davenport v. King (1883), 49 L. T. 92 (mortgagees); Fall v. Elkins (1861), 9 W. R. 861 (mortgagee); Williams v. Williams (1862), 10 W. R. 609 (assignee). An agreement to assign or demise confers a sufficient interest (Heaton v. Dearden (1852), 16 Beav. 147; Davies v. Davies (1860), 6 Jur. (N. S.) 1320).

(m) Swan v. Swan (1820), 8 Price, 518; Waite v. Bingley (1882), 21 Ch. D. 674; Sinclair v. James, [1894] 3 Ch. 554.

(n) E.g., annuitant (Hixon v. Eastwood (1868), 17 L. T. 489; Poole v. Poole, [1885] W. N. 15); or lessee (O'Reiley v. Vincent (1818), 2 Mol. 330).

(o) The reason given is that it alters the nature of his security from an undivided to a divided share (Sinclair v. James, supra, per NORTH, J., at p. 556); and that the only action which can be brought by a mortgagor against his mortgagee is one for redemption (Watkins v. Williams (1851), 3 Mac. & G. 622; Gibbs v. Haydon (1882), 47 L. T. 184; Oatley v. Oatley (1898), 19 New South Wales Law Reports (Equity), 129).

(p) Robinson v. Aston (1845), 9 Jur. 224; Davies v. Davies (1860), 6 Jur. (N. S.) 1320. In Fall v. Elkins, supra, and Davenport v. King, supra, the mortgagors were parties.

(q) Watt v. Leach (1878), 26 W. R. 475; Porter v. Porter (1888), 37 Ch. D. 420, C. A., distinguishing Halfhide v. Robinson (1874), 9 Ch. App. 373, where JAMES, L.J., at p. 375, intimated that it was irregular that a bill should be filed by a next friend, on behalf of a person of unsound mind not so found, for dealing with his real estate; see title LUNATICS AND PERSONS OF UNSOUND MIND, Vol. XIX., p. 463. The same principles apply to actions brought by infants for partition or sale which are maintainable by their next friends (Brook (Lord) v. Hertford (Lord) (1729), 2 P. Wms. 518; Hollingworth v. Sidebottom (1837), 8 Sim. 620); and see title INFANTS AND CHILDREN, Vol. XVII., p. 133. As to married women, see Broad v. Askham, [1909] W. N. 236; Barrett v. Watts, [1909] W. N. 237; p. 815, ante.

(r) Re Nolley (1839), 3 Jur. 719.

(s) Martyn v. Perryman (1662), 1 Rep. Ch. 125; Robinson v. Aston, supra.

(t) Evans v. Bagshaw (1869), L. R. 8 Eq. 469; (1870), 5 Ch. App. 340.

under a lease or other instrument, or that any third person is entitled to such rights under a lease, provided such rights are preserved (a).

1574. The court has no jurisdiction where there are subsisting trusts for management vested in trustees (b), or a subsisting trust for sale (c), though a mere power of sale would not prevent the court ordering a partition or sale in lieu of partition (d).

Trustees may sue and be sued without joining their cestuis que trustent, whom they sufficiently represent for all purposes of the action (e).

1575. The owner of the legal estate, except a mortgagee of the entirety, or where such owner is a bare trustee for a party to the action entitled to call for a conveyance of the legal estate, is a necessary party to the action (f).

SECT. 3.
Persons
who may Obtain
Partition
or Sale.

Trusts.

Legal owner.

(a) E.g., where the defendant co-owner is a lessee of the entirety or of the shares other than his own (Wilkinson v. Joberns (1873), L. R. 16 Eq. 14; see Hughes v. D'Arcy (1873), 8 L. R. Eq. 71, where the defendant was not restrained from bringing an action of trespass against his landlord, the other co-owner), or where the plaintiff co-owner is tenant for life of the other share under a settlement of which the defendant is the trustee (Dew v. Riddler (1900), 19 New Zealand Law Reports, 281). It has been held in the United States and in Australia and Canada that the existence of a lease of the entirety (vested in a stranger) is no defence to an action for partition between co-owners of the reversion expectant on the lease (Hunt v. Hazleton (1830), 5 New Hampshire, 216; Woodworth v. Campbell (1835), 5 Paige, 518; Willard v. Willard (1892), 145 United States, 116; Robinson v. Robinson (1902), 2 New South Wales State Reports (Equity), 197; Fitzpatrick v. Wilson (1866), 12 Grant, 440; and in England it is generally so assumed; see O'Reiley v. Vincent (1818), 2 Mol. 330; Graham v. Clinton (Lord) (1899), 81 L. T. 717; Co. Litt. 46 a, 167 a). In Wilkinson v. Joberns, supra, the fact that the defendant was entitled to exclusive possession was held not a good reason against an order for sale (see p. 842, post). As to the extent to which a partition without the concurrence of such a lessee is binding on him, see title LANDLORD AND TENANT, Vol. XVIII., p. 596. If the lease only affects certain shares, it will be necessary to make the lessee a party by serving him with notice of the judgment or otherwise; see Cornish v. Gest (1788), 2 Cox, Eq. Cas. 27; Herbert v. Eyre (1838), 2 Jo. Ex. Ir. 803; Whaley v. Dawson (1805), 2 Sch. & Lef. 367, 372. In case of a lease affecting certain shares only, if the lessee is not a party, a partition between the reversioners on his lease and the other co-owners is not binding on the lessee; see Monro v. Toronto Rail. Co. (1904), 9 Ontario Law Reports, 299, C. A., where the court made a new partition. As to leases by co-owners generally, see title LANDLORD AND TENANT, Vol. XVIII., pp. 343, 344, 452, 472, 473.

(b) Taylor v. Grange (1879), 13 Ch. D. 223; affirmed (1880), 15 Ch. D. 165, C. A.; Re Norris, [1883] W. N. 65, C. A.; see Lowe v. Franks (1828), 1 Mol. 137.

(c) Swaine v. Denby (1880), 14 Ch. D. 326; Biggs v. Peacock (1882), 20 Ch. D. 200; affirmed, 22 Ch. D. 284; C. A. In Cass v. Wood (1874), 30 L. T. 670, the trust for sale was at the death or second marriage of the widow, who was still alive, and had not married again; and see Re Dennis, Downey v. Dennis (1887), 14 Ontario Reports, 267 (trust for sale on request where the request had been made).

(d) Boyd v. Allen (1883), 24 Ch. D. 622; see Oatley v. Oatley (1898), 19 New South Wales Law Reports (Equity), 122.

(e) R. S. C., Ord. 16, r. 8; Stace v. Gage (1878), 8 Ch. D. 451; Simpson v. Denny (1878), 10 Ch. D. 28; County Court Rules, Ord. 3, rr. 6, 33; Chancery of Lancaster Rules, 1884, Ord. 16, rr. 8, 47; Dew v. Riddler, supra.

(f) At common law the decree vested the legal state without any

SECT. 3.

Persons who may Obtain
Partition
or Sale.

Want of
parties.

Ascertainment of shares.

1576. Any person entitled under the above rules to maintain an action for partition may maintain such an action against any one or more of the other persons interested without serving the other or others of those persons, and no objection can be taken on the ground of want of parties, but all persons interested in the property must, unless service is in special circumstances dispensed with, be parties to the action or served with notice of the judgment (g).

1577. No action for partition, or sale in lieu of partition, can be entertained where the property is liable to be divided into an unascertained number of shares (h). Provided the number of shares are capable of being ascertained, the difficulty of ascertaining them (i), or the fact that unascertained persons may become interested in a share (k), are not objections to partition, or sale in lieu of partition.

SECT. 4.—Jurisdiction to Order Sale.

Request by owners of moiety.

1578. In any action in which the court has jurisdiction to order partition, if the party or parties individually or collectively interested to the extent of a moiety or upwards in the property to which the action relates request a sale, a sale and distribution of the proceeds must be ordered in lieu of partition, unless the court sees good reason to the contrary (l).

Burden of proof.

The burden of showing such good reason rests on those opposing a sale (m). Such burden will be discharged by showing that great hardship will be inflicted on one of the parties, especially when the conveyance, while in equity the decree directed the necessary conveyance to be executed. At common law, therefore, it was necessary to have the legal estate before the court, and in equity the necessary conveyances could not be ordered in the absence of the parties able to convey the legal estate or to compel a conveyance thereof (Cartwright v. Pultney (1742), 2 Atk. 380; Anon. (1742), per Lord HARDWICKE, L.C., referred to in note to Blackburn v. Jepson (1818), 3 Swan. 132, 139; Miller v. War-mington (1820), 1 Jac. & W. 484, per PLUMER, M.R., at p. 493; Taylor v. Grange (1879), 13 Ch. D. 223, per FRY, J., at p. 227; affirmed (1886), 15 Ch. D. 165, C. A.).

(g) Partition Act, 1868 (31 & 32 Vict. c. 40), s. 9; Partition Act, 1876 (39 & 40 Vict. c. 17), s. 3. Dodds v. Gronow (1869), 20 L. T. 104; Peters v. Bacon (1869), L. R. 8 Eq. 125; Hurry v. Hurry (1870), L. R. 10 Eq. 346; and Teall v. Watts (1871), L. R. 11 Eq. 213, were all before the Partition Act, 1876 (39 & 40 Vict. c. 17), which enabled service to be dispensed with. The practice under these provisions is dealt with at p. 852, post.

(h) Miles v. Jarvis (No. 2) (1883), 50 L. T. 48 (where future born children of a living person were entitled to share equally with those born in the life-time of tenant for life).

(i) Agar v. Fairfax, Agar v. Holdsworth (1811), 17 Ves. 533 (where the interests of the parties in the land to be partitioned had to be ascertained by reference to their interests in other property, and the shares were unascertained, and difficult of ascertainment).

(k) Wills v. Slade (1801), 6 Ves. 498 (see note (f), p. 839, ante). So a tenant for life with remainder to his sons in tail can commence an action for partition and the judgment will bind his issue in tail when born (Gaskell v. Gaskell (1836), 6 Sim. 643; see also Basnett v. Moxon (1875), L. R. 20 Eq. 182).

(l) Partition Act, 1868 (31 & 32 Vict. c. 40), s. 4.

(m) Lys v. Lys (1868), L. R. 7 Eq. 126.

court considers that the party requesting a sale is actuated by vindictive motives (n); or that the property is unsaleable by reason of a right of entry, but can be partitioned (a); or is temporarily much depreciated in value; or is such a mere dependence on another property as to be almost valueless except in connection with that property (b). But good reason to the contrary is not shown by proving the mere dissent of the other persons interested (c); or that the owner of a moiety occupies the entirety for commercial purposes (d), or even as a mansion-house (e); or that it is an old family property (f).

SECT. 4.
Jurisdiction
to Order
Sale.

1579. In any action in which the court has jurisdiction to order partition, if any party, whatever be the amount of his interest, requests a sale (g), a sale and distribution of the proceeds may be ordered in the discretion of the court (h), notwithstanding the dissent or disability of any other party, if it appears to the court that it will be more beneficial for the parties interested:—

Request by any owner where sale is more beneficial.

(1) by reason of the nature of the property to which the action relates; or

(2) by reason of the number of the parties interested or presumptively interested therein; or

(3) by reason of the absence or disability of some of the parties; or

(4) by reason of any other circumstances (i).

Where persons interested in less than a moiety of the property request a sale on the ground that a sale is more beneficial than a partition, they must allege and prove the facts on which they rely (k); for example, that the property, if sold entire, is likely to fetch a higher price than the allotments, if sold after a partition, would fetch (l); or that the property consists of different particulars

(n) In Saxton v. Bartley (1879), 48 L. J. (CH.) 519, where there was no difficulty in effecting a partition, and a sale of the property, of which one of the co-owners was tenant for life, entitled to enjoyment of the rents in specie, would have largely diminished her income, BACON, V.-C., considered that the plaintiff requesting a sale was actuated by vindictive motives, and he refused to order a sale, following the observations of HATHERLEY, L.C., in Pemberton v. Barnes (1871), 6 Ch. App. 685, at p. 695. A mere reduction of income is an element to be considered (Langmead v. Cockerton (1877), 25 W. R. 315), though it must be proved before it can be taken into consideration; a mere suggestion that it will be the probable result will not weigh with the court (Re Langdale's Estate (1871), 5 I. R. Eq. 572, 577; Rowe v. Gray (1876), 5 Ch. D. 263, 266).

(a) Re Whitwell's Estate (1887), 19 L. R. Ir. 45.

(b) Porter v. Lopes (1877), 7 Ch. D. 358, per JESSEL, M.R., at p. 363.

(c) Re Langdale's Estate, supra; Pemberton v. Barnes, supra, at p. 694.

(d) Wilkinson v. Joberns (1873), L. R. 16 Eq. 14; Roughton v. Gibson (1877), 46 L. J. (CH.) 366.

(e) Porter v. Lopes, supra.

(f) Pemberton v. Barnes, supra; see also Porter v. Lopes, supra, per JESSEL, M.R., at p. 365.

(g) Re Langdale's Estate, supra.

(h) Re Dyer, Dyer v. Paynter (1885), 54 L. J. (CH.) 1133, C. A.

(i) Partition Act, 1868 (31 & 32 Vict. c. 40), s. 3.

(k) Evans v. Evans, Evans v. Jones (1883), 52 L. J. (CH.) 304.

(l) Pemberton v. Barnes, supra, per Lord HATHERLEY, L.C., at p. 695.

SECT. 4.
Jurisdiction
to Order
Sale.

Determining factors.

Request by any owner not proving sale more beneficial.

of varying values which it would be difficult to divide into portions of equal value (m); or that agricultural property can be sold for building purposes, and so the purchase-money will be far more than the capitalised value of the rent received (n); or that a large sum will have to be given for equality of partition, that is, that what is substantially a sale is inevitable (o); or that a small property will have to be divided up into a great number of shares (p).

In determining whether a sale is more beneficial than a partition, the court considers only the pecuniary results (q), disregarding matters of sentiment, and has regard to the interest of all parties interested as a whole (r).

1580. In any action in which the court has jurisdiction to order partition, if a request is made by persons who are interested in less than a moiety and who do not prove that a sale will be more beneficial than a division of the property among the parties interested, the court can order a sale if, for any reason in its discretion, it thinks fit, unless the parties opposing the sale undertake to purchase the shares of those desiring it (s). It must not be forgotten,

In Hubbard v. Hubbard (1863), 2 Hem. & M. 38, a case before the Partition Act, 1868 (31 & 32 Vict. c. 40), PAGE WOOD, V.-C., by charging an infant's share with costs, and directing sale of the entirety with the consent of all the other parties interested, being sui juris, in effect ordered sale in lieu of partition, where an advantageous offer had been made for the whole property; other cases to the same effect are Thackeray v. Parker (1863), 1 New Rep. 567; Davis v. Turvey (1863), 9 Jur. (N. S.) 954; Coventry v. Coventry (1865), 34 Beav. 572; Rickards v. Rickards (1867), 36 L. J. (CH.) 176; and see Capewell v. Lawrence (1863), 8 L. T. 603; Griffies v. Griffies (1863), 8 L. T. 758.

(m) Pemberton v. Barnes (1871), 6 Ch. App. 685.

(n) Drinkwater v. Ratcliffe (1875), L. R. 20 Eq. 528, per JESSEL, M.R., at p. 533.

(o) Porter v. Lopes (1877), 7 Ch. D. 358, per JESSEL, M.R., at p. 366.

(p) Re Dyer, Dyer v. Paynter (1885), 54 L. J. (CH.) 1133, C. A.; Gilbert v. White (1879), 11 Ch. D. 78. In Rickards v. Rickards (1867), 36 L. J. (CH.) 176, following Hubbard v. Hubbard, supra, a sale was directed in lieu of partition, where the parties interested, twelve in number, were only entitled to two-thirds of the minerals under the estate, a fact which rendered partition impracticable.

(q) Drinkwater v. Ratcliffe, supra, at p. 533.

(r) Allen v. Allen (1873), 21 W. R. 842; Fleming v. Crouch, [1884] W. N. 111. In Huddersfield Corporation v. Jacomb, [1874] W. N. 80, the plaintiff being a corporation, which had acquired the land for public purposes, it was said that the interests of the public had to be considered. Sale may be ordered though forbidden by the will under which the parties claim (Thompson v. Richardson (1872), 6 I. R. Eq. 596).

(s) Partition Act, 1868 (31 & 32 Vict. c. 40), s. 5; Drinkwater v. Ratcliffe, supra; Gilbert v. Smith (1878), 8 Ch. D. 548; (1879), 11 Ch. D. 78, C. A.; S. C., sub nom. Pitt v. Jones (1880), 5 App. Cas. 651, overruling Pemberton v. Barnes, supra, where Lord HATHERLEY, L.C., held that the Partition Act, 1868 (31 & 32 Vict. c. 40), s. 5, was in the nature of a proviso to ibid., ss. 3, 4. It is now settled that ibid., s. 5, is independent of ibid., ss. 3, 4, and that under ibid., s. 5, unless the parties opposing are willing to buy the shares of the parties desiring a sale, the court has a discretion to order a sale, although none of the conditions exist mentioned in ibid., s. 3, and the parties desiring a sale are not interested to the extent of a moiety under ibid., s. 4. This is in however, that inasmuch as the order for sale under this provision is only to be made if the court thinks fit, some reason must be shown for preferring a sale to a partition, where the majority oppose a sale, though it is not necessary to show that it is more beneficial (t).

A request for sale may be withdrawn before the order is made, and in the event of the parties objecting to a sale offering to purchase the share of the parties desiring a sale, the latter may accept or refuse the offer at any time before the undertaking to purchase has been given and made binding (a).

Where parties ask for a sale and other parties undertake to purchase their shares and the parties asking for sale accept the undertaking (b), the court may order a valuation of the shares in such manner as the court thinks fit (c).

1581. To give jurisdiction to order a sale it is sufficient if a sale and distribution of the proceeds is claimed, and it is not necessary in terms to claim partition, and, vice versâ, the court may order partition though only a sale is claimed (d).

A sale can only be ordered in cases where the court would have jurisdiction to order partition, and accordingly a sale of lands out of the jurisdiction cannot be ordered (e); nor can a sale be ordered at the suit of a reversioner (f), nor where there are outstanding trusts for management or a subsisting trust for sale (g), or where the property is held in an unascertainable number of shares (h).

SECT. 4.

Jurisdiction
to Order
Sale.Withdrawal of request.Undertaking to purchase.

Pleading.

Cases where sale cannot be ordered.

accordance with the explanation of the Partition Act, 1868 (31 & 32 Vict. c. 40), s. 5, given in Drinkwater v. Ratcliffe (1875), L. R. 20 Eq. 528, per JESSEL, M.R., at p. 530.

(t) Richardson v. Feary (1888), 39 Ch. D. 45; see also Allen v. Allen (1873), 42 L. J. (CH.) 839. In Dicks v. Batten, [1870] W. N. 173, and Huddersfield Corporation v. Jacomb, [1874] W. N. 80, partition was granted at the request of the majority.

(a) Williams v. Games (1875), 10 Ch. App. 204; Drinkwater v. Ratcliffe (1875), L. R. 20 Eq. 528, 531; Pitt v. Jones (1880), 5 App. Cas. 651, 659, 663. Where the party requesting a sale is entitled to a moiety of the property, or makes out that a sale is more beneficial to the parties interested, and so brings the case within the Partition Act, 1868 (30 & 31 Vict. c. 40), ss. 3 or 4, the parties opposing cannot, by offering to purchase his share, avoid the operation of those provisions (Morant v. Godden (1902), 18 T. L. R. 421, following Pitt v. Jones, supra).

(b) Williams v. Games, supra, approved in Pitt v. Jones, supra. There is no obligation to accept the undertaking, Pemberton v. Barnes (1871), 6 Ch. App. 685, 693, being disapproved; see note (s), p. 844, ante.

(c) Partition Act, 1868 (31 & 32 Vict. c. 40), s. 5. So far as regards this provision, the parties asking for sale may be owners of either more or less than a moiety, not, as in the case of sale under the same section, less than a moiety; see Pitt v. Jones, supra, per Lord WATSON, at p. 663.

(d) Partition Act, 1876 (39 & 40 Vict. c. 17), s. 7, removing the doubts created by Teall v. Watts (1871), L. R. 11 Eq. 213; Aston v. Meredith (1871), L. R. 11 Eq. 601; Holland v. Holland (1872), L. R. 13 Eq. 406.

(e) See p. 838, ante.

(f) See p. 840, ante.

(g) See p. 841, ante.

(h) Miles v. Jarvis (No. 2) (1883), 50 L. T. 48; see p. 842, ante. The Partition Acts, 1868 (31 & 32 Vict. c. 40) and 1876 (39 & 40 Vict. c. 17), do not extend the jurisdiction in partition, but enable the court to order a sale in lieu of partition in the cases mentioned in the Acts. This is apparent

SECT. 4. The court will, if desired, make an order for sale of part of an estate, and partition of the rest (i).

Jurisdiction
to Order
Sale.

Sale of part.

SECT. 5.—General Practice.

SUB-SECT. 1.—Initial Stages.

Practice
generally.

1582. The practice and procedure generally in a partition action is the same as that applicable to other actions in the Chancery Division, the county courts, and Chancery Courts of the Counties Palatine of Lancaster and Durham, as the case may be, subject to the following special provisions (k).

Writ.

1583. The writ may claim either partition or sale and distribution of the proceeds. In an action for partition it is sufficient to claim a sale and distribution of the proceeds; and it is not necessary to claim partition in order to obtain either sale or partition (l).

Statement of claim.

1584. The plaintiff must allege his own title (m) to the property in question with precision (n); as regards shares other than his own, he need not show a complete title in the defendants (o); it is sufficient that they are shown to be persons interested (p). The

from the opening words in the Partition Act, 1868 (31 & 32 Vict. c. 40), ss. 3, 4, and 5: "In a suit for partition, where if this Act had not been passed a decree for partition might have been made"; and the observations of BACON, V.-C., in Pryor v. Pryor (1875), L. R. 19 Eq. 595, at p. 598, that these words mean only "any partition suit," must be understood to mean any properly constituted partition suit, i.e., one in which a decree could be made. But an order for sale of an undivided interest in land has been made although partition thereof could not be ordered (Holland v. Holland (1872), L. R. 13 Eq. 406, where, however, the point does not appear to have been raised).

(i) Roebuck v. Chadebet (1869), L. R. 8 Eq. 127; see Pennington v. Dalbiac (1870), 18 W. R. 684. In Allen v. Allen (1873), 42 L. J. (CH.) 839, an order was made for a reference to chambers to partition so much of the property as it might be found could practically be partitioned, and to sell that which could not be partitioned.

(k) See, generally, titles PLEADING; PRACTICE AND PROCEDURE.

(l) Partition Act, 1876 (39 & 40 Vict. c. 17), s. 7, abrogating the practice laid down in Teall v. Watts (1871), L. R. 11 Eq. 213, and Holland v. Holland, supra (not following Aston v. Meredith (1871), L. R. 11 Eq. 601), that in order to obtain an order for sale, partition must be claimed.

(m) The reason is that he is offering to the defendant a conveyance of property, as a vendor. The statement of claim must therefore contain the necessary allegations showing the plaintiff's title (R. S. C., Ord. 19, r. 4). For a form of statement of claim, see R. S. C., Appendix C, sect. II., No. 13; Chancery of Lancaster Rules, Appendix C, No. 14; and for a form of particulars of claim in the county court, see County Court Forms, 1903, No. 324.

(n) Where the property is misdescribed in the statement of claim, the error being found out after the final order is made, leave to amend may be given with directions post-dating the final order, as of a date subsequent to the amendment (Winkley v. Winkley (1881), 44 L. T. 572).

(o) Baring v. Nash (1813), 1 Ves. & B. 551.

(p) Calmady v. Calmady (1795), 2 Ves. 568, explained by Lord ELDON, L.C., in Agar v. Fairfax, Agar v. Holdsworth (1811), 17 Ves. 533, at p. 552; Partition Act, 1868 (31 & 32 Vict. c. 40), s. 9: e.g., in Mason v. Keays (1898), 78 L. T. 33, the defendant was a lessee merely.

title alleged should show the proper unities of title of the co-owners, that is, that each is entitled to an undivided interest in the whole (q), and that their shares are of ascertainable proportions (r).

SECT. 5.
General
Practice.

Where the plaintiff requests a sale in lieu of partition, he should state the grounds on which he desires a sale so as to bring the case within one of those in which the court has a discretion or a duty to order sale. For example, he should state the nature of the property to which the action relates, or the number of the parties interested or presumptively interested therein, or the absence or disability of some of those parties, or any circumstances by reason whereof a sale and distribution of the proceeds is more beneficial than a division of the property among the parties interested; or he should state that he is interested to the extent of a moiety (s).

Grounds for requesting sale.

In their defences the defendants should make no unnecessary denials of title (t); and in a simple case, even a guardian ad litem of an infant need not put in a defence at all (a).

Defence.

1585. In default of appearance or defence, the action in the Chancery Division may be set down on a motion for judgment as a short cause (b). If then the defendants are sui juris, the usual judgment (c) is pronounced without further proof of title, the allegations in the statement of claim being taken as admitted. If, however, the defendants or any of them are under disability, the plaintiff's title must be proved; such proof is given by means of an affidavit concisely verifying the statement of claim, and the guardian ad litem of an infant (d), or person of unsound mind (e), may consent to proof being given by affidavit.

In default of appearance
or defence.

Where the material allegations in the statement of claim are admitted, the usual order will be made on motion for judgment without proof of title (f).

When dispensed
with.

(q) Miller v. Warmington (1830), 1 Jac. & W. 484, 493; O'Hara v. Strange (1847), 11 I. Eq. R. 262.

(r) Miles v. Jarvis (No. 2) (1883), 50 L. T. 48.

(s) His allegations should indicate the facts bringing the case within the Partition Act, 1868 (31 & 32 Vict. c. 40), ss. 3, 4, or 5 (Evans v. Evans, Evans v. Jones (1883), 52 L. J. (CH.) 304); see p. 842, ante.

(t) Morris v. Timmins (1838), 1 Beav. 411; Pascoe v. Swan (1859), 27 Beav. 508; Wilkinson v. Castle (1868), 37 L. J. (CH.) 467.

(a) Re Fitzwater, Fitzwater v. Waterhouse (1882), 52 L. J. (CH.) 83.

(b) R. S. C., Ord. 27, r. 11.

(c) See p. 848, post.

(d) Knatchbull v. Fowle (1876), 1 Ch. D. 604; affidavit evidence proving the plaintiff's title may be dispensed with where there is a defendant who is sui juris interested in the same share as the infant (Ripley v. Sawyer (1886), 31 Ch. D. 494; Re Fitzwater, Fitzwater v. Waterhouse, supra).

(e) Piggott v. Toogood, [1904] W. N. 130.

(f) Gilbert v. Smith (1876), 2 Ch. D. 686, C. A. In Burnell v. Burnell (1879), 11 Ch. D. 213, JESSEL, M.R., made an immediate order for sale in a simple case on admissions in the pleadings, without waiting for the usual inquiries to be answered. Apart, however, from special circumstances rendering an early sale desirable, or under R. S. C., Ord. 51, r. 1A, this practice is not now usual; see Re Norton, Norton v. Norton. [1900] 1 Ch. 101, 102.

SECT. 5.

SUB-SECT. 2.—*Judgment and Interlocutory Orders.*General Practice.Usual
judgment.

1586. Actions for partition, or sale in lieu of partition, usually come to a hearing before the rights of the parties interested have been ascertained.

Accordingly, the usual judgment for partition, or sale in lieu of partition, directs the accounts and inquiries to be taken and made which are necessary to ascertain the rights of the parties interested.

The accounts and inquiries usually directed are :—(1) Who are the persons interested in the property, and for what estates and interests, and in what shares and proportions, and whether they are parties to the action; and also the following inquiries, if and so far as any of them are applicable, that is to say : (2) an inquiry what incumbrances affect the entirety, or any and what parts thereof (g), and (if sale is ordered) whether such incumbrancers consent to a sale; and other inquiries as to title (h); (3) an account of the moneys (if any) expended by any and which of the parties interested in permanent improvements; (4) an inquiry to what extent the present value of the property has been increased by such expenditure; (5) an inquiry what would be a proper occupation rent in respect of any part of the property to be dealt with which is occupied by any of the parties; and (6) an inquiry as to any waste committed, and the value of any timber felled or minerals gotten by any of the parties.

Inquiry as to
persons interested.

1587. No unconditional order for partition or sale can be made until the inquiry has been answered as to the persons interested and the nature of their interests, and whether they are parties to the action (i). This inquiry can be dispensed with only in exceptional circumstances.

In cases where the title is simple, the property of small value, and all parties interested are before the court, the court will, on proof of these facts by affidavit, dispense with the usual inquiries as to the persons interested, and direct an immediate partition, or sale in lieu of partition (k).

(g) Fawthrop v. Stocks, [1884] W. N. 118; and see 2 Seton, Judgments and Orders, 6th ed., pp. 1882 et seq.; Waite v. Bingley (1882), 21 Ch. D. 674, 683; Davenport v. King (1883), 49 L. T. 92; Graham v. Clinton (Lord) (1899), 81 L. T. 717; Green v. Hiatt (1900), 44 Sol. Jo. 501. As to judgment and orders generally, see title JUDGMENTS AND ORDERS, Vol. XVIII., pp. 175 et seq.

(h) In Graham v. Clinton (Lord), supra, an inquiry, said to be unusual, was made as to tenancies.

(i) Buckingham v. Sellick (1870), 22 L. T. 370; Powell v. Powell (1874), 10 Ch. App. 130, 135. In the latter case, where a sale had taken place before the certificate, the purchaser was discharged from his purchase. This was before the Conveyancing and Law of Property Act, 1881 (44 & 45 Vict. c. 41), s. 70 of which protects a purchaser purchasing under an irregular order of the court; see title SALE OF LAND. Where a good title could be made independently of the Partition Acts, the purchaser was not released (Rawlinson v. Miller (1875), 1 Ch. D. 52). The interests of the parties were always ascertained by the court, and under the old practice this was never left to the Commissioners (Agar v. Fairfax, Agar v. Holdsworth (1808), 17 Ves. 533, 543; Knox v. Mayo (1858), 7 I. Ch. R. 563).

(k) Burnell v. Burnell (1879), 11 Ch. D. 213; Re Stedman, Coombe

1588. If parties together claiming to be entitled to the entirety are before the court, the order may be in the alternative—if it is certified that all the persons interested are parties to the action, then for partition or sale, as the case may be; and if the parties are not so entitled, then for liberty to apply, after it has been certified that all the persons interested either are parties to the action, or have been served with notice of the judgment, or that service has been dispensed with (l).

SECT. 5.

General Practice.

Form of order where all parties interested present.

1589. In cases where all the persons interested are not parties to the action, no order for partition or sale can be made at the hearing even conditionally (m). In such a case liberty to apply for partition or sale is given after it has been certified that all persons interested either are parties to the action or have been served with notice of the judgment or that service has been dispensed with (u). The order for partition or sale is made in chambers after the inquiry as to the parties interested has been answered (b).

Order where parties interested not all present.

1590. If a sale is claimed on the ground that it is more beneficial than partition, the judgment will direct an inquiry whether it is more beneficial to the persons entitled that the property should be sold, and the proceeds distributed, or that a division of the property be made (c). The court will not make any declaration whether a sale is more beneficial (d), unless all persons interested are parties

Inquiries where sale is requested.

v. Vincent, [1888] W. N. 119; Willis v. Willis (1890), 61 L. T. 610 (where a sale wholly out of court was ordered, the order containing the necessary allegations required by R. S. C., Ord. 51, r. 1A); Crook v. Crook, [1890] W. N. 26. But where the title is complicated (Wood v. Gregory (1889), 43 Ch. D. 82; Hawkins v. Herbert (1889), 60 L. T. 142), or the property considerable (Wood v. Gregory, supra; Goodacre v. Goodacre, [1888] W. N. 138), the court will not dispense with the usual inquiries. All the reported cases where inquiries have been dispensed with are cases where sale was ordered in lieu of partition.

(l) Senior v. Hereford (1876), 4 Ch. D. 494; and see Waite v. Bingley (1882), 21 Ch. D. 674; Re Norton, Norton v. Norton, [1900] 1 Ch. 101, 102. In Wood v. Gregory, supra, only liberty to apply in chambers was given; see the form of order in Harper v. Bird (1875), 32 L. T. 428, as modified in Mildmay v. Quicke (1875), L. R. 20 Eq. 537; the order so modified being followed in Lawe v. Stoney, [1876] W. N. 141.

(m) Mildmay v. Quicke, supra.

(a) Gilbert v. Smith (1876), 2 Ch. D. 686, C. A.; Sykes v. Schofield (1880), 14 Ch. D. 629.

(b) Powell v. Powell (1874), 10 Ch. App. 130, where it was pointed out that the words "on further consideration" in the Partition Act, 1868 (31 & 32 Vict. c. 40), s. 9, are used in a popular sense, as referring to any consideration which the action receives after the inquiries have been answered; see Buckingham v. Sellick (1870), 22 L. T. 370; Mildmay v. Quicke, supra.

(c) Waite v. Bingley, supra (see the order, ibid., at p. 683); Powell v. Powell, supra. The certificate of the master that a sale is more beneficial than a division of the property among the parties entitled does not bind the court to order partition when the majority are opposed or other considerations give the court a discretion under the Partition Acts (Allen v. Allen (1873), 42 L. J. (Ch.) 839).

(d) Re Hardiman, Pragnell v. Batten (1880), 16 Ch. D. 360. The declaration will be made when it is proved at the hearing that all persons interested

SECT. 5.

General Practice.

Form of order accordingly.

to the action. If on the other hand it is alleged that a sale is requested by parties interested in a moiety or upwards, the answer to the inquiry as to persons interested will ascertain whether this be the fact.

The judgment may direct a sale conditionally, that is to say, if the answer to the inquiries is that all persons interested are parties and a sale is more beneficial, or, as the case may be, that all the persons interested are parties, and those interested to the extent of a moiety or upwards request a sale (e). More usually, however, and in every case in the event of some persons interested not being parties to the action, liberty is given to apply for a sale when the inquiries are answered (f).

Inquiry where infants are interested.

1591. Where infants are interested the court will direct an inquiry whether a sale is more beneficial to them than partition in cases where sale is requested on their behalf (g), and the court may direct such an inquiry even in cases where only partition is asked for (h).

The court will not make an order for sale on the request of an infant unless satisfied as to the answer to this inquiry (i).

Appointment of a receiver.

1592. The court has jurisdiction to appoint a receiver until the hearing of the action or until further order, although there is no exclusive occupation by any party, and it will do so whenever it is just and convenient (k). If a party to the action is in occupation, any other party may obtain a receiver of his share of the rents and profits (l), and in some cases of the whole (m).

are parties to the action (Young v. Young (1870), L. R. 13 Eq. 175, n.; France v. France (1871), L. R. 13 Eq. 173; Chubb v. Pettipher, [1872] W. N. 110; Willis v. Willis (1889), 61 L. T. 610); but in practice this is seldom the case.

(e) Waite v. Bingley (1882), 21 Ch. D. 674, 683; Davenport v. King (1883), 49 L. T. 92. Various forms of orders applicable to different circumstances will be found in 2 Seton, Judgments and Orders, 6th ed., pp. 1853 et seq. For a form of order for sale in the county court, where sale is more beneficial than partition, see County Court Forms, 1903, No. 329, and where the plaintiff is interested in a moiety, ibid., No. 330. In Davis v. Ingram, [1897] 1 Ch. 477, an order for sale was made in the event of various alternative answers to inquiries; compare Underwood v. Stewardson (1872), 26 L. T. 688.

(f) Sykes v. Schofield (1880), 14 Ch. D. 629 (a case where the parties requesting a sale were interested in less than a moiety); Re Hardiman, Pragnell v. Batten (1880), 16 Ch. D. 360 (owners of only two-fifths before the court); see Gilbert v. Smith (1876), 2 Ch. D. 686, C. A.

(g) Davis v. Ingram, supra.

(h) Green v. Hiatt (1900), 44 Sol. Jo. 501.

(i) Rimington v. Hartley (1880), 14 Ch. D. 630, 632; see also Partition Act, 1876 (39 & 40 Vict. c. 17), s. 6.

(k) Judicature Act, 1873 (36 & 37 Vict. c. 66), s. 25 (8); Porter v. Lopes (1877), 7 Ch. D. 358, where the party in exclusive possession elected to pay an occupation rent (see the text, infra, and p. 851, post) in lieu of having a receiver appointed. Sandford v. Ballard (No. 2) (1864), 33 Beav. 401, was a case before the Judicature Act, 1873 (36 & 37 Vict. c. 66), where one tenant in common was in receipt of the rents, and the tenant was colluding with him. Instead of appointing a receiver, the court may require security from the co-owners in exclusive occupation to account for their share of the rents to the other co-owners (Street v. Anderton (1793), 4 Bro. C. C. 414). As to receivers generally, see title RECEIVERS.

(l) Sandford v. Ballard (1861), 30 Beav. 109.

(m) Porter v. Lopes, supra.

1593. Accounts become necessary where the parties do not stand on an equal footing with regard to the enjoyment of the property or their expenditure on it (n). So where one party has been in receipt of more than his share of rents and profits, an account is directed at the instance of any other party (o).

1594. Where one party has been in exclusive occupation, the court, if desired, will order that he shall be charged an occupation rent (p); if he does not agree to pay such a rent a receiver will be appointed (q), or an inquiry will be granted as to what is a reasonable rent to be paid (r). The rent is not, however, set off against a legal mortgagee of the share of the person in occupation (s). A party ordered to pay such a rent will be allowed all sums properly expended by him in repairs (a).

1595. A co-owner who has expended money in improvements may obtain an allowance for it (b). This allowance is not reimbursement of the amount expended (c), but extends to the amount by which the value of the property, estimated at the commencement of the action, has been increased, not exceeding the amount expended (d). The co-owner is therefore entitled to have an

SECT. 5.
General
Practice.

Accounts of rents and expenditure.
Occupation
rent.

Expenditure on improvements.

(n) With regard to receipts of rents and profits, the action of account was given to a co-owner by stat. (1705) 4 & 5 Anne, c. 3, s. 27; otherwise the only remedy was, and is, an action for partition; see Thomas v. Thomas (1850), 5 Exch. 28. With regard to expenditure on the property, the action of partition is at the present time the only remedy (Leigh v. Dickeson (1884), 15 Q. B. D. 60, C. A., per COTTON, L.J., at p. 67). Allowance for expenditure may, however, be obtained in any action where distribution of the property, or the proceeds thereof, is to be made among the persons entitled, the rights being the same as those enforceable in a partition action (Re Cook's Mortgage, Lawledge v. Tyndall, [1896] 1 Ch. 923, where the surplus on a sale by a mortgagee was distributed among persons entitled in common to the equity of redemption); and see p. 852, post. Except for this, and apart from agreement, a co-owner has no right of contribution from his co-owners (Leigh v. Dickeson, supra), nor any lien on the property, for his expenditure (Kay v. Johnson (1856), 21 Beav. 536; Re Leslie, Leslie v. French (1883), 23 Ch. D. 552); he may, however, have rights in another capacity, e.g., as mortgagee or trustee (ibid.; see titles MORTGAGE, p. 65, ante; TRUSTS AND TRUSTEES); and see Falcke v. Scottish Imperial Insurance Co. (1886), 34 Ch. D. 234, C. A.

(o) Drury v. Drury (1630), 1 Rep. Ch. 26; Lorimer v. Lorimer (1820), 5 Madd. 363; Griffies v. Griffies (1863), 8 L. T. 758; Burnell v. Burnell (1879), 11 Ch. D. 213; Pascoe v. Swan (1859), 27 Beav. 508.

(p) Story v. Johnson (1837), 2 Y. & C. (EX.) 586; Pascoe v. Swan (1859), 27 Beav. 508; Teasdale v. Sanderson (1864), 33 Beav. 534. In Griffies v. Griffies, supra, the court refused to make such an order.

(q) Porter v. Lopes (1877), 7 Ch. D. 358.

(r) Turner v. Morgan (1803), 8 Ves. 143; see p. 852, post.

(s) Hill v. Hickin, [1897] 2 Ch. 579, where STIRLING, J., did not follow the cases of Graham v. Cole (1873), cited in 2 Seton, Judgments and Orders, 5th ed., p. 1541, and his own previous decision in Heckles v. Heckles, [1892] W. N. 188, but distinguished the latter case as being the case of an equitable mortgage, though he was "not sure that that case was well decided."

(a) Williams v. Williams (1899), 68 L. J. (CH.) 528, followed in Kenrick v. Mountstevens (1899), 48 W. R. 141.

(b) Swan v. Swan (1820), 8 Price, 518; Parker v. Trigg, [1874] W. N. 27; see note (n), supra.

(c) Watson v. Gass (1881), 51 L. J. (CH.) 480; see p. 852, post.

(d) Watson v. Gass, supra; Re Jones, Farrington v. Forrester, [1893] 2 Ch. 461; Williams v. Williams, supra.

SECT. 5.

General
Practice.Improvements and
occupation
rent.

account taken of his expenditure, and an inquiry made as to the corresponding increase in value of the property (e). Expenditure by the predecessors in title of the party (f), but not by a mere stranger (g), will be included. The accounts for occupation rent and for improvements are reciprocal; an owner in occupation, if made accountable for rent, is given allowance for improvements (h), and he is not given that allowance unless he is charged with the rent (i).

Waste.

1596. Inquiries may be directed as to acts of waste done on the property, as by felling timber or getting minerals, and accounts will be taken accordingly (k). The court may grant an injunction to prevent waste (l).

SUB-SECT. 3.—*Service of Notice of Judgment.*Service of notice of
judgment.

1597. All persons interested, not already parties, must be served with notice of the judgment, and are then bound by and deemed to be parties to the proceedings (m). Any such person may, within the time limited by rules of court (n), apply to the court to discharge, vary, or add to the order (o).

(e) Parker v. Trigg, [1874] W. N. 27; Watson v. Gass (1881), 51 L. J. (CH.) 480; Williams v. Williams (1899), 68 L. J. (CH.) 528, followed in Kenrick v. Mountstevens (1899), 48 W. R. 141.

(f) Williams v. Williams, supra.

(g) Heath v. Bostock (1835), 5 L. J. (EX. EQ.) 20 (expenditure by the husband of a tenant for life of one share). In the New South Wales case of Boulter v. Boulter (1898), 19 New South Wales Reports (Equity), 135, expenditure by a lessee before his title as co-owner accrued was allowed. Aliter, where the expenditure is not by a lessee; see Foster v. Emerson (1854), 5 Grant, 135 (by devisees, during their testator's lifetime); Lasby v. Crewson (1891), 21 Ontario Reports, 255 (by remainderman, by agreement with tenant for life).

(h) Pascoe v. Swan (1859), 27 Beav. 508.

(i) Teasdale v. Sanderson (1864), 33 Beav. 534; and see Rice v. George (1873), 20 Grant, 221, 226.

(k) Cooper v. Fisher (1841), cited in 3 Seton, Judgments and Orders, 6th ed., p. 1886. A tenant in common is not, however, liable in an action for waste, except for acts destroying the inheritance (Martyn v. Knowllys (1799), 8 Term Rep. 145; Jacobs v. Seward (1869), L. R. 4 C. P. 328). The inquiry as to waste, therefore, appears to be granted only in special circumstances (Griffies v. Griffies (1863), 8 L. T. 758; see Rice v. George, supra (where the co-owner asked for allowance for improvements). As to waste generally, see titles LANDLORD AND TENANT, Vol. XVIII., pp. 496 et seq; SETTLEMENTS.

(l) Bailey v. Hobson (1869), 5 Ch. App. 180, where the injunction was refused, the defendant taking only profits to which he was entitled (Hughes v. D'Arcy (1873), 8 I. R. Eq. 71). As to the remedy by injunction generally, see title INJUNCTION, Vol. XVII., pp. 197 et seq.

(m) Partition Act, 1868 (31 & 32 Vict. c. 40), s. 9; and see title JUDGMENTS AND ORDERS, Vol. XVII., pp. 208, 209.

(n) In the High Court, one month (R. S. C., Ord. 16, r. 40); in the county courts, at the next sitting of the court or by leave of the judge at any subsequent sitting (County Court Rules, 1903, Ord. 3, r. 27); see title COUNTY COURTS, Vol. VIII., pp. 534, 675; and in the Court of Chancery of Lancaster, or the Court of Chancery of Durham, one month (Chancery of Lancaster Rules, 1884, Ord. 16, r. 41; Chancery of Durham Rules, Ord. 15, r. 41).

(o) Partition Act, 1868 (31 & 32 Vict. c. 40), s. 9.

The court may, on the request of any of the parties interested in the property, and notwithstanding the dissent or disability of any others of them, by order dispense with service of notice of the judgment on any person or class of persons mentioned in the order, where it appears that such notice cannot be served, or cannot be served without expense disproportionate to the value of the property to which the action relates (p).

SECT. 5.
General
Practice.
Dispensing with service.

1598. Instead of service of notice of the judgment or order, the court may direct advertisements to be published, at such times and in such manner as the court thinks fit, calling upon all persons claiming to be interested in the property, who have not been so served, to come in and establish their respective claims in respect thereof in chambers within a time named in the advertisement (a). After the expiration of that time, all persons so claiming are bound as if served with notice of the judgment (b).

Advertisements.

Notice of judgment and advertisements cannot, however, both be dispensed with (c), except in the county court (d), where notice and advertisements may be wholly dispensed with, and the judge may order that the parties concerned shall be bound as if served, such order being effectual, except where obtained by fraud or non-disclosure of facts (e).

Dispensing with advertisement.

SUB-SECT. 4.—Vesting Orders.

1599. In making an order for partition, or sale in lieu of partition, the court may declare that any of the parties to the action are trustees of the land, or any part thereof, and may declare that the interests of unborn persons who might claim under any party to the action or under the will or voluntary settlement of any person deceased who was, during his lifetime, a person interested, are the interests of persons who, on coming into existence, would be trustees, and the court may thereupon make a vesting order relating to their rights (f).

Vesting
order.

The vesting order has the effect of a conveyance or release by the (p) Partition Act, 1876 (39 & 40 Vict. c. 17), s. 3. For an order made on the hearing giving liberty to apply for an order dispensing with service, see Re Hardiman, Pragnell v. Batten (1880), 16 Ch. D. 360.

(a) For form of order in a county court, see County Court Forms, 1903, No. 327.

(b) Partition Act, 1876 (39 & 40 Vict. c. 17), s. 3. In terms the Act only appears to authorise a sale in such cases.

(c) Hacking v. Whalley (1882), 51 L. J. (CH.) 944; Phillips v. Andrews (1887), 56 L. T. 108, where KAY, J., disagreed with the decision of MALINS, V.-C., in Barton v. Barton, [1877] W. N. 23, dispensing with both notice of judgment and advertisement. The unrestricted powers to dispense with notice contained in R. S. C., Ord. 55, r. 35, relating to the High Court, and in Chancery of Lancaster Rules, Ord. 48, r. 32, do not apply to actions for partition, inasmuch as the procedure is laid down by the Partition Act, 1876 (39 & 40 Vict. c. 17), a statute subsequent to the Acts under which those rules take effect; see Phillips v. Andrews, supra.

(d) County Court Rules, 1903, Ord. 3, r. 30, which, it would appear, the decision in Phillips v. Andrews, supra, does not affect.

(e) County Court Rules, 1903, Ord. 3, r. 31.

(f) Trustee Act, 1893 (56 & 57 Vict. c. 53), s. 31, repealing (ibid., s. 51, Sched.) the Partition Act, 1868 (31 & 32 Vict. c. 40), s. 7. As to such vesting orders, see, further, title TRUSTS AND TRUSTEES.

SECT. 5.
General
Practice.

Appointment of person to convey.

person or persons to whom the order relates (g), and in case of copyholds, if made with the consent of the lord or lady of the manor, vests the land without surrender or admittance (h).

1600. If more convenient, instead of a vesting order, a person may be appointed to convey the land or release the contingent right in question (i), the assurance so made being effectual accordingly. In case of copyholds, the usual payments on transfer inter vivos are necessary (k).

When such orders are available.

1601. Such orders may be obtained where the parties are very numerous (l), or where a share is vested in an infant (m), a person out of the jurisdiction (n), or persons to come into existence, entitled under a limitation to a class (o), or as being the heirs of a living person (p), or where one of the persons interested is of unsound mind, whether so found or not (a).

SUB-SECT. 5.—Costs.

Discretion of court.

1602. All the costs of an action for partition or sale in lieu of partition are in the discretion of the court (b). Such discretion is exercised according to the following general rules:—

General
rule.

In the absence of special circumstances, the costs are payable by (g) Trustee Act, 1893 (56 & 57 Vict. c. 53), s. 32.

(h) Ibid., s. 34.

(i) Ibid., s. 33.

(k) Ibid., s. 34.

(l) Shepherd v. Churchill (1857), 25 Beav. 21 (in this case the shares of the parties were very minute and complicated, and the court, to save expense, and instead of directing a conveyance of the several shares, declared each of the parties trustees as to the shares allotted to the others of them, and then vested the whole trust estate in a single new trustee under the Trustee Acts, with directions to convey to the several parties their allotted shares). In Lees v. Coulton, Lees v. Clutton (1875), L. R. 20 Eq. 20, the court declared the parties to the suit were, and their unborn issue on coming into existence would be, trustees of their shares and interests within the meaning of the Trustee Act, 1850 (13 & 14 Vict. c. 60), but declined to make an order appointing new trustees until the first order was drawn up.

(m) Higgs v. Dorkis (1872), L. R. 13 Eq. 280 (vesting order); Stanley v. Wrigley (1855), 3 Sm. & G. 18 (appointment of person to convey); see also Bowra v. Wright (1851), 4 De G. & Sm. 265, sub nom. Bowra v. Whight, 15 Jur. 981; St. Leger v. Ferguson (1860), 10 I. Ch. R. 488; Willis v. Willis (1889), 61 L. T. 610. The former practice was to respite conveyance until the infant attained twenty-one (Brook (Lord) v. Hertford (Lord) (1729), 2 P. Wms. 518; Tuckfield v. Buller (1753), Amb. 197).

(n) Beckett v. Sutton (1882), 19 Ch. D. 646; Caswell v. Sheen (1893), 69 L. T. 854.

(o) Lees v. Coulton, Lees v. Clutton, supra.

(p) Basnett v. Moxon (1875), L. R. 20 Eq. 182.

(a) Lunacy Act, 1911 (1 & 2 Geo. 5, c. 40), s. 1. According to the law before this Act the application for such an order must have been made in lunacy, except where the person so interested was an infant or out of the jurisdiction, in which cases the High Court had power to make a vesting declaration apart from an appointment of new trustees; see Trustee Act, 1893 (56 & 57 Vict. c. 53), ss. 26, 31; Lunacy Act, 1890 (53 & 54 Vict. c. 5), s. 135; Lunacy Act, 1908 (8 Edw. 7, c. 47), s. 2. Re M., [1899] 1 Ch. 79; Re Watson (1888), 58 L. T. 509, C. A.; Caswell v. Sheen (1893), 69 L. T. 854; Re Arrowsmith's Trusts, Re Thompson (1858), 4 Jur. (N. S.) 1123.

(b) By the Partition Act, 1868 (31 & 32 Vict. c. 40), the costs up to the parties in proportion to their interests in the property, so that in case of a sale the costs are paid out of the proceeds before any division among the parties interested is made (c).

SECT. 5.
General
Practice.

Only one set of costs is allowed in respect of each share, and as between a party entitled to a share and his incumbrancer, the latter takes the set of costs allowed (d).

Persons
entitled.

In a contested case, where a sale is refused (e), or not asked, and a partition is objected to by the defendants (f), no costs are given up to the hearing.

Contest.

Where there is adverse litigation in relation to one share (g), or the titles inter se of persons interested in a share are determined in the action (h), the costs are borne by such share.

Litigated
title.

Where costs have been occasioned by an unnecessary denial of title or an unwarranted claim of title (i), or a frivolous case has been set up, the offending party will be ordered to pay the costs so occasioned (k).

Unnecessary
costs.

In the case of a party under disability, the costs may be made a charge on his share of the proceeds of sale (l).

Party under disability.

1603. Solicitor and client costs are only given by consent (m).

Solicitor and client.

the hearing are in the discretion of the court, and in view of R. S. C., Ord. 65, r. 1, and the practice before that Order, the court has full discretion to deal with the costs as it thinks just (Hills v. Archer (1904), 91 L. T. 166; Simpson v. Ritchie (1873), L. R. 16 Eq. 103). The rule before 1868 was that no costs were given up to the hearing, that the costs of issuing, executing and confirming the partition were borne by the parties in proportion to the values of their respective interests, and that there were no costs of the subsequent proceedings (Agar v. Fairfax, Agar v. Holdsworth (1811), 17 Ves. 533, 557).

(c) Cannon v. Johnson (1870), L. R. 11 Eq. 90; Bowes v. Bute (Marquis) (1879), 27 W. R. 750 (cases of partition); Ball v. Kemp-Welch (1880), 14 Ch. D. 512; Belcher v. Williams (1890), 45 Ch. D. 510; Catton v. Banks, [1893] 2 Ch. 221; Graham v. Clinton (Lord) (1899), 81 L. T. 717 (cases of sale in lieu of partition); and see the cases cited in note (d), infra.

(d) Catton v. Banks, supra; Ancell v. Rolfe, [1896] W. N. 9; Re Vase, Langrish v. Vase (1901), 84 L. T. 761; Carroll v. Harrison, [1910] W. N. 104, not following Belcher v. Williams, supra, in this respect.

(e) Richardson v. Feary (1888), 39 Ch. D. 45.

(f) Hills v. Archer, supra; in this case and in Richardson v. Feary, supra, there was a contest, and no advantage was taken of the Partition Acts.

(g) Hawkes v. Hawkes (1890), 63 L. T. 488; Re Mahony's Estate, [1909] 1 L. R. 132.

(h) Jennings v. Foster, [1884] W. N. 200; compare R. S. C., Ord. 65, r. 14B; Re Whittaker, Denison-Pender v. Evans, [1911] 1 Ch. 214.

(i) Hill v. Fullbrook (1822), Jac. 574; Morris v. Timmins (1838), 1 Beav. 411; Lyne v. Lyne (1856), 21 Beav. 318; Wilkinson v. Castle (1868), 37 L. J. (CH.) 467.

(k) Porter v. Lopes (1877), 7 Ch. D. 358, 367.

(l) Smith v. Birch (1868), 18 L. T. 174; Osborn v. Osborn (1868), L. R. 6 Eq. 338; and see Thackeray v. Parker (1863), 8 L. T. 602; Singleton v. Hopkins (1855), 1 Jur. (N. S.) 1199 (lunatic). Similar orders were made in Young v. Young (1870), L. R. 13 Eq. 175, n., and France v. France (1871), L. R. 13 Eq. 173. In Davy v. Wiellischbach (1872), L. R. 15 Eq. 269, however, WICKENS, V.-C., declined to follow these two cases, and made no order as to costs, but reserved further consideration, with liberty to apply.

(m) Ball v. Kemp-Welch, supra. As to taxation of solicitors' costs, see title SOLICITORS.

SECT. 5.
General
Practice.

The costs of an unsuccessful appeal are not costs in the action, but follow the event (n).

In the county court no solicitor other than the solicitor having the conduct of the sale is entitled to any costs incurred after the order for sale (o).

Charging
orders.

The solicitors for any party may obtain a charging order on his share of the proceeds of sale, but not generally on the entirety (p) and a stop order; but the costs of obtaining such an order must be borne by the solicitors themselves (q).

SECT. 6.—Practice on Judgment for Partition.

SUB-SECT. 1.—General Considerations.

Right to
partition.

1604. In the absence of a request for sale by any of the parties interested in the property, the court has no discretion, and is bound to order partition; the plaintiff, subject to proof of his title, is, in such case, entitled to partition as a matter of right (r).

Nature of property.

1605. Except where the property to be partitioned consists of one entire thing, as, for example, a single house (s), or set of chambers (t), it is not necessary that on partition every part of the estate should be divided, or an aliquot share of each part given to each co-owner. In the case of a number of houses of different value, houses of as near as possible equal value will be allotted to each of the co-owners, with sums for equality of partition given to those whose houses are of less value (a).

Convenience of co-owners.

1606. In making partition the court will take into consideration the family circumstances and convenience, and where a property to be partitioned consists of mansion, park and land, will allot the mansion-house and park to the owners of the largest share, and land as nearly as possible of equivalent value to the owners of the (n) Morant v. Godden (1902), 18 T. L. R. 421.

(o) County Court Rules, 1903, Ord. 9, r. 11.

(p) Lloyd v. Jones (1879), 40 L. T. 514.

(q) Mildmay v. Quicke (1877), 6 Ch. D. 553.

(r) Mayfair Property Co. v. Johnston, [1894] 1 Ch. 508: in his judgment NORTH, J. (ibid., at p. 513), cites CLARKE, M.R., in Parker v. Gerard (1754), Amb. 236: "A bill for partition is a matter of right and there is no instance of not succeeding in it, but where there is no proof of title in plaintiff." The strongest arguments of inconvenience have not prevailed against this right; see Warner v. Baynes (1750), Amb. 589 (a partition of Cold-bath fields, including the Cold-bath and water rents in respect of the pipes laid by the New River Company); Turner v. Morgan (1803), 8 Ves. 143 (where a house was ordered to be partitioned); Jope v. Morshead (1843), 6 Beav. 213; Hills v. Archer (1904), 91 L. T. 166. As to the jurisdiction to order sale in lieu of partition, see p. 842, ante.

(s) Warner v. Baynes, supra; Turner v. Morgan, supra; and see Benson's Case (undated), cited by Mr. Romilly, in his argument in Turner v. Morgan, supra, where a partition was made by building up a wall in the middle of a house.

(t) Burley v. Moore (1827), 5 L. J. (O. S.) (CH.) 120 (a set of chambers where a doorway was given to one co-owner and a right of passage through the doorway to the other).

(a) Clarendon (Earl) v. Hornby (1718), 1 P. Wms. 446; Story v. Johnson (1837), 2 Y. & C. (EX.) 586; Peers v. Needham (1854), 19 Beav. 316.

other shares (b), and in making the allotments will take into consideration the fact that the allottees have land adjoining or contiguous to that proposed to be allotted to them (c). Where the property has been used for business purposes (d), the court can impose on the allottees of portions of the property obligations securing the business advantages which were enjoyed before partition (e).

SECT. 6.
Practice on Judgment
for Partition.

SUB-SECT. 2.—Methods of Effecting Partition.

1607. There are three methods which the order may adopt for effecting the partition (f), namely, by laying proposals before the judge in chambers for his sanction, by proceedings out of court, or by commission.

Methods
available.

1608. Most commonly the partition is made in chambers, the parties being given liberty to lay proposals before the judge in chambers (g), even where any party is under disability (h). The proposals are supported by affidavits of competent surveyors containing a valuation of the various lots respectively proposed to be allotted to the parties, together with an affidavit, where a party is under disability, that the proposals are for his benefit (i).

In chambers.

1609. Secondly, with a view to avoiding expense or delay, or for other good reason, the court or a judge may order the partition to be effected by proceedings altogether out of court (k). This method

Out of court.

(b) Clarendon (Earl) v. Hornby (1718), 1 P. Wms. 446.

(c) Canning v. Canning (1854), 2 Drew. 434; and see Porter v. Lopes (1877), 7 Ch. D. 358, per JESSEL, M.R., at pp. 365, 366.

(d) As in Wilkinson v. Joberns (1873), L. R. 16 Eq. 14; Roughton v. Gibson (1877), 46 L. J. (CH.) 366, where however, orders for sale were made.

(e) As in Warner v. Baynes (1750), Amb. 589 (where security was required from one co-owner not to convert an allotment into a competing undertaking); Burley v. Moore (1827) 5 L. J. (o. s.) (CH.) 120 (chambers). Provisions in partnership deeds for division of the property at the termination of the partnership are construed as meaning sale for the purpose of division and not division in specie (Rigden v. Pierce (1822), Madd. & G. 353; Cook v. Collingridge (1823), Jac. 607; see Dean v. Wilson (1878), 10 Ch. D. 136; Partnership Act, 1890 (53 & 54 Vict. c. 39), s. 44; Re Wells (1883), 31 W. R. 764); and as to partnership generally, see title PARTNERSHIP.

(f) For the purpose of confirming an invalid partition, all the parties being before the court, and in other cases where an immediate order for partition can be obtained, the judgment may contain a specific allotment among the parties; see Brassey v. Chalmers, Seacome v. Holme (1853), 4 De G. M. & G. 528; McDonald v. McDonald (1891), 47 Federal Reporter, 765. Such an order must be grounded on the consent of parties, but may be made although infants are interested; see Stanley v. Wrigley (1855), 3 Sm. & G. 18; Greenwood v. Percy (1859), 26 Beav. 572.

(g) Clarke v. Clayton (1860), 6 Jur. (N. S.) 1238. The procedure is applicable to land of any tenure (Bowles v. Rump (1862), 9 W. R. 370). The method is now one prescribed by R. S. C., Ord. 51, r. 1A.

(h) Bull v. Bull (1868), 18 L. T. 870.

(i) Stanley v. Wrigley, supra; Greenwood v. Percy, supra.

(k) R. S. C., Ord. 51, r. 1A. Where the order adopts the method of proposals in chambers, and the proposals differ, the master has no jurisdiction to refer them to a surveyor in this manner (Howard v. Barnwell (1862), 1 New Rep. 172, C. A.).

SECT. 6.
Practice on Judgment
for Partition.

Commissioners.

is not adopted unless the judge is satisfied, by such evidence as he deems sufficient, that all persons interested are before the court or bound by the order, the order being prefaced by a declaration that the judge is so satisfied and a statement of the evidence (l); nor unless the parties are sui juris and can agree as to the manner in which the property is to be divided.

1610. The third method is by the appointment of commissioners to make the partition (m). A number of competent persons, generally surveyors, are appointed by the court, on the suggestion of the parties interested (n). The object of the commissioners is to divide and allot the property among the persons interested, in accordance with their interests as ascertained by the court; they have, therefore no jurisdiction to ascertain those interests (o); their position is that of arbitrators (p). The division made has to be

(l) This procedure is therefore confined to simple cases, where the title is undisputed and the property of small value.

(m) This method is now never resorted to, and may be treated as practically obsolete. It is believed that no order appointing commissioners has been made for many years; and in Clarke v. Clayton (1860), 6 Jur. (N. S.) 123, as reported 2 Giff. 333, STUART, V.-C., described such an order as a relic of barbarism, though two years later, in Howard v. Barnwell (1862), 1 New Rep. 172, the same judge made such an order; see also Howard v. Barnwell (1863), 2 New Rep. 414; Bull v. Bull (1868), 18 L. T. 870; Pryor v. Pryor (1875), 10 Ch. App. 469. A præcipe for sealing a commission of partition is given in R. S. C., Appendix G, Form No. 18; an order for a commission to partition lands in Jamaica is given in Galloway v. Mackersey (1861), 2 Seton, Judgments and Orders, 6th ed., p. 1885; and precedents of orders are to be found in the earlier editions of Seton. Partition by commissioners is still in force in the United States (see Claude v. Handy (1896), 83 Maryland, 225, 238 (q.v. as to alleged under-value by commissioners)), and in Nova Scotia; see Archibald v. Handley (1904), 40 Nova Scotia Reports, 427 (q.v. as to refusal of a commissioner to sign the return). The following statement of the old practice is given (see the text, supra, and notes (m))—(e), infra), in case for any reason an order should be made in the future for a commission to issue, and, moreover, the old practice will be a guide when similar questions arise under the new.

(n) Watson v. Northumberland (Duke) (1805), 11 Ves. 153; where the parties interested cannot agree, each party nominates a certain number; out of the nominated persons, commissioners are chosen by the court to represent each party, and in order to secure an uneven number the court may nominate a further commissioner (Howard v. Barnwell (1863), 2 New Rep. 414; Story v. Johnson (1837), 2 Y. & C. (EX.) 586 (where the order made the power exercisable by the master)). This delegation of the powers of the court is not made under any statute, but of necessity, because of the difficulty of effecting a partition by the court itself; per ELDON, L.C., in Agar v. Fairfax, Agar v. Holdsworth (1810), 17 Ves. 533, 552.

(o) Agar v. Fairfax, Agar v. Holdsworth (1811), 17 Ves. 533, per GRANT, M.R., at p. 543; Cole v. Sewell (1846), 15 Sim. 284. They are said to owe a duty to the court and to the parties to be impartial (Watson v. Northumberland (Duke), supra, at p. 160), and to make the best partition that they can for the benefit of all persons interested (Canning v. Canning (1854), 2 Drew. 434).

(p) Jones v. Totty (1827), 1 Sim. 136; Manners v. Charlesworth (1833), 1 My. & K. 330, per Lord BROUGHAM, L.C., at p. 332; Story v. Johnson, supra; Canning v. Canning, supra; see Lord REDESDALE'S opinion in Curzon v. Lister, Seton, Decrees, 1st ed., p. 194). They are also officers of the court (Young v. Sutton (1814), 2 Ves. & B. 365).

PART IV.—PARTITION AND SALE BY ORDER OF COURT.

SECT. 6.
Practice on Judgment
for
Partition.

according to value(q). Special directions may be given by the court(r); a strong case, however, is necessary to obtain a direction for division and allotment in a particular manner(s). Subject to any directions, the commissioners are bound to consider the best interest of the parties(t). They must act together(a), and may take evidence and examine witnesses on oath(b). Their division is embodied in a certificate(c); but if the commissioners differ they

(q) Calmaday v. Calmaday (1795), 2 Ves. 568, per Lord LOUGHBOROUGH, L.C., at p. 570.

(r) Without special directions, the commissioners may set out roads and easements, and make any part subject to the burden of repairing fences and walls (Lister v. Lister (1839), 3 Y. & C. (EX.) 540); but special directions, contained in the order of court, are necessary to enable them to charge a sum in gross or a rentcharge by way of equality of partition (Mole v. Mansfield (1845), 15 Sim. 41, where, however, an inquiry was granted whether it was proper that the sums awarded should be accepted on behalf of an infant party); or to cause them to divide and allot the property in a particular manner, as to allot a mansion-house wholly to one party, making allowance out of the land to the other party (Clarendon (Earl) v. Hornby (1718), 1 P. Wms. 446), or, before the court had jurisdiction to partition copyholds (see note (k), p. 836, ante), to allot the copyhold part of an estate in its entirety (Dillon v. Coppin (1833), 6 Beav. 217, n.).

(s) The court leaves such matters to the discretion of the commissioners. Thus in Warner v. Baynes (1750), Amb. 589, the direction was necessary in order to preserve the value of the property; in Morris v. Timmins (1838), 1 Beav. 411, an application to preserve a right of road which both parties had set out for their own convenience was refused. A person who has purchased a share in a specific part of the estate has no right to an order that some of that part should be allotted to him (Cooper v. Fisher (1841), 10 L. J. (CH.) 221); nor has his vendor any right (Wright v. Vernon (1860), 1 Drew. & Sm. 231). No directions were given where the husband of a person interested had laid out money on the property (Heath v. Bostock (1835), 5 L. J. (EX. EQ.) 20).

(t) Calmaday v. Calmaday, supra, per Lord LOUGHBOROUGH, L.C., at p. 570; Canning v. Canning (1854), 2 Drew. 434; having regard to the convenience of their property (Story v. Johnson (1837), 2 Y. & C. (EX.) 586), their family relationships and other circumstances; e.g., the priority in age of an eldest daughter, although she has no prior choice as of right (Littleton's Tenures, ss. 248, 249; see p. 814, ante), or the fact that her husband has taken her name and intended to keep up the family seat (Canning v. Canning, supra). In Wright v. Vernon, supra, KINDERSLEY, V.-C., recommended an allotment of any specific part to any party who desired "for good and sufficient reasons" to have it allotted to him; and see Lister v. Lister, supra. If the commissioners can find no reason for allotting the parts one way or another, they may draw lots, but as a last resort only (Canning v. Canning, supra; Ames v. Comyns (1867), 17 L. T. 163; see Lord REDESDALE'S opinion in Curzon v. Lister, Seton, Decrees, 1st ed., p. 194). The allotment must strictly comply with the order of court; the commissioners have no jurisdiction to allot parts in proportions different from those ordered, even though the parties concerned consent (Peers v. Needham (1854), 19 Beav. 316).

(a) Watson v. Northumberland (Duke) (1805), 11 Ves. 153.

(b) Meers v. Stourton (Lord) (1711), 1 Dick. 21; Evidence Act, 1851 (14 & 15 Vict. c. 99), s. 16; but only in the presence of the parties (Lord REDESDALE'S opinion, in Curzon v. Lister, supra). They may put interrogatories to witnesses, different from those proposed by the parties (ibid., approved by Lord BROUGHAM, L.C., in Manners v. Charlesworth (1833), 1 My. & K. 330).

(c) This is returned by the commissioners, with the commission, a record of evidence taken, and a schedule of particulars of the lands allotted, all

SECT. 6.
Practice on Judgment
for Partition.

make separate returns (d). The certificate is confirmed on further consideration in the action (e). A party aggrieved by the certificate may seek redress by motion to oppose the confirmation of, or to quash, the certificate and to suppress the return (f).

SUB-SECT. 3.—Conveyance.

Conveyance.

1611. By whichever method partition is effected it must be completed by mutual conveyances (g). The judgment, whether for partition or sale in lieu of partition, unless the proceedings are altogether out of court, provides that the conveyances are to be settled by the master if the parties disagree as to the form thereof (h).

Unless permitted by the court (i), a party cannot refuse to engrossed and annexed to the certificate (Jones v. Totty (1825), 2 Sim. & St. 219). Any formal error in the return may be corrected in court (ibid.), but to correct other errors the certificate is sent back to the commissioners (Rouse v. Barker (1728), Bunb. 251; see Manners v. Charlesworth (1833), 1 My. & K. 330).

(d) Canning v. Canning (1854), 2 Drew. 434. If the returns are by an equal number of commissioners, the effect is to make no effectual return (Watson v. Northumberland (Duke) (1805), 11 Ves. 153). If one of the returns is by a majority, and the commission enables such majority to act and make a return, the return of the majority will be established on a motion by the parties or some of them to suppress the other return (Randle v. Adams (undated), cited in Watson v. Northumberland (Duke), supra, at p. 155, not followed by Lord ELDON, L.C., in Watson v. Northumberland (Duke), supra, on account of the equality of numbers of the commissioners). If there is no effective return, then either an entirely fresh commission has to be issued (as in Corbet v. Davenant (1787), 2 Bro. C. C. 251; Watson v. Northumberland (Duke) supra), or a further commissioner will be added by the court (Canning v. Canning, supra), and a new return must be made.

(e) An order nisi will be made of course, and exceptions may be taken to it; see Forms, Seton, Decrees, 4th ed., p. 1024; the order made at the hearing, or on further consideration, provides for conveyances accordingly. The commissioners have no lien on the commission and certificate for their charges (Young v. Sutton (1814), 2 Ves. & B. 365).

(f) Corbet v. Davenant, supra, at p. 252; Jones v. Totty (1827), 1 Sim. 136; Ames v. Comyns (1867), 17 L. T. 163; and see the order in Canning v. Canning, supra, cited Seton, Decrees, 4th ed., p. 1024. The court does not readily set aside the certificate (Ames v. Comyns, supra); neither the valuation nor the allotment of the property made by the commissioners will be gone into unless the commissioners have gone outside their jurisdiction (as by including the wrong property (Dacre v. Gorges (1825), 2 Sim. & St. 454); or dividing the right property in an unauthorised manner (Peers v. Needham (1854), 19 Beav. 316); or have made a mistake so gross as to induce the court to infer that there is some unjust, corrupt, or fraudulent motive on their part (Lister v. Lister (1839), 3 Y. & C. (ex.) 540; Jones v. Totty (1827), 1 Sim. 136); or have otherwise failed in their duty (Watson v. Northumberland (Duke), supra).

(g) Anon., in Chancery (1742), 3 Swan. 139, n.; Miller v. Warmington (1820), 1 Jac. & W. 484, 493. The conveyances will be in the usual form of a partition deed (see p. 823, ante), or purchase deed (see title SALE OF LAND), except that they are made under the order of court.

(h) Whaley v. Dawson (1805), 2 Sch. & Lef. 367, 372; A.-G. v. Hamilton (1816), 1 Madd. 214. See the form in 2 Seton, Judgments and Orders, 6th ed., p. 1883.

(i) See Re Molyneux, Ex parte Spencer (1862), 4 De G. F. & J. 365, C. A.

execute a conveyance to other parties on a partition except conditionally on receiving a conveyance from him (k). Apart from express direction, the question who are the necessary parties to the conveyance is usually left to the master, or in the county court to the judge (l).

SECT. 6.
Practice on Judgment
for
Partition.

1612. The conveyance on partition is made subject to the incumbrances affecting each share (m); and the allotted parts may be made liable inter se to an apportioned part of the incumbrances affecting the whole (n).

Incum-
brances.

SUB-SECT. 4.—Title Deeds on Partition.

1613. Such of the title deeds as relate solely to any distinct part of the hereditaments which is allotted to any party are delivered to him (a), and other title deeds to the party having the largest interest (b), or liberty to apply will be given (c). With regard to the deed of partition, if the claims of all parties are equal, it is given to the plaintiff, and if they are not, to the party who is likely to take the best care of it (d). Where many persons are interested, it is convenient that the deed should be enrolled, with liberty to any party to have a duplicate at his own expense (e).

Custody.

SECT. 7.—Practice on Judgment for Sale.

SUB-SECT. 1.—Request for Sale.

1614. The request for sale may be, and usually is, embodied in the pleadings (f) of the party, but may be made independently of pleadings and in court by counsel duly authorised (g), or in chambers if the judgment so allows.

Request.

In the county court, at any time after the entry of the plaint, all the parties interested may attend and accept service and sign the

In county court.

(k) Orger v. Sparke (1860), 9 W. R. 180.

(l) A.-G. v. Hamilton (1816), 1 Madd. 214; compare Cole v. Sewell (1849), 17 Sim. 40; County Court Rules, 1903, Ord. 23, r. 19.

(m) Whaley v. Dawson (1805), 2 Sch. & Lef. 367, 372. In Clarke v. Clayton (1860), 6 Jur. (N. S.) 1238, the mortgagees were not parties.

(n) In Poole v. Poole, [1895] W. N. 15, a declaration was made that the parties were inter se each liable to pay half an annuity charged on the entirety.

(a) Jones v. Robinson (1853), 3 De G. M. & G. 910, C. A.

(b) Compare Griffiths v. Hatchard (1854), 1 K. & J. 17, per PAGE WOOD, V.-C.

(c) Clarke v. Clayton (1860), 6 Jur. (N. S.) 1238.

(d) Elton v. Elton, Bayly v. Elton (1860), 6 Jur. (N. S.) 136, where the deed was given to persons entitled to one-fourth on condition that it was enrolled and that they entered into covenants for production.

(e) Elton v. Elton (No. 1) (1860), 27 Beav. 632. Formerly the deeds were placed in the custody of the court.

(f) As to pleadings, see p. 846, ante. As to pleading generally, see title PLEADING.

(g) Crookes v. Whitworth (1878), 10 Ch. D. 289. As to the authority of counsel generally, see title BARRISTERS, Vol. II., pp. 397 et seq.; and as to the authority in cases of a married woman not entitled as a feme sole, see p. 862, post.

SECT. 7.
Practice on Judgment
for Sale.

request for sale (h), and their signatures are attested by the registrar or by one of his clerks (i). When all the parties interested have signed such request, the order for sale may be made at the next court to be held, although such court may be held before the return day of the summons (k).

Persons under disability :
(i.) Married
women ;

1615. A married woman, to whom the provisions of the Married Women's Property Act, 1882 (l) do not apply, may make her request for sale through her next friend or guardian ad litem (m); the request is made by her counsel, if duly authorised, without her separate examination (n). Such authority of counsel must be proved, his request alone being insufficient (o); the authority may be given by means of a letter to her solicitor authorising and requesting him to instruct counsel to ask for sale (p).

(ii.) infants ;

On behalf of an infant, the request may be made by his next friend or guardian ad litem (q), but the court is not bound to comply with such request unless it appears that the sale is for the infant's benefit; the question of the infant's benefit may be left to an inquiry (r).

(iii.) lunatics.

On behalf of a person of unsound mind the request may be made

(h) County Court Rules, 1903, Ord. 9, r. 10, which describes the request as made under the Partition Act, 1868 (31 & 32 Vict. c. 40), s. 4. This request is in the statute a request by a majority, but the context in the rule shows that a mere majority is not sufficient in the case contemplated, in which all the parties interested must concur; see title COUNTY COURTS, Vol. VIII., p. 675.

(i) A special form of request is given in the County Court Forms; see Yearly County Court Practice, 1912, Vol. II., p. 774.

(k) County Court Rules, 1903, Ord. 9, r. 10. In the case where less than all of the persons interested make the request (which may be in the same form mutatis mutandis) the action proceeds in the usual way.

(l) 45 & 46 Vict. c. 75. A married woman is in the same position as any other party sui juris, whether she is entitled beneficially or as a trustee (Married Women's Property Act, 1907 (7 Edw. 7, c. 18); see title HUSBAND AND WIFE, Vol. XVI., p. 380.

(m) Partition Act, 1876 (39 & 40 Vict. c. 17), s. 6. In Higgs v. Dorkis (1872), L. R. 13 Eq. 280, an order for sale was made under the Partition Act, 1868 (31 & 32 Vict. c. 40), at the request of a married woman and her husband.

(n) Crookes v. Whitworth (1878), 10 Ch. D. 289. Before the Partition Act, 1876 (39 & 40 Vict. c. 17), separate examination was necessary (Leigh v. Edwards (1873), 42 L. J. (CH.) 892).

(o) Wallace v. Greenwood (1880), 16 Ch. D. 362.

(p) Grange v. White (1881), 18 Ch. D. 612.

(q) Partition Act, 1876 (39 & 40 Vict. c. 17), s. 6. This provision mentions "guardian" simply, but this means guardian ad litem (Rimington v. Hartley (1880), 14 Ch. D. 630). The words of the Partition Act, 1876 (39 & 40 Vict. c. 17), s. 6, which treats of a married woman, infant, and lunatic together, and confers authority to make the request on the next friend, guardian, committee or person authorised, are not to be read reddendo singula singulis (ibid., per JESSEL, M.R., at p. 631, not following Platt v. Platt (1880), 28 W. R. 533; and see title INFANTS AND CHILDREN, Vol. XVII., p. 128, note (f)).

(r) See p. 850, ante; compare Capewell v. Lawrence (1863), 8 L. T. 603 (a case before the Partition Acts); Grove v. Comyn (1874), L. R. 18 Eq. 387; and see Davey v. Wittlisbach (1872), L. R. 15 Eq. 269; Thompson v. Richardson (1872), 6 I. R. Eq. 596. This check does not apply to other cases of disability: see Wallace v. Greenwood, supra, at p. 366.

by a next friend, guardian ad litem, the committee (if he is a lunatic so found), or the person appointed by the Court in Lunacy (if he is a lunatic not so found). In the two last cases authority must first be obtained from the Court in Lunacy (s). In the case of a request by a next friend or guardian ad litem, the court needs to be satisfied that the person is of unsound mind, and that he stands in need of protection, and it ought to be shown also that it would be for his true interest that the court should exercise its jurisdiction (a).

SECT. 7.
Practice on Judgment
for Sale.

1616. Similar considerations apply to an undertaking to purchase a share (b).

Undertaking
to purchase.

SUB-SECT. 2.—Mode and Conduct of Sale.

1617. Besides the mode of a sale by auction (c) under the order of the court, the sale, if ordered by the High Court or the Court of Chancery of Lancaster, may be carried out (d) by proposals in chambers on the submission of offers (e), or by proceedings out of court (f).

Modes
available.

In the latter case, the reserved bid and the auctioneer's remuneration must be fixed in chambers, and the purchase-money should be paid direct into court, directions to this effect being embodied in the order (g). The sale will not be ordered altogether out of court unless the judge is satisfied, by such evidence as he deems sufficient, that the persons interested are before the court or bound by the order, and the order must be prefaced by a declaration that the judge is so satisfied; and a statement of the evidence upon which such declaration is made (h).

Sale out of court.

(s) Partition Act, 1876 (39 & 40 Vict. c. 17), s. 6; see Watt v. Leach (1878), 26 W. R. 475 (next friend); compare Hollingworth v. Sidebottom (1837), 8 Sim. 620. The authority of the court is obtained by petition in lunacy, as in Re Pares, Lillingston v. Pares (1879), 12 Ch. D. 333, C. A.; and see title LUNATICS AND PERSONS OF UNSOUND MIND, Vol. XIX., p. 445.

(a) Porter v. Porter (1888), 37 Ch. D. 420, C. A.

(b) Under the Partition Act, 1868 (31 & 32 Vict. c. 40), s. 5; see p. 845, ante.

(c) As to sale by auction generally, see title AUCTION AND AUCTIONEERS, Vol. I., pp. 506 et seq.

(d) R. S. C., Ord. 51, r. 1A; Chancery of Lancaster Rules, Ord. 45, r. 1A.

(e) See the order in Mallinson v. Siddle (1870), 2 Seton, Judgments and Orders, 6th ed., p. 1860; Capewell v. Lawrence (1863), 8 L. T. 603; Gilbert v. Smith (1879), 11 Ch. D. 78. In Grove v. Comyn (1874), L. R. 18 Eq. 387, the court approved a conditional agreement for sale at the hearing.

(f) Pitt v. White (1887), 57 L. T. 650, followed in Re Stedman, Coombe v. Vincent (1888), 58 L. T. 709. Apart from the rules mentioned in note (d), supra, there was no power to sell out of court, at any rate under the Partition Acts (Strugnell v. Strugnell (1884), 27 Ch. D. 258, not following Chubb v. Pettipher, [1872] W. N. 110, and Hayward v. Smith (1869), 20 L. T. 70). Orders for sale out of court were also made in Willis v. Willis (1889), 61 L. T. 610 (q.v. for form of order), and in Crook v. Crook, [1890] W. N. 26, but in the latter case, CHITTY, J., said that this course was not to be followed in all cases. Apparently there is no jurisdiction to order a sale out of court in the Chancery of Durham or in the county court.

(g) Pitt v. White, supra; Re Stedman, Coombe v. Vincent, supra; Willis v. Willis, supra. Hayward v. Smith, supra, is not now followed.

(h) See the rules mentioned in note (d), supra.

SECT. 7. The sale by auction under the order of the court takes place as usual in such sales (i).

Practice on Judgment
for Sale.

Conduct of
sale.

1618. In the county court the judge appoints one solicitor to have the conduct of the proceedings, no other solicitor being entitled to any costs incurred after such an order (k). In other courts the plaintiff is as a rule entitled to the conduct of the sale (l); if, however, the plaintiff desires to bid, and is allowed by the court to do so, the proper course is to give the conduct of the sale to an independent solicitor (m), but this rule is not inflexible if the parties agree otherwise (n). It is improper for any party, not having the conduct of the sale, to issue advertisements or other notices of the sale, or otherwise to interfere with the conduct of the sale, and he will be restrained from so doing by injunction (o).

Bidding.

1619. Any of the persons interested may be allowed (p) to bid at the sale on such terms as the court thinks reasonable with regard to payment of deposit, or accounting for the purchase-money or any part thereof, or any other matters (a). Generally, leave to bid is given to parties other than those having the conduct of the sale (b), but even the person who originally had the conduct of the sale may be allowed to bid, another person being appointed in his stead to have the conduct of the sale (c).

A receiver appointed by the court, though a part owner, cannot buy at any sale, although not made in the partition action, but under a title paramount, as by a mortgagee (d).

Interest.

In setting off their purchase-money against their shares, the parties will be charged interest (e).

(i) R. S. C., Ord. 51 (see Yearly Practice of the Supreme Court, 1912, pp. 717 et seq.); Chancery of Lancaster Rules, Ord. 45; Chancery of Durham Rules, Ord. 44; County Court Rules, 1903, Ord. 23, rr. 18 et seq.

(k) County Court Rules, 1903, Ord. 9, r. 11.

(l) Davenport v. King (1883), 49 L. T. 92, where mortgagees obtained judgment for sale.

(m) Dean v. Wilson (1878), 10 Ch. D. 136; Roughton v. Gibson (1877), 46 L. J. (CH.) 366.

(n) Pennington v. Dalbiac (1870), 18 W. R. 684, not followed in Verrall v. Cathcart (1879), 27 W. R. 645; in both these cases infants were defendants.

(o) Dean v. Wilson, supra.

(p) Partition Act, 1868 (31 & 32 Vict. c. 40), s. 6.

(a) Wilkinson v. Joberns (1873), L. R. 16 Eq. 14 (where the owner of a moiety was ordered to pay in half the purchase-money); Roughton v. Gibson, supra (where the owner of three-quarters was ordered to pay in one-half of the purchase-money to provide a margin for costs); Re Dracup, Field v. Dracup, [1894] 1 Ch. 59.

(b) Gilbert v. Smith (1879), 11 Ch. D. 78; Verrall v. Cathcart, supra; Re Dracup, Field v. Dracup, supra.

(c) Roughton v. Gibson, supra; Dean v. Wilson, supra. In Pennington v. Dalbiac, supra, this condition was dispensed with, but the case was not followed in Verrall v. Cathcart, supra. In Porter v. Lopes (1877), 7 Ch. D. 358, and Morant v. Godden (1902), 18 T. L. R. 421, leave was given for both plaintiff and defendant to bid, without any condition.

(d) Nugent v. Nugent, [1908] 1 Ch. 546, C. A.

(e) In Re Dracup, Field v. Dracup, supra, the rate charged was 3 per cent. per annum.

SUB-SECT. 3.—Application and Distribution of Proceeds of Sale.

SECT. 7.

Practice on Judgment for Sale.

1620. When all parties interested are before the court, the proceeds of sale may, if the court thinks fit, be paid to trustees of whom it may approve (f); otherwise they must be paid into court (g).

In either case the money must be applied, as the court from time to time directs, to one or more of the following purposes (h): (1) land tax redemption (i); (2) discharge or redemption of incumbrances affecting the hereditaments sold (k), or other hereditaments subject to the same uses or trusts; (3) purchase of other hereditaments to be settled in the same manner as the hereditaments sold (l); or (4) payment to any person becoming absolutely entitled according to English law (m). Such a person must be beneficially entitled: payment is not made to trustees for a person so entitled (n); but a trustee with a power of sale, on whom a share has devolved, is a person absolutely entitled within this provision (a). A married woman under the old law may obtain payment out on being separately examined as to her election to take the funds as personal estate (b), except where she requests or consents to sale, when separate examination is unnecessary, or where the fund does not exceed £200, when it is dispensed with (c). There is no provision allowing payment out of any part of the proceeds of sale to a tenant for life (d).

(1) When all parties before the court.
Application of proceeds.

(f) This has been allowed where the sale took place out of court (Hayward v. Smith (1869), 20 L. T. 70; but see note (f), p. 863, ante); it is not, however, the ordinary course; see Higgs v. Dorkis (1872), L. R. 13 Eq. 280; Aston v. Meredith (1872), L. R. 13 Eq. 492; and see p. 863, ante. In Pyne v. Phillips, [1895] W. N. 8, NORTH, J., purporting to act under the Settled Land Act, 1882 (45 & 46 Vict. c. 38), s. 40, ordered payment out to trustees for the purposes of the Settled Land Acts of a settled share.

(g) Partition Act, 1868 (31 & 32 Vict. c. 40), s. 8, incorporating the Leases and Sales of Settled Estates Act, 1856 (19 & 20 Vict. c. 120), ss. 23—25. The Settled Estates Act, 1877 (40 & 41 Vict. c. 18), repealed the Leases and Sales of Settled Estates Act, 1856 (19 & 20 Vict. c. 120), but where a statute is incorporated by reference into a second statute, the repeal of the first statute by a third does not affect the second (Clarke v. Bradlaugh (1881), 8 Q. B. D. 63, C. A., per BRETT, L.J., at p. 69); see title STATUTES; and, accordingly, both in Re Barker (1881), 17 Ch. D. 241, C. A., and Re Morgan, Smith v. May, [1900] 2 Ch. 474, the court treated the Leases and Sales of Settled Estates Act, 1856 (19 & 20 Vict. c. 120), as still governing the application of funds arising from a sale under the Partition Acts.

(h) Leases and Sales of Settled Estates Act, 1856 (19 & 20 Vict. c. 120), s. 23.

(i) See, further, title LAND TAX, Vol. XVIII., pp. 321, 327.

(j) See the order in Waite v. Bingley (1882), 21 Ch. D. 674.

(k) In Langmead v. Cockerton (1877), 25 W. R. 315, JESSEL, M.R., gave liberty to apply for investment in leaseholds, in order to make up the loss of income to a tenant for life.

(m) The curator ad bona, therefore, appointed by a foreign court, of a person of unsound mind not so found in England, cannot without an order in lunacy obtain payment out (Grimwood v. Bartels (1877), 46 L. J. (CH.) 788).

(n) Aston v. Meredith (1872), L. R. 13 Eq. 492.

(a) Re Morgan, Smith v. May, supra, following Re Hobson's Trusts (1877), 7 Ch. D. 708, C. A., and followed in Re Sheffield Corporation and St. William's Roman Catholic Chapel Schools, Sheffield (Trustees), [1903] 1 Ch. 208.

(b) Standerling v. Hall (1879), 11 Ch. D. 652.

(c) Wallace v. Greenwood (1880), 16 Ch. D. 362.

(d) Langmead v. Cockerton, supra.

SECT. 7. Until application the proceeds of sale are not funds under the Practice on Judgment for Sale. control of the court, so as to be invested as such, but they must be invested as under the Leases and Sales of Settled Estates Act, 1856 (e).

Investment.

(2) Where some parties not before the court.

1621. The practice where all parties are not before the court and service of notice of the proceedings on any person, or class of persons, has been dispensed with is subject to the following special rules (f). The proceeds are paid into court to abide further order, and the court must by order fix a period (which may be extended by further order), at the expiration of which the proceeds will be distributed, and must direct notices to be given, by advertisement or otherwise, as it thinks best adapted for notifying to the absent parties beneficially interested the fact of sale, the time of intended distribution, and the time within which a claim to participate in the proceeds must be made.

Application of rules.

These requirements are obligatory, and cannot be dispensed with in case of any parties beneficially interested as to whom service of notice of the proceedings has been dispensed with (g); but they do not apply in case of trustees for persons absolutely entitled who have no duties to perform; and accordingly, as to such trustees, no such advertisements are necessary (h).

Distribution of proceeds of sale.

If at the expiration of the period fixed the interests of all persons interested have been ascertained, the proceeds of sale are distributed accordingly (i); if the interests are not ascertained and it appears that they cannot be ascertained without expense disproportionate to the value of the property or of the unascertained interests, the proceeds are distributed as appears to the court to be most in accordance with the rights of the persons whose claims have been established, whether those persons are or are not before the court: the court may, however, make such reservation as seems fit in favour of other persons, whether ascertained or not, who may appear from the evidence before the court to have any prima facie rights which ought to be so provided for, although not fully established. All other persons are then excluded (k).

Rights of persons excluded.

An excluded person, however, is not without remedy; he may recover from any participating person any portion received by the latter of his share (l), and where two or more sales are made, and he establishes his claim to participate in the proceeds of a subsequent sale, the shares of the other persons interested in the proceeds of the subsequent sale are to abate to the extent to which they were increased by his non-participation in the previous sale (l), and are

(e) Stat. (1856) 19 & 20 Vict. c. 120, s. 25; see Langmead v. Cockerton (1877), 25 W. R. 315. The Settled Estates Act, 1877 (40 & 41 Vict. c. 18), s. 36, provides for investment as cash under the control of the court, but that Act is not impliedly incorporated in the Partition Act, 1868 (31 & 32 Vict. c. 40); see note (g), p. 865, ante.

(f) Partition Act, 1876 (39 & 40 Vict. c. 17), s. 4.

(g) Phillips v. Andrews (1887), 56 L. T. 108.

(h) Crossman v. Richards, [1888] W. N. 167.

(i) Partition Act, 1876 (39 & 40 Vict. c. 17), s. 4 (4).

(k) Ibid., s. 4 (5).

(l) Interest cannot be claimed, therefore, on the amount of abatement.

to that extent to be paid to the excluded person towards the share of the proceeds of the previous sale to which he would have been entitled if his claim had been established in due time (m).

1622. The order for sale operates as from its date, in the case of a person sui juris and absolutely entitled, to convert his or her share into personalty, and the share devolves, on the death of the owner, as such (n). Such conversion is not affected by a subsequent lunacy (o).

In the case of a person under disability, or a person not absolutely entitled, there is a reconversion effected in favour of that person's heir (p), who, however, takes the property as he finds it (q).

Accordingly the share of an infant or lunatic should, if put to a separate credit in the action, be earmarked as real estate (r), but even without such earmarking, or carrying to a separate credit, it is to be dealt with as real estate, at all events in cases where the sale is made on the request of persons other than the infant or lunatic (s).

SECT. 7.

Practice on Judgment for Sale.

Conversion under order for sale.

(m) Partition Act, 1876 (39 & 40 Vict. c. 17), s. 5.

(n) Re Dodson, Yates v. Morton, [1908] 2 Ch. 638; compare Burgess v. Booth, [1908] 2 Ch. 648, C. A.; and Steed v. Preece (1874), L. R. 18 Eq. 192, where, however, the party was an infant, see note (q), infra; Wallace v. Greenwood (1880), 16 Ch. D. 362; Hyett v. Mekin (1884), 25 Ch. D. 735; Fauntleroy v. Beebe, [1911] 2 Ch. 257, C. A.; and see title EQUIT, Vol. XIII., p. 112. A bequest of personal estate will, therefore, include a share of a fund representing the proceeds of sale (Re Harman, Lloyd v. Tardy, [1894] 3 Ch. 607); see also Re Morgan, Smith v. May, [1900] 2 Ch. 474.

(o) Re Pickard, Turner v. Nicholson (1885), 53 L. T. 293; compare Fowler v. Scott (1871), 19 W. R. 972 (subsequent marriage, before 1882).

(p) The reason is that express provision is made for reinvestment in land; see p. 865, ante; Foster v. Foster (1875), 1 Ch. D. 588 (an infant); Re Barker (1881), 17 Ch. D. 241, C. A. (a lunatic); compare Kelland v. Fulford (1877), 6 Ch. D. 491; Mildmay v. Quicke (1877), 6 Ch. D. 553 (a married woman under the old law); Mordaunt v. Benwell (1881), 19 Ch. D. 302. In Higgs v. Dorkis (1872), L. R. 13 Eq. 280, WICKENS, V.-C., thought that in the case of a married woman a conversion was effected; the decision was before the Partition Act, 1876 (39 & 40 Vict. c. 17). In Wallace v. Greenwood (1880), 16 Ch. D. 362, a case after that Act, JESSEL, M.R., at p. 366, expressed a similar opinion. These opinions have no relation to married women under the present law, and in so far as they relate to disabilities other than that of marriage seem inconsistent with the cases cited above.

(q) Mordaunt v. Benwell (1881), 19 Ch. D. 302; Re Norton, Norton v. Norton, [1900] 1 Ch. 101.

(r) Howard v. Jalland, [1891] W. N. 210, considered in Re Norton, Norton v. Norton, supra, by BYRNE, J., at p. 105; compare Supreme Court Funds Rules, 1905, r. 21. In Wallace v. Greenwood, supra, at p. 365, there are dicta of JESSEL, M.R., at p. 365, to the contrary.

(s) Re Norton, Norton v. Norton, supra. In Wallace v. Greenwood, supra, JESSEL, M.R., at p. 365, considered that in the case of a request for sale on behalf of the infant a conversion into personalty was effected. In Foster v. Foster, supra, the request for sale was made by parties other than the infants, and the property was held by the same judge to be reconverted into realty. See Charlton v. Murray (1909), 10 New South Wales State Reports, 49, where sale was ordered on a request on behalf of an infant, and Foster v. Foster, supra, and Re Norton, Norton v. Norton, supra, were not followed.

END OF VOL. XXI.

INDEX.

MISTAKE,

- account, rent and profits, of, power to order on rectification of conveyance, 28
- accounts, reopening of, circumstances sufficient to allow the, 32
 - settled under common mistake, 34
- acquiescence, right to relief, when lost through, 16
- action, when demand necessary before, 31
- allowance on account, application of doctrine to, 31
- ambiguity, contract, of terms of, admissibility of evidence as to, 6
 - when parol evidence admissible to explain a, 25
- burden of proof, impeachment of voluntary deed, on, 20, 24
- clerical error, rectification of documents on account of, 14, 15
- common intention, mistake in expressing, when relieved, 11, 12
- compromise, essentials to binding, 11
 - rule as to binding, effect of, 10, 11
- consideration, no relief on mere ground of mistake as to, 10
- construction, mistake in document rectified by rules of, 14
- contract, avoidance of, on ground of mistake in quality, 9
 - quantity, 9, 10
- cases where relief on account of mutual mistake, 7, 8
- classification of mistakes in relation to, 3
- joint, form in which the court will rectify, 22
- misdescription in, maxim applicable to, 6, 7
- mistake as a defence to action for breach of, 24, 25
 - claim for specific performance, 14
 - to nature of obligations imposed by, 5
 - by one party to, no relief where contract is clear, 7
- no rectification where term purposely omitted, 14
- relief where followed by conveyance, 21
 - made under mutual mistake, 7, 8, 17
- conveyance, effect when in accordance with written agreement, 13
 - misdescription of purchaser in, effect of, 6
 - no relief where property more valuable than parties supposed, 9
 - practice on rectification of, 28, 29
 - proof of, correct form necessary to rectification of, 22
 - rescission of, when court will grant, 17—21
- costs, action on account of mistake, in, practice as to, 28, 29
- damages, mistake as a defence to an action for, 24, 25
- deed poll, rectification of, where not in accordance with intention, 12
- defence, mistake as a, to action for specific performance, 24, 25
- demand, necessity for, before action brought, 31
- documents, clerical error in, how treated, 14, 15
 - nature of, subject to rectification, 13
 - operation of, when court will limit the, 15
 - rectification of, practice as to claim for, 28, 29
 - where mistake mutual, 20
 - or rescinding of, when court will refuse, 17
 - where rule does not apply, 14
- relief by supply or omission of words in, 14
 - to person preparing, terms upon which court may grant, 21
 - where operating in law contrary to intention, 12, 13
- remedy where mistake in unilateral, 20

INDEX.

MISTAKE—continued.

- evidence, admissibility of, on mistake as to identity of subject-matter of transaction, 6
- parol, admissibility of, notwithstanding the Statute of Frauds, 26
 - claim for rectification on, when admitted, 26, 27
 - inadmissibility of, as to mistake, 25
 - when rectification made on only the plaintiff's, 27
- expression of common intention, relief on mistake in, 11, 12
- fact, mistake of, as to nature of the transaction, 5
- falsa demonstratio non nocet*, application of maxim to misdescription in contract, 6, 7
- family arrangements, essentials to validity of, 11
 - rules as to, binding effect of, 10, 11
- forgetfulness, money paid in, recovery of, 30
 - relief in respect of, when granted, 16
- fraud, as a bar to relief on account of mistake, 5
- identity, party to transaction, of, mistake as to, 5
 - subject-matter of transaction, of, admissibility of evidence as to, 6
- ignorance, law as to private right, of, when relief granted in respect of, 4
 - when relief granted for mistake due to, 16
- intention, necessity for continuity of, 22
 - relief where document operates in law contrary to, 12
- joint contracts, form in which court will rectify, 22
- judgment, payment under a, effect as a bar to rectification, 28
- law, change in understanding of, effect of, 33
 - mistake of, when relief not granted in respect of, 4
- legal remedy, when mistake a ground for, 16
- limitation of time, to claim for relief, 31
- marriage settlements, extent of relief granted in respect of, 22, 23
- material fact, mistake must be of a, 30
- misconception, relief in respect of, when granted, 16
- misdescription, purchaser; of, when conveyance not inoperative through, 6
- mistake, classification as to persons by whom made, 3, 4
 - having regard to nature of, 3
 - defence to action for specific performance, nature of, 24, 25
 - documents subject to rectification on account of, 13, 14
 - examples of, subject to rectification, 13
 - expression of common intention, in, when relief granted, 11, 12
 - must be of a material fact, 30
 - nature of, 2, 3
 - of fact, as to identity of party, 5
 - nature of the transaction, 5
 - cases where no relief in contract on ground of mutual, 8
 - relief against, available, 11
 - price or consideration, as to, when no ground for relief, 10
 - relief in contract on ground of mutual, 7, 8
 - law, affecting private right, when relief may be claimed, 4
 - money paid voluntarily under, when irrecoverable, 32, 33
 - relief in respect of payment under, in what cases, 33, 34
 - where relief not granted in respect of, 4
 - overpayment of water rate by, when recoverable, 29
 - payment of money, in, of what it may consist, 30
 - persons between whom, must be made, 30, 31
 - principle upon which relief on account of granted, 12, 13
 - rectification from evidence of plaintiff alone, when made, 27
 - relief where due to ignorance or misconception, 16
 - unilateral only, 18
 - rights and liabilities which may be affected, 2, 3
 - voluntary deed, in respect of, when relief granted, 19, 20
 - when a ground for legal remedy, 16
- money, payment by mistake, when recoverable, 29, 30
 - under particular circumstances, when recoverable, 30
 - without reference to state of matters, effect of, 30
- recovery when paid by mistake, possession of means of knowledge no bar to, 29, 30
 - voluntary payment under mistake of law, when irrecoverable, 32, 33
- mortgage securities, rule by which the court construes, 15
- parol evidence, admissibility notwithstanding the Statute of Frauds, 26
 - to explain an antecedent written agreement, 26

INDEX.

MISTAKE—continued.

- parol evidence, claim for rectification on, when admitted, 26, 27
 - inadmissibility of, as to mistake, 25
- party, mistake as to identity of, 5
- payment into court, when no relief in respect of, 34
 - out of court, to party not entitled, effect when under order, 33
 - to officer of the court, in mistake of law, practice of the court as to, 34
- petition, claim for rectification, when made by way of, 28
- plaintiff, neglect, misconduct or breach of duty by, effect of, 31
- price, no relief on mere ground of mistake as to, 10
- private right, rights as to mistake of law in case of, 4
- quality, avoidance of contract set aside on grounds of mutual mistake in, 9
- quantity, avoidance of contract on grounds of mistake in, 9, 10
- relief, classification of kinds of, 17
 - contract made under mutual mistake, in, 9, 17, 18
 - where mistake is unilateral only, 18
 - evidence upon which, will be granted, 25
 - limit of time to claim for, 31
 - none in case of simple money demand, 34
 - principle upon which granted, 12
 - when not granted on the ground of mistake, 4
 - where mistake in contract is mutual, 7, 8
- rent and profits, account of, power to direct on rectification of conveyance, 28
- restitutio in integrum*, application of maxim, 31
- settlement, rectification at suit of settlor, 23, 24
 - where made under order of the court or enrolled, 24
- shares, mistake in numbering of, title of holder not affected by, 14
- solicitor, when not liable for costs incurred through mistake, 29
- specific performance, mistake as a defence to claim for, 14
 - nature of mistake as ground of defence to action for, 24, 25
 - option to plaintiff to take decree in altered form or have action dismissed, 24, 25
- Statute of Frauds, admissibility of parol evidence notwithstanding the, 26
- stock, mistake as quotation of, when loss in respect of irrecoverable, 29
- term of contract, no rectification where purposely omitted, 14
- time, limitation of, in claim for relief, 31
 - when lapse of, a bar to rectification, 27, 28
- trustee, release to, when may be set aside, 19
- voluntary deed, burden of proof on impeachment of, 20
 - when will be set aside, 19, 20
 - settlement, rectification at suit of volunteer, 24
 - of, 23, 24
- unilateral mistake, relief in respect of, when granted, 20
- waiver, mistake of law as to title, of, effect of, 4, 5
- water rate, overpayment by mistake, when recoverable, 29

MONEY AND MONEY-LENDING,

- abroad, contract for loan, when Money-lenders Acts do not apply to, 53
 - rate of interest allowed where debt payable at place, 43
- affidavit, soliciting infants to make, in respect of loan, offence, 58
- agreement, payment of interest by, 39
- apportionment, interest, of, 43
- assignee, notice of defect in security to, what will not amount to, 52
 - securities taken by money-lenders, of, provision in favour of, 52
- "bank," prohibition of use of term by money-lenders, 47
- banking business, liability of money-lender implied by carrying on a, 57
- bankruptcy proceedings, power of the court to reopen money-lending transactions in, 55
- borrowers, nature of relief granted to, 56
 - relief granted to, where lender not a money-lender, 56, 57
 - rights of, where loan transaction illegal and void, 51, 52
 - statutory relief provided for, 53—55
- circulars, inviting infants to borrow by means of, 57, 58
 - persons deemed to send, 58

INDEX.

MONEY AND MONEY-LENDING—continued.

- compound interest, when allowed, 43
- custom, payment of interest by, 39
- damages, payment of interest by way of, 39, 40
- debt, discharge of interest by discharge of principal, 41
 - interest on, when allowed, 38
 - time from which interest may be allowed, 38
- declarations, soliciting infants to make, in respect of loans, offence, 58
- delay, creditor's, effect on right to interest, 42
- equity, when interest may be payable by the rules of, 40
- expectant heirs, equitable relief given to, 53
- fees, payable by money-lenders on registration, 47
- fraud, payment of interest on money retained by, 40
 - right of parties where loan induced by, 51
- harsh and unconscionable, when bargain may be held to be, 54
- I.O.U., effect of production of, 50
- illegal consideration, no right of recovery where money lent on, 51
- infant, invalidity of loan to, 53
 - sending circulars inviting borrowing by, offence of, 57, 58
 - soliciting, to make affidavit or declaration in respect of loan, offence, 58
- interest, apportionment of, 43
 - common law rule as to payment, 37.
 - compound, when allowed, 43
 - debt or sum certain, on a, when allowed, 38
 - definition of, 37
 - discharge by discharge of principal debt, 41
 - effect of creditor's delay on right to, 42
 - payment by agreement, 39
 - rules of equity, 40
 - way of damages, 39
 - in cases of particular relationship between debtor and creditor, 40, 41
 - where money retained by fraud, 40
 - rate of, amount usually allowed, 42
 - power of the court where excessive, 42
 - where debt payable at a place abroad, 43
 - debtor in default, 43
 - recovery of, under contract, as damages, 41
 - special right to, where conferred by statute, 38, 39
 - statutory right to, 37
 - time from which, may be allowed, 38
- local authorities, application of loans made to, 60
 - appointment and powers of Public Works Loans Commissioners, 58
 - borrowing powers of, 58
 - discharge of loans by, 63
 - duty of Commissioners in making loans to, 60
 - persons advancing not bound to inquire into the application of loan by, 63
 - power of Commissioners on default of payment by, 60
 - to lend money to, 59
 - powers of, to raise money by means of issue of stock, 60
 - under the Local Loans Act, 1875...61
 - priority of loans made to, 63
 - provision as to securities taken by Commissioners in respect of loans to, 60
 - rate of interest payable by, 60
 - remedies on default in payment by, 61
 - remedy of persons advancing money to, 63
 - securities for which register must be kept by, 63
 - which may be given by, 62
 - sources from which money provided for loans to, 59
- Local Government Board, borrowing powers obtained by local authorities from, 61, 62
- mercantile transactions, payment of interest in, 39
- "money," application of term, 36
- money, as a defining term, 37
 - essential characteristics of, 36

INDEX.

MONEY AND MONEY-LENDING—continued.

- money-lender, assignee of security taken by, rights of, 52
 - definition of, 44
 - liabilities on carrying on business otherwise than as provided by statute, 49
 - liability on failure to register, 47
 - to removal from register, 46
 - loan made in breach of statute by, effect of, 49
 - offences by, 57, 58
 - particulars to be given by, on registration, 46
 - prohibition of use of term "bank" by, 47
 - right to renewal of registration, 46
 - statutory relief to persons having dealings with, 53, 54
 - restrictions as to carrying on the business of, 48, 49
 - unregistered, effect of loan by, 51
 - remedy open to, 52
 - rights of borrower from an, 51, 52
- money-lending, what constitutes the business of, 44
- money lent, illegal consideration, on, no right of recovery as to, 51
 - right of persons other than "money-lenders" to bring action for, 50
 - void security, on, right of lenders, 51
 - when Money-lenders Acts do not apply to transactions in respect of, 53
- mortgage, recovery of money lent on, with or without a covenant, 50
- National Debt Commissioners, provision of money by, for loans to local authorities, 59
- notice of defect in security taken by assignee, what will not amount to, 52
- offences, money-lender's liability in respect of, 57, 58
- penalties, liability of money-lender to, in respect of carrying on business, 49
- penalty, failure by money-lender to register, on, 47
 - offence of sending money-lending circulars to infants, 58
- place of business, carrying on business at registered, what is, 48
- Public Works Loans Commissioners, see local authorities
- rate of interest, amount usually allowed, 42
 - debt payable at a place abroad, 43
 - power of the court where excessive, 42
 - where debtor in default, 43
- register, money-lenders, of, keeping and inspection of, 47
 - removal of money-lender from, power of the Commissioners of Inland Revenue as to, 46
- registration, fees payable by money-lenders on, 47
 - liability of money-lender on failing to obtain, 47
 - money-lenders, of, place of, 46
 - particulars to be supplied by money-lender on, 46
 - persons and bodies exempt from, 45, 46
 - when money-lender may obtain renewal of, 46
 - person lending money is subject to, 44
- relief, court by which may be granted, 55
 - extent granted where lender not a money-lender, 56, 57
 - nature of, granted by the court in money-lending transactions, 56
- security, right of persons lending on void, 51
- Statutes of Limitation, effect on interest where recovery of principal barred, 41
- unconscionable bargains, circumstances which the court will look at in deciding what are, 54
 - relief granted in respect of, 53
- unregistered money-lender, effect of loan by, 51
- "usual trade name," meaning of, 46
- void security, right of persons lending money on, 51

MORTGAGE,

- accord and satisfaction, redemption of mortgage by, 308
- account, amount charged to mortgagee in possession where property let or unlet, 200, 201
 - application of moneys on taking, principle of, 216
 - calculation of interest on taking, 225, 226
 - capacity in which mortgagee in possession liable to, 309

INDEX.

MORTGAGE—continued.

- account, claim for, in foreclosure action, 284
- compound interest, when may be charged in taking, 228
- current, appropriation of payments in, 225
 - security may be given for, 224, 225
- leave to surcharge and falsify, when may be given, 216, 217
- liability of mortgagee to, 198—200
- limitation of suit against mortgagee for, 215
- nature of, as against mortgagee, 219
 - between mortgagor and mortgagee, 215
- order for, form of, 199
 - in foreclosure action, 287
 - where mortgagee is in possession, 288
- persons bound by the, 218
 - not bound by, 218, 219
- principal and interest, of, special matters in, 223
- principle upon which mortgagee's liability to, is founded, 198
- proof of amount received in taking, 225
 - principal debt on taking, 223, 224
- reopening of, nature of claim to, 218
 - power of the court as to, 216, 217
- rests, when and when not taken with, 220, 221
- rule in Clayton's Case as affecting the taking of, 225
- setting off and correcting errors in, 218
- subsequent, when to be taken, 223
- treatment of surplus funds in the, 219, 220
- when mortgagee may have to pay costs in action for, 237
 - to be taken in court, 216
- accretions, right of mortgagee to, 120
- acquiescence, effect on application to reopen a foreclosure absolute, 300
- action, covenant for payment, on, who may bring, 267, 268
 - for redemption, commencement by writ, when justifiable, 152
 - copyholds, of, necessary parties to, 150
 - costs of, by whom paid, 156
 - dismissal of, effect of, 155
 - form of order in, 153, 154
 - institution of proceedings in, 151, 152
 - parties to, 149—151
 - on death of mortgagee, 150
 - puisne incumbrancer, action by, 151
 - when mortgage on two properties, 151
 - property subject to sub-mortgage, 150
 - party, absent, protection of, 149, 150
 - pleadings in, 152
 - special directions in, when added, 154
 - when order for sale will be made in, 155, 156
- actual notice, what will amount to, 341
- administration proceedings, institution by mortgagee, effect of, 234, 235
 - rights of mortgagee in, 301
 - when mortgagee may bring, 271
- administrator, convict's property, of, mortgaging powers of, 94
 - mortgagee, of, when mortgaged property devolves on, 185
 - mortgaging powers of an, 106
 - when sufficiently representing the estate in a foreclosure action, 280
- admittance, mortgagee to copyholds, of, power to order, 125
- advance, evidence of amount on transfer of mortgage, what amounts to, 178
 - past or present, security may be given for, 224, 225
 - proof of amount of secured, 225
- adverse title, setting up, by mortgagee, effect of, 222
- adwoson, mortgage of an, effect of, 128, 129
 - rights of mortgagee of an, 129
- after-acquired property, bankrupt, of, when may be mortgaged, 93
- agreement, charge real or personal estate, to, effect of, 83, 84
 - compound interest, to pay, when implied, 228
- execute a mortgage, to, effect of, 75
 - to pay compound interest, when necessary, 227, 228
- agricultural land, liability of mortgagee in possession of, 204

INDEX.

MORTGAGE—continued.

- allotment, common lands, of, power of limited owners to raise expenses by mortgage, 104
- annuity deed, mortgage by way of, form of grant, 88
 - how viewed by the court, 88
 - registration of, provision for, 89
 - registration as a charge upon land, effect of, 346
- appeal, mortgagor's right to, as to costs, 238
- appearance, evidence in foreclosure action in default of, 287
- apportionment, of rent, where separate mortgaged properties are included in same lease, 202
- arrears of rent, transfer of mortgage as affecting, 177
 - when mortgagee entitled to, 195, 196
- assignee pendente lite, right of, to become party to action for redemption, 140
- assignment, benefit of mortgagee's powers, of, 171
 - debt, of, notice as affecting rights of parties, 77, 78
 - equitable, what is an, 77
 - mortgage of leaseholds by way of, 126, 127
- attornment clause, relationship effected by, 159, 160
 - when inserted, 123
- bank mortgage, notice of insolvency as affecting, 251
- bankrupt, extent of mortgaging powers of, 93
 - mortgage by, not made effectual by registration, 93
 - of equitable chose in action by, when effective, 93, 94
 - rights as to after-acquired personal property, 93, 94
- bankruptcy, mortgaging powers of limited owner not affected by, 101
 - mortgagor's, application of proceeds of security after, 301
 - as not affecting foreclosure proceedings, 277, 278
 - joining of trustee necessary in foreclosure proceedings, 279
 - security not affected by, 300
- receiving order in, as affecting mortgagee of debtor, 346
- trustee in, extent of power of, to redeem, 142
 - power to make valid mortgage, 94
- beneficial owner, covenants implied by term, 123, 126, 127
- beneficiaries' liability on the covenant for payment, 270, 271
- bill of sale, debenture not subject to provisions relating to, 130
 - mortgage of chattels by, 129, 130
 - not a mortgage by deed, 97
 - transfer of registered, 176
- bond, former use of, as collateral security, 90, 91
- bonus, contract for payment by mortgagor, when valid, 144, 145
 - mortgagee may stipulate for, 224
- building societies, borrowing and mortgaging powers vested in, 111, 112
 - power of sale of trustees of, not exercisable by transferees, 250
 - purchase by officers on sale by, invalidity of, 257
 - transfer of mortgages from, how effected, 173
- business, powers and liability of mortgagee where security includes a, 197
- charge, acquisition by purchaser of equity of redemption, when effecting merger, 324
 - agreement to, when effectual, 83
 - form of instrument of registered, 85
 - mortgagee's rights where mortgage by way of, 169
 - registered land, of, effect of deposit of certificate of, 83
 - see* registered charge
- charities, mortgaging powers of trustees of, 111
- chattels, implied power of sale in mortgage of, 246
- choses in action, equitable, when bankrupt may validly mortgage, 93, 94
 - implied power of sale in mortgage of, 246, 247
 - mortgage of, effect of, 132
 - priority between mortgagees of, 339
- Clayton's Case*, rule in, as affecting the taking of accounts, 225
- clog, equity of redemption, on, invalidity of, 71, 142, 143
 - transactions not amounting to, 144
- collateral benefits, none can be imposed in favour of the mortgagee, 143, 144
 - security, former use of bond as, 90, 91
 - how transferred, 172
 - surety to mortgage as, 89

INDEX.

MORTGAGE—continued.

- collateral security, warrant of attorney as, 90
 - when mortgagee cannot enforce, 271
- commission, mortgagee may stipulate for, 224
 - repayments or interest in arrear, on, when allowed, 228, 229
- common in gross, rights of, 129
- co-mortgagees, right to institute foreclosure proceedings jointly, 278
- company, borrowing powers of, 110
 - right to employ directors where mortgagee a, 242
- compensation, mortgagee's right to money paid for, 120
- compound interest, agreement necessary to charge of, 627, 228
 - when charged to mortgagee, 221
 - payment may be implied, 228
- conditional surrender, mortgage of copyholds, on, practice as to, 125
 - powers when mortgagor of copyholds refuses to make a, 125
- conditions of sale on sale by mortgagee, 255
- consolidation, against whom right exercised, 211
 - extent of right of assignee of mortgagee as to, 214
 - invalidity of, provisions to provide for, 75, 76
 - principle of, 208
 - right affected by intervening incumbrancer's right to marshal, 214
 - affecting successors to the equity of redemption, 212
 - of mortgagee on selling part of his securities, 211
 - where existing, 209, 210
 - to, not depending upon the legal estate, 210
 - where securities are of different natures, 210
 - securities must be in existence at time of, 210, 211
 - severance of equity of redemption as affecting right to, 212, 213
 - statutory limitation of mortgagee's right as to, 209
 - when right arises, 211
 - where securities originally in favour of different mortgagees, 210
 - who may exercise the right, 214
- constructive notice, what amounts to, 342
- contributory mortgage, no power in trustees to invest in, 108
- conversion, mortgaged goods, of, right of mortgagee as to, 188
- conveyance, absolute, when treated as a mortgage, 72
 - estate and interest of mortgagee where mortgage is by, 168, 169
- convict, inability of, to lend or borrow on mortgage, 94
- co-owners, mortgaging powers of, 91
 - right to title-deeds as against mortgagee, 205
- copyholds, admittance of mortgagor to, power to order, 125
 - covenants for title to, how expressed, 126
 - devolution of, on death of mortgagee, 184, 185
 - duty chargeable on mortgage of, 137
 - enfranchisement of, priority of mortgage effected for, 104
 - mortgage by covenant to surrender, 124
 - tenant in tail of, form of, 99
 - for purposes of enfranchisement, rights of tenant, 103, 104
 - of entailed, law applicable to, 99
 - form of, 124
 - parties to action for redemption of, necessary parties to, 150
 - reconveyance of, how taken, 312, 313
 - satisfaction of mortgage of, procedure, 126
 - title of mortgagee of, extent of, 126
 - transfer of mortgage of, how effected, 172, 173
 - transferee of mortgage of, rights on obtaining surrender, 172
 - vesting order where mortgagor refuses to make conditional surrender of, 125
 - when personal representative can mortgage, 106
- corporations, borrowing powers of statutory, 110
- costs, abortive negotiations for mortgage transactions, of, by whom payable, 124
 - action for redemption, in, by whom paid, 156
 - allowed to mortgagee in obtaining possession, 239
 - appeal as to, right of mortgagor, 238

INDEX.

MORTGAGE—continued.

- costs, defending title, of, when allowed, 238
- deprivation of mortgagee, of, on account of conduct, 237
- foreclosure action, of, right to add to mortgage debt, 295
 - rules as to defendant's, 295, 296
- getting deeds out of court, of, by whom borne, 313
- inquiry as to amount due, when directed, 237, 238
- interest on mortgagee's, when allowed, 233
- mortgage, of, liability of parties as to, 123, 124
- mortgagee's right to, when forfeited, 231
 - when in the discretion of the court, 232
- parties claiming under mortgagee, of, how payable, 233
- power of second incumbrancers as to, 232, 233
 - to mortgage settled land for purpose of payment of, 99, 100
- priority of mortgagee's, extent of, 234
- reconveyance, of, by whom borne, 317, 318
- recovering mortgage debt, of, when allowed, 239
- right of equitable mortgagee by deposit to, 234
- rule as to allowance of, in litigation between parties, 237, 238
- sale, of, right of mortgagee to recover, 243
- solicitor-mortgagee, of, rights as to, 124, 145
- taxation of, as between parties, 232
- transfer of mortgage, of, 174
 - right of mortgagee to recover, 243
- when may be added to the security, 239—244
 - mortgagee ordered to pay or is deprived of, 235—237
 - mortgagor or subsequent incumbrancer must personally pay, 233
- counterpart, lease by mortgagor, of, provision for delivery to mortgagee, 164
- covenant for payment, action by trustee-mortgagees on, 268
 - on, who may bring, 267, 268
 - claim in foreclosure action, effect of, 284
 - does not run with the land, 270
 - effect of adopting concurrent remedies with action on, 269, 270
 - extent of claim in action on, 268
 - interest on, as distinguished from that on security, 227
 - liability of mortgagor and surety on, 270
 - personal representatives and beneficiaries on the, 270, 271
 - mortgage debt by instalments, of, effect of, 114
 - of, effect of, 70
 - nature and place of, 113, 114
 - upon demand, nature of, 114
 - when implied, 113
 - procedure in action on, when principal payable on demand, 269
 - right of action on, when arising, 268
 - barred, 271
 - transfer of mortgage, in, how effected, 171
 - separate deed of, stamp duty payable on, 138
 - to surrender by mortgage of copyholds, 124, 125
- covenants for title, how now implied, 123
 - implied by term "beneficial owner," 123, 126, 127
 - policies of insurance, to, must be express, 130
 - lessee's, when enforceable by mortgagor and mortgagee, 162
 - right of mortgagee to sue for prior breaches by tenant of mortgagor, 161
- crops, equitable mortgagee's right to growing, 198
 - when mortgagee entitled to, 197, 198
- Crown debt, registration of, effect of, 346
- current account, appropriation of payments in, 225
- damages, allowance of interest by way of, 116, 226
 - lessee's remedy in, where mortgagor's lease is ultra vires, 165
- date for payment, object of inserting in mortgage, 114
- death, devolution of the equity of redemption on, 146
- debenture, what is included in "property" in a, 262

INDEX.

MORTGAGE—continued.

- debts, deceased persons, of, mortgage of real property for payment of,
 - power of the court to order, 106
 - liability of equity of redemption to execution for, 146
- declaration of title, when mortgagee must claim, in action for foreclosure or sale, 284, 285
- deed, appointment of receiver by, 264
 - necessary in case of legal mortgage, 118
 - to carry power of sale under the Act of 1881...248
- of arrangement, effect of registration of, 346
- covenant, separate, stamp duty payable on, 138
- deeds, title, see title deeds
- default of payment, right of entry arising on, 191
- defective title, rights of mortgagee in respect of, 186
- delay, effect on application to reopen foreclosure absolute, 300
- delivery of deeds, effect of notice of subsequent incumbrances on right to, 310
 - right to, 308
 - tender as affecting right to, 310
- deposit of deeds, burden of proof where made by mistake, 81
 - charge by, where part of title deeds deposited, 79, 80
 - created by, 79
 - dismissal of action for redemption of equitable mortgage by,
 - effect of, 155
 - effect when made for special purpose, 81
 - form in which made, 78, 79
 - extent of property charged by, 82
 - security created by, 81
 - how far mortgagee must examine the subject of charge by, 80
 - loss of deeds no bar to recovery of charge created by, 82
 - memorandum in absence of, effect of, 79
 - mortgage by, effect of, 78
 - parting with documents after, effect of, 82
 - payment of interest implied by, 115
 - presumption arising from, 80
 - solicitor with client, by, what may be, 42
 - sub-mortgage by legal mortgagee, by, 82
 - tenant in tail, by, effect of, 99
 - when charge may not be created by, 80
 - with whom to be made, 81, 82
- devisees, right of redemption in, 140, 141
- devolution, mortgage security on death of mortgagee, of, 183—185
- disability, persons under, who may redeem, 141
- discharge of mortgage, 304—326
- discovery, extent of mortgagor's right to, 153
- disentail, agreement to, on deposit of title deeds, effect of, 99
 - extent of, on mortgage by tenant in tail, 98
- disentailing deed, agreement to execute, enforcement of, 99
- dissolution of partnership, power of partners to mortgage after, 95
- distringas*, notice in lieu of, protection afforded by, 341
- easements, when mortgagee cannot grant, 256, 257
- ecclesiastical corporations, mortgaging powers of, 111
- ejectment, mortgagor by mortgagee, of, 158, 165, 189, 191, 193
- elegit*, effect of taking mortgaged lands under, 326
- enfranchisement of copyholds, mortgagee, by, right to recover price, 241
 - priority of mortgage for, 104
 - right of limited owner to mortgage for, 103, 104
- entry, see right of entry
- equitable assignee, mortgage debt, of, rights of, 180
 - assignment, what is an, 77
 - charge, foreclosure under, rules applicable to, 277
 - legal mortgage as extinguishing, 326
 - nature of an, 83
 - order for sale in respect of, form of, 292
 - estate, rights of mortgagee possessed of the, 169
 - lien, order for sale in respect of, form of, 292
 - mortgage, creation by deposit of copy of court rolls, 80
 - definition of, 74
 - discharge of, how taken, 312

INDEX.

MORTGAGE—continued.

- equitable mortgage, dismissal of action for redemption of, effect where by
 - deposit of deeds, 155
 - duty payable on, 136
 - effect of Statute of Frauds on, 74, 75
 - fixtures comprised in an, 119
 - foreclosure under an, rules applicable to, 277
 - kinds of, 74, 75
 - meaning of, for purposes of the Stamp Act, 1891...184
 - no power in trustees to invest in an, 108
 - notice of intention to pay off, not necessary, 148
 - personal chattels, of, writing not essential in case of, 75
 - property, of, nature of, 76, 77
- mortgagee by deposit, right to title deeds, 205
 - right to costs, 234
 - foreclose, 272, 273
 - growing crops, 198
 - rights as between unpaid vendor and, 345
- securities, foreclosure action in respect of, 291
- equity of redemption, acquisition by mortgagee as effecting merger, 323
 - of charge by purchaser of, as effecting merger, 324
 - as an estate in land, 138
 - clog or fetter on, invalidity of, 71, 142, 143
 - when transactions not, 144
 - devolution of the, 145, 146
 - disposition of the, power of, 145, 146
 - effect of severance of, on right to consolidate, 212, 213
 - liability to execution, 146
 - loss by subsequent mortgage without notice of prior charge, 156, 157
 - of right to redeem by sale of, 156
 - nature of an, 71, 138, 139
 - persons having charge on, as necessary parties to foreclosure action, 281, 282
 - interested in, as necessary parties to foreclosure proceedings, 279
 - position of assignee of, in respect of payment of mortgage debt, 270
 - person entitled to the, 71
 - reconveyance on change of title to, 312
 - right of consolidation as affecting the successors to, 212
 - owner to mortgage, 76
 - purchaser to redeem, 142
 - sale under a power of sale as affecting the, 259
 - settled estates, in, in whom subsisting, 140
 - Statute of Limitations as affecting the, 156
 - transfer of mortgage as affecting, 172
 - when right enforceable, 147
- escheated land, power of the lord to redeem, 142
- estate tail, effect of barring, on mortgage by tenant in tail, 97
 - when cannot be barred, 97
- estoppel, mortgagor, of, who attorns to puisne mortgagee, 160
- tenant under mortgagor's lease, of, extent of, 164, 165
- evidence, foreclosure action, in, how taken, 286, 287
- execution, liability of an equity of redemption to, 146
- executors, mortgage of personal estate by, 105, 106
 - mortgagee, of, powers of, 182, 183
 - notice to pay off mortgage, when served on, 252
 - when sufficiently representing the estate in a foreclosure action, 280
- fiduciary relationship, no purchase of mortgage property where existing, 257
 - where not existing between mortgagee and purchaser, 258
- finances, repayments or interest in arrear, on, where allowed, 228, 229
- fire insurance, mortgagee's right to recover premiums paid on, 241
- first mortgagee, right to possession of property, 190
- fixtures, inclusion in mortgage in fee, 119
 - when passing on a mortgage of leaseholds, 128

INDEX.

MORTGAGE—continued.

- fixtures, when power of sale does not extend to, 256
- foreclosure absolute, acquiescence or delay as affecting application to reopen, 300
 - enlargement of time for redemption after, 298
 - order for, effect of, 294
 - form of, 293, 294
 - procedure to obtain, 293
 - when reopened, 298—300
 - when made against infants, 294
- action, claims in, 283, 284
 - costs of, right to add to mortgage debt, 295
 - rules as to defendant's, 295, 296
 - defence to, what must be pleaded, 286
 - equitable securities in respect of, 291
 - evidence in, how taken, 286, 287
 - exercise of other remedies pending, 296
 - form of proceedings, 283
 - in what court taken, 283
 - incumbrancers subsequent to second mortgagor, against, what amounts to, 290
 - order for accounts and inquiries in, 287
 - where proceedings taken against second mortgagee, 289
 - power to limit to puisne incumbrances, 289, 290
 - third and subsequent incumbrances, effect in, 289
- alienation or charge during proceedings for, effect of, 282
- bankruptcy of mortgagor as not affecting proceedings for, 277, 278
- dismissal of action for redemption as amounting to order for, 155
- enlargement of time to redeem after order for, conditions of, 297, 298
 - principle as to, 296, 297
- equitable mortgages and charges, under, 277
- institution of proceedings for, persons in whom right subsists, 278
- jurisdiction to order sale in proceedings for, 274, 275
- loss of right of action on covenant by, 271
 - to, by lapse of time, 300
- nature of right to, 272
- nisi*, form of order for, 288, 289
 - power of sale as affected by, 245
- none against the Crown, 272
- parties to proceedings for, 279, 280
- procedure where claimed by writ, 285, 286
- proceeding on covenant after, effect of, 245
- remedy of, in respect of what property available, 273
 - when applicable to registered charge, 274
 - where not applicable, 273, 274
- right of, not essential to validity of mortgage, 71
 - when arising, 71
- sale in lieu of, when ordered, 291, 292
- stamp duty on order for, 291
- terms upon which sale ordered in proceedings for, 275
- when right to arises, 272, 273, 276
 - sale may and may not be directed in proceedings for, 275
 - several properties in one mortgage, 282
 - there is no alternative remedy by sale, 274
- fraud*, creation of mortgage by, effect on prior incumbrances, 345
 - reopening of accounts on account of, 216, 217
- freeholds*, accretions to, right of mortgagee to, 120
 - extent of estate conveyed by legal mortgage of, 118, 119
 - legal mortgage of, form of, 112, 113, 117, 118
 - mortgage of, essential provisions of, 113
- freight*, mortgage of, nature and form of, 184
- friendly societies, mortgaging and borrowing powers of, 111, 112
- further advances, date from which time for stamping, runs, 137
 - duty chargeable on, 136
 - registration in Middlesex of mortgage to secure, effect of, 336

INDEX.

MORTGAGE—continued.

- further advances, registration in Yorkshire of mortgage to secure, effect of, 337, 338
 - right to tack, when arising, 332, 333
 - charges, duty chargeable on, 136
- future advances, security may be given for, 224, 225
- heir, notice to infant, requiring payment of mortgage debt, sufficiency of, 251
 - right of redemption in, 140, 141
- hire-purchase agreement, owner's rights under as against mortgagee, 119
- glebe, foreclosure action in respect of the, necessary parties to, 280
- goods, mortgagee's right to sue for conversion of, 188
- goodwill of business, when mortgagee entitled to, 120, 121
- improvements, proof required of mortgagee on claim for, 240
 - statutory registered charges in respect of, effect of, 346
- inclosure expenses, right of limited owner to mortgage for, 104
- income, mortgaged property, of, application by receiver, 266
 - recovery by receiver, 266
- incorporeal hereditaments, how mortgaged, 128
- indemnity, mortgagee's right to, for costs, charges and expenses, extent of, 231
- infant mortgagee, discharge of mortgage by, 316
 - power of the court to deal with property vested in, 92
- mortgaging powers of an, 91, 92
 - order for foreclosure absolute, when made against an, 294
- injury to property, power of mortgagor to restrain, 168
- inquiries, order for sale, on, where there are several incumbrances, 292
 - in foreclosure action for, 287
- instalments, payment of mortgage debt by, provision for, 114
- insurance moneys, mortgagee's rights in respect of, 121
 - policies, mortgage of, when valid, 130
 - ownership of, where taken out as security, 131, 132
 - priority between mortgagees of, 339, 340
 - of mortgages of, upon what depending, 131
 - power of mortgagee to effect, 122, 123
 - premiums, when mortgagee may recover, 241
 - receiver's powers as to, 266, 267
- interest,
 - absence of provision for payment of, effect of, 116
 - agreement for higher rate on failure to make punctual payment, relief granted, 116
 - allowance by way of damages, 116, 226
 - arrears of, transfer of mortgage as affecting, 177
 - cesser of, after tender, 229
 - costs of mortgagee, on, when allowed, 233
 - covenant as distinguished from that on the security, on, 227
 - for payment of, when necessary, 115
 - delay of redemption through loss of deeds by mortgagee as affecting, 208
 - expenses, on, when mortgagee entitled to, 243, 244
 - failure to pay punctually where principal not to be called in on punctual payment, 117
 - limitation of time for recovery of, 229
 - loan for a term conditional on payment of interim, 277
 - merger of, in judgment on covenant, 226
 - mortgage of settled estate, on, duty of tenant for life as to, 229, 230
 - security implies payment of, 225, 226
 - overpayments and underpayments of, rights of parties as to, 230
 - payment after default, effect of, 115
 - where mortgagee in possession, 115, 116
 - possession when in arrear, effect of mortgagee taking, 221, 222
 - proceeds of sale, on, when payable by mortgagee, 261
 - proviso for redemption conditional on payment of, effect of, 276, 277
 - reduction on punctual payment, provision for, 115
 - right of mortgagee where in arrear for two months, 251, 252
 - rights of transferee and puisne mortgagee to, 230
 - usual rate of, 116
- intestacy, devolution of mortgaged property on, 185
- investment on mortgage, power of trustees as to, 107, 108
- Ireland, taking of rests in, 221
- joint account, loan by several mortgagees is by way of, 117

INDEX.

MORTGAGE—continued.

- joint account, loan to trustees on, effect of, 110
 - lease, mortgagor and mortgagee, by, necessity and effect of, 162
 - mortgagee, effect of death of, on time for redemption, 298
 - stock companies, borrowing powers of, 110, 111
 - tenant, effect of mortgage by, 91
- judgment, as affecting the nature of mortgage security, 326
 - debt, effect of registration of, 346
- land improvement, charge for expenses of, power of limited owner as to, 105
 - tax, power of limited owner to charge lands for redemption of, 105
 - redemption, mortgagee's right to recover price of, 241
- Land Transfer Acts, registration of charge under, effect of, 338
- lease, failure of mortgagor to join mortgagee in, effect of, 162, 163
 - mortgagor and mortgagee jointly, by, when necessary, 162
 - by, effect of mortgage on existing, 160, 161
 - on mortgagee's rights, 164
 - estoppel of tenant under, 165
 - not under statutory powers, effect of, 164, 165
 - provision for delivery of counterpart to mortgagee, 164
 - statutory powers, 161, 162
 - remedy of lessee where ultra vires, 165
 - when express power necessary, 163
 - or mortgagee, by, under statutory powers, 163, 164
 - power of mortgagee in possession to grant, 198
 - surrender of, essentials to validity of, 167
 - extent of statutory powers of, 167, 168
 - power of mortgagee to accept, 167
 - to mortgagor, statutory power as to, 166, 167
- leaseholds, covenants for title to, how expressed, 127
 - discharge of mortgage by reassignment of, 313
 - mortgage of, how effected, 126, 127
 - when fixtures pass on a mortgage of, 128
- leasing powers, provisions usually made as to, 123
- legal estate, acquisition after mortgage, right of mortgagee, 328
 - averment by mortgagor as to possession of, necessity for, 118
 - mortgagor's right to prefer subsequent mortgagee who calls for the, 330
 - position of mortgagee obtaining, 327
 - trustee with the, 329, 330
 - with best right to call for the, 327
 - protection to mortgagee obtaining, extent of, 329
 - registration of charge under Land Transfer Acts on possession of, effect of, 338, 339
 - mortgage in Middlesex as affecting the, 335, 336
 - right of mortgagee having statutory power of sale to convey the, 248, 249
 - satisfied mortgagee's limited interest in the, 331, 332
 - title deeds, mortgagee's right to, 204
 - vested in mortgagee, effect of, 169
- mortgage, costs of obtaining, by agreement on deposit of deeds, 239
 - deed necessary for, 118
 - definition of, 73, 74
 - dismissal of action for redemption of, effect of, 155
 - extent of estate conveyed by, 118
 - extinguishment of equitable charge by taking, 326
 - fixtures comprised in, 119
 - form of conveyance of freeholds by way of, 117, 118
 - freeholds, of, form of, 112, 113
 - provisions to be inserted in, 75, 76
 - stamps chargeable on, 184—186
- mortgagee, conduct as to title deeds, effect of, 343, 344
 - duty to obtain title deeds, 343
- legatee, mortgage, of, rights of, 183
 - right of redemption in, 140
- licensed premises, mortgagee's rights in respect of, 120, 121
- lien, distinguished from mortgage, 73
- life estates, mortgages of, provisions relating to, 121
 - insurance, mortgagee's right to allowances for premiums paid, 241
- limitation of time, recovery of interest for, 229

INDEX.

MORTGAGE—continued.

- limited owners, copyholds, of, rights as to mortgage for enfranchisement, 103, 104
 - formalities precedent to mortgage by, 101
 - mortgage by, effect of, 102
 - for inclosure expenses, rights of, 104
 - of settled land by, when may be made, 99, 100
 - necessity for joining, where consent to conveyance necessary, 103
 - power to charge lands for expenses of tithe redemption, 104
 - shift the incumbrance, 100
 - redemption of land tax by, power to charge land on, 105
 - right to mortgage not assignable by, 101
 - capable of restriction, 101
 - under express powers, 102
 - rights under express power to lease, 103
 - who are, 101
- lis pendens*, when claim against mortgagor should be registered as a, 346
- litigation, costs of, in defending title, when allowed, 238
 - rule as to allowance, as between parties to, 237
- local authorities, borrowing powers of, 112
- lunatic, discharge of mortgage to, practice as to, 315, 316
 - mortgage of property of, power of the court as to, 92
 - principles relating to mortgages by, 92
 - reconveyance where money paid out of funds of, 310
- maintenance, mortgaged property, of, allowance of expenses of, 240
- management, mortgaged property, of, mortgagee's right to recover expense of, 242
- manor, mortgage of, what it includes, 128
- marketable securities, stamp duty chargeable on, 137
- married women, mortgaging powers of, 92
- marshalling, application of principle to mortgages, 303, 304
 - effect of application of doctrine, 306, 307
 - in whose favour applied to mortgages, 304, 305
 - manner in which applied to mortgages, 306
 - persons against whom doctrine applies, 305
 - when surety entitled to benefit of, 304
- memorandum of charge without deposit, effect of, 79
- merger, acquisition of charge by purchaser of equity of redemption as effecting, 324
 - essentials to, 319
 - express declaration against, effect of, 321
 - how doctrine applied, 319
 - interest in judgment on covenant, of, 226
 - lower in higher security, of, rule as to, 325, 326
 - nature of principle, 318, 319
 - none where in opposition to the terms of contract, 326
 - operation of presumed intention as to, 323
 - presumption raised by tenancy for life against, effect of, 321
 - where not beneficial to owner, 322, 323
 - purchase of equity of redemption by mortgagee as effecting, 323
 - rebuttal of presumption in favour of or against, 321
 - where charge acquired by owner of estate in remainder, 320
 - united with fee simple or estate tail in possession, 319, 320
 - limited owner acquires charge or charge is not absolute, 320, 321
- mesne profits, action by mortgagee to recover, nature of, 195
- Middlesex, discharge of registered charge or mortgage in, 314
 - registration in, effect of, 334, 335
 - provisions as to, 86, 87
 - of mortgage to secure further advances in, effect of, 330
- minerals, sale of mortgaged property, with or without, 256
- mistake, deposit of deeds made by, burden of proof as owner, 81
- month, meaning of, 226
- mortgage, agreement to execute, effect of, 75
 - avoidance of, 346
 - by way of annuity deed, 88, 89
 - suretyship, 89

INDEX.

MORTGAGE—continued.

- mortgage, by way of trust for sale, effect of, 72
- copyhold, procedure on satisfaction of, 126
- date of payment in, object of, 114
- debt, assignment by way of security, 180, 181
 - costs of recovering, when allowed, 239
 - covenant for payment of, nature and place of, 113, 114
 - right of person paying off, 180
- definition of, 70
- discharge by payment, 307, 308
- elements of a, 70
- equitable, definition of, 74, 75
- form not necessary to constitute a, 70
- freeholds, of, essential provisions of, 113
 - form of, 112, 113
- leaseholds, of, how effected, 126, 127
- legal, definition of, 73, 74
- lien distinguished from, 73
- meaning of, under the Stamp Act, 1891...184
- pledge or pawn, distinguished from, 73
- power of absolute owner as to, 91
- second and third, nature and rights as to, 76
- security, assignment of debt separately from, effect of, 171
 - devolution on death of mortgagee, 182
 - nature of property of, 182
 - when temporarily unredeemable, 145
- tenancy created by a, effect of, 194
- transfer of, see transfer of mortgage.
- Welsh, see Welsh mortgage
- what may be the subject of, 73
- mortgagee, action on covenant by, 267, 268
 - as trustee, 268
- adoption of concurrent remedies by, effect of, 269, 270
- adverse title set up by, effect of, 222
- allowances to, for maintenance and repairs, 240
- amount debited to, on taking accounts, 215, 216
- application of proceeds by, on mortgagor's bankruptcy, 301
- assignee of, extent of right as to consolidation, 214
- bonus or commission may be stipulated for by, 224
- compensation money, when to be paid to, 120
- compound interest, when charged to, 221
- costs, charges and expenses of, right to indemnity for, 231
 - of, extent of priority of, 234
 - forfeiture of indemnity for, what will amount to, 231
 - parties claiming under the, how payable, 233
 - when in the discretion of the court, 232
- when allowed interest on, 233
 - ordered to pay or is deprived of, 235—237
- demand of payment by, effect of, 148
- devolution of copyholds on death of, 184, 185
- discharge of mortgage on death of, 316
- duty to account to successive incumbrancers, 255, 256
- entry on part of premises by, effect of, 193
- first, right to possession of property, 189
- forcible entry by, rights on, 193
- foreclosure and sale by, effect of, 271
 - proceedings, right to institute, 278
- goods, of, right to damages on suing in trover, 188, 189
- in possession, accounts against, nature of, 219
 - when not taken with rests, 221
 - with rests, when taken, 220
- agricultural land, of, liability, 204
- arrears of interest at time of entry by, effect of, 221, 222
 - effect on payment of interest, 115, 116
 - execution of repairs by, degree of care necessary, 202
 - extent of liability for waste, 203
 - liability to account, extent of, 200
 - foundation of, 198, 199

INDEX.

MORTGAGE—continued.

- mortgagee in possession, liability to subsequent incumbrancer, 201, 202
 - non-liability for rent when premises incapable of occupation, 201
 - power to cut and sell timber, 203
 - remedies of mortgagor for wrongful waste by, 204
 - rent charged to when in actual occupation, 201
 - surplus funds in hands of, how treated, 219, 220
 - when time should be given before entry by, 191
- institution of proceedings by, effect of, 234, 235
- insurance by, powers as to, 122, 123
- joint, death of, effect on time for redemption, 298
- just allowances to in action for redemption, when ordered, 154
- lease by mortgagor under statutory powers as affecting, 164
- liability for loss of title deeds, 207, 208
 - to produce title deeds, 206, 207
- limited interest, of, liability to produce title deeds, 207
- nature of estate and interest of, under a conveyance, 168, 169
- not entitled to notice in case of an equitable mortgage, 148
- position of, on exercising power of sale, 253, 254
 - obtaining the legal estate, 327
 - satisfied, as to legal estate, 331, 332
 - with better right to call for the legal estate, 327
- power of sale of, 122
 - when exercisable, 253
 - restrained, 253
 - where mortgage made between August, 1860, and January, 1882...247, 248
- to accept surrender of lease, 167
- powers and liability of, where security includes a business, 197
- protection afforded by legal estate, extent of, 329
- purchase of equity of redemption by, as effecting merger, 323
- purchaser from, protection of, 258, 259
 - who may be, 257
- recognition of mortgagor's tenant by, effect of, 165
- redemption of land tax by, rights as to recovery of price, 241
- registered charge, of, right to possession of charged lands, 190
- remedies of, right to pursue concurrently, 244, 245
- rent from tenancies binding on, right to, 195
 - not binding on, to whom payable, 195
- received by, application of, 196, 197
- restraint of waste by, rights as to, 160
- right to acquire an equitable estate, 169
 - the legal estate after mortgage, 328
- consolidate, extent of, 209, 210
 - principle of, 208, 209
 - statutory limitation of, 209
 - when arising, 211
- custody of title deeds, 204
- deeds on obtaining a bad title, extent of, 206
- employ agent to effect a sale, 255
- expenditure incurred in making profits, 241
- goodwill of business, in what cases, 120, 121
- growing crops, 197, 198
- mesne profits, extent of, 195, 196
- prevent deterioration of property, 189
- protect the security, 186
- restrain mortgagor for prejudicing the security, 186, 187
- sue for prior breach of covenant by tenant of mortgagor, 161
- trespass, 188
- transfer mortgage, 169, 170
- rights as to dealing with mortgage, 180, 181
 - insurance moneys, 121
 - recovery and maintenance of security, 187, 188
 - value of security, 186
- where mortgage by way of charge, 169
 - premises in possession of stranger, 168
 - vested with the legal estate, 169

INDEX.

MORTGAGE—continued.

- mortgagee, satisfaction of puisne mortgagees on sale by, 260
 - second, right to possession, 192
 - stay of proceedings by, payment of mortgage debt as effecting, 310, 311
 - surrender of lease to, extent of statutory powers as to, 167, 168
 - term, of, no right to custody of deeds, 204, 205
 - title of, rights as to, 186
 - tolls, of, right to restrain reduction, 187
 - trustee, position of, 329, 330
 - when an express or constructive trustee, 260, 261
 - entitled to fixtures, 119, 120
 - tenancy not binding on, 192
- mortgagees, nature of holding of several, 117
- mortgagor, appointment of a receiver as affecting, 263, 264
 - as necessary party to foreclosure proceedings, 279
 - conduct of sale, when given to, 276
 - date upon which right of redemption accrues to, 147
 - death of, as affecting foreclosure proceedings, 279, 280
 - right to tack debts, 333
 - statutory appointment of a receiver, 265
 - failure to redeem in action for redemption by, effect of, 155
 - lease by, when express power necessary, 163
 - leasing powers of, 161, 162
 - liability of mortgagee to, 160
 - management of property by, extent of right, 158
 - no restriction on, after payment of amount due under the mortgage, 143, 144
 - notice of payment off by, effect of non-compliance, 147, 148
 - persons included in term, 252
 - position as tenant, 158, 159
 - power to accept surrender of lease, 166, 167
 - right of redemption in persons claiming through the, 139, 140
 - of, extent of, 139
 - to credit for payments made to mortgagee as against transferee, 179
 - possession, extent of, 157
 - rent, extent of, 158, 161
 - restrain injury to property, 168
 - ship, of a, powers of, 133, 134
 - surrender of lease to, statutory powers as to, 167, 168
 - terms upon which he may redeem, 145
 - transfer can be called for by, 170
 - transfer of mortgage when cannot be called for by, 170
- necessaries, infant's powers of mortgaging to raise money for, 91, 92
- new tenancy, recognition of tenant by mortgagee amounting to a, 166
- notice as affecting priority of registered mortgages in Middlesex, 356
 - assignment of debt, of, as affecting rights of parties, 77, 78
 - claim by puisne mortgagees to surplus proceeds of sale, of, when sufficient, 260
 - constructive, what amounts to, 342
 - defence of purchase for value without, essentials to valid, 328
 - effect on right to priority, 341
 - in lieu of distringas, effect of protection afforded by, 341
 - limited owner, of intention to mortgage by, necessity for, 101
 - mortgagee to tenants to pay rents to him, by, effect of, 194
 - payment off by mortgagor, of, effect of non-compliance with, 147, 148
 - priority of mortgages of policies of insurance depends upon, 131
 - requiring payment of mortgage debt, form of, 251—253
 - sufficient address for service of, 251, 252
 - transfer of mortgage, of, effect of, 179
- option, repurchase after sale, to, nature of, 72, 73
- order, action for redemption, in, form of, 153, 154
 - foreclosure absolute, for, effect of, 294
 - form of, 293, 294
 - how made against infants, 294
 - procedure to obtain, 293
 - special allowances in, 288

INDEX.

MORTGAGE—continued.

- order, foreclosure absolute, for, where proceedings taken against second mortgagee, 289
 - nisi*, foreclosure action, in, form of, 288, 289
 - stamp duty on foreclosure, 291
- originating summons, action for redemption commenced by, 151, 152
 - service out of the jurisdiction, 151
- partition action, appointment of receiver on behalf of mortgagee of share in, 262
- partnership, change in membership of, mortgage not affected by, 96
 - implied power of members to borrow, extent of, 94, 95
 - inability of one partner to mortgage freight to be earned, 95
 - mortgage by deed of property of, essentials to validity, 95, 96
 - of property of, by one partner, effect of, 95
 - nature of a mortgage of a share in a, 96
 - power of partner to lend money on mortgage, 97
 - rights of mortgagee of share in, 96, 97
- pawn, distinguishment of mortgage from, 73
- payment off, mortgage debt, of, effect of, 310
 - on position of mortgagee, 317
- perpetual loan, how to be expressed, 114
- personal chattels, equitable mortgage of, writing not essential in case of, 75
 - mortgage of, nature of, 129, 130
 - estate, devolution of mortgage security on, 182, 183
 - property, nature of equitable mortgage of, 76, 77
 - representatives, liability on the covenant for payment, 270, 271
 - mortgage of copyholds by, powers, 106
 - personal estate by, 105, 106
 - real estate by, powers, 106
 - mortgagee, of, as necessary parties to action for redemption, 150
 - position of, as to the security, 182, 183
 - power of sale of, 250
 - right to institute foreclosure proceedings, 278
 - when express power of sale not exercisable by, 250
- pleadings, action for redemption, in an, 152
- pledge, distinguishment of mortgage from, 73
- policies of insurance, covenants for title to, must be express, 130, 131
 - mortgage of, when valid, 130
 - ownership of, when taken out as security, 131, 132
 - priority between mortgagees of, 339, 340
 - of mortgages of, upon what depending, 131
 - statutory power of sale in mortgages of, 131
- possession, claim for, in action for foreclosure, 284
 - costs allowed to mortgagee in recovering, 239
 - entry by mortgagee into, when time should be given before, 191
 - first mortgagee's right to, 189
 - inquiry as to, when directed, 193
 - mortgagee, by, actual, effect of, 193, 194
 - receipt of sum equivalent to rent as not amounting to, 194
 - what amounts to, 193, 194
 - in, no vacation by, 194
 - power to grant leases, 198
 - principle upon which liability of is founded, 198, 199
 - rights of, 194—198
 - when recognised, 193
 - mortgagor's right to, extent of, 157
 - receiver, by, effect of prior, 192
 - second mortgagee's right to, 190, 192
 - stranger, by, rights of mortgagee as to, 168
- possessory title, right of redemption in, persons claiming by, 142
- power of sale, application of proceeds arising from exercise of, 259
 - devolution of statutory, 250, 251
 - employment of agents in exercising, right of mortgagee as to, 255
 - equity of redemption as affected by exercise of, 259

INDEX.

MORTGAGE—continued.

- power of sale, exercise of, where different securities are held by one mortgagee, 254
 - implied, as to copyholds, 126
 - mode of exercising, 253, 254
 - mortgage of policy of insurance, in, nature of, 131
 - order for foreclosure nisi as affecting, 245
 - paramount effect of, 246
 - position of mortgagee on exercising, 253, 254
 - power to impose restrictive covenants in exercise of, 256, 257
 - practice with regard to express, since 1881...250
 - registered mortgagee of ship, of, 249
 - owner of registered charge, of, 249
 - relief to mortgagor on exercise of, grounds for, 254
 - reservation of minerals on exercise of, 256
 - restrictions on exercise of statutory, 251
 - right to exercise, pending foreclosure proceedings, 296
 - without concurrence of subsequent mortgagees, 255, 256
 - statutory, in mortgages made between August, 1860, and January, 1882...247, 248
 - right of mortgagee as to, 122
 - since December, 1881...248
 - supplementary provisions to, 246
 - survivorship of, where money advanced on a joint account, 250
 - terms of express, when inserted, 245
 - when easements may be granted on exercise of, 256
 - exercisable by mortgagee, 253
 - implied to mortgagee of chattels and choses in action, 246, 247
 - mortgagee may be restrained from exercising, 253
 - not extending to fixtures, 256
 - who may exercise an express, 249, 250
- preservation, mortgaged property, of, mortgagee's right to recover expense of, 242
- presumption, rebuttal of, in favour of or against merger, 321
 - where merger not beneficial to owner, 322, 323
- principal, agreement not to call in, effect of proviso, 116, 117
 - and interest, matters to be set out in taking account of, 223
 - debt, proof of, on taking accounts, 223, 224
 - procedure on action for, where payable on demand, 269
- priority as between mortgagees of land, 327—339
 - personalty, 339—341
 - shares, 340
 - between mortgages of personal property requiring registration, 340
 - effect of stop order as notice of charge giving, 340, 341
 - failure to gain, if notice received, 341
 - prior incumbrances, of, not postponed to mortgage by fraud, 345
 - registered charges under the Land Transfer Acts, of, 338, 339
 - registration in Yorkshire, on, 336
 - unregistered instruments in Yorkshire, of, 337
- profits, expenditure incurred in making, right of mortgagee to, 241
- proviso for redemption, change in mortgagor's estate by virtue of, 122
 - effect where conditional on payment of interest, 276, 277
 - form and effect of, 121, 122
 - right to redeem depends upon the form of, 276
- puisne incumbrancers, action for redemption by, parties to, 151
 - appointment of receivers on behalf of, effect of, 262, 263
 - as necessary parties to foreclosure action, 281
 - failure to redeem in action for redemption by, effect of, 154
 - period of redemption fixed for, 290, 291
 - power to limit foreclosure to, 289, 290
 - right to institute foreclosure proceedings, 278
 - rights as to interest, 230
 - satisfaction of claims of, on sale by mortgagee, 260
- purchase for value without notice, essentials to sustain defence of, 328

INDEX.

MORTGAGE—continued.

- purchase-money, application of, when arising from sale, 247, 248
- purchaser, mortgagee, from, protection of, 258, 259
 - who may be, 257
- qui prior tempore potior est jure*, effect of maxim on priority of incumbrances, 334
- rates, as the subject of mortgage, 129
- real estate, power of personal representative to mortgage, 106
 - when mortgage security devolves as, 184
- reassignment of leaseholds, discharge of mortgage by, 313
- receipt, payment of mortgage debt, for, stamp duty on, 315
- receiver and manager, functions of a, 262
 - application to appoint, 261, 262
 - appointment by the court, 261, 262
 - in aid of vendor's lien, 263
 - on behalf of puisne mortgagees, effect of, 262, 263
 - out of court, 264
 - functions of a, 262
 - incumbrancer's right to appointment of, 190
 - insurance and application of income by, 266, 267
 - mortgaged property, of, nature of holding of, 147
 - mortgagor's death as affecting a statutory appointment of, 265
 - no distraint by mortgagor after appointment of, 266, 267
 - object of appointment of, 261
 - person to whom rent in hands of, belongs, 196
 - position of tenants and mortgagor on appointment of, 263, 264
 - under statutory appointment, 265
 - possession by mortgagee after appointment of, how obtained, 196
 - prior entry by, effect of, 192
 - receipt of rent by, after foreclosure order, effect of, 298, 299
 - recovery of income by, powers, 266
 - remedy of mortgagee as against a, 157
 - remuneration of, 267
 - rents in the hands of, when mortgagee entitled to, 196, 197
 - right of equitable mortgagee to appointment of, 262
 - statutory powers of appointment of, 265
 - when will be appointed, 261
- reconveyance, change in title to equity of redemption, on, 312
 - copyholds, of, how taken, 312, 313
 - costs of, by whom borne, 317, 318
 - default by mortgagee in delivery of, effect of, 237
 - equitable mortgage, of, 312
 - form of, 311
 - persons entitled to, 308
 - right of second mortgagee to, 309
 - to delivery of title deeds on, extent of, 309
 - stamp duty on, 315
- redemption, action for, protection of absent party to, 149, 150
 - application of principle of, 303, 304
 - by payment, 307, 308
 - release of security, 308
 - cases in which may be postponed, 145
 - conditions of, 147
 - enlargement of time for, after foreclosure absolute, 298
 - order nisi, 296, 297
 - equity of, nature of an, 138, 139
 - escheated land, of, power of the lord as to, 142
 - legal right to, when foreclosed, 272
 - legatees', devisees' and heirs' right to, 140, 141
 - mortgagor's right to, extent of, 139, 140
 - not allowed in action to impeach mortgage, 152, 153
 - omission of proviso for, effect of, 72
 - period of, where several incumbrancers, 290, 291
 - persons entitled to effect, 139
 - under disability having a right of, 141
 - property available for, on death of mortgagor, 302
 - where several mortgagors are liable, 302, 303
 - properties are liable, 303

INDEX.

MORTGAGE—continued.

- redemption, proviso for, change in mortgagor's estate by virtue of, 122
 - form and effect of, 121, 122
- right essential to mortgage, 71
 - of assignee pendente lite to become a party to an action for, 140
 - persons claiming a possessory title to effect, 142
 - through mortgagor to effect, 139, 140
 - to, when barred, 71
 - enforceable, 147
- settled estates, of, persons in whom right as to subsists, 140
- terms of, 145
- time allowed mortgagor in order for, 153
- who is entitled to sue for, 302
- registered charge, alteration of terms of, effect of, 85
 - discharge of, 314
 - foreclosure procedure in respect of, 285
 - form of, 85
 - in respect of improvements, effect of, 346
 - order for foreclosure absolute in respect of, 295
 - power of sale of registered owner of, 249
 - priority in respect of, 86
 - provisions implied in, 85
 - remedy of foreclosure or sale applicable to, 274
 - rights of chargee under, 85
 - transfer of, 86, 175, 176
- land, deposit of certificate of, effect of, 83
- registration, annuities, of, effect on a charge upon land, 346
 - annuity deeds, of, provision for, 89
 - charge under the Land Transfer Acts, of, effect of, 338
 - deeds of arrangement, of, effect of, 346
 - judgment or Crown debt, of, effect of, 346
 - land excepted from local, 86
 - Middlesex, in, effect of, 334, 335
 - provisions relating to, 86, 87
 - mortgage by bankrupt not rendered effectual by, 93
 - priority between mortgages of personal property requiring, 340
 - warrant of attorney, of, provision for, 90
 - Yorkshire, in, priorities of, 336
 - provisions as to, 87
- remainders, mortgage of, form of, 128
- renewable leases, how treated when renewed by either party, 127.
- rent, application where received by mortgagee, 196, 197
 - apportionment of, where separate mortgaged properties in same lease, 202
- arrears of, mortgagee no right to, 161
 - when mortgagee entitled to, 194—196
- liability of mortgagee to, when in occupation, 200, 201
- mortgagor's right to receipt of, extent of, 157
- prepayment of, effect on mortgagee's rights, 196
- receipt by mortgagee in possession after foreclosure order, effect of, 298, 299
- receiver, in hands of, when mortgagee entitled to, 196
- reservation of, where mortgagor or mortgagee leasing under statutory powers, 164
- right of mortgagor to, extent of, 161
- tenancies not binding on mortgagee, from, right as to, 195
- transfer of mortgage as affecting arrears of, 177
- rentcharge, nature and method of mortgaging, 129
- repairs, mortgagee in possession, by, degree of care necessary, 202
 - scale of expenditure required, 203
- mortgaged premises, to, provision for, 122
 - nature of allowances to mortgagee for, 240
- repayment, date of, object of provision as to, 114
 - mortgage debt by instalments, of, how provided for, 114
 - on demand, of, nature of covenant, 114
- restrictive covenant, power in mortgagee to impose on sale, 256, 257
- rests, account against mortgagee in possession, when taken with, 220
 - as against mortgagee, effect of taking, 220

INDEX.

MORTGAGE—continued.

- rests, how taken in Ireland, 221
 - method of taking, 220
 - none taken where interest in arrear when mortgagee enters, 222
 - when accounts not taken with, 221
- reversionary interests, discharge of mortgage of, 313
- reversions, mortgage of, form of, 128
- right of entry, when may be exercised without notice, 191, 192
 - time should be given before exercising, 191
- sale, application of proceeds of, where part of the property is sold, 223
 - purchase-money arising from, 247, 248
 - conditions of, on sale by mortgagee, 255
 - conduct of, in foreclosure proceedings, to whom given, 276
 - costs of, mortgagee's right to recover, 243
 - implied power of, in mortgage of chattels and choses in action, 246
 - inquiries when ordered before, 292
 - interest on proceeds of, when payable by mortgagee, 261
 - jurisdiction to order, in foreclosure proceedings, 274, 275
 - mortgagee, by, application of money from, 259
 - option to repurchase reserved on, nature of, 72, 73
 - order for, in lieu of foreclosure, when made, 291, 292
 - when made in action for redemption, 155, 156
 - paramount effect of power of, 246
 - power of attorney, under, authority necessary to, 251
 - in registered owner of registered charge, 249
 - public auction, by, effect of power of, 245
 - statutory power of, in mortgages made between August, 1860, and January, 1882...247
 - since December, 1881...248
 - supplementary provisions to power of, 246
 - terms of express power of, when inserted, 245
 - upon which ordered in foreclosure proceedings, 275, 276
 - variations as to persons ultimately entitled, 259, 260
 - when, may be directed in foreclosure proceedings, 275
 - relief granted to mortgagor in respect of, 251
 - who may exercise an express power of, 249, 250
- satisfaction, copyhold mortgage, of, procedure as to, 126
- second mortgage, nature and rights in respect of, 76
 - mortgagee, account taken by, form of, 216
 - foreclosure action by, to redeem first mortgagee, effect of, 290
 - necessity to foreclose, before proceedings taken to foreclose the mortgagor, 289
 - no right in, to notice to pay off mortgage debt, 252
 - order in foreclosure action where proceedings taken against, 289
 - right to possession, 190, 192
 - reconveyance, 309
- security, costs of completing, when allowed, 239, 240
 - kinds of, 73
 - meaning of, 135
- settled land, duty of tenant for life as to interest on mortgage of, 229, 230
 - effect of mortgage by limited owner of, 102
 - equity of redemption in, in whom subsisting, 140
 - express power of mortgaging, effect of, 102, 103
 - mortgage by limited owner of, when may be made, 99, 100
 - power of limited owner to shift an incumbrance on, 100
 - powers as to mortgaging, not capable of restriction, 104
 - representatives of, in foreclosure action, 280, 281
- shares, liability of mortgage of, 169
 - mortgage by deposit of certificate in blank, power of sale in, 246, 247
 - priority of mortgagees as to, 340
 - right of shareholder to require company to transfer its lien on, 170
- shifting incumbrances, power of limited owner as to, 100
- ship, discharge of mortgage of, 313, 314
 - interest allowed on mortgage of, 226
 - mortgage of a, statutory provisions for, 133

INDEX.

MORTGAGE—continued.

- ship, possession by mortgagee of, effect of, 181
 - power of sale of registered mortgagee of, 249
 - powers of mortgagor of, 133, 134
 - priority of mortgages of a, 133
 - property included in mortgage of, 133
 - transfer of statutory mortgage of, 176
- simple contract debt, when amount secured by mortgage is a, 70
- small holding, advance on mortgage for purchase of, power of county council as to, 112
- solicitor, deposit of deeds with client by, what may be sufficient, 82
 - purchase of mortgaged property by, 257
- solicitor-mortgagee, right to costs, 124, 145
- special directions, when made in an order for redemption, 154
- specialty creditor, remedies of mortgagee as a, 270, 271
 - debt, when amount secured by mortgage is a, 70
- specific bequest, mortgage of, effect of, 183
 - performance, agreement to execute a disentailing deed enforced by decree for, 97
 - laid not enforced by grant of, 75
- stamp duty, chargeable on legal mortgages, 184—186
 - exemptions from, 137, 138
 - foreclosure order, on, 291
 - ordinary receipt of mortgage debt, on, 315
 - reconveyance or discharge of mortgage, 315
 - transfer of mortgage, on, 174
- statement of claim, action for foreclosure, 285, 286
- Statute of Frauds, equitable mortgage as affected by, 74, 75
 - Limitations, effect on right to redeem, 71
 - equity of redemption as affected by, 156
 - redemption by persons claiming under, 142
- statutory mortgage, effect of, 118
 - stay of proceedings, effect of payment by mortgage debt to, 310, 311
 - transfer of mortgage, effect of, 175
- stock mortgage, inability of trustees to lend on, 110
- stocks and shares, discharge of mortgage of, 313
 - mortgage of, how effected, 132, 133
 - stamp duty on mortgage of, 137
- stop order, effect of as notice of charge, 340, 341
- sub-demise, mortgage of leaseholds by way of, 126, 127
- sub-mortgage, deposit by, power of legal mortgagee as to, 82
 - effect when by transfer, 181
 - elements of security of a, 132
 - exercise of power of sale under, 181
 - mortgagee's right to create, 180
 - necessary parties to action for redemption in case of a, 150
 - payment off by mortgagor, effect of, 181
 - power of trustees to lend on, 110
 - priority of outstanding equities to, 181, 182
 - right of original mortgagor as to, in paying sum due, 82, 83
- sub-mortgagee, dealings between mortgagor and mortgagee as affecting, 182
- successive incumbrancers, order for redemption in case of, 154, 155
 - right to add costs to security, 232, 233
- summons, evidence in foreclosure action commenced by, 286
 - for directions, pleadings on, in foreclosure action, 285
 - jurisdiction to order foreclosure or sale on, 283
- surcharge and falsify, when leave may be given to, 216, 217
- surety, marshalling in favour of, 304, 305
- suretyship, provisions of mortgage by way of, 89
- surrender, copyholds, of, by mortgagor, necessity for actual, 125
 - discharge of mortgage sub-term by, 313
 - lease, of, enforcement of contract for, 167
 - essentials to validity of, 167
 - extent of mortgagor's statutory power to accept, 167
 - statutory power of mortgagor as to, 166, 167
 - when mortgagee may accept, 167

INDEX.

MORTGAGE—continued.

- survivorship, power of sale, of, where money advanced on a joint account, 250
- tacking, abolition in Yorkshire, 336, 337
 - application of doctrine to further advances, 332, 333
 - mortgage by way of trust for sale, 332
 - debts, of, effect of death of mortgagor on right as to, 333
 - essentials in, 331
 - nature of the doctrine, 330
- taxation of costs, scale allowed, 232
- tenancy at will, determination by mortgage, 161
 - mortgagor and mortgagee, between, how effected, 159, 160
 - nature of, when created by the mortgage, 194
 - not binding on mortgagee, right to rent of, 195
 - when not binding on mortgagee, 192
- tenant for life, as necessary party to foreclosure action, 280, 281
 - duty of, as to interest on mortgage of settled estate, 229, 230
 - liability of mortgagee of, for production of deeds, 207
 - presumption against merger raised by estate of, 321
 - right to title deeds as against mortgagee of a term, 205
 - rights as purchaser of an incumbrance, 177
- in tail, deposit of title deeds by, effect of, 99
 - extent of disentail created by mortgage by, 98, 99
 - mortgage of copyholds by, form of, 99
 - law applicable to, 99
 - mortgaging powers of a, 97, 98
- position of mortgagor as, 158
- recognition by mortgagee, a question of fact, 165
 - effect of, 165, 166
 - when creating a new tenancy, 166
- tenant's fixtures, rights of tenant as against mortgagee as to, 119, 120
- tenants, notice by mortgagee to, to pay rent, effect of, 194
 - position of, on appointment of a receiver, 263, 264
- tender, interest ceasing to run after, 229
 - mortgagor, by, effect of refusal of, 149
 - nature of effective, 148, 149
 - person to make, 149
 - place of, 149
 - refusal by mortgagee, effect of, 235
 - right to title deeds as affected by, 310
- third parties, mortgagee's rights as against, 187
- timber, power of mortgagee in possession to cut and sell, 203
- tithe redemption, power to charge lands for expenses of, 104
 - rentcharges, nature and method of mortgaging, 129
- title, copyholds, to, covenant for, how expressed, 126
 - costs of litigation allowed in defending, 238
 - covenants for, how now expressed, 123
 - to policies of insurance, must be express, 130, 131
- deeds, charge created by deposit of part, 79, 80
 - costs of obtaining from the court, by whom borne, 318
 - custody of, mortgagee's right, 204
 - deposit of, to secure a debt, effect of, 78, 79
 - duty of legal mortgagee to obtain, 342, 343
 - effect of constitution of trust of, 345
 - notice of subsequent incumbrances on right to delivery of, 310
 - extent of right of mortgagee with bad title to, 206
 - liability of mortgagee of limited interest to produce, 207
 - loss of, as affecting payment of interest, 208
 - no right in mortgagee of term to custody of, 204
 - parting with, after deposit, effect of, 82
 - possession by equitable incumbrancer; effect of, 330
 - of, as between equitable incumbrancers, effect of, 344, 345
 - presumption arising from deposit of, 80
 - production of, liability of mortgagee as to, 206, 207
 - right of co-owners to, as against mortgagee, 205
 - equitable mortgage by deposit to, 205
 - mortgagee to, on exercising power of sale, 205
 - tenant for life to, as against mortgagee of a term, 205

INDEX.

MORTGAGE—continued.

- title deeds, right to, on reconveyance, extent of, 309
 - tender as affecting right to delivery of, 310
 - when charge may not be created by deposit of, 80
- mortgagee of copyholds, of, extent of, 126
- mortgagee's rights in regard to, 186
- when declaration of, must be claimed in action for foreclosure or sale, 284, 285
- trade fixtures, passing with mortgaged property, 256
 - rights between mortgagor and mortgagee as to, 119
- transfer of bill of sale, how effected, 176
 - mortgage, altering the equity of redemption on, 172
 - arrears of rent or interest as affected by, 177
 - assignment of benefit of mortgagee's powers by, 171
 - building society, from, how effected, 173
 - copyholds, of, how effected, 172, 173
 - costs of, 174
 - credit to be given to mortgagor on, 179, 180
 - evidence of amount originally advanced on taking, 178
 - express powers of transferee under, 172
 - extent of value affected by, 176, 177
 - form of, 171, 174
 - how affected by prior dealing between mortgagor and mortgagee, 179
 - far writing essential to, 174
 - mortgagee's right to recover costs of, 243
 - rights as to, 169
 - mortgagor's right to call for, 170
 - notice to mortgagor of, effect of, 179
 - rights of subsequent incumbrancers as to, 170
 - ship, of, 176
 - stamp duty on, 174
 - statutory, effect of, 175
 - taken subject to outstanding equities, 177
 - terms upon which mortgagor can call for, 170
 - trustees, from, practice as to, 173
 - registered charge, how effected, 175, 176
- transferee, position of, on obtaining the legal estate, 329
 - rights as to interest, 230
 - when express power of sale is not exercisable by, 250
- trespass, right of mortgagee to sue for, 188
- trover, goods, of, mortgagee's right to recover damages in respect of, 189
- trust for sale, application of doctrine of tacking to mortgage by way of, 332
 - effect of mortgage by way of, 72
- trustee, effect where title deeds left in custody of, 345
 - in bankruptcy, extent of right to redeem, 142
 - how sued in foreclosure proceedings, 279
 - right to redeem, 289
 - when valid mortgage may be made by, 94
 - mortgagee acting under power of sale is not a, 253, 254
 - no power to waive notice by limited owner intending to mortgage, 101
 - personal liability of, on mortgage, how avoided, 70
 - when mortgagee an express or constructive, 260, 261
 - becomes for mortgagor, 310
- trustee-mortgagee, position of, 329, 330
- trustees, action on a covenant by mortgagees as, 268
 - charity, of a, borrowing powers of, 111
 - choice of valuer by, duty as to, 109
 - duties of, when lending on mortgage, 108, 109
 - form of mortgage by, 107
 - to, 110
 - investment on mortgage by, must be by themselves, 108
 - powers, 107, 108
 - loan on joint account by, effect of, 110
 - mortgaging powers of, 107
 - no power in, to invest in an equitable or contributory mortgage, 108
 - percentage of valuation upon which a loan may be made by, 109
 - receipt of, as a sufficient discharge, 151
 - right to institute foreclosure proceedings, 278

INDEX.

MORTGAGE—continued.

- trustees, transfer of mortgage from, practice as to, 173
 - when sufficiently representing an estate in foreclosure action, 280
- unpaid vendor, rights as between equitable mortgagee and, 345
- valuation, duty of trustees as to choice of person to make a, 109
 - percentage of, upon which trustees may lend, 109
- vendor, unpaid, rights as between equitable mortgagee and, 345
- vendor's lien, appointment of receiver in aid of, 263
- vesting order, death of mortgagee, on, when will be made, 316
 - who may apply for, 317
- discharge of mortgage to infant, on, 316
 - lunatic, on, 316
- power to make, when mortgagor refuses to conditionally surrender copyholds, 125
- voluntary conveyance, rights of parties under, to surplus proceeds, 260
- volunteers, when doctrine of marshalling applies to, 304
- warrant of attorney, form of, 90
 - formalities to be observed in respect of, 90
 - former use of as a security, 89, 90
 - registration of, necessity for, 90
- to vacate, discharge of mortgage of copyholds by, 312, 313
- waste, liability of mortgagee in possession for, extent of, 203
 - mortgagor for, 160
- remedies of mortgagor where mortgagee in possession commits wrongful, 204
 - when mortgagee in possession may cut timber without committing, 204
- weekly tenancies, loan by trustees on, propriety of, 109
- Welsh mortgage, essentials to a valid, 88
 - nature of, as a security, 87
 - rights and liabilities of parties to, 87, 88
 - when accounts ordered in respect of, 219
- will, devolution of mortgage notwithstanding disposition contained in, 182
- writ, action for redemption, in, when issue justifiable, 152
 - claim for foreclosure by, procedure, 285, 286
 - necessity for, when claim under covenant joined to foreclosure claim, 283
- writing, when equitable charge can be assigned without, 174
- Yorkshire, abolition of tacking in, 336, 337
 - discharge of registered charge or mortgage in, 314
 - mortgage to secure further advances in, effect of, 337, 338
 - registration in, provisions as to, 87

NAME AND ARMS, CHANGE OF.

- Act of Parliament, name necessary on change of surname, 350
 - when change of surname by, may be necessary, 352
- armorial bearings, assumption of, procedure on, 353
 - exemplification and record of, 353, 354
- assumed name, executing instrument in, effect of, 350
- change of name, extent of liberty in respect of, 349
 - formalities which may be necessary on, 352
 - in particular cases, 351, 352
- christian name, execution of instrument in changed, effect of, 350
 - no right to change, 349, 350
- confirmation, change of name at, 349, 350
- conveyance, necessity to insert old and new name in, 350
- deed poll, change of name by, 352
 - enrolment of, 354
- double name, presumption where existing, 350
- instrument, executing in changed name, effect of, 350
- Kings of Arms, functions of, 353
- marriage, assumed name for purpose of, 351
- married woman, change of name as affecting, 351
 - use of maiden name in Scotland by, 351
- name and arms clause, when necessary to comply with, 352, 353
- petition, assumption of arms, for, issue of warrant in, 353
- presumption, where double name exists, 350
- Royal Licence, change of name by, when first used, 352
 - none necessary on change of surname, 350
 - petition for, to whom referred, 353

INDEX.

NAME AND ARMS, CHANGE OF—continued.

- Royal Licence, procedure to obtain, 353
- Scotland, use of maiden name of married woman in, 351
- solicitors, change of name by, procedure, 351
- stamp duty, liability of licences to, 354
- surname, practice of using, when first introduced, 350
 - right to change, 350, 351
 - use of changed, under clause in will, 352
- will, assumption of new name as condition of right to property under, 352
 - change of name as not affecting rights under, 351, 352

NEGLIGENCE,

- acceptance, duty of banker as to customer's, 432
- accident, careless act as contributory cause of, 379, 380
 - cause of, burden of proof in cases where unknown, 440, 441
 - inevitable, defence of, distinguished from act of God, 467, 468
 - joint liability where caused by negligence of two or more persons, 381, 382
 - negligence not presumed from, 363
- accountants, liability of, 368
- act of God, exemption of carrier's liability where damage caused by, 430
 - inevitable accident as distinguished from, 467, 468
 - nature of, where relied upon as a defence, 469
 - when applicable as a defence, 469, 470
- actio personalis moritur cum persona*, application of maxim, where negligence causes death, 454, 455
- action, exclusion of duty to individual by statute as affecting right to, 421
 - instances of right of, reserved by statutes conferring powers, 464, 465
 - limitation of, under the Fatal Accidents Acts, 458, 459
- administrators, liability of, 368
- Admiralty cases, liability of joint defendants for negligence in, 382
- agent, degree of skill required from, 368
 - gratuitous, liability where skill not professed, extent of, 374
- aggravated damages, when awarded, 483, 484
- animals, diseased, duty of owner of, 407
 - domestic, extent of owner's liability in respect of, 406
 - knowledge of character of, as affecting owner's duties, 405, 406
 - wild, duty of owner of, 405, 406
- annuity, capitalisation of, as basis of damages under the Fatal Accidents Acts, 461, 462
- appraisers, liability of, 368
- architects, liability of, 368
- artificers, liability of, 367
- artificial use of premises, effect of on duty, 395, 405
- assessment of damages, difficulty in, not ground for refusing relief, 489
 - under the Fatal Accidents Acts, 462
- auctioneer, liability of, 368
- bailee for reward, extent of liability of, 368, 430, 431
 - gratuitous, liability of, 430
- bailiffs, liability of, 368
- banker, duty as to customer's acceptances, 432
 - payment of customer's funds, 432
 - of customer towards, 432, 433
 - with respect to bills for collection, 433
 - valuables deposited, 433
- barbers, liability of, 368
- bare licensee, see licensee
- bicycles, duty of persons riding on highway, 411
- blasting operations, liability where illegally carried on, 375
- broker, when may be liable for negligence, 369, 370
- building contractors, liability of, 368
- buildings, construction of, duty of owner to neighbour in respect of, 396
 - fire-escapes in certain, when liability attaches for non-provision of, 404
 - measure of damages in respect of injury to, 486
 - pulling down, when rendered dangerous by fire, justification of, 404
 - rights and duties of owners and occupiers of, 382
- burden of proof as a rule is on the plaintiff, 363, 438

INDEX.

NEGLIGENCE—continued.

- burden of proof, facts peculiarly within defendant's knowledge, 441
 - upon whom lying, 435, 436
 - shifting, 436
 - where cause of injury unknown, 440
 - liability depends upon relation between master and servant, 439
 - limited by contract, 438
 - relationship of principal and agent exists, 439
- business hours, invitation to shops or offices after, effect of, 387
- care, basis upon which standard is ascertained, 362, 363
 - degree of, increased by unusual risk, 365
 - required in ordinary circumstances, 364
 - where skill professed, 369
 - special circumstances known to person liable, 371
 - degrees of, how expressed, 360
 - duty to take, when arising, 362
 - effect of act where standard required attained, 363
 - reasonable, test as to what is, 364
 - standard of, required, duty of court to determine, 362
 - want of, amounting to criminal negligence, 425, 426
- careless act, liability attaching to, 379, 380
- carrier by sea, liability of, 429
 - gratuitous, duty of, 427
 - liability of, other than common carrier, 430
 - passengers, of, duty and responsibility of, 366, 426
 - passengers' luggage, liability for, 427
- casual or collateral negligence, what is, 473
- cause of damage, where obstruction of highway not the effective, 411
 - injury, act may be the, though not proximate in time, 379
 - liability only attaches when the negligence is the effective, 378
 - where the negligence of two or more persons the cause of, 381, 382
 - plaintiff's mistake not affecting negligent act as, 379, 380
 - when negligence is the effective, 378, 379
 - of defendant not the, 380
- chattels, invitation to use, occupier's liability commensurate with, 390, 391
 - measure of damages where injury caused to, 485
 - nature of duty of person inviting use of, 391
 - position of gratuitous bailee of, 393
- children, contributory negligence as applied to, 453
 - no answer in acts by, 373
 - dangerous matter in relation to, what may be, 373
 - degree of care necessary where dangerous matter left within reach of, 373
 - natural acts of, as affecting question of contributory negligence, 453
 - negligence of person in control of, 454
 - obligation of owners of property with regard to, 373
- chimney fire, liability of occupier of premises in respect of, 403, 404
 - statutory presumption of negligence from, 403
- choice of course by plaintiff in emergency created by act of defendant, effect of, 448
- civil and criminal remedies, relation between, 420, 421
 - remedy, available where want of care amounts to criminal negligence, 425, 426
 - none where death caused by negligence, 454, 455
- claimants, under the Fatal Accidents Acts, particulars required as to, 457
- cloak room, liability of railway company for luggage deposited in, extent of, 428
- common carrier, liability of, as to goods, 428, 429, 430
 - railway company as, 428
 - variation of liability of, 430
- conduct, invitation implied from, 386
- consent, as a defence to breach of duty, 476
 - distinguished from contributory negligence, 476
 - proof required as to defence of, 476—478
- consignor, dangerous goods, of, duty of, 371

INDEX.

NEGLIGENCE—continued.

- construction, duty of owner to neighbour in respect of works of, 396, 397
- contract, liability limited by, 428
 - limitation of innkeeper's liability for, 431, 432
 - variation of carrier's liability by, 427, 428
- contractor, independent, control or interference as affecting the liability of, 472
 - employment of, to perform an unlawful act, liability, 375
 - when liability will attach to, 471, 472
- contractual duty, measure of damages in breach of, 481, 469
- contributory negligence as applied to children, 453
 - defence to claims by servants, 451
 - when applicable, 445, 446
 - defence that person in control of child was guilty of, 454
 - degree of negligence amounting to, 446, 447
 - illustrations of what is and what is not, 450
 - knowledge of plaintiff of existing danger as affecting, 449
 - natural acts of children as affecting guilt of, 453
 - no answer in acts by children, 373
 - precaution usually taken, 449
 - servant, of, evidence of, 451
 - test to be applied to prove, 447
 - third party, by, not a defence, 451, 452
 - when applicable as a defence, 445, 446
- control, as affecting liability of independent contractor, 472
- costs, in action for negligence, how awarded, 489, 490
- counsel's opinion, protection of solicitor by, 370
- criminal act, negligent act amounting to, 420, 421
 - negligence, want of care amounting to, 425, 426
 - when criminal and civil remedies available in respect of, 420
- cross-roads, obligation of riders and drivers as to, 413
- crowd, damage resulting from contact with, as too remote, 489
- custom, rule of the road as a, 412
- customer, duty of banker's, 432
 - status as invitee, 387
- damage, remoteness of, distinguished from proximate cause, 486, 487
 - instances of, 488
 - upon what depending, 486, 487
- damages, aggravated, when awarded, 483
 - apportionment and payment of, under the Fatal Accidents Acts, 462, 463
 - deductions from, under the Fatal Accidents Acts, 462
 - difficulty in assessing, not ground for refusing relief, 489
 - diminished, evidence, required in proof of, 484
 - general, what are, 482
 - measure of, in breach of contractual duty, 481, 489
 - respect of injury to land or buildings, 486
 - where breach of duty does not arise from contract, 482
 - injury caused to chattels, 480
 - personal injury, for, nature of, 483
 - question of moral culpability as ground for, 361
 - special, nature of, 482
 - proof required on claim for, 482
 - temporal loss or injury as incident to claim for, 481
- danger, imminent, when unusual course justified by, 452
 - knowledge of plaintiff of existing, effect of, 449
 - notice, effect on occupier's liability, 390
 - supply of article in condition to cause, liability attaching to, 370, 408
 - work involving, liability of employer in respect of, 474, 475
- dangerous act, duty of licensee of premises in respect of, 394
 - buildings, duty of occupiers of, when abutting on the highway, 371, 372
 - employment, duty of master towards servant in, 366
 - goods, duty of persons consigning, 371

INDEX.

NEGLIGENCE—continued.

- dangerous machinery, duty imposed upon persons employing defective or, 407
 - matter, duty of person possessing, 407
 - effect of statutory obligation on rule as to, 466
 - liability in respect of sale, 408
 - of giver or lender of, extent of, 408, 409
 - negligence as applied to, 466
 - what may be in relation to children, 373
 - operations, degree of care required in, 365
 - duty of persons engaged in, 407
 - place, protection of the public from, 397, 398, 400
 - weapons, degree of care necessary in handling, 365
- death, basis of claim in respect of, under the Fatal Accidents Acts, 459
 - civil liability not attaching where negligence causes, 454
 - damage arising from, claim independently of wrong causing the death, 455
 - liability under the Fatal Accidents Acts in respect of, 455, 456
 - where not immediately ensuing, 455
 - persons entitled to damages in respect of, under the Fatal Accidents Acts, 457
- deceased, estate of, extent of liability for injury caused to, 455
- deductions, assessment of damages, on, under the Fatal Accidents Acts, 462
- default, meaning of, 456
- defective premises, keeping in a public place, as negligence, 361, 399
- defence, consent of, proof required on, 476—478
 - contributory negligence as a, 445
 - employment of independent contractor as a, 471
 - immediate personal risk as a, 479
 - inevitable accident as a, 467
 - infancy as a, 463
 - lunacy as a, 463
 - performance of statutory duty as a, 464, 465
 - reliance on others as a, 479
- defendant, act of, creating emergency, effect of, 448
 - burden of proof where facts within knowledge of, 441
 - negligence of, not the proximate cause, 380
- diminished damages, evidence required in proof of, 484, 485
- discretionary powers, act may not be a statutory duty where statute confers, 466, 467
- diseased animals, duty of owner of, 407
- diverted highway, duty to fence, 398
- dock, definition of, 417
- dock-owners, duty as to use of dock, 416, 417, 418
 - warehousemen and wharfingers, 420
 - where persons use their premises or tackle, 419
 - liability on undertaking repair of ship, 418
- doctor, see medical practitioner
- dog, keeping a savage, as a wrongful act, 406
 - when absence of scienter not a defence, 405
- domestic animals, extent of owner's liability in respect of, 406
- driver, vehicles upon highway, of, duty as to pedestrians, 367, 416
- driving, highway, upon the, examples of negligent acts in connection with, 414
- effective cause, act not necessarily proximate in time to be the, 379
 - of third party as not affecting the, 380, 381
 - two or more parties as the, 381, 382
 - liability attaches to negligence as an, 378
 - where obstruction not the, 411
 - plaintiff's mistake not affecting negligent act as the, 379, 380
 - when negligence is the, 378, 379
- electricity, negligence arising out of the manufacture and supply of, 408
- emergency, defendant's act creating, effect of, 448
 - degree of care required where risk amounts to, 366, 367
- employees, employment of competent, when a defence, 479, 480
- employment, duty of master towards servant in, 367
- engineers, liability of, 368
- engines, damage by sparks from, liability for, 405

INDEX.

NEGLIGENCE—continued.

- error of judgment, when liability may not attach for, 369
- estate of deceased, extent of liability for injury to, 455
- evidence, contributory negligence by servants, of, 451
 - effect where equally balanced, 437
- excavations, duty to fence, 410
- executors, liability of, 368
- explosives, degree of care required from persons dealing with, 365
- factories, non-provision of fire-escapes in, liability, 404
- Fatal Accidents Acts, apportionment and payment of damages under, 462, 463
 - assessment of damages under, 462
 - basis of claim under, arising from death, 459
 - capitalisation of annuity as basis of damages under, 461, 462
 - defences to claims under, 455, 456
 - expectation of pecuniary benefit as a ground for claim under the, 460, 461
 - limitation of action to injury, 458
 - time for action under, 457
 - particulars required with regard to claimant under, 457
 - pecuniary loss must be sustained by claimants under, 459, 460
 - persons benefiting by action under, 457
 - responsible under, 455, 456
 - when separate actions may be maintained under, 458, 459
 - who may bring action under, 458
- fencing, diverted highway, of, owner's duty as to, 398
 - duty of occupier or owner as to, 409, 410
 - protection of public by, when necessary, 397, 398
- fire brigade, formation and powers of, 404, 405
 - liability of local authority in respect of, 405
 - London County Council as to the, 405
 - voluntary, liability of members of, 405
 - negligence as applied to, 405
- chimney, occupier's liability in respect of, 403, 404
 - statutory presumption of negligence from, 403
- escapes, liability for failure to provide in certain buildings, 404
- liability of occupier of premises as to, extent of, 403
 - where caused by sparks from engines, 405
 - kindled under statutory powers, extent of, 404
- pulling down buildings rendered dangerous by, justification for, 404
- flats, duty of landlords of, 390
- fountain, liability in respect of overflowing, 399
- games, risks incident to, 478
 - unlawful, position of persons injured in, 478
- gas, degree of care required from persons dealing with, 365
 - negligence arising out of the manufacture and supply of, 408
- general damages, nature of, 482
- goods, common carrier's liability as to, 429, 430
 - consignment of dangerous, 371
 - dangerous, sale or loan of, 408, 409
 - innkeeper's liability as regards, 431
 - purchase from persons of repute as a defence in respect of, 480
- gratuitous act, liability for misfeasance in respect of, 377
 - no liability attaching through nonfeasance of a, 377
 - agent, degree of care required from, 375
 - liability where skill not professed, extent of, 374
 - when liability attaches to, 374, 375
 - carrier, duty of, 427
 - loan, chattel, of, duty in respect of, 375
- guest, innkeeper's liability in respect of, 431
 - meaning of, 386
- harbour boards, liability of, 365, 417
- highway authority, application of distinction between misfeasance and non-feasance to, 376
 - duty of occupier of premises adjoining a, towards the public, 371, 372, 399, 400

INDEX.

NEGLIGENCE—continued.

- highway, duty of overtaking vehicles on the, 413
 - fencing of diverted, duty as to, 398
 - liability for negligence on the, as affected by speed, 413
 - of driver on the, as affected by act of third party, 414
 - notice of special circumstances as affecting users of, 372
 - obstruction upon, liability for, 410, 411
 - where not the effective cause, 411
 - pedestrians on, rights of, 416
 - premises forming part of, extent of occupier's duty as to, 399
 - vehicle upon, liability of person in charge of, 411, 412
 - vehicles upon, rule of the road as to, 412, 413
- hire, carrier of passengers for, duty and responsibility of, 426
- hired vehicles, liability in respect of, 415
- hospital, extent of governors' liability for negligence of staff, 396
- imminent danger, unusual course justified by, effect of, 452
 - personal risk, as a defence, 479
- implied warranty, sale of goods, on, 408
- independent contractor, effect of control or interference on liability of, 472
 - liability of, 475
 - principal notwithstanding employment of, 473, 474
 - principal not freed by employment of, where work dangerous, 474, 475
 - when liability will attach to, 471, 472
 - principal not liable for act of, 473
- individual rights, exclusion of, in imposing a public duty, effect of, 421
 - where arising from duty to the public, 421
- inevitable accident, act of God as distinguished from, 467, 468
 - no cause of action arising from, 367
 - proof required for defence of, 469
 - what may be considered an, 468
 - when applicable as a defence, 469, 470
- infancy, as a defence to action for negligence, 463
- infectious disorder, notification of, statutory liability, 409
- injurious matter, duty of persons in possession of, 407
- injury, act complained of must be the cause of, 481
 - defendant responsible for things causing, burden of proof where, 441
 - limitation of action to, under the Fatal Accidents Acts, 458
 - temporal loss or, necessary to sustain action for damages, 481
- innkeepers, liability of, as regards guests or goods, 368, 431
 - limitation of liability, 431, 432
- insurance agents, liability of, 368
- interference, as affecting liability of independent contractor, 472
- intervention, third party, of, 380
- invitation, occupier's liability commensurate with extent of, 390
 - when implied from conduct, 386
- invitee as distinguished from bare licensee, 386
 - definition of, 385, 386
 - duty of occupier of premises to warn, 388, 389
- invitees, classification of, 387
- joint interests, liability of persons possessing, 434
 - tortfeasors, liability of, 382, 433, 434
- judge and jury, functions of, 441, 442
 - duty of, where jury find special facts, 445
 - power to nonsuit or withdraw case from jury, 442, 443
 - preliminary questions to be decided by the, 442
- jury, finding of special facts by, duty of judge on, 445
 - when case may or may not be withdrawn from, 442-444
- knowledge, as an ingredient of negligence, 361, 362
 - of plaintiff, as affecting doctrine of contributory negligence, 449, 450
- King's enemies, exemption of common carriers from liability where damage caused by, 429, 430
- land, duty of occupier of, as to water, 401
 - fencing of, duty of owner or occupier as to, 409, 410
 - measure of damages in respect of injury to, 486
 - natural or non-natural user of, as an element of proof of liability for negligence, 401, 402

INDEX.

NEGLIGENCE—continued.

- land, rights and duties of owners and occupiers of, 382
- landlord, change of occupation as affecting liability of, 385
 - instances of liability to tenant, 383
 - liability between tenant and, 382, 383
 - to strangers, extent of, 372, 384, 385
- latent defects, where negligence not presumed in case of, 366
- lender of goods, liability where subject of loan dangerous, 409
- level crossings, duty of railway companies as to, 372
 - obligation of users of, 413, 414
- licence, duty of grantor involved by grant of, 393
 - position of grantor of, 392
- licensee, bare, as distinguished from invitee, 386
 - definition of, 386
 - duty of, where act to be done on premises involves danger, 394
 - extent of rights of, 392
 - negligence of, 394
 - servants or visitors as, 392
 - definition of, 391, 392
 - rights as to the natural perils incident to subject of the licence, 393
- limitation of time, action against public authority, for, 388
 - under the Fatal Accidents Acts, 457, 458
- loaded guns, degree of care necessary in handling, 365
- loan of chattels, gratuitous, liability attaching to, 375
- local authority, liability in respect of fire brigades, extent of, 405
- London County Council, liability in respect of acts of fire brigades, 405
- luggage, liability of railway company for passenger's, 428
- lunacy, as a defence to action for negligence, 463
- machinery, defective or dangerous, duty of persons employing, 407,
 - degree of care required from persons using dangerous, 365
- maintenance, neglecting duty as to, as amounting to negligence, 361
- malfeasance, definition of, 375
- master and servant, burden of proof where liability depending on relation of, 438, 439
 - duty to servant using tackle, 368, 451
 - where employment dangerous, 366
 - liability for act of driver as a servant, 415
- material considerations in arriving at liability, 361
- measure of damages, in breach of contractual duty, 481, 482, 489, 490
 - injury to chattels, for, 485
 - land or buildings, for, 486
 - where breach of duty does not arise from contract, 482
- medical practitioner, liability of, 367
- misfeasance, as distinguished from nonfeasance, 375, 376
 - definition of, 375
 - instances of, 375, 376
 - liability for, where act gratuitous, 377
 - of landlord to strangers for, 384, 385
- mistake, gratuitous agent not liable for, 374
 - plaintiff's, as not affecting negligent act as the cause of injury, 379, 380
- natural or non-natural user of land, value as evidence, 401, 402
- negligence, arising from, malfeasance, misfeasance or nonfeasance, 375—378
 - in respect of fire, 403
 - burden of proof in action for, 436
 - criminal and civil proceedings in respect of, when both available, 420
 - death caused by, no civil liability where, 454, 455
 - defendant's continuing, as contributing to accident, 380
 - when not the proximate cause, 380
 - definition of, 362
 - joint liability where accident caused by two or more persons, 381, 382
 - knowledge or opportunity of knowledge as an ingredient of, 361, 362
 - liability affected by characteristics, capacity or relationship, 434
 - where persons act in particular capacities, 435
 - services gratuitous, 374, 375

INDEX.

NEGLIGENCE—continued.

- negligence, material consideration for determining liability for, 361
 - meaning of, 360
 - occupier's liability to neighbours for, 395, 396
 - onus of proof of, 435
 - owners and occupiers of property, as applied to, 384
 - prima facie* evidence of guilt of, 380
 - removal of liability from one person to another, 380, 381
 - statutory presumption from chimney fire, 403
 - when casual or collateral, 473
 - the effective cause, 378, 379
- negligent act, when amounting to a crime, 420, 421
- neighbours, occupier's duty to, 395
- nervous shock, damages for negligence resulting in, 488
- new trial, when will not be granted, 445
- nonfeasance, definition of, 375
 - instances of, 376
 - no liability for, where act gratuitous, 377
- nonsuit, liability of plaintiff to a, 442, 443
- notice, fact demanding special care, of, 370—372
 - of danger, effect of occupier's liability, 390
 - special circumstances, of, duty of users of highway having, 372
- obstruction, highways, upon, liability for, 410, 411
 - where not the effective cause, 411
- liability of dock-owners for, 418
- occupation, change of, as affecting the liability of a landlord, 385
- occupier, duty of, to the public, how arising, 397
 - to invitees, 385—391
 - public straying off public place in ordinary course, 397, 398
 - land, of, duty as to water, 401
 - liability to trespassers, extent of, 394
 - limitation of liability of, 390
 - no liability where premises rendered dangerous by trespasser, 373
 - premises, of, duty in particular cases, 395
 - to his neighbours, 395
 - towards invitee, 388, 389
 - extent of liability for fire, 403
 - liability of, in respect of extraordinary user, 395
- property, of, rights and duties of, 382
- occupiers, cases bearing on the question of negligence of, 389
- offence, allowing chimney to be on fire, 403, 404
 - driving or riding to the common danger, of, penalty, 413
 - leaving vehicle unattended on the highway, of, penalty for, 412
- omission, negligence arising from, 361
- overtaking vehicles, duty of, 413
- owner, premises, of, liability to tenant, 382, 383
 - property of, rights and duties of, 382
- particular capacity, liability of persons in, 435
- passenger, definition of, 426
- passengers, duty and responsibility of carriers of, 366, 426, 429
 - liability of railway company in respect of, 427, 428
 - luggage of, nature of railway company's liability for, 428
 - sea, liability of carriers of, 429
 - status of, as invitees, 387, 388
 - variation of liability of carriers by contract, 427
- passing on highway, duty of drivers of vehicles, 412
- patent agent, degree of skill required from, 367, 370
- pawnees, liability of, 368
- pecuniary benefit, claim in respect of expectation of, must not be too remote, 461
 - expectation of, as ground for claim under the Fatal Accidents Acts, 460, 461
 - loss, as basis of claim under the Fatal Accidents Acts, 459
 - claimants must sustain, to recover under the Fatal Accidents Acts, 459, 460
- pedestrians on highway, duty as to vehicles, 416
 - rights and liabilities of, 416
- penalty, leaving vehicle unattended on the highway, for, 412
 - liability for chimney fire, 403, 404

INDEX.

NEGLIGENCE—continued.

- penalty, riding or driving to the common danger, on, 413
- personal injury, nature of damages for, 483
 - representatives, extent of remedy in, for injury to deceased's estate, 455
- physical incapability, degree of care expected from person of, 363
 - injury, when no damages recoverable in absence of, 488, 489
- plaintiff, burden of proof as a rule is on the, 363, 438
 - equally balanced evidence as affecting rights of, 437
 - exception to rule that burden of proof on, 439, 440
 - extent of proof required of, 438
 - nonsuit of, in what cases, 442, 443
- plant, duty of wharfingers or dock owners supplying, 419
 - supply of approved, as a defence, 480
- poisonous trees, where no liability attaches on planting, 396
- pollution of streams, liability of occupier of land as to, 401
- postal officials, liability of, 368
- premises, adjoining a highway, occupier's duty towards the public, 399, 400
 - defective, keeping in a public place as negligence, 361
 - duty of occupier towards invitee, 388, 389
 - wharfingers and dock owners to persons using their, 419
 - liability of occupier of, for extraordinary user, 395
 - fire, extent of, 403
 - to his neighbours, 395
 - trespassers, extent of, 395
 - owner to tenant, 382, 383
 - neglect of statutory duty to maintain, effect of, 372
 - pulling down, duty of owner in respect of, 396, 397
- presumption, negligence, of, 439—441
- principal and agent, application of negligence to relation of, 433
 - burden of proof where liability depends upon relation of, 439
 - liability where work involves duty on part of, 473, 474
 - when not liable for acts of independent contractor, 473
- privity of contract, none necessary where want of skill shown, 367
- profession, implied representation of ability from practice of, 367, 368
- professional fees, negligence as an answer to action for, 368
 - man, liability where act not done in professional capacity, 367, 369
- protection of, by reliance on advice of skilled third party, 370
- property, negligence in regard to, 382
- proximate cause, defendant's negligence, when not the, 380
 - remoteness of damage distinguished from, 368, 486, 487
 - wrongful act of third party not affecting, 381
- public authority, liability in performance of statutory duties, 422
 - time within which action will lie against, 388
- duty of occupier of premises adjoining a highway towards the, 399, 400
 - occupiers to the, how arising, 397
 - when straying in the ordinary course, 397, 398
- injury caused by third party to the, effect on occupier's liability, 400, 401
 - protection from dangerous places, owner's duty as to, 397, 398
 - removal of nuisance caused by the, occupier's duty as to, 400
- quarry, protection of the public by fencing, 398
- railway companies, liability in respect of sparks from engines, 405
 - company, liability of, 368, 372, 427, 428
 - limitation of liability for passengers or goods, 428, 429
 - knowledge of plaintiff of dangers of, as affecting doctrine of contributory negligence, 449, 450
 - liability under Railways Clauses Consolidation Act, 1845...377, 378
- reasonable care, test as to what is, 364
- receivers, liability of, 368
- relationship, liability as affected by, 435
- remedy on neglect of statutory duties, 422
- remoteness of damage, distinguished from proximate cause, 486, 487
 - instances of, 488, 489
 - upon what depending, 487, 488

INDEX.

NEGLIGENCE—continued.

- repair, liability of landlord to strangers in respect of, 384, 385
 - neglect of landlord under a contract to, liability, 383
 - ship, to, liability of dock owner undertaking, 418
- res ipsa loquitur*, general application of doctrine, 439—441
- rider on highway, duty of, 411
- risk, imminent, degree of care required in case of, 366, 367
 - unusual, degree of care increased by, 365
- rule of the road, effect as between pedestrians and passing vehicles, 416
 - tramlines as affecting, 413
 - vehicles upon highways, as to, 412, 413
- sea, liability of carriers by, 429
- self-preservation, act done in, as a defence, 479
- servant, claims by, contributory negligence as a defence to, 451
 - contributory negligence of, evidence of, 451
 - plaintiff's, effect of, 448
 - duty of master towards, as to use of tackle, 451
 - where employment dangerous, 366, 368
 - liability of master for driver who is a bare licensee or, 392, 445
- servants, no common law liability for negligence as between, 392
- sewage, negligence in respect of, 402
- sheriffs, liability of, 368
- ship, injury to, on docking, liability, 417, 418
 - repair of, liability of dock owner undertaking, 418
- shipowners, liability of, 368
- skill, degree of care required from person professing, 369
 - required where agent employed, 368
 - effect where no extraordinary degree contracted for, 368
 - failure to use, when not acting in professional capacity, 369
 - implied representation of ability from profession of special, 367, 368
 - liability for want of professed, how arising, 367, 368
 - of gratuitous agent not professing, extent of, 374
 - neglect to use, effect of, 368
 - privity of contract not necessary to liability for want of, 367
- solicitor, liability of, 368
 - protection of, by counsel's opinion, 370
- special circumstances, degree of care required where known, 371, 372
 - duty of users of highway having notice of, 372
- damages, nature of, 482
 - proof required on claim for, 482
- speed, liability for negligence on the highway as affected by, 413
- statutory duties, exercise of discretionary powers may not amount to, 466, 467
 - extent of proof required in breach of, 437
 - failure to perform, liability attaching to, 377
 - inevitable accident or act of God as defence to failure to perform, 471
 - instances where right of action reserved by statute conferring, 464, 465
 - negligent performance of, liability for, 378
 - particular act deemed to be part of, 465
 - penalty imposed on failure to perform, effect of, 423
 - performance of, as a defence to action for negligence, 464, 465
 - not a defence where particular act not authorised, 467
 - rule as to dangerous matter affected by obligation to perform, 466
- obligation, employment of independent contractor no defence to non-performance of, 475
- powers, failure to exercise, liability attaching to, 377
 - liability for negligence in exercise of, 422
 - neglect by omission to exercise, liability, 422
 - remedy for breach on failure to exercise for benefit of particular class, 422
 - wrongful exercise of, liability for, 378
- remedy, available when penalty imposed in protection of a particular class, 424, 425
 - not commensurate with duty imposed, effect of, 422
 - when the only remedy, 423
 - where co-existing with remedy previously available, 423

INDEX.

NEGLIGENCE—continued.

- stevedore, no opportunity of inspecting ship's tackle afforded, effect of, 391
- strangers, landlord's liability for injury to, extent of, 381, 385
 - liability of tenant of premises for injury caused to, 384
- stockbrokers, liability of, 368
- straying cattle, liability as to unfenced property in respect of injury to, 410
- streams, pollution of, liability of occupier of land as to, 401
- tackle, duty of wharfingers and dockers supplying, 419
 - supply of approved, as a defence, 480
- tenant, liability of landlord to, under a contract to repair, 383
 - owner of premises to, 382, 383
- third party, act or intervention of, as affecting liability, 380
 - contributory negligence of, no defence, 451, 452
 - injury to member of the public caused by, effect on occupier's liability, 399, 400
 - liability for obstruction of highway as affected by act of, 411
 - of driver on the highway as affected by act of, 414
 - vendor of goods to, 409
 - protection of skilled person by reliance on advice of skilled, 370
- time, negligent act to be cause of injury not necessarily proximate in, 379
- trade protection societies, liability of, 367
- tramlines, rule of the road as affected by, 413
- tramway undertakers, liability of, 415
- traps, duty of occupier of premises as to, 389
 - sense in which term used, 389
- trespasser, extent of occupier's liability to, 394
 - nature of act rendering occupier liable to, 394, 395
 - no liability on occupier of premises rendered dangerous by, 378
- trial, new, when not granted, 445
- trustees, liability of, 368
- unlawful act, employment of independent contractor to perform, liability, 375
 - work, employment of independent contractor no answer to liability in respect of, 475
- unsafe premises, keeping in a public place, as negligence, 361
- unusual risk, degree of care increased by, 365
- valuers, liability of, 368
- vehicles, duty of drivers as to pedestrians, 416
 - highways, upon, duty of overtaking, 413
 - liability of person in charge of, 411, 412
 - prevention of passage by person in charge of, liability, 412
- vehicles, highways, upon, rule of the road as to, 412, 413
 - liability in respect of hired, 415
- vendor, dangerous goods, of, duty of, 371
 - goods, of, duty imposed on, as to condition, 408, 409
- vessels, liability in respect of, 392
- visitor, when a bare licensee, 392
- volenti non fit injuria*, application of maxim, 476
- voluntary fire brigade, liability of member of, extent of, 405
- volunteer, definition of, 385
- want of skill, effect of, 367, 368
 - where no extraordinary degree contracted for, 368
- water companies, statutory liability of, 402
 - duty of occupier of land as to, 401
 - liability in respect of, when supplied to and drained from houses, 402
 - nature of user of land as an element of proof of negligence in respect of, 401, 402
 - supply, negligence arising in connection with, 408
 - when proof of wrongful act necessary in respect of treatment of water, 401
- waterworks companies, liability for failure to comply with statutory duty, 377
- warranty, duty imposed on vendor of goods in absence of, 408, 409
 - implied on the sale of goods, 408
- wharf, definition of, 416
- wharfinger, duty as common carrier, 419
 - warehouseman, 420
 - of, 417
 - where persons use their premises or tackle, 419

INDEX.

NEGLIGENCE—continued.

- wild animals, duty of owner in respect of, 405, 406
- works of construction, duty of owner to neighbour in respect of, 396, 397
- workshops, non-provision of fire-escapes in, liability, 404
- wrongful act, keeping a savage dog as a, 401, 406
- young servants, duty of master towards, 366

NOTARIES.

- administration of oaths, right of notary as to, 500
- apprentice, public notary, to, affidavit of service to, necessity for, 495
 - service of, 495
 - transfer of, 495
- bills of exchange, foreign, proof of presentation, 500, 501
 - presentation by notary, 499
- bonds, drawing by notary, 500
- British dominions, appointment of notaries in, 497
 - notaries abroad, powers of, 501
- certificate, when renewable, 498
- Channel Islands, powers of notaries in, 501
- colonies, appointment of notaries in, 497
- consular officers, notarial acts which may be done by, 497
- Court of Faculties, grant of faculty by the, 495
- declarations, right of notary to take, 500
- diplomatic officers, notarial acts which may be done by, 497
- district notaries, admission and qualification of, 496
 - definition of, 496
- document, notarial admission in evidence, 497
 - proof of, when under notarial seal, 500
 - verification where several pieces of paper constitute one, 501
- ecclesiastical notaries, by whom appointed, 494
 - who may be appointed as, 494
- evidence, admission of notarial acts in, 499, 500
 - effect of act of foreign notaries as, 501
- extended protest, nature of an, 499
- foreign bill, presentation abroad, proof of, 501
 - in England, 500, 501
 - bonds, drawing by notary, 500
 - notarial act, judicial notice taken of, 501
 - notaries, effect of acts of, as evidence, 501
- general notary, appointment of, 494
 - what is a, 494
- Ireland, powers of notaries in, 501
- Master of Faculties, duty of, as to fitness of applicants, 496
 - power of, to strike notary off the roll, 498, 499
 - powers of, as to qualification of notaries, 496
 - refusal of appointment by, rights of applicant on, 498
- notarial act, admission in evidence, 500
 - meaning of, 500
- notary public, definition of, 493
 - history of the office of, 493
 - nature of office of, 493
 - power to strike off the roll, 498, 499
 - preparation of legal documents by, 499
 - qualification and admission of, 495
 - to practise, 495
 - refusal to appoint, rights of applicant, 498
 - transfer of apprenticeship to, 495
- oaths, right of notary to administer, 500
- Scotland, powers of notaries in, 501
- Scriveners' Company, jurisdiction of the, 494
 - qualification to practise within area of, 494, 496
 - requirements as to fitness of applicant, 496
 - notary practising within area of, 498
- ship's protests, nature of extended, 499
 - object of, 499
- solicitor, when may be appointed a district notary, 496
 - notary, certificate of, provisions as to, 498
- stamp duties, apprenticeship and admission, on, 497
 - certificate to practise and notarial acts, on, 497

INDEX.

NUISANCE,

- abatement, by act of party injured, 547
 - local authorities, 549, 550
 - extent of right as to, 549
 - information for summary proceedings for, who may give, 566
 - non-compliance with order for, penalties on, 571, 572
 - notice, see notice to abate
 - omissions, when arising from, 547
 - order, requirements of, 568
 - persons in whom right exists, 548
 - power of injured party as to, 548
 - powers under the Public Health Act, 1875...536—540
 - public nuisance, of, 547, 548
 - reversioner's right of, 550
 - summary, nuisances subject to, 539, 540
- accumulation of injurious matter, as a nuisance, 538
- act, when wrongful per se, 509
- act of God, as defence to action in respect of nuisance, 564
- Act of Parliament, compulsory exercise of powers under, effect of, 519
 - construction of powers obtained by, 516, 520
- act of stranger, as a defence to action in respect of nuisance, 564
- action, defences to, insufficient, 564, 565
 - sufficient, 562—564
- joinder of plaintiffs when Attorney-General a party to, 553
- right of, in respect of nuisance, 550, 551
- when taken by the Attorney-General, 552, 553
- agent, liability of principal for acts of, extent of, 557
- air, pollution of, as a nuisance, 532
- animals, bye-laws as to keeping of, power to make, 514
 - keeping of, as a nuisance, 513
 - when dangerous to health, 538
 - liability when injurious to health, 513, 514
 - provisions in London and urban districts as to, 514
- appeal, abatement pending, when ordered, 571
 - justices' order for abatement, against, how made, 571
 - notice to abate, from, 567
- Attorney-General, as necessary party to action in respect of public nuisance, 552, 553
 - joinder of plaintiffs in proceedings by the, 553
 - right of relators in action by, 553
- black smoke, see smoke
- breach of duty, when liability arises in, 518
- bridges, non-repair of, as constituting a nuisance, 514
- buildings, defects in and about, as nuisances, 538
 - extent of right of user of adjoining, 526
 - extraordinary user of, 526, 527
 - ordinary user of, what amounts to, 526, 527
 - ruinous, existence of as a nuisance, 516
 - when mode of user justifiable, 526
- burden of proof, as to authority for wrongful act, 516, 517
- bye-laws, power of conservators of commons as to, 535
 - urban authority to make, 514, 540
- chimney fires, liability for, 541, 542
 - trade, issue of black smoke from a, liability, 542, 543
- chimneys, liability where smoke issues from one of several, 544
- civil proceedings, parties to, in respect of nuisance, 550, 551
 - right to bring in respect of nuisance, 550
- closing orders, when made, 569
- comfort, statutory provisions as to nuisances affecting, 535, 536
- coming to, nuisance, a, as a defence, 565
- common law nuisance, definition of, 511
 - nuisances at, 534, 535, 574
- commons, nuisances in respect of, 535
 - statutory powers of conservators of, 535
- compensation clause, absence from statute conferring power to interfere with
 - private rights, effect of, 517, 518
- complaint, persons entitled to make, 570
- construction, authority to do certain acts or works, of, 518, 520
 - statutes affecting rights of individuals, of, 517

INDEX.

NUISANCE—continued.

- continuing nuisance, damages for, 560
 - liability for, 555
- contractor, liability of principal, 557
- costs, summary proceedings to abate nuisance, recovery, of, 573, 574
- covenants, construction of "nuisance" in, 507
- crèche, use of house as a, when a nuisance, 507
- criminal nuisance, in respect of injurious food, 536
- damage, as an essential to actionable nuisance, 510, 511
 - liability for, arising from keeping savage animals, 513
 - nature of, to constitute an actionable nuisance, 510, 511
 - to property, instances of, amounting to a nuisance, 525
 - when presumed from wrongful act, 509
- damages, amount to which reversioner entitled, 559
 - continuing nuisance, for a, 560
 - exemplary and nominal, when plaintiff respectively entitled to, 559
 - finality of award for, 559
 - measure of, in action in respect of injury from nuisance, 558
 - period of assessment of, 559, 560
 - right of person injured by nuisance to, 558
- damnum absque injuriâ*, effect of maxim on right of action for nuisance, 508
- dangerous matter, importing into premises, when a nuisance, 528, 529
 - premises, liability of owners in respect of, 530
 - when a private nuisance, 515
 - public nuisance, 515
- defence, matters which may not be raised in, 564, 565
 - what may be a valid, 562, 563
- deposit, injurious matter, of, as a nuisance, 538
- ditches, cleansing of, liability of local authorities as to, 540, 541
- electricity, escape of, statutory liability in respect of, 516
- employer, liability of, for acts of agent or servant, extent of, 557
 - in respect of smoke nuisance, 543, 544
- engines, liability of owners in respect of non-consumption of smoke, 545
 - non-consumption of smoke by, a question of fact, 545
- enjoyment of property, principles of mutual, 530, 531
- entry, order for, power of justices to make, 573
 - power of local authority as to, after order to abate, 572
 - for purposes of examination, 572
 - to abate a smoke nuisance by, 543
 - powers in London as to, 573
 - refusal of right to local authority, proceedings on, 572, 573
- evidence, nature of, where prospective nuisance restrained, 562
- exemplary damages, when plaintiff entitled to, 559
- factory chimney, smoke arising from, liability for, 542, 543
 - fumes arising from, 533, 534
 - furnaces, London, smoke from, 544
 - unwholesome, as a nuisance, 539
- fences, ruinous, when a public nuisance, 515
- food, exposing for sale or preparation of injurious, as nuisances, 536
- fried fish shop, user of, as a nuisance, 508
- fumes, as constituting a nuisance, 532, 533
- gasworks, nuisance arising from, provisions relating to, 523, 524
- health, keeping of animals as a nuisance when dangerous to, 538
- highways, liability of owners of engines emitting smoke on the, 546
 - nuisance on, what amounts to, 524
- hospital, infectious diseases, not necessarily a nuisance, 529, 534, 561, 562
 - user of premises for purpose of, as a breach of covenant, 508
- indictment, liability of persons causing public nuisance to, 574
- information, who may give, where nuisance summarily abatable, 566
- injunction, evidence necessary where claimed in respect of prospective nuisance, 562
 - none granted where nuisance has ceased, 562
 - principles upon which granted, 560
 - prospective nuisance restrained by, 561, 562
 - where refused, 561
 - right to commit nuisance is claimed, 561
- injurious food, nuisance in respect of sale or preparation of, 536
- injury, nature of, to constitute a nuisance, 508
 - property, to, amounting to an actionable nuisance, 525

INDEX.

NUISANCE—continued.

- intention, lawful act not becoming unlawful by, 510
- joint nuisance, restraint of, 558
 - summary proceedings in respect of, 571
- keeping of animals, see animals
- land, extent of right of user of, 525, 526
- landlord and tenant, liability for costs of abatement order as between, 573, 574
 - liability of, in respect of nuisance, extent of, 556, 557
- lawful act, negligence as affecting, 507
- light locomotive, definition of, 546
- local authority, abatement of nuisances by, rights, 549, 550
 - complaint against, who may make, 570
 - contribution to nuisance by, no defence, 570
 - duty of, as to detection of nuisances, 537
 - limitation of powers of abatement of, 550
 - power of entry to abate a smoke nuisance, 543
 - after order, 572
 - proceedings where nuisance outside district of, 570, 571
 - rights as to proceedings in respect of public nuisance, 553, 554
- locomotives, liability of owners of, as to emission of smoke on the highway, 546
- London, absence of water fittings in, as a nuisance, 539
 - power of authorities in, as to the keeping of animals, 513, 514
 - powers of entry of authorities in, 573
 - provisions as to consumption of smoke, 544
 - refuse destructors in, provisions as to, 539
- misdeameanour, nuisance arising from offensive trade as a, 534, 535
 - public nuisance as a, 574
- morality, public, public nuisances in respect of, 541
- motive, consideration of, where injunction claimed, 562
 - lawful act not becoming unlawful by, 510
- negligence, as distinguished from nuisance, 507
 - lawful act as affected by, 507
- neighbouring owners, nuisance arising from exercise of rights as between, 524—534
- noise, nuisance occasioned by, 531
- nominal damages, when plaintiff entitled to, 514
- non-repair of bridges, as constituting a nuisance, 514
 - premises, of, as a nuisance, 515, 555, 569
- notice to abate, appeal from, 567
 - non-compliance with, proceedings on, 568
 - person to be served with, 567, 568
 - service before summary proceedings, 566, 567
 - smoke nuisance, a, contents of, 544
 - when necessary, 548
- noxious fumes, escape of, liability of owners of property for, 529, 530
- nuisance, abatement of, 548, 549
 - extent of right of, 549
 - under the Public Health Act, 1875...536—540
 - acts of, as distinguished from trespass, 507
 - arising from interference with waters and waterways, 546
 - keeping of animals, 513, 514
 - as a statutory term, 508
 - distinguished from negligence, 507
 - trespass, 506
 - carrying on offensive trades as a, 534, 535
 - coming to, as a defence to action, 565
 - construction of word, in covenants, 507
 - continuance of, liability for, 555
 - creating or causing a, liability for, 554, 555
 - damage as an essential to actionable, 502, 510
 - damages in respect of, 558, 560
 - definition of, 505, 506
 - divisions of subject of, 506
 - electrical supply as causing, 516
 - essentials to constitute, 518
 - exercise of right as between neighbouring owners amounting to, 524, 525

INDEX.

NUISANCE—continued.

- nuisance, exercise of statutory powers in respect of, 521
 - on rights in respect of, effect of, 516
 - 520
- existence of dangerous property as amounting to, 515, 516
- foods, in respect of sale and preparation of, 536
- gasworks, arising from, provisions relating to, 523, 524
- highways, on, what amounts to, 524
- injury to property amounting to an actionable, 525
- joint, restraint of, 558
- liability as between landlord and tenant, 556, 557
 - in respect of, rule as to, 554
- matters which may not be raised as defences in respect of action
 - for, 564, 565
- nature of injury to constitute a, 508
- noise, when arising from, 531, 532
- occupier's right to bring action in respect of, 551, 552
- open spaces and commons, in respect of, 535
- prevention of, power of urban authority as to, 540
- private and public, distinction between, 512
- proviso preserving remedies in statute permitting a, 522, 523
- public morality, in respect of, 541
- restrained by injunction, 560—562
- right of action in person having possessory title, 552
 - respect of, 550, 551
 - to commit, cases in which negatived, 521, 522
- smoke, fumes and smells as constituting a, 532, 533, 541
- tenant's right of action in respect of, 552
- vibration causing a, 531, 532
- when a question of fact, 510
 - subject to penalties, 540
- where arising on exercise of permissive power, 520
 - becoming inevitable by exercise of compulsory powers, 519
- who may make complaint in respect of, 570
- nuisances, classification of, 511, 512
 - extension of list of summarily abatable, 539, 540
 - when summarily abatable, 537
- occupier, primary liability of, 556
 - right of action in, as to nuisance, 551, 552
- offensive trades, examples of, 535
 - nuisance arising from, how dealt with, 534, 535
- open spaces, nuisances in respect of, 535
- order for abatement, essentials to, 568
 - inability to comply with, 572
 - penalties on non-compliance with, 571, 572
 - recovery of costs of, 573, 574
- closing, when will be made, 569
- specification of abatement, 569
- overcrowding, when becoming a nuisance, 539
- overhanging trees, liability of owners in respect of, 530
- overhead wires, when constituting a nuisance, 516
- penalties, liability of owners of locomotives to, 545, 546
 - non-compliance with abatement orders, on, 571, 572
 - notice to abate nuisance, on, 568
- statutory nuisances, in respect of, recovery of, 565, 566
- poisonous trees, liability of owners in respect of, 530
- possessory title, right of action in person having, 552
- premises, closing order in respect of, when will be made, 569
 - conversion of, when amounting to a nuisance, 528
 - dangerous, liability of owners in respect of, 530
 - defects in and about, as nuisances, 538
 - importing dangerous matter into, liability for, 528, 529
 - liability as between landlord and tenant of, 555
 - of owner for escape of noxious fumes, 529, 530
 - user for non-natural purposes, amounting to nuisance, 528
 - of adjoining, extent of right of, 526
 - when mode of, justifiable, 526
 - not ordinary, 526, 527
- prescriptive right, as a defence to action in respect of nuisance, 563

INDEX.

NUISANCE—continued.

- presumption, damage from wrongful act, of, 509
- principal, liability of, as contractor, 557
 - for acts of agents and servants, extent of, 557
- private nuisance, arising from dangerous property, 515, 516
 - definition of, 512
 - property, stretching wires over, as a nuisance, 516
 - rights, statutory power to interfere with, how construed, 517, 518
- proceedings, see action
- property, dangerous, when becoming a public nuisance, 515
 - extent of right of user of, 525, 526
 - extraordinary user of, what amounts to, 527
 - injury to, when amounting to an actionable nuisance, 525
 - instances of injury to, constituting nuisance, 525
 - liability in respect of user of, when arising, 527
 - mutual enjoyment of, principles of, 530, 531
 - restriction of neighbour's rights of, not permissible, 527
- prohibition order, nature of, 569
- prospect, interference with a private, 534
- prospective nuisance, injunction in respect of, 561
- protection of property, as a defence to action for nuisance, 563, 564
- provisional orders, effect of acts done under, 518
- public bodies, liability of, in respect of nuisance, 557, 558
 - health, statutory provisions in respect of nuisances affecting, 535, 536
- Public Health Act, 1875, abatement of nuisances under the, 536—540
 - order under, essentials of, 568
 - local authorities' right to bring proceedings under, 553, 554
 - (London) Act, 1891, abatement of nuisances under, 536
 - Acts, meaning of word "nuisance" in, 508
- public morality, public nuisances in respect of, 541
- nuisance, as distinguished from private, 512
 - Attorney-General as necessary party to action for, 552, 553
 - definition of, 511
 - existence of dangerous property as a, 515
 - liability to indictment for, 574
 - limitation of power of abatement of, 549
 - local authorities' right to bring proceedings in respect of, 553, 554
 - meaning of, 537
 - when private action may be brought in respect of, 553
- quarter sessions, appeal from abatement order to, 571
- railways, non-consumption of smoke on, liability, 545
- relators, right of, where action brought by Attorney-General, 553
- remedies, abatement of nuisance, for, classes of, 547
- reversioner, amount of damages which should be awarded to, 559
 - right to bring civil proceedings in respect of nuisance, 550, 551
- ruinous buildings, liability arising from existence of, 515
- safety, statutory provisions as to nuisances affecting, 535, 536
- sanitary authority, power to make bye-laws in London as to the keeping of animals, 514
 - powers of, 565—570
 - when abatement order addressed to, 569, 570
- savage animals, liability for damage caused by keeping, 513
- school, user of premises for purpose of a, when a breach of covenant, 508
- servant, liability of master for acts of, extent of, 557
- smells, as constituting a nuisance, 532, 533
- smoke, black, emission from factory chimneys, liability for, 542
 - daily emission of, as separate offence, 544
 - furnaces in London, from, provisions as to, 544
 - liability of employer for nuisance arising from, 543, 544
 - owners of locomotives on highways in respect of, 546
 - steam vessels on the Thames allowing emission of, 544, 545
- non-consumption by engines, a question of fact, 515
 - on railways, liability, 545
- notice to abate nuisance arising from, contents of, 544
- question of nuisance arising from, is one of fact, 543
- relief in favour of certain industries in respect of, 543

INDEX.

NUISANCE—continued.

- smoke, summary abatement of nuisance arising from, 542
 - when amounting to a nuisance, 532, 533, 541
- specific powers, construction of, 518, 519
- specific works, construction of authority to do, 519
- statutory authority, as a defence to action in respect of a nuisance, 562, 563
 - nuisance, definition of, 511
 - nuisances, recovery of penalties in respect of, 565, 566
 - powers, exercise of, in respect of a nuisance, 521, 522
 - liability on, 519—521
 - when the mode discretionary, 523
 - remedies for nuisance where permitted under, 522, 523
- steam vessels, Thames, liability of owners of, for smoke nuisance, 544, 545
- stinks, arising from commercial operations as nuisances, 565—575
- streets, overhead wires above, when not a public nuisance, 516
- summary proceedings, abatement of nuisances by, 565—575
 - costs of, recovery, 573, 574
 - information for, who may give, 566
- swine, provisions as to keeping, 513, 514
 - of Town Police Clauses Act as to keeping, 514
- tenant, primary liability of, 556
 - right of action in, as to nuisance, 552
- Thames, liability of owners of steam vessels on the, in respect of smoke, 544, 545
- Town Police Clauses Act, provisions of, as to keeping of swine, 514
- trade chimneys, issue of black smoke from, liability for, 542, 543
 - fumes and stinks arising from operation of, as a nuisance, 533, 534
- furnaces, London, in, provisions as to smoke from, 544
- offensive, liability of persons carrying on, 534, 535
- relief from restrictions in respect of smoke in certain, 543
- trees, liability of owners of poisonous or overhanging, 530
- trespass, acts held to be, 506
 - as a defence to order to abate nuisance, 570
 - distinguished from nuisance, 506
- unwholesome factories, liabilities in respect of, 539
 - premises, abatement of nuisance arising from, 537
- urban authority, power to make bye-laws for prevention of nuisances, 540
 - districts, provisions as to keeping swine in, 513, 514
- vibration, nuisance occasioned by, 531
- view, destruction of private, 534
- vis major*, as defence to action in respect of negligence, 544
- watercourses, liability of local authorities in respect of offensive, 540, 541
- water fittings, absence of, in London, liability in respect of, 539
- waters, nuisance arising from interference with, 546
- wrongful act, commission of as essential to action for nuisance, 508, 509
 - damages presumed from, 509
 - where act complete, 559
 - statutory authority for, effect of, 516, 517
 - when becoming actionable although innocent, 509, 510
 - wrongful per se, 509

OPEN SPACES AND RECREATION GROUNDS,

- admission, public pleasure grounds, to, power to charge for, 589
- ancient monuments, acquisition of, by local authorities, 603
 - appointment of guardians of, 604
 - exemption from compulsory purchase, 605
 - injury to, liability for, 604, 605
 - owner of, how defined, 603
 - protection and maintenance of, 602
 - public access to, provision for, 605
 - transfer of ownership of, 605
- bands, provision of, in public parks, 589
- Baths and Washhouses Act, 1846, application of, 593
- bequests, power to make, under the Recreation Grounds Act, 1859...592
- boats, see pleasure boats
- bye-laws, enforcement of, under the Recreation Grounds Act, 1859...592
 - London County Council's powers as to, with reference to open spaces, 599

INDEX.

OPEN SPACES AND RECREATION GROUNDS—continued.

- bye-laws, power to make, under the Recreation Grounds Act, 1859...592
 - Town Gardens Protection Act, 1863...594
- powers of the National Trust as to, 597
 - regulating public pleasure grounds, power of authorities as to, 587
- Charity Commissioners, approval of trusts on gift to local authorities by, 586
 - powers under the Recreation Grounds Act, 1859...591, 592
- charity, use of public park in aid of, 581
- City of London, powers of Common Council of, as to open spaces, 601
- Cleopatra's Needle, maintenance of, 606
- commons, duty of the National Trust as to, 598
- compulsory purchase, exemption of ancient monuments from, 605
 - open spaces from, 580, 581
 - village greens from, 584
 - woodlands from, 580, 581
- consideration, application of, on conveyance or lease of open space, 586
- conveyance, open space, of, effect of, 585
 - powers as to, 585
- corporations, conveyance of open spaces to local authorities by, powers, 586
- county councils, powers as to public walks or pleasure grounds, 587
 - purchase of a monument, 604
- custom, as a characteristic of village greens, 583
- Embankment, Thames, maintenance of monuments on the, 606
- enrolment, conveyance under the Recreation Grounds Act, 1859, exempt from, 591
- Epping Forest, provisions relating to, 601
- exemption, village greens from compulsory purchase, of, 584
- extra commercium*, when open space is, 581
- games, power of the National Trust to set aside land for purpose of, 598
 - provision of space in public park for, 589, 590
 - public right to play upon an open space, 580
- gardens, application of the Town Gardens Protection Act, 1863, to, 593—596
 - expenses relating to, provision for, 595
 - offences relating to, powers, 596
- guardians, ancient monuments, of, appointment of, 604
- ice, preservation for skating, 589, 590
- jus spatiandi*, none in the public at common law, 579, 580
- land, conveyance of, under the Recreation Grounds Act, 1859...591
- lavatories, provision of, 600
- lease, open space, of, effect of, 585
 - powers as to granting, 585
- local authorities, conveyance by corporations to, 586
 - expenses in connection with open spaces, how defrayed by, 586, 587
 - Metropolis, for the, under the Open Spaces Act, 1906...598
 - power as to the erection of monuments, 602
 - to accept gift of open space, 586
 - maintain statues in open space, 605, 606
 - powers as to public walks or pleasure grounds, 587, 588
 - village greens, 584
 - of non-statutory trustee to convey land to, for recreation purposes, 586
 - the metropolitan borough councils as, under the Open Spaces Act, 1906...600
 - under the Public Improvement Act, 1860...592, 593
 - Town Gardens Protection Act, 1863...594, 595
 - provision of recreation grounds under the Towns Improvement Clauses Act, 1847...590, 591
 - temporary adaptation of land as public pleasure grounds, powers, 588, 589
 - when not requiring licence in mortmain, 580
- London, City of, powers vested in Common Council of the, as to open spaces, 601
 - County Council, powers as to Embankment monuments, 606
 - open spaces, 598, 599

INDEX.

OPEN SPACES AND RECREATION GROUNDS—continued.

- London County Council, powers as to gardens under the Town Gardens Protection Act, 1863...595
 - restrictions on as to open spaces, 598
- Metropolis, local authorities under the Open Spaces Act, 1906, for the, 598
 - maintenance of open spaces in, 600, 601
- metropolitan borough councils, expenses defrayed by the rates, extent of, 600
 - powers under the Open Spaces Act, 1906... 598, 600
- monument, ancient, owner of, definition of, 603
- monuments, ancient, acquisition of, 603
 - protection and maintenance of, 602
 - definition of, 603
 - appointment of guardians of, 604
 - liability for injury to, 605
 - London County Council's powers as to, 606
 - maintenance in open space by local authorities, 606
 - power of local authorities as to the erection of, extent of, 602
 - public access to, provision for, 605
 - transfer of ownership of, 605
- mortmain, licence in, when not required by local authority, 580
- municipal corporation, conveyance of land by, under the Recreation Grounds Act, 1859...591
- National Trust, the, constitution of, 596, 597
 - duties of, 598
 - election of members of, 596
 - nature and powers of, 596, 597
 - preservation of existing rights of common by, 598
 - properties inalienable or not chargeable by the, 597
 - revenue of, how applied, 597
 - Act, 1907, object of, 596
- notice, publication of, on taking over gardens under the Town Gardens Protection Act, 1863...595
- offences relating to open spaces, 581
 - Royal parks, in, powers of park-keeper as to, 583
 - under the Town Gardens Protection Act, 1863...596
- open space deemed to be a street for certain purposes, 590
 - definition of, 582
- spaces, application of consideration on conveyance or lease of, 585, 586
 - doctrine of extra commercium to, 581
 - the Open Spaces Act, 1906, to, 584
 - character of, 589
 - conveyance or leasing of, 584, 585
 - conveyancing or leasing powers of private owners of, 586
 - exemptions from provisions as to compulsory purchase, 580, 581
 - kinds of, 589
 - maintenance in the Metropolis, 600, 601
 - other than statutory, 602
 - power of the London County Council as to, 598, 599
 - public rights over, 580
 - regulation by the London County Council of, under special Acts, 598
- Open Spaces Act, 1906, powers of the metropolitan borough councils under, 599, 600
 - where not applicable, 584, 585
- owner, ancient monuments, of, disability of, 603
 - how defined, 603
- definition of, in relation to open spaces, 585
- parish councils, powers as to village greens, 584
 - improvement rate, how made, 593
- land, conveyance under the Recreation Grounds Act, 1859...591
- park-keeper, Royal park, of, powers of, 583
- parochial charity, definition of, 580
- penalties, breach of rules relating to Royal parks, 583
 - offences for, under the Town Gardens Protection Act, 1863...595
- places of public resort, powers of the National Trust as to, 596, 597
- playgrounds, provision of, 592, 593
- pleasure boats, public parks, in, power of authorities as to, 587
- private owners, conveying or leasing powers of, as to open spaces, 587

INDEX.

OPEN SPACES AND RECREATION GROUNDS—continued.

- Public Improvements Act, 1860, adoption and application of, 592, 593
 - effect of adoption of, 592
 - powers of local authority under, 593
- public parks, bands in, provision for, 589
 - ice, preservation in, 589, 590
 - provision of gymnastic apparatus in, 589
 - use of in aid of charity, 589
- pleasure grounds, authorities having powers over, 587, 588
 - powers of local authorities as to, 587, 588
- walk or pleasure ground, power to close and charge for admission to, 589, 590
 - temporary adaptation of land for, 589, 590
- recreation grounds, conveyance of lands for, 591
 - kinds of, 579
 - management under the Recreation Grounds Act, 1859...592
 - meaning of, 579
 - other than statutory, 602
 - power to make bye-laws for, 592
 - provision of, 590, 591
- rights of common, duty of the National Trust to preserve, 598
- Royal parks, acquisition by local authorities of land adjoining, sanction necessary, 583
 - list of, 584
 - management and regulation of, 582
 - offences in, powers of park-keeper as to, 582, 583
 - rules and regulations governing, approval of, 582
- settled estate, power to lay out as an open space, 590
 - land, power of tenant for life as to laying out, 590
- statue, maintenance in open space, power of local authorities as to, 603, 606
- street, open space deemed to be, for certain purposes, 590
- tenant for life, laying out of settled land by, powers, 590
- Thames Embankment, maintenance of monuments on, 606
- Town Gardens Protection Act, 1863, application of, 594
 - authorities having powers under, 594
 - bye-laws under, powers, 594
 - expenses under, provision of, 595
 - operation of bye-laws under, 594
 - penalties for offences under the, 596
- trustees, non-statutory, power to transfer land for recreation purposes, 586
 - statutory, powers as to conveying or leasing open spaces, 585, 586
- undeveloped land duty, exemptions from, 580, 581
- village greens, characteristics of, 583, 584
 - exemption from provisions as to compulsory purchase, 583, 584
 - powers of parish councils as to, 584
- walks and playgrounds, provision of, under the Public Improvements Act, 1860, 592, 593
- woodlands, when exempt from compulsory acquisition, 580, 581

PARLIAMENT,

- acceptance of office, member of the House of Commons, by, power to fill vacant seat on, 789
- accession to peerage, member of the House of Commons, of, power to fill vacant seat on, 789
- accounts, audit and examination of public, 776, 777
- Act of Attainder, nature and procedure relating to, 727
 - reversal of, necessity for Sovereign's signature to Bill for, 727
- Grace, nature of, 726
 - procedure appertaining to, 726
 - indemnity, nature and mode of procedure relating to, 726
- address, Crown, to the, information obtained by either House by, 618
- adjournment, both Houses, of, powers, 699
 - House of Commons, of the, motion for on question of urgent public importance, 677
 - number of members necessary to support motion for, 677
 - power of the Speaker on disorder, 681

INDEX.

PARLIAMENT—continued.

- adjournment, House of Lords, of the, practice on motion for, 635
 - power to fill vacant seat in the House of Commons during, 789
- administrative posts, disqualification of holders of, as members of Parliament, 660, 661
- aliens, disqualification of, as members of Parliament, 656
- allegiance, oath or affirmation of, by members of Parliament, how taken, 688
- 689
- amendment, acceptance by the House of Commons, procedure, 798
 - clauses, of, procedure in both Houses as to, 713
 - disagreement by House of Commons with House of Lords as to, how communicated, 799
 - effect of message where House of Lords insists on its, 799
 - motion to go into committee in House of Lords on, effect of, 709
 - private or provisional order confirmation Bill, of, effect on progress of, 757, 758
 - public Bill, of, by either House after third reading, 720
 - course open to either House on, 721
 - effect of Parliament Act, 1911, on, 722, 723
 - to, procedure as to on report stage, 717, 718
- amendments, House of Commons, in the, motion empowering chair to select, 671
 - procedure on consideration of in either House, 720
- Appeal Committee, House of Lords, of the, appointment and duties of, 642
- appeal, House of Lords, to the, assistance of nautical assessors on, 648, 649
 - failure to lodge case on, effect of, 645
 - procedure on lodgment, 643, 644
 - setting down, 646
 - where separate cases lodged by different respondents, 645
 - security for costs on, requirements, 645
- Appropriation Accounts, reports on, duty of Comptroller and Auditor-General as to, 777
 - submission to Comptroller and Auditor-General, 777
 - Public Accounts Committee, 777
- Bill, nature of, 775
- army and navy estimates, division into votes, 768, 769
 - officer, disqualification of, as member of Parliament, 660
- arrest, extent of members' privilege as to freedom from, 779, 780
 - persons immune from when appearing before either House, 781
- assent of the Crown, necessary to Acts of Parliament, 616
- ballot, precedence of private members' business in the House of Commons, 675
- bankruptcy, disqualification of peer for seat in Parliament on, 622, 633
 - member of the House of Commons, of, power to fill vacant seat on, 789, 790
- bankrupts, disqualification of, as members of Parliament, 658
- Bill, Government, see Government Bill
- Bills, classification of, 702
 - private, see private Bills
 - provisional order confirmation, see provisional order confirmation Bills
 - public, see public Bills
 - readings of, in the House of Commons, 663
 - Lords, 628, 629
- Black Rod, appointment and duties of, 631
 - duty of, on opening of Parliament, 692
- "Blue Paper," contents of, issued in the House of Commons, 670
- Board of Trade, when plans of proposed works must be deposited with, 733
- bond, nature of, into which parliamentary agent must enter, 729
- Budget, committee dealing with the, 774, 775
 - financial proposals of, how carried, 775
 - speech, information given in the, 774
- business, House of Commons, of the, classification of the, 663
 - regulation of the, 663
 - Lords, of the, order of, 635
 - public, consideration by the House of Commons, 677
- bye-elections, formal introduction of members elected at, 691
- casting vote, Speaker or Chairman in the House of Commons, of the, when given, 672
- certificate, Speaker, of the, as to money Bills, nature of, 776

INDEX.

PARLIAMENT—continued.

- certiorari*, removal of indictment of peer by writ of, 653
- Chairman of Committees, House of Commons, in the, casting vote of, 672
 - nomination of, 711
- Lords, of the, appointment of, 630
 - duty on a division, 633, 634
 - procedure in absence of, 630
 - salary of, 630
- Select Committee of the House of Commons, of the, appointment of, 683
- Ways and Means, of, appointment and duties of, 666
 - salary of, 666
- Chancellor of the Exchequer, information given in the Budget speech by the, 774
- Chiltern Hundreds, effect of appointment of member to Stewardship of, 662
 - how acceptance of office of Steward of effected, 662
- City of London, claim of members for, to particular seats in the House of Commons, 672
- civil service estimates, classes of, 769
 - division into votes, 769
 - pension, no disqualification to holder as member of Parliament, 658
- claim, title of honour, to, practice relating to, 641
- clauses, amended, consideration of, 713
 - amendments to, procedure in both Houses as to, 713
- clergy, disqualification of, as members of House of Commons, 657
- Clerk Assistant, House of Lords, of the, appointment of, 631
 - House of Commons, of the, how appointed, 667
 - of the Parliaments, appointment and position of, 630
 - duty of, when the Sovereign prorogues Parliament in person, 700
- Clerks Assistant, House of Commons, of the, appointment of, 667
- closure, how put in the House of Commons, 670
- colonial possessions, control of, by the Imperial Parliament, 616
- command papers, nature of, 618
- Commissioners, inquiry into opposition to Scottish, provisional order, 764
- committee, both Houses, of, recommitment of public Bill to, procedure, 715, 716
- Committee for Privileges, House of Commons, of the, appointment and powers of, 686, 687
 - Lords, of the, appointment and duties of, 641, 642
 - practice on claim to title of honour, 641, 642
 - when Irish peer's right to vote is submitted to, 627
- committee, House of Commons, procedure when resolving into, 665, 712
 - Lords, procedure when resolving into, 637
- Committee of Selection, House of Lords, of the, duties of, 642
 - reference of unopposed private Bills to, 750, 751
- Supply, close of sittings of, 773, 774
 - duties of, 771, 772
 - preliminary motion before going into, 772
 - procedure in, 772, 773
 - where sitting interrupted, 773
 - rules of debate governing discussion in, 773
 - sittings of, 772
- committee of the whole House of Commons, procedure on going into, 665, 712
 - purpose and constitution of, 665
 - Lords, when Bill referred to, 708, 709
- Committee of Ways and Means, duties of, 771, 772
 - embodiment of resolutions of, in Finance Bills, 775, 776
 - function of, 774
 - resolutions of, procedure on, 774
 - sittings of, 772

INDEX.

PARLIAMENT—continued.

- Committee, Private Bills, on, appointment of, 668
- committee stage, actual procedure in both Houses in the, 713
 - House of Commons in the, conclusion of, 712, 713
 - motion to report on, in the House of Lords, 709, 710
 - public Bill, in the House of Lords, of, notice of, 708, 709
 - practice as to, 708, 709
 - of, motion as to in the House of Lords, 709
 - report of the, in the House of Commons, 712, 713
- committee, standing, on Scottish Bills in the House of Commons, 711
 - to prepare reasons, appointment and duties of, 640, 641, 721
- committees, House of Commons, of the, classification of, 682
 - standing, in the House of Commons, what are the, 711
- commoner, introduction on appointment as Lord Chancellor, 691
- commons, appointment of select committee of House of Commons on, purpose of, 685
- companies, special standing orders where Bills promoted by, 738, 739
 - submission of Bill to shareholders when promoted by, 739
- Consolidated Fund Bills, nature of, 775
 - fixed charges not requiring parliamentary sanction, 767
- constitution, Parliament, of, 616
- contractors, Government, disqualification as members of Parliament, 658, 659
- convicted felons, disqualification as members of Parliament, 657, 658
- corrupt practices, disqualification of persons guilty of as members of Parliament, 657, 658
- costs, private Bills, relating to, taxation of, 745
 - security for, on appeal to the House of Lords, requirements as to, 645
- Counsel, Parliamentary, see Parliamentary Counsel
- counting out, House of Commons, the, procedure as to, 668
- Court of Appeal, constitution of the House of Lords as a, 643
- criminal offence, members not privileged from arrest in respect of, 780
- cross-appeals, House of Lords, to the, practice on lodging, 644
- Crown, assent of the, necessary to Acts of Parliament, 616
 - communication between Parliament and the, methods of, 800—804
 - necessity for, 800—804
 - from Parliament to the, method of, 802, 803
 - control of Parliament over the, methods by which effected, 617, 618
 - demise of the, as affecting Parliament, 698
 - meeting of Parliament after, 698, 699
 - grant of money to, function of the House of Commons as to, 766
 - office of profit under, disqualification of holder as member of Parliament, 659, 660
 - pension, disqualification of person, holder as member of Parliament, 658
 - power of, to adjourn both Houses of Parliament, 699
 - summon Parliament, 687
 - property, introduction of Bill relating to, 703
 - recommendation by the, when necessary to grants, 767
 - reply to message from the, means of in each House, 801, 802
- death, member of the House of Commons, of, power to fill seat on, 789
- debate, House of Commons, in the, rules regulating, 678
 - scope of, 678
- Lords, in the, rules regulating conduct of, 636, 637
- delivery of judgment, House of Lords, in the, how usually given, 649, 650
- demise of the Crown, as affecting Parliament, 698
- Deputy Chairman, Committees of the House of Commons, of, appointment of, 666
 - Speaker, House of Commons, of the, 666
- Speakers, House of Lords, of the, appointment and precedence of, 629, 630
- disorder, House of Commons, in the, power of the Speaker to adjourn the House on, 680, 681
 - what amounts to, 680, 681
- disqualifications as member of Parliament, 655—661
- dissolution, appeal to the House of Lords not affected by, 647
 - Parliament, of, modern practice as to, 702
- distribution of seats, House of Commons, in the, 655
- divisions, House of Commons, in the, announcement of, procedure, 672
 - locking of doors during, 672

INDEX.

PARLIAMENT—continued.

- divisions, House of Commons, in the, mode of taking, 671
 - power of Speaker or Chairman where vexatious, 671
 - when invalid, 668
- Lords, in the, procedure on, 633, 634
 - when Lord Chancellor takes part in, 629
 - when taking place, 633
- divorce Bill, provisions of standing orders relating to, 761
 - special procedure relating to, 761, 762
- draft order, Scottish private Bill, as to, deposit of, 763
 - report on, 763
- election, Irish peers, of, procedure on, 726, 727
 - Scottish peers, of, certificate of, 726
 - to sit in Parliament, 614, 615
- electric power Bill, consent necessary to promotion of, 731
- emergency grant, procedure as to, 770, 771
- estate Bill, attendance of consenting parties to, necessity for, 760
 - consent necessary to an, 733
 - examination after first reading, 760
 - procedure on presentation of petition for an, 759
 - report of committee on, after reference to Examiners, 760
 - when may be read a first time, 759
- estimates, army and navy, for the, division into votes, 768, 769
 - by whom prepared, 768
 - civil service, division into votes, 769
 - expense of undertaking proposed by local Bill, of, when to be deposited, 734
 - form of vote in the, 769
 - submission of, to the House of Commons, 768
 - supplementary, nature of, and when presented, 769
 - votes on account of, practice as to, 769 770
- Examiners, petitions for private Bills, of, appointment of, in both Houses, 740, 741
 - Bills referred to before second reading, 742
 - certificate and report of, 741
 - duty as to estate Bills, 760
 - making reports, 742
- excess grant, when spending department must apply for, 770
- executive Government, control over action of, by Parliament, 617, 618
 - effect of practice and procedure on control of the, 617
 - methods by which control of, effected, 617
- expulsion, House of Commons, from the, effect of, 787
 - powers of the House as to, 787
- fees and charges, relating to bringing in and passage of private Bill, 745
- felony, disqualification of persons guilty of, as members of Parliament, 657
- finance Bills, embodiment of resolutions in, 775, 776
 - procedure on introduction of, 775, 776
- finance, position of the House of Lords as to measures not purely of, 796
 - of, 795—796
 - relation between both Houses as to, present practice, 797
- financial year, when terminating, 769
- first reading, private Bill, of, 746
 - provisional order confirmation Bill, of a, 746
 - public Bill, of a, in the House of Commons, procedure, 706
 - Lords, procedure, 705
- front benches, House of Commons, in the, custom as to occupation of, 672
- gasworks Bill, consent necessary to promotion of, 731
- General Committee on Railway and Canal Bills, reference of Bills to the, 751
- Government Bills, drafting of, 704
 - introduction of, in the House of Commons, procedure, 705, 706
 - precedence of, in the standing committees of the House of Commons, 711
 - business, precedence of, in the House of Commons, 666
 - contractors, disqualification of as members of Parliament, 658, 659
- grants, nature of, sanctioned by the House of Commons, 770, 771

INDEX.

PARLIAMENT—continued.

- hearing of causes, House of Lords, in the, usual sittings for, 649
- hereditary peers, creation of, 622
 - introduction of, 689
- holders of office, nature of disqualification of, as members of Parliament, 659
- honours, restoration of, procedure on introduction of Bills for the, 727
- House of Commons, acceptance of amendments by the, 798
 - access to the Sovereign by the, 785
 - address to the Crown from the, procedure, 804
 - adjournment of the, motion for, on question of urgent public importance, 677
 - admission of strangers to the, 784, 785
 - appointment and duties of the Select Committee on Standing Orders of the, 743
 - powers of Committee for Privileges, 686, 687
 - procedure of a select committee, 682, 683
 - of Kitchen and Refreshment Rooms Committee, 685
 - Select Committee on Commons, purpose of, 685
- appointment of Serjeant-at-Arms, 667
 - Speaker of the, 663
- attendance at the House of Lords on opening of session
 - by the King in person, 692, 695, 696
- claim of rights and privileges by the, 695
- classification of committees of the, 682
- conduct of business of the, 663
- consideration of reports of select committees of, 683, 684
- constitution and duties of the Public Accounts Committee of, 684, 685
 - of, 655
- control of public money by the, 793—796
- days and hours of meeting, 673
- demand of privileges by the Speaker, custom as to, 779
- disagreement with House of Lords' amendments, how communicated, 799
- disqualifications for membership of, 655
- distribution of seats in the, 655
- divorce Bills in the, procedure relating to, 762
- duties and position of Speaker of the, 664, 665
- entry and retirement of Speaker of the, procedure, 673
- estimates, submission to, 768
- expulsion from, effect of, 787
 - power of the House as to, 787
- Finance Bills in the, procedure on introduction, 775, 776
- financial privileges of the, effect of strict insistence of, 797
- function of, as to granting of money to the Crown, 766
- grant by, requiring the sanction of the Crown, 766, 767
- interruption of business of the, time for, 673, 674
- judgment of the, how obtained, 668
- limits to the jurisdiction of, 681, 682
- locking the doors of, during division, 672
- modes of taking divisions in the, 671
- motions in the, procedure, 668, 669
 - when cannot be anticipated, 669
 - irregular, 669
- obligation of members to attend sittings of the, 672
- orders made in the, on resumption of sittings after the King's Speech, 697
- practice of the, on notice of a substantive motion, 663
- precedence of Government business in the, 674
 - private members' business, 674, 675
- principal permanent officials of, 667
- private Bill, when set down for hearing in the, 747

INDEX.

PARLIAMENT—continued.

- House of Commons, private business in the, when taken, 674, 675
 - privileges peculiar to its constitution, 787
 - procedure in the, on first day of Parliament, 693
 - going into committee, 665
 - second day of Parliament, 694, 695
 - on impeachment of individual by, 650—652
 - where Bills originate in the, 799
 - public Bills, committee to which referred to in the, 710
 - introduction in, procedure, 704—706
 - petitions to the, who may present, 575, 676
 - publication of proceedings without consent of, offence, 783, 784
 - purpose and constitution of committee of the whole, 665
 - questions in the, provisions as to notices of, 677
 - quorum of the, number constituting, 668
 - resumption of sittings of the, after the Speech from the Throne, time of, 697, 698
 - rules of debate in the, 678, 679
 - etiquette and behaviour in the, 680
 - salary of member of, 655
 - selection of amendments by the chair in the, procedure, 671
 - standing committees of the, procedure in, 711
 - vacant seat in, power to fill, 788, 789
 - when members formally introduced, 691
 - proceeding to the orders of the day, 677, 678
 - second speech permissible in the, 679
 - writs for election of members of, issue of, 688
- Lords, address to the Crown from the, procedure, 803, 804
 - adjournment of the, practice on motion for, 635
 - admission of strangers to the, 784
 - appeal to the, procedure on lodgment of, 643, 644
 - appellate jurisdiction of the, 643
 - appointment and duties of Standing Orders Committee of the, 743
 - of Speaker of, 629, 630
 - attendance of judges at the, power of the House to require, 647, 648
 - bankruptcy as disqualification for seat in, 622, 623
 - business of, order of, 635
 - where and how transacted, 628
 - casting vote, none where division equal in the, 634
 - composition of the, 619
 - consideration of new clauses to public Bill in the, mode of, 714
 - constitution of, as a Court of Appeal, 643
 - division of business transacted in the, 632
 - divisions in the, how regulated, 633, 634
 - divorce Bills presented in the, procedure relating to, 761, 762
 - financial measures, position with regard to, 794—796
 - impeachment within original jurisdiction of the, 650, 651
 - insistence on amendment by the, effect of message as to, 799
 - introduction of Lords Spiritual into the, 691
 - peers into the, 690, 691
 - the Prince of Wales into the, 691
 - Lord Chancellor as Speaker of the, 629
 - minutes of proceedings of the, provision as to, 632
 - money Bills, powers as to, 776
 - motion as to committee stage for public Bill in the, practice as to, 708, 709
 - motions in the, provisions relating to, 632, 633
 - Offices Committee, constitution of, 642
 - duties of, 643
 - personal private Bills, origination in the, 758
 - precedence and place in, 624
 - principal permanent officers of, 630
 - private Bill, procedure on in the, 756, 757
 - privileges in relation to the constitution of the, 785, 786

INDEX.

PARLIAMENT—continued.

- House of Lords, privileges peculiar to members of the, 785, 786
 - procedure after report of committee on public Bill, 716, 717
 - in the, on opening of Parliament, 692
 - on attendances of the Commons at the Bar of the, 692
 - carriage of public Bill from the Commons to the, 619, 620
 - public Bills after committee's report by, 716
 - third reading of public Bill in the, 719
 - when resolving into committee, 637
 - where Bills originate in the, 798, 799
 - provisional order confirmation Bill in the, procedure on, 756, 757
 - public Bill, when referred to a committee of the whole, 708, 709
 - publication of proceedings without permission, offence of, 783, 784
 - putting the question in the, matters decided by, 633
 - questions and motions, how put in the, 629
 - quorum of the, what constitutes, 632
 - regulation of order and debate in the, 636
 - resumption of sittings after the Speech from the Throne, time of, 696, 697
 - right of peer to protest against decisions, 634
 - presenting petition to the, 635
 - secret committees of the, when appointed, 639
 - Select Committee of, purposes for which appointed, 637, 638
 - sittings of the, preliminaries to, 635
 - usual days for, 635
 - voting by proxy in the, discontinuance of practice, 786
 - who is entitled to sit in, 622, 623
- hybrid Bill, Bill relating to Crown property introduced as a, 703
 - consideration of, by select committee of the House of Commons, 684
 - nature of, 703
- impeachment, delivery of judgment on, 652
 - drawing up of articles of, 651
 - original jurisdiction of the House of Lords in, 650, 651
 - position of Lords and Commons in an, 650, 651
 - procedure where motion for, agreed to, 651
 - right to institute proceedings by way of, 651
 - trial on, procedure, 652
 - who may be the subject of, 651
- indictment, peer, of a, practice on, 653
- infants, disqualification of, as members of Parliament, 654
- in formâ pauperis*, petition to sue, on appeal to House of Lords, procedure, 646, 647
- information, how obtained by Parliament, 618
- insanity, member of the House of Commons, of, power of the House to fill vacant seat on, 788, 789
- interruption, business of the House of Commons, of, time for, 673, 674
- Irish peers, number and mode of election of, 626, 627
 - privileges of representative, 624, 625
 - procedure on equality of footing in election of, 627
- joint address, Parliament to the Crown, from, procedure, 803
 - committee, committal of Scottish confirming Bill of provisional order to, effect of, 765
 - of both Houses, consideration of a Bill by, 765
 - duty of parliamentary agents where Bill referred to, 754, 755
 - procedure on consideration of private Bill by, 754
 - reference of private Bills to, procedure, 752, 753
 - when decision on private Bill arrived at by, 755, 756
- committees, how appointed, 640
 - practice governing procedure on, 640

INDEX.

PARLIAMENT—continued.

- joint committees, purposes of appointment, 639, 640
 - time and place of meeting of, 640
- Journals, House of Commons, of the, compilation of, 631
 - Lords, of the, nature and compilation of, 631
- judges, attendance of, at the House of Lords, right of the House to require, 647, 648
 - disqualification of, as members of Parliament, 659, 661
 - procedure when question submitted to attendant, by the House of Lords, 647, 648
 - reference of estate Bill to, procedure, 759, 760
- judgment, delivery on impeachment, 652
 - House of Lords, in the, how given, 649, 650
 - peer, against, consideration and delivery of, 654
- jurisdiction, House of Commons, of the, limits to the, 681, 682
- jury service, exemption of members of both Houses from, 680, 681
- King's Speech, see Royal Speech
- Kitchen and Refreshment Rooms Committee, House of Commons, of the, appointment of, 685
- lands, procedure on introduction of Bills for the restoration of, 627
- legislation, division into groups, 725
- letters patent, terms of, creating Lord of Appeal in Ordinary a baron, 628
- local authorities, deposit of private Bill with, when necessary, 734
 - authority, consent of, necessary to promotion of Tramway Bill, 730, 731
 - Bills, nature of, 727, 728
- Local Legislation Committee, formation and duties of, 752
- local rates, relinquishment of privileges by House of Commons as to, 798
- London County Council, procedure on introduction of money Bill by, 737, 738
 - special standing orders relating to Bills of, 737, 738
- Lord Chancellor, as Speaker of the House of Lords, 629
 - duties of, on the first day of Parliament, 692
 - duty of, on a division, 633, 634
 - prorogation of Parliament by the Sovereign in person, 700
 - introduction of commoner when appointed as, 690, 691
 - position of, in the House of Lords, 629, 630
 - prorogation of Parliament by, procedure, 700, 701
 - Speaker of House of Lords in absence of, 629, 630
- Lord of Appeal in Ordinary, appointment and rights of, 628
 - creation of, as a baron, terms of letters patent, 628
- Lords Commissioners, when Royal Assent signified by, 723, 724
- Lords Spiritual, absence of, when judgment delivered in trial of a peer, 621
 - appointment and constitution of, 619
 - duties of, 622
 - introduction into the House of Lords, 691
 - number summoned to Parliament, 620
 - places in the House, 621
 - privileges extended to, 621
 - time for which seat held, 620
 - vacancy among the, how filled, 620
 - when summoned to the trial of a peer, 621
- Temporal, classification of, 622
- lunatics, disqualification of, as members of Parliament, 656
- member, House of Commons, of the, custom as to place of, seat, 672
 - introduction of Bill by, practice as to, 705
 - naming a, power of the Speaker as to, 681
 - obligation of, to attend sittings, 672
 - power of Speaker to order withdrawal of statement by, 681
 - retirement by, methods of, 661, 662
 - when called upon to address questions, 676
- messages between the Houses of Parliament, procedure as to, 706, 707
 - when sent, 706
- Ministry, resignation of, how effected, 618

INDEX.

PARLIAMENT—continued.

- minutes, proceedings of the House of Commons, of the, provisions as to, 667, 668
- Lords, of the, provision for drawing up and printing, 632
- monetary deposits, promotion of private Bill, on, by and to whom made, 735
 - when to be made on promotion of private Bill, 735—737
- money Bill, definition of, 776
 - duty of Speaker under the Parliament Act, 1911, as to, 722, 723
 - indorsement of Speaker's certificate on, 776
 - power of the House of Lords as to, 776
 - procedure on promotion by London County Council, 737
- motion, House of Commons, in the, at beginning of public business, 678
 - empowering chair to select amendments, 671
 - notice required on, 669, 670
 - procedure relating to, 668
 - when cannot be anticipated, 669
 - irregular, 669
- Lords, in the, provisions relating to, 632, 633
 - to go into committee, for, effect if carried, 709
- name Bill, nature of, and procedure applicable to, 761
- naming a member, power of the Speaker as to, 681
- Naturalization Bill, nature of, 761
- nautical assessors, assistance of, on Admiralty appeals, 648, 649
- navy and army estimates, division into votes, 768, 769
 - or army, disqualification of officer of, as member of Parliament, 660
- new member, House of Commons, of the, introduction of, 677
 - Parliament, procedure on second day of, 694
- notice, committee stage of public Bill, of, practice in the House of Lords as to, 708, 709
 - deposit of Gazette, on promotion of private Bill, 733
 - necessity for, where promoters of Bill intend to relinquish unauthorised works, 731
 - of estimates, provision for, 773
 - motion, in the House of Commons, practice as to, 669, 670
 - private Bill, of, necessity for publishing in the Gazette, 730
 - provision for giving to persons affected by, 730
 - question to member in the House of Commons, of, rule as to, 677
 - questions in the House of Commons, of, provisions as to, 677
- notices, House of Lords, in the, nature and regulation of, 632
 - necessary on promotion of Bill for electric power works, gasworks, sewage works, and waterworks, 731
 - Tramway Bill, 731
- oath of allegiance, members of Parliament, of, how taken, 688, 689
 - penalty on sitting in Parliament without taking, 688, 689
 - prescribed form of, 688
- offence, publication of proceedings without consent, 783, 784
- offences against the privileges of Parliament, summary of, 778
- office, nature of disqualification of holders of, as members of Parliament, 659
 - of profit, acceptance of nominal, as method of retirement, 662
 - disqualification of holder of, under the Crown as member of Parliament, 659, 660
- official posts, disqualification of holders of, as members of Parliament, 660, 661
- opening of Parliament, procedure on, 693
- Opposition, House of Commons, in the, usual place for seating the, 672
- order, House of Commons, in the, maintenance of, 679, 680
 - when breach committed, 679, 680
- Lords, in the, how maintained, 636
- orders, House of Commons, made on resumption of sittings after the Speech from the Throne, 697
 - of the day, House of Lords, of the, nature of, 632, 633
 - when House of Commons proceeds to, 677, 678
- Parliament Act, 1911, duties of the Speaker of the House of Commons under the, 657, 664, 665, 722, 723
 - effect of amendment of Bills during progress, 722, 723
 - provisions of the, 723
 - statutory remedy for disputes provided by the, 791, 792

INDEX.

PARLIAMENT—continued.

- Parliament, communication from, to the Crown, methods of, 802—804
 - demise of the Crown as affecting, 698
 - direct communication between the Houses of, methods of, 804—807
 - dissolution of, modern practice as to, 702
 - duration of, 702
 - extent of authority of, 616
 - how constituted, 616
 - summoned, 687
 - lapse of proceedings of, with the session, 701
 - meeting of, on demise of the Crown, 698, 699
 - messages between the Houses of, procedure as to, 806, 807
 - when sent, 806
 - opening of, by the Sovereign in person, procedure, 695
 - when Sovereign not present in person, procedure, 696
 - procedure of first day of new, 692
 - prorogation of, 699, 700
 - retirement from, methods of, 661, 662
 - second day of, procedure on, 694
 - summoning of peers by writ to, 688
- parliamentary agent, duty of, where bill referred to joint committee, 754, 755
 - liability of, on violating the rules and practice of Parliament, 729
 - nature of work performed by, 729
 - qualifications of, 729
- Parliamentary Counsel to the Treasury, duties of, 703, 704
 - when private members' Bills supervised by, 704
- pecuniary interest, disallowance of vote of member of Commons on account of, 671, 672
 - penalties, relinquishment by House of Commons of privileges as to, 797, 798
- peers, disqualification of, as members of House of Commons, 656, 657
 - hereditary, how created, 622
 - introduction of, 689
 - newly created, introduction of, 689, 690
 - practice on indictment of, 653
 - representative, introduction of, 689
 - right of, to claim access to the Sovereign, 785
 - second speech in same debate by, when may be made, 637
 - summoning of, to Parliament by writ, 688
 - trial of, consideration and delivery of judgment on, 654
 - date of, how fixed, 653
 - extent of right, 653
 - procedure at, 654
- penalty, sitting in the House of Commons without taking the oath of allegiance, on, 689
- pension, Crown, disqualification of holder of, as member of Parliament, 659
- personal Bills, nature of, 729
- petition, alleged disqualification of member of the House of Commons to be raised by, 655
 - estate Bill, for, procedure on presentation of, 769
 - House of Lords, to the, right of peer presenting, 635
 - in connection with appeal to the House of Lords, lodgment of, 646, 647
 - private Bill, for, examination of, 741
 - preliminaries to presentation, 724
 - or provisional order confirmation Bill in opposition to, procedure as to, 747—749
 - to sue in formâ pauperis in the House of Lords, procedure as to, 646, 647
- petitioners, against private Bills, locus standi of, 749, 750
 - procedure as to disputed locus standi of, in both Houses, 749, 750
- possessions, colonial, control by the Imperial Parliament, 616
- prayers, House of Lords, in the, duty of the Lords Spiritual as to, 622
 - procedure as to, 635
- Prince of Wales, introduction of, into the House of Lords, 691
- private Bills, amendment of, effect on progress of, 757, 758

INDEX.

PARLIAMENT—continued.

- private Bills, appointment of committees of the House of Commons on, 686
- decision of joint committee on, when arrived at, 755, 756
- deposit of printed copies of petitions and, provision for, 733, 734
- deposits to be made at the House of Commons in respect of, 733
- division into groups, 727, 728
- Examiners of petitions for, appointment of, in both Houses, 740, 741
- fees and charges incidental to introduction and passage of, 745
- first reading of, 746
- hearing of parties to, before joint committee, 755
- introduction into each House, how selection made, 744
- monetary deposits on promotion of, by and to whom made, 735—737
- nature and procedure relating to, 702, 703
- necessity for publishing notice of, in the Gazette, 730
- non-compliance by promoters with standing orders, effect of, 741
- opposition to second reading of, in the House of Commons, 747, 748
 - in the House of Lords, procedure, 747
- personal, origination of, in the House of Lords, 758
 - procedure in both Houses as to, 759
- petitions against, procedure as to, 747, 748
- practice and procedure relating to, 728
 - after passing one House, 744
 - in the House of Lords, 756, 757
 - where promoted by company, 731, 738, 739
- preparation of plans and sections of works to be constructed under, 732, 733
- publication of, in local newspaper, 730
- reference to committee when unopposed in the House of Lords, 750, 751
 - Examiner of petitions for, procedure on, 743
 - joint committee of both Houses, procedure, 753, 754
- refusal of committee to dispense with standing orders, effect of, 743, 744
- report of, to the House by joint committee, 756
- Scottish, introduction of, in lieu of draft order, 763
 - procedure applicable to, 762
- second reading of, when set down in the House of Lords, 746, 747
- service of applications and notices relating to, provision for, 732
- submission to the other House after passing one House, 742
- supervision by the Parliamentary Counsel, 704
- suspension of, over a prorogation or dissolution, practice as to, 702
- taxation of costs relating to, 745
- third reading in the House of Lords, when ordered, 756, 757
- business, day on which ballot as to, held in the House of Commons, 675
 - House of Commons, in the, when taken, 674, 675
- member, House of Commons, of the, precedence of business of, 674, 675
- privileges, classification of, 780—783
 - constitution of both Houses in respect of, 777
 - House of Commons, of the, appointment and powers, committee of, 686, 687
 - claim of right and by the Speaker, 694
 - Speaker as guardian of, 664
 - nature of claim of each House to, 778
 - origin of, 778, 779
 - proceedings for enforcement of, in both Houses, 790, 791
- proceedings of Parliament, lapse of, with the session, 701

INDEX.

PARLIAMENT—continued.

- progress, motion to report, effect of, 712
 - when moved, 773
- reporting, in the House of Commons, practice as to, 712, 713
- prorogation, appeal to House of Lords not affected by, 647
 - by Lord Chancellor and Lords Commissioners, 700, 701
 - duty of Lord Chancellor on, 700
 - effect of, 701
 - power to fill vacant seat in the House of Commons during, 789
 - procedure as to, 699
 - when by Sovereign in person, 700
- protest, House of Lords, in the, extent of right of member to, 634
- provisional order confirmation Bills, amendment of, effect on progress of, 757, 758
 - appointment of committees of, 777
 - first reading of, 746
 - nature and procedure relating to, 703, 740
 - petition against, procedure as to, 747, 748
 - procedure after passing one House, 744
 - in the House of Lords on, 756, 757
- Scotland, parliamentary sanction necessary to, 764
 - submission of confirming Bill relating to, 765
- public accounts, audit and examination of, 776, 777
- Public Accounts Committee, constitution and duties of, 684, 685
- public Bill, amendments to clauses of, procedure as to, 713, 714, 720
 - consideration by committee of both Houses, procedure, 715
 - House of Lords on report of committee, 716, 717
 - of amendments of, after report stage, 717, 718
 - new clause of, in the House of Lords, mode of, 714
- course open to either House on amendment of, 721
- distribution amongst standing committees of the House of Commons, 711
- drafting of, 704
- first reading in the House of Lords, procedure, 705
- introduction in the House of Commons, 705
 - Lords, practice as to, 704, 705
- nature and procedure relating to, 702
- printing and preservation of copies of, 725
- publication of, 725
- recommitment to committee of both Houses, how motion adopted, 715
- report of, from select or joint committee of both houses, 715
- third reading of, procedure in the House of Commons on, 719
 - Lords on, 718, 719
 - where not amended by either House after, 720
- when referred to a committee of the whole House of Lords, 708, 709
- business, consideration of, by the House of Commons, 677
- departments, control of Parliament over, 617
- money, control of, position of the House of Commons as to, 792, 793
 - privileges claimed by the House of Commons as to, 792—794
- Public Petitions Committee, House of Commons, of the, appointment of, 685
 - practice on presentation to the, 675, 676
 - restrictions on speech on introduction, 676
 - who may present to the, 675, 696
- public revenue, introduction of Bill creating charge on, 759, 766, 767
- publication of proceedings, power to prohibit, 783
 - practice as to, 783, 784
- putting the question, House of Lords, in the, decision of matters by, 633
- questions, House of Commons, in the, provisions as to notices of, 677
 - to members, regulations as to, 676, 677
- quorum, House of Commons, of the, number forming, 668
 - Lords, of the, what constitutes, 632

INDEX.

PARLIAMENT—continued.

- Railway Bill, when monetary deposit must be made on promotion of, 735
- Reading Clerk, House of Lords, of the, appointment of, 631
- readings, all Bills, of, submission to House of Lords, 620, 629
- recognisance, nature of, into which parliamentary agent must enter, 729
- report, Commissioners on inquiry into opposition to Scottish provisional order, of, effect of, 764, 765
 - committee, of, consideration of public Bill after, 716, 717
 - draft order as to Scottish private Bill, on, procedure, 763
 - judges upon an estate Bill, of, effect of, 759, 760
 - private Bill, of, when made by joint committee, 755, 756
 - Select Committee of the House of Commons, of the, provisions as to, 683, 684
 - Lords, of the, procedure as to, 639
 - stage, public Bill in House of Commons, of, procedure on, 716, 717
 - Lords, of, conclusion of, 716, 717
 - of, how considered, 716, 717
 - procedure as to amendments, 717, 718
- resignation of Ministry, how effected, 618
- restitution of blood, procedure on introduction of Bill for, 727
- restoration of honours, necessity for Sovereign's signature to Bill for, 727
 - lands, procedure on introduction of Bills for the, 727
- rights and privileges, classification of, 780—783
 - constitution of both Houses in respect of, 777
 - nature of claim of each House to, 778
 - origin of, 778, 779
- Royal Assent, how and when signified, 724, 725
 - procedure where by Lords Commissioners, 724
 - when given, 723, 724
 - by Lords Commissioners, 723, 724
 - public Bill ready to receive the, 721
- Prerogative, purposes for which used, 616
- Sign Manual, communication by the Crown under the, 800, 801
- Speech, procedure on reading, 696
 - prorogation of Parliament, on, procedure as to, 700
- rules, House of Commons, of the, etiquette and behaviour, as to, 680
 - Speaker as interpreter of, 664, 665
- Scotland, confirming Bill of provisional order relating to, effect where committed to joint committee, 765
 - peers of, number entitled to sit in Parliament, 625
 - private Bill relating to, deposit of copy, provision for, 764
 - draft order, 763
 - introduction in lieu of draft Bill, 763
 - legislation for, procedure applicable to, 762, 763
 - provisional order relating to, inquiry on opposition to, 764
 - necessity for parliamentary sanction to, 764
 - submission of confirming Bill as to, 765
- Scottish Bills, standing committees on, in the House of Commons, 711
 - peerage, list of, procedure on calling over, 625
 - peers, grant of certificate on election of, 626
 - mode and place of election of, 625, 626
 - privileges of representative, 624, 625
 - vacancy in representation of, how filled, 626
- second reading, postponement of, how obtained, 707
 - private Bill in the House of Commons, of, opposition to, 747
 - when set down, 747
 - Lords, of, opposition to, 747
 - when set down, 746, 747
 - procedure on in both Houses of Parliament, 706, 707
 - where motion for opposed, 707, 708
 - unopposed, 707
- Secretary for Scotland, duty as to private Bills, 763, 764
 - issue of provisional order by, 764
- security for costs, appeal to the House of Lords, on, justifying, 645
 - requirements as to, 645

INDEX.

PARLIAMENT—continued.

- security for costs, appeal to the House of Lords, on, sufficiency of, 645, 646
- select committee, both Houses, of, appointment of, 715
 - consideration of public Bill by, procedure, 714, 715
 - procedure in, 715
- House of Commons, of the, appointment of Chairman, 683
 - under standing orders, 685
 - composition of, 682
 - consideration of report of, 683, 684
 - hybrid Bills, 684
 - on commons, purpose of appointment, 685
 - procedure regulating sittings of, 683
 - purpose of appointment of, 682
- Lords, of the, how appointed, 638
 - power to amend order of reference to, 638
 - procedure and powers of, 638, 639
 - purposes for which appointed, 637, 638
 - scope of inquiry of the, 638
 - when divorce Bills referred to, 762
- Serjeant-at-Arms, appointment and removal of, 667
 - House of Lords, of the, appointment and duties of, 631
- sessional committees, nature of, 641, 642
- setting down, cause for hearing, of, on appeal to the House of Lords, 646
- sewage works Bill, consent necessary to promotion of, 731
- shareholders, consent of, necessary to promotion of Bills by companies, 739
- sittings, House of Commons, of the, obligation of members to attend, 672
 - Lords, of the, preliminaries to, 635
 - usual days for, 635
- solicitors, nature of parliamentary work carried out by, 729
- Sovereign, access to the, right of peers as to, 785, 786
 - the House of Commons as to, 785
 - address to the, on accession to the Crown, 699
 - Bills which must be signed by the, before introduction, 727
 - opening of Parliament by the, in person, procedure, 695
 - prorogation of Parliament by, in person, procedure, 700
- Speaker, House of Commons, of the, appointment of, 663
 - as guardian of the privileges, 664
 - casting vote of, when given, 672
 - certificate of, as to money Bills, nature of, 776
 - as to money Bills, indorsement of, 776
 - conduct of, how questioned, 665
 - demand of Commons' privileges by the, custom as to, 779
 - duties of, 664, 665
 - duty under the Parliament Act, 1911... 722, 723
 - election of, 693
 - confirmation of, 694, 695
 - entry and retirement of, 673
 - position of, 664
 - power of, to appoint temporary Chairman of Committees, 666
 - name a member, 681
 - order a member to withdraw a statement, 681
 - precedence of the, 664
 - procedure as to the, when House goes into committee, 665, 666

INDEX.

PARLIAMENT—continued.

- Speaker, House of Commons, of the, procedure as to the, when retiring in the middle of session, 693
- Lords, of the, appointment of, 629, 630
- special grants, nature and making of, 771
- Speech from the Throne, duty of the House of Commons as to estimates referred to in the, 771
- speeches, House of Commons, in the, must be in English, 678
 - when second permissible, 679
- standing committees, House of Commons, of the, appointment and functions of, 682
 - distribution of Bills amongst, 711
 - power of, to consider financial provisions of a Bill, 712
 - procedure in, 711
 - what are the, 711
- Standing Orders, House of Commons, of the, appointment and duties of Select Committee on, 743
 - division of local Bills into classes by, 728
 - effect of non-compliance with by promoters of private Bill, 741
 - refusal of committee to dispense with, on private Bill, 743, 744
 - regulation of the closure by, 670
 - order and debate by, 636
 - select committees appointed under, 685
- Lords, of the, appointment and duties of, 642, 743, 750
 - provisions relating to divorce Bills in the, 761
- Houses, of both, relating to Bills of the London County Council, 747, 748
 - promoted by companies, 748, 749
 - opposition to private Bills, 737, 738
- strangers, admission to both Houses, 784, 785
 - power to exclude from either House, 784, 785
- supplementary estimates, nature of, and when presented, 769
- Supply, close of sittings of Committee of, 773, 774
- supply, nature and grant of, 768
 - vote of, form in which moved, 773
- taxation of costs, relating to private Bill, provision for, 745
 - statutory authority essential to, 766
- taxing officer, duty of, on taxing costs of private Bill, 745
 - memorial of persons aggrieved by report of, rights as to, 745
- tellers, House of Lords, in the, appointment and duties of, 633
- temporary Chairman, Committees of the House of Commons, of, appointment of, 666
- "That the question be now put?" when member of the House of Commons may move, 670
- third reading, confirming Bill of Scottish provisional order, of, when ordered, 765
 - consideration on report of public Bill before, 716, 717
 - private Bill in the House of Lords, of, when ordered, 756, 757
 - or provisional order, confirmation Bill of, in the House of Commons, when ordered, 757
 - procedure in the House of Commons on, 719
 - Lords on, 718, 719
- tolls and charges, relinquishment of privilege by House of Commons as to, 798
- Tramway Bill, consent necessary on promotion of, 730, 731
 - when monetary deposit must be made on promotion of, 735

INDEX.

PARLIAMENT—continued.

- Treasury Bench, House of Commons, of the, what is known as the, 672
- title of honour, nature of proof on claim to, 641, 642
- trial, impeachment, on, procedure, 652
 - peer, of a, fixing the date of, 653
 - procedure at, 654
- vacant seat, House of Commons, in the, power to fill, 788
- vote, estimates, in the, form of, 769
 - of credit, when House of Commons must grant, 770, 771
 - supply, form in which moved, 773
- votes and proceedings, House of Commons, of the, how recorded, 667, 668
 - on account, practice, 769, 770
- waterworks Bill, consent necessary to promotion of, 731
- Ways and Means, Chairman of, appointment and duties of, 666
 - salary of, 666
- "White Paper," contents of, issued in the House of Commons, 670
- witnesses, immunity from arrest when appearing before either House, 781
 - offence of tampering with in the House of Commons, provision against, 781, 782
 - private Bill, for or against, examination of, 755
- women, disqualification of, to serve in Parliament, 655
- working-class houses, procedure on promotion of Bill for acquisition of, 738
- writ of summons, evidence by eldest son of peer necessary before issue of, 623
 - when issued to Lords Spiritual, 620
- summoning of Parliament by, 687, 688
- writs, election of members of the House of Commons, for the, issue of, 688

PARTITION,

- accounts, direction of, in partition action, 851
- Act of Parliament, partition by, 812
 - operation of, 813
- action for partition, appointment of receiver pending hearing of, 850
 - court no power where management vested in trustees, 841
 - defence to, 847
 - judgment in, 847, 848
 - nature of practice and procedure in, 846
 - request for sale in, form of, 847
 - when not maintainable, 842
 - who may maintain, 839, 840
 - writ and statement of claim in, 846, 847
- advertisement, publication of judgment by, 853
- adwoson, court's power to decree partition of, 837
 - right to partition on, 823
- agent, representation of person interested by, 828
- agreement, parties to, 813
 - partition by, 812
- appearance, default of, to partition action, procedure, 847
- application, Board of Agriculture and Fisheries, to, form of, 829
 - partition, for, who may make, 826
- apportionment of rent, on order for partition by Board of Agriculture and Fisheries, 833
- award, where person chosen by both parties, effect of, 814, 815
- Board of Agriculture and Fisheries, application for partition to, form of, 829
 - apportionment of rent on order for partition by, 833
 - confirmation of incomplete partition by, 825
 - order for partition by, 831, 832
 - costs of order of, payment of, 831
 - deposit of plans and order with, 832
 - dissent to partition by, 830, 831
 - inquiries on application to, 830
 - notice on application to, 830
 - jurisdiction of, 824, 825
 - order for partition by the, 831
 - effect of, 832, 833
- particulars required on application to, 830

INDEX.

PARTITION—continued.

- Board of Agriculture and Fisheries, parties to partition by, 827
 - partition made by, 812
 - when not authorised by, 828
 - power to order compensation by means of
 - rentcharge, 828, 829
 - enfranchisement, 833
 - exchange, 833
 - property which may be partitioned by, 826
 - reservation of mines and minerals by
 - order of, 833
 - title not determined on partition by, 825
 - valuation on application to, 829, 830
- burden of proof, where sale resisted, 842, 843
- chambers, affecting partition in, 857
- Chancery Division, jurisdiction as to partition, 834, 835
- charity, investment of money received as compensation by, 818
 - partition on behalf of, 817, 818
- choice, right to first, 814
- commissioners, appointment of, to effect partition, 850—860
- compensation, equality of partition, for, when may be given, 815
 - rentcharge may be ordered by way of, 828, 829
 - where partition unequal, 815
- compulsory partition, when order made for, 825
- conversion, order for sale as effecting, 867
- conveyance, appointment of person to make, 854
 - completion of partition by, 860, 861
 - incumbrances as affecting, 861
 - necessity for, on award of partition, 815
- co-owners, consideration of convenience of, 856, 857
 - necessity for, where doctrine applied, 810
- co-parceners, right as to choice between, 814
- copyholds, enfranchisement of, power of the Board of Agriculture and Fisheries
 - to order, 833
 - partition of, when complete, 824
- corporeal hereditaments, partition of, 822
- costs, partition action, of, discretion of the court as to, 854, 855
 - by Board of Agriculture and Fisheries, of, payment of, 831
 - solicitor and client, when ordered, 855, 856
- Counties Palatine of Lancaster and Durham, jurisdiction of Courts of Chancery of the, 835
- county court, judgment for sale in, procedure on, 861, 862
 - jurisdiction as to partition, 835
- court, application for partition to the, who may make, 839, 840
 - divisions in which jurisdiction obtains, 834, 835
 - effecting partition out of, 857, 858
 - jurisdiction to order a sale, 842
 - nature of property which may be dealt with by the, 836, 838
 - partition by the, where parties under disability, 840
 - made by the, 812
 - property outside the jurisdiction of the, 838, 839
- defence, default of, in partition action, procedure, 847
 - partition action, to, 847
- disability, partition by the court where persons under, 840
 - rights of persons under, to partition by the Board of Agriculture and Fisheries, 827
- division of property, how effected, 814
- easements, where partition of tenement may affect partition of the, 823
- Ecclesiastical Commissioners, powers as to partition, 818
- ecclesiastical corporations, when partition may be made by, 818
- enfranchisement, power of the Board of Agriculture and Fisheries to order, 833
- equality of partition, when money awarded for, 815, 825
 - partition not authorised for want of, 828
- errors, correction of, by Board of Agriculture and Fisheries, 832
- estate tail, necessity to bar the entail to bind issue on partition of, 813
- exchange, when Board of Agriculture and Fisheries may order, 833
- improvements, allowance for expenditure on, 851, 852

INDEX.

PARTITION—continued.

- Inclosure Acts, who may apply for partition under the, 826, 827
- inclosure award, compulsory partition under, 825
- incomplete partition, persons entitled to apply for completion of an, 828
- incorporeal hereditaments, when may be partitioned, 822, 823
- increment value duty, none payable on partition, 824
- incumbrancers, necessity for consent of, 840
- incumbrances, conveyance on partition made subject to, 861
- indivisible property, no partition in case of, 811
- infant tenant for life, rights of, how exercised, 816
- infants, inquiry ordered where interested parties are, 850
 - request for sale by, how made, 862
 - rights of, where absolutely entitled, how exercised, 816
- injunction, prevention of waste by grant of, 852
- inquiry as to interest of parties to the action, when ordered, 848
 - order for, where sale requested, 849, 850
 - partition action, in, where interested parties are infants, 850
- interest, purchase-money, on, when charged, 864
- interests, bound by partition, 813
- judgment, methods for effecting partition on, 857—860
 - notice of, service of, 852, 853
 - partition, for, form of, following result of inquiries, 850
 - rights on, 856
 - usual order on, 847, 848
 - sale, for, procedure on, 861, 862
- leaseholds, when first partitionable, 837
- legal estate, owner of, as necessary party to the action, 841
- lunatic, partition on behalf of absolutely entitled, how made, 816, 817
 - where donee of power is a, 822
 - request for sale by, how made, 862, 863
 - tenant for life, partition on behalf of, how made, 816, 817
- manors, power of the court to partition, 838
- married woman, disabilities of, 815
 - request for sale by, how made, 862
 - rights of, where possessed of powers of a tenant for life, 815, 816
- mines and minerals, partition of surface from, by tenant for life, 819, 820
 - reservation of, power of the Board of Agriculture and Fisheries to order, 833
 - severance of surface from, under powers, 821, 812
- notice, necessity for, where application made to the Board of Agriculture and Fisheries, 830
 - of judgment, service of, 852, 853
- occupation rent, when one party will be charged an, 851, 852
- order for partition by Board of Agriculture and Fisheries, confirmation of, 831, 832
 - effect of, 831—833
 - or sale, form of, where parties claim the entirety, 849
 - present hold some shares only, 849
- owelty of partition, term not now used, 811
- ownership, exception as to rights not dependent on, 814
- parties, limitation of rights of, 813
 - order of, choice in, 814
 - partition, to, who may be, 811, 813
 - when no objection may be made as to want of, 842
- partition action, appointment of receiver pending hearing of, 850
 - defence to, 845
 - judgment in, 847, 848
 - nature of practice and procedure in, 846
 - notice of judgment in, 852, 853
 - request for sale in, form of, 847
 - writ and statement of claim in, 846, 847
- compensation for equality of, 815
- courts having jurisdiction, as to, 834, 835
- definition of, 810
- disabilities of married woman as to, 815
- equal and unequal, rules applicable on, 811
- exception as to rights not dependent upon ownership, 814

INDEX.

PARTITION—continued.

- partition, formalities to be observed on, 823, 824
 - methods of effecting, after judgment, 857
 - mode of obtaining division on, 814
 - modes of effecting, 812
 - powers authorising, 820
 - right to, when lost, 811, 812
 - sale in lieu of, when court may order, 842
 - when ordered in lieu of a requested sale, 844, 845
 - who may apply for, 826
- persons interested, meaning of, 826
- plans, deposit with the Board of Agriculture and Fisheries, 832
- power of sale, when partition may be authorised by, 821
- powers, partition under, where lunatic the donee, 822
 - severance of surface from mines and minerals on partition under, 821, 822
 - when partition authorised by, 820
- proceeds of sale, application and distribution of, 865, 869
- property indivisible, no partition where, 811
 - interest bound by partition of, 813
 - modes of division of, 814
 - nature of, as affecting partition, 856
 - with which the courts have jurisdiction, 836, 833
 - when Board of Agriculture and Fisheries may partition, 826
- purchase-money, when interest charged on, 864
- purchase, undertaking to, conditions applicable to, 863
 - in lieu of order for sale, 845
- receiver, appointment of, pending hearing of partition action, 850
- registered land, partition of, 824
 - production of sealed order of Board of Agriculture and Fisheries on partition of, 832
- rent, apportionment on order by Board of Agriculture and Fisheries, 833
 - occupation, when one party will be charged an, 851, 852
- rentcharge, compensation by way of, 828, 829
 - power of the court to partition, 838
- request for sale, by persons under disability, 862, 863
 - how considered by the court, 844, 845
 - procedure as to, 862
 - withdrawal of, time for, 845
- reversioner, as a person interested, 826, 827
- reversioners, separate action for partition by, not maintainable, 840, 841
- right of entry, refusal of order for sale where property affected by, 843
- sale, application and distribution of proceeds of, 865—867
 - bidding at, persons entitled as to, 864
 - burden of proof where resisted, 842, 843
 - conduct of, to whom given, 864
 - conversion effected by order for, 867
 - facts influencing the court in ordering a, 844
 - judgment for, procedure on, 861, 862
 - jurisdiction of the court to order, 842—846
 - methods available, 863
 - order for inquiries where parties request a, 849, 850
 - where effect more beneficial, 843
 - out of court, procedure as to, 863
 - proof required where requested by parties interested in less than a moiety, 843, 844
 - request for, by persons under disability, 862, 863
 - right of entry to property as affecting order for, 843
 - undertaking to purchase in lieu of order for, 845
 - when cannot be ordered, 845, 846
 - where partition will be ordered in lieu of requested, 844, 845
 - withdrawal of request for, time for, 845
- sequestrator, right of, as interested person, 827
- settled land, effect of partition on, 820
 - partition of, 816—820
- shares unascertained, no action for partition may be maintained in respect of, 842
- solicitor, costs of, in partition action, 855, 856
- stamp duty, partition, on, 824

INDEX.

PARTITION—continued.

- statement of claim, in partition action, 846, 847
- tenant, as a person interested, 827
 - for life, consent of, when necessary, 822
 - execution of assurance on partition by, 820
 - infant, rights of, how exercised, 816
 - lunatic, partition on behalf of, how made, 817
 - partition of surface from mines and minerals by, 819, 820
 - rights of married woman having powers of, 815, 816
- tenants for life, power to make partition, 818, 819
- time, right to partition barred by lapse of, 811, 812
- tithes, power of the court to partition, 838
- title, consent required where litigation pending concerning the, 828
 - deeds, custody of, 861
 - none implied in partition, 812
 - not determined on partition by the Board of Agriculture and Fisheries, 825
 - power of the courts irrespective of litigated, 835, 836
 - right of holder of undivided share under separate, 828
- trust property, court has no jurisdiction as to partition of, 841
- unascertained shares, no action for partition maintainable in respect of, 842
- unborn children, principle upon which interests of, are bound, 813
- valuation, on application to Board of Agriculture and Fisheries for partition, 829, 830
- vesting order, appointment of person to convey in lieu of, 854
 - power of the court to make, 853, 854
- walls, power of the court to partition, 838
- waste, direction of inquiries in respect of, 852
 - injunction to prevent, 852
- writ, form of, in action for partition, 846

309556 [Earl of and others (eds.) Law.D
Author Halsbury, Hardinge Stanley Giffard, 1st H196.3
Title The laws of England. vol. 21.

DATE.

NAME OF BORROWER.

University of Toronto Library

DO NOT REMOVE
THE CARD
FROM THIS POCKET

Acme Library Card Pocket
LOWE-MARTIN CO. LIMITED

